Bike Week '96: Born to be wild

So many people to see

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

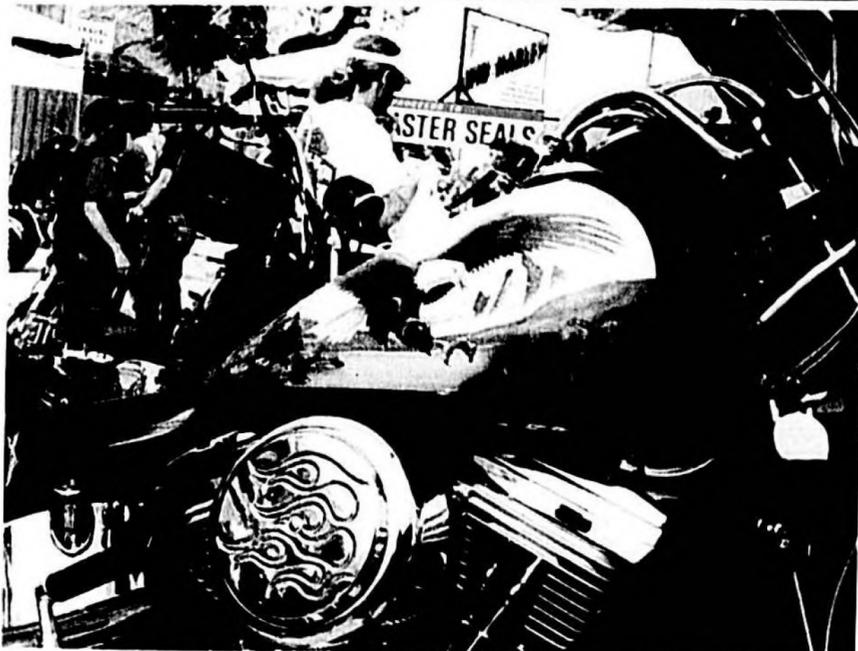

NEW SMYRNA — To some, Bike Week is a time to admire finely-crafted motorcycles. To others, it is a time to learn about engines. To some it is a chance to be seen in the finest leather, denim and lycra fashions.

But to almost everyone, it is a chance to "people watch."

David Jackson and his girlfriend Melissa Davis come from Tampa every February to see the sights.

"Look, over there," Jackson said, poking Davis' arm. The target was a couple dressed in matching skin-tight jeans.

LONGWOOD — A woman's blood-soaked body found partially wrapped in a blanket in front of a dumpster Saturday marks the first homicide investigation in nearly a decade for Longwood Police.

The unidentified white female, in her mid to late 20s, was discovered early Saturday morning by employees from a pool service business on Milwee Road near State Road 434, across from South Seminole Hospital.

It was grizzly. We have our work cut out for us.

Longwood Police Sgt. Wayne Roberts said Saturday afternoon investigators are concentrating on identifying the woman, hoping that will help lead to her killer.

SAMSULA — A middle aged man in an undersized T-shirt and a dusty leather vest is showing the newest piece in his art collection to an appreciative audience of young women.

The piece, an intricately detailed zipper pulled provocatively down to reveal a smooth, well-rounded stomach, brought oohs and aaahs.

Comparisons were made to other pictures in the collection: a dragon with wings spread wide and fire slashing across a mountaintop, a dagger floating in a misty cloud, and a fantastic scene with dancing skeletons, headless horses and bloody dogs.

Relief is in sight for public nuisance victims

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford residents may soon have recourse against public nuisances including blaring music from boom boxes and drug deals done in abandoned structures.

Barring any last minute changes, Sanford's new Nuisance Abatement Board is ready to sprout into existence Monday night. An ordinance calling for the establishment of the board and decisions on its membership are both scheduled for the city commission meeting.

The establishment of the Nuisance Abatement Board, appearing on second and final reading, would set up a special board to handle complaints about such situations as repeated drug activities, street gangs, or other uses which may be considered public nuisances.

Under the guidelines for operation of the board, it would accept written complaints from any city employee, officer or city resident, and filed with the board's secretary, about suspected or observed nuisance situations.

After receiving the complaint, the board may be called together for a hearing, with a notice of the complaint sent to the building's owner.

The board would then conduct a public hearing, and receive evidence. The owner of the building in question will be given an opportunity to present defense.

If the board declares a place or premises to be a public nuisance, it may enter an order requiring the owner to adopt such procedure as may be

Rental property: Up to code or about to be shut down?

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Neighbors recently complained enough about the tenants and the poor quality of living conditions in several historic district rental properties that the city commission gave owner Violetta Williams two weeks to clean up her act or shut down. Her two weeks were officially up Friday night, but commissioners won't review the code problem until Monday.

Williams owns a group of rental properties at 718 W. First St., 210 Laurel Ave., 611, 615 and 621 Oak Ave., 612 Park Ave. and 101 W. 9th St.

Williams herself lives in an apartment at 621 Oak Ave.

Neighbors complained that the rental units were cramped and unsanitary, that rodents and insects spilled over onto their property from the neglected units and abundant trash, and that the properties did not conform to the codes established for the downtown residential historic district.

An inspection by Dan Florian of the city's code enforcement board revealed numerous violations, including problems the inspector found might be dangerous to residents.

IN BRIEF

Fair organizers call it quits

CASSELBERRY — The manager of the Seminole Greyhound Park said Friday the organizers of the Seminole County Fair and Orange Festival have dropped out and there may not be a county fair at the greyhound park next year.

Stan Driscoll, president and general manager of the Casseberry greyhound park, said fair organizers Greg and Patty Bean told him "that's enough" after the event closed last Sunday. Driscoll cited lack of profits for the event, in its third year.

Competition from the Central Florida Fair, and the Florida Strawberry Festival may have dampened business. Seminole County had not had a fair in 20 years when the Beans organized in 1994. No attendance figures are currently available. The Beans were not available for comment.

Driscoll said he would be willing to help if anyone else decides to organize a county fair next year.

Calling all bosses

SANFORD — The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce will hold a luncheon at the Heathrow Golf and Country Club on April 12. At that time, a Secretary of the Year will be announced.

Needed now are nominations for secretaries. According to chamber Executive Director Wanda Kelly, it's time for all bosses to submit their entries for consideration by Sanford chamber officers. The winners are promised a gala time at the luncheon.

Previous winners include Attorney Jim Barks' secretary Joyce Thompson in 1990, Dr. Roger Stewart's secretary Gloria Burke in 1992, Judge Alan Dickey's secretary Debbie Whitehead in 1993, Attorney Harry Reid's secretary Marie Post in 1994, and Seminole High School Principal Gretchen Schapker's secretary Peggy LeRoy in 1995.

Cost for the luncheon is $15 per person.

Send nominations as soon as possible to the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, 400 E. First Street, Sanford FL 32771. Deadline for entries is April 8.

Party time

SANFORD — People who miss the annual Irish Celebration on St. Patrick's Day at the Higgins House in Sanford, may turn green with envy. For the third year, the historic Higgins House Victorian Bed & Breakfast will host the party, March 17, from 5 until 9 p.m.

The event will feature a full Irish buffet including corned beef and cabbage, Irish stew, bangers and mash, Irish soda bread, red cabbage, and complimentary beer and wine.

Also featured will be a bagpiper, piano player and an Irish sing-along.

Advance reservations are required. The cost is $19.50 per person. Tickets are limited.

Burdine's might change to Macy's

Federated Department Stores, which owns nine regional department store chains, says it is thinking about changing the name of Burdines, a Florida landmark department store, to Macy's.

Federated has moved toward putting all its stores under Bloomingdale's, Macy's and Stern's since 1994.

Turning Burdines stores into Macy's would be an attempt to capitalize on Macy's more nationally recognized name and to reduce Federated's operating costs, the chain said.

"It's something we're looking at," said Carol Sanger, Federated's spokeswoman. "Macy's has tremendous name recognition. People in every state know that name."

Retail analysts and executives, who cite Macy's strong appeal with former New Yorkers and international shoppers, say the decision already has been made.

"The clock is ticking," said Cynthia Cohen Turk, a Miami-based retail analyst. "Is it a one-year clock? A two-year clock? I don't know, but it's going to happen."

In January, Federated announced the conversion of Jordan Marsh, a 145-year-old landmark Boston department store, to Macy's. And last year Federated took the 18 Abraham & Strauss stores in New York and made them Macy's, Stern's or Bloomingdale's.

Ex-state rep. charged

ORLANDO — Prosecutors have formally charged Marvin Couch with four misdemeanor counts stemming from an encounter with a prostitute that led to his resignation from the Florida Legislature.

The former state representative from Oviedo is charged with solicitation to commit prostitution, exposure of sexual organs, transportation for the purpose of prostitution and remaining in a place to commit prostitution.

The maximum penalty on a misdemeanor charge is a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Couch, 42, who espoused family values as a member of a conservative Christian legislative group nicknamed the "God Squad," was arrested at a busy shopping center in Orlando Feb. 22. Vice agents said he was engaging in sex with a known prostitute in his truck.

Couch, who was serving his first term, apologized for his actions and resigned from his legislative post last week.

Lessons in living: Life is a school

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Columnist

"Lessons in Living," a diverse discussion, took place on Saturday, March 2 at the Church Street Station Presidential Ballroom with the renowned Susan L. Taylor, editor in chief of Essence magazine and senior vice president, Essence Communications, Inc., as the keynote speaker. This energetic, intelligent, talented woman spoke to over 800 women of diverse backgrounds at the discussion/luncheon.

The discussion is part of a continuing series established in 1993 by Orlando Mayor Glenda Hood. This community partnership between government and 18 organizations for women is a series of events with a global focus to inspire and empower area women and organizations. Together these diverse women of Central Florida can get together to accumulate, share, and creatively use knowledge to advance local, national and international communities.

"Lessons in Living" from speaker Taylor gave the guests some critical ideas to think about. An editor in chief of a magazine with 8.2 million readers, without a college degree, but steeped in faith and hard work, made Essence magazine what it is today.

Taylor said, "There is no dream too big to dream. There are no social problems we can't solve if we but try. We must and can control our lives, take charge of our lives, understand our own innate powers."

She encouraged women to take quiet time everyday. She said, "We must fix it. Take time out in the mornings for yourself before you greet the family, go to work and challenge your duties for the day. Life will be better at home, as you ride to work, at work, and life itself will be sweeter."

She continued, "Have people in your world who love and care about you. Let go and be you. During quiet time the Lord can reveal to you what you need to do: life transcends. Life is a school." She reminded the audience to build their own human and divine happiness.

Taylor is an example and inspiration to millions of people who see her as a living symbol of the magazine. She is in many ways the embodiment of the Essence woman. The determination to advance personally and professionally, and the desire to promote positive images and take pride in one's accomplishments, are values she shares with her readers. This is reflected in her motivational editorials, her book "In the Spirit," and another book, "Lessons in Living." Taylor said her personal challenge is to help empower the poor and to work with teenagers, encourage them to realize and utilize their strengths and take charge of their lives.

Taylor can truly say that life has a design and purpose. She has shown that African-American women can — truly can! Because she did. Difficult is no longer a word she accepts. She indeed turned a struggle into a triumph.

Many African-American women from Sanford were in attendance at the informative gathering. "Lessons in Living" will be remembered by over 800 women of diversity.

This Heart-to-Heart Sharing seminar was sponsored by Walt Disney World Inc., T.G. Lee Foods, Inc., and Orlando Utilities Commission. Contributing media supporters were Star 84.5 FM, and Christian Communications Group, Inc.

Special thanks to Vicky Nathan Murphy for this writer's invitation.

In conclusion, Taylor stressed, "Diversity in prayer, blessed by diversity, love everyone, appreciate and care for our world."

The way we were: Sanford's black schools

Some of the most interesting and also historically important happenings at the Sanford Museum recently are the weekly oral history sessions being conducted by Douglas Stenstrom. He began these last fall by first talking with some of his old friends and contemporaries about their early memories of Sanford and these sessions have progressed to discussions with knowledgeable people in the areas of sports, farming, medicine, etc. From these sessions, the museum is gleaned some valuable information about early Sanford history from those who actually lived it.

I attended one of these sessions for the first time a couple of weeks ago and plan to attend others and also to listen to the tapes of previous sessions. When I do, I'll pass on the information to you.

The session I attended was the first one in, hopefully a series, about the segregated black schools in Sanford. There has been very little information collected about these and it is an important part of our history.

Being interviewed at this meeting were Thelma Franklin, Neda Boykins, Alfreda Wallace, and Earl Minott. I will first give you some biographical information on each as was revealed.

Thelma Franklin was born in Sanford and attended Goldsboro

Primary School and Crooms Academy, graduating from the latter in 1938. She then furthered her education at Bethune Cookman College. She taught in the Seminole County schools for 41 years.

Her husband, Sylvester Franklin, worked for the Dodge Garage, Chase and Company, and later had his own hauling business. He died in 1991.

Neda Boykins attended primary school at Seventh and Cypress, then Hopper Academy and later Crooms Academy. Instead of graduating with her class of 1932, she married Raleigh Boykins in 1932.

This couple had two sons, one of whom is deceased, Raleigh Jr. and his wife have one daughter. Mrs. Boykins spent 24 years in the life insurance business, representing Afro and American Life.

One very interesting item that she brought to this meeting is a certificate naming her husband's ancestor, William Boykins, as postmaster of Goldsboro. Goldsboro was an incorporated town before merging with Sanford. The certificate is dated May 11, 1898; Charles Emory Smith was postmaster general and William McKinley was president. Mrs. Boykins has located the museum where it is now in display.

Alfreda Wallace first came to Longwood as a small child with her parents, Daniel and Frances Jenkins. Her older siblings remembered that they traveled back and forth to Sanford on horseback.

After her family settled in Sanford, Alfreda attended Mrs. Pearl Day's kindergarten/primary, a private school. She entered Crooms Academy in the fourth grade and was graduated from there. She received further training as a cosmetologist. She married Willie Wallace, now deceased, and they had one son, Michael.

Earl Minott's parents were Arametha and Kirby Minott, but he was raised by Joanna Moore who brought him to Sanford when he was one year old. Mrs. Moore had also reared his mother.

Mr. Minott attended Goldsboro Primary for grades one to three, then Crooms Academy from which he was graduated in 1948. He went to Florida A&M on a Lewis State scholarship where he received his bachelor of music degree. After teaching for three years in Starke, he returned to Sanford. He taught at Crooms until 1970 when Crooms was absorbed into Seminole High School. At SHS, he was choral director and became regular and 10 years later, assistant principal. He retired in 1983.

During the conversation with these four people, several bits of information were gleaned about the segregated black schools. Please keep in mind that these are reminiscences of people and details will be incomplete. In subsequent sessions with these and/or others we will gradually gain a complete picture.

Everyone present seemed to agree that there was a primary school located at the corner of Seventh and Cypress, but they didn't know its name, if it had one. This would have been in the early days of this century. There was also a discussion as to whether Hopper Academy was named after someone named Hopper or Harper. Hopper Academy was built in 1917.

All of the primary schools housed grades 1 to 3 and then students went to Hopper Academy which went through the tenth grade. Students then had to go to Bethune Cookman

Middle school students take top honors in essay contest

Integrity is the key

Editor's Note: The State of Florida Department of Corrections recently sponsored an essay contest in which each grade at Sanford Middle School participated. Trophies were presented by Correctional Probation Senior Officer Judy Thompson to sixth grade winner Patrick Daly, seventh grade winner Cassidy Webb and eighth grade winner Angela Gramkow. The subject for the essays was "How does one become an effective role model in today's society?" The Herald is pleased to publish the students' work.

By PATRICK DALY
Grade 6

Becoming an effective role model in today's society is a challenge for anybody. I know many people who feel that this is a lost generation. What happened to our role models? Many of the role models today have traded in that which is right for that which is easy and convenient. All of us are being led down a dusty path of confusion. News stations blare out stories of children in trouble and out of control, doing horrible things. What provokes these young children to take part in such destructive acts? Hurting children come home daily to empty homes. I ask you, where are their role models? Are their role models drug dealers on the streets or their workaholic parents? Even still, confused adults shake their heads and ask, "Why are our youth so troubled?" With what I have just said, can you answer that question? We still pledge to be "one nation under God," but unfortunately, some of us have a god of recreation and materialism.

By not being able to look up to a role model with a positive influence, my generation is feeling hopeless and angry. As a result, I am sad to say, they have many bad choices. Eventually though, we will go into our attics and dust off the box marked integrity. An effective role model in today's world must be a man or woman of integrity. I believe this brave movement will be the only hope through all this despair and I feel that my generation will be the one to accomplish this.

Integrity is the key to becoming an effective role model which my whole essay is based upon. To become a man or woman of integrity, you must know what it means first. The dictionary defines integrity as moral uprightness, honesty, sincerity. Time to wake up America. This is a lost virtue.

I question what we've come to when police and fire fighters risk their lives daily and get paid next to nothing, when Hollywood superstars and sports Hall of Famers get paid millions and millions for entertaining us. And once, not too long ago, young children looked up to these officers who save lives. Not sports stars, they were okay but not worshiped as gods! Now sports stars are worshiped as gods, and police and fire fighters are nothing but men and women with a blue vest with a gun, or someone who carries a hose on a fire truck. Something's wrong here, and my generation will fix this problem.

Anyway, since integrity is the key, we must learn to have it. All this talk about how you can become an effective role model, you're probably wondering how I plan to. I plan to be a role model by doing mostly what I told you today, by having integrity, and one other thing, I will live by the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." This is how I plan to become an effective role model in today's society.

Do what is right

By CASSIDY WEBB
Grade 7

With all that's happening in today's society, we youth need effective role models. With all the drugs, alcohol, guns, violence and everything else, we need a good solid foundation to look at. But how does one become an effective role model in today's society? By being the best one can be in all of one's endeavors.

What exactly is an effective role model? In some of the teen-agers in today's society's eye, it is a drug dealer. Or someone who does drugs and drinks alcohol. Or someone who carries a gun around. That's pretty scary that these are who America — and the world's — future is looking up to.

In today's society, everyone needs an effective, positive role model. But, once again, what is an effective role model? An effective role model is one who cares about those who do look up to him or her and remembers to watch what he is doing, remembering that he is a potential role model.

Everyone is a role model in someone's eyes. Older brothers and sisters are role models for their younger brothers and sisters. One becomes an effective role model by looking at his or her actions through someone else's eyes. That other person's eyes being someone looking at him or her as a role model and trying to be like him or her.

Not all of the role models today are bad. There are some good ones. Look at Martin Luther King Jr. He spoke out for what was right. That's one of the qualities of a positive role model. And what about Anfernee Hardaway, point guard for the Orlando Magic? He rose from being poor and having nothing to where he is now. He took the initiative to reach his goal, getting into the NBA. That is a quality of a positive, effective role model.

Those are some examples of good, effective role models. America's youth looks up to today. Some of their qualities normal, everyday people can think about and try to be like. Speaking out for what is right and taking the initiative to reach your goals, instead of sitting around feeling sorry for yourself are some ways to become a good, positive effective role model.

You know, if adults and teen-agers took these qualities into consideration and attempted to show these qualities, America's youth would have better role models. If America's youth had better role models, America would have a better future. Everyone would think about what they are doing at all times and try and be an effective, positive role model. One becomes an effective, positive role model by having the qualities of a good role model and developing these qualities. Effective role models do what is right. Keep in mind that you are someone's role model and

Swiss Scientists Discover New Energy Product

Lugano, Switzerland—After 25 years of research Lightning B28 was developed with the help of Swiss Laboratories. After extensive testing with amazing results, Lightning B28 is now available in the United States. Scientists are amazed at Lightning B28's results on improved memory, attitude and athletic performance.

In a double blind cross-over trial on university students in Italy, Lightning B28 was given twice daily for 12 weeks. The results were astonishing. Students obtained higher scores in math, logic and physical education.

This new discovery has been a windfall for working and active people that seem to run short of energy around mid-afternoon and need a little extra lift. Lightning B28 when taken in the morning gives a sustained, balanced form of energy throughout the day.

During an interview in Chicago, a beautician stated, "I used to go home exhausted after being on my feet all day. Now it's just incredible. I go home with extra energy and really enjoy my family more." Lightning B28 is a necessary boost for students, professionals and senior citizens.

Striving for a goal

By ANGELA GRAMKOW
Grade 8

Today many people are considered role models because of their fame. But how many of them exhibit qualities worthy of being an example to others?

Consider this. As a society we make actors, actresses, athletes, musicians, etc. into role models for the general population. Their lives are supposed to be an ideal way of life, how we should act and do things. They did not ask to be role models, so they do not act like role models. Why then should we base our actions on theirs? We shouldn't.

To myself it makes more sense to choose a role model by the actions and life he or she leads. By doing that, we, as a nation, might choose better persons to look up to.

Take for instance a person who sets high standards for himself, yet no matter how well he succeeds, he always feels he

Don't forget to vote

Tuesday will be a big day for Republican presidential hopefuls. It's "Super Tuesday" election time, not only in Florida, but in several other states.

Several of the original candidates for the GOP nod have already dropped out of the race as the result of previous caucuses and primaries around the nation.

The few top runners however, will still be on the ballot in Florida. Candidates are seeking delegate representation to the Republican National Convention, which they hope will lead them to the ultimate position as the official party candidate for November's general election.

During many city, county, district and state elections in the past, the Sanford Herald has endorsed and urged voters to give serious consideration to a particular person. In the case of this Republican campaign however, we are not making a recommendation for any specific candidate.

Rather, we are urging every single voter to study the candidates and what they stand for. We also suggest considering how they have been conducting themselves in the past in such areas as previous government experience, dealings with the general public, and also their ethics.

Waiting until you enter the voting booth on Tuesday before making a decision is not in your best interests or those of your family, or our nation. Making an educated judgment based on what you believe is needed in a candidate is the best approach.

Each of the candidates has made some good points in his campaign. We would like to see the winning person is able to combine all the good points and eliminate the unfavorable ones, in the preparation of a campaign platform for the general election.

In past elections, there have been voters who have attempted to create their own candidates. Apparently disappointed by the choices on the ballot, people have written in such names as Mickey Mouse, Goofy, Dumbo, and others.

While there is no doubt Mickey Mouse has been a good influence on Florida's economy, his name should not be placed on a serious ballot of this type.

People who do this are merely showing that they have not done any homework about candidates, and probably shouldn't consider themselves as representing the will of the people.

Tuesday's election is important for the Republican campaign. We urge all Republicans to study the issues, study the people, then be sure to vote.

LETTER

Housing authority policy

In reply to your editorial of Feb. 28 "Thank You Mr. Hudson," I am compelled to point out that you have been most grievously misled.

There is no mention of the use or sale of cocaine in the police report of Mrs. Noble's grandson. He is accused of possession of marijuana with intent to sell. I would also like to point out that he has not been either tried or convicted.

Furthermore, your accusation that Mary Noble has done nothing to remedy the situation is entirely untrue. She has had the boy examined by doctors and he has been found to be mentally retarded as well as suffering from Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD). He is on medication and enrolled in a special program at school. Psychologists also found that he did not respond to adult authority.

Mary Noble has constantly warned her grandson to stay away from drugs and drug dealers. She searches his pockets when he comes home and disposes of any drug paraphernalia she finds. What more would you have this poor woman do?

You want drug dealers out of public housing? Punish the gully, not an innocent grandmother and six children, all under the age of 12.

But why stop at arrests? Why not have everyone in public housing tested for marijuana. All those who test positive can then be evicted and Tim Hudson can preside over his dream: public housing with no tenants.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Letters to the editor are welcome. All letters must be signed, include the address of the writer and a daytime telephone number. Letters should be on a single subject and be as brief as possible. The letters are subject to editing.

Are we replicating the squalor?

End welfare as we know it. This is a popular refrain this election year. Since Richard Nixon ran successfully for president in 1968, every presidential candidate, and most other candidates for public office have pledged to end welfare as we know it. As the 1996 election approaches the chorus of voices raising this cry is ever increasing. Drowned out in this hue and cry is a true review of welfare as we know it, what it is, what it represents, and what its purpose has been.

Welfare as we know it has come to represent transfer payments to the least fortunate individuals in our society. In attacking the institution of "welfare," we have come to demonize the recipients of this public assistance, often characterizing them as being immoral, irresponsible, unproductive and generally unworthy, to share in the fruits of our society.

In criticizing these transfer payments we conveniently neglect to refer to transfer payments to wealthy and propertied individuals as welfare. Is it not welfare to pay farmers and agri-business conglomerates not to produce? Is it welfare to provide subsidized electricity in the northwestern United States, or subsidized water to the Southwest? Is it welfare for the federal government to provide disaster aid every time there is a natural disaster to those who are caught in the earthquake, hurricane, tornado or other calamity? The fact is the federal government, and local governments often combine to reduce or minimize the risks of failure and disaster that we face in life as citizens and such aid is rarely if ever attached to need.

We all face the risk of poverty. Abject poverty can strike any individual, through combinations of mental illness, misfortune, depression, physical illness, lack of self esteem, or simply not knowing any better. There is an old saying, there but by the grace of God go I. This is a statement of humility that each of us would be well advised to remember the next time we see another citizen as being unworthy of sharing in the benefits of citizenship.

Welfare in this country has worked over the years. Welfare demonstrated a conscious decision that was made by this society during the great Depression not to allow those who were not doing well to be forced to live in squalor. The fact that the institution existed has prevented the spectacle of Americans living in the kinds of squalor that we see in Mexico City, Calcutta, and Rio de Janeiro. American citizens may live in areas that resemble dumps, but they do not live and eat in dumps as the citizens of these other cities.

Welfare has suffered mission creep. It was not designed as a program to lift individuals up and make them self sufficient. It was not designed to raise up a class of people or to end poverty. It was not designed to make people more moral, responsible or productive. Transfer payments alone will never accomplish these goals. You can legislate a lot of things, however, you will forever be frustrated in attempts to legislate morals, responsibility, and productivity.

The virtues of morality, responsibility, and productivity are particularly human traits which are based on human initiative and resistant to legislation. When we debate the end of these transfer payments as we know it, this year, we should not anticipate that these changes will lead to a thankful population of individuals who have suddenly found themselves happily more productive, possessed of greater moral fiber, and who suddenly have accepted self responsibility. Unfortunately, what we are likely to find is that we simply replicated the squalor and criminality which exists in Mexico City, Calcutta, and Rio de Janeiro, in the United States.

The environment is an issue again

WASHINGTON -- Maybe it's an epiphany -- or maybe just expediency -- but Republicans and Democrats have become born-again environmentalists.

President Clinton and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., are the two biggest converts. They've read the polls showing that voters reject the "Contract With America"'s assault on clean air and water.

Clinton, who has had a love-hate relationship with the issue, depending on the political climate, has recently been ripping "regulatory relief" as a ruse for taking the environmental cops off the beat.

Gingrich has been infinitely more shameful. Only last year, he regaled Republican donors with tales of an Environmental Protection Agency run amok, but now he says that his party is "strategically out of position on the environment." He hasn't accused the EPA of being a "jobs killing agency" since GOP pollster Linda DiVall concluded that "attacking the EPA is a non-starter" with voters.

Although one of his top lieutenants calls the EPA the "Gestapo of government" -- and Republicans seek to gut the agency's budget for enforcement and clean-up activities -- Gingrich recently pleaded for EPA intervention to stop the pollution of Georgia's Chattahoochee River. EPA officials have found this endlessly amusing.

As the leading enviro-evangelist of the Clinton administration, EPA Administrator Carol Browner has had few moments of mirth. She has coped with Republican contempt as well as White House indifference.

Although Clinton made the environment a focal point of his State of the Union address this year, the issue drew a fleeting reference in last year's speech. That's because Clinton pollster Dick Morris, despite his Republican credentials, counseled the president that the GOP had overreached on the environment.

Senior White House adviser George Stephanopoulos was among many officials who were more yellow than green when it came to the environment. He clashed repeatedly with Browner over the extent to which the environment would figure in the 1995 State of the Union address, according to White House sources.

Nor was it their first run-in. Shortly before the 1994 elections, Stephanopoulos went ballistic when he learned that Browner intended to issue regulations for reformulated gasoline, which would cause less air pollution but raise prices a few cents at the pump. Chief of Staff Leon Panetta ultimately settled the dispute in Browner's favor.

Arguing that the environment was a political loser, Stephanopoulos wanted to soft-pedal the issue in the 1995 speech. Browner wanted to galvanize voters against the Republicans, who were then pandering to polluters with big pocketbooks. In the end, Browner got the "e-word" inserted into the speech, but not much more. However, her vindication came when the environment went from being a throw-away line in 1995 to a wedge issue this year.

The Republicans helped things considerably by giving corporate America carte blanche to rewrite two decades of carefully crafted laws. Still, some EPA sources point to another turning point. It came immediately following the 1994 election, when Browner assembled her top political staff and lamented how the EPA was becoming "nebulous with the public."

Unfortunately, Gingrich and Clinton first had to read about it in the polls.

WRITER'S BLOCK

Meeting was a Hallmark moment

The happenstance about to unfold is vintage Hallmark -- a true Hallmark moment if there ever was one.

As childhood sweethearts, Vinnie and Denise lived five doors apart in South Seminole County (where their parents still live) and attended the same schools. Some 20 years ago when they were juniors at Lake Howell High School, Denise discovered she was carrying Vinnie's baby. As minors, they were frightened out of their wits and their only option seemed to be to give the baby up for adoption, Vinnie said.

This precious baby girl, Laurie, was adopted through an agency by my daughter and her husband who were later divorced. Mary married Barry and the family have since made their home in Sanford.

From the time Laurie was a tiny tyke, she talked incessantly about her birth parents and always speculated that when she turned 18, she would launch her search for them through the adoption agency. There were so many questions that needed answering and she was filled with unbridled curiosity. She went on to graduate from Seminole High School where she excelled in school activities as a cheerleader, Miss Seminole High School, the yearbook editor, a member of Tribe and other organizations, etc. Today, she attends college on a scholarship and is employed by two doctors.

Her 18th birthday arrived, and, sure enough, she eagerly, but cautiously approached the adoption agency to begin the routine procedure of locating her birth parents.

In the meantime, Vinnie and Denise had stayed in close touch with the adoption agency, leaving the doors open in the event that Laurie wanted to search them out.

You see, they suffered trying circumstances of having a baby out of wedlock (at the time, according to Vinnie), returned to school, stayed in love, and 10 years ago, they were married. During the entire 20 years, they have lived in Seminole County and for the past 10 years in Oviedo, about 15 minutes from Laurie. Denise even worked in Sanford for eight years.

After contacting the adoption agency, Laurie was to discover that she has a sister, Allie, 7, and a brother, Austin, 5. The agency arranged for the two families to meet at the agency and Laurie couldn't wait to meet her "other" family.

One night in late January of this year, Laurie and her mom were shopping for an outfit for her to wear to meet her birth parents the following week. En route home, they stopped by Anita's Hallmark card shop in the Altamonte Mall. Laurie lost interest in the cards while listening to the conversation of the young woman shopping for cards with her niece and two children. She heard the words "Aunt Denise" and the mother calling the children, "Allie and Austin."

SENIOR EDITOR

DORIS DIETRICH

Ashen, excited and somewhat terrified, Laurie did an about-face and dashed to her mom exclaiming, "Mom, it's them."

Mary confronted the woman, and sure enough, the families had found each other under these miraculous, extraordinary circumstances. Vinnie was next door shopping when Austin ran for him, telling him there was an emergency. Imagine his surprise when he met his daughter for a glorious reunion that called for hugs, kisses and a lot of tears. Laurie describes the exciting encounter as her "Hallmark moment."

Vinnie and Denise said they talked about Laurie during the 20 years and hoped that she would search them out. "When I saw her that night, I thought she was beautiful," Vinnie, who is also adopted, said. "We knew it was inevitable that we would get together. We are extremely happy."

Denise spoke of the heartache of giving up her baby and how she wanted her through the years. "I always knew this day was coming," she said. "When she and Vinnie were married, Denise said, 'Really, in my heart, I never wanted another child. Knowing I had this little person out there, I couldn't love another child. And then Allie came along to ease the emptiness.'"

Upon seeing Laurie for the first time, Denise said, "I was in shock." Continuing, she said, "I love her to death. I adore her. She's a good role model for the children (Allie and Austin). It's all just...awesome."

Mary says she is "very comfortable" with the situation. "I'm happy Laurie's search is over and I couldn't have planned it any better. Adoptees deserve to know who they are."

Mary continued, "Vinnie and Denise are wonderful people. I have always loved them for what they did for me -- gave me the the greatest thing in the world -- Laurie."

As for Laurie, she couldn't be happier. Her search has ended, her questions have been answered and she beams with pride as she shows the pictures she carries of her "newly-found" family.

In an enchanting, dramatic Hallmark ending, the family members on all sides are absolutely thrilled with each other and the incredible outcome of the priceless Hallmark moment.

Codes

Florian suggested that in addition to having certified plumbers, roofers and electricians effect the needed repairs to the units, Williams needed to "set up a regular inspection of the units for the purpose of fire safety as well as for health and sanitation reasons."

City fire inspectors also walked the properties and found them in violation of a number of code requirements including the lack of smoke detectors. Fire inspector Richard Cohen said fire alarms, when present, were mostly outdated and some had batteries removed.

Upon hearing the results of the inspections, the city commission agreed to give her 14 days to bring the properties to code. Commissioner Lon Howell had proposed that she be shut down immediately, but his fellow commissioners thought two weeks was more appropriate.

"We go through this problem just about every two years, and it's only getting worse," Howell said at the time. "It's time to close them down now."

The time limit expired Friday though an inspection of the properties is expected no earlier than tomorrow morning.

Friday afternoon Williams, her sister Margaret Hunter and a pack of workers were going around the compound trying to make sure the properties would pass inspection.

Williams, contacted by telephone Friday, refused to say anything that would be quoted directly in the paper. She acknowledged, however, that certified contractors had been hired.

She would not detail what work they had done or if they were done with the upgrades. Neither would she confirm if the work would meet city code.

She had no desire to speculate on what the outcome of the inspections might be.

City commissioners will decide the fate of the property at Monday night's commission meeting, City Hall, 7 p.m.

can do better or that he is not up to his standards. As he keeps striving to be better and better, he becomes a person with high moral values, and with an excellent education (that never ceases), informed about the world around him. I would prefer my life to be based on his values rather than those of a person who does not care in the least about being a role model to others.

Moral values seem to cause the most controversy in one's mind. To have them is essential. Without them there is no sense of right and wrong. Though they vary from person to person, in general, moral values give us guidelines on which to base our decisions. It is understandable to say that an effective role model must have high moral values.

Something I feel is just as important as moral values is an education. Without knowledge, all the technology and resources in the world would be useless. An effective role model uses his education to understand everything around him. With that information he works to help others understand also. A person who strives to be a role model is generous with his knowledge. This helps all to be better persons.

To use all your talents to the best of your ability, you must be aware of your surroundings. I could have quite a bit of knowledge but if I do not know the situation in which to apply it, the knowledge is useless. The ability to use one's information in a positive way to affect the world around you shows intelligence. In my opinion, anyone who has wisdom has the know-how and can do.

Combine all those traits with some common sense and a bit of good naturedness. You might add enthusiasm, and an outgoing personality. A person with most of these qualities is an excellent example of what I think a role model should be.

In truth, quite a few people could be considered effective role models. Not all of them live up to the standards I believe in, but if their lives give others a goal to reach for, they too are effective role models. All in all, if you help give another something to strive for, then you are an effective role model.

appropriate under the circumstances to abate any such nuisance.

The board also may call for the discontinuation of the nuisance, discontinuance of the operation of the structure, including boarding it up or closing it, and other avenues of approach.

It may also issue a fine of $250 for an initial finding of a public nuisance, and $500 for each subsequent finding at the same premises, over a one year time period.

The ordinance and establishment of the board was prompted by a number of complaints filed with the city and various city officials in the past, of constant problems connected with a number of structures. These included complaints of the use of vacated buildings for gatherings of youth gangs, gatherings for drug sales or use, the consumption of alcohol, and other similar activities.

Other complaints have been against constant loud noises, mostly from boom boxes, emanating from structures, often in the middle of the night.

Also scheduled for Monday night's regular commission meeting, is consideration of the appointment of five members to serve on the Nuisance Abatement Board on staggered terms. Three will be appointed for 2-year terms, and two will be appointed for 1-year initial terms.

Both items are scheduled for the regular Sanford City Commission meeting beginning at 7 p.m., in the Sanford City Hall, 300 N Park Avenue.

 "That's a keeper," she said.
 Lewis Givens of Norway, S.C. said he has been coming to Bike Week for three years.
 "It gets bigger and better every year," he said. "These people are real. They let their hair down and they do what they want. There aren't any pretenses here. That's what I like."
 Givens photographed young ladies in revealing outfits and older couples engaged in passionate kisses aboard motorcycles. He captured slim forms and heavy people in all manner of dress.

 "This is what I come for," he said. "It's a show that lasts a week, day and night. You can't beat that."
 Gary and Ruby Orr plan their vacation each year around the Bike Week celebration.
 The couple from Hamilton, Ontario, Canada loves to stand above the crowd and take pictures for themselves and for friends back home.
 "We come here every year to see the people," Gary said. "This is how we spend our vacation. We have friends back home who ride motorcycles who dream about spending their vacations here. We don't even own motorcycles. We just like to watch."

 Ruby captures on film a young woman in a revealing black leather outfit with a top constructed of chains.
 "There was a time I could have worn that," she said. "I wish I had."
 Sandy Leone of Daytona Beach parks her motorcycle on the right next to the sidewalk at Gilly's Pub 44 in New Smyrna Beach each year on the day of the annual Bike Bash.
 "I just stand up here and watch the world go by," she said. "This is such fun. There are so many great people to see."

 inches.
 "He's been around bikes his whole life," Argent said. "They were his lullabies from the time he was born and before. He'd be more upset by a musicbox that played Rock-a-Bye Baby than by one of these machines."
 Argent and her boyfriend, "Fatman" King, have been coming to Bike Week for more than a decade, but this is Jon's first experience.
 "It's a great place to bring a kid," she said, accepting a beer from a friend. "Everyone here cares about everyone else. Don't let any of these big old brutes fool you. They're just a bunch of teddy bears."
 A woman wearing a black leather thong, black fishnet stockings, four-inch spike heels and a sliver of a top leans over to admire the baby. Three men stop to admire her.
 "There are lots of other kids here and I think everyone is fun to watch," she said. "You can't tell me this isn't going to be a great place to teach him about different kinds of people as he gets older."
 David O'Shea, 6, nudged his father and shot him a cold stare as the elder O'Shea shouted for a female biker to expose her breasts (a Bike Week tradition).
 "I'm talking to your mother," Lee O'Shea of Gary, Indiana told his son. "It's OK."
 The father said he used to think Bike Week was a good place to bring his son, but he's changed his mind. "The problem is not in what one sees or can do at Bike Week," he said.
 "But I've got another chaperone," he said, shaking his head and tousling the youngster's golden curls.
 Becky Gauda and her husband Emil arrived at Bike Week celebrations with two-year old twins Zachary and Julirose and seven-year-old Ryan.

 The Deltona family said they come to Bike Week each year to see friends.
 "And the kids love motorcycles as much as we do," Becky said. "They love 'em."
 They aren't on their bikes this year because Emil hurt his leg in a cycling accident a few weeks ago.
 "But most years we're out here on our bikes," she added.

 Of course there are those who attend Bike Week to get away from their children.
 "Jesus H. Christ I don't want my kids here," said Larry Davis of Miami. "I leave the little monsters with their grandma and get the hell out of town a couple of weeks a year. I'm 'Daddy' all year long. I want to let my hair down and be a real person when I come here."

Becky Gauda, left, her husband Emil, right, and their children Zachary and Julirose, both 2, and Ryan, 7, enjoy the activities at Bike Week as a family.

Jeff Kimber watches intently as tattoo artist Tom Meyer inks in a permanent design on his friend Bianca Cooper's ankle.

Tattoo

The canvas, you see, was his skin; the medium, tattoos.

A few yards away, a half pit bull half Rhodesian Ridgeback mutt stared blankly through yellow eyes as other men and women on motorcycles made their way down the dirt drive to the compacted grass lot near the intersection of state roads 415 and 44. He blinked neither at the roaring engines or the blindingly bright chrome, but watched each new arrival with disdain.

"Tattoo!" a young man with a reddish goatee called. The animal moved slowly toward the tarp overhang attached to a motor home. Before he could settle into a sunny spot on the colorful plastic mat below makeshift tent, he was ordered inside the home.

"We want to make this as sterile as possible," said Tom Meyer, settling onto a comfortable office chair and removing a six-inch long needle from its aseptic packaging and inserting it in a palm-sized stylus.

Meyer, owner of Ink Addictions in Stuart, said he has been creating tattoo art on customers in his own establishment for several years. He took the show on the road last week for the Bike Week celebration in Volusia County.

"I think a lot of people are fascinated by tattoos," he said, checking over a consent form signed by Bianca Cooper of Altamonte Springs who stopped at the roadside stand on a whim.

"I've thought about getting a tattoo before," the young woman said, examining the outline of the design she selected which had been drawn on her right ankle. "We just passed by and I thought it was time. That's how I do things."

Meyer, himself, is a mobile gallery of the ancient art with tattoos encircling his arms, on his chest and spread across the whole of his back. He did several pieces of the artwork himself.

"Great, aren't they?" he said, showing Cooper the varied patterns and colors. "It doesn't hurt at all. It's more of an annoyance than anything."

Cooper bravely draped her leg across a leather covered rest and turned her head away, biting her lower lip. As Meyer touched the needle, dipped in ink, to her skin, she jumped then settled quickly.

As the needle implanted a thin line of ink in the shape of a stylized cross beneath her skin, she held her friend Jeff Kimber's hand. As Meyer began filling in the outline, she began to chew on her knuckles instead.

Finally, the picture was complete, she stopped gnawing and once again breathed before grabbing a cigarette from her purse and lighting it with trembling hands. After exhaling the first drag slowly, she looked warily into the mirror that Meyer aimed at her ankle.

"That wasn't bad at all," she said, taking another slow drag from the cigarette. Meyer explained to Cooper how she should care for the tattooed area to avoid infection and to preserve the color during the healing process. He patted on a layer of anti-bacterial cream and covered it with a bandage before sending her on her way.

Silently, Meyer began sweeping up the area around his table and disposing of the needle, the rubber gloves he had worn for the procedure and wiping away splatters of ink with a disinfectant and a paper towel.

"We get a lot of curiosity seekers come through here, but quite a few people have stopped to get a tattoo," he said. "We do pretty good business during Bike Week."

Murder

checking area businesses, bars and homeowners, fanning out for clues," Roberts said.

Police believe the woman was killed elsewhere before her body was discarded near the dumpster. Roberts speculated the woman may have been killed Friday night.

The cause of death had not yet been determined, but the body was transported Saturday to the medical examiner's office in Sanford, where an autopsy will be performed today.

Roberts described the woman as a white female with short blonde hair, five-foot six inches tall, weighing between 130 and 135 pounds. She was wearing red plaid boxer shorts, a gray Wilson athletic T-shirt and white socks. Both her ears and her navel were pierced. A large scar on her back could have been from surgery. Roberts said one earring remaining in her ear was nondescript and silver. She wore a bracelet on her wrist which appeared to be made of black leather.

"It was grizzly. We have our work cut out for us," Roberts said.

The last murder in Longwood occurred almost 10 years ago when two black males posing as pizza delivery men knocked on the door of a retired Army general's home in the Devonshire area. The general met the men at the door brandishing a 9mm pistol. Gunfire was exchanged. The general was shot and never fully recovered, dying a year later. One of the suspects was also shot, and bled to death when the pair escaped, fleeing toward Sanford. His partner left him to die in the car, fleeing on foot. He was later caught, Roberts said.

Roberts asks anyone with information about the woman found dead Saturday morning to call Longwood Police at 339-1297.

College in Daytona Beach to complete their high school education. I believe I understood that Crooms Academy replaced Hopper in the late 1920s; it added grades 11 and 12 at that time.

Throughout the county, there were several one-teacher black schools, most of which housed grades one through eight. Students were then bused to Crooms, the only black school in Seminole County.

Thelma Franklin taught at one of these schools in Wagner until 1950 when she transferred to Goldsboro Primary. She remembers that she drove out there everyday in a Model T Ford, taking several Sanford children with her to help boost the enrollment. She also remembers that she would enlist the older children to help teach the younger ones. Her salary was $38 per month.

The other one-teacher black schools and their teachers were: Bookertown, Olive Strickland and later Wyp Bracey; Ft. Reed, Leola Bryant; Jamestown, Mrs. James; Geneva, Ida Muller; Forest City, Louise Blair. There was also a school at Markham.

Several in the group had memories of Professor J.N. Crooms. Earl Minott said that he had known him from childhood and revealed that he had taken piano lessons from him for 10 years. He remembered him as always being very well dressed.

In addition to his being her principal, Mrs. Franklin recalled that Professor Crooms was also her Latin teacher. Several knew that he had been a close friend of Mary McLeod Bethune.

Crooms Academy was built in the late 1920s and graduated its first class in 1931. Professor Crooms was principal from its beginning until he retired in 1953.

After Professor Crooms retired, Roy Allen from Ft. Lauderdale became principal.

Following him was H.L. Douglas and lastly, Edward Blackheare. In the fall of 1970, Crooms Academy merged with Seminole High and the Crooms building became a ninth grade center.

Earl Minott joined the Crooms faculty in 1955 as the high school music teacher. After Mrs. Holly retired three years later, he also taught music to the junior high students. In addition to teaching music, he was sometimes assigned classes in history, science and English.

We found out that Alfreda Wallace was a star basketball player at Crooms. Others on the team included Eunice Wilson, Thelma Sheppard and Olive Johnson. Coaches she remembered were Eva Grace and Flossie Browning.

Other Crooms faculty members were Francina Martin, Eva Myers, Catherine Holly, Grace Hankerson, Thelma Black, Evelyn Anderson, Angie Douglas, H.L. Douglas, Natholyn Crooms Jenkins, Wealthy Crooms, John Lawson, Willie Ashley, Elouise Eubanks, C.B. Franklin and Doris Thomas.

The clubs at Crooms that the group remembered were Future Farmers of America, Homemakers of America, Future Business Leaders, Hi Y, Tri Hi Y and Weirich. The latter was a girls' club, probably similar to a sorority.

When integration came in 1970, Thelma Franklin remembered that she and Thelma Hall were assigned to Pinecrest Elementary (grades 1-3) which was paired with Goldsboro Elementary (grades 4-5). The remaining black teachers at Goldsboro were placed in a pool from which principals could select teachers to fill their quota.

Brantley bounces back

Sitz hurls Patriots to first win of season

By TONY DESORMIER
Herald correspondent

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — That wasn't a monkey that the Lake Brantley Patriots shook off their collective back Friday night. It was a gorilla.

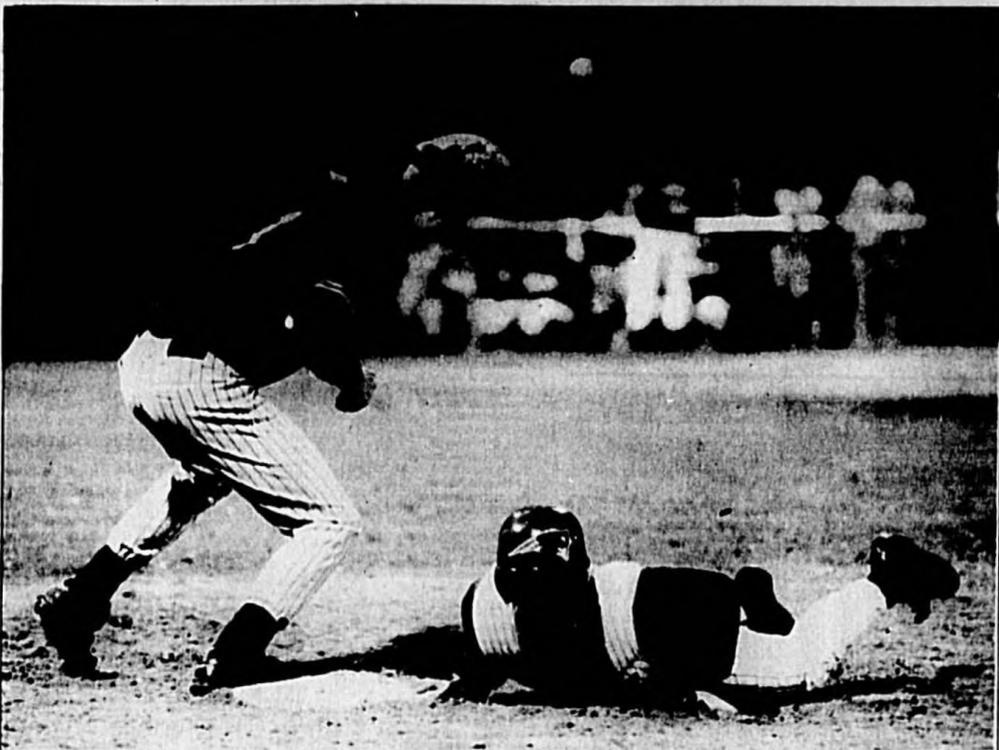

Off to an 0-6 start and trying to rebound from their "lost weekend" in Tampa that resulted in 18 players receiving a 10-day suspension, the Patriots were in dire need of some good news. Robert Sitz delivered.

Working in his first start of the regular season, Sitz tossed a no-hitter through five innings Friday night, leading the Patriots to a 3-1 Seminole Athletic Conference win. See Patriots, Page 4B

Knorst, Bowen rally Lake Howell

By GARY COATMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — After a solid all-around performance in Friday's 3-2 come from behind win over Seminole in Seminole Athletic Conference baseball action at Alumni Field, it's easy to understand why Major League Baseball scouts want to get a first-hand look at Lake Howell pitcher Kevin Knorst.

Knorst recorded 11 strikeouts over seven innings Friday while giving up just four hits and four walks to improve to 3-2 on the season. With scouts from the Kansas City Royals, Baltimore Orioles, Montreal Expos and Chicago Cubs watching the action against the Tribe, Knorst was 3-for-4 at the plate with an RBI and a run scored.

"Kevin is a very talented young man," said Lake Howell coach Birto Benjamin. "We have been pleased with his performances as a pitcher, hitter and right fielder this season." But Knorst's performance was nearly wasted as Seminole's Brian Zaladonis had held the Silver Hawks to only one run on six hits through six innings and held a 2-1 lead. But Knorst started the Lake Howell rally in the seventh inning with a one out single. Brandon Bowen then hit a home run over the left field fence to give the Silver Hawks a lead they would never surrender. "We have lost five one-run games this season, but we are playing good baseball," said Seminole coach Mike Powers. "Brian Zaladonis pitched well for us, but Kevin Knorst was fantastic for Lake Howell. Mike Meadows had a nice triple, but just couldn't drive him in." Knorst had a two-out single for Lake Howell in the first inning for the Silver Hawks, but was forced out at second on a fielder's choice by Brandon Bowen. Phillip Eubanks then got Seminole going in the first inning with a lead off walk, reached third on an error, and scored on a passed ball to give the Tribe a 1-0 lead. Browns Central teams capture 'Alamo'

Special to the Herald
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS — The Browns Central Gymnastics Team traveled to San Antonio, Texas during the weekend of February 23-25th to compete in the Alamo City Invitational. Brown's Level 5 and Level 6 teams brought home 53 medals and 27 ribbons. The Level 6 team wound up first with a total combined score of 145.05 and finished ahead of Kips Gymnastics of Mississippi and Eagle Gymnastics of Mexico. The Level 6 8-11 year old division claimed three All-Around placements with Jessica Blick leading the way by capturing the First Place All-Around Title with a score of 35.95. Teammate Jill Cody finished third with a score of 35.15 and Megan Mather wound up sixth after scoring 34.45 points. But it was Brown's Level 5 squad that stole the show, with Squad "A" claiming the championship and Squad "B" finishing second. Karoly's Gymnastics of Texas came in a distant third. The Level 5 team showed their fierce competitiveness when Kathryn Kelly earned almost a perfect score on the Uneven Bars as her routine earned her a score of 9.95 out of a possible 10.00. Kelly finished first in the 7-8 age division. See Gymnastics, Page 4B

Escambia County angler catches more than supper — a record blue catfish

A 24-year-old Century angler who went fishing Feb. 11 near his home to catch a few fish for his family to eat caught a state record 61.50-pound blue catfish.

Vincent Ray Walston's catch far surpassed the previous record blue catfish of 53 pounds, caught in 1990 from the Escambia River. Even more surprising, Walston made his catch on the lightweight Zebco 33 rod and reel, 10-pound test and No. 10 hook.

Walston called the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission's Panama City office and before long, fisheries biologist Ross Dames met with him and confirmed his catch.

SHUPE'S SCOOP
MOST ANGLERS LOSE BIG FISH BECAUSE THEY BECOME TOO ANXIOUS AND ATTEMPT TO LAND THEIR PRIZE TOO EARLY. IT IS SIGNIFICANT TO NOTE THAT MOST LARGE FISH ARE LOST AT BOATSIDE, WHERE THEY ARE CAPABLE OF MAKING A POWERFUL LAST MINUTE SURGE FOR FREEDOM. IF THERE ARE NO NEARBY OBSTRUCTIONS, MAINTAIN A LOOSE DRAG AND PLAY THE FISH PATIENTLY. I PREFER TO APPLY MY FOREFINGER TO THE DRAG TO INCREASE PRESSURE WHEN NEEDED.

FISHING FORECAST
 High winds are predicted for this weekend, but there are plenty of places to hide and catch a bass or two. Areas of running water are the top places to fish as these spots typically serve as ambush spots for bass. Large shiners fished near or under floating mats of water hyacinths are sure spots for heavyweight bass.

Flounder, redfish, snook, ladyfish, jack crevalle and small bluefish are roaming in and out of Sebastian Inlet. The outgoing tide is best, as bait is funneled out of the inlet into swarms of awaiting gamefish. The currents will be particularly strong due to the effects of the full moon.

Walston said friend Mark Brittingham dropped off him and his three-year-old daughter, Nikki, Sunday afternoon to fish a favorite spot on the Little Escambia Creek. He had three reels baited with chicken livers when he saw one of the rod tips bending wildly.

"About the time I grabbed for my rod, the fish took off and almost yanked my rod in the water," Walston said Monday. "I tightened up the drag and kept hoping Mark would get back."

Trying to keep an eye on his daughter, Walston played the catfish for 35 minutes. Brittingham arrived and as Walston pulled the huge catfish near the bank, Brittingham grabbed the catfish by the lip with a pair of channel-lock pliers. Walston said he quickly grabbed a fish stringer, lassoed the catfish's tail and together they hoisted his fish onto the bank.

Unfamiliar with the process to have a record fish verified, Walston and Brittingham drove around north Escambia County for more than two hours Sunday night trying to find scales large enough to weigh his fish. Unsuccessful but not undaunted, Walston took his 47.50-inch fish home and kept it alive in the family bathtub until Monday morning.

Hunters and outdoors enthusiasts score big victory with Farm Bill

By BILL SCHULZ
 Associated Press Writer

Hunters and outdoors enthusiasts won an important victory when the House approved the farm bill, sending it on to a conference committee. Among the bill's many benefits to wildlife and land conservation, however, is a provision that could harm some trout fisheries.

The bill, passed by the House last week, reauthorizes the Conservation Reserve Program, which allows the agriculture department to pay farmers to retire marginal or highly erodible land from crop production and devote it to soil, water and wildlife conservation for at least 10 years.

The 36.4 million acres of land in the program includes about 8 million acres of prime waterfowl breeding habitat in the prairie pothole region of the upper Midwest.

The bill maintains the program at its present size, 36.4 million acres, an area the size of Illinois, at a cost of $1.5 billion over seven years.

The stinger is an amendment by Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., which allows operators of private dams on public land to completely stop water flowing through the dams.

"It could severely damage trout fisheries out West," said Mike Hayden, president of the American Sportfishing Association. Other than that, "it's a tremendous bill, as good as we could hope for," he said.

Rep. Bill Barnett, R-Neb., and Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., introduced the amendment in the House to reauthorize CRP and create a $200 million-a-year program designed to assist crop and livestock producers in dealing with environmental and conservation improvements.

CRP has tripled waterfowl nesting success and helped increase North American duck populations by 40 percent, according to the conservation group Ducks Unlimited. Reauthorization of CRP was one of DU's top priorities for the farm bill.

"This program is essential for not only waterfowl, but many other wildlife species," said Eric Schenck, Ducks Unlimited's manager of agricultural and conservation policy. "That's why such diverse groups like Pheasants Forever, the National Wildlife Federation and the American Sportfishing Association worked together to help pass this legislation."

Skil Baron, National Wildlife Federation Central Division staff director, said the bill "represents a consensus among the farming, sporting and environmental communities for common-sense conservation that jointly benefits the economy and wildlife."

Hayden said CRP benefits anglers because it reduces runoff of all pesticides, herbicides and fertilizers into streams and lakes.

"Fish have a much healthier environment in which to live," he said.

One change in the program is a provision allowing farmers to terminate CRP contracts with the Agriculture Department that have been held for at least five years. The most environmentally sensitive lands will not be eligible for termination, however.

Money saved by termination of contracts may be used by the secretary to pay for new contracts.

A second change modifies the secretary of agriculture's authority for enrolling land in the Wetlands Reserve Program. Currently all WRP lands are under permanent easements. The revision allows the secretary to use only temporary easements and cost-share restoration agreements to enroll new lands. The provision is designed to save $300 million over seven years.

The Environmental Quality Incentive Program is to help farmers meet environmental and water quality mandates. The $200 million per year could be used for animal waste management facilities, terraces, waterways, filter strips or other structural and management practices to protect water, soil and related resources.

Dawson works like rookie in 20th spring training

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Sports Writer

MELBOURNE — Andre Dawson arrived without fanfare. He quietly put on his teal and black jersey, tightly wrapped his scarred knees and then jogged into the Florida sunshine for his 20th spring training.

Behind him are seven All-Star starts, eight Gold Gloves, the 1977 NL rookie of the year award, the NL MVP a decade later, 438 career home runs, 501 doubles and 11 knee operations.

Ahead of him is another six-week grind. At 41, he is as physically impressive as he was when he began his major league career with the Montreal Expos.

As the Florida Marlins' first full workout was ending, Dawson powered his way across the outfield. One end of a harness was attached to his sculpted upper body, the other end to Devon White, who stared in wonder.

Dawson learned 20 years ago what it would take to play baseball with the type of energy, commitment and passion he wanted. Twenty years later, he hasn't forgotten.

"I don't take for granted the ability I've been blessed with," he said. "I have to work just as hard as a guy trying to make this ball club as a rookie. That's the only thing I've ever known, growing up and playing this game over the years. You've got to put in the time and effort to produce results."

Maybe that's why Dawson can keep coming back with something to offer, why Marlins manager Rene Lachemann suggests he could play until age 50 if not for the bum knees.

True, Dawson hasn't played in at least 140 games or hit at least 20 home runs since 1992, his last year with the Chicago Cubs. The knee operations have limited his range in the outfield, where he once possessed one of the most feared arms in baseball.

Then again, he's not out here as a figurehead, either. When Gary Sheffield went on the disabled list with a broken thumb last June, Dawson took his place and hit .342 with two doubles, a triple and four homers during a nine-day road trip.

"I didn't see anyone throw a fastball by him,"

Lachemann said. "His bat speed is good, his legs are good. I have no problem with the Hawk. If he stays healthy, that job is there for him."

That job is mainly welding a big bat off the bench and spelling Sheffield or Jeff Conine in the outfield. Dawson understands he no longer will be an everyday layer. If he didn't love the game so much, or if the Marlins had told him they didn't want him back, he could easily have left.

Neither being the case, he gives the Marlins what he can.

"I've been in the twilight of my career for years now," he said. "It's tough to be consistent when you're not out there every day, so durability becomes more important. Even if I don't play another game, that's all fine, too. Because I put my time in."

His last game could have been two years ago, but Dawson didn't want to end his career on strike. It could have been last year, when he went on the disabled list for the month of July with a strained hip muscle.

Instead, he left the decision to the Marlins. And here he is again, playing for $500,000, which is what the Cubs paid him in 1987 after he signed a blank contract and then went out and won an MVP award.

Why would the Marlins bother?

"He still brings fear to the plate, he can play the outfield if you have an injury and his leadership," said general manager Dave Dombrowski, who is two years younger than Dawson. "If he only had the leadership, we wouldn't have re-signed him."

Dawson and Terry Pendleton bring a winning attitude to the Marlins, who are expected to compete for a wild-card berth in their fourth season.

"He's a quiet leader," Pendleton said. "He busts his butt out there. Kids see him doing that when he's 41, 42 years old and realize they should be doing double-time. It's amazing. I've only seen two guys — Hawk and Willie McGee — who have the same body they walked into this game with. They have a work ethic that enables them to play this game for a long time."

This type of close quarters action is expected today when the Daytona 200 motorcycle race is contested at Daytona International Speedway. Atlanta's Scott Russell will be after his record-setting fourth straight victory in America's premier motorcycle event.

Russell chasing history at Daytona

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH — The Daytona 200 is America's premier motorcycle race, and Scott Russell owns it.

The 31-year-old from Atlanta has won the race three straight times. None of the victories has come easily, and last year's was nothing short of unbelievable.

"Last year, I fell down, then got back up and won," Russell said. "When I fell down, I couldn't believe it. It was only the second lap. I got right up and I looked to see if I had knocked off a handlebar or anything, but the bike was fine."

"I got the bike up, but I couldn't push it off myself. I was really getting frustrated, but some of the corner workers helped me get it going again."

"When it fired up, I knew I was going to win the race. I just felt it. I won Daytona from the back the first time, but even falling down, last year was the easiest race I ever won. I got up and just won it."

Now, the Grand Prix racer is back for his only appearance this year in the USA, and he has his sights set on winning today at Daytona International Speedway.

"I'm just excited to be back in America and in Daytona," Russell said. "I've won this race three times and I know how to do it. I'm here to win it a fourth straight time and make some history."

"Of course, there are a lot of good riders in this race, or at least that's what they tell me. I expect the toughest race I've ever had."

If he does win again Sunday, he will do it in the debut of a brand new bike — the Suzuki GSX-R750 Superbike.

"My chances are great," Russell said. "I tested the new bike in December and it was fast right out of the crate."

"This is the new generation bike. They've put a lot of work into it. It's totally redesigned from the bike Suzuki raced from 1988 to '95; everything, frame, engine. It's really geared toward winning."

"They've taken the Formula One bike in Europe and tried to build one like it with a different engine. And they've tried to build a really serious street bike."

"Suzuki has kind of been behind in sales, but with this new GSX-R750, it's like they said, 'Man, let's sell some motorcycles.' They're building the best bike they can build. And I asked to ride it. They didn't have to come to me."

Umatilla's Hofmann chases NHRA title, not John Force

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — John Force has been in the way of every NHRA Funny Car contender lately, winning five championships in the last six years. That strengthens the drive of every contender to beat him, and Al Hofmann is no exception.

Despite the intense rivalry between the two men and their close races, Hofmann insists he isn't obsessed with Force.

"It's not about the man. It's about the title."

"As far as the Winston championship goes, that's something we want," Hofmann said, "and John is in the way of that."

Their rivalry continues next week (Thursday through Sunday, March 14-17) at Gainesville Raceway, the third event of the 19-race season.

Hofmann improved his record against Force to 7-5 since February 1995 with a victory in the season-opening race at Pomona, Calif. Force countered with a victory at Phoenix to take the points lead with 212. Hofmann, from Umatilla, is second with 148 in his Pontiac Firebird after losing in the first round at Phoenix.

"The guys have to take out John (in the early rounds)," Hofmann said. "He's been lucky about that. But for the fans, I'd like to see it come down to me and John in the final every race."

While Hofmann insists he has no animosity toward Force, he's not crazy about his new toy.

Force unveiled a state-of-the-art bus at Pomona. The luxurious coach is packed with amenities. A huge Force signature is painted in red on both sides of the bus.

"He's come out here with his three-ring circus, his bus," Hofmann said. "The way I've raced all these years, and to finally have some money, I think that's kind of going overboard."

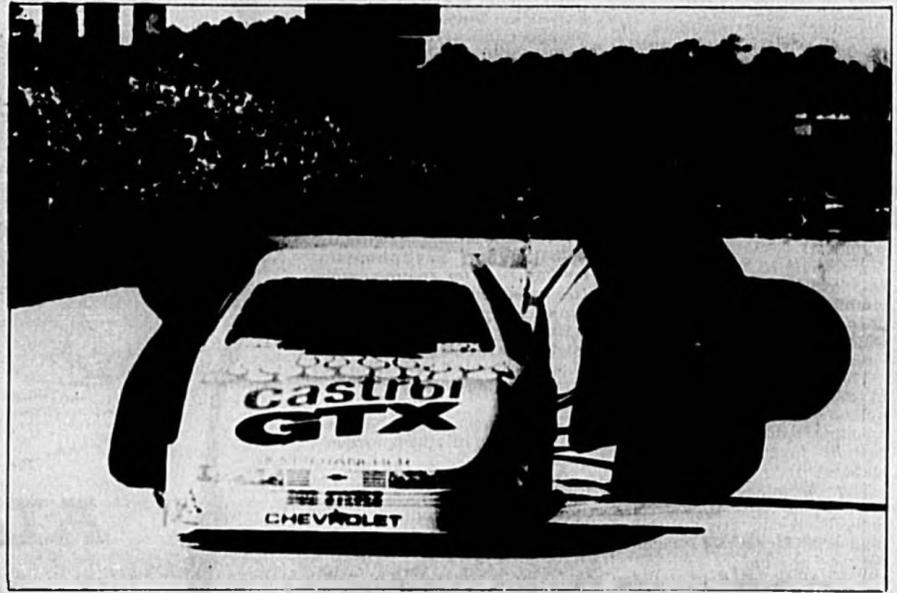

"That will make it that much better when we beat him."

Hofmann raced without major sponsorship until 1994, when he picked up Western Auto.

There has been talk about the emergence of new blood, but Hofmann isn't listening.

Young drivers such as Dean Skuzs and Whit Bazemore have the sponsorship and mechanical talent to contend, but Hofmann predicts it will come down to the four drivers who have held the top spots in the points since 1993: Force, Hofmann, Cruz Pedregon and Chuck Etchells.

"John and I have been racing against each other for years," Hofmann said. "The guys like myself, Chuck, Cruz Pedregon and Force, we've been out there for years and winning races."

John Force (above) has been the class of the NHRA's funny car division the past six years, but Umatilla's Al Hofmann is hot on his trail as the division heads to Gainesville this week.

over the visiting

Oviedo Lions.

"That breaks the ice," said Lake Brantley coach Mike Smith, who took his team to Miami for a game with Westminster Academy on Saturday. "We really needed this."

Bits, who was working with a 75-pitch limit, left the game after the fifth, having thrown 68 pitches. Other than a one-out error and a pair of walks that loaded the bases for the Lions in the second inning, Bits was near-perfect, striking out six and retiring the Lions in order in four of his five innings.

"This is his first start of the season," said Smith. "We didn't want him to throw more than 75 pitches tonight. He had 68 through five, so we decided to get him out of the game, even though he was throwing a no-hitter."

"We had to get some other pitchers (relievers Shawn Child and Tanner Brock) some work. Child is coming off injury rehabilitation and Tanner needs to get his work. Because of the suspensions, we're four or five games behind everyone else. Right now, we're just playing catch-up."

Lake Brantley (1-6, 1-1 SAC) jumped on Oviedo starting pitcher Kenny Birch for two runs in the first inning. Danny Hunt led off with an infield single, stole second, and scored on David Levine's double. After moving to third on Bryan Grassing's sacrifice, Levine scored when Jeffrey Hall's grounder was misplayed.

Justin Varitek supplied the Patriots' other run. He led off the bottom of the second inning with a double and came around to score when Matt Krot's sacrifice bunt was thrown away at first base.

"We're going to have to scrap for runs," said Smith. "Our goal is to try and create a run an inning. We have to try and take advantage of every opportunity."

"We have 15 new faces on the varsity this year. It's tough when they don't know how to win at the varsity level. What we're going to try to do is put pressure on the defense and go out and play good defense ourselves."

The only hit the Patriots had after Varitek's double was Jeffrey Hall's single to open the sixth inning.

For Oviedo (6-6, 1-2 SAC), Richie Schoeck singled off Child to break the no-hitter, then ruined the shutout when he scored on a bases-loaded double play. Andy Neufeld also hit a single.

Lake Brantley will play again Wednesday, when the Patriots will host the Lake Howell Silver Hawks in another SAC contest. Oviedo, which played at Deltona Saturday afternoon, travels to Sebring on Tuesday.

Allan Gehr then singled to lead off the second inning for Seminole, reached second on a sacrifice bunt by Chris Louwama, and pushed the Tribe lead to 2-0 after two wild pitches.

with an All-Around score of 37.25. Teammate Dana Comber was second with a score of 34.80.

In the 9-11 year old age division for Level 5, Browns swept the All-Around Placement, not allowing any other gymnast from another team to sneak into the top six spots.

Allison Abesamis finished first with a score of 36.80, Valerie Ryerson was second with a score of 36.50, Pam Gray grabbed third with a score of 36.30, Morgan Rutherford placed fourth with a score of 35.85, Krysten Conley wound up fifth with a score of 35.20 and Kacy Hood rounded out the sweep with a score of 35.05 to claim sixth place.

Allison Nelson and Sharon Wain rose to the occasion to lead Browns Central to a sweep of the first five All-Around placements in the 12-14 age division. Nelson grabbed the first place All-Around title with a score of 37.15, while Wain captured second place with a score of 36.00.

Completing the Browns sweep were Ashley Brown in third place with a score of 35.30, Stephaine Richards in fourth place with a score of 33.65 and Lindsay Orale in fifth place with a score of 33.60.

In the Level 5 12-year old division, Melissa Powell finished first on every event (Uneven Bars, Floor Exercise, Balance Beam and Vault) which, by no surprise, gave her the first place All-Around Title with a score of 35.35.

After competition, the competitors visited the Alamo and RiverWalk. The athletes enjoyed the sites of San Antonio almost as much as they enjoyed their sweep of the Alamo Invitational.

and three walks in 6 2/3 innings for Seminole while recording four strikeouts, and Jim Rabun allowed just one walk in relief. Meadows was 2-for-3 to lead the Tribe, while Rob Denmon was 1-2 and Gehr was 1-for-3. Eubanks, Denmon, Chris Youmans and Terrell Jackson each drew a walk for Seminole.

Donald Taylor drew two walks for Lake Howell, and Marco

Prieto drew another in his only appearance at the plate. Nick Hajek was 1-for-3 at the plate for the Silver Hawks, while Lieflander, Baker and J.J. DePiro were each 1-for-4.

Seminole (6-6) was to have hosted Satellite in a Class 5A-District 6 game on Saturday afternoon and will travel to Kissimmee Monday night for another 5A-6 game against Osceola starting at 7 p.m.

IN BRIEF

Parathyroid disease in the spotlight

GAINESVILLE — Patients who fail to secrete the right amount of an important hormone that stabilizes cell membranes actually may be the victims of an immune attack launched by their own bodies. University of Florida researchers report.

Results of the UF study, of a hormone deficiency disease called idiopathic hypoparathyroidism, are published in the February issue of the Journal of Clinical Investigation.

Researchers found that idiopathic hypoparathyroidism — a condition characterized by low blood calcium levels, leading to spontaneous muscle spasms of the hands and face, convulsions or epileptic seizures — can be traced to the body's misguided assault on cellular structures in the parathyroid glands.

The oval, pea-sized glands — usually found in the neck buried within the thyroid gland — secrete parathyroid hormone (PTH), key to controlling calcium levels in blood within a tight range in healthy people.

Normal blood calcium levels are necessary to stabilize the membranes that encase many cells in the body, especially those of muscles and nerves.

Survival increases for liver transplants

ORLANDO — Liver transplants managed by CAC-United HealthCare Plans of Florida's organ and tissue transplant management company, United Resource Networks, show significantly higher one- and two-year survival rates than the national averages, according to a study just released by United Resource Networks. The study also revealed that since 1990, United Resource Networks has saved health care purchasers and consumers an average of 33 percent per liver transplant procedure.

The 1994 study focused on the survival rates of 80 liver transplant patients whose cases were managed by United Resource Networks between 1991 and 1993. The study's cost data reflects liver transplant cases managed by United Resource Networks from 1990 through August 1995. Last year, United Resource Networks managed 233 liver transplant cases through its transplant network.

A first for umbilical cord transplant

GAINESVILLE — An Atlantic Beach woman with a severe form of leukemia is the first adult in Florida, at Shands Hospital, to undergo a transplant of umbilical cord blood to replace blood cells damaged by cancer.

Umbilical cord blood transplantation represents a recently developed alternative to bone marrow transplantation that is being performed in a limited number of medical institutions in the world. It is used when the cancer has resisted other known remedies and when no suitable bone marrow donor is available. One of the limitations of cord blood transplantation has been that, due to the small amount of blood contained in a placenta, the procedure has been limited primarily to children.

Placentas, typically discarded after birth, contain between 20 and 40 teaspoons of blood that provide an excellent source for stem cells, the immature cells that produce elements needed to replace blood cells destroyed by disease. Women giving birth at institutions with cord blood banks must give consent before the placenta is taken and stored.

Seminole part of hotline service

From staff reports

SANFORD — The Association for Responsible Medicine (ARM), a statewide patient advocacy group rallied this week in support of the Hospital Safety Bill.

At that rally Ray McEachern, the founder of the ARM with his wife, Pat, announced the availability of the Doctor Hotline for people living in Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties.

"The Doctor Hotline saves lives and heartaches because it helps people protect themselves from medical mistakes that are killing or injuring thousands of people each year," McEachern said. "Hospitals don't want people to know their mistake rates because doctors want patients to believe that mistakes aren't common. That's why we're working to pass the Hospital Safety Bill."

"Mistakes in hospitals kill more people than gun violence and auto accidents combined. People see news reports about these deaths every day, but hospital mistakes don't make the headlines — they just make headlines."

The Hospital Safety Bill is being sponsored in the Florida Senate by Sen. John Grant (R-Tampa) and co-sponsored by Sen. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-Spring Hill), the chairman of the Senate Health Care Committee.

The House sponsor of the bill is Rep. Mary Brennan (D-Pinellas Park).

Scott McMillen, Orlando area coordinator for ARM, once worked as an attorney for a hospital and now helps people injured by medical negligence.

"Some doctors may have four or five lawsuits against them for serious mistakes, yet they are still allowed to operate on patients," he said. "Requiring hospitals to release information about mistakes gives them an incentive to be more selective in their credentialing. Until the state legislature passes this bill, the Doctor Hotline may be the best protection a person going into a hospital can have."

Doing it right

Dietician Marie Miller and leader Christine Bohannon had a fine time at a recent meeting of TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) at the Sanford Alliance Church. The annual open house and luau brought out a crowd of people hoping to lose weight sensibly and to get a strong, healthy body. Miller, a registered nurse, told the group how losing weight will help prevent heart disease and other problems.

Activists foresee 'culture cluster' for Sanford

Shamrocks, shillelaghs, snappy green derbies and swirls of green metallic ribbons festively decorated the Sanford Woman's Club Wednesday to honor St. Patrick, the celebrated Irish saint. Nobody danced the Irish jig, but the women sang "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," accompanied by Mayor Betty Smith.

Civic activists Helen Stairs and Kay Bartholomew, guest speakers, spoke on the "culture cluster" they foresee for Sanford. Stairs, president of the Ritz Theater, told the clubwomen about the progress of the historic landmark and a projected rosy future. Bartholomew, owner of the art gallery next door, told how the two buildings, which will connect, is the beginning of a "culture cluster" for Sanford.

It is hoped that other cultural interests will follow suit and put Sanford on the map as a thriving cultural center.

Following their enthusiastic presentations, the speakers answered questions about the two not-for-profit organizations. This dream, shared by the two women and a host of dedicated supporters, needs the cooperation and ideas of the community. For information, call either woman.

President DeLores Laah conducted the business meeting and heard routine reports.

Martha Yancey, chairman of the arts department, reported on the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs District VII Arts Festival at the Oviedo Woman's Club. Several blue ribbon winners of the club's annual festival were candidates to enter this competition. Winning blue ribbons in the district contest were: Libby Prevatt, Polly Pezold, Jeanette Padgett (2), Tina Joseph and Ruth Gaines. These winners will go on to state competition in April in Orlando.

Viola Frank, first vice president, announced that the club will sponsor a fashion show April 24 at the clubhouse. Fashions will be by Slim and Sassy and donation is $15.00. More on this later.

Kathy Krasnoff, the senior club sponsor of the Junior Woman's Club of Sanford Inc. reported on the junior club and announced the juniors presented the outgoing sponsor, Ruth Gaines, a "token of appreciation" which was a lovely pin and earring set.

Officers unanimously elected are as follows: Ruth Gaines, president; Rose Jacobson, second vice president; Retha Blankenship, third vice president; Doris Gormly, treasurer; and Libby Prevatt, corresponding secretary.

Department chairman unanimously elected are: Dorothy DeLores Laah (from left), Helen Stairs, Martha Yancey and Kay Bartholomew at the Sanford Woman's Club March meeting. Stairs and Bartholomew were the guests speakers.

Anthony, arts; Mary Dale Jones, public affairs; Betty Halback, education; and Nancy Frye, homelife.

The new officers and department chairmen will be installed at the June meeting.

Members and guests were served a catered luncheon. Hostesses were: Pat Brooks and Lourine Messenger, co-chairmen; Hazel Cash, Vida Smith, Dorothy Anthony, Mildred Gross and Vivienne Sweeney.

Garden club presents fashions

The Sanford Garden Club held a fashion show on the patio of Jake's Cafe on Thursday, Feb. 29. According to Ann Hoohehan, the scholarship event was well attended with 125 tickets sold.

Although the weather was dismal, a festive atmosphere was captured as models showed light and colorful fashions from the Lily Pad in Melbourne. A variety of Florida fashions, from very casual to dressy, were shown with complementary jewelry.

Patrons were served a tomato stuffed with chicken salad, fresh fruits, bread, beverage and homemade cake furnished by garden club members.

Ann said, "It was successful...real nice."

The garden club will host its annual card party and luncheon on March 21 which is open to the public. More on this later.

Gregg addresses federated women

The six clubs comprising the Seminole County Federation of Women's Clubs met recently for the quarterly meeting at the Sanford Woman's Club. Representatives of the Family Community Educators, Casselberry Woman's Club, Altamonte Springs Woman's Club, Sanford Garden Club, Sanford Woman's Club and the Sanford Junior Woman's Club were in attendance.

Guest speaker was Barbara Hughes-Gregg, director of the Seminole County Cooperative Extension Service. She spoke on the growth of the cooperative services and projected the changes that are inevitable as the 21st century approaches.

The women convened at 11 a.m. and each brought a dish to share for the luncheon. "We had a nice meeting," the county federation president, Olive Babbitt, said. "And we enjoyed Barbara's talk."

Olive presided over the business session and brought the women upto date on the SCFWC.

Hobbyist of the Week

Law librarian doesn't monkey around with various interests

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

ORANGE CITY — Jan Cara doesn't just monkey around with her hobby. Her collection of gorillas stemmed from her desire to be a part of the Gorilla Foundation.

Although Cara actually collects more than just gorillas, she finds that with this pastime she can not only enjoy the art but also know she's helping the gorilla, Koko, and his friends, Michael and Nudam.

Over 15 years ago Cara heard about the plight of Koko gorilla. "A college student in California by the name of Penny decided to adopt her," she said. "Penny was told that the mother wouldn't care for the baby so Penny got the gorilla under the auspice of a college and began to teach her sign language and a way of communicating."

Cara said gorilla now signs fluently. Several years ago a male gorilla was purchased in hopes that they would mate.

According to Cara, Koko had signed that she wanted a baby. Much to the dismay of trainers and associates, Michael and Koko became only friends and did not wish to consummate the relationship or compromise.

She also added that later with the help of "Penny's computer" and a video dating system Koko chose a new man. "The gorilla that she picked by kissing the screen was from another zoo," she said. Unfortunately the arrangement didn't work out and Koko was forced to search for another love.

After a short delay she again kissed the screen to discover Nudam, who is now her latest beau. "Nudam has lived with Koko for about two or three years now," said Cara. "Trees cut down and other construction has been going on outside their home so it has been stressful for the gorillas and California is growing so much. They hope to raise enough money to move into a compound in Hawaii. Maybe then the two can mate."

Gorillas in the form of stuffed, posters, and mugs are displayed in her office. A favorite kept in another room was named as a three foot gorilla that was a gift from her son.

She laughed as she said, "It gets bad when people look at me and they think of gorillas. People give me monkeys and gorilla all the time."

She added, "Several years ago my sister and I went to California. I had hoped to see Koko but was unable. Last Christmas I wanted to send her a present so I mailed a rubber alligator, two t-shirts, flowers and two pictures of my cats. Koko had a kitten that she loved. She named it 'All Ball.' If you think about the names she calls things it makes sense. She calls alligators 'teeth' and she has a sort of love-hate relationship with them. She calls women 'lips.' Gorilla's are very gentle. She did recently get a new kitten. Her old kitten got out and was hit by a car. Koko really cried and grieved when they told her."

Cara receives a newsletter from the foundation and said that interested parties wanting information can contact her at her place of employment at the Seminole County Courthouse in the Law Library where she serves as library director.

As a part of her relationship with the law library, Cara is a member of the Florida State Court and County Law Librarians which meet yearly. "Last year we went to Fort Lauderdale," she said. "This year we will meet in Key West."

She has also been a member of the Sanford Historic Society for approximately one year.

Another collection purchased by Cara was her oriental dolls. "I have about 10," she said. "They are in glass cases. I have dolls that are Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Phillipino and Thai."

Not to stop at that collection, Cara also has a variety of "Treasure Jests" creations. "They are little figurines of animals shaped like boxes," she said. "They come in two sizes from about one and a half inches tall."

According to Cara a gentleman from Britain is the creator of the unusual masterpieces. "He's a strange fellow that sits in trees to commune with nature. The animals are made of a material similar to a stone or acrylic. He molds and designs the work and then gives them to townspeople to finish and paint."

Jan Cara surrounded by gorillas in her office at the Seminole County Law Library.

She commented about the names of the figurines. "One is called 'Too Much of a Good Thing,'" she said. "It has a bunch of mice in a pile with a cat's head sticking out the top. Another favorite of mine is called 'Group Therapy' and it has two aardvarks hugging. The creator has a special trademark by putting a mouse somewhere on every box."

Added to her many collections Cara also has many Royal Daulton character jugs. She described them by saying, "My favorite is 'John Barleycorn.' There is a story behind each one. The jugs can be bought for prices from $35 to $300 and are valued at prices from $400 to $1000. They have faces of famous characters on them and are sold in four different sizes."

Other names of the jugs include, "The Motorist," "The Lawyer," and other story-type people. Last but not least Cara has many of her postcard collection at her office. Postcards of courthouses in and out of the state of Florida, some from Orange City and numerous cards from Sanford all line the photo albums she has them preserved in. Her inspiration began from one of her sons who also collected postcards. Some are housed in picture frames in the office too.

Sanford postcards subjects range in anything from homes, the old bandahell, the old courthouse, city hall, swimming pool, hotel and hospital to cards of the trolley and the celery fields.

Cara has been a resident of Orange City for the last 10 years. She was "born and raised in Sanford" by her parents, the Ratliffs. She has two sons, Jim and Bob and three grandchildren.

'Days' festival shaping up

Monday, March 4, the Lake Mary Historical Commission held their last meeting before Olde Lake Mary Days. Everything is shaping up nicely for the annual event. This year, for the first time, there's a television commercial advertising Olde Lake Mary Days. WOFL FOX 35 made the commercial utilizing home videos of the event from 1994 and 1995. The members got a chance to see a copy of the 30-second spot that WOFL FOX 35 will be running during their children's programming. Commission members also got a chance to buy their Olde Lake Mary Days T-shirts. The commission does still need cars. There will be a display of antique cars in the Frank Evans Center parking lot and more volunteers are needed to bring their antique cars by for display. If you can display your antique car at Old Lake Mary Days on Saturday, March 30, please call Ettie Jane Keogh at 321-3084.

Confirmed entertainment for Olde Lake Mary Days includes Country Joe Rosier, the Lake Mary Line Dancers, the Lake Mary Dance Studio, singer Melissa Mills, the Seminole Community College Choral, the Lakeview Middle School Show Choir and the First Presbyterian Joyful Noise Choir.

In other news, the First Presbyterian Church of Lake Mary has offered the historical commission and the city the little yellow house at their property on Country Club to use as a museum. The house was built in 1925 as a winter cottage for George Fowler. The downside is that the building must be moved and the city does not have the funds to move it. There are at least three city parks where the building could be moved to, so the historical commission is looking for the funds for the move. Once the building has been moved the commission would also need help with the renovations.

5K run starts fest
The Seminole Family YMCA will once again kick off Olde Lake Mary Days with a 5K run. The race will begin at 8 a.m. at Lake Mary Elementary School, to Evansdale Road, down through Shady Oaks and back to the school. There are separate categories for men and women by age. If you register before March 23, the cost of the race is just $10; between March 23 and March 29, the cost is $12; and on the day of the race, the cost is $15.

New this year is a Kiddie Run that begins at 9 a.m. The kiddie run will be 200 yards down and 200 yards back and will be free to children age 12 and under.

This year, the 5K run is being sponsored by Target, the T-House, Tru Dimensions Printing, Seminole Office Products, the Lake Mary Police Department and the Lake Mary Rotary Club.

If you'd like more information on the 5K run, you can call the Seminole Family YMCA at 321-8944.

Support Olympics

There are only two more days left to buy a sponsorship for the Stardust Olympics. Stardust is the name of the Lake Mary Girl Scout Service Unit. This will be their third annual Olympic games. The games, scheduled for Saturday, April 13 at 9 a.m. at the soccer field in the Lake Mary Sports Complex, give the girls a chance to compete with other girls their own age and to have fun as well. Because of the cost of T-shirts and medals, this is one of the most expensive events the Lake Mary Girl Scouts put on. For that reason, the Olympics is a sponsored event. There are three levels of sponsorships. The Gold level is $150. For this, the sponsor gets their logo on the back of all the T-shirts and in the program in large type. The Silver level is $50 and the Bronze is $25. If you would like to buy a sponsorship, Call Brenda Anderson at 862-3634.

LaSertoma honors youth

LaSertoma (LADies in SERVICE TO MAnkind) is an international organization with clubs in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Puerto Rico. The Greater Seminole Chapter of LaSertoma was originally chartered, on March 25, 1977. The purpose of the club is the promotion of friendship and service among those interested in serving their communities and providing for those in need.

In addition to supporting Camp Endeavor by providing scholarships to those who are hearing impaired, and supporting the Marie Taylor Needy Children's Fund in the Seminole County School District, and providing scholarship awards to those students who demonstrate a service commitment to their community, the international club voted last year to initiate a "Youth Service Award" which would recognize the leadership and community spirit of a middle school student. This "Youth Service Award" was presented to outstanding youth dedicated to bettering their communities in all the clubs throughout the country during the month of February.

Marcus Robinson, a sixth grader at Lakeview Middle School, Sanford, has been awarded the first "Youth Service Award" by the Greater Seminole LaSertoma Club. He is an outstanding example of a person committed to making his community a better place. At school, Marcus is a member of the "Task Force," a group of students dedicated to stopping the violence in their school by providing tools and examples of better ways to handle differences and altercations among the students.

The guidance counselor, Mrs. Wilson, is the sponsor of this program which also provides parties at the end of each month for those who adhere to the rules and help to maintain the peaceful environment within the school setting. Marcus is also an honor roll student within Lakeview Middle School, and is a three-year member of "McKnight," a University of Central Florida Honor Society for black students. At present, Marcus' favorite subject is science in which he is currently studying geology. He is also fond of English and is presently reading a Martin Luther King biography on which Marcus plans to write his book report which is due shortly.

In addition to serving his school on the Task Force and being an honor roll student, Marcus is also involved in sports. He plays forward center on the basketball court, and second baseman on the baseball field. Right now, baseball is the front runner in Marcus' sports' endeavors. He actually plays basketball and works out with the high school basketball team, because his brother plays basketball. The team saw Marcus play and allowed him to stay because he helped to improve their game as well as his own game. Marcus is also involved in his church, the St. Matthew Missionary Baptist Church. He is a member of the youth group where he is encouraged to learn Bible verses and how he may apply each to his own life. For the past four or five years, he has been a member of the choir. He is also an usher, one who has been selected to escort people to their seats and give tours to church visitors, and pass out programs.

As Marcus speaks of his mother, he tells of her concern for him: "My mom teaches me right from wrong; she reminds me to study and reminds me of my busy schedule, and if I come home late, she has my clothes ready for me; she takes care of me." Although both parents are very proud of Marcus, his dad says of him, "Marcus is headstrong; he is never afraid to make a decision and puts thought into that decision before he makes it." Marcus has little free time, but when he is free, he enjoys "bugging" his older sister, watching TV, and he has developed an interest in genealogy.

The Youth Service Award presentation was held in the home of Marilyn Armstrong of Longwood and included a

Time spent helping others and expanding taste for fine wine

By MIKI REAGAN
Herald Staff Writer

When Ray Vintilla isn't extolling the virtues of fine Romanian wine, he's volunteering his time to make life better for others in Seminole County, his home for 17 years.

Serving on several charity committees, speaking at schools and donating time to non-profit organizations, the Sweetwater resident's time is rarely his own.

Three days a week he donates time to the court system in Seminole County, where he is utilized as a translator, speaking fluent Spanish and English. Vintilla works with the court system in conjunction with a local organization that mediates in spouse abuse cases.

In addition to his other community activities, when the London Symphony came to Sanford, Vintilla was the kind benefactor who donated the wonderful Romanian wines at the Symphony tea.

Vintilla is the president of Vinro, Inc., a company he operates with his brother. The company deals exclusively in fine wines from Romania. At least two trips a year are made to Romania to scout the wine market and make the best purchases for the Vinro company. The wine is then sold to retailers, who market it to the public.

This year a wine tasting tour is being organized to visit Romania in May. Vintilla hopes to share his love of Romania's cities, art and monuments with others. He is an American, although both his parents were born in Romania.

Sica Nacu, owner of the Rose Cottage Tea Room in Sanford, may be contacted concerning the upcoming Romanian tour. The Rose Cottage has wine tasting events bi-monthly featuring an assortment of Vintilla's wines.

Nacu, a Romanian native, said Vintilla's outstanding contributions to Seminole County certainly make him one of our most valuable assets.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Both right, but only one winner
By Phillip Alder

Bridge can be a paradoxical game at times. Look at today's deal, which occurred during last year's Bermuda Bowl quarterfinal match between France and China.

Both Souths opened one no-trump, showing 15-17 points in the modern style. The French North, Philippe Cronier, raised aggressively to three no-trump, giving full value to his five-card suit. The Chinese North, Rong Chang, raised to only two no-trump, which Shao Zi Jian cautiously passed.

Each West, trying to find his partner's long suit, led the heart jack - a good choice!

Both Easts encouraged, allowing South to win the trick with the heart king. Michel Lebel had to win nine tricks.

This required playing on clubs, so he led a diamond to dummy's queen, finessed his club jack and cashed the club ace. When everything split favorably, Lebel claimed 10 tricks: one heart, four diamonds and five clubs.

Shao, though, needed to win only eight tricks. Rather than rely on the club finesse, he played for hearts to be 4-3. So, at trick two, Shao led a spade, aiming at one spade, one heart, four diamonds and two clubs. Here, though, East happily took six tricks (two spades and four hearts) to defeat the contract.

France gained 10 international matchpoints (IMPs) on this deal. Yet as they won the match by just three IMPs, if Shao had brought home 10 tricks, France would have gained only six IMPs here and lost the match by one!

Where's the paradox? Well, both declarers played "correctly" but one won 10 tricks while the other collected only seven. Strange.
