South Is Feeling Grip Of Blizzard

NEW ORLEANS, Mar. 7.—(AP)—The South is feeling the effects of the Rocky Mountain blizzard that rode into the Mississippi Valley dumping a lake winter crust of snow and ice. Northwest winds swept through the deep South accompanied by rain that brought relief to drought sufferers. The weather bureau predicted freezing to the coast in Mississippi tonight and tomorrow and nearby to the coast in Alabama and Louisiana. As the cold wave spread through the Mississippi Valley into Texas and Northwest Florida, snow fell in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, and Virginia.

HITCHHIKER IS GIVEN LIFE FOR SLAYING MAN

Fred Kostreli Found Guilty But Recommendation Of Mercy Is Made By Jury

CAIRO, Georgia, Mar. 7.—(AP)—Fred Kostreli, Newark, New Jersey hitch hiker, was convicted of the murder of Rudolph E. Behrens, 37, by a jury in superior court today with a recommendation for mercy which automatically carries a life term of the charge.

Immediately after the sentence was heard the defendant filed a motion for a new trial. Kostreli and his parents, known down as "Kostreli," was pronounced. They came to America about four years ago. Behrens was killed on a lonely road last November while giving Kostreli an other hitch hiker a ride. Kostreli pleaded self defense.

SLEUTHS SEEK TO UNTANGLE GORDON DEATH

Private Detective Organization Is Hired To Help Solve Noose Slaying Of Woman

NEW YORK, Mar. 7.—(AP)—Private detectives were at work today on the murder of a woman slain in a party, with 18,000 of the "finest" at its command, knocked in vain at a "wall of silence."

It was Charles B. McLaughlin, district attorney of the Bronx, who disclosed the employment of a national detective agency, a step almost unprecedented in the long history of unsolved killings here.

The private detectives have been authorized to proceed "regardless of cost," and to concentrate on what were called the "world-wide ramifications" of the "slaying of the henna-haired demi-monde and blackmailer, who had been seeking evidence to back her charge that a policeman and her former husband "framed" her on a vice charge eight years ago.

Dozens of witnesses have been questioned and scores of leads followed since her body was tossed into a Bronx park eight nights ago, but "no headway of any great importance" has been made, McLaughlin said yesterday. He explained he was paying the detectives out of his own pocket, but expected to get his money back.

Voluntarily diaries of the slain woman were believed to contain names of persons in Canada, Europe and distant parts of the United States.

One of the first tasks of the detectives is to discover the meaning of a mysterious entry referring to money paid out by Miss Gordon to a "Bank in Oslo, Norway."

Meanwhile, the grand jury continued its investigation of the woman's past strange mixture of racketeering and playboys, mother love and fear of murder, and such names as Arnold Rothstein, gambler, who "got his," and the bullet-headed Vannie Higgins.

GOLDSBORO, N. C., Mar. 7.—(AP)—Eleven convicts were burned to death today when fire destroyed the Duplin county stockade. All are believed to be negroes. The victims were trapped in a cell in the rear of the building. Fifty-two men, all but 12 negroes, were prisoners in the stockade at the time. The flames began in the kitchen. The origin was not determined. The stockade was built of heavy timbers and was located a mile from here. It was virtually without fire protection.

CARD SHARK RING TRAVELING SHIPS UNDER SUSPICION

Evidence On Gang May Solve Queer Death Of Diamond Dealer

NEW ORLEANS, Mar. 7.—(AP)—Suspecting an international ring of ocean-going card sharks, federal officers sought yesterday through the questioning of James Ryan of New York and Harry Henderson of Tulsa, Okla., to gather evidence which would link the gang and solve the strange death at sea of Henry Sammartino, wealthy diamond merchant of Youngstown, Ohio.

Both the men questioned denied any knowledge of how Sammartino met death and declared he was alive when they left him on the S. S. Pennsylvania at Havana in February. Ship officers found the voyager's body hanging in his state room indicating suicide but on his return to his home physicians found his skull was fractured and suspected that he might have been slain.

James Ryan, 37, told officers that Sammartino had lost $1,000 some days before his death in a card game aboard the ship in which they and seven others participated.

Ryan and Henderson told officers that Sammartino had lost $1,000 some days before his death in a card game aboard the ship in which they and seven others participated.

Yesterday Dominic Benvenuti, counsel for the Sammartino estate, accompanied by Anthony Darling, a close friend of the dead merchant, arrived here from Youngstown to question the men held and act at the federal department of justice in their investigation.

"From passengers on the ship," said Mr. Benvenuti, "I have learned that a gambler named Cecil, one of the members of the gang threatened Mr. Sammartino with death and injury when the porters took him to look on Mr. Sammartino's complaint that the gambler had been cheated.

"It appears that Mr. Sammartino fell into the hands of this international gang of fleecers when he went aboard the ship at New York and played with them. He was going to Los Angeles for a vacation and had a lot of money because he intended to buy diamonds in Havana."

Benvenuti's lawyer stated several days ago after they had cashed a check for $100,000 out in the name of the dead man.

Weather Compels Postponement Of Women's Golf Play

Costly, rainy weather which, in the vicinity of the Sanford Country Club at noon today, was unsuited to championship play, caused the postponement until tomorrow or Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock of the final round over 18 holes, as decided the women's golf champion of the local course for 1931, Mrs. Vivian Speer and Mrs. Leon LeRoy will be matched against each other.

Last Monday afternoon Mrs. Speer took a well played 18 hole match from Miss Jane LeRoy by a three and two score. Miss LeRoy was outdriving her opponent, but Mrs. Speer's surer touch on the greens proved to be the winning factor. Mrs. Speer played a steady game and held a lead of 30. At the same time, Miss LeRoy, playing in her usual fine form, had the misfortune to be hit by one stroke behind Mrs. Speer on every losing hole.

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Leon LeRoy and Mrs. Roy Symes, a former winner, met in semi-final play, and were forced to play two extra holes before the match was decided. Mrs. LeRoy won by a one up score, over 20 holes. It was said to have been the hardest fought match of the entire play in the women's division, for both women were playing near par golf, and brilliant putting was the feature of the match.

CHEERS, BOOS AND FIGHTS DISRUPT BRITISH MEETING

"Soviet Slave" Pleads For Aid Amid Scenes Of Wild Confusion

LONDON, Mar. 7.—(AP)—A wild scene of cheers, boos and free-for-all fights took place last night in Albert Hall where a so-called "Soviet slave" appealed to British friends of Russia to do all in their power to end what he described as terrible conditions in the convict camps of North Russia.

Turbulent and boisterous demonstrations marked the mass meeting in the big auditorium, staged by the great trades defense union. More than 50 scuffles and fist-fights occurred with numerous shouts of "long live the soviet."

Many of the disturbers including several speakers were thrown into the streets. Those who huddled in the streets at Winstan Church and Lord Brentford also were ejected.

The fight started as soon as Lord Brentford, formerly Sir William Jeynon-Hicks, had started an address. Several firecrackers were exploded and stench-bombs were thrown before the disturbers were seized.

Running fights continued throughout the two-hour meeting. The "soviet slave" was featured as the attraction of the demonstration against the "soviet economy war."

NEED IS SEEN BY ENTZMINGER FOR SCHOOL REFORMS

Ex-Representative Declares System Is Going Toward Rocks

Sweeping reforms in what he termed "a public school system which is rapidly being driven on the rocks" are urged by C. W. Entzinger, former representative from Seminole County, in a bitter attack on the "invisible government" which he claims is in control of the entire Florida public school system.

A return of business methods, common sense, and the abolishment of the present five-membered board of control are the prime requisites of reform, according to Mr. Entzinger. He states that present day methods of education in Florida schools have too many side lines, too many angles, which are an unnecessary part of the tax burden of the people. He pleads for a return of the simpler forms of education, forms devised primarily to educate the brain.

Mr. Entzinger's statement on the public school system is as follows:

"Are those in control of our public schools above just criticism? I say not, especially when they are spending 50 per cent of our tax money, I am 100 per cent in (Continued On Page Five)

Sanford Woman Wins Cash Prize In Contest Conducted By Periodical

Mrs. Edith L. Roy, 40th Sanford Avenue resident, and daughter of M. S. Nelson, well-known local grower, was the fortunate winner of a sizable cash award as one of the five winners of a "Prize of Conduct" contest which has been appearing in Ladies Magazine for several months.

Each week a problem of conduct in the form of a question is asked the readers of the magazine, and they are invited to send in answers of not more than 1000 words.

Here is the question Mrs. Roy answered with profit to herself:

"Suppose you were the father of three children, and were forced by circumstances to serve on a jury trying a noted gangster for murder. You have received a letter threatening your family if you do not vote for capital, and one of the main witnesses has already been shot down on the street. Testimony at the trial has convinced you that the gangster is guilty."

"Which of the following would you do?"

1. Think of your dear ones and vote for capital, regardless of the testimony.

2. Vote so as to cause a "hung" jury, thus giving the gangster a chance to work

Machado Revokes Decree Suspending Cuban Publications

HAVANA, Mar. 7.—(AP)—President Machado yesterday revoked his decree of Jan. 9, which closed all Havana publications, and authorized all suspended newspapers and magazines to resume publication.

The newspapers El Pais and the Semanario Americano, and four weekly satirical magazines will begin their resumption of the press today, which was based upon a demand for the return of the press to the public. Three other publications, Diario de la Noche, El Mundo, and Informacion, are allowed to resume publication tomorrow.

The revocation of the decree which had suspended all publications, and the return of the press to the public, was a significant step in the restoration of press freedom in Cuba.

Trade Body To Hold Meeting On Monday

A report on the success which has attended efforts to organize a county chamber of commerce, and the matter of appointing a committee of members to meet with J. J. Phelan, civil engineer connected with the United States Veterans Bureau who will appear here Tuesday to inspect the site for a proposed veterans hospital in Florida, will be the leading topics of discussion at the bi-monthly meeting of the Sanford Chamber of Commerce to be held at the Valdes Hotel Monday at 12:15 o'clock.

Russian Chorus To Present Program In Sanford Tonight

Led by Princess Margarita Agreva Slaviansky, distinguished musical conductor, and daughter of the founder of the world famous Chorus, the 20 members of that organization will arrive in Sanford shortly after dusk to be met by a committee from the South Side Parent-Teacher Association and the Lions Club who are sponsoring their appearance at the City Hall tonight at 8:00 o'clock.

Not in years have Sanford music lovers been given the opportunity of hearing an organization with the renown of the Royal Russian Chorus, which has the distinction of having appeared before more members of royalty than any similar attraction in the world. Not every city the size of Sanford will be favored with a visit by the Russian music masters, and the sponsors of the attraction are hopeful that a large and enthusiastic audience will greet the singers.

Russian songs and dances will predominate the program, which also includes several American popular and classical numbers. Gorgeous costumes, weird musical instruments, and sensational dancing are expected to be the magnet which will crowd the City Hall to the doors for the single Sanford performance tonight at 8:00 o'clock.

Sanford Farmer's Club Holds Weekly Meeting Thursday

A round-table discussion on corn planting, fertilization, and harvesting proved to be the feature of the weekly meeting of the Sanford farmers' club at the Ben Leno High School Thursday night, for, deprived of the opportunity of seeing a special roll of slow motion pictures, which dealt with plant diseases, scheduled to have been projected, the 40 or more farmers turned their attention to corn growing for a three hour discussion.

All of the conversation was based on a series of tests made at the experimental station at Gainesville. Literature from that source revealed that the best variety of corn which is grown in Florida is Whistley's Profitable, planted in February or March gives the best results, and the most profitable method of fertilization was found on farms which used 200 pounds of quick-acting nitrogen to the acre, 45 days after planting.

H. S. Koon, of New Orleans, a farmer of many years' experience, interested the farmers in a short explanatory talk of Louisiana farming methods and results obtained. He also explained the details of a machine which he had developed for use in drying feed material. With a series of pictures, he demonstrated the effect a better production of corn had on cattle in his state.

At the next meeting on Thursday night, L. M. Rhoads, state market commissioner and Mr. Hyatt, truck crop specialist, both of Jacksonville, will be present, and, Alex R. Johnson, who led the round-table discussion, will urge that a good attendance of farmers and growers be on hand to hear these speakers.

Mrs. Wight Gives Speech At Club Meet In Orlando

something that was his gift, just as he said in reference to his beloved China that no garden in Europe or America is without its Chinese representative.

"Referring again to his feeling about our own work, he has said that he first published his Aristocrats of the Garden in 1916, but that his appeal for the best to be planted in American Gardens was as the voice of old, echoing in the wilderness, and the book fell largely on barren soil, and soon passed out of print. Later when he recognized the growing strength of the garden club movement, wedded as he was to the ideal, and firm in his belief that gardens complete, if they do not actually found homes, he secured the rights to his disregarded book, and republished it in 1926, dedicating it as I have said to the Garden clubs. This time it had an enthusiastic audience all ready for its reception, and was quickly followed by the fascinating pages of Plant Hunting, China, Mother of Gardens, and More Aristocrats, and Aristocrats of the Trees. The garden magazines, newspaper articles and bulletins were media for the spread of his evangelism of beauty, and his spirit is indicated in the preface to Plant Hunting when he dedicates to those of every race and creed who have labored in foreign lands to make our gardens more beautiful.

"Now, what lay behind all those books and articles? Eleven years of plant hunting in China whence came the name he loved, Chinese Wilson; three years in Japan, expeditions to Australia, Africa, India, Korea and the tropics. To summarize his harvesting, he has given to the world eleven hundred plants not hitherto discovered, besides many species of genera already in use. He collected 60,000 herbarium specimens, and so many duplicates, that his specimens are now in every important herbarium in the world. What these many journeys must have meant in weariness in dangers and in loneliness as he wandered for months at a time with no other white man in his company, we will never know, because he does not dwell on that aspect at all. Most casually in telling of the getting of the 25 varieties of wild rose that he brought of China he says that he suffered many a rent of flesh and clothes, in the getting, and says over the beauty of the roses where he found them, saying it is good to have lived such experiences but that it is better still to have been the fortunate means whereby the gems of China may find a place in the gardens of the Occident.

"As I have spent many dear hours reading his books, the spirit of the man seems to me well illustrated in just that little sentence. He does not minimize the importance of his discoveries at all; rather he shows a boyish delight and exultation in some job well done, some shipment on its homeward way after long delay and many difficulties, but always it is with the note that Chinese Wilson was a fortunate means to an end, not Wilson for himself and his own glory, but Wilson for beauty in the garden. The story of the way the Royal Lily came to us is pure adventure, breathless and thrilling. It meant a terrific journey clear across this continent, across the Pacific ocean, up the Yangtze river in China 1800 miles, and then with Chinese servants 250 miles to the borderland of Tibet. A broken leg and disability for a year, and yet he says, and he would go through it again for that price if necessary—and then this bit with his apologies to Kipling, "I did it! Did what? God forgive me, I did not.

"It is God's present to our gardens. Anybody might have found it. But His whisper came to me."

"The story of the finding of the Davidia tree is another wonderful adventure, and by the way, Dr. Wilson told me once that the Davidia would be very happy in Florida gardens. I wish I had time to tell some of these lovely tales but I can only mention them, hoping to encourage some of my hearers to read his books, and that many of us will avail ourselves of his legacy to us, in the vast enrichment of Florida gardens. There is a chapter on our Lady Aescia which will unfold to us a real adventure on these too long overlooked possibilities for us, and not a book of his has not some direct bearing on the garden of our climate.

"He gave us the Jussiaea um primum, most grateful of shrubs, now starred with its golden primrose. He brought to us the Kurame azalea, which he says are like dairy ladies with frilly petticoats, and the buddleia we owe entirely to him. The buddleia was introduced in 1902, and 30 years later he found it is widely distributed as from the west coast of New Zealand to the Maharajah's palace in Shrinagar.

"A Florida poet Jane Williams Markell of Sanford has written the following bit of verse which she dedicates to Chinese Wilson, and presents to the Florida Federation of Garden Clubs for use
