Christensen Follows Fight After Being Rapped Out Of Order

Does the city of Casselberry intend to charge its water and sewer system customers both within city bounds and in the unincorporated areas a franchise fee, termed illegal by County Commissioner Barbara Christensen?

The County Commission, at Mrs. Christensen's behest has instructed County Attorney Nikki Clayton to quiz City Attorney Kenneth McIntosh about the issue.

Mrs. Christensen told her colleagues that she was attempting to represent city utility company customers from the unincorporated areas, at their request, at Monday night's Casselberry Council meeting and was rapped out of order during the process by Mayor Charles Glasecock.

She insisted that the city is attempting to levy a franchise fee against unincorporated area customers to help pay for Casselberry's new city hall.

Meanwhile, Mayor Charles Glasecock denied all of Mrs. Christensen's contentions.

He agreed that Mrs. Christensen was rapped out of order at the council meeting and "rightly so" because "she was disrupting the meeting" and insisted on speaking at length several times rather than the once permitted everyone else by the chairman. "This is the second time she has done this."

But, Glasecock added, he didn't rap her out of order. Council Chairman Frank Stone did and immediately thereafter called a recess.

Glasecock said the meeting was packed with persons concerned about the recent sewer rate increases adopted by the council on recommendation of the city's consulting engineers, Conklin, Porter & Holmes.

The increases in rates are necessary, he said, to pay the costs of Casselberry connecting to and using the South Seminole and North Orange Transmission Authority lines to send sewage to the Orlando regional sewer plant at Iron Bridge near Oviedo. "We have no choice about this."

Nevertheless, he said, he is reviewing those rates which are costing some customers including himself four times what they did in the past.

He said Mrs. Christensen's concern seemed to be about the city budgeting a "wash out" on fees for rent of the city hall. While utility funds were used to build the city hall, Glasecock said a budget line item shows the city's general fund paying the utility enterprise fund an $85,000 annual rental for the facility while the utility enterprise fund is paying the city general fund a like amount for use of city rights of way and other city properties. "It's a wash out," he said.

Feather Files Conflict ...Again

Seminole County Commissioner Robert G. "Bud" Feather, who may hold the record for filing "conflict of interest" statements over the past 32 months, will be filing another within the next few days.

The latest, the 41st since he assumed county office in mid-November, 1980, must be filed since he voted in favor of rezoning some 52 acres of land near the Wekiva Marina on which he plans a joint venture in a cluster home development.

His vote was the deciding factor in gaining the zoning. Commissioners Bob Sturm and Barbara Christensen voted for the rezoning while County Commission Chairman Sandra Glenn and Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff, who indicated they are concerned about the number of units planned at the site, voted against.

The county's Planning and Zoning Commission recommended approval of the project as did county staff.

The zoning granted was "planned unit development" from mobile home and agricultural zoning.

Nearby property owners turned out in force to protest the rezoning, citing as reasons impact on traffic and the schools from the proposed development.

In recent months, another Feather project for the same tract was turned down by the county commission. At that time Feather planned more than 200 rental luxury apartments that would be converted to condominiums in a period of three to five years.

The new project, dubbed Forest Park Springs, will have about 150 units, although 170 was approved. Feather said. The project is expected to be worth more than $50 million when development is completed in about three years.

Feather, joint venturing the project with the Keewin Co., said Forest Park Springs will be an "exclusive cluster single family home community" on the Wekiva River with units selling in the $200,000 price range.

The development will be situated around a spring called Miami Springs, about one block from Sweetwater Club. Money is already in the bank to develop the tract from a Holland group called EuroAmerican, Feather said.

"We intend to break ground as quickly as we can get engineering plans approved," Feather said, adding these plans are contingent upon the economy remaining strong.

While the total square footage in the cluster homes hasn't been determined, yet, Feather said he expects the homes to have two to four bedrooms.

Lake Mary PD Finds Successor To Dennis: Magnum, In Training

By Charles Cobb
Herald Staff Writer

A man broke into a Sanford woman's home at night, abducted her at the point of a knife, took her into the woods and raped her.

The woman managed to break loose from the man and escape. Sanford police cordoned off a two-square-block wooded area where the man was thought to be hiding behind the Fairway supermarket on the southside off U.S. Highway 17-92.

How to find the suspect in the total darkness of the woods?

A K-9 unit from the Lake Mary police department was called in and officer Dale Picou arrived on the scene with a German shepherd named Dennis.

Dennis was led to the path where the man had entered the woods and Picou ordered: "Go get him!"

The dog plunged into the inky blackness of the woods with Picou following behind. "I was carrying a flashlight, but I didn't turn it on," said Picou. "If the suspect had been carrying a firearm, I would have been an easy target with a light."

About 15 minutes later Dennis suddenly stopped and stood still. Picou looked down where the dog was standing but couldn't see a thing. He nudged Dennis and said, "come on, let's go find him."

The dog growled and looked down. Picou turned on his flashlight and looked down again, but "it was so dark I still couldn't see anything." He moved some palmetto bushes where Dennis was standing and found the suspect lying on the ground under the bushes. Dennis was standing on the suspect's shoulders.

The capture occurred a few years ago but Picou, now a crime scene investigator with the Altamonte Springs police department, said the memory still "brings chills up and down my spine."

"It shows what a valuable asset a K-9 unit can be to a police department," said Picou, an ardent booster of dog power.

On another occasion Dennis sniffed out some marijuana that some Lake Mary school boys had buried in a wooded area. The pot was two feet underground but Dennis dug it up.

Dennis is gone now but not forgotten and the Lake Mary police department has found an able successor in a 19-month-old red and black German shepherd named Magnum.

Magnum, who is still being trained, "is going to be a very good dog. He has all the right instincts, but there's still a lot of puppy in him," said Lt. Sam Belfiore, the dog's handler.

Ambulance Service Pact Gets One Bid

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

The issue of emergency ambulance service in Seminole County is back in the hands of the county commission.

A call for "proposals" beefing up the service and requiring the bidders to post a bid bond ended with only one proposal, and it was from an Alabama firm. The bid was rejected because the required bid bond was not included.

Herndon Ambulance, which has provided the service for the past 15 years, submitted a "no bid" after the deadline this week.

The rejected proposal came from Everett L. Gilliland, who says he owns and operates emergency type services in Alabama under various names.

JoAnn Blackmon, county purchasing agent, said the bid bond would have assured the county that the winning firm would provide the service if the county chose to accept any or part of the proposal.

Ms. Blackmon said the proposal requests were sought at the direction of the board of county commissioners and they will be asked where they wish to go from here.

Ms. Blackmon said the county purchasing and legal departments are looking at what the next step should be.

Meanwhile, Idus Willis, owner-operator of Herndon Ambulance Service, said the bid specifications raise a major problem to all but a limited number of nationwide firms.

The specifications, he said, call for the posting of a $500,000 performance bond. To gain that bond, liquid assets, such as cash or the title to property must be pledged as security, he added.

"Most companies don't want to do that," he said.

"I don't know of any businessman who would tie up that much money or property when he could only make about $10,000 a year providing the service," Willis said.

"About the only way it could be done is for the county to go into the ambulance service business itself," he said, adding if he were to bid on continuing the service called for in the new specifications, it would cost the county about $150,000 to $200,000 more a year and the service wouldn't actually be any better than it is now.

Currently, he said, his firm receives about four emergency calls per day.

The county's contract with Herndon expires Oct. 1. In years past, the county has asked Herndon to extend its contract month by month while negotiations were ongoing for a new contract. And new contracts with Herndon are generally executed in January.

He noted that the county wants the ambulance firm to have four times as much insurance as any other county requires. The usual amount required by other counties is $500,000, he said, while Seminole requires $2 million worth. "We have the $2 million in insurance," Willis said.

Additional services wanted by the county, according to Willis, include: ● A full time paramedic for Seminole County alone.

Currently Herndon has a paramedic shared by Seminole with Orange County.

One for Seminole County alone will cost Seminole about $25,000 more a year, Willis said. "There isn't that much for a paramedic to do," he said, pointing to the qualified firefighters throughout Seminole County who also go to most emergency calls. "Our paramedic goes in to see Barbara Smith (the county's emergency medical services coordinator) every day."

● Placing ambulance personnel on a schedule of 24 hours on duty and 48 off.

Willis said this will mean doubling the number of Herndon personnel in the county from three to six. He said he usually hires firefighters on a shift of 24 hours on and 24 hours off after they have pulled their shifts with the departments where they work.

In addition, he said that he furnishes the ambulance personnel with homes where not only they live, but also their families.

"They make good money, $300 to $400 a week when you include the cost of the housing," Willis said. "We keep them happy."

● Faster response time. To this Willis says the county expects a man to get out of bed, get dressed and be on the scene of a call seven miles away in seven minutes.

"We know qualified people from the fire departments will be on the scene. We cannot see jeopardizing our personnel's lives and others lives to go 90 miles per hour to a scene," he said.

● A fifth advanced life support ambulance stationed in Seminole County.

Willis noted that his firm's contract with Seminole County now calls for an annual payment of $220,000 for four ALS ambulances now stationed here for emergency use.

A fifth ALS ambulance, strictly for emergency calls, would cost about $170,000 more annually, he said.

The four Herndon ambulances strictly for emergency use in Seminole are now stationed at Casselberry, Altamonte Springs, on State Road 436 at Lake Howell Road and in Sanford.

In addition, Willis said he has two other ambulances in the county for non-emergency use to Florida Hospital-Altamonte. "And all units from Orange County are available to Seminole from there in about 30 minutes in the event of a disaster," he said.

Both Orange and Seminole counties are now considering the idea of a three-year contract for the service, Willis said.

Casselberry Woman Charged In '82 Arson

After a lengthy investigation into a mysterious house fire that killed her husband, a Casselberry woman was arrested Friday on murder and arson charges stemming from the June 1982 blaze.

Joyce Elaine Fogle, 44, of 1455 Lady Amy Drive, was arrested at her home. A warrant was also issued for the arrest of her brother-in-law, William Earl Fogle, 51, of Houston on the same charges.

Mrs. Fogle was charged with second degree murder, first degree arson, burning to defraud an insurer, and conspiracy to commit arson. She is being held in Seminole County jail with no bond set.

Robert Fogle, 46, of Oviedo, died after being severely burned in the June 27, 1982 fire. He was Joyce Fogle's husband and the brother of William Fogle.

The Seminole County sheriff's department, the state fire marshal's office and the county department of public safety, after a long investigation, gave this account of the crime:

Robert Fogle was attempting to burn a vacant house he and Joyce Fogle owned, west of Oviedo, to gain insurance money.

But he mistakenly used gasoline instead of kerosene to start the fire, resulting in an explosion that led to his death.

At the advice of his brother, Robert Fogle started to ignite the wooden frame house at 5:33 a.m. He nailed doors shut from the inside to prevent anyone from entering the house to extinguish the fire.

He planned to douse some newspapers with kerosene. The newspapers led to six or seven gallons of gasoline in containers. After lighting the newspapers Fogle would have enough time to get out of the house before the gasoline was ignited.

But instead of using kerosene on the newspapers, he mistakenly used gasoline, a more combustible fluid, and an explosion resulted.

Rescuers had difficulty getting Fogle out of the building because the doors had been nailed shut.

IN BRIEF

Honegger Lauds Reagan Others Less Conciliatory

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — President Reagan's order to speed up a study of laws that discriminate against women was applauded by former Justice Department official Barbara Honegger, whose resignation sparked a furor over the study.

But women who demonstrated against Reagan Friday when he announced the move were less conciliatory than Ms. Honegger.

Ms. Honegger, who was not among about 400 demonstrators outside the hotel where Reagan spoke to a GOP women's group, said at a news conference she would be happy to sit down with Reagan and go over 114 federal statutes that she said "discriminate by gender."

Before resigning Monday, Ms. Honegger supervised a search of federal statutes for the Justice Department. In leaving, she said "not a single law has been changed" despite her review and called the project "a sham."

Seventeenth Victim Found

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) — An elderly woman whose blood-spattered body was found lying in her living room chair became the 17th person slain in the Chicago-area county in the past two months and officials say residents are becoming frightened.

The body of the unidentified woman was discovered Friday by a man delivering newspapers for his daughter.

The victim's home is not far from the ceramics shop where four women were slain last Saturday.

Coroner Robert J. Tezak said people in the community have been "fairly calm until now. But now, I don't know." Women in the area were reportedly traveling in groups or staying inside.

Bell Prolonging Strike?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The leader of the striking telephone workers is accusing Bell System bargainers of prolonging the 3-week-old nationwide walkout by demanding last-minute concessions from local unions.

Glenn Watts, president of the Communications Workers of America, said a few local disputes still blocked settlement of the strike despite the signing of a tentative national contract.

"Management misled us by telling us there were no problems at the local table," Watts said in a statement Friday.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Sizzling temperatures shattered 100-year-old records in the Plains, closing schools in five states, setting off prison fights in which three inmates were stabbed and wrapping St. Louis in a blanket of "stinking, lousy" air that caused the city's worst ozone rating ever. The president of the Illinois Corn Growers Association said Friday the 1983 crop is as "close to a disaster for the state of Illinois as we've ever seen." Forecasters said there was no relief in sight.

The on-again, off-again heat wave has claimed 17 lives since Saturday and another four people died in storms and lightning that blasted Alabama. Heat emergencies were declared in Cincinnati. Thunderstorms doused northern Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin, where 2 1/2 inches soaked Eau Claire, and Illinois. Des Moines suffered through the hottest day ever this late in the summer — a 104-degree scorcher that broke a 102-year-old record of 100 degrees. Schools were closed when it got too hot to teach in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Missouri and drought-stricken farmers said they faced a disaster. Missouri officials handed ice, fans and wet towels to convicts in the state's stifling prisons after three stabbings. The state's 12 air-conditioned prisons house more than 7,800 inmates — although they were built for 5,443.

Meritoriously Promoted

Sanford Man In 'Hawkeye' Squadron

By Tibor Zoller
 Special to the Herald

NORFOLK, Va. — When Clinton E. Medlock completes his day he can rest satisfied knowing that because of his efforts others can feel secure flying thousands of feet above the earth.

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Medlock is an aviation machinist's mate for Carrier Airborne Early Warning Squadron 121 (VAW-212), based in Norfolk, Va.

"My job is to troubleshoot the E-2C Hawkeye aircraft our squadron flies," said the 23-year-old son of Roland and Mercade Medlock, Route 1, Sanford. "I can fix just about anything that goes wrong."

"The most difficult task is balancing the props," Medlock explained. "Vibrations must be held to a minimum during flight."

The turboprop Hawkeye is considered one of the most capable electronic warning and control aircraft yet produced. It has a 24-foot diameter, saucer-shaped radar dome riding on its wings, an on-board computer and data links to the ground or to an aircraft carrier's tactical control center.

Besides using its long-range radar to detect air threats, the E-2C Hawkeye can conduct surface surveillance and search and rescue missions.

"The Hawkeye is the eyes and ears in the sky above a carrier battle group at sea," said the 1980 Seminole High School graduate. "It detects incoming missiles, aircraft and any other offensive threats."

Medlock joined the Navy in 1980 after speaking to a relative who is also in the Navy.

"My cousin, who is a structural mechanic in a helicopter squadron, convinced me to join for the travel," the Florida native said. "I also want to be more responsible for myself. I felt the best place to accomplish both would be in the Navy."

The aviation machinist's mate said he is looking forward to his second carrier deployment overseas, which just began.

"It's a great change of pace from shore duty," Medlock said enthusiastically. "My first deployment to the Mediterranean proved to me that I could handle the long separation from home. This time I plan to make the cruise even better."

During the long deployments — some last as long as eight months — sailors are given the opportunity to enhance their education by participating in college courses taught on board their ship.

"I plan to take a few math and English courses during the cruise," he said. "It's a great chance for me to receive college credits and it also helps pass the long hours at sea."

Medlock's first deployment in 1982 aboard the aircraft carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower took him to a number of foreign countries including Spain, France, Italy, Egypt and Morocco.

"The friendliest people we encountered were in Barcelona, Spain," the Navyman said. "They were open and cheerful to the American sailors."

"Egypt was also a remarkable place to visit," Medlock continued. "You were constantly surrounded by centuries of history and culture. I'm certain I would have never experienced these places if I hadn't joined the Navy."

In a recent squadron ceremony Medlock was meritoriously advanced by the squadron commander to petty officer third class. Normally Navy men and women must take a Navywide examination in their job specialty and compete with a large group of their peers for a certain number of promotion quotas. But, because of Medlock's outstanding work and professional pride, his commanding officer selected the option of promoting the Floridian without requiring the examination.

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Clinton E. Medlock, son of Roland and Mercade Medlock, Rt. 1, Sanford, was recently meritoriously promoted to his present rate because of his outstanding work and professional pride.

The Sanford Navyman will continue his military career in the Norfolk area but hopes to be transferred to California at the completion of his first enlistment.

"Ever since I attended aircraft engine mechanics school at Miramar Naval Air Station in San Diego, Calif., I've wanted to return to the area, Medlock said. "I plan to re-enlist for guaranteed duty in California."

The Florida native considers his decision to enlist in the Navy a smart move because of the experiences he has already encountered.

"The Navy has given me a broader perspective on life," Medlock said. "It's taught me to appreciate the things I take for granted every day, especially when I'm at sea."

Study Reveals Roots Of Violence

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — The same children who are aggressive at 8 are aggressive at 30 and have many more criminal convictions — a situation caused by their parents' behavior and one that can be changed only at an early age, a 20-year study shows.

In a surprising twist to the results of the study revealed Friday at the American Psychological Association's 91st annual convention, researchers said many more men than women develop aggressiveness and that "if only we trained our boys more like our girls, we'd have much of the crime problem licked."

By examining all 875 third graders in rural Columbia County, N.Y., in 1960 and studying most of them again in 1970 and 1981, the researchers concluded aggression in young children is affected by their parents' actions, lasts a lifetime and leads to more violent and, in a surprisingly large number of cases, criminal adult behavior.

The researchers said that early intervention, however, can resolve much of the problem.

"The first study showed children are affected by the parents' behavior towards them: harsh punishment, like washing their mouths out with soap, rejection, being allowed to watch lots of TV violence leads to aggression," said Leopold Walder, of Behavioral Science Consultants in Greenbelt, Md.

"There was marked stability of aggression in the group at age 19, 10 years after the first study," said Leonard Eron of the University of Illinois.

In the final followup, the researchers found "those same kids that were judged by the peers at age 8 to be aggressive, at age 30, rated themselves and were rated by their spouses and children to be aggressive, had significantly higher conviction rates in the criminal justice system, with the crimes being significantly more serious, were in more auto accidents and received more drunk driving citations," Eron said.

The findings were mostly true for the men in the group, with only a few women exhibiting aggressive behavior.

"We see interactions within the family are a factor; we see aggression lasting through three generations," Eron said. "The impressive finding that such behavior can be predictable in very young children may be useful in trying to intervene when there's still time."

Thousands Gather For March

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tens of thousands of people from across America gathered in the nation's capital Saturday to call for fulfillment of Martin Luther King Jr.'s 1963 dream of racial equality.

Organizers predicted the demonstration would draw more than the 250,000 people who participated in the August, 1963 "March on Washington for Freedom and Jobs" that was a turning point in the civil rights movement.

Saturday's march was to seek to revive the cause while also pushing several other issues such as gay and women's rights, the environment and the nuclear freeze.

In a prelude to the rally, about 2,000 people gathered at a downtown Washington church

Friday night for an interfaith service that connected the march themes with religious faith.

One speaker, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, was greeted with a standing ovation and a chant of "run, Jesse, run," urging a presidential candidacy.

In his sermon, Jackson mixed in politics with his religion, comparing unregistered black voters to rocks that could be used by David to slay Goliath, who was President Reagan in his analogy.

Because the service ended hours later than expected, only about 150 persons participated in a candlelight march and short vigil across the street from the White House. They listened to speakers and folk singers before breaking up.

Reagan, sure to be a rally target for his economic policies and what critics see as lax enforcement of civil rights laws, issued a statement from California where he was on vacation praising the civil rights movement.

"In the last 20 years, great progress has been made," Reagan said. "It is fitting that on this anniversary we should give thanks for that progress and to those who sacrificed so much to bring it about."

"But much remains to be done," he said. "America — mankind's last, best hope for freedom — is a special place, a place where so many dreams have come true."

Marchers came to town aboard 4,200 chartered buses, scores of chartered planes.

Pair Trying To Buy Pot Robbed In Altamonte

A man and a woman who were trying to buy marijuana were robbed in Altamonte Springs Friday night, a Seminole sheriff's report said.

Anthony John Collini, 20, told deputies that he and his girl friend, Marlene Green, 21, were driving in his 1970 Chevrolet and stopped at the intersection of North Street and Jackson Avenue at 9 p.m. in an attempt to purchase marijuana.

Three men were sitting in a yellow AMC Hornet station wagon that was parked nearby, Collini said. He said one of the men got out of the station wagon, approached his car and said, "I want your money or I'll blow your head off."

Collini said the man "smacked" him on the head, reached in the car and grabbed his wallet out of his hand and took Ms. Green's purse from the car dash, Collini said he did not see a weapon.

The man fled west on North Street on foot and the station wagon drove off going east on North Street.

The contents of the purse and wallet were undetermined. Collini and Ms. Green both live at 41 East Seminola Blvd., Casselberry.

BODOMY CONVICTION
 A 23-year-old Sanford fruit picker was sentenced to five years in state prison for committing sodomy with a 15-year-old boy.

Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis Jr. ordered that Derry Wilson be classified as a mentally disordered sex offender and receive counseling during his imprisonment.

Wilson, of 1309 Seventh St., pleaded guilty to unlawful carnal knowledge.

The boy told detectives that he was walking along a street near Goldsboro Elementary School when a man later identified as Wilson placed a razor to his throat and led him into woods behind the school.

The man removed the boy's clothes and when the boy resisted, the man cut him on the leg with a razor blade and threatened to kill him, he told investigators.

The boy also said the man pulled out a handful of his hair and took his watch and threw it into the woods and then assaulted him.

Wilson said the boy participated in the sexual act voluntarily and denied he used a weapon, records show.

A charge of sexual battery against Wilson was dropped.

Wilson told detectives he consumed a lot of alcohol and occasionally used cocaine, speed and other hard drugs.

RIFLE STOLEN
 A .22-caliber rifle was stolen from an unlocked car in the parking lot of the Sanford Plaza between 10:30 a.m. and 10:45 a.m. Tuesday.

Lucius Williams, of P.O. Box 199, Lake Monroe, was the victim.

THIEF CHASED AWAY
 A youth entered a Sanford woman's garage through a rear window and attempted to take a bicycle from the garage but put the bike down and ran when a neighbor spotted him.

Yvonne Odell, 1112 Elm Ave., said the incident happened at 1:15 p.m. Wednesday.

GAS TAKEN
 A motorist took $5 worth of gas from a gas pump at a Sanford service station at 4:45 p.m. Thursday and then drove off without paying for it.

The man was driving a 1965 silver Mustang when he stopped at the Highway Oil station at 2425 S. French Ave.

HAIR PRODUCTS STOLEN
 A woman removed a number of hair care products from the shelf of a Sanford store, placed the items in a blue canvas travel kit bag and left the store without paying for the items at 1:15 p.m. Wednesday.

The incident happened at the Park and Shop store, 329 S. Sanford Ave.

BIKE THIEF ESCAPES
 A 9-year-old Sanford boy chased another youngster who rode off on his bicycle at 1:15 p.m. Tuesday, but the thief escaped.

Herman Eason, P.O. Box 765, said his bicycle, valued at $50, was parked in front of the Winn Dixie supermarket, 419 East First St., when a young boy wearing a red and white striped shirt and blue jeans rode away on it and turned south onto Sanford Avenue. Eason said he chased the thief down the street but was unable to overtake him.

Tips To Motorists For Better Mileage

The Better Business Bureau of Central Florida is offering some tips to motorists to get better mileage and save money now that the new four-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax is in effect in Seminole County and neighboring areas.

The bureau, which has 78 members in Seminole County, says that using gasoline in your car that has the right octane rating is an important factor in improving gas economy.

The octane rating, or grade of gasoline, is a measure of its resistance to engine knock, which decreases engine power and fuel economy, and if allowed to continue can damage engine parts.

The higher the grade, the more the gasoline will resist this problem. In general, premium gasolines have the highest octane rating, regular lies in the middle, and economy and certain of the low-leads lie in the lowest range.

Wait until your gas tank is almost empty and then fill it up with the grade of gasoline recommended by the car's owner's manual. Drive a few miles until the engine is warmed up and then come to a complete stop. Now, accelerate hard.

If the engine knocks or pings, use up the tank and refill with the next higher grade. Repeat the acceleration tests. If the engine does not knock this is the correct octane for the engine. If it does knock, see a mechanic. The engine probably needs to be adjusted.

If the engine does not knock on the recommended grade use up the tank and refill it with the next lower grade. Repeat the acceleration tests. If the engine knocks, the lower grade is inadequate and the recommended grade should be used.

Underinflated tires decrease fuel economy, so check the tire pressure at least once a month. For those who do a lot of driving, consider buying radial tires. They can increase mileage, but never mix radial tires with other tire types. Make sure the wheels are properly aligned, brakes are adjusted correctly and the oil and oil filters are changed at the recommended intervals.

Improved driving habits can increase a car's mileage. Accelerate slowly, except when entering high speed traffic lanes or when passing. Avoid unnecessary braking and anticipate traffic ahead.

Drive at moderate speeds. As speed increases so does wind resistance. Drive at steady speeds. Avoid excessive idling. Don't pump the accelerator or race the engine. Only use air conditioning equipment when necessary.

For Repeat Sex Offender

Judge Orders 'Chemical Castration'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — A prosecutor is outraged a repeat sex offender was given only a probated sentence even though he will have to undergo "chemical castration."

Joseph Frank Smith, 29, who pleaded guilty to two charges of burglary with intent to rape in separate attacks on the same woman, received the probated 10-year-sentence Thursday on the condition he accept treatment with the drug Depo-provera.

Smith was pleased with his sentence, which was recommended by an eight-woman, four-man jury. "Justice was done," he said.

But District Attorney Sam Millsap was outraged. "This confirms fears of rape victims that their attackers will not be brought to justice," said Millsap.

"This is the saddest day for me since I took office. It is a sad day for everyone."

State District Judge Tom Rickhoff said Smith would be required to take the chemical treatments for the next 10 years. The drug reduces the level of male hormones in the blood and makes it impossible to achieve an erection.

Michael Davis, a psychotherapist, testified Smith, whose mother was a topless dancer, had been exposed to more sexual stimulation than he could handle since he was 8 years old.

"His sisters walked around the house in panties and bras and sometimes even less than that," Davis said adding that Smith watched sexual activity that went on inside the house.

Davis testified Smith had been a "peeping Tom" since age 11, and that chances for rehabilitation were good if the drug was used.

Another witness, Dr. Joseph Stevens, urged the use of Depo-provera.

"Unless he (Smith) can undergo this chemical castration, I would say the prognosis for rehabilitation is poor," said Stevens.

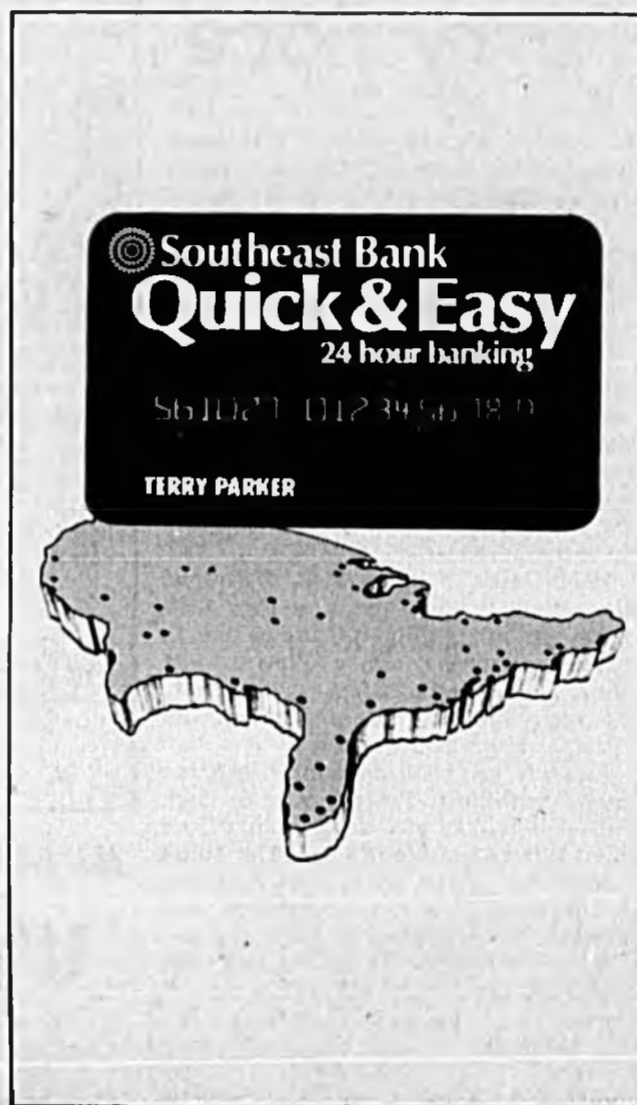

Smith was charged in the case after the 26-year-old victim's neighbors caught him fleeing from her vacant house March 18, after previous attacks on Jan. 28 and Feb. 21. Police said Smith was clad only in a ski mask and socks at the time of his arrest.

Rickhoff also ordered Smith remain jailed while he locate a residential treatment facility and researched his ruling, which he said apparently had no precedent.

Soviets Have Violated Treaty

There have been well-founded suspicions for years that the Soviet Union was violating the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, undoubtedly the most important of the strategic arms limitation agreements reached during the 1970s. But the sometimes ambiguous treaty language, imprecise or inconclusive American intelligence, and the usual Soviet secrecy have almost always left room for doubt.

Arms control devotees predisposed to give the Soviets the benefit of that doubt have typically argued that the Kremlin was adhering to the treaty, or at least that there was insufficient evidence for a direct accusation of cheating. Less charitable interpretations of the evidence have led others — former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, for example, or more recently Senators James McClure and Steve Symms — to contend that the Soviets were engaged in systematic violations and deception.

Now comes evidence, however, so conclusive as to constitute a virtual "smoking gun" of Soviet ABM violations. In recent months, American satellites have photographed a huge, new radar installation that can only be intended to help direct the defense of Soviet missile bases from American attack, or from U.S. retaliation following a Soviet first strike.

And that constitutes a prima facie violation of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

The ABM treaty, signed by former President Nixon and the late Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in May 1972, limits the Soviet Union and the United States to nothing more than a token defense against nuclear ballistic missiles. Specifically, each side is permitted only one ABM site containing no more than 100 missiles capable of intercepting and destroying incoming warheads.

The Soviets retained their ABM defense around Moscow while the United States dismantled its one site defending Minuteman ICBMs at Grand Forks, N.D.

The treaty supposedly enshrined mutual assured destruction (appropriately dubbed MAD) as the operative nuclear strategy of both superpowers. If neither superpower could defend its population, industrial base, or military installations against nuclear retaliation, neither superpower would ever strike first, or so the theory held.

Clearly, then, any covert attempt by the Soviet Union to convert portions of its massive anti-aircraft defenses to anti-ballistic missile defenses could transform the strategic balance and leave the United States disastrously vulnerable to nuclear blackmail, or worse.

Which brings us to that newly discovered Soviet radar installation. The ABM treaty requires that all Soviet air defense radars except those at the ABM site around Moscow be located on the periphery of the U.S.S.R., from where they could track incoming bombers more easily than ballistic missile warheads diving through the atmosphere. The new radar installation, roughly the size of a football field, is located at Abalakovo, 500 miles north of Mongolia and 3,000 miles from the Soviet Pacific coast.

The Abalakovo radar's "phased array" technology is ideal for tracking warheads and directing air-defense missiles — of which the Soviets have more than 10,000 — to intercept them. What is more, the Abalakovo installation is virtually identical to six other recently constructed radar stations that, while arguably located near the Soviet Union's periphery, might still be integrated into an ABM net.

Curiously, the Abalakovo installation is adjacent to missile fields containing Soviet SS-18, SS-19, and SS-11 ICBMs, most of which are housed in underground silos that can be quickly reloaded. Which is why the Soviets might be eager to protect them from American retaliation.

The Reagan administration responded in July to the chilling discovery of the Abalakovo radar by requesting an urgent meeting with Soviet arms control officials on Aug. 11. To date, there has been no response from the Kremlin.

Last year, the Reagan administration agreed to renew the ABM treaty for another five years. Unless the Soviets can be persuaded to dismantle their Abalakovo radar site and similar installations elsewhere, and stop testing their newest surface-to-air missiles against simulated warheads, the administration will have little choice but to consider abrogating the treaty and proceeding with a crash program to develop an American ABM system.

BERRY'S WORLD

"You're CUTE when I'm driving you up the wall."

One of Sanford's native daughters, Mabel Bram, turned 96 on Aug. 23.

But you'd never know it, according to a first cousin, once removed, Francis Roumillat, also of Sanford. "She's as sharp as a tack," cousin Francis says.

Mabel was born on Park Avenue in Sanford and since 1977 she has made her home at Bram Towers, the Sanford highrise named for her husband, Martin Bram, an Episcopal bishop.

There's no doubt it, Mabel has had a lively and interesting life, which she probably started preparing for at about age 6.

Mabel's housekeeper, Beatrice Laurendine, says Mabel was honored by her friends at Bram Towers on her birthday. They had lunch out on the town and Mabel received lots of cards and several gifts. "She is really interesting," Bea says.

Mabel is a descendant of pioneer Sanford families. A Sanford landmark, Roumillat's Drug Store, was owned and operated by her first cousin, Francis Eugene "Gene" Roumillat from 1922 until 1967, and by cousin Francis until the doors closed in 1977.

She is the daughter of Talullah Harris, and Gene Roumillat was the son of Dr. Junius Harris Of Washington County, Ga. who moved to Orange County in 1874.

According to a newspaper article appearing in The Sanford Herald on April 26, 1963, Dr. Harris served as a legislator for many years and was Speaker of the House in 1879 and 1880, but declined when he was nominated again in 1881.

The article says Dr. Harris moved to Sanford in 1882, bought the Sanford Journal, and in 1883 made it a daily newspaper. He served the city as postmaster while a practicing physician. The oak trees lining Sanford streets were planted during his term as Mayor of Sanford.

Mabel Bram and her family have been a legend in Sanford since the 1860s.

Although Agnes de Mille, one of the country's foremost choreographers is still a legend after a stroke eight years ago and is considerably younger than Mabel, the two may have a lot in common. Agnes says, "Everyone treats me like a holy relic." She claims the stroke sharpened her rapier brain.

Once when asked how to have a lively, interesting old age, Agnes revealed, "Start preparing yourself at the age of 6. If you were a clod when you were young, you'll be a decaying old clod when you're old."

The gracious Mabel Bram was well prepared to grow old gracefully.

More Than A Furry Face

My friend, Helen, is a spunky 70-year-old who loves cats. She came awfully close to losing the pleasure of their company.

Sometimes when I phone her, she's propped up in bed, watching TV. "The kittens are all on my stomach," she chortles, "washing each other's faces. It's a scream."

And any time I go to see her, Buddy, Mickey and Ginger put on a show: tearing around the room, boxing or tumbling over each other, legs and paws entwined. Even the placid older cat, Dolly the Duchess, swishes her tail for the younglings to swat, then gives them an ill-tempered smack.

Helen talks to her felines, of course, alternately scolding them for their high jinks, or holding them up, one by one, to cuddle and stroke. "They follow me like dogs," she says. She is obviously pleased with their attention, their uncritical adoration and affection.

And why not? The circle of friends her age is dwindling. Few stop by to visit, and Helen's car is getting cranky and often refuses to take her out. The hours would be long and lonely were it not for the madcap cats whose softness and love are always within reach.

A month ago, Helen moved from the home she lived in 22 years. The cost of repairs and upkeep had long ago out-paced her meager Social Security check.

As if the trauma of the move weren't enough, she faced a crisis with her cats. Most apartments she looked at or called about wouldn't take pets. One apartment owner said she could move in — if she made a non-refundable deposit of $100 per cat. But mostly, her pleas elicited nothing more than cold, firm no's.

With her moving date just days away, she finally found a remodeled duplex in an older part of town owned by a cat-respecting landlord, "Sure," he said, "you can bring your pets."

Now, at last, Helen and her cats are settled in and purring again.

My friend knows how lucky she is, and that many other women have had to sacrifice their beloved friends when they made similar moves.

Yet, much has been written lately claiming pets are immensely beneficial for the elderly. Pets are said to reduce loneliness and depression, even lengthen life. They help people cope with day-to-day frustrations.

It has been reported that stroking and talking to a pet lowers blood pressure; that victims of heart disease who have pets survive longer than those without.

Gerontologist Gerald Jay Westbrook of the University of Southern California has said that pets provide companionship and unconditional love and, unlike people, don't talk back, criticize or issue commands. Caring for animals makes their owners feel needed and wanted and heightens self-esteem.

Realizing all this, more and more nursing homes are providing pets, either temporarily or permanently, for their residents. Most of the world, it seems, is convinced that pets are a plus. All except apartment owners, that is. And we all know why.

Buddhism Suppressed In Vietnam

WASHINGTON — Americans cannot easily forget the pictures of Buddhist monks setting themselves on fire to protest the U.S.-backed regime of Ngo Dinh Diem in South Vietnam in the early 1960s.

Today, Vietnamese Buddhists would count themselves lucky to have Ngo Dinh Diem back. They are being persecuted with a savagery unknown in pre-communist South Vietnam.

But you won't be seeing anything about it in your newspaper or on the evening news. The communist authorities in Vietnam are among the most rigorous of the regimes that control the flow of information.

But occasional classified reports reaching the State Department from our nearest listening post in Bangkok describe the special efforts Hanoi is making to suppress the large Buddhist community in Vietnam. The reports and cables, seen by my associate Dale Van Atta, give a chilling picture of the repressive measures taken against the Buddhists, whose only crime has been

It's A Dream Deferred

"To a large extent," former Urban League President Vernon Jordan said, "we won the freedoms but we still do not have the jobs."

That's as good a summary as any of the state of black America and the status of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s "dream" 20 years after the 1963 March on Washington.

Two hundred fifty-thousand people gathered at the base of the Lincoln Memorial Aug. 28, 1963 to dramatize what King called "a shameful condition." Whether that condition has improved, and, if so, in what magnitude and by what measure is the subject of continuing debate.

Today, a review of King's classic speech, as well as the more militant remarks made that day by John Lewis, then chairman of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, reveals that the intended beneficiaries of the first march are both better and worse off than they were 20 years ago.

King's speech presented a catalog of general and specific grievances. Some of them are little more than memories today.

In at least one respect, King's speech seems archaic now. There are nine references to the male sex and only two to women. King also used the word "Negro" 14 times and "black" only once. Ironically, it was during King's last major march through northern Mississippi with Stokely Carmichael that "black" began to replace "Negro." Few speakers anywhere today would use "Negro" or could make as many references to men without also mentioning women.

"We can never be satisfied," King said in 1963, "as long as the Negro is the victim of the unspeakable power of police brutality."

While the aggressive and overt brutality that helped win international sympathy for the civil rights movement 20 years ago seems to have vanished, brutal police have not. In fact, since 1963, only one of King's specific complaints seems to have been rectified absolutely. Negroes "cannot gain lodging in the motels of the highways and the hotels of the cities," he said then, an injustice which the 1965 Civil Rights Act corrected forever.

But other, more general parts of King's "dream" remain just that — a dream.

Mississippi, despite some considerable racial progress won at great human cost, is not "an oasis of freedom and justice."

Not many black and white boys and girls in Alabama join hands today "as sisters and brothers."

It's infrequent in Georgia for the "sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners to sit down together at the table of brotherhood."

The other notable speech made that day reveals some unfulfilled promises as well.

When John Lewis asked rhetorically in 1963, "which side is the federal government really on?" he meant it as a necessary dig at an administration generally more helpful to civil rights than any other.

That question could be more easily answered today.

The Reagan administration is immeasurably more hostile to the advancement of civil rights for minorities and women than any since the march in 1963.

But perhaps what has changed more than anything else over the last 20 years has been the definition of what civil rights are and who ought to have them.

In 1963, civil rights clearly meant the extension of the legal protection of the Constitution to black Americans.

Family Business Problems

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The term "family-run business" conjures up visions of the corner market or a small clothing store whose founder worries whether his children will — or can — continue the business when he's gone.

At the same time, the children are plagued with doubts: Do they really want to carry on in dad's footsteps? And, if they do, will they have much say in the business as long as he's around?

Dr. Peter Davis says these doubts exist in almost all family-run businesses — not only in the small mom-and-pop operations, but also in many multimillion-dollar enterprises.

Davis is the director of the Wharton Applied Research Center, an arm of the University of Pennsylvania's famous Wharton School of Business. He and his staff study the problems of family-owned businesses and counsel those firms on overcoming their unique problems.

Family-run businesses produce at least 50 percent of the U.S. gross national product. Of the one million corporations in the United States, about 980,000 — including more than 150 of the Fortune 500 — are either family-run or controlled by so small a group that they share the problems of family-run enterprises.

Many business experts believe that professionally managed businesses are generally better run, since their decisionmaking lacks the emotional involvement that occurs in family-run or closely held businesses.

However, Davis doesn't agree. "There are many special strengths present in the family-run businesses," he says. "Management is usually more concerned with the survival of the company over the long term, as opposed to simply how well the company is doing this quarter or this year."

"They are usually free of the worry of how the company's stock is performing," he says. "They tend to be more concerned with the quality of the product they are producing and the reputation of the business than would be professional managers of publicly held companies."

In addition, he says, "since power is usually centralized and the key actors often have a more trusting relationship, decisionmaking is often faster and easier in the family-run enterprise."

But Davis admits that family businesses have special problems — and these problems are his major interest.

The major problem, he says, is the question of succession. "You often encounter the situation where the present generation are still in their prime, perhaps in their late 50s," he says, "while the younger generation is now entering their prime in their early 30s. They may have been in the business for 10 years or more, and they feel they are now ready to assume a leadership role — but the older generation is still years away from relinquishing control."

"This is both a very common and very detrimental," says Davis. "I've seen it in $2-million-a-year businesses and in $5-billion-a-year businesses I have worked with."

to want peace for their ravaged country. For example:

— "Vietnamese authorities have demonstrated determination to control this important ethnic and religious minority," states one of the cables. It adds that while "communism is essentially hostile to any religion," the Vietnamese Buddhists are "considered to be especially dangerous... (because of their) history of effective dissidence against... other Vietnamese regimes."

— On their takeover in 1975, the communists denied the Buddhists official recognition, the "first phase in the attempted destruction or control of the Buddhist religion and its sphere of influence." Realizing the futility of simply ignoring the Buddhist church, the regime then agreed in 1978 "to accord official recognition to the upper levels of the Buddhist hierarchy."

The third phase, in 1981, destroyed the Buddhist leadership's independence and credibility and replaced it with "a puppet Buddhist organization."

— Many monks and prominent Buddhists have been jailed or sent to re-education camps, where they must endure long indoctrination lectures and subsist on meager rations. Those who prove recalcitrant may be shot outright or locked for months in metal cargo containers left behind by American troops. Some prisoners have smuggled out messages to the Red Cross begging for cyanide capsules to end their misery.

— Humiliation is a weapon against Buddhist prisoners. One who later escaped said he had been forced to break his vow of vegetarianism and eat meat, even though meat was rarely served in the prison camp.

— Prior permission must be obtained for any religious gathering of more than five persons. Unless texts and sermons are submitted in advance, the monks cannot preach, and sermons must now include "party instruction" or they will not be approved.

— The Buddhists' educational program has been crippled by seizure of school property, and university-level facilities have been closed since 1976. Of particular concern to the monks is that they are forbidden to teach children, who must all attend government schools.

— Rice fields owned by the pagodas have been confiscated, and the faithful have been forbidden to bring food to the monks, thus forcing the pagodas to shut down.

The Buddhist flag — designed by an American colonel in 1951 — has been banned as a dangerous symbol of Buddhist political power.

— Since the communist takeover, no young men have been allowed to become monks — a cause of deep concern for the Vietnamese Buddhists. One tactic is to deny permission for young men to stay overnight in the pagoda, which is required of all novices.

— Death, flight and arrest have decimated the ranks of the Buddhist monks. Before 1975, there were 20,000; now there are probably fewer than 2,000.

'Tell Every Kid... Booze And Drugs Are For Suckers...'

Reading about those young high school boys involved in a burglary ring in Seminole County recently and thinking about school beginning Monday kind of jarred my memory about some friends I knew way back when.

Especially when I read the part about the boys telling police they used their ill-gotten gains to buy liquor and drugs.

I was reminded of a friend from my own school days who was a popular young man on campus, what with his ebullient personality, rugged frame and black curly hair. Mario was short, but well-built. He stood only about 5'-4" but weighed-in around 165...solid muscle. He was popular not only with the girls, but admired by many of the boys who knew he could drop a six-footer with one punch...he was hitting that hard. And at 16, he had quite a reputation for being a leader.

Peer pressure was as stiff in those days as I'm sure it is today. Consequently, many of the more impressionable students were led astray by those they admired or whom they wanted to emulate if their idols happened to be less than of upstanding character.

And a lot of the kids wanted to be like Mario. But since peer pressure works both ways — putting stress on those who admire and, sometimes, even more stress on those admired — Mario's thirst for increased popularity and attention began to get the better of him. His after-school job earned him considerably less money than it would take to keep him clothed in the latest fashions, or provide him with enough money to buy a car, let alone fill the gas tank to go cruisin' all weekend long.

So Mario became a thief. He started off small at first, breaking into neighborhood grocery stores, stealing tires and other merchandise not chained down at corner gas stations and shoplifting at the local five and dime.

And somewhere along the line, Mario got into drugs. Not heavy drugs at first...small stuff like popping bennies to stay awake all night, then taking downers to counteract the bennies so he could get some sleep. By the time Mario hit his early twenties, he was well into a life of crime, burglarizing homes in the better neighborhoods and selling his loot to small-time hoods who fenced his goods.

But something else had happened to Mario when he was in high school. He became a regular boozier. He felt important, he used to say, pulling that pint from his back pocket and taking a swig now and then, then passing the bottle around to the young girls and boys who huddled around him at the corner across from the school.

Most of the kids, however, were smart enough to turn down his offer of a drink. Most of them realized, apparently, that while Mario was enjoying the attention he got, it just wasn't for them and was probably more harmful than it was worth. Unfortunately for Mario he never learned that lesson.

Thus, in his mid-twenties Mario had developed destructive habits that would be difficult to break. He soon graduated from pill-popping to taking smack (heroin) and mainlining. And he got into cocaine (contrary to popular belief, cocaine was as popular in those days as it is now, except it wasn't found around high schools as readily as it apparently is today).

Mario was spending a lot of money on drugs...money he got from stealing. And since that was his only source of income, the more money he needed, the more he stole.

Eventually, even Mario's stealing wasn't earning him enough money to pay for his addiction to drugs and life in the fast lane. He opened a bar with some of the profits from his stealing and tried to go legit. But since he only made a modest income from the neighborhood bar, he was unable to support his hard-drug habit.

Mario turned to the substitute he had become acquainted with as a youth...booze and pills. By the time he was 27, Mario was consuming no less than a fifth of liquor a day. He began to lose weight at a fast clip. He became irritable and could no longer stand his friends around him. Mario deliberately yelled at them and argued with them at every turn, hoping to discourage them from returning to his bar. He wanted to be left alone.

Before long he became extremely violent and often was found on the floor of his bar in the morning by a cleaning man...whimpering and begging for the man to reach up to the counter and open a bottle for him.

Mario was just about 30 the day he collapsed in the bar. He was rushed to the hospital and put in the intensive care unit, an emaciated "old man" of about a hundred pounds.

And even though Mario had never been hospitalized before, he apparently had damaged himself so badly from all the booze and drugs that he was unable to recover. He died a few days later.

Another good friend who knew Mario well in his youth spent the last few days with him shaving him and trying to make him comfortable in the hospital as he struggled unsuccessfully for precious life. My friend told me a few years later that the last thing Mario said to him the day he died was:

"Tell every kid you meet...booze and drugs are for suckers and chumps. Better to be shunned by other kids than to do what I did to make friends."

Concerned Parents Form Citizens Group Of Florida To Have The RAISE Bill Revised

A state-wide group known as the Concerned Parents of Florida has recently been formed.

We, the parents or legal guardians of students entering the 10th, 11th or 12th grade for the school year 1983-84, in a public high school in the State of Florida, are asking that the RAISE BILL BE REVISED.

The bill is illegal as it now stands and violates our children's Constitutional Rights. It interferes with the students' property right to their degree. If students have enrolled in a particular program, performed as required (academically), and then the requirements are upgraded after matriculation and prior to graduation, their property rights are adversely affected. This is true for our incoming classes of 1984, 1985 and 1986.

We urge all concerned parents to phone or write the Florida American Civil Liberties Union main office (7210 S. Red Road, South Miami, FL 33143, (305) 666-2950), their local ACLU office, their local State Senators and Representatives, and Governor Bob Graham. With enough feedback, the ACLU will take this case and act on it in the next 10 days or so. Even though school is just starting, it is not too late.

Besides causing many students to repeat a grade and other major detrimental effects, too numerous to mention in this letter, the already high drop-out rate in the State of Florida will increase. Our alternative education facilities will be overcrowded. And because another bill has been passed by the Florida Legislature not allowing individuals under 18 years of age to take the G.E.D., many 16 and 17-year-olds will be in "limbo."

We strongly urge that the RAISE bill be grandfathered into the 9th grade but not the 10th, 11th and 12th!

Parents (and adversely affected students) — it is CRITICAL that you call or write now.

Reader Feels Robbed

On August 20, 1983, Patrick A. Stephen was killed by a drunk with a suspended driver's license going the wrong way on Highway 17-92.

I didn't know Pat very well because he had only worked at our company a little over a month. He worked in production and I in the office, so I only saw him once or twice a day. But every time I saw him he had a cheerful word, a quick smile and was always consistently doing his best at his job.

Now that Pat is gone, I've found out a bit more about him. His co-workers liked him because he was dependable, helpful and pleasant to be around. He frequently sang in church and was active in youth ministries.

I feel robbed because Pat was taken from us this way. Left behind is a young wife and a 19-month-old son. I've never met them, but surely they are sick with grief because they have been robbed.

Ultimately, each and every one of us has been robbed, because, as I understand it, the other party involved has already posted the bond and is loose on our highways again. I only hope no more little boys grow up without their daddy because of it.

Bouquets For Reporter

It was a most wonderful thing you at The Evening Herald did for a lovely lady and friend, Mrs. Bruce (Mary) Clarke.

The article was so very well written by Doris Dietrich. She is to be commended. Bouquets should be given while they may be appreciated, shared and enjoyed by the receiver and their families.

This is an example to encourage this community, state, nation and world. Never hesitate to give bouquets to those who are deserving. It could change things for the better.

Hospitalization Insurance Could Lead To Overcharging, Says Reader

I read Tom Giordano's interesting OPINION in the Saturday, August 20th Herald about the Sanford newcomer and doctor who refused her for lack of hospital insurance. He omitted the aspect of overcharge which occurs often when medical costs are paid by an insurance company. The program leaves room for a big fraud against the American public. Medicare and Medicaid charges can arbitrarily be increased by doctors and hospitals with costs borne by the paying portion as opposed to the receiving (entitlements) portion of the public. And all persons who have private medical insurance pay higher premiums because of fraudulent charges, with the insured not caring about charges that the insurance company pays.

A case in point concerned my 18-month-old grandson several years ago who continuously had a cold unchecked by the pediatrician. We took him to an Orlando specialist who recommended adenoid and tonsil removal. At the same examination, the doctor examined an older brother and pronounced him o.k. The doctor asked if there was hospital insurance, and there being none, gave a price of $190; when settlement was made, the receptionist said the cost was $300. Advised of the doctor's lower fee, she asked if there wasn't hospital and medical insurance and then said, "Well, if there is no insurance, the price is $190," which was paid.

The surgery, however, failed to stop the condition. I took both boys in for a check-up post surgery. The doctor looked at the baby, said "Well, it doesn't always work" and dismissed the case. Then he caught the brother, who had no cold symptoms, by the ear and checked him. He said that one now needed his out also and have the receptionist book him into the hospital on the way out. I took both children immediately to a ear, nose and throat specialist in Sanford, who prescribed a stronger dosage of the pediatrician's antibiotic, which worked. The other child had no sign of any infection and did not need surgery. There had been a lot of pain, anxiety and $2,000 in cash involved.

I also was recently personally subjected to a substantial dental rip-off attempt by an Orlando dentist. From now on, I get two or three opinions!

1986 Governor's Race Already Shaping Up?

By Tom Humphrey

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The election is more than three years away, but already the possibility of becoming Tennessee's next governor is making a lot of political mouths water.

For the Republicans, the chances of success may rest on the shoulders of Gov. Lamar Alexander — though he will be unable to succeed himself after completing his current second term.

If Alexander can maintain his popularity while pushing a sales tax to finance his controversial Master Teacher plan, the chances of his passing the torch to another Republican could be greatly improved. He could play an active role in the campaign.

On the Democratic side, House Speaker Ned Ray McWherter is getting most of the attention. The burly Dresden businessman, arguably the most powerful Democrat in the state, considered running in the last three races, then backed off. By most accounts, he figured the odds were too great to risk his prestigious position in the House.

Now, however, McWherter has declared he wants just one more two-year term in the legislature before moving on to something else. A 1986 gubernatorial race, he says, is a possibility.

if McWherter gets in, some other contenders may get out. But for now, there are a lot of could-be pitchers in the Democratic bullpen.

Two of the best known on a statewide basis are Knoxville Mayor Randy Tyree, the 1982 Democratic nominee, and former Watergate prosecutor James Neal, a Nashville attorney.

The two have one thing in common. Both — especially Tyree — could have political liabilities because ties to bankrupt Knoxville banker Jake Butcher, the party's 1978 nominee.

Tyree's 1982 campaign still owes about $1.2 million in debts. Much of his money came from Butcher, his banks and his friends and questions have been raised about the handling of loans to the campaign. Tyree insists that neither the debts or his past dealings with Butcher present a major problem to another try for governor.

Neal is serving as Butcher's attorney, perhaps a substantial enough connection to cause some image problems if Butcher's name stays in the news.

Other possible Democratic contenders are Public Service Commissioner Frank Cochran, who briefly entered the gubernatorial primary in 1982 then withdrew to seek re-election to the PSC, and Attorney General William Leech.

Cochran makes no secret of his willingness to run. Leech keeps his cards much closer to the vest, but recently acknowledged that he has been "fortunate enough to be flattered" with suggestions that he make the race.

Congressman Bill Boner of Nashville says he might run — but not if McWherter enters the race. Another possible contender is Jackson Mayor Bob Conger.

ANALYSIS

The field of Republican prospects is just as crowded and there are no clear favorites with McWherter's stature.

The list includes former state Rep. Brad Martin of Memphis, Court of Appeals Judge Lew Conner and three men who have served in Alexander's cabinet — Tennessee Housing Development Agency Chairman John King, who formerly was revenue commissioner; Bill Sanson, Alexander's former finance commissioner; and Transportation Commissioner Bob Farris.

There has been some speculation that

Conner, Alexander's former law partner, would have the governor's blessings. But the support would likely be tacit at best in the primary since most other contenders, too, are allied with Alexander.

As far as Republicans are concerned, some see next year's Senate race as little more than a launching pad for a 1986 gubernatorial race. The thinking is that Democratic Rep. Albert Gore Jr. will easily beat any Republican (unless Alexander changes his mind and enters the race).

Still, the Republican Senate nominee will gain a lot of experience, a lot of contacts and a lot of publicity just by making the race. That could put him or her in position for a run at the executive mansion two years later.

State Sen. Victor Ashe of Knoxville and Knoxville attorney Frank Barnett are the most visible of would-be GOP Senate candidates right now, but a lot of other names are being tossed about — ranging from former Finance Commissioner Lewis Donelson to Human Services Commissioner Sammie Lynn Puett.

And, as McWherter has said, "Ninety days can be a lifetime in politics."

Then again, three years isn't all that long.

Lengthy Care Policy Needed

Growing Older

U.S. Rep. Claude Pepper

G. My wife, aged 71, has been diagnosed as having Alzheimer's disease. Just a month ago, she was rational and capable 90 percent of the time. Now, she is irrational 90 percent of the time. I am well and strong — although 68 years of age. We thought that our retirement funds would take care of any eventuality, but now discover that neither Medicare nor our supplemental insurance is of any significant value in helping take care of my wife. I imagine that in about four years, we'll be cleaned out of our savings.

I am aware of the financial problems facing the Medicare program, but find it strange that if my wife had a disease from which she could recover, she could be helped financially by Medicare. But I am told that with this disease — there is nothing! Is this true? What can and/or is being done to help people like me?

A. You know, I often think there is something wrong with a country like ours that cannot provide assistance for families, like yours, that are trying so hard to take care of their own against all odds.

As I am sure you know, almost the entire burden of Alzheimer's disease — financial as well as emotional — is borne by the families of those afflicted. Nowhere in our society are individual citizens left so unassisted and exposed to the hazards of a catastrophic illness. It reflects the largest single gap in our health and social programs — the absence of a meaningful long-term care policy and delivery system.

Alzheimer's affects 1.2 million to 4 million Americans and is the fourth leading cause of death in this country. The disease accounts for more than half the nation's admissions to nursing homes.

The cost of caring for an Alzheimer's victim is estimated at $17,000 to $50,000 a year. In a recent joint hearing of the House aging subcommittee on health, which I chair, and the House commerce subcommittee on health, chaired by Rep. Henry Waxman, we learned that most of this cost is borne by family members. Public and private resources available to assist individuals and families of those afflicted with other diseases are not available to Alzheimer's patients and their families.

'I intend to introduce legislation in the coming months that will provide for a comprehensive continuum of health care...'

Federal coverage under Medicare is minimal. It is Medicare's position that the requirements of Alzheimer's patients — help in walking, bathing, dressing, eating and taking medicine — are custodial in nature and custodial services are not covered by Medicare.

Veterans hospitals admit patients because of service-connected illness or if the veteran is indigent. Indigent veterans can be admitted for care related to Alzheimer's, but they may be asked to leave if the bed is needed for someone suffering from a "treatable disease."

Medicare supplementary insurance policies do not cover Alzheimer's disease for the same reason Medicare does not.

Only Medicaid, of all the public programs, provides significant assistance, but that assistance is conditioned on the impoverishment of the individual and limited by the availability of nursing home beds.

The biggest gap in U.S. health policy is the lack of any long-term care for persons who are chronically ill, such as those with Alzheimer's disease. Thus, family members are the primary care-givers for the chronically ill. This role is enormously taxing, consuming and almost relentless in its demands.

It is time this country and the Congress began to address this enormous problem and help families take care of their loved ones. It is past time we began to devote serious attention to the development of a long-term care system for our country.

I intend to introduce legislation in the coming months that will provide for a comprehensive continuum of health care for senior citizens at a cost we can afford.

Good Safety Records Pay Off For Growers

ORLANDO — Safety pays — in more ways than one — for Florida growers who recently received large dividend checks from their workers' compensation insurance premiums because of excellent loss records. Half a million dollars was the amount returned to growers throughout the state again this year by the Florida Fruit & Vegetable Association Self Insurers Fund.

Peter S. Harilee of Palmetto, chairman of the fund's board of trustees, credited the excellent loss records of the grower members and good fund management for making the dividend returns possible. "Because of these factors," Harilee pointed out, "the FFVA Fund has been able to return $500,000 a year for four consecutive years bringing the four year total to $2 million."

To be eligible for dividends, participants must have been a member of the fund since 1981 with a loss ratio of 60% or less; and must have been in good standing on June 1, 1983.

EE Bonds Sales Up

Sales of Series EE United States Savings Bonds in Seminole County totaled $555,652 during the first six months of 1983, said John Y. Mercer, banking center manager at Southeast Bank. Mercer serves as county volunteer savings bond chairman.

Sales have increased substantially in 1983 over the same period of a year ago, he said. Statewide, bond sales totaled $100,302,778 for the period. National sales of savings bonds during the first six months amounted to 42.11 billion, a 37 percent increase from last year. Currently, $69.7 billion worth of savings bonds are being held by the public.

Since November 1, 1982, new Series EE Savings Bonds held five years or longer earn 85 percent of the average return on five-year Treasury marketable securities during the holding period. There is a minimum guaranteed return of 7.5 percent for bonds held at least five years. Most older Series E and EE Bonds are also eligible for the market-based rate. The rate for the current six-month market-based period is 8.64%.

According to the U.S. Savings Bonds Division, with market-based interest, savings bond buyers are able to benefit from increases in market interest, while being protected from steep market declines, and the Payroll Savings Plan, offered by many area employers, allows individuals to save regularly and automatically — and get market-based interest — for only a few dollars a week.

Mutual Funds Assets Rise

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Assets of mutual funds rose sharply to yet another record in June, the Investment Company Institute announced. At $106.4 billion they were nearly twice the level of a year ago.

The June figure is up from May's record of $101.4 billion because of the continued high volume of sales and capital appreciation in the investments owned by the funds. The figures cover all types of mutual funds except short-term funds.

Sales in June totaled $4.0 billion. This is down marginally from the May level of $4.1 billion but is nearly four times sales in June last year.

The Institute, the national association of mutual funds, says that for the first six months of this year sales of these funds have exceeded those in every full year in the industry's history. At $22.4 billion they are already 41 percent above the record set for the whole of 1982.

Redemptions in June increased to $1.5 billion from $1.3 billion in May and $540 million in June 1982. Thus these funds had net sales of $2.5 billion in June compared to $2.8 billion in May and $526 million in June a year ago.

Nuclear Plant Operational

MIAMI — Florida Power & Light Company placed its newest nuclear unit, the 802-megawatt St. Lucie Unit #2 on Hutchinson Island, into commercial operation at 12:01 a.m. Aug. 8.

The action, which takes the unit off the utility's construction project rolls and officially adds it to the operating power plant system, culminates more than 2,850 hours of surveillance and 150 detailed testing procedures since the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) first granted a license for low-power testing April 6, followed by full operating approval June 10.

The second St. Lucie unit received its construction permit in 1977 and was completed in under six years — three-and-a-half years less than the average time for nuclear units currently underway or recently completed, according to the NRC.

Democratic Option To Economic Decline

By Gail Collins
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Declining productivity is the problem, but more spending on machines and business equipment isn't the answer, according to three young economists.

The trio — Samuel Bowles, David Gordon and Thomas Weisskopf — are among the best-known of a new generation of economists who emerged from the civil rights and peace movements of the 1960s.

In "Beyond the Wasteland," the three argue that none of the traditional explanations by right or left for declining U.S. productivity — OPEC, government regulation, labor unions, excess corporate profits or monopolies — is accurate.

Marshaling a parade of tables and charts that dot the first half of their book, they direct particular scorn toward the capital shortage theory. That argument, popular with the Reagan administration, holds that rising labor costs, government spending and regulation have shrunk the funds available for capital investment, leaving U.S. industry crippled by outdated and inadequate equipment.

"If we're right all the policies pursued to this point have been beside the point," said Gordon. "The so-called capital shortage theory was just plain wrong and led to an unjust giveaway of tax money," as the government tried to use tax cuts to encourage business to expand and update equipment.

Gordon and his co-authors say the postwar prosperity of the United States was due in part to a "capital-labor accord" in which unions were accepted as the workers' legitimate representatives in return for agreeing not to challenge management prerogatives, and to fight only for their members' narrow economic interests.

But as memories of the Depression faded, workers began taking a rising standard of living for granted, and started to resent the boredom and lack of creativity in their jobs. Environmentalists and consumerists demanded more restrictions on business and competition from overseas began reducing the margin of profitability.

All these forces led to what the authors call "the Great Depression" of the 1970s, a period marked by plant speedups, management crackdowns, anti-union organization, and an increase in worker-management hostility.

Productivity, Gordon said, "began to slow when workers rebelled against the failure of the postwar system to deliver on its policies. It slowed even more dramatically as the result of restrictive policies implemented to discipline workers with the threat of unemployment. Workers were working less hard, businesses were both investing less and pursuing fewer innovations."

Gordon is chairman of the economics department at the New School for Social Research, one of the academic meccas for leftist economics. Another is Bowles' department at the University of Massachusetts.

"We went about doing this book very self-consciously. We wanted to do it as a trade book, as a commercial book," Gordon said. He hopes it will lead to a political movement organized around the Economic Bill of Rights described in the book.

The 24-point list, which includes democratic production incentives, increased worker participation in on-the-job decision-making and "flexible price controls" can provide, the authors say, a "democratic alternative to economic decline."

"There's a very complex long-term political process unfolding," Gordon said. "It is not an agenda aimed at 1984. It seems totally unlikely the current crop of leading presidential candidates will move away from neo-liberal platitudes."

He hopes, however, to see a "substantial amount of congressional activity by 1988-90," centered on the agenda contained in "Beyond the Wasteland."

Appliances Graded

MT. VERNON, N.Y. (UPI) — When a leading consumer magazine devotes a special 28-page section to home personal computers, you know they are becoming a staple home appliance.

The section in the September issue of Consumer Reports includes brand name evaluations of 17 popular models, to be followed in the October issue by evaluations of word processing programs and printers.

Future reports will cover monitors and many popular game, education and home finance programs.

The current issue also features an introduction to home computing telling how hardware works and what the devices can do. It also details features of various brands and models.

Promotion To Sales

Jimmie Wells, 24, of Sanford, has been promoted to the sales department of Sterchi's Furniture, 1100 French Ave., Sanford.

In announcing the appointment, Sterchi's manager Joe Towles said Wells has been with the firm since he joined the staff in the delivery department in 1979.

A native of Sanford, Wells is a 1977 graduate of Seminole High School. He's single and an avid fisherman, Towles said.

Ad Stereotypes Can Be Costly For Sellers

By Lidia Wasowicz

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Women may have come a long way, but the advertisements portraying them remain in the "high-button shoe and horse-and-buggy era," says a leading researcher who warns marketers that outdated stereotypes can cost them.

Advertisers' persistence in maintaining an image that fits only 13 percent of today's American households repels some consumers and leaves a huge untapped market, Rena Bartos said in an interview.

"I can't give you specific figures, but I can say the lag between image and reality in the portrayal of women in print ads and broadcast commercials is costing marketers," said the senior vice president and director of communications development for the J. Walter Thompson USA advertising agency.

Ms. Bartos since 1966 has had the unique job of tracking social trends and identifying marketing opportunities that result from social change.

"Demographics lodged in the computer data bank — not to mention the evidence of our daily experiences — keep telling us that lifestyles are changing, spending patterns are changing, and women are wonderfully diverse," she said.

In her latest book, "Moving Target: What every marketer should know about women," Ms. Bartos shares her findings and suggests the industry would be "better off aiming at where women are going rather than where they've been."

In screening 125 commercials, she said, she found only nine that recognized contemporary women, "and they were the blandest in the world."

"There's still a strong industry prejudice that to irritate is to get attention," she said. "And there's a strong industry prejudice that what worked in the past should work now," she said.

"The fact is, only 13 percent of all American households are like the ones portrayed in the ads."

Advertising is beamed at four groups: "housewife, 18 to 49 — key customer for household products and foods; male head of household, 24 to 49 — key customer for big-ticket items like cars and travel; girl, 18 to 25 — key customer for cosmetics, perfume, fashion; man, 18 to 34 — key customer for sports cars, beer, liquor, toiletries."

Most marketers take as a given that most women are full-time housewives with children; most women who work are unmarried; no married woman would work if she could afford to stay at home; and working women and housewives want the same things from products and respond to the same strategies.

None of those assumptions is true, Ms. Bartos said, noting that 56 percent of American women work, with another 16 percent planning to.

In her research, Ms. Bartos defined four distinct groups of female consumers: career woman; just-a-job working woman; plan-to-work housewife; and stay-at-home housewife.

The career woman is least likely to watch evening television but most likely to listen to the radio and read magazines and newspapers, followed by the plan-to-work housewife, she said.

In buying, the career women are most likely to plan ahead, be cautious and brand loyal, the just-a-job worker tends to be experimental, and the stay-at-home housewife is the most persuasive and economy-minded.

While marketers assume the stay-at-home housewife is most concerned with cleaning, polishing and grooming her home, data show the career woman and plan-to-work housekeeper shampoo rugs and wax floors more frequently.

By ignoring such untapped markets as women car buyers, marketers "could be missing anywhere from a fourth to a third of the potential market," she said.

Ms. Bartos recommends marketers re-examine the assumed target, evaluate the market potential of new target groups, develop a fresh perspective, explore the attitudes and needs of the new groups and redefine marketing targets.

Business Execs Edgy Over Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Executives of American multinationals based in Argentina are nervous about elections scheduled for Oct. 30. Like the candidates, some companies will be winners, others losers.

One of two major political parties will replace the 7-year-old military regime next January — the center-left Radical party or the labor-based Peronist party.

U.S. investment in Argentina, with a book value of about $1.9 billion, has been stalled for the past two years. It is at a virtual standstill now as businessmen wait to see what decisions the new civilian government will take.

Donald Petersen, president of Ford Motor Co., which has America's largest subsidiary in Argentina, in a brief interview during a July inspection trip, said he would "anticipate six months of drift..."

Many businessmen have serious reservations about their prospects under either the Peronists or the Radicals. Others hope for improvement.

An executive of a U.S. petrochemical subsidiary was optimistic about the future of manufacturing. "It doesn't matter who wins," he said.

Pledge Fulfilled

Seminole County United Way President Larry Strickler, right, accepts a check for $150 for the United Way from Prestige Imports General Manager Mike Steele, center, and assistant manager Joel McKinnon. Prestige Imports management had pledged to give the organization $25 for each car sold during their grand opening weekend, July 28-31.

AFCOM To Host Mini Trade Show In Casselberry

A mini trade show, featuring exhibits by manufacturers of fasteners and electronic hardware, will be held at AFCOM's corporate headquarters in Casselberry, Sept. 1. The trade show is intended to acquaint industrial buyers and engineers with AFCOM's product lines.

With annual sales in excess of $20 million, company officials say AFCOM is one of the nation's largest and fastest growing distributors of fasteners and electronic hardware.

"Both manufacturers and end users of the products we handle have expressed a great deal of enthusiasm for the trade show," said Ron Roby, executive vice president of AFCOM.

Roby noted that a section of AFCOM's warehouse will be converted into an exhibition hall for the program. Booths will be set up for companies exhibiting products.

Fastener manufacturers planning to exhibit include American Cold Heading, Captive Fastener Corp., Crescent Mfg., Dzus Fastener Co., Mill Max, Radax Industries Inc., Shakeproof and Fridair Industries.

Electronic hardware manufacturers such as AMP Inc., Dennison Manufacturing Co., E.F. Johnson Co., Electrovert Inc., Garry Manufacturing, and Thermalloy Inc., will also participate.

Roby said hundreds of buyers and engineers with companies in the computer, electronics and other high tech industries in Florida and nearby states are expected to attend the show.

The program will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., with a buffet luncheon at noon.

Poachers A Principal Reason For Deer Shrinkage

Over the years various groups have viewed the shrinking natural resources of Florida with alarm, and each has stated opinions as to the cause of this shrinkage. I have reported on the alarming decrease in the Ocala National Forest deer herd on several occasions in the past two years, and have blamed out-of-season poaching as one of the principal reasons for this decrease. Several game wardens agree with me.

Still, hunters have blamed hunting dogs for killing many deer, which they claim would have survived had not the dogs run them down. I have witnessed many deer kills by dogs, and many more by outlaw hunters.

On occasion, the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission has been blamed for poor conservation policies that result in a reduction of wildlife resources. This month the Commission was blasted by the Central Florida Dog Hunters Association for permitting 60 doe to be killed by biologists who wanted to study the herd for disease and reproduction.

The Association, a non-profit organization of sportsmen who hunt primarily in the Ocala Management Area, maintain a fairly constant watch on activities of the Commission that might conceivably affect deer hunting in this area. Andy Caldwell, president of the Association, attended the Commission workshop meeting on June 30, and became incensed at the report of 60 doe being killed in the dog hunt and still hunt areas of the Ocala National Forest.

Caldwell reports in the Association's July newsletter that "There was no disease found in any of the deer killed. There has not been any report of disease in the deer herd of the Ocala Forest in the last 50 years, since fire destroyed most of the forest in the early 1930s. During those fifty years, I have not heard of over a dozen poor deer or deer which were in bad shape being killed in the Ocala Forest.

Caldwell stated that 50 of the 60 doe killed were pregnant, and that since each doe is responsible for increasing the deer herd about 32 deer over a five year period, the 60 dead doe represent a total deer herd reduction of 1,920 deer. He further states that since the Commission is permitting another 60 doe to be killed next year, that they are responsible for decreasing the Ocala deer herd over the next six years by about 4,000 deer.

Cliff Nelson
Fishing and Hunting Writer

Caldwell concluded his denunciation of the Commission with the following statement: "This was listed on the agenda as a progress report, but the only progress here is that the G.F.C. is making progress in destroying the deer herd in the Ocala. Isn't it a shame that the state of Florida doesn't hire some high-school drop-outs with a little common sense who can count deer tracks and tell a fawn track from an adult deer track. Instead of hiring such highly educated biologists, who have to kill the doe and cut her open to decide if she is pregnant."

Most hunters will agree with the cause of Caldwell's anger. There seems to be absolutely no need for the state biologists to kill doe in order to determine if they are diseased or pregnant. If they believe it is necessary to examine dead doe, then the obvious solution is to have a legal doe day during, or at the end of, the regular hunting season. As each doe is checked in, the biologists can remove organs for preservation and further lab study, and record statistics to their heart's content.

September 24, 1983 has been designated National Hunting and Fishing Day. According to a news release from the National Hunting and Fishing Day organization, Tom Seaver, one of baseball's best pitchers and a three-time Cy Young Award winner, will serve as Honorary Chairman for that day. "I'm very pleased to have this opportunity to tell people about the importance of conserving our natural and wildlife resources and how hunters and fishermen play a major role in this country's conservation efforts," said Seaver. "Contrary to what many people might think, all of America's wildlife is not endangered. In fact, the populations of many species are greater now than they were at the turn of the century."

Seaver noted that there are more than 12 million white-tailed deer in the U.S. today, whereas in 1900 there were only about 500,000. Expanding civilization and commercial exploitation had reduced the elk population to about 41,000 in 1907, but today there are more than a half million elk.

"The dramatic comeback of the white-tailed deer, elk, and many other species such as wood duck, pronghorn antelope and wild turkey was made possible by conservation programs supported and financed largely by America's hunters and fishermen," said Seaver. Sportsmen's contributions to conservation have totaled more than $5 billion, Seaver pointed out.

September 24 will mark the 12th Annual observance of National Hunting and Fishing Day. NHF Day was established by the Congress in 1972 as a means of giving recognition to hunters and fishermen for their many contributions to conservation, and is sponsored by more than 40 of the nation's leading conservation organizations.

Each year between 10 and 14 million Americans participate in an estimated 2,500 separate NHF Day activities sponsored by sportsmen's clubs, conservation organization, and civic groups.

This sounds like a fine time for all of us to individually resolve to take one positive action each fishing or hunting trip to help conserve our wildlife.

Raines, Trillo Key Expos' Win

MONTREAL (UPI) — Tim Raines and Manny Trillo helped the Montreal Expos break a four-game losing streak Friday night as Raines, who went 3-for-3 at the plate, scored three runs, drove in two runners and stole two bases helped pitcher Bill Gullickson to run his record to 12-11, while Trillo drove in four runs during the Expos' 10-4 romp over the San Diego Padres.

Doug Flynn, who made a sparkling fourth inning defensive play at shortstop, took his new spot last week when the Expos acquired the veteran second baseman Trillo from Cleveland.

"It's a good feeling to know even if you are having a tough time at the plate, the next day when you come to the ballpark, you'll still be in the lineup," said Flynn, whose club is two and a half games out of first place in the National League East.

Trillo drove home the Expos' first run in the opening inning when he delivered Raines with a single. In the seventh, Trillo unloaded a bases-loaded double breaking the game wide open and giving Montreal a 10-2 lead.

"It was just a lucky break for me," said Trillo, who received a standing ovation in the seventh inning from the crowd of 30,814 fans watching him play in a Montreal uniform for the first time at Olympic Stadium.

"I always wanted to play in Montreal and I hope I'm here to stay," Trillo said.

The Expos are in the thick of the pennant race and Montreal manager Bill Virdon believes his new infield combination will help.

"With Manny at second and Doug at short we've got the best pairing here we've had all season."

The Expos started a 16-game home campaign and the victory came at the right time. "That's a good way to start the home stand. I hope we can keep winning for another 30 days because the season still has a long way to go," Virdon said.

Gullickson gave up a two-run homer to Bobby Brown in the sixth and a solo blast to Ruppert Jones in the ninth.

Dave Dravecky dropped his record to 14-10 as San Diego manager Dick Williams sent five pitchers to the mound to try to stop the Expos' 15-hit attack.

"My pitching staff just wasn't in the game tonight," said Williams, who received a scare in the seventh inning when reliever Sid Monge was hit in the back of the head by a line drive off the bat of Andre Dawson. Monge was able to walk off the field, but was taken to the hospital for observation.

"Thank goodness, it's nothing serious," Williams said. "But Sid has quite a headache and we want him checked out."

Sean Farrell helped provide Tampa Bay quarterbacks with the protection they needed Friday night as Jerry Golsteyn tossed a pair of TD passes and Jack Thompson connected on one to lead the Bucs to a 41-21 rout of the New England Patriots. The Bucs finished the preseason with a 4-0 record.

Dolphins Cut Down Giants, 24-3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Even perfectionist coach Don Shula had to search hard for Miami mistakes.

The Dolphins administered their second straight exhibition beating on the road Friday night, embarrassing the previously unbeaten New York Giants 24-3 in the final tuneup before their Sept. 4 opener against Buffalo. Miami played no favorites in the Phil Simms-Scott Brunner battle for the Giants' starting quarterback job; they treated both candidates with equal disdain.

"As we did against Washington, we got a lead and built on it," said Shula, who earned some minor Super Bowl revenge in RFK Stadium last week by whipping the Redskins 38-7. "Defensively we played real well and our punting (by rookie Reggie Roby) was excellent."

Pro Football

David Woodley and rookie Dan Marino each directed long first-half touchdown drives and Duriel Harris caught four passes for 116 yards as the Dolphins evened their preseason record at 2-2 and dropped New York to 3-1.

Woodley scored on a 3-yard bootleg in the opening quarter to cap a 17-play drive and Marino, Miami's top draft choice, led the Dolphins on a 90-yard march in the second period, capped by a 1-yard scoring run by David Overstreet. Uwe von Schamann kicked a 39-yard field goal and Woody Bennett added a 1-run TD run in the third quarter. The Giants were limited to a 49-yard field goal by rookie Ali Haji-Sheikh in the second quarter as neither Simms nor Brunner could direct a TD drive. Simms hit 10-of-17 passes for just 76 yards before yielding to Brunner on New York's second possession of the third quarter. Brunner hit 5-of-11 for 46 yards before Jeff Rutledge came on with 8:44 remaining and completed 8-of-16 passes for 84 yards.

"Woodley's our No. 1," said Shula of the 24-year-old passer who fizzled so emphatically against the Redskins last January. "He has gained confidence and become quite a leader."

Woodley hit 7-of-15 passes for 168 yards and Marino completed 9-for-12 for 87 yards.

Bucs Maul Patriots, 41-21, End Preseason With 4-0 Record

TAMPA (UPI) — Jerry Golsteyn threw two touchdown passes and Jack Thompson tossed for another as the Tampa Bay Buccaneers battered the New England Patriots 41-21 Friday night in the final exhibition game for both teams.

The victory was the fourth straight without a loss for Tampa, while New England fell to 0-4.

Golsteyn, making his first start in his battle with Thompson to see who will replace Doug Williams at quarterback, completed 8 of 11 passes for 120 yards before giving way to Thompson midway in the second period with the Bucs ahead 28-7.

The former New York Giants quarterback had first-half touchdown passes of 4 yards to tight end Mark Witte and 24 yards to tight end Jerry Bell. He also directed two drives in which Melvin Carver scored from 1-yard out and James Owens went in on a 9-yard sweep.

Thompson connected with wide receiver Theo Bell on a 69-yard touchdown pass in the third period and Bill Capece added second-half field goals of 25 and 33 yards.

New England scored in the first period on a 28-yard pass from Steve Grogan to wide receiver Cedric Jones. Mark van Eeghen scored from 7 yards out in the second period and backup quarterback Tony Eason went in untouched from the 1 on a naked reverse in the final period.

Thompson played only about one quarter before being replaced by rookie Bob Hewko. He completed 12 of 15 passes for 170 yards.

Grogan connected on 14 of 19 passes for 183 yards before being taken out of the game in the third period in favor of Eason, the Patriots first-round draft pick out of Illinois.

The game was costly to the Patriots with defensive back Paul Dombroski suffering a concussion and defensive end Kenneth Sims being sidelined with a possible hairline fracture of his lower left leg. Sims was to return home with the team, but Dombroski was hospitalized overnight for observation.

Dombroski was injured when he made a futile drive to try to stop Theo Bell at the goal-line. Thompson had floated a pass down field, which Bell took in full stride at the New England 30 and outran Dombroski to the end zone.

Tampa's rookie tackle Kelly Thomas went out with a bruised knee.

U.S. Collects Treasure Chest Full Of Gold

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Sparked by the men's basketball team, American athletes collected a treasure chest full of gold at the Pan American Games Friday, but the images of two countries were tarnished by the continuing drug investigation.

A Cuban fencer, Mario Durruthy Wilson, and a Dominican Republic shot putter, Juan de la Cruz, were the latest to be caught using banned drugs, bringing the number of athletes named in the week-long probe to 14.

Both athletes were found by the Medical Commission of the Pan American Sports Organization to have ephedrine in their system. A stimulant that increases the heart rate, ephedrine is the same drug that disqualified American swimmer Rick DeMont and cost him a gold medal in the 1972 Olympics.

Wilson, a member of Cuba's gold medal-winning sabre team, is the third athlete from his country to show up positive in post-event drug testing. The previous two were weightlifters Daniel Nunez and Alberto Blanco.

Another Cuban athlete, volleyball player Lazaro Rizo, also was found by the Medical Commission to have traces of ephedrine in his system but the Commission decided the dosage wasn't severe enough to warrant any punishment.

Eleven weightlifters and a cyclist previously were found to have banned drugs in their system, but in all previous instances anabolic steroids was the drug detected.

Wilson's name has been forwarded to the International Fencing Federation for possible sanctions and he will be forced to return his medal.

De la Cruz, who did not place in his event, received a reprimand from PASO and was reported to the Dominican Olympic Committee and the International Track and Field Federation for possible sanctions.

While it was not a good day for the Cubans off the athletic field, they certainly proved their superiority on the baseball diamond.

Powered by the 13-strikeout pitching of Garcia, Cuba routed the United States, 8-1, to win the gold medal.

It marks the fourth straight time the Cubans have won the baseball championship at the Pan Am Games. Nicaragua, which beat the U.S. Thursday and the Dominican Republic, 6-5, Friday, won the silver medal while the Americans had to settle for the bronze.

On the whole, the day of athletic competition belonged to the U.S. In addition to winning the gold medal in men's basketball with an 87-79 victory over Brazil, the U.S. won four gold medals in track and field, added four more in women's Sambo wrestling and picked up one in cycling.

Unfortunately, the U.S. wasn't so lucky in men's softball. With ace pitcher Dave Scott getting bombed for six runs in the first inning, the U.S. lost the gold medal to Canada, 11-5.

Bolstered by the surprising return of pole vaulter Mike Tully, the U.S. won four gold medals.

Tully, of Los Angeles, defeated heavily favored teammate Jeff Buckingham of Gardner, Kan., the American record holder, and Brazilian Tom Hintnaus with a Pan American record vault of 17 feet, 10 3/4 inches. Buckingham won the silver medal at 17-2 3/4 and Hintnaus was third on more misses.

Other gold medal winners for the U.S. were Elliott Quow of New York in the men's 200-meters, Randy Givens of Amityville, N.Y., in the women's 200-meters and Benita Fitzgerald of Dale City, Va., in the women's 100-meter hurdles.

In men's basketball, Michael Jordan of North Carolina scored 16 points to spark the U.S. to victory. The U.S. has now won the gold medal in men's basketball eight of nine times since the Pan Am Games began in 1951. The Americans, 4-0 in this second round of play, are assured of the gold medal regardless of the outcome of Saturday's final game against Puerto Rico.

Jordan, in yet another excellent display, scored 14 points in the second half as the United States dug in on defense and hit from the outside in pulling past the powerful Brazilians.

Two more U.S. fighters advanced to the finals of the boxing competition. Evander Holyfield of Atlanta stopped Venezuela's Carlos Salazar in the second round of their light heavyweight bout and Henry Tillman of Los Angeles dethroned Virgilio Frias of the Dominican Republic. However, super heavyweight Tyrrell Biggs of Philadelphia lost to Cuba's Jorge Gonzalez in a close decision.

Steelers Still Strong; Colts Rebuilding; Pats Getting Better

By Murray Olderman
NEA Sports Editor

The winds of chaos blow around Chuck Noll and don't seem to disturb him one whit. Retirements, defections, holdouts keep him from his appointed task — to keep the Steelers on course for another contending season. In the face of negative developments, he remains positive.

OFFENSE

Passing — Terry Bradshaw's sore elbow just means long-time backup Cliff Stoudt will get chance to show wares in exhibitions. Don't be against Terry showing up when the bell rings. What other team could afford to lose Lynn Swann (to ABC), Jim Smith (to USFL), risk John Stallworth on contract holdout, and still have Noll brag about his "best crop of rookies since '74"? He means rookies like Wayne Capers, Paul Skansi, Bennie Cunningham's a stanchion at TE.

Running — Franco Harris rolls on like that fabled river, will soon surpass O.J. Simpson and nestle behind Jim Brown as NFL's all-time leading rusher. Walter Abercrombie, exciting talent, teams with 33-year old Franco, leaving sturdy Frank Pollard to back up both positions.

DEFENSE

Line — Conversion to 3-4 system gets ecstatic boost with return from Canada of Keith Gary, former No. 1, and fabulous Gabriel Rivera, (the Mexican Joe Greene). At nose tackle, Gary Dunn, Edmund Nelson offer 1-2 punch.

Linebacking — The old order passeth when such as Jack Ham, future Hall of Famer, retires. But shed no tears. Steelers see young Mike Meriweather developing into his class. Robin Cole must ward off Bryan Hinkle for other outside job. Inside, the unit is led by phenomenal Jack Lambert. In his 10th year, and Loren Toews. In his 11th.

Secondary — On another team, Donnie Shell's holdout would cause concern. Noll merely moved Ron Johnson, who's more comfortable at safety than corner. Dwayne Woodruff was the MVP at one corner, while 35-year old Mel Blount ran a 4.65 forty on arrival in camp.

Prediction — First in AFC Central with record of 10-6.

You can't get any lower than a winless season. More than any other team, Frank Kush feels the Colts were hurt by player strike because they had vast turnover of personnel and were starting to jell just as it hit.

Passing — Scarcely disturbed by Art Schlichter bet scandal because Mike Pagel had already grabbed QB job. Big search for fast wide receiver to team with Ray Butler, otherwise Matt Bouza retains job by default. Tim Sherwin, Pat Beach form young tight end duo.

Running — Curtis Dickey at halfback, Randy McMillan at fullback — both are former No. 1 draft picks — have everything you look for in pro running backs. Except results. Zach Dixon is handy stand-in.

Blocking — Slowly, Kush is beginning to assemble own gang, shipping off vet malcontents. Ray Donaldson, four-year man at center, is only certified regular, though top newcomer Chris Hinton is going to play somewhere.

Sid Abramowitz, rookie tackle, also figures.

DEFENSE

Line — Two-thirds of it is fine. That would be Donnell Thompson at left end, Leo Wisniewski at nose tackle. They badly need quality right end to fill out three-man front. It could be Fletcher Jenkins, Hosea Taylor or Chris Lindstrom.

Linebacking — Strong and firm on the inside, jelly on the outside. Johnie Cooks and Barry Krauss at the inside posts provide range and mobility. Shifted Greg Bracelin to remaining position on left side.

Secondary — Lacking only one spoke. That's at strong safety, where ex-Steelers Larry Anderson has staked claim. Corner tandem of James Burroughs and Derrick Hatchett would look good on any team. Nesby Glasgow would be natural strong safety, but has to stay at free safety for now.

Prediction — Fourth in AFC East with record of 4-12.

Ron Meyer's hard-nosed, no-nonsense direction of the Patriots antagonized some of the veterans, possibly tipped John Hannah toward retirement. But Meyer did turn around a team that had finished 2-14 the year before and brought them to the playoffs while introducing 21 new faces.

OFFENSE

Passing — Lanky Steve Grogan, with eight years' experience, has regained the starting role, ending long seesaw duel with Matt Cavanaugh. The anticipated quick development of top draftee Tony Eason makes Cavanaugh expendable. They need another swift outside receiver to take pressure off Stanley Morgan, so look for Darryl Wilson, No. 2 pick, or Stephen Starring, No. 3.

Running — Anthony Collins is big threat, catching as well as running, and Mark van Egghen was a pleasant waiver pick-up from the Raiders. Robert Weathers, Most Tatum serve as relief unit, with Vagas Ferguson as spare part.

Blocking — Hannah, perennial All-Pro guard, leaves big void. Bob Cryder steps right in for Hannah. Ron Wooten, Brian Holloway have already established themselves as regulars. Center is Pete Brock.

DEFENSE

Line — Nose tackle Lester Williams, left end Kenneth Smith, rookies last year, are now set for years. Hopefully as many years as Julius Adams, who is 35 and plays like 25 at right end.

Linebacking — Strongest fortified department on team with Steve Nelson, spirited leader, protecting the inside along with Clayton Weisuhnn. On the outside, Don Blackmon and Larry McGrew are starting their third full seasons and developing on schedule.

Secondary — Not many teams are lucky to have four No. 1 draft choices manning their secondary. Mike Haynes and Raymond Clayborn are the corners while Roland James is at strong safety and Rick Sanford at free safety.

Prediction — Third in AFC East with record of 9-7.

details of the No. 1 draft choice's contract, reported to be worth more than $1 million a year for four years.

The 7-4 University of Virginia graduate's agent, Tom Collins, arrived Friday from Los Angeles and immediately went into a meeting with Rockets' president and general manager Ray Patterson.

"I think we're down to talking about significant points that don't necessarily relate to length of contract or base salary," said Patterson. "That certainly doesn't mean they are unimportant points, but I believe, and am hopeful, that they are things that can be discussed and agreed upon very soon."

Patterson said most of the contract terms have been agreed upon.

"I know both sides are working very hard on this, but after you get past the first 95 percent, it's often the last 5 percent which takes the time. It really isn't years or money, per se. It's the whole complexity of the contract," Patterson said.

Officials were optimistic that Sampson would be in rookie camp when it starts Sunday for four days.

Ted Steinberg, an attorney on Sampson's negotiating team, expressed confidence that an agreement would be reached without a lingering battle.

"The Rockets certainly want to get it done, and Ralph is pushing for it, too," Steinberg said.

Bahama Cruise Roll-Off Ends; Sampson To Get Million A Year

The Bahama Cruise roll-off ends this week for all Bowl America Sanford summer league bowlers who qualified during league play by bowling 25 or more pins over their average. The cost is only $4.35, and you could be the lucky winner of the cruise for two. Don't miss it. Your last chance is this weekend and the final squad is Sunday at 7 p.m.

June Plant's, "Ladies Match Point" girls "slaughtered" the pins again this Wednesday. Leading the assault on the pins was Carol Slaughter (pim intended) with a fine 247 game and 574 series. Carol's high scores are becoming a weekly affair. Her average is 174. Marge Strawn rolled a nice 225 game and 539 series. Kathy Hibbard had a 203 game, and Barb Kelly, with a 139 average, rolled a 196 game.

Fall league bowlers should be prepared to knock down 3 pound 6 ounce wood. Our new pins are in and will be installed for fall season starts. The American Bowling Congress has made 3-6 the lightest pins that can be used in sanctioned play effective August 1, 1985, and we're giving our bowlers a head start.

Attention youth bowlers. Our fall league registration will be September 10 from 9 to 11 a.m., and will be followed by a coaches clinic. Our youth program director, Jackie Quick, has enough coaches lined up to provide a coach for every pair of lanes. Bowlers will compete in four divisions. The Meteors, ages 5-8, and the Comets, ages 9-11, will bowl at 10 a.m. on Saturdays; and the Asteroids, ages 12-14, and Satellites, ages 15-18, will bowl at 1 p.m. Each year our youth league bowlers earn enough money to pay for transportation and motel rooms so they can bowl in the Fla. State Tournament. We usually go on Saturday morning, bowl in the afternoon, stay overnight, bowl again on Sunday and return home afterwards. Come on out and join the fun! This year we'll be going to Ocala.

Our youth bowlers completed their summer league and had their "Crazy Bowl" party this week and presented trophies to the winners in each division. In the Asteroid/Satellite division, first place was won by the "4 Sex Symbols" — Vicky Minick, Terri Sue Unger, Vicki Peake and Tina Burgess. First place in the Meteor/Comet division went to the "Bad News Bears." Team members are Michael Dillion, Walter McDonald, Larry Bradley and David Lambert. High Average awards in the Asteroid/Satellite division went to Shannon Allman 146 and Tim Zimmers 185. Heather Schaffer 114 and Jeremy Hartly 115 won the High Average for the Meteor/Comet division. We had a great summer and are now anxiously awaiting the winter season.

Do you keep putting off that short beach vacation every year and keep saying "maybe next year?" We've found a way to solve that at Bowl America Sanford. We have an "Islander Beach Lodge Vacation League" which bowls at 6:30 p.m. Sunday nights. The cost is $6.50 per night and at the end of the season everyone — yes, that's right — everyone in the league spends a 4 day 3 night vacation at the Islander Beach Lodge in New Smyrna. The stay includes a banquet one night and a cocktail party another. If you would like to join this vacation league, the organizational meeting is this Sunday, August 28th at 6 p.m. They already have 8 or 10 teams and are looking for more. Join us for a ball!

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Indoor Soccer Stadium Opens With Kick-a-thon

American Soccer Centers' Indoor Stadium in Longwood officially opened its doors Saturday at 11 a.m. The center, located near the Seminole Pony Baseball complex just off Highway 17-92, opened up with a Kick-a-thon to benefit the Epilepsy Association all day Saturday.

The indoor stadium has all the latest facilities including a regulation size field, artificial turf, an electronic scoreboard, dasher boards with plexi-glass and all games will be videotaped for replay following the games.

In addition, there will be plenty of seating, a concession area and a video game room.

The center will also have 15 straight games on each day from 9 a.m. to midnight. For more information on league play or about the facility call 321-KICK.

May The Better Yacht Win

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The New York Yacht Club Friday withdrew its objections to innovative winged keels on Australia II and Britain's Victory '83, saying, "May the better yacht win" the America's Cup challenger competition.

After four weeks of claiming Australia II's keel was illegal and the boat should be disqualified or have its fins removed, Robert G. Stone, Jr., Commodore of the host NYYC, said: "Questions relating to the keels of Australia II and Victory '83 have been resolved."

"I went out and bought an ice cream," said Lesleigh Green, spokeswoman for Australia II, the top foreign contender.

"We're all delighted," said Executive Director Warren Jones.

But Victory '83 spokesman Jim Alabaster said calmly: "We were never worried. We were quite confident it (the keel) was legal. The Americans were causing all the fuss. We haven't been sitting here biting our nails."

Australia II and Victory '83 begin a best-of-seven series Sunday to select the challenger of the silver trophy the NYYC has held for more than 132 years — sport's longest winning streak.

Reigning champion Dennis Conner also had a reason to celebrate Friday — two wins against two-time cup defender Courageous with John Kollus at the helm. Courageous rallied to clinch the third match by :39 on two legs of a windward-leeward course.

The red-hulled Liberty stretched a one-second edge at the start to a 1:13 lead rounding the fourth mark of the triangular course on Rhode Island Sound. When the first match finished at the fifth buoy, Conner was 1:12 ahead in gusty 17 to 20 knot winds.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Barry Picking Up Strength In Its Travel

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical depression Barry regrouped in the Gulf of Mexico today after a watery trek across Florida and forecasters said conditions were favorable for it to rebuild into a tropical storm again.

"The center has reformed in a large area of showers and thunderstorms and is moving toward the west at 12 mph," the National Hurricane center said. "Highest winds are about 35 mph, mainly in showers and thunderstorms to the south and east of the center."

"The depression is presently undergoing a reformation process. Conditions are favorable for further development and the system was expected to attain tropical storm strength later Saturday."

Currently, the advisory said, the system is in the central Gulf and is only a threat to marine interests.

The National Hurricane Center also was tracking another tropical disturbance developing off the African coast, about 375 miles southwest of the Cape Verde Islands. Forecasters said the disturbance was moving toward the west northwest at 15 mph and could become a depression Saturday.

Bank Given Stiff Fine

FORT LAUDERDALE, (UPI) — The Bank of Nova Scotia must pay a $25,000 fine each day it refuses to turn over records belonging to a suspected drug smuggler, a federal judge has ruled.

The records are located in the bank's branch office in Nassau, Bahamas, and the 200-year-old financial institution says they are protected by the Bahamas Banking Secrets Act.

U.S. District Judge James Paine upheld the daily fine from $500 to $25,000 a day, effective Monday. The bank already had owed $103,000.

"It's about time somebody did something definite. My only concern is to get this bank to turn over the records," Paine said.

Federal officials said the case involving an unidentified subject of a federal grand jury investigation is the first all-out try to force banks with offshore offices to give up records.

Millions In Cocaine Seized

MIAMI (UPI) — Two Highway Patrol Troopers who stopped to help a disabled motorist discovered 500 pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of $150 million inside the vehicle.

Troopers Brad Pelton and Joe Derringer spotted a disabled van at the Golden Glades Interchange where the Florida Turnpike and I-95 meet. They told driver Luis Fernando Villa they would call a tow truck.

FHP Sgt. Ernie Leggett said the troopers asked Villa if he had anything in the back because they needed to know how heavy the van was so they could decide what size tow truck to call.

"The occupant said he was carrying fish. Pelton flashed his light and saw crates covered by duffle bags. He could also see plastic packages through the slats in the crates — and he didn't see any ice to keep fish cold," said Leggett.

When the troopers inspected the crates, they found 500 pounds of cocaine. Villa was charged Friday with drug trafficking.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Andropov Offers To Dismantle Nuke Missiles

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Yuri Andropov has offered to dismantle more than 500 nuclear rockets aimed at Western Europe if the United States cancels plans to install similar missiles in NATO countries.

In an interview in Saturday's editions of Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, Andropov called his offer "a major step" toward reaching an agreement at the Geneva arms control talks between U.S. and Soviet negotiators.

"It is hardly necessary to emphasize the exceptional importance of this new manifestation of good will," the Soviet leader said.

Although Andropov made no basic change in Moscow's stand on nuclear arms, a Western diplomat said his offer was the first time the Soviet Union has agreed to dismantle or destroy missiles in exchange for concessions from the West.

The United States and its NATO allies have threatened to deploy 572 new U.S. cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in Western Europe if there is no agreement in the Geneva negotiations on arms reductions.

Chile Close To Democracy

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Chile moved a step closer to democracy today with the military government's announcement that a state of emergency would end, clearing the way for talks on the country's future with opposition leaders.

The Interior Ministry said Friday that Chile's state of emergency, in effect since the armed forces overthrew the Socialist government of Salvador Allende in 1973, will end at midnight Sunday.

The move effectively restores civil liberties, such as freedom of expression and the right to hold meetings, and re-establishes habeas corpus — thus putting an end to arrests without warrants.

The lifting of the state of emergency also means an end to a curfew that banned cars from the streets between 2 a.m. to 5:30 a.m. on weekdays. A weekend ban remains in effect, however.

...Christensen Continues Fight After

Glascok defended the budget practice, noting that the city utility system is owned by the city and it is common budgeting practice for one fund to pay the other for services.

Glascok added that while the city is empowered by state law to levy a surcharge of 25 percent on the utility bills of customers outside the city, the city actually levies only a 10 percent surcharge.

Glascok said it appears that Mrs. Christensen on behalf of the county is attempting to pressure Casselberry into selling the county the General Waterworks system it owns in the unincorporated area.

Mrs. Christensen has mentioned that the county might be interested in purchasing the city owned General Waterworks system to protect customers in the unincorporated areas.

Glascok denied that the city is attempting to levy a franchise fee on either city or unincorporated utility customers.

Glascok said the city held three separate public hearings before it adopted an ordinance raising the sewer rates and currently the second full billing cycle using those rates has been completed.

Glascok admits the rates are high. Pointing to the sewage bill at his own home, Glascok said before the new rates went into effect, his bill was a flat $9.25 per month for sewer service. "But regulatory agencies said we could no longer use a flat rate, we also had to use some type of variable so that not one class of people would absorb the cost of sewage," he said.

The new sewer rate, the mayor said, is $7.40 per residential connection plus $1.47 for every 1,000 gallons of water used, Glascok said. He added that the engineering study showed that 70 percent of the water used in a household goes into the sewer system. After the first month of the new rates, he said his home bill went to $22.10 and when more water was used for the lawn the second month his sewer bill climbed to $39.74.

"If more water is going to be used outside, sewer bills will be higher, he said.

The city law allows households which do a lot of outside watering to have an irrigation meter installed at a cost of $100, Glascok said. If this is done the water used outside will be charged at the rate of 60 cents per 1,000 gallons.

"The rates had to go up to pay the costs of the city using the transmission line and the Iron Bridge sewer plant. We had no choice," Glascok said.

...Magnum Is New Lake Mary Police Dog

Magnum has already got his paws wet as a police dog by searching a few buildings where burglar alarms have gone off and police thought a suspect might be hiding. In each case, the building turned out to be empty.

Belfiore said when a police dog is used to hunt suspects in a building, the officers always announce beforehand in a loud voice that they are going to release a dog, to give the suspect a chance to surrender first.

Using trained dogs to search buildings "minimizes the risk for officers," said Belfiore.

"K-9's are great for law enforcement," said Belfiore. "They can do things we humans can't do" — track down bad guys and sniff out drugs that have been buried or concealed in some other manner.

Magnum is now undergoing training to sniff out drugs and will eventually be able to search out cocaine, heroin and marijuana. If any public school in Seminole County wanted it done, Magnum could walk through the school corridors and search the students' lockers for drugs, Belfiore said.

Belfiore said when a K-9 is used for attack or crowd control functions, the handler usually tries to get the dog excited so he will growl and snarl and bark.

"The growling and snarling alone is a great deterrent to crime," he said.

Detective Picou said K-9s are trained to physically attack a suspect only in emergency situations such as when a suspect attacks the officer or the dog. "You could compare ordering the dog to bite someone to using your fire arm. You would only do it as a last resort," said Picou.

German shepherds are "by far the best all-around dog for police work. They are very intelligent, have excellent memories and are highly versatile. Blood hounds might be better at tracking, but the German shepherd is better in all other areas," said Belfiore.

Even among German shepherds, only a very few, maybe one dog out of twenty-five, is suitable for police work.

"The dog has to have enough courage and ability to do what has to be done. Some dogs are never aggressive enough for this kind of work."

Detective Picou recalls an Orlando police department K-9 who went under a wood frame building to find a suspect. The suspect shot the German shepherd, but the dog continued to chase him and the suspect was apprehended, Picou said.

The Lake Mary police department became the first police force in Seminole County to acquire a K-9 unit when it brought in Dennis in 1976. The Altamonte Springs police department is now having a couple of German shepherds trained and will soon have its own K-9 corps.

Fearless and aggressive tough though they may be on duty, a police dog can be a real pussy cat when he hangs up his badge.

After 10-year-old Dennis "retired" from active duty with the Lake Mary police in 1979, Picou took the dog home to live with his family.

"Dennis had a dual personality. He was only aggressive if you told him to be," said Picou. "He got along well with everybody, including the neighbors."

"He would get down on the floor and play with kids. I used to take him to the playground at an elementary school and he would slide down the slide and play fetch with the little kids. He was very gentle."

Dennis loved to visit Picou's brother who owned a three-acre spread near Longwood where he could romp. Finally, after a long and happy retirement, Dennis died peacefully.

"We all miss him," said Picou.

...'Bud' Feather

The property is heavily wooded, Feather said, and plans are to save as many trees as possible.

Feather filed his first conflict of interest in December, 1980 within a month of taking office. He filed 24 in 1981, 8 in 1982 and 7 so far this year.

State law requires elected officials to vote on every issue before the board on which they are serving except in cases of conflict of interest. In those cases where the official expects to receive financial benefit from his vote, he may abstain from voting or vote whichever he sees fit, but he is required to file a conflict of interest form denoting in what fashion the conflict exists.

During the 1983 session of the Florida Legislature, state Rep. Carl Selph, R-Casselberry, attempted to get through legislation forbidding elected officials from voting on matters where a conflict of interest exists. He was not successful in getting his legislation passed.

However, he said at the time that he will file the same legislation and try again for passage in the 1984 session.

Dog Seized In Cruelty Probe Dead

The state attorney's office said it is preparing animal cruelty charges against the owner of an Oviedo area kennel after a diseased dog seized at the kennel died.

The Doberman pinscher died late Thursday night, a few hours after officials seized it and eight other animals at the Snow Hill Kennels and Plant Farm, located on County Road 426 near Oviedo.

Assistant state attorney Kathy Simcoe said Friday she is preparing animal cruelty charges against Laurian Spankie, owner of the kennel. Spankie could face nine cruelty charges, with each charge carrying a maximum sentence of one year in county jail and a $1,000 fine.

Officials from the Seminole County Animal Control, the Humane Society of Seminole County and the Seminole County sheriff's department served a search warrant on the kennel Thursday afternoon and searched the kennel and other nearby buildings, including Ms. Spankie's residence.

They seized eight dogs and an undernourished kitten.

Carol Cook, shelter manager for the Humane Society, said officials found abused and neglected animals living in "deplorable, unbelievable conditions." She said the animals were "filthy and ungroomed."

Two Doberman pinschers that were confiscated were kept at the offices of a Casselberry veterinarian and the other animals were taken to the Humane Society.

One of the Dobermans died late Thursday night shortly after it was fed, apparently of heart failure, the veterinarian said.

The other Doberman suffers from a skin disease and will probably be put to sleep, Mrs. Cook said.

After seizing the animals Thursday, Animal Control officials revoked Ms. Spankie's license, barring her from boarding animals commercially.

Mrs. Cook said numerous complaints about the kennel have been made over the years.

Astronauts Head For Launch Site; Blast Off Set For Tuesday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The crew of the shuttle Challenger, including the first American black to travel in space, flies to the spaceport in three jet trainers today to begin final preparations for what should be a spectacular pre-dawn launch Tuesday.

Richard Truly, Daniel Brandenstein, Dale Gardner, William Thornton and Gulon Bluford — the first American black assigned to a space flight — planned to leave Ellington Air Force Base near Houston before dawn in sleek white T-38 jets.

The countdown was scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. EDT Saturday at the T-minus 46 hours mark. In addition to the 46 hours of planned flight preparations, there are 13 hours and 15 minutes of rest periods scheduled throughout the countdown.

The astronauts are to blast off at 2:15 a.m. Tuesday and, as a result, they have been following an early-to-bed, early-to-rise schedule for the past few days to get acclimated to working at night.

It will be the first night launch for the big winged space freighter and NASA predicts people within 450 miles of the space center will be able to see the ship climb into space if the skies are clear.

"There's no doubt in anybody's mind that if you've got a clear line of sight, you're going to see it," spokesman Jim Ball said Friday.

The orange flame, created by the twin solid propellant boosters, will be visible for about two minutes. After that, Ball said a "blue glow" from Challenger's main hydrogen-burning engines might be seen for a few minutes.

The Challenger, making its third flight, also is scheduled to land at night. Technicians will use large floodlights to illuminate the Edwards Air Force

Crowds Mourn Aquino

TARLAC, Philippines (UPI) — A hearse bearing Benigno Aquino's body Saturday drove slowly past thousands of mourners on the way to his home province a day after protests rocked Manila over the Filipino opposition leader's assassination.

With mourners quietly lining both sides of the 77-mile route, the hearse at times slowed to a crawl in the congested traffic.

No incidents were reported as the procession passed along the Philippines-American Friendship Highway from the capital of Manila.

All Souls School: Business As Usual

"The place is buzzing like a bee hive - business as usual," Ellen Vienotte, principal of All Souls Catholic School, Sanford, cheerfully commented on the first day of school Wednesday.

About 250 students have registered to attend grades K-8 at the parochial school, Miss Vienotte says. "The kids seem happy and glad to be back." All Souls School starts in August every year when the weather is still hot and humid but the air conditioned rooms take the heat out of learning for the enthusiastic students.

Miss Vienotte notes that several changes have been made this term. There are no school buses and parents have to arrange transportation for the children. The school now has a fulltime coach, Miss Vienotte says, and he is getting a soccer team together. New textbooks have been added to the present books and mini-courses (arts and crafts) will be conducted on Fridays for grades 5-8. A new foreign language course is being offered to students in the seventh and eighth grades.

"It was interesting to see how much the little people have grown," Miss Vienotte says, adding the first three grades used tape measures to verify their growth since the spring semester ended.

There were no problems at All Souls on the first day of school except minor traffic congestion, Miss Vienotte says. The new church pastor, Father William Autherrieth joined the students in the Pledge of Allegiance.

The teachers are beginning to decorate and are sprucing up their classrooms, Miss Vienotte says, for the open house to be held on Sept. 8.

All in all, it was business as usual on the first day - a real busy day in any language.

Students line up for opening day assembly.

Concert Association Launches Membership Drive

Norman Luboff is bringing his choir to Lake Mary Oct. 27

George W. Foster is a banker from way back. The personable branch manager of the South Seminole office of Flagship Bank of Seminole, has also had a finger in the cultural climate of the community, both in Seminole County and Orange County when he was on the Board of Directors for Florida Symphony Orchestra. Today, he is the recently elected president of Seminole Community Concert Association, the former Seminole Mutual Concert Association.

The SCCA has had its ups and downs since its inception in 1938 when it was organized through the efforts of Mrs. A.M. Philips, president of the Woman's Club of Sanford at the time.

But the concert association has survived through thick and thin and today is very much alive, thanks to community support.

This year, for the first time, the association subscribed to the services offered by Community Concerts of New York in order to provide the highest quality of performing artists for concert association members.

The 1983-84 membership drive will get underway Monday at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce building at the regularly scheduled meeting of the SCCA board of directors. Foster says, when a Community Concerts representative from New York will be on hand to help launch the drive.

Foster says that three "excellent concerts" have been booked for the season. The concerts will be held at Lake Mary High School, beginning at 8 p.m.

He explains that members of the SCCA get first option to attend the Champagne Ball, an annual glittering gala designed as a fund-raiser for the non-profit SCCA. Invitations to the ball, scheduled Dec. 3, at the Sanford Civic Center, are extended to non members of SCCA.

The Norman Luboff Choir with an artistic range unparalleled in all of vocal music, will kick off the concert season on Thursday, Oct. 27. Concert patrons are likely to hear a Bach chorale and a Beethoven tune in the same program with equal artistry and understanding.

Every composer speaks to his audience in his own personal way, and if he has genius, he will move the listener whether it is with a soft flowing line or the driving force of a rock beat.

Norman Luboff combines all the aspects of "good music" and chooses his singers accordingly. Versatility is a prerequisite of being a member of this unique chorus. Unpredictability is the essence of their programming.

With over 50 LP's, a decade of highly successful concert engagements and a host of television appearances to its credit, the Norman Luboff Choir is unquestionably the leader in the field today.

The second concert in the series, Empire Brass Quintet, will be presented on Saturday, Jan. 14, 1984. The quintet is a chamber ensemble whose performances and recordings have heralded international critical acclaim.

Winners of the 1976 Naumburg Chamber Music Award and the 1980 Harvard Musical Society Prize, the quintet has performed for Queen Elizabeth, the President of the United States at Carnegie Hall's 90th Anniversary.

Empire Brass has made three highly successful European tours and, in 1979, the group was invited to tour the Soviet Union on behalf of the United States State Department. Plans for the coming season include tours of the Orient and South America.

The group has been Quintet-in-Residence at Boston University since 1975 and members teach an annual

In And Around Lake Mary

Anna Decker Honored At 79th Birthday Party

It was quite a surprise to Lake Mary resident Anna Mae Decker when she walked into the fellowship hall of the United Presbyterian Church Aug. 4.

As she entered the hall to what she thought was just another ladies' meeting, 25 of her dearest friends jumped out and shouted, "surprise," and began singing, "Happy Birthday."

Anna Mae, who turned 79 on Aug. 4, joined in the singing until she realized that everyone was singing to her.

Earlier in the day, good friend Arolyn Truj who had planned the surprise party along with helper Dee Smith, had beautifully decorated the church hall with pink and white tablecloths and added the final touches with pink carnation centerpieces provided by Anna Mae's daughter, Verna Lou Decker.

Arolyn, who is a young 83 years old herself, had secretly prepared delicate chicken and cucumber tea sandwiches, water chestnuts wrapped in bacon slices, and two homemade carrot cakes, Anna Mae's favorites. Serving the array of delicious goodies were Betty Dedman, Dee Smith and Mary Jane Duryea.

"It was so hard keeping all this a secret from Anna Mae with all the flowers and goodies hiding at my home," said Arolyn, "but it was worth it. Everyone had a wonderful time." Happy Birthday, Anna Mae.

Every August, the Keenager Club of the Forest Mobile Home Community, finds a special way to cool off. Sunday, Aug. 21, a do-it-yourself Ice Cream Social was held by the club members, community residents and guests.

Karen Warner

A committee made up of Damon and Bunny Smith, Ashel and Crolyn Miller, Charles and Elsie Ashe, Tom and Zell Aiken, Al and Margaret Ness, along with social events chairmen Mae and Nellie McCarthy, purchased and served over 200 ice cream sundaes before the day was over.

Lines of hungry "customers" had formed at the door of the clubhouse waiting for the social to start at 2:30 p.m. Each person who entered was given either chocolate or vanilla ice cream in a bowl, a spoon and of course, a napkin, then sent over to a table of delicious toppings.

The guests were able to choose from nuts, fresh strawberries, hot fudge or butterscotch, and help themselves.

According to Fran Clarey, a Keenager spokesperson, everyone had a wonderful time.

Bob and Evelyn Donaldson of Lake Mary had a fantastic family reunion on Aug. 6 at their home. The couple's son, David, wife, June, and grandchildren, Amy and Mary Jane, came in from St. Louis, Mo.

Their son, Larry, wife, Marsha, grandchildren, Chris and Leslie Ann, all came in from Pensacola. Their son, Pat, with wife, Mary Beth, came in from the Baptist Theological Seminary in New Orleans. Their daughter, Barbara, and husband, Allen Edmonds, grandchildren, Kristy Kay and Millesa Sue, came from Sanford, and joined the Donaldsons along with Grandma Barbara, nephew, Chuck, and his friend, Nancy Ramsey.

The day included a great deal of fellowship, memories and a cookout. Following the dinner, Ed and Laurie June with children, Eric and Chris from Deland, and Lee and Nadine Loughram from Lake Mary, all dropped in for dessert. According to Evelyn, it was quite a day.

The Community Improvement Association (CIA) of Lake Mary met on Monday evening Aug. 22. One area of discussion was on setting the date for the 1984 Grand Prix Street Races.

For the last two years, the CIA has sponsored a go-kart Grand Prix. In conjunction with the Florida Go-Kart Association, Bob Thompson, co-ordinator for the Florida Circuit, has given the CIA the green light for the Third Annual Florida State Grand Prix.

Subject to final approval of both the local authorities and NCR, the site of the previous two races, the race dates are set for Jan. 21-22, 1984.

Birthday Wishes are sent to Grace Guthell, Jerry Wise, Dick Fess, Vern Feddersen, Wayne Hoffman, Mary Jane Duryea, Cindy Dale, Roy Warner, Evelyn Donaldson, Barbara Gorman, all celebrating August birthdays.

Happy Anniversaries to Cindy and Dennis Brown.

Mom Barking Up Wrong Branch Of Family Tree

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem and don't want to ask anybody else because it is too embarrassing. I have an 8-year-old son and I am not sure who his father is. It's either my husband or his brother. As you can probably guess, I had an affair with my husband's brother. He's now happily married, and there is nothing between us, but I have to know whether he is my son's father or not. My husband and his brother look a lot alike and my son resembles both of them.

How can I find out for sure without making any trouble? If my husband ever found out I was asking such a question, he would kill me, so please print your answer.

Dear Abby

MY SECRET DEAR SECRET: Please, do your whole family a favor and assume that your husband is the father of your son. In order to determine paternity you would need the cooperation of both your brother-in-law, who is now happily married, and your husband, who is happily without suspicions.

Leave it that way.

DEAR ABBY: Last Sunday my niece and I attended a lavish wedding. I was served an enormous steak and was able to eat only a small portion of it. It was especially delicious — too good to throw out — so I asked the waiter for a "doggie" bag and he obliged willingly.

When my niece saw me put the uneaten portion of my steak into the bag, she flipped her lid, saying it was outrageous and I had embarrassed her.

I told her it was done in all the best restaurants, and she said it was permissible in restaurants, but not at weddings.

Dear Abby, what is your opinion?

ROSE, BRONX, N.Y. DEAR ROSE: It's permissible anywhere. Tell your niece to mind her own business.

DEAR ABBY: My husband thinks the way to teach a child a lesson is to do to the child whatever the child does to you. "If you tear up something of mine that I worked for, I will tear up something of yours that you like."

So he took a knife and sliced the tires of our 5-year-old daughter's bike because she tried to get a fly out of our air-conditioner and accidentally bent the coils.

I told him he was guilty of child abuse and he needed counseling. He said I was the one who needed counseling.

That incident has changed my feelings toward him. Should I seek counseling with my children alone? Or should I give him an ultimatum — either he goes for counseling and learns how to be a proper father, or the children and I are leaving?

CLEVELAND MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your husband needs counseling, but don't give him an ultimatum or you might force a decision that would be unfortunate for all concerned. You and the children should have family counseling to learn how to handle a very ignorant, misguided and possibly unstable man. In time, it is to be hoped, your husband will join the family counseling session.

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

On Wednesdays from 7-8 p.m. there will be an "Exercise Together," an informal exercise time, at the parish house, Fourth Street and Magnolia Avenue. On Fridays from 7-8 p.m. a "Fast Walk-Jog Together" is scheduled beginning from the parking lot behind the Seminole Community College baseball field. For more information call 323-2866.

First Presbyterian Hires Organist-Choir Director

Rick Ross, principal vocal coach and accompanist for the Orlando Opera Company and formerly organist at Park Lake Presbyterian Church, Orlando, is the new organist-choir director at First Presbyterian Church, Sanford.

Rick Ross

Dean of the Central Florida Chapter, American Guild of Organists, he is an accomplished pianist as well and has made many solo appearances with the Dallas Civic Symphony, the Hamilton (Ohio) Symphony, and the Boca Raton Symphony.

A native of Dallas, he began his musical training at age five with piano study. A graduate of Edgewater High School, Orlando, he has actively pursued excellence at piano and organ since high school days. A full scholarship student at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Ross studied organ with Robert Anderson. While there, he won many prizes in national organ competitions, including first prize in the Mader Memorial Organ Competition in Los Angeles.

He also placed among the four finalists in the 1980 Grand Prix de Chartres, and thereby was among those presented in concert at the famed Cathedral of Chartres, France.

While doing graduate work with pianist David Bar-Illan at the University of Cincinnati, Ross was awarded an appearance with the conservatory orchestra, for which he performed Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto with Samuel Gerhard conducting.

Petra: Christian Rockers 'On A Roll'

LAKE BUENA VISTA — The lead singer jumps up among the drums, marking the driving beat with solid "thwacks" on a wood block. Heavy bass pours from the instrument of another band member. The lead guitar screams.

Hands clap, arms wave, and sons and daughters bounce to the beat on daddies' knees.

If this is Christian ministry, then the group must be Petra, contemporary gospel's hottest youth act, which will be bringing its high-energy show to "Night of Joy" at the Walt Disney World Magic Kingdom Sept. 10. Petra will be joined on the 8:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. program by Leon Patille, Shirley Caesar, Scott Wesley Brown, Benny Hester band, Phil Keagy, David Meece and Sheila Walsh.

"We want to show the non-believer that Christians can have a good time, that they get excited, and are sometimes even a little rowdy," says Petra founder/songwriter Bob Hartman. "Then we definitely try to bring our audience into praise and worship."

The group has become an overnight success after some 10 years of struggle. Its current album, "More Power To Ya," has become the largest selling Christian rock album of all time, and its "More Power To Ya" tour has played to nearly a quarter of a million fans — including more than 80 sellouts — since September 1982.

With album sales of nearly 200,000 this year, Petra has equalled its album sales popularity of the previous 10 years combined.

"God placed a vision in our hearts 10, 12 years ago," says Mark Hollingsworth, who acts as the group's tour director and promotion manager. "We stayed true to that vision — through pure tenacity. And now people have begun to take note of that vision."

The appeal to an audience centered on teen-age America derives from a sound and an energy level comparable, ac-ording to Hollingsworth, to groups such as Journey, Foreigner and Loverboy. The difference is the lyrics.

"We want to convey that Jesus isn't some old fogey, but somebody who can be very helpful in our lives," Hollingsworth says.

The group talks about food for the soul in the form of everything from "encouragement" to a "kick in the pants" to "love."

The message has not remained isolated within the limits of contemporary gospel concerts and radio shows.

"Some secular stations — notably in Oklahoma City, San Antonio, Nashville, Denver and Chicago — have added us into their rotation," Hollingsworth says.

A producer who works with "major secular record companies" has responded to the group's popularity with a proposal to produce an album — "provided we change some of our lyrics to make them less obvious," Hollingsworth says.

"We told them to call back when they are ready to deal on our terms."

Petra's terms? Psalm 33:3 — "Sing unto Him a new song, play skillfully with a loud noise."

Advance tickets are available at Sears retail stores and selected religious book stores throughout Central Florida.

Memorial Garden

Work parties composed of volunteers are busy Saturday mornings planting shrubs, flowers and grass for Holy Cross Episcopal Church's new Memorial Garden, which they plan to dedicate on Sept. 18. Photographed on the job last week were (from left) Ross Wontenay, chairman of the project, Ed Coker with tiller, Bob Sonnenberg and Meg Newman. The walled garden was built and landscaped with donations from members and will be available to parish families for interring cremains. There will be no markers, but records will be kept in the church.

Lutherans Plan School-Center

A $500,000 pledge from the Duda Foundation, Oviedo, helped boost the $2 million campaign for a new junior-senior high school and Lutheran Community Center launched by the Lutheran High School Association of Central Florida. The site of the new campus will be on Econlockhatchee Trail across from Valencia Community College East Campus just off Highway 50 and near the East-West Expressway.

An additional 20-acre plot was recently purchased to add to the 20 acres held since 1980 as a permanent location for Orlando's Luther High. The four-year school has been tentatively using facilities at Prince of Peace Lutheran Church in Azalea Park.

Plans for the facility call for a mall-type building that is "distinctive, yet practical and beautiful," according to architect Gerald R. Gross, with offices in Sanford.

Fund raising efforts are under the direction of the Rev. Robert A. Grunow and Associates. In addition to the Duda Foundation pledge, another advance pledge was received from Dr. and Mrs. Robert Cade of Gainesville for $100,000. At a recent kickoff gathering, Mrs. Ruth Vorpapel of Longwood, representing Aid Association for Lutherans, presented the association with a $70,200 check as a matching funds gift from the annual Lutheran High Cornfest sponsored by local AAL branches.

Michael Hass, vice president of Cardinal Industries, Orlando, is president of the high school association board. The Rev. Edward Visscher is executive director of the association.

Lutherans Post Theses For Peace

By David E. Anderson
UPI Religion Writer

The Protestant Reformation is generally marked as beginning with Martin Luther's nailing of his 95 Theses to the door of the Wittenberg (East Germany) Castle Church in 1517.

Recently a group of 21 people from five nations — mostly the United States — re-enacted Luther's act by posting their own "95 Theses" to the Castle Church to mark the 500th anniversary of Luther's birth.

Luther, in his theses, was concerned with church abuses, especially the sale of indulgences — the remission of punishment for sins — but his 20th century followers put their stress on peace.

"We pledge ourselves to oppose all weapons of mass destruction by any means compatible with the gospel and to oppose further escalation of the nuclear arms race through the deployment of the cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in Europe," the group declared in one of its theses.

The group, sponsored by Lutheran World Ministries, ranged in age from 18 to 79. It included several members of the U.S. Lutheran Peace Fellowship as well as people from Canada, Sweden, France and Finland.

Their action underscored the growing convergence of the peace movement and the churches, not only in the United States but in Europe as well.

And while Protestant churches in the last several years have been moving to a more explicit stance in opposition to the arms race, the Roman Catholic bishops' widely publicized "peace pastoral" has sharpened and encouraged that participation.

The United Church of Christ, for example, at its General Synod in June took another step toward identifying itself with the "historic peace churches," saying it will develop itself as a "peace-making church" with a structure and theological justification for peace activities.

The influence of the Roman Catholic bishops' peace pastoral has also been pervasive.

In June, for example, the executive council of the Episcopal Church resolved that its members would study the pastoral along with their denomination's own statement, "To Make Peace," and urged all Episcopalians to do the same.

And when the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) meets in convention in September, delegates will have before them a resolution urging members of that denomination to study the Catholic statement.

The resolution, approved by the Disciples' General Board, calls the Catholic pastoral "a major statement that illuminates the role of Christians in giving moral guidance to policy makers."

The Western Lutheran group, gathered in East Germany, where the church has emerged as the focal point of one of the rare independent peace movements in communist-dominated nations, made one of its "theses" the pledge "to dare to trust, to refuse to hate the one called 'the enemy.'"

"The body of Christ is stronger than any nationalistic symbols," said Thomas Witt, 26, director of the winter camp program at the Christian community in Holden Village, Wash. "If we aim these weapons at one another, we are aiming it at our own body — if we are the body of Christ."

The group did not complete its last thesis on purpose, thus making it a half thesis. It says:

"Peace is more than the absence of war. It is the presence of justice. As long as there is injustice in the world, the work of peace is incomplete."

Hasidics Return to Jewishness

The man was going to spend Friday night at the rabbi's house. The two had walked home together from Sabbath services and the rabbi was now showing the man to the guest room.

As he entered the room the man reached for the light switch and turned it on. The rabbi let out a noise like "oi yoi yoi, nononono."

The guest had broken one of the strict rules of Hasidic Jews which bans the use of all mechanical devices in a Hasidic home on the Sabbath.

From sunset Friday to sunset Saturday, members of this fundamentalist Jewish sect cannot ride in automobiles, elevators or any other mechanically run conveyance.

They can eat but they cannot cook so everything is prepared Friday afternoon. They cannot carry anything in their pockets. They cannot transact any business. They cannot write with pen or pencil. They cannot use the telephone.

"At first it was hard not to answer the phone when it rang on the Sabbath," says Mrs. Leonard Berger of Brooklyn, N.Y., whose family became affiliated with the Hasidic sect two years ago.

"Now it's wonderful to realize we don't have to answer the phone. The peace and quiet is wonderful."

In a day when most people are trying to un-complicate their lives, the Hasidic Jew seems to be deliberately complicating his. By embracing Jewish traditions and rituals which most Jews have discarded as too burdensome, the happy Hasidic Jew is a puzzle even to many of his fellow Jews.

How can he find joy in something that is anathema to so many others of his faith?

"Look at it this way," a rabbi of the Hasidic sect once said to me. "If you are carrying a sack of bricks up a hill, it is a burden. If you could lighten your load, you would. But if you are carrying a sack of diamonds weighing the same as the bricks, you are happy and you would gladly take on even more."

"It is not the weight, it is a matter of knowing what you carry. Like the diamonds our faith is precious to us."

Many Jewish sociologists interpret the American Jew's rejection of Jewishness in the 1920s and '30s as a "matter of survival." Because his Sabbath was on a different day than everybody else's, he couldn't find a job which would enable him to observe it. So he violated the Sabbath to stay alive.

Once he did this, other things fell by the wayside. There was a rush to assimilate — to join the American mainstream.

There has now been a turning point — a trend toward cultivating Jewish life and against assimilation. The Hasidic movement has been a leader in this change.

The modern Hasidic movement dates from 1750 in Poland. Opposition to Jewish rationalism and the scholarly pursuit of Talmudic wisdom brought a revival of the strict, pious practices and mysticism of an earlier Hasidism which flourished briefly in the third century B.C.

The 18th century Hasidic Jews added rhythm, song and dance to their religious rituals. A new emphasis was put on the power of ecstatic prayer and the joy of mystical experience.

Hasidism thrived in Eastern Europe until the early 20th century. Then came the Nazi holocaust. As the Hasidics were led to the death camps, they sang and danced but the concentration camps virtually silenced the Hasidic movement.

Many of those who survived moved to the United States and settled in Brooklyn, where today they number more than 75,000.

Hasidic children spend up to 10 hours a day at school. All morning they study the Torah. In the afternoon, they do the required public school curriculum.

The more conservative Hasidic sects watch no TV and don't go to movies. Virtually none of the children attend college, which is considered a corrupting influence.

While the Hasidic population is small, it is worldwide. As one rabbi says, "Wherever you go in the world, you will find two things: Hasidism and Coca-Cola."

Bombed Bible Society Gets New Beirut Home

NEW YORK, N.Y. (ABS) — Dodging bombs and bullets has long been a way of life for Bible Society workers in Beirut.

Eight years of almost uninterrupted war have put their lives in danger, meant separation from families, days and nights spent in shelters, and having to go for long periods without essential services such as electricity.

Yet, because the Bible Society staff are so dedicated to their mission, the work has never come to a complete halt.

Last February, Bible Society premises were totally wrecked when a car bomb went off in the street outside, killing 22 passersby and injuring 230 others. Just minutes before, the Bible Society office and bookstore had closed for the day.

Despite the devastation, and at great personal risk, many people in the neighborhood rallied to save the precious Scriptures from further damage by fire or leaking water pipes.

At that time the head of the Bible Society in Lebanon, the Reverend Lucien Accad, appealed to all those around the world who believed in the Bible cause for support through their prayers.

Now, the Society has found a new home in Beirut. It will enable the staff to keep copies of God's Word flowing even more freely to where they are so sorely needed throughout Lebanon.

Their task is to make sure that Scriptures in local languages are readily accessible, many of which are needed by people whose lives have been tragically upset by the war.

Draft Resister Gets One-Year Sentence

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A 21-year-old college student, convicted of failing to register with the military selective service system, was sentenced Friday to one year and one day in prison.

Samuel Eakes Matthews of Cincinnati, who recently completed his junior year at Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., was sentenced by U.S. District Court Judge Carl Rubin.

The judge, who had found Matthews guilty July 14, could have imposed a sentence of up to five years in prison.

Matthews said he hadn't registered because, "I have to be consistent in following the leading of Christ, wherever that takes me."

Although raised as a Quaker, Matthews recently became a Baptist. He said he intends to enter "some kind of ministry, probably some kind of pastoral ministry, but that calling isn't clear yet."

His attorney, Allen Brown, argued during the trial Matthews shouldn't be convicted because he always notified selective service system officials of his whereabouts.

Although Matthews objected to registering for a possible military draft on religious grounds, he never hid from draft officials, contended Brown.

However, David Cox, a selective service official, testified that "notification" of a person's age and address doesn't constitute "registration."

"The key to us is having the certification that the information is correct and the certification that the person wants to register," said Cox, who noted the law requires young men to "submit to registration."

Chinatown Upset Over Murderer's Sentence

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Chinatown community expressed disappointment and anger Friday over a jury's decision not to execute convicted murderer Benjamin Ng for his part in the brutal slaying of 13 people at a local gambling club.

Ng, 20, an immigrant from Hong Kong, was given a mandatory life term without possibility of parole late Thursday when an eight-man, four-woman jury failed to reach a unanimous decision on a death penalty. The jury found Ng guilty Wednesday of aggravated first-degree murder.

People in Chinatown "are really mad," said Moses Kay, a well-known Chinatown figure who is retired from the Seattle police department. "They wanted to see him hang by the neck until he was dead. Thirteen people is a lot of people to kill."

Ng, who immigrated seven years ago to the United States with his family, was one of three men charged in the robbery and mass slaying at the Wah Mee gambling club in February.

Co-defendant Kwan Fat "Willie" Mak, 22, is scheduled to go on trial Sept. 12. Willie Wai Chiu "Tony" Ng, 26, no relation to Benjamin Ng, remains at large.

Shun Lin Wong Ng, mother of the defendant, told jurors Thursday about an incident in Hong Kong when Benjamin Ng, as a five-year-old, was beaten into unconsciousness by a woman with a stick. Defense attorneys argued that Ng's judgment was impaired by brain damage.

While the family of the defendant expressed relief, survivors of the 13 Chinese-Americans shot to death at the Wah Mee club were unhappy the death penalty wasn't imposed.

"I'm very disappointed," said Linda Ma, 26, who lost both of her parents in the Wah Mee slayings. "I still think he should have gotten the death penalty. He deserves to die. He killed both of my parents."

The mass slaying took place in the early morning hours of Feb. 19 at a clandestine gambling club in the heart of Seattle's Chinatown.
