

Mail-Order Houses Will Soon Sell Gold

Editor's Note: Americans are being bombarded by advertisements for gold bullion and some economists are predicting U.S. consumers will spend $5 billion on the precious metal in the first few months of 1975. Here, in the first of two articles, is a look at the mechanics of gold buying.

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Retailers, refiners, bankers and brokers are gearing up for what could be a billion-dollar business boom: the first legal sale of gold bullion to Americans in 41 years.

Starting Dec. 31, U.S. citizens will be able to buy, sell and trade gold, not only in the form of jewelry or industrial products, but also as shiny gold bars.

Some economists predict Americans will spend up to $5 billion on gold — now worth between $170 and $180 an ounce — in the first few months of 1975. That would be a little less than a sixth of what consumers will spend on automobiles in all of 1974.

Government planners are more cautious. They estimate that Americans will buy about $600 million worth of gold next year.

There are no federal standards on the purity of gold offered for sale or on just who can sell it. Nor is there any federal agency to regulate gold trading or license sellers.

However, banks already under regulation by the Federal Reserve Board, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC), are bound by certain rules. The three agencies announced recently that savings and loan associations will not be allowed to deal in gold.

The agencies also attempted to discourage commercial banks from dealing in gold. The Federal Reserve Board said gold cannot be used to satisfy its requirements for reserves which banks must keep to back up deposits; it said it would not assay or store gold for member banks; and it announced it would not accept gold as collateral for loans to member banks.

Stock brokers, which also are planning to sell gold, are under regulation by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Here are some questions and answers about the basic mechanics:

Q. Where can I buy gold?
A. All over the country. Retail stores, banks, stock brokers and some mail-order houses will be selling gold. Refiners like Engelhard Minerals & Chemical Corp. and Handy and Harman will be selling gold ingots, or bars, through a variety of outlets; coin dealers and jewelry stores also have made plans to market the metal.

The Signs Say No, But Parking Near Dog Track Legal

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer
LONGWOOD — Ten signs, warning "no parking," are posted along the one-half mile stretch of Seminola Boulevard from SR 427 to U.S. 17-92, although ordinances annexing the roadway and banning on-street and road shoulder parking are not yet law.

The ordinance as an emergency matter, mentioned only concern with parking by Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club (SOKC) patrons.

whose vehicle was towed away of $25 for redeeming it. The towing services that would get the business would be determined by a rotation list, he said, that includes any property insured company that operates 24 hours daily and has a wrecker truck of sufficient size.

Courts Ignore Tape Machines

Sanford Circuit Court hasn't ordered a $4,500 recorder to keep a record of court proceedings because officials apparently prefer a high-priced court reporter at $18,000 to $22,000 a year, an official said today.

Florida courts are experimenting with the machine, which is designed to supplement rather than replace court reporters, according to Court Administrator James Ueberhorst.

judicial district, said the machine is used when a district has a deficit of court reporters which isn't the case in Sanford.

Unemployment Rate Climbs

The rate for December is expected to continue to climb with the lay-off of 74 workers at Stromberg-Carlson Corp., which will also furlough another 575 for two weeks starting Dec. 23.

The estimated number of jobs here in November was 3,900 as compared to 1,900 in November of 1973.

violation of Florida's Public Records Law. "Everything that goes on is brought in to public record."

Board Warned On Records Law

Seminole School Board Attorney Douglas Stenstrom has warned school officials they are in violation of Florida law if the press is not given copies of all items available to board members.

In the past, the board has prepared press packets which omitted items which board members discussed during regular meetings.

Cattlemen Renew Interest In Texas Longhorn Beef

EDITOR'S NOTE — The era of the Texas Longhorn ended at the turn of the century. But now some cattlemen, losing money on other breeds, are showing interest in the easy-to-raise Longhorns.

By JOHN LUMPKIN
Associated Press Writer
GOLIAD, Tex. (AP) — Scores of muscular Texas Longhorns roam the ankle-deep Bermuda grass at the Copa de Vino ranch while their owner promotes them as a solution to some of the problems of the American beef farmer.

"These cattle are not God's ultimate gift to the cowboy, but they are God's gift and they have been forgotten and their genetic potential untapped," says Walter B. Scott, 42.

A light rain has dampened the flat, carefully cultivated pastures at Scott's ranch. The 500 Longhorns in his fields are sleek and well-fed, noticeably healthier than the bony bovines portrayed in Westerns and in cowboy paintings.

Scott's small Longhorn herd is one of the largest in the world. The breed was nearly extinct in the 1920s. Fewer than 400 survived, kept alive by a few ranchers for show or out of love for an animal that had helped to shape America. Millions had roamed the ranges in the decades after the Civil War, providing the nation with most of its beef.

Today the Longhorn population has grown to 7,000 registered, purebred animals. That is a drop in the bucket in the U.S. cattle industry. Nevertheless, interest in the Longhorn is rising once again, above all for crossbreeding. A Longhorn bull produces a slender calf in the cows of some other breeds, such as the Charolais, which have trouble calving. The result: the birth is easier and the chances of losing cow or calf are reduced.

Most of Scott's sales have been bulls sold to cattlemen for crossbreeding. But this year, for the first time, two ranchers bought from Scott because they consider Longhorns good grazing animals, able to fatten even on poor pastureland.

"You've begun to hear more and more about the Longhorn on grass," Scott says. "I have made several large sales this year — and have sold to several individuals at record-breaking prices for me ... Cattlemen are searching for an animal which can do more for less."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says most American ranchers, fattening their cattle on feed, lost money this year because beef prices haven't kept pace with the cost of corn and other feed grains. So there's a renewed interest in grazing.

Mansel Gustamante, record-keeper for the Texas Longhorn Breeders' Association, bears witness to the growing interest.

Every known Longhorn breeder in the world belongs to the Texas Longhorn Breeders' Association, with headquarters in San Antonio. Membership grew from 176 in 1973 to 237 today.

Most Longhorn herds are in Texas. Others are in Oklahoma, Kansas, Iowa, South Dakota, Colorado and Nebraska, and in Canada and Australia. The federal government maintains 300 Longhorns at the Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge in Oklahoma and 150 at the Fort Niobrara National Wildlife Refuge in Nebraska. Longhorns from these herds are auctioned to private buyers each fall.

Potpourri From The Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON — President Ford has no intention of taking Sen. Barry Goldwater's advice that he park Air Force One in the hangar and give full attention to the economy. The President has told economists that he'll give top priority to the economic crisis but won't neglect his other presidential duties. He fully expects to continue his foreign travel, with scheduled visits to China, Europe and India.

break all spending records next year. At secret meetings, his budget experts have acknowledged that the deficit is likely to reach the all-time high of $35 billion in the President's next budget. An anticipated $112 billion military budget will run up the deficit. Ford has also failed to cut back the budget he inherited from ex-President Nixon. This is now expected to reach $310 billion, a $20 billion deficit, by the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

OIL PROFITS: The giant oil companies are supposed to be fierce competitors. But when we cited the low corporate taxes some oil companies pay, Sun Oil rushed to the defense of Gulf and Mobil. Sun Oil distributed a letter declaring that its two rivals had paid 62.2 per cent and 56.4 per cent of their respective taxable incomes to the U.S. Treasury. The letter, referring to our column, added, "One of us just has to be wrong."

private, the message has not gotten through to the federal bureaucracy. In a recent letter to Senate Government Operations Chairman Sam Ervin, D-N.C., Commerce Secretary Frederick Delors begged him to block a tax privacy bill introduced by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.

RECORD SPENDING: President Ford will Education, took a cautious step into this sensitive area the other day when he appealed to textbook publishers to pick materials that "do not insult the values of most parents."

Energy Crisis: Is It Real Or Imagined

Is there an energy crisis or isn't there? Or was there ever one? A survey last summer by the Federal Energy Administration found that 90 per cent of the people queried felt the energy crisis was either over, nonexistent or manufactured by the oil companies.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is among those who believe that drastic measures are needed to make Americans realize that there is, indeed, an energy crisis. Charging that President Ford's reliance on voluntary conservation is bound to prove inadequate, he calls for "a stable tax on gasoline, or on imported oil or on automobiles according to their weight or horsepower" to discourage U.S. consumption of oil.

Boeschstein speaks at the third Owens-Corning Energy Conservation Awards dinner, the finale of an annual competition that recognizes architects, engineers and owners of buildings who have made advances in conserving energy.

But the negative side of the picture may well be stronger: Demand for imported oil began to swing upward again in September and consumption of motor gasoline is running 25 to 30 per cent ahead of last winter.

White House Reporters Free Of Sin?

The other day I attended one of those "panel discussions" that provide so much of the G-rated entertainment on college campuses these days. This one was on White House press conferences and it attracted an overflow crowd of journalism students all bent on becoming little Woodward and Bernsteins. The occasion afforded a rare opportunity to study the species "homo journalisticus" on the beat.

After a meeting with the Mexican Senate, Secretary of State Rabasa announced that Mexico is considering the possibility of abandoning the OAS if basic and extensive modifications are not made in the charter of that organization.

At the last meeting of the Organization of American States (OAS) in Quito, Ecuador, Mexico sustained the motion brought by Costa Rica, Venezuela, and Colombia to discontinue the blockade of Cuba, which was defeated.

Later, the Secretary of State of Mexico, Amilob Rabasa, declared the possibility that Mexico resign and leave the OAS.

Big Tree Rezoning Plan Delayed By County For More Information

Although both county Planning and Zoning Commission members and their staff recommended a commercial rezoning change for a tract of land of the north corner of SR 427 and Gen. Chairman John Kimbrough suggested the continuation, citing the need for more specifics concerning the entrance and exit roads of the property, and the site plan.

Lawrence Van Horn, representing the owner Frank Pusey, said that the rezoning would be used for an automotive repair shop if the Wholesale Commercial (C-3) change was granted.

Winter Bright For Tourism Industry

MIAMI (AP)—As if tending to the economic recovery of last winter's gasoline shortage, and the nebulous threat of another Florida's lucrative tourist industry is rubbing its hands while "up north" snows fly and temperatures plummet.
The annual flight from cold is being carefully monitored by affected. Limestone drivers at Florida's metropolitan airports tell you that the first influx of "snowbirds" closely follows the winter's first hard freeze.

The crab fleet was idle on San Francisco's Fisherman's Wharf and the fishermen were busy

Pollution Killing Crabs

By TOM CARTER, The Herald Services
SAN FRANCISCO — The crab boats are primed but idle again today. The season opened last night, Nov. 12. It continues through June, probably in the same fashion.
Ten boats are loaded with traps here at Fisherman's Wharf and 10 more over in Sausalito and the fishermen are still haggling over price per pound which will obviously be more than last year's $1.

Tourists, 25.5 million of them, provide the state with a $3.9 billion business in 1973.
Early predictions from state officials forecast a 15 per cent drop—a result of last winter's fuel crisis—in tourism for all of this year.
But spokesmen for airlines, railroads, hotels, cruise lines and tourist attractions say the 74-75 season already is showing signs of a booming recovery.

Inflation and unemployment are negative factors. But industry officials and travel representatives say snowbirds are still coming—they're just looking for ways to cut expenses.
Eastern Airlines, which averages a flight in or out of Florida every six minutes this time of year, has beefed up its economy service.

"We've added more night coach service to and from the major cities," a spokesman for the Miami-based carrier says. "It's 20 per cent cheaper and some of the sting out of inflation. And it indicates that a substantial part of the market is people who are affected by costs."

Despite a 10 per cent price hike in airfares over the past year, Eastern is showing an 11 per cent increase in the number of roundtrip fares.
Auto Train, its rates geared to attract families who want to use their cars once arriving in Florida, claims a 25 per cent jump over 1973.
"Advance bookings are coming in in droves," says corporation president Gene Garfield in Washington. "And it looks like we'll be traveling at capacity all season long, not just the winter. There's a long waiting list for passengers."

A few feet away, tourists stream by the pungent sidewalk, largely ignoring the now-labeled, pickling fare of Alaskan and Canadian crab.
The old man has been here since this place was mud flats. At age 6 he caught rock crab on the spot where we are talking. He is 67.
"Who wants see the story?" he asks, getting up. He walks quickly in the Castagnola restaurant's crowded bar. He stands stiffly before the wall pictures and points his cane over the heads of the tourists.
The first shot is from the 1930s. "Four hundred and fifty boats fished for everything." His face is expressionless.
Crab boats once numbered about 200. Now it's a score. The second is of Monterey sardine boats, 1934. There are no sardines. "Overfished."
He moves to the last photo, buying crab, 1926. "Crab was 25 cents a pound." He remembers when crabs were so plentiful at the beach people used rakes to sweep them up. Breakers washed them in by the carload. A crab cost 10 cents.
In a way crab meat cost more than Filet Mignon last year, about $1 a pound. That's because if you buy a whole crab you throw away 75 per cent of the inedible bulk.
"Who wants see a ring net?"

On The Subject Of Girls

Petrocelli, TV Star Barry Newman Is Single-Minded

TUCSON, Ariz. (NEA) — As a big, well-medium-sized Hollywood star in a small-medium-sized city, a man has to know how to handle himself, girl-wise. Especially if a man is single.
It's not an unpleasant problem. But, for Barry Newman, who shoots the NBC series Petrocelli here it's something that is always in the back of his mind. And, often, it is thrust into the front of his mind.
They were shooting out in the desert, some 15 miles west of Tucson. Fantastically beautiful country. Barry, looking out of his place in his cliffed suit, shirt and tie, was halfway up a mountain with guest star Strother Martin and some others.
After the lunch break, they would move on to another spot. It would mean lugging the heavy camera and the rest of the equipment to another place, back down the mountain.
At the break, he had lunch in Barry's neat but not gaudy trailer. He took off his Guinness Marat tie — "I'm supposed to be an impoverished lawyer but I have to wear expensive ties because they are the only ones heavy enough to support one of these microphones."

Barry Newman's alter-ego finds hotel room better than apartment for the single male on TV location

"They were made for me by the mother of a girl who said, 'You're not going to leave Arizona without me.' There are all kinds of girls pursuing him here, not just the nice, homey kind who have mothers that make him cupcakes.
"The prop man this morning told me," Barry said, "that one of the strippers at the Blue Note wants to meet me. She may be very nice, you never know."

There are, he said, with a satisfied smile, plenty of girls around who are intrigued by the star of a Hollywood TV series, even if it is one of the year's greatest hits. The girls range from cupcake daughters to strippers to collegians.
"The University of Arizona is here," Barry said, "and there are a lot of pretty and bright girls there."

Freeman was the great sax player. As a young man, Barry played the sax, too, and Freeman was one of his idols.
"I met him and got to know him pretty well," Newman says. "Until he recently got married — he was in his 60s when he married a psychiatrist — he spent all his life in hotel rooms. And he always said that, for a single man, that was the best way to live. I like hotel rooms; anything I want I just ring for room service."

Home, to Barry Newman, is still New York. His parents are back home in Boston. But here, he lives in a hotel room, which is unusual. Most stars, when on location, insist on an apartment or a rented house.
"I tell you why I prefer a room," Newman says. "It all goes back to Bud Freeman."

Loan Demands Show Less Credit Growth

By NICHOLAS J. MERGO, The Herald Services
The Fed approved actions by the directors of the federal Reserve Banks of New York and Philadelphia to cut their discount rate a quarter-point, effective December 9. Since reaching a peak of $3.69 million for the week ended July 31, member bank borrowings have fallen by $2.61 million, reflecting a decline in the demand for a credit. Further evidence of a slowdown in the demand for loanable funds is reflected in a lessening in the growth rate of total bank loans and commercial paper. The three month annualized growth rate for total loans, plus commercial paper, based on data available through October 30, is 18.2 per cent which is down from 20 per cent for the month of June. Nevertheless, a 10 per cent growth in credit demand must be considered high for a recessionary period and undoubtedly reflects the high rate of inflation.
Our C-M indicator registered another decline for the week ended November 27. Most of the decline was accounted for by a drop in the transactions interest rates to continue their present downward trend as credit demands ease further. As more capital expenditure programs are deferred, the demand for long-term capital may also respect to the direction of the decline, allowing long-term rates to decline.

School Image Hurts Youth Job Search

By VIVIAN BROWN AP Newsfeatures Writer The American school system is designed and maintained as though each of its pupils was destined for Harvard or Oxford. And the image problem — college degrees are status symbols and vocational training is for second class people — is hurting both American youths and the job market that may be seeking their specific talents.

Christmas Customs Differ: Each Family Has Its Own

By NANCY BOOTH Herald Correspondent Christmas means many things to many people, but to Mrs. Betty Eastham and her 11 year old daughter Dawn, it means peace and tranquility. Mrs. Eastham and Dawn live on David Street in Winter Springs, and each Christmas they decorate their home and tree using only blue and green colors.

It's Wine American Now

By TOM HOGE AP Newsfeatures Writer The United States is becoming a nation of wine drinkers. And Americans are drinking more and more of their own product; 153 million gallons of California table wine in 1973, for example. The yield of California's vineyards may lack the elegance of a $10 bottle of vintage wine from one of France's chateaux, but these domestic varieties come from high quality grapes.

Municipalities Cut Purchases, Employment

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer "We are taking a second look at our overall budget," Casselberry Mayor Bill Grier said. "I have issued a memo to all department heads, telling them that because an item is budgeted does not mean that it will be purchased. Purchases of only essential items are being permitted.

"We are in pretty good shape as far as state revenue sharing is concerned. The state at budget time, told us to anticipate $48,000 per quarter in revenue sharing funds. The council, however, wisely cut the projection to $38,000 for budget purposes and the first check received by the city this budget year was for $39,000.

County Utility Operations Undergo Radical Change

By BILL BELLEVILLE Herald Staff Writer The nature of utility operations is currently undergoing a radical change throughout the nation, and Seminole County is no exception. The quality of water and the method of sewage "recycling" affects the stability of our ecology, as well as that of our pocketbook. Herald staff writer Bill Belleville analyzes the current status of utility operations in the county in a three-part series, beginning today.

SEA Seeks Recognition

Seminole Education Association (SEA) officers will petition the school board Jan. 8 to try and win recognition as sole bargaining agent for the county's 1,300 teachers, counselors and librarians. "We shouldn't have any problem actually being recognized. But we intend to ask for recognition as the sole bargaining unit," SEA spokesman Steve Rosenthal said. SEA claims 700 members.

Board Decides On Title; Negotiator Hiring Next

What to call a negotiator who will battle with public employee unions when collective bargaining becomes law Jan. 1, has been the big question for the Seminole County School Board. At a meeting Wednesday, school officials finally agreed his title should be director of employee relations. But it was not until after a lengthy and heated debate.

DOLLS FOR CHRISTMAS The annual doll-dressing contest, sponsored by the Salvation Army, resulted in 125 dolls being available for Christmas gift giving to needy children. Participating in the contest were the Southern Bell Telephone Co. employees, First Presbyterian Churchwomen, First Baptist Church and Palmisto Avenue Baptist Church. Displaying the dolls are (left to right) Lt. James E. Burns, Irene Brown and Mrs. Burns.

Confirmation Gets Mixed Reactions

The local reaction to Nelson Rockefeller's confirmation as the 41st vice-president of the United States, varied from satisfaction, to displeasure, to complete apathy. "I don't even care," one middle-aged lady declared, on hearing of his confirmation by the Congress Thursday night. The lady graciously declined to be identified.
