Kids increasingly concerned about their safety

SANFORD — Schools are small cities, said school safety coordinator Wolfgang Halbig. Like most cities, however, they are becoming increasingly violent.

"The kids are concerned about violence in the schools," Halbig said. "And it's a justified concern."

The first of its kind study, mandated by the Florida Legislature as part of the Juvenile Justice Reform Act, took a random sample of middle- and high school students from all 67 school districts. Of the 42,000 middle- and high school students surveyed across the state, nearly two-thirds, about 27,700, had been given detention, paddled, suspended or expelled for disciplinary reasons.

If I could talk to the animals... Dr. Doolittle

SANFORD — While it isn't exactly inter-species communication, third graders in Seminole County have had a chance to get a better understanding of how animals and people interact.

The Curr Zoo Culum program at the Central Florida Zoological Park in Sanford offers these students a chance to see how all the things they learn in school can be applied in the real world and vice versa.

Of course, to the students, it seemed more like a fun activity outside the classroom.

"I liked seeing the animals," said Eric Wheaton, a third grader at Hamilton Elementary School in Sanford who was impressed with the fact that there are hippos in Africa. "That could just bite you in half."

Wheaton said he will be sure to stay away from hippos if he ever travels to Africa.

His teacher, Regina Phillips, was part of the team that developed the program that utilizes zoo facilities to enhance the classroom curriculum.

Union contract fight

Firefighters win pay hike

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County firefighters will receive pay increases this year under terms hammered out Wednesday by county commissioners if they ratify the contract which has been five years in the making. A vote may be taken within two weeks.

By a 4-1 vote, the commissioners agreed to a plan estimated to cost $892,158 which includes an across-the-board base increase of $2,912 for each of the fire service technicians and a $2,092 increase for lieutenants effective Oct. 2, 1994 (cost $708,158). The salary range for ETSs will be adjusted by 15 percent while there will be a 10 percent adjustment in the rating for ETSs. The union program will be retained (cost 184,000).

Chairman Randy Morris was the lone dissenting vote.

The county commissioners, as required by law, decided six issues on which the county and union did not agree, accepting a revised union wage proposal while siding with management on the remainder.

The union had rejected the county's offers of lesser percentage increases in salaries while contract

Non-instructional employees honored

Many people contribute to success of schools

By MARVA HAWKINS

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Seminole County Public Schools recognized the 1995 School-Related Employees of the Year in a ceremony held Monday, March 6, at Lake Branley High School in Altamonte Springs.

Fifty-three employees were honored for their contribution to the success of the Seminole County schools in an event hosted by school board Chairwoman Sandy Robinson, Supt. Dr. Paul Hagerty and Greg Register, the 1995 Teacher of the Year.

Claudia Sims, the 1994 Employee of the Year, welcomed the honorees, their co-workers, their family and friends to the recognition program.

Dede Schallner, the district's coordinator of community involvement, and Dr. Tom Marry, executive director of high schools, were presenters for the evening. Spenser Kirchshack, a student at Lyman High School, rendered the music for the occasion, while the Seminole High School Air Force Jr ROTC presented the colors.

District finalists for the Non-Instructional Employees were two chattering women: Joan Cameron, an instructional assistant from Midway Elementary School, and Debra Kay Moon from the district transportation department.

Cameron possesses a spirit based on generosity and the philosophy that each child deserves the opportunity to succeed, supporters said.

She is a daily positive experience for faculty and students.

Moon, a dispatcher and sometime "air traffic controller" has been devoted to her duties, supporters said. She has had the awesome task of making sure that all 265 buses are dispatched to and from their appropriate locations safely.

Edna Scott White has been selected and awarded the 1995 School-Related Employee of the Year. White is the receptionist and PBX operator at the school board office. She is the person visitors remember with the beautiful smile and the cheerful hello. White is also the voice that you hear on the phone recording when you call the board.

She is described as accomplishing her job with grace and dignity. She shows patience, competence and humor as she calmly receives and routes hundreds of district calls daily. Among her many duties she greets district officers, visitors, prepares the office mail pickup and is responsible for its distribution to hundreds of departments via couriers daily.

White's peers say she is the first impression of Seminole County schools and they think highly of her. All of her co-workers describe her as "kind, considerate, goes the extra mile, dedicated, loyal, professional and personable."

White is a native of Sanford and graduated from the Seminole High Class of 1971. She is now a single parent with a special needs child.

Teen cites abuse in shooting

PENSACOLA — A 16-year-old told police he killed his father by shooting him in the head four times because the man mistreated him, authorities said.

Kevin Bernard Dean was arrested Tuesday and charged with killing his father, John Henry Dean, 48, said Assistant Police Chief Jerry Potts.

Investigators suspect the father, whose body was found in bed, had been dead for up to two days. The boy went to school Monday and Tuesday; he called for an ambulance after arriving home Tuesday.

The boy eventually confessed, said Potts, who would not give details of the alleged mistreatment.

The teen was turned over to juvenile authorities. A grand jury will decide whether he should be indicted for murder as an adult and, if so, the degree.

Neighbors said the elder Dean was friendly, generous and loved to fish, sharing his catch with them.

"He was a quiet guy," said neighbor Corrie Rosemary Long. "He kind of looked out for me because I live alone. He was like a protector for me."

Missile takes test flight

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE — An unarmed Tomahawk cruise missile was successfully launched from a submarine cruising beneath the surface of the Gulf of Mexico, the Navy said.

The test flight Tuesday was the 43rd launch from a ship or submarine in the gulf and the 333rd test overall.

Gulf-launched Tomahawks fly over the Florida Panhandle, circle in southern Alabama and then return to the Panhandle for a parachute landing at Eglin.

Although a high-tech star of the Persian Gulf War, the Tomahawk has had a checkered past in the Gulf of Mexico. Five of the test missiles have gone off course, landing or crashing prematurely.

Although they caused no injuries or property damage, the failures have postponed plans to test-fire the missiles from the Atlantic Ocean, sending them over North Florida for eventual landing at Eglin. Navy officials say they can save millions of dollars because vessels would not have to travel to the gulf for the tests.

Last month, the Navy announced it was ready to begin the Atlantic launches after a delay of nearly four years. So far, however, no missiles have been launched from there.

Teen charged in rape

JACKSONVILLE — An Ed White High School student has been charged with two counts of sexual battery in the rape of a 15-year-old student who was freed only after witnesses insisted that the attack stop.

Keith Raggina, 16, also has been charged in a November 1994 incident reported after Monday's assault, said Sgt. Malcolm Adams, a spokesman for the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office.

Monday's assault occurred outdoors near the school's gymnasium. It was witnessed by four people, including a 15-year-old student and three former Ed White students visiting their former teachers.

David Nordstrom, a 1991 graduate, and his fiancée, Angela Branch, a 1994 graduate, and another friend were crossing the campus when they saw a young man raping the girl. She was held face-down on the ground and her face was smeared with tears and dirt.

Nordstrom said the girl was crying, "Stop!" and "Get off!" He said their approach did not immediately halt the attack.

"He acted like he didn't care if we were there or not. He acted like we were supposed to ignore it," Nordstrom said.

The attacker told them the girl was his girlfriend and he asked them not to report it to authorities. He then fled but was later arrested.

Airport a benevolent landlord

MIAMI — Administrators at Miami International Airport say they made a $12 million mistake: They paid the electric and water bills of dozens of tenants for the past four years.

The tab is still piling up — at an estimated $270,000 each month.

Now the airport is trying to collect from the tenants. The biggest bill belongs to the U.S. government, which has an Agriculture Department quarantine barn for livestock and a new mail complex.

Airport officials say the problem began in 1991 when Pan Am and Eastern Airlines went out of business. The Dade County Aviation Department rushed to lease the empty hangars, warehouses and office buildings, but neglected to install water and electric meters.

So department accountants continued to pay the bills, which ballooned from $3.6 million to $6.7 million in 1993. The mistake wasn't noticed until officials put together the airport's financial statements last year.

Orlando Cruz, who's in charge of airport property, said bills and a letter of explanation will be mailed soon.

Dreams do come true

Guiding light leads to acting job, nursing

By SUBAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

ORLANDO — Who says being a nurse is a job of drudgery and now glamour? Marilyn Benner Sawyak would tell all, that's simply not true.

Sawyak has experienced a lot of variety in her nursing duties over the years. Currently working at Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford and other area hospitals, the Orlando resident as a child dreamed of the bright lights and an acting career. She recalled mentioning this to a friend while playing hopscotch at 9 years old. Her dream came true in the early 1980s when the casting director from the soap opera "The Guiding Light" offered her the part of an on-screen nurse.

The events that led to this point in her life seemed to be guidance that brought her to where she is today. Her nursing career began in South Carolina. She had heard that much research was being done with the disease AIDS and Sawyak felt led to make the move to Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York with her daughter, Sunday, and make a new beginning there.

As she worked at the hospital she skillfully cared for her patients many of whom were critically or terminally ill. Since she is board certified in critical care and a registered nurse, her expertise was very useful at Mt. Sinai.

Sawyak recalled that someone from Guiding Light came in. That's how the program learned of her and the thorough job she performed with each and every patient. "That was in about 1984," said Sawyak. "About six months after this patient I got a call from the casting director from Guiding Light. He recommended that I play a nurse on the show. He was impressed with my medical knowledge. I did an episode. It was so scary."

Another incident happened that changed the course of her career. "I saw the production booth," she said. "I wanted to see it. I didn't know that the executive producer was in the booth. I made a comment about the anesthesia mask. I told them it was upside down." As she impressed the casting director, her charm and knowledge then enchanted the executive director, and she became not only "Nurse Norwood" on the program, but also the medical consultant.

Medical dialogue was a regular topic of discussion. She shared that on many occasions and would point out the fact that a nurse would never say that line. Several lines were changed because of Sawyak's input.

She admitted that she felt a calling to change the image of a nurse from that of a handmaiden to "a person that acts, thinks and does." A year had now gone by. As Sawyak put it, "as luck would have it, one of the producers left Guiding Light to go to "Another World." There was a cancer story line at the time." Sawyak wanted to be sure to do this story line correctly. She said, "It's really more dramatic if you do it right."

After a call from the head writer, Sawyak went to the Emmys, then the producer from "Another World" called and offered her the position of medical consultant. Sawyak felt that she could hire another nurse to do the job on "Another World" while she continued playing the role with Guiding Light. Although she then found that both programs would allow her to work so she remained as a nurse with Guiding Light while also working with "Another World" for six to nine months.

Guiding Light began an AIDS storyline so Sawyak knew her calling was to be there. She worked with Guiding Light while remaining the medical consultant for "Another World."

Later through more breaks, she worked on the set of the Cosby show with a storyline involving Jim Henson's Muppets and Cosby delivering alien babies. This was located on the same stage as "Another World." She then played a role on "One Life to Live" for a six-week period.

With her head still reeling from all the glitter, Sawyak had made quite a name for herself. In 1988 she opened her own business to bring nurses together to teach them the art of technical consulting. She rented a studio, did some scenes and taught the group "what works and what didn't." She gave an example of a character Vicki from "One Life to Live" and her act of choking. "Bo" then performed a tracheotomy according to the original script. Sawyak pointed out that this was all wrong and it might have encouraged people to believe it was the right thing to do. Her suggestion was the Heimlich maneuver which was not only more realistic but more dramatic.

Sawyak felt the urge to launch into the medical prop business. She "wanted to go to the movies." Her next move was obtaining a copy of the Hollywood Reporter which has a listing of all upcoming productions and those in progress. "I called everyone that was going to make a movie in New York," she said. "I had a phone bill of $700. I finally got a low budget film with Red Buttons, James Earl Jones and Eric Roberts called the "Ambulance." They kidnapped bodies in the show. It was a lot of medical. It was also a lot of fun. I had to give Red

Retrial of Crumitie set in Gainesville

By The Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — The retrial of a teen-ager charged in the shooting death of a British tourist at a highway rest-stop has been relocated because of high publicity.

John "Billy Joe" Crumitie, 18, was one of four teens charged in the September 1993 first-degree murder of Gary Coley at an Interstate 10 rest area near Monticello.

Jefferson County jurors in November deadlocked.

The retrial in Gainesville, some 110 miles southeast in Alachua County, was expected to start March 20, said Ted McPetridge, deputy court administrator for the 8th Judicial Circuit in Gainesville.

Possible reasons for the move include the high-profile nature of the case and the small size of the juror pool in Jefferson County — the home of all four teen-agers. The Gainesville Sun reported today.

The murder of Coley and the attempted murder of his longtime companion Margaret Jagger attracted worldwide attention, damaged Florida's tourist reputation and triggered tougher juvenile justice laws in Florida.

Several jurors during Crumitie's trial knew him, including a former teacher and a former classmate. The jury deadlocked after several hours of loud debate, and Circuit Judge F. E. Steinmeyer declared a mistrial.

Steinmeyer will preside over the Gainesville trial, but jurors will be selected from the Alachua County juror pool. McPetridge said.

Defense attorneys maintained at the first trial that no evidence tied Crumitie to the crime. He testified that he had been home sleeping at the time.

Unlike the first trial, Alachua jurors will hear from Aundra Akina — the confessed gunman.

Study: 1987 welfare law can save money

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A welfare reform law passed eight years ago has saved taxpayers money on benefits but hasn't done much to boost the standard of living of former recipients, a study shows.

"Project Independence was intended to reduce public assistance costs — and it did," reads a report by Manpower Demonstration Research Corp. "In fact, savings were large enough to enable the program to pay for itself."

The program, however, didn't work so well after the state reduced funding for child care and other services designed to help welfare recipients become self-sufficient, the report said.

Project Independence requires welfare recipients to look for work or take part in schooling to help them find jobs unless they have infants or toddlers. It was passed into law in 1987, long before the latest debate over welfare moved to center stage in Tallahassee or Washington.

The most savings accrued when the state helped women with school-age children. Over a five-year period, the state saved $1.55 for every dollar it spent, according to the non-profit nonpartisan research group.

Overall, the program led to welfare savings of about $265 per participant over two years, or about 6 percent a year, the report said.

The study results show that a relatively low-cost welfare-to-work program "can make a difference," said Judith Queron, president of the group. "But they also warn us that if the investment ... falls below a threshold level, the program's effectiveness can be undermined."

The evaluation was based on more than 18,000 single-parent welfare recipients and applicants from nine counties that are home to more than half of Florida's welfare population. The parents were referred to Project Independence between July 1990 and August 1991 and tracked for at least two years.

Shed burglaries continue

A storage building was reportedly burglarized Tuesday in the 4500 block of Orange Boulevard near Lake Monroe. Sheriff's deputies said an estimated $490 in fishing equipment was taken, although they reported numerous other items also of value were not touched.

Good Samaritan

A Bradenton man reportedly found a woman's purse in the Interstate-4 median near the eastbound rest area Monday. He turned it over to sheriff's deputies. Deputies reported finding papers and other personal property in it, belonging to an Ocoee woman. When she was located, the woman said she had been staying with a friend in Orlando when she discovered her purse was missing. She told deputies there was $200 in cash in the purse, but the money was never found.

Long rap sheet

Longwood police arrested Judson Travis Bowling, 17, of 1021 Hamilton Avenue in Longwood on Tuesday in connection with a vehicular burglary on Sleepy Hollow Avenue in Longwood on Feb. 28. According to the arrest report, a man told police someone had burglarized his car and taken speakers and an amplifier before driving off. The man said he saw the car returning a short time later, and a man he identified as Bowling reached out of the car, placed the two speakers on the ground, then drove off again.

The man said he went to see Bowling several days later and got his amplifier back.

Longwood police arrested Bowling in connection with the incident and charged him with vehicular burglary.

An HRS report filed with the arrest report indicated HRS had received a total of 74 referrals regarding Bowling's criminal activities between Sept. 1989 and Feb. 1995, including charges of auto theft, burglary, grand larceny, carrying a concealed firearm and others. For the crimes, he was tried as an adult and convicted on 28 of the counts, and found not guilty on two others. For almost all of the incidents, he was placed on community control.

Shots heard

Sanford police investigated a report of gunshots heard in a neighborhood Tuesday. As a result, Regino Alexander Jr., 21, of 100 Drew Ave., was placed under arrest on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Fight with robbers

A Sanford man told police he was approached by two black men Tuesday at 10 p.m., near the intersection of 13th Street and Olive Avenue. He said one of the men put a gun to his head and demanded that he get into his car. The man reportedly struggled with the gunman, who eventually fled from the area, firing one shot which injured the man in his hand.

Littering

Members of the Sanford police Special Investigative Unit (SIU) arrested Timothy Johnson, 30, of 2180 Center St., Sanford, on Tuesday. They said he was attempting to interfere with an investigation. He was charged with littering and prowling, and resisting an officer without violence.

Senate passes prison capacity, mandatory sentences

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

At a glance

- Crime legislation passed by the Senate on Wednesday:
- Requires inmates to serve at least 85 percent of their sentences. Known as Stop Turning Out Prisoners, or STOP.
- Imposes mandatory sentences ranging from 10 years to life for criminals who are convicted of a violent offense and have three previous convictions for violent crimes and have served at least one year in state or federal prison. Known as the Officer Evelyn Gort Career Criminal Act for a Metro-Dade police officer killed while off duty by an armed robber with a lengthy criminal record.
- Increases the legal capacity of Florida's prison system from 133 percent of design capacity to 150 percent to add another 4,000 beds.
- Increases the penalty for anyone convicted of abusing or neglecting an elderly person from a first-degree misdemeanor to a third-degree felony.

TALLAHASSEE — Democratic leaders say they aren't planning to move as swiftly as the Republican-led Senate in passing legislation to keep felons behind bars longer.

On its first working day in session, the Senate voted unanimously Wednesday to keep prisoners locked up for at least 85 percent of their sentences. It imposed mandatory terms on violent repeat offenders and increased the legal capacity of the prison system.

"The Senate has dealt with public safety in a meaningful way and we hope for fast action in the House on it," said Senate President Jim Scott, R-Fort Lauderdale.

The House is considering similar legislation, but it's not on as fast a track, said Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg. "We're going to take our time and be deliberative about it," said Wallace. "We want to make sure we balance the needs of the prison system against those of education, or (crime) prevention."

Many lawmakers and Gov. Lawton Chiles are worried about the future price tag for the anti-crime measures.

It will cost an estimated $600 million over five years to add more than 11,000 prison beds required under the legislation. That would increase the prison system's capacity to more than 89,000 inmates by the year 2000. About 56,000 criminals are behind bars now.

Scott said the money will come from the growth in tax revenues and cuts in other government programs.

Supporters of the so-called Stop Turning Out Prisoners legislation (CS-SB 24) applauded when the Senate passed the measure 36-0 to require prisoners to serve a minimum of 85 percent of their terms. The STOP legislation has been the cornerstone of the Senate's push to burnish Florida's crime-tarnished image.

Sen. Charlie Crist, the bill's sponsor, said he also would push for lawmakers to place a similar constitutional amendment on the 1998 ballot.

"The message is that if you commit a crime in Florida and if you are convicted in Florida, that Florida will punish you and you will do your time," said Crist, R-St. Petersburg.

Senators also passed a bill to send violent career criminals to prison for lengthy sentences.

The bill (CS-SB 168) was named the "Officer Evelyn Gort Career Criminal Act" after a Metro-Dade police officer who was killed while off duty by an armed robber with a lengthy criminal record.

The legislation imposes mandatory sentences ranging from 10 years to life on criminals who are convicted of a violent offense, have three previous convictions for violent crimes and have served at least one stint in state or federal prison.

"Some people we have to give up on. It's these people that fall into this category," said Sen. Ron Silver, D-North Miami Beach, the bill's sponsor.

Another bill (CS-SB 94), sponsored by Sen. Locke Burt, R-Ormond Beach, and passed unanimously, increases the legal capacity of Florida's prison system from 133 percent to 150 percent to add another 4,000 beds.

With prison guards worried about their safety if more violent criminals are put into existing penitentiaries, the Senate passed an amendment by Sens. Fred Dudley, R-Cape Coral, and Rick Dantzer, D-Winter Haven, to make the Legislature take into account the "health, welfare and safety" of correctional officers.

Save the animals

Most people who welcome animals into their homes for companionship know they are more than pets. They are members of the family.

It should be obvious by now that the romping puppy and the fluffy kitten feel joy, happiness, fear, love.

And pain.

Sanford police arrested one man Monday, charging animal cruelty and fighting/baiting animals, both third degree felonies. Two policemen reported seeing Eric Curtis in Academy Manor Park, encouraging his pit bull to attack a raccoon which had been smeared with blood and its hind legs broken. The police ordered Curtis to remove the dog, after which Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire said the raccoon suffered about 10 minutes before it died.

We hope Mr. Curtis and others who think animal fighting is an amusing sport never have to suffer like that raccoon must have suffered. For 10 minutes, wrought by pain with broken legs, the raccoon was cornered and attacked, dying but not understanding why. Wanting to run, but unable to because its legs were useless flesh and crushed bone.

Another innocent creature falls victim to man's inhumanity toward animals.

On the wish list for the Humane Society of Seminole County is the creation of a full-time position for an animal abuse investigator. We encourage our readers to support that idea with donations to the society. Perhaps the next raccoon, or cat, or dog, life bleeding from its tortured and broken body, will be saved from the next barbarian who believes animals exist only for man's sick and twisted pleasure.

Garbage woes

Why should anyone pay a so-called tax that doesn't make sense?

We are on a "fixed income" and have an exemption on the garbage we take to the landfill ourselves, but it seems we have to pay a fee for a year anyway.

This exempts us from what? People on "fixed incomes" can't very well afford this; the commissioners should try to live on less than $800 a month.

Sometimes things are not what they seem to be. The way it was explained to my wife, if the tax is not paid, they will confiscate our property or put a lien on it; so where are you? It's a case of being damned if you do, or damned if you don't.

The way these laws are worded makes you wonder what exactly do they mean? Some of these laws leave much to be desired.

Does GOP want to starve children?

Slowly the Democratic response to Newt Gingrich's "Contract With America" is becoming clear: Support everything relatively painless (e.g. procedural reforms of Congress), oppose everything that really matters, and yell bloody murder at all spending cuts.

The Democrats simply had to defeat the balanced budget amendment, because budget deficits are the chief means whereby they redistribute money from the American middle class to the party's clients in the allegedly victimized minorities.

The process is simple: Overspend wildly on "victims," then send the bill -- not to the middle class (that would be too dangerous), but to the middle class of the future: the children and grandchildren of today's voters, who will have to service the immense debt thus run up. If this were prohibited by the Constitution, the Democrats would simply go out of business.

Mostly, however, they are content to yowl every time the Republicans propose a spending cut. It doesn't even matter that in most cases the GOP only wants to cut the rate of increase of spending programs in future years. Yowl anyway -- the public doesn't understand the difference.

Mr. Clinton laid down the basic line on March 3. As one reporter summarized it, "President Clinton decried Republican attempts to cut social spending yesterday, accusing the new majority in Congress of targeting children to pay for tax cuts for the rich."

Now, it would occur to most people that if the Republican Party really set out to "target" America's children to provide tax cuts for the rich, it would be digging its own grave. There are far more votes among parents than among the rich. But Mr. Clinton doesn't expect most people to believe his charge. It will be enough if only the dumbest 5 or 10 percent believe it. Out of such margins are political victories made.

However, Mr. Clinton's accusation is relatively mild, compared to some of the charges that lesser Democrats are tossing around. A few days ago Jane Ganahl, a sob sister for the San Francisco Examiner (a liberal rag that in better days used to be the flagship of the Hearst newspaper chain), set out to attack the consequences of a Republican proposal to replace federally subsidized school lunch programs with grants enabling the states to provide them instead.

It will be enough if only the dumbest 5 or 10 percent believe it. Out of such margins are political victories made.

Ms. Ganahl's prize witness was one Frank Courtade, the principal of Flynn Elementary School in one of San Francisco's poorer districts. "It's real simple," she quoted Courtade as saying, "They want our poorest kids to starve."

If you think such a charge can be dismissed as just the spontaneous reaction of an upset teacher, think again: The Examiner's top editors were so impressed by it that they reprinted it in the caption of a photograph of Courtade: "Flynn principal Frank Courtade: 'It's real simple -- they want our poorest kids to starve.'"

The charge that the Republican Party has embarked on a deliberate program of mass infanticide, for all the world like the Biblical Herod, gives you some idea of just how low the GOP's opponents are prepared to stoop. Do the American people have nerves steady enough to reject such garbage?

My hat is off to the GOP for daring to defy this sort of hysteria.

Cutting to heart of amendments

Well, by golly! If I'm here and if you're there this -- the week after -- that must mean the Good Lord was willing, the creeks didn't rise, we're now off like a herd of turtles in full stampede.

Look out amendments -- here we come.

Amendment I: This one orders Congress to keep its grubby little paws off of religion's establishment and practice thereof, the freedom of "speech," the freedom of the "press," of people to "assemble," and of people "petitioning" the government for redress of grievances. In this old fella's NSHO this -- the first of the citizens' "Bill of Rights" gets mangled -- bigtime -- on a sickeningly regular basis. If it isn't some far out court decision rendered by an overly liberal judge, it's some federal or state level highly questionable action -- or worse yet -- gross lack of action on a multitude of people issues.

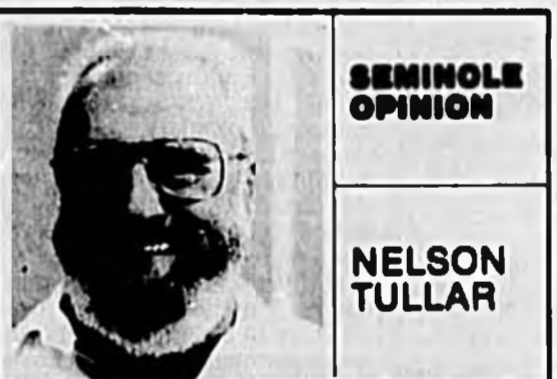

Amendment II: The right of "the people" (not federal government, not state government, not any government at any level) to keep and bear arms, shall not -- repeat -- not be infringed. Remember now, folks, these 10 amendments, the Bill of Rights, were incorporated into the Constitution to serve as people protection from government and not -- repeat -- not government protection from the people. Actually these 10 amendments serve to severely limit what government can do against the people. A constant barrage of legal challenges in all levels of courts of law are a constant threat.

Amendment III: Talks about quartering a soldier in private homes in wartime and otherwise. You know, folks, I haven't been challenged by a soldier, sailor, Marine, Air Force or Coast Guard -- for bed and breakfast -- in so long that I can't recall the last time. I did have a battleship cruise down the gutter during last week's heavy rain but it didn't stop. Didn't even slow down. Just kept on chuggin' along and disappeared as it turned the corner.

Amendment IV: Covers "unreasonable" search and seizure of their persons, houses, papers, and effects. Here's another one that is bastardized -- on a semi-regular basis. The fly in the ointment seems to be the single word "unreasonable." Depends altogether too heavily on who defines unreasonable. And too -- any law written to cover one set of circumstances -- and then very liberally interpreted to cover something totally different, further corrupts the amendment.

Amendment V: Covers double jeopardy, depriving of life, liberty or property and property taken without just compensation. Shades of 1-95! Just might seem that this "People protection amendment" is being, and has been, eviscerated under the guise of some state law written for a specific purpose and interpreted to cover a much broader spectrum.

Amendment VI: The old "impartial jury" gambit. Come on, for crying out loud, it says "impartial." Not racially balanced, not sexually balanced, not creter-totter balanced. It does say "speedy." Speedy is six months.

SEMINOLE OPINION

NELSON TULLAR

Speedy is not 16 months. Speedy is not a prolonged time period to favorably affect the accused. Nor is it a prolonged time period to allegedly justify gigantic lawyers' fees.

Amendment VII: Trial by jury. And no "fact" tried by jury shall be otherwise re-examined in "any court in the United States" other than according to the rules of common law. Seems to me that "common law" covers all kinds of sin. We seem to have appeal after appeal after appeal. Each one must have 40-50 pounds of "common law" welded to its chassis somewhere. Hey! What shape does "common law" come in anyway?

Amendment VIII: Covers excessive bail and fines, cruel and unusual punishment inflicted. Lordy! Lordy! This one's a lawyer's "horn of plenty." The biggest blast here is the everlovin' legal beagle's endless cry of "cruel and unusual" punishment imposed on his client. What'd that client do to his victim? Oh, not much. Maybe raped her repeatedly. Broke a limb or two -- just for fun ... and then ended up slitting her throat. Guess this particular legal beagle just felt that all this treatment was neither cruel nor unusual and was simply a nice quiet weekend chat.

Amendment IX: Those items spelled out in the Constitution shall not -- repeat -- not be construed to deny others retained by the people. I guess this means the federal government has certain rights ... which do not deny other rights to and for the people.

Amendment X: Super-super important. Verbatim: "The powers not delegated to the United States (that means the federal government) by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people." Or-to-the-people! The Constitution unquestionably grants certain rights, duties, obligations, etc. to the federal government and severely restricts all others and reserves those to "the people" unless denied to the people by the Constitution.

It just might seem that the very heavy intrusion by federal government into states' (people's) rights might be considered by some as a usurping of power that is constitutionally denied to the federal and reserved for the states.

That's the first 10 amendments. There's 16 more.

Lugar looking to drop egg subsidies

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., might hear some clucking from his own party as he tries to free the federal government from the yoke of farm subsidies. If egg and poultry exporters have anything to say about it, Lugar's lofty plans will never leave the congressional coop.

Lugar, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and a newly announced presidential candidate, ruffled some feathers in Congress last month when he suggested that farm subsidies be reduced -- and that some programs be eliminated altogether. As the brewing battle over the Export Enhancement Program shows, reducing farm welfare is likely to scramble some long-standing political alliances on Capitol Hill.

"There are some senators who are going to protect their states' interests," a Lugar spokeswoman told us. "But we can't spare our friends. If we're serious about strengthening farmers... we need to take some responsibility now about curbing government spending."

The Export Enhancement Program was hatched by Congress in the mid-1980s to level the playing field for American farm exporters, who were competing against the lavish subsidies of their European counterparts. While most of the $1 billion of EEP subsidies help support large export commodities like wheat, a small chunk of it -- about $5 million -- helps support the sale of brown eggs to Hong Kong, the bastion of laissez-faire capitalism.

But this subsidy doesn't go to the pockets of egg producers -- it goes to support three major New England exporters, who in turn buy their eggs from about six or seven major egg "coops." It's a tiny fraction of Uncle Sam's $1 billion annual commitment to farm welfare, but it helps illustrate the problems that will befall those who want farmers to absorb their fair share of budget cuts. The brown egg industry counts among its best friends Sen. Bill Cohen, R-Maine, a committed budget cutter until it comes to taking his own constituents off the dole.

Problems for the brown egg industry began with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which will begin taking effect on July 1. Under GATT, export subsidies will fall across the board, leaving egg and chicken exporters at a particular disadvantage. That left egg exporters only six months to sell their entire allotment for 1995 -- about 30 million dozen eggs.

Producers and exporters were quickly crying fowl. "This is essentially our last hurrah," one poultry industry representative told our reporter Tarek Rizk. "If we don't sell them between now and the end of May, we smell them."

Egg and poultry producers felt further plucked when the U.S. Department of Agriculture failed to approve their subsidies in a timely fashion. So egg producers turned to Cohen, whose staff quickly called over to the USDA to inquire about the holdup. They also sought help from Gary Blumenthal, a former chief of staff at the USDA who now lobbies his old department. The subsidies have since been approved.

"He's been very helpful to us," one egg industry representative said of Cohen. "He made it very clear, back at the time when GATT was being considered... that USDA better be attentive to the existing enhancement program for table egg exports.... He has been everything a Maine farmer could hope for." A Cohen spokeswoman said the senator considers the EEP a "worthwhile program" and added that "there are some things on which reasonable people can disagree."

If egg and poultry exporters have anything to say about it, Lugar's lofty plans will never leave the congressional coop.

Seminole County firefighters packed commission chambers for contract negotiations.

Contract

talks continued, eroding the wages of firefighters when compared to firefighters' salaries in similar sized departments in nearby cities and counties, explained Employee Relations Director German B. Romeo.

Morris noted, after the wage proposal was accepted, "the county commission moved dramatically from its position five years ago." He noted whether the agreement is accepted or rejected by union members, it covers only a one year period and negotiations will begin anew on next year's contract terms.

Describing the agreement as a good first step, Morris challenged firefighters attending the special meeting to return during the budget-making process to see the impact the salary increases will have and the pressure created to avoid a tax increase.

"You have no concept of the effect this will have on our budget," Morris commented. He praised the employees and union for their "civil comportment during the union presentation."

Although union negotiators described the commission's action as "discouraging," in supporting all but one of the county manager's positions, Attorney Richard Siwica thanked the board for devoting so much time to hear the issues and for their consideration.

The International Association of Firefighters, Local 3254 represents 185 fire service technicians (FSTs) and 43 Lieutenants (LTs). The employees unionized in September 1960 but rejected a proposed contract in December 1992.

Bargaining teams have been negotiating a new contract since August 1993. Twice discussions reached impasse and an arbitrator was called.

In the most recent talks, the county manager rejected the recommendations of an arbitrator in the areas of wages, special team incentives, grievance and arbitration, prevailing rights, management rights and discipline and discharge while agreement was reached on over 40 additional issues.

The commission adopted the county manager's recommendation for a range of salary increase for special operations teams which deal with hazardous materials and the dive teams based on certifications required at various levels. Commissioner Daryl McLain recommended the county pay for courses required for certifications for team members.

Commissioner Pat Warren noted during the session the commission is working to provide equity and fairness for all county employees.

Violence

Klara is a junior at Lake Mary High School. She said she thinks about the potential for violence at school almost every day.

"You see fights all the time," she said. "You know, guys pushing and shoving or worse. I don't think the teachers even notice that stuff any more." Brittany is a classmate at Lake Mary.

"I try to turn a blind eye to it," she said of the violence at her school. "It's not that bad, but it's bad enough."

Halbig said he is concerned for the students who are afraid to go to school in the morning.

"It just isn't fair for them," he said. "The kids are always saying they want their rights. Well, what about the right for others to learn in a safe environment? What about the teachers' right to do what they do best?"

One in four students said they feared for their safety at school. One out of every 10 teachers said they feared for their safety.

"I know we're not any worse off than any other school, but there are too many kids who think it's OK to punch someone out or something," he said.

He is not afraid to go to school he said, but he believes there are some students who are.

Schoolmate Kerry said she knows there is violence at school, but usually it's away from the main halls.

"I hear about fights and even guns and knives, but I've never seen it out in the open," she said. "It doesn't really scare me any more than walking down the street. I think about it, but I can't let it get to me."

Halbig said the schools have to get stricter with the rules that govern students.

"We are failing them by not giving them restrictions," he said. "Kids want restrictions. They need restrictions."

While Halbig admits that Seminole County's problems are not as bad as in other Florida counties where there have been reports of random murders and premeditated mayhem, he isn't about to let his guard down.

"If they've got it there," he said. "It's coming here."

The bottom line: None of Florida's schools are free from disruptive or criminal students. And schools need more ways to handle and teach unruly students than the current alternatives of suspensions, paddling and expulsion.

State Education Commissioner Frank Brogan says second-chance schools for problem students, used in his home district of Martin County, might be the answer. He said the special schools do turn troubled students into learners.

"Many troubled students, if left uncorrected, become the adult criminals for whom we can't build prisons fast enough," said Brogan.

animals," she said. "They learn about science, math, social studies."

At the zoo, students huddle around a giant antler from an exotic antelope. Amid the ooohs and ahhs and whispered questions about whether or not the animals brain had ever touched it, the students are truly fascinated with the hands-on experience.

"I got to touch things I couldn't be able to touch normally," Antwan Turner said. "I even got to feel a raccoon."

Turner and classmate Jennifer Hancock were also intrigued to learn about where different animals lived.

"We got to put up where there were different endangered species all over the world on a big map," Turner said.

Some of the animals, like the cuddly raccoon or the energetic serval captured the attention of the entire class, entertaining them with their antics and amazing them with their natural abilities.

Other animals, were a bit frightening to the youngsters. "I didn't like going past the hippo," said Keishawan Knight, looking nervously at the floor. "I didn't like it because it was so big."

Knight liked spending the day at the zoo, however.

"I liked going some place other than school for a day," she said.

Sandi Linn, the education curator at the zoo, said officials there were very pleased with the program and planned to continue it as long as the grant money that is financing it remains available.

"It's been very successful," she said. "We're getting ready to start the new school year in July."

Though most of the students didn't like having to "walk all over the place," all were excited about the program.

"I didn't like when we had to write down the names of all the animals because I didn't know too many of them," said Tara Burke. "But now I know more animals than I did before."

Ryan Boatright didn't like walking along the boardwalk and looking at the animals.

"It was boring," he said. "But I'd go back to see the toucan. He was a neat looking bird."

Phillips said the students are given the chance to weigh out a monkey's lunch and measure a snake's skin and an antelope's skull. They located animals' natural habitats on a map of the world and they learned about the environments in which they live.

"They had a blast," she said. "They learned a lot while they were having fun."

Versace and Fendi embrace luxury life

MILAN, Italy — Versace is to fashion what Ferrari is to cars — streamlined, expensive and very sexy.

And just like the latest fire red F50 Ferrari presented at the Geneva car fair this week, offered for a mere $500,000, Versace clothes are only for those whose fine eye for details is matched by a gold-lined pocketbook.

The high point of Versace's winter collection, shown in his downtown Milan mansion Tuesday night, was a series of more than 30 evening gowns, each one-of-a-kind, costing up to $8,000.

Super sexy but never vulgar, with sculpted bodices and long skirts that hug the buttocks before drooping loosely to the ground, the gowns outlined the body in pastel-toned satin and chiffon.

"Their elegance lies in their simplicity," said Kal Rutenstein, a vice president at Bloomingdale's.

Reminiscent of Hollywood in the 1950s, the gowns were still modern enough to be a sure hit with the Hollywood heroines of today.

A favorite of film and rock stars, who crave his flashy, fleshy look, Versace did not shy away from using top runway stars like Claudia Schiffer, Naomi Campbell, Kate Moss and Helena Christensen.

Some designers have opted to use lesser-known models or actresses, saying the top models have out-priced themselves — according to Women's Wear Daily, Nadja Auermann makes $18,000 per show — and forgotten their primary role, showing off clothes.

"I pick the most beautiful and elegant models, the queens of the runway," Versace said after the show.

On Wednesday, defying the current anti-fur climate, Fendi presented a luxurious fur collection in a master show.

Long wool coats trimmed in fur shared the runway with full fur in sable, chinchilla and mink, as well as humbler weasel and mole.

Earlier Wednesday, a British animal rights group, People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, announced that Schiffer, a favorite Fendi model, had signed an anti-fur petition along with other top models. The Fendis said that "in order not to embarrass her" they had asked Schiffer not to model in the show.

U.S. offers $2 million reward

KARACHI, Pakistan — The U.S. government offered a $2 million reward today for information leading to the arrest of the gunman who killed two U.S. Consulate employees and wounded a third.

An FBI anti-terrorism team was headed toward Pakistan to help search for the men who ambushed the U.S. government vehicle Wednesday morning.

At least two gunmen with AK-47 assault rifles sprayed a white Toyota van carrying employees to the consulate when it stopped at a red light. The gunmen then sped away in their stolen taxi.

An unidentified caller in Manila claimed responsibility for the attack on behalf of the "Liberation Army." The organization is not known in Manila and it was unclear how serious the claim was.

No arrests have been made, but police have at least one strong witness: Zulfiqar Ahmed, a taxi driver, who had his taxi stolen at gunpoint near the Karachi airport at 8:15 a.m. Wednesday.

The taxi, found abandoned about one mile from the site of the attack about an hour and a half later, is believed to be the vehicle used by the assailants.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Ahmed said two young men on a motorcycle came up to him in his taxi and threatened to shoot him if he didn't give them the keys.

Ahmed turned over his keys and the two men drove off. A third man, who was standing nearby, drove away on the motorcycle.

Dollar rises, gold falls

LONDON — The dollar its recovery early today in Europe, but dealers weren't sure how long the greenback could hold onto its new levels.

The dollar was able to hover above 91 Japanese yen. It also held above 1.39 German marks. Gold prices fell.

Even though the dollar inched slightly higher, the rally that had started Wednesday in response to interest rate hikes in France, Belgium and Denmark showed signs of faltering.

Early today, Ireland also raised interest rates, as its central bank lifted the short-term facility, applied to loans it makes to commercial banks, to 7.25 percent from 6.75 percent.

"The reasons that people were happy to sell the dollar have not gone away," said Graham Cocks, a vice president at Bank of Boston in London.

The mark has been rising strongly on perceptions that Germany may soon increase interest rates at a time when any more interest rate increases in the United States seem unlikely.

Investors have also been bearish on the dollar because of currency turmoil in Mexico, the U.S. government's apparent inability to deal with big trade and budget deficits, as well as the difficulty President Clinton confronts in working with the Republican Congress.

Britons confront the kiss

By The Associated Press

LONDON — A kiss has become much more than just a kiss in Britain.

Along with the hug, it's the talk of the nation this week, dominating front pages, talk-radio and water-cooler chitchat.

The once simple forms of greeting stand accused of breaking down class distinctions, promoting sexual harassment and symbolizing the nefarious influence of the French.

It all began Sunday, when Britain's Green Party introduced "politically correct hugging" at its annual conference.

"We're a touchy-feely party," where people hug each other, party spokesman David Taylor told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "But there's been a breakdown in standards in social codes of behavior and people aren't sure how to approach each other."

The workshop resulted from female Greens' complaints of discomfort over being hugged by male colleagues who tended to touch more sensitive parts of the body, Taylor said.

Party executive member Miriam Kennet, who organized the workshop, worried that men in the small party would feel "lonely, confused and rejected" if turned down outright.

So she developed three politically correct hugs: side by side (hands on shoulders); frontal (an object — such as a clipboard — acts as an appropriate barrier during the embrace, with hands on shoulders) and the warning from behind ("Do you want a hug?" followed by — you guessed it — hands on shoulders.)

"A politically correct hug should be used to support each other after working hard," Kennet told participants. "If the hug is done correctly, it's the most incredible feeling."

On Monday, Kennet, Taylor and others demonstrating the Green hug were splashed across the front pages of several national dailies.

"It's sure to cure the population explosion," smirked the Daily Express.

"When approaching such earnest folk, it is hard to know whether it is more risky to embrace their persons or their principles," editorialized the Daily Mail.

Taylor said he was dismayed by what he described as "prurient" coverage by Britain's mostly conservative press. "What came across to me is that they have the problem" with touching, he said.

They're not the only ones.

On Tuesday, the London Times reported that a private school in Scotland, the Dollar Academy, banned kissing among its students.

Rector John Robertson, citing "spring in the air," warned senior girls and boys that they would be disciplined if they came within six inches of each other, the paper reported.

Also this week, the Liverpool transport authority decided to ban posters promoting the movie "Disclosure," featuring Demi

Moore embracing Michael Douglas. Motorists' groups complained that the clinch took drivers' eyes off the road.

Inevitably, the royals were dragged into the controversy. Prince Charles — already chastised by the tabloids for supposedly kissing his sons' nanny earlier this year — was caught on the front page of the Daily Mail hugging an unidentified skier at a resort in Switzerland.

Times columnist Nigella Lawson complained that the influence of Britons' kisser French cousins, who customarily greet each other with kisses on the cheeks, meant that "everyone has bought into the myth that to be upright and English and unaffectionate is a bad thing."

"The stiff upper lip is a thing of the past," she said. "Everyone is puckered up for the squishiest of embraces."

In fact, before the rigid mores of the Victorian age set in, Britons were notorious for their kissing.

It was the Restoration playwright, William Congreve, who coined the phrase "kiss and tell." British warriors dying on the battlefield — most famously, Lord Nelson — would demand a final, mouth-to-mouth kiss from their fellows before passing into the next world.

"We need all the help we can get with such volatile and sensitive codes," The Times editorialized on Tuesday. "In an increasingly classless world, there are no longer authorities ... to lay down the codes."

Violence, illiteracy, plaguing women

By KEVIN COSTELLO, Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Violence, illiteracy and second-class status plague women throughout the world and lead to cycles of degrading poverty, the United Nations says.

"No society treats its women as well as its men," the U.N. Development Program told delegates Wednesday at a global conference on fighting poverty and social inequalities.

Still seeking consensus on dozens of issues, the U.N. World Summit for Social Development heard sobering statistics Wednesday on International Women's Day:

- Nearly one-half of married women experience domestic violence.
- Two-thirds of the world's 1.3 billion impoverished are women.
- Women make up two-thirds of the world's nearly 1 billion illiterates.

"Gender inequality is often reinforced by law," the U.N. agency said. "Women can be denied rights to own or inherit property, to receive pensions or even to decide whether or when to bear children."

To help overcome gender barriers, Hillary Rodham Clinton announced a 10-year, $100-million U.S. program to help fund education for girls in a dozen countries. U.S. officials said they view education as a key means of breaking the cycle of poverty.

"The goals of this initiative are ambitious," Mrs. Clinton said. "I respectfully urge other governments to join the United States in creating or expanding the opportunities for all women worldwide."

The program was the first concrete measure at the weeklong summit, to end Sunday with the signing of a final document of goals by some 120 world leaders.

The conference has been beset by squabbles over demands for increased aid and debt relief for poorer countries.

Although Washington supports the idealistic goals of eradicating poverty, the administration isn't willing to commit itself to radical measures.

President Clinton skipped the 193-nation summit, angering poorer countries around the world.

The United States has been resisting demands for more aid to the Third World, said Carol Lancaster, deputy chief of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

As International Women's Day drew to an end, a few hundred women walked in a torchlight procession in downtown Copenhagen, showering sparks into the night wind.

Carrying banners demanding an end to violence against women, marchers chanted, "We shall overcome."

"It's beautiful to see torches as far as the eye can see," said Susan Davis, head of the American Women's Environment and Development Organization. "It gives me a feeling of hope."

Peso falls as Mexico waits to hear rescue plans

By ANITA SNOW, Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — While Mexico waited Wednesday to hear President Ernesto Zedillo's plans to revive the economy, the peso fell and fell and fell, ending the day at a new record low.

The Mexican currency closed at 8.995 to the dollar, below Tuesday's record low, 6.795. It's now worth about 14 1/2 cents, half its level when it began the disastrous slide in December that has hammered Mexico's economy.

The main index of the Mexican stock market closed down 1.8 percent on light trading.

The Congress voted Tuesday to accept the $20 billion U.S. aid package intended to stop the peso's fall, which began when the government allowed a currency devaluation. The package passed despite opposition criticism of its high interest rates and spending cuts, and complaints that it gives the United States too much control over Mexico's economy.

Term limit vote delayed

WASHINGTON — Facing likely defeat on a key provision of their "Contract With America," House Republicans are delaying a vote on a constitutional amendment for term limits on lawmakers to rally support.

"In the next few weeks the leadership will be working hard to cultivate the votes necessary to pass term limits," Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, wrote other lawmakers Wednesday in announcing the bill would not come to the floor as scheduled next week. A vote in late March is likely.

But even as Armey vowed to fight for the measure, two other members of the House GOP leadership voiced continued opposition, underscoring the difficulty of rounding up the two-thirds majority necessary for passage.

"Most people have not thought through the unintended consequences," said six-term Rep. Tom DeLay of Texas, the party's whip. He said a limit on congressional terms would simply transfer power to unelected bureaucrats. DeLay said he had made that case to first-term lawmakers last winter during his leadership race, and noted he was elected despite his opposition to the measure.

Product liability damages

WASHINGTON — After embracing two GOP bills aimed at reshaping the legal system, the House is taking up the package's central provision: a measure that would make it harder for consumers to win product liability damages.

The hotly contested bill would establish a national uniform set of laws on product liability, pre-empting state laws. It also would limit punitive damages awarded in the vast majority of state and federal civil lawsuits, not just product liability suits, to $250,000 or three times the economic damages, whichever is greater.

As lawmakers have debated the three "Contract With America" legal measures this week, a fierce lobbying battle by business, consumer and legal groups has swirled around them.

American business has unsuccessfully come to Congress for more than a decade with appeals to limit product liability awards and punitive damages in lawsuits. Now, with Republicans in control, business sees a chance for victory and has pulled out all the lobbying stops.

Thurmond on equality

WASHINGTON — The Strom Thurmond who once said blacks and whites should be kept apart "for the integrity of the races" is now a Strom Thurmond who says he believes "equality is what we've all got to live up to."

The Republican senator from South Carolina sat in a room full of civil rights advocates Wednesday night to accept an award for maintaining a friendship across the color line, and declare himself a changed man.

"There's been a metamorphosis, of course, over the years," Thurmond, 92, said after taking part in a tribute to 17 pairs of friends, black and white, who have shown that relationships can transcend race.

"I try to help everybody I can. I don't ask a person whether they're black or white or what. I try to help the high, the low, the rich and the poor. Equality is what we've all got to live up to," he said.

The Greater Washington Urban League included Thurmond among the honorees because for 20 years he has been friend and mentor to talk radio host Armstrong Williams, a black conservative Republican.

"I know his past. I can only judge this man on how he treats me," said Williams, 38. "Are you saying people cannot change? When you've had someone who's been a devout segregationist, once they've seen the light, you will not have a better ally and friend."

Faye's fault theory

LOS ANGELES — Faye Resnick said in her book that O.J. Simpson is a murderer. Simpson, in turn, hinted in his book that Resnick played a role in the slayings of his ex-wife and her friend.

Now, Simpson's attorneys have finally spelled out their "Faye's fault" theory: the killings were drug hits intended to send Resnick a message to pay her cocaine bills.

Although attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. offered no evidence, he spent much of Wednesday aggressively questioning Detective Tom Lange about a possible drug connection. Cochran went so far as to say the murders may have had a drug lord's signature in the form of a "Colombian necklace," defined by Cochran as an ear-to-ear throat slash.

Lange insisted there were no signs that drugs were involved in the June 12 killings. He was to return to the stand today for an eighth day of testimony.

Loyola Law School professor Stan Goldman warned that the defense must produce evidence to make its theory palatable to the jury.

"It's not like Faye Resnick has been tough to find since then, and I haven't seen too many hitmen following her with big knives," he added.

Satirical ditty goes commercial

NEW YORK — More than a generation has passed since counterculture heroine Janis Joplin first prayed for a Mercedes-Benz in a satirical ditty that became a rock classic.

Now Mercedes marketers have revived the 25-year-old song for a commercial designed to help answer their prayers — cultivating new customers for the German luxury cars.

The recording joins a chorus of classic rock songs that advertisers have pounced on to pitch sneakers, soda and beer. But Joplin's song is different because it is a satire on materialism that makes its point by mentioning the car brand by name.

Mercedes' commercial dismayed some rock fans because it drafts a symbol of the '60s counterculture into service for a car that has long symbolized wealth and social stature.

"Some people will say this is another example of commercialism usurping the icons dear to us," said Ross Goldstein, who heads the marketing consultancy Generation Insights in San Francisco.

But he suspects many more will like the commercial because they have grown up and learned to laugh at themselves. "It almost makes the purchase of a Mercedes Benz a counterculture act," he said.

Lottery-by-phone

WORLEY, Idaho — More than a century ago, an Indian tribe named the Coeur d'Alene gave up lucrative mining land to the U.S. government for $150,000.

It's going to be a lot harder to separate the tribe from what could be a far more profitable asset — the first national lottery-by-phone.

Since tribal officials announced plans for the lottery Monday, several states have threatened legal action. They claim, among other things, that federal law requires Indian gaming to take place on Indian lands.

But the threats aren't deterring the northern Idaho tribe, whose shrewd trading skills once impressed 19th-century French fur traders. Tribal leaders are moving ahead with building a two-story office for the lottery, and they plan to hold the first drawing in late summer.

"We've cleared every legal hurdle," Dave Matheson, the tribe's gaming manager, said Wednesday. "We think there's a lot of saber-rattling going on by people trying to scare away competition. That's the real motive."

GOP leader unveiling tax-cut bill promised by contract

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The House's top tax-writer says his plan to lower levies for families with children, savers and many businesses fulfills what House Republicans promised to do in their "Contract With America."

"If you had to track it, the contract will be 90 percent there," Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said of the legislation he planned to unveil today. "We're committed to the contract. We ran on it, we all signed it, and we'll do what we said we were going to do."

But Democrats complained that the tax cuts, worth about $200 billion over five years, would be a boon to the rich, paid for with cuts in welfare and other programs that largely serve lower-income Americans.

"They are shifting it from the children, who they're so brutal and cruel to, to the wealthy and rich who voted for Republicans last November," said Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., a member of the Ways and Means panel.

As the "contract" promised, the Ways and Means measure will include a $500 tax credit per child below age 18 for families earning $200,000 a year or less, reductions in the capital gains tax rate paid by people who sell land and other property, and more generous individual retirement accounts.

Along with their pledge to eliminate federal deficits by 2002, the Republicans promise to reduce taxes for millions of Americans was the main thrust of the "contract," their guiding doctrine during last fall's election campaign.

Polls show that some voters would prefer greater deficit reduction to lower taxes, but many lawmakers find tax-cutting legislation hard to oppose. President Clinton and House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., have each proposed their own, less expensive tax cuts, both aimed at lower-income people than Archer's legislation.

Despite those proposals by their party leaders, many Democrats on the Ways and Means committee are ready to oppose the GOP plan by arguing that now is the time to erase budget shortfalls, not drive up the deficit with tax reductions.

The tax cut legislation is likely to be approved by the Ways and Means panel next week, and by the full House afterward. Its toughest congressional hurdle is likely to be the Senate, where many Republicans, including Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., say deficit reduction should be the year's top focus, not lowering taxes.

The pillar of Archer's bill is a proposal providing a $500 tax credit for each child, which the GOP says would benefit 50 million families.

Democrats and some Republicans have already complained that the $200,000 income ceiling would allow tax breaks for well-to-do families, but Archer said he did not plan to change that figure, for fear of violating a key promise of the contract.

Rep. Jim McCrery, R-La., another committee member, said he believed the package would also lower taxes for companies that must pay the alternative minimum tax, which is aimed at businesses with so many deductions or credits that they could otherwise escape paying income taxes. This reduction, popular with business, was not part of the GOP contract.

The Ways and Means bill is also expected to:

- Allow more generous depreciation for companies with large amounts of costly equipment, a provision called neutral cost recovery.

- Allow tax-free withdrawals from individual retirement accounts for home buying, higher education and health-care costs. Contributions to the accounts would be taxed.

- Reduce the capital gains tax rate paid on profits of property sales, and eliminate any taxes paid on increased property values that result simply from inflation.

- Repeal the tax increase on the best-off Social Security recipients included in Clinton's 1993 deficit-reduction package.

- Increase deductions for small businesses and people with home offices, and boost the size of estates that are exempt from taxes.

Lust for (Plant) life

A 'Page' out of rock history

By DIANA M. GILLANDERS
Herald Staff Writer

First, let me state now, I'm a big Led Zeppelin fan. I especially adore Robert Plant. So there will be nary a negative word from this fan/writer.

Former Led Zeppelin guitarist Jimmy Page and front man Robert Plant have reformed as "Jimmy Page Robert Plant" promoting their 1995 world tour and album "No Quarter."

On Tuesday night at the Orlando Arena, their fans (about 18,000) were ready to celebrate their return, and celebrate they did. At 9 p.m. with stage lights up, strobe lights flashing, giant video screens illuminated, mega-amp systems reverberating, Page and Plant announced their arrival with "Dancing Days."

Sixteen thousand people fused into a mighty anvil chorus. Arms outstretched, lighters lit in reverence, the audience, a sea of ecstatic humanity, welcomed Page, Plant and their musicians with a thunderous roar.

Continuing with "Celebration Days," "Thank You," "Friends," "Since I've Been Loving You," "No Quarter," "Gallows Pole," etc., for two hours, Page, Plant, their terrific backup band — and later — joined by symphonic orchestra and Egyptian musicians — got the "Led" out.

As an encore, the incomparable "Whole Lotta Lovin'" and "Kashmir" had the audience gasping for its collective breath.

After their final exit, comments were tossed around in the heated atmosphere. "Come back!" "We want more." "The party's not over yet." "Stairway to Heaven!" You get the drift. ...

In January, Led Zeppelin was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. Minus drummer John Bonham who died in 1980,

Page, Plant and John Paul Jones were lauded by their peers. And rightly so. Led Zeppelin was a band that constantly reinvented itself. They presented to their fans all over the world a cornucopia of musical delights. Hard-rock anthems, soft acoustic ballads, raunchy blues — Led Zeppelin delivered.

From the moment I tuned in to MTV five years ago and came in on the middle of a taped segment of Zeppelin's only film "The Song Remains the Same," I was hooked. When I heard Plant's eerie wails responding to Page's escalating guitar riffs, I was hooked. When I saw the mane of golden hair swinging freely, the sexual posturing of this absolutely drop-dead male icon, I was hooked.

You see, I missed the '70s entirely. I didn't know about Led Zeppelin, Pink Floyd, The Who, and the rest. I was raising a toddler (with the help of my husband) on an isolated estate in the wilds of Peekskill, N.Y.

From 1969 to 1979, Led Zeppelin criss-crossed America gathering up fans like bees to honey with their concerts, but I missed it all ... I was living in Peekskill with Mel Gibson. You see, Mel lived there too before he upped and moved away to Australia.

I love rock music. Head-banger's Ball, WDIZ, MTV, I am an aficionado of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, Chopin and the rest of those longhairs, but the only longhair for me right now — this night, is Mr. Plant!

I could say I'm over 40, but I'd be fibbing. I'm over 50 and not ashamed to admit it. There's a whole lot of us "over 50s" still rocking, still loving and playing the music of 20-30 years ago. I can appreciate Pearl Jam, Green Day, Metallica, but their music doesn't infuse me with the same visceral feelings that engulf me when I listen to the original "Kashmir."

OK, call me a grouper. I don't care. I'm still young at heart even though the facade is crumbling. I remember the words of Mary Elizabeth Carson, age 72, in "The Thorn Birds" addressing Father de Bricecourt: "Inside this stupid body, I'm still young, I still feel, I still want, I still dream." As the reader knows, Mary lusted for the young, ambitious priest.

Lust is a positive force. Whether you're in middle age or beyond and everyone tells you (your grown children, usually) that "you should start acting your age," "It's over!" — it's not. Don't believe it. Inside you're still that hard-rocking blues mama, Janis Joplin. Keep your heart and mind open to the senses. Feel good. Feel b-a-a-d.

It's a gift to have Page and Plant reunited after 15 years. It may not be Led Zeppelin (you'd need Bonham and Jones) but for their fans, Page/Plant are heady reminders of the band's successful past. Their new album "No Quarter" has gone platinum. Rolling Stone magazine awarded them four stars in their Dec. 15, 1994 issue.

Their first MTV Unplugged called appropriately. "Unleaded" was a critical success. In viewing the audience at that MTV show, it seemed fans were a bit unsure of the direction Messrs. Page/Plant were taking. For this fan, it was a great, gaudy experience. One could feel the heat of Marrakech as they and their Moroccan, Egyptian musicians bonded to create new music.

The fusion of Page's guitar and Plant's voice was and (still is) one of the greatest partnerships in rock music history. And now, hopefully, in their new quest, all of us can look forward to more.

"Come back Jimmy, come back, Robert!"

Jimmy Page and Robert Plant appeared at the Orlando Arena Tuesday night.

Opening odds were 9-5 for Thunder Gulch and 2-1 for Suave Prospect.

One more win Reckers clinches share of title

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — First baseman Jim Shafer's juggling snare of a Brantley Brumley line drive snuffed a seventh-inning rally by Sheet Metal Workers Local No. 15 and secured a 14-13 win by Reckers in the Sanford Recreation Wednesday Men's Polar Bear Softball League at Chase Park.

That completed a doubleheader sweep for Reckers, who had routed Elite Interiors 18-6 the game before. The evening started with Wells Contracting snapping a four-game losing streak by beating Captain Bly's 19-10.

With the sweep, Reckers clinches a tie for the league championship. Owners of an 8-2 record, Reckers has just two games left to play and can finish with no more than four losses, which Wells Contracting (5-4) and Sheet Metal Workers Local No. 15 (4-4) already have.

Completing the loop are Elite Interiors (3-7) and Captain Bly's (2-5). Next week, Sheet Metal Workers Local No. 15 plays Elite Interiors (6:30 p.m.) and Captain Bly's (8:30 p.m.) before Reckers attempts to clinch the league championship in their 8:30 p.m. game with Wells Contracting.

Trailing 7-3 after two innings, Reckers pulled even at 11-11 with Sheet Metal Workers Local No. 15 in the fifth inning, then took a 14-11 lead in the bottom of the sixth.

Sheet Metal Workers Local No. 15 scored twice in the top of the seventh and had runners on first and second base with two out when Brumley slashed a shot toward the right field corner. But Shafer got a glove to the line drive, then managed to corral the carom before it hit the ground for the final out.

Leading Wells Contracting's effort were Kenny Brown (double, three singles, run, two RBI).

Nat'l champion notches 1st win

By PAUL MARSELLA
 Special to the Herald

SAMSULA — Orlando's David Rogers outpaced the competition to win the 25-lap Late Model feature event last Saturday, March 4, at New Smyrna Speedway.

Rogers, the 1994 NASCAR national Late Model champion, took the lead on the first lap coming out of turn four and never surrendered his position as he raced to his first win of the season.

"We usually run real good here, but our last few times out, we've had all kinds of problems," said Rogers, the winningest Late Model driver at the New Smyrna speedplant. "As the race was winding down tonight, I could swear the car was starting to shake, rattle, and roll. I backed off a little bit to save the car, but I guess it was just my imagination."

John Kennedy was second, finishing in front of Mike Kubanek, George Murphy, and Bill Keeton.

Dale Clouser ran green flag to checkers to win the Bomber main event.

Clouser's only competition came in the early stages of the race from Jeremy Fitch, last week's feature event winner, the duo racing wheel-to-wheel for the first six laps.

Racing out of turn four on lap seven, Clouser and Fitch made contact with Fitch spinning to the inside guard rail.

Despite the impact, Fitch kept the car under control and avoided a caution flag. Clouser maintained his position and raced to his fourth win of the year.

Picking up second place was Duane Wadell. Fitch fought back to finish third ahead of Arnold Mills and Mark Manfredi.

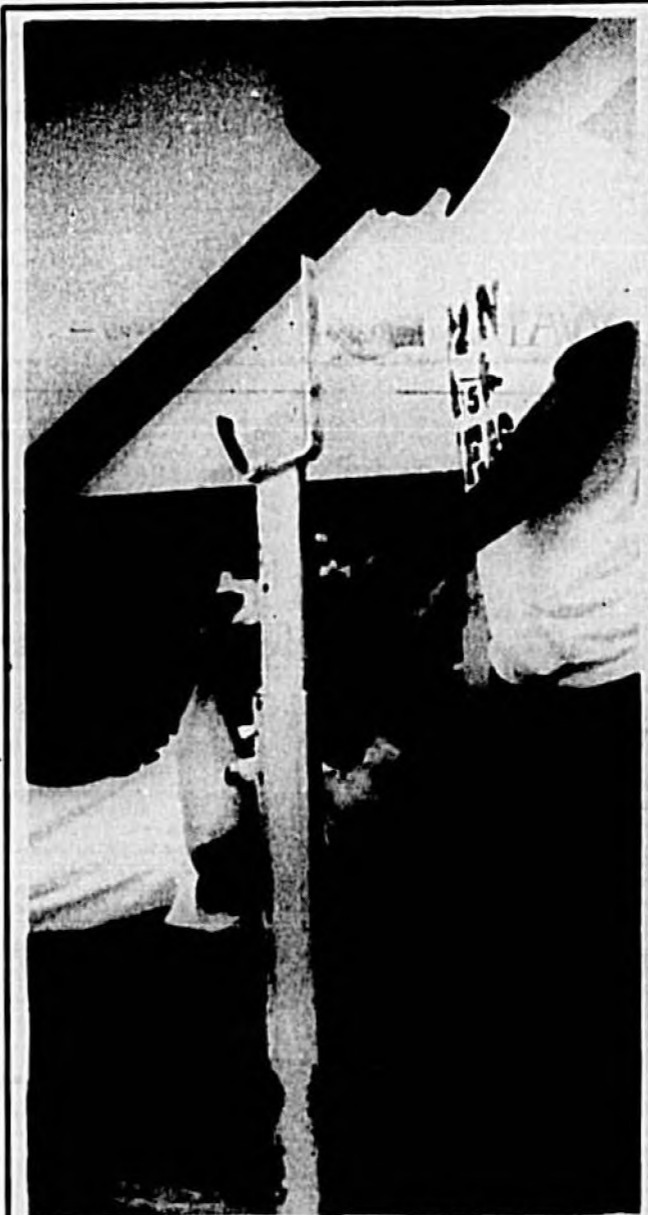

Bob Doxie overtook race leader Gene Van Alstine with four laps to go and went on to win the Mini-Stock feature.

In a post-race inspection, Van Alstine was disqualified because of a tire infraction, giving the runner-up position to Conrad Grenier.

Finishing third through fifth were, in order of finish, Ted Vulpis, Dale Castell, and Harland Sanford.

Butch Pierce edged Dale Clouser by less than a car length at the finish line to win the Sportsman feature. In tow were Chuck Vola, David LeBeau, and Don Tracey.

Other feature event winners were Bobby Sears (Limited Late Models), Holly Nicholas (Run-Abouts), and Greg Hughes (Modifieds).

Owners expected to approve Tampa Bay, Phoenix

By RONALD BLUM
 AP Sports Writer

PALM BEACH — Tampa Bay's 11-year wait for a major league team was set to end today, and Phoenix's five-year quest also was due to be fulfilled.

Baseball owners gathered this morning and were scheduled to vote on the recommendation that St. Petersburg and Phoenix get franchises for the 1998 season. Approval was expected.

"I think we will enjoy the same level of success Colorado and Florida enjoyed in their expansion years, and I think it will be true for Tampa Bay also," said Jerry Colangelo, who heads the Phoenix group.

Expansion committee chairman John Harrington on Wednesday confirmed the two sites, which the committee formally recommended on Tuesday night. A three-quarters vote from each league was required for approval.

"Tampa Bay and Phoenix came in a little ahead of the others under the wire," Harrington said.

Two groups from northern Virginia and one from Orlando also were seeking teams. Colangelo, president of the NBA's Phoenix

Suns, is expected to call his team the Arizona Diamondbacks. Vincent Naimoli, who heads the St. Petersburg group, is calling his team the Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

Naimoli, whose attempt to buy the San Francisco Giants was rejected by the National League in November 1992, hinted that approval of his expansion team would cause him to drop his antitrust suit, which is still pending.

"I think it's obvious if you're in partnership with someone, you don't sue your partners," he said.

Baseball officials said it was unlikely the expansion teams, expected to cost $140 million each, would be assigned to leagues today, but Harrington said it was possible. Harrington also said the teams would be excluded from national broadcasting money for 3-to-5 years.

According to Harrington, the recommendation also says owners will add two more teams no earlier than 2000. Northern Virginia became the early front-runner.

Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott was the only owner to publicly speak out against expansion. She wanted all the focus on solving the strike.

"I just don't feel we should be talking about expansion at a time like this," she said. "We just have such tremendous problems."

Colangelo and Naimoli were concerned about rumors of hangups. The northern Virginia group headed by Bill Collins, which would call itself the Fury, said it was ready to step in.

A person in the Fury group, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said his group believed the selection of Phoenix and Tampa Bay might have been preordained. The official said the group was considering filing a lawsuit.

"It would be provocative at this juncture to comment," said Dave Davenport, the group's lawyer.

The group also is considering whether to talk with teams seeking to relocate.

The Tampa Bay team would play at the Thunderdome in St. Petersburg. The Phoenix team would play in a $275 million retractable-roof stadium, scheduled to start construction in the autumn if the team is approved.

St. Petersburg lost out in seven previous efforts to land a team, failing to get the Minnesota Twins (1984), Oakland Athletics (1985), Chicago White Sox (1988), Texas Rangers (1989), NL expansion (1991), Seattle Mariners (1992) and the Giants (1992).

It's time 'Inquiring' got a life

DEAR JERRY: I've been sitting here trying to think of what to ask you but I can't really think of what to ask about, so can you just tell me something good?

AN INQUIRING MIND
DEAR MIND: The fact that I'm even doing you the courtesy of responding should make you happy. I probably am one of the few persons in the world who would be brave enough to even answer a letter like this. As for telling you something good, it's time you started getting a life and furthermore, I will tell you something and expect you to respond either way.

It's time you started using the mind that God gave you and stopped fooling yourself to think that others will take care of you or support you. People like you can still make it in life like all the rest of us, but you have to put one foot in front of the other, get off your butt, and do like all the rest of us do each day, and that is, wake up, wash, brush your teeth, put on your clothes and get with the picture and "earn your own way."

Stop blaming others for what your life is at the present; we all have problems, only most of us aren't afraid to face reality. Do you need a psychic, a psychiatrist or just what. The answer is behind door number #1; get in touch with yourself, reality, learn to love yourself, love life, and don't be afraid to make a mistake. Nothing ventured, nothing gained, so the wiser man told me!

DEAR JERRY: Are you like the Amazing

'Especially'

JERRY STEWART

Kreskin and can you do that same stuff? Does the Herald hide your check and give it to you only if you can find it?

MARK LAKE MARY
DEAR MARK: No! No! No! A thousand times no. I am not like Kreskin and when are people going to learn that he is an act. As a matter of fact, many years ago, in association with a Bob Howard of Nashville at the time, the "amazing one" paid $50,000 for that act which now commands that much alone sometimes, per performance. There are times I wish I were he or had his act, as then I wouldn't have to explain anything and only do a couple of shows per night, get the big check, and on to wherever.

Just like with anything else, would you want to see how David Copperfield did his tricks? I think not, then you wouldn't be entertained anymore, but you know, it's really interesting, though, that most of the people whom I talk to or respond to, sometimes aren't sure themselves whether or not they are really wanting to know something or be amazed. Human nature is something that even a psychic becomes amazed at every once and awhile. Oh, by the way, the way he finds that check is... The old adage in "show business" is leave 'em wanting more!

DEAR JERRY: What do you think about astral-projection and have you taken any trips lately?

AMANDA SANFORD
DEAR AMANDA: Astral-projection is one of those beautiful areas of the mind that science would really like to know more about especially in the area of "remote viewing," that ability to, perhaps, see things from a distance without actually going there. I let my imagination at times take me to wherever I want to go. That's what imagination is all about. Try to remember that "imagination is the reality." For now, it's time to end this column, and I think I'll just close my eyes, concentrate, and maybe go to Shangri-la.

How to get along with daughter-in-law

DEAR READERS: Tuesday, at the request of a reader who had lost the original column, I repeated my tips on how to get along with your daughter-in-law. Today, in the interest of evenhandedness, here are my tips on how to get along with your mother-in-law — which were also printed at that time:

1. Invite your in-laws over once in a while. (Once a year is better than never.)

2. When you are invited to your in-laws' home for dinner, offer to bring something, and also offer to help with the serving and cleaning up afterward. Don't act like a guest — you're family.
3. Phone your mother-in-law to ask, "How are you feeling?" and make a little small talk. This shows that you are interested in her, which will help build a closer relationship.
4. If she has given you a gift, such as a sweater or a purse, be sure that she sees you wearing or carrying it at least once.
5. If your mother-in-law has given your children clothing, make sure they wear the clothes in her presence while they are still new and in good condition.
6. If perchance she has hurt your feelings, don't let it fester and do not complain to your husband. Say, "Mom, you hurt me," then tell her why, so you can put the matter to rest.
7. Don't compete with her daughter if she has one. Accept the fact that she's apt to favor her own. (You will too if you have one someday.)
8. Never repeat family gossip. And try not to listen to any.
9. Make it a point to ask her for something — a recipe, for example. And after you have used it with good results, thank her for it. (Knowing she has been helpful will make her feel wonderful.)
10. Love her son, and take good care of him.

ADVICE

suggest that you smile, ask them to say something funny.

DEAR ABBY: A note to "Livid in Salem, Mass.," the receptionist in a physician's office who complained about children's messages on patients' answering machines.

I agree. Long messages on answering machines are both time-consuming and irritating, but how about when a patient calls a physician's office only to be put on hold for five to 10 minutes listening to elevator music? That's what I call suffering! As long as it's not an emergency, I'd rather be asked for my name and phone number and get a return phone call than be put on hold that long.

"Livid," if that's all you have to gripe about with all the suffering you see while working in a physician's office, I'd say you have a pretty good life.

HAPPY AND LIVING IN FLORIDA

Why don't you smile?"

Abby, I can't help it. I am not sad, but I have a rather long, bony face and thin lips that tend to turn down in the corners. And when I am deep in thought, I have a tendency to frown.

I try to be pleasant, but I'm not exactly the life of the party. Is there a solution to this problem?

NOT SMILING, BUT CONTENT

DEAR NOT SMILING: For what it's worth, a phony smile is worse than a natural frown. Be yourself, and make no apologies for it.

If people have the gall to

Is a lump in breast linked to estrogen?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Due to bulimia and excessive exercise, my 24-year-old daughter stopped menstruating at the age of 18. Almost a year ago, her gynecologist began her on estrogen therapy and she successfully resumed menstruation. However, about six months ago, she discovered a breast lump. Her doctor feels it is a result of the estrogen therapy. Do you agree or should a biopsy be performed?

DEAR READER: Strenuous athletic endeavor often stops menstruation because of an abnormal suppression of pituitary hormones that stimulate the ovaries. Most authorities agree that women athletes who cease menstruating should modify their training, rather than take hormones.

Athletic females may also suffer osteoporosis (from lack of estrogen) and eating disorders (in an unhealthy attempt to reduce body fat). These "complications" also need to be addressed by modifying the training schedule and using counseling, nutritional guidance and calcium supplements.

Even in a non-athlete, estrogen therapy may cause breast lumps. These can be a source of concern and worry to female athletes and their families.

Your daughter's doctor is probably correct; the breast lesion is likely to be benign. To test his theory, your daughter should forego hormone therapy for a month. If the lump is due to estrogen, it will disappear. If not, you'll have to make a decision about biopsy.

Obviously, I'm talking about a statistical risk here. The chances that the lump reflects a dangerous condition are very slight in a 24-year-old woman. Nonetheless, the situation needs to be closely monitored. Your daughter should follow her gynecologist's advice.

It seems to me that the most appropriate, most healthful and least expensive option is for your daughter to obtain counseling for her eating disorder, reduce her strenuous activity, and allow her own hormone balance to be re-established. The appearance of a regular menstrual pattern will indicate that the situation has returned to normal.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Sherlock Holmes always kept his eyes and mind open. Clues that passed unnoticed by Dr. Watson were picked up and interpreted by the maestro.

In bridge, normally the clues are easy to spot. There are only a few cards; only a few possibilities. Yet today's deal was misplayed by both declarers called upon to win 10 tricks with spades as trumps.

The play followed an identical course at both tables. West led a diamond to East's ace, won the heart switch with the ace and returned the heart queen. South covered with dummy's king and, after ruffing, East exited with a diamond. Now South had no option but to take the club finesse. It lost and one down was the result.

Where did the declarers go wrong?

Once West produced the heart ace, South had 10 top tricks: six spades, one heart, two diamonds and one club. The only real danger was that East had started with a singleton heart. South should have played a low heart from the dummy at trick three, not the king. This would have conceded a third trick to the defense, but South could take the rest. If West persisted with another heart, again the dummy would play low and South would ruff in hand. He would draw trumps and claim.

Were these two declarers beginners? Far from it. They were representing their countries, Denmark and Finland, in the European Championship.

This sort of lapse is mysterious. Why do we lose concentration like that? Sherlock Holmes would never go down on this deal — except, perhaps, after an initial club lead.

Phillip Alder's new book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available.
