No final decisions were made, but commissioners did narrow their choices. The 18th Street site has often been cited as a potential location for a new police station, in part because the city already owns the land. However, the site did pose some problems because of its close

County OKs plan to spray mosquitoes

Comp Plan amendment tabled until Spring 2002

By Christopher Patton Stati Writer

SANFORD - The 18,000 residents of unincorporated Seminole County can fear mosquitoes a little less after the county commission unanimously approved funding for spraying, which will begin Friday.

Currently there are 29 counties under medical alert for the mosquito transmitted West Nile Virus with the closest county being St. Johns. According to a Seminole County Public Health official, several counties including Orange and Osceola have had recent findings of other another mosquito borne disease, St. Louis Encephalitis.

According to Commissioner Randy Morris, the city of Altamonte Springs has a "significant program" to battle mosqui-toes. Phil Stalvey, county commu-nity services director, said other cities are less efficient and work on a complaint basis with the mosquito prevention crew doubling as other public works employees.

"I think they (cities of Seminole County) will be III equipped if we Stalvey.

Morris suggested the county staff to work toward a comprehensive plan with the cities.

Also as a part of the new county mosquito prevention plan, Commissioner Carlton Henley suggested creating a "medical alert plan" that would authorize a group of officials to swiftly make decisions.

Altamonte fire chief resigns

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A 26-year veteran of the Altamonte Springs Fire Department resigned Friday afternoon after speculations swirled he was involved in a drinking and driving accident earlier that morning.

A GLANCE AROUND OUR COUNTY

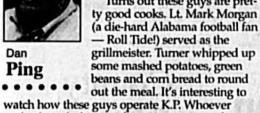

Pride in a job well done

If you want to get a better understanding of firefighters, eat at the station house.

Mike Turner recently provided me with an invitation to break bread with the men of B Shift down at Sanford Station 31. I've known Mike for about a year, and he's tried to convince me to run a shift with him and his crew; however, eating barbecued pork chops in an air conditioned dining room is a lot easier than answering 12 to 15 emergency calls during a routine shift.

Turns out these guys are pretty good cooks. Lt. Mark Morgan cooks doesn't clean, and certain crew members are asked not to perform specific activities. Dan "The Man" Abuchon, for example, is banned for life from making iced tea. You'd think a guy smart enough to be licensed as a firefighter and an emer-gency medical technician could be trusted to make iced tea, but Dan's sweet tooth is a little too intense for his colleagues.

Dan

Ping

The food was good, but the fellowship was better. Spend any amount of time with some of Sanford's firefighters and paramedics and you realize this isn't just another gig where the guys are marking time till payday. These guys genuinely love what they do. That wasn't always the case according to Lt. Morgan.

Morgan's been with the department since 1981. He's seen the ups and downs, though in the early days there were more downs. It was tough as a rookie firefighter trying to learn the job.

"They'd tell the young guys, 'Oh, you'll know what to do when you get out there," Morgan recalls. "Nowadays, the veterans are working with the rookies, giving them tips on how to do the job faster, better, safer."

Morgan likes what he sees in the department. So does Marty Johnson, the emergency medical services battalion chief. If a department takes on the characteristics of its leaders, you quickly understand the up-beat attitudes of the front-liners. Johnson is Mr. Enthusiasm. Whether he's talking about the new high-tech defibrillators his men are using or explaining the department's training regiment, Johnson's passion for his job is evident. Morgan and Johnson aren't unique. Talk to any one associated with the fire department and you'll get the same pep talk. It's not just a sales job, either. Statistics show these guys run more calls and provide better service than just about anybody in the state. The men know it and that only feeds the desire to improve. Take Morgan for example. He's just four or five years from retirement, yet the last thing he wants to do is ride the

"Over the last couple of years, I've been reborn, re-energized about the job," Morgan said. "We've got a good department, and I'm as excited about the job as I was when I first joined, maybe more so. The last five years of my career are going to be the most enjoyable."

That's good for Morgan. It's even better for Sanford residents.

Like giant metal trees toppled in the forest, lights which once illuminated the baseball fields at Fort Mellon Park lie scattered on the ground waiting to be re-located to other parks in Sanford.

Casting off in retirement

Retirement is like sex. Men love to talk about it, but when the time finally comes, they're good for about 15 minutes, then they're dying to put their tie back on.

It is 5:30 a.m. and I'm propped on a life preserver in a fishing boat. I have a fishing rod between my knees and a mug of coffee in my hands. I'm assuming my hook is in the water. The fog is so thick, for all I know the boat could still be resting on the trailer in the parking lot.

"Sure is foggy," I say. "You gonna talk, or you gonna fish?" J.D. snaps from somewhere in front of me.

Wall

After 35 years of planning, dreaming and talking of nothing else, J.D. retired two months ago. He did not go gently. The company finally threw him a surprise retirement party and changed the locks on the doors.

It came as quite a surprise to J.D. that the company did not crash and burn without him. For weeks he watched the Dow, convinced the company's stock was going to plummet. The day the stock ticked up two points, J.D. bought a brandnew fishing boat with all the fixings. The salesman is still bragging about the whopper he reeled in.

"Maybe we should try another spot," J.D. says.
We could be fishing over Gorton's frozen fish sticks and J.D. still wouldn't get a

> "Fish are like women," I say. "The harder you chase them, the less interested they are. No one in the family

No one in the family could ever figure out what J.D. did for a living. I'm not sure Midge even knew.

When you get past doctor, lawyer, Indian chief, our eyes glaze over.

Suddenly, my coffee starts splashing and the boat feels like it's going to capsize. I'm about to tell J.D. to settle down, when I hear a tinkle. There are different schools tinkle. There are different schools of thought concerning relieving oneself off the side of the boat while fishing. Regardless of your position, it's best not to rock the boat while a man's in the middle of the stream. In the midst of all this, there's a squeal as J.D.'s reel spins like a Maytag. It scares him so bad he kicks his rod.

It would have gone over the side if it hadn't snagged on his argyle socks. Apparently, the only thing the boat salesman didn't sell was outdoor clothing. His hands shaking, J.D. grabs the "Grab the rod!" I yell.

The fish glares up at us from the bottom of the boat. He is as old as dirt. There's a rusty hook in his mouth that's been there so long his skin has grown around it. And while his body is exhausted, there's still fight in his eyes.

"He's bigger than the one mount-ed at the bait shop," J.D. says, leaning over his trophy.

J.D. spent 35 years fighting his way up the corporate ladder. When he got to the top, they put a plaque in the lobby with his name on it. The fish is still as death, as if he knows what's about to come. One finger hooked through the gill, the other hand under the body, J.D. very gently lowers the fish back into the water. Floating on his side for a moment, his one eye stares up at J.D. Then the tail snaps like a whip and he's gone.

"Do you think he'll be OK?" J.D. asks, staring out at the lake. I think he's just getting started.

American Babel

The nation's newest language

Census figures released this week indicate that a language other than English is spoken by families in 40 percent of the homes in this sprawling county on the Pacific Ocean. Spanish, Korean, Chinese, Vietnamese, Russian, Armenian, dozens

more — all spoken here. In Chicago last Monday, the first of a series of editorials in the Chicago Tribune on immigration reform began: "Stop by one of the houses going up all over Chicago and listen to the work crews. ... When the foundation is being dug you might hear Russian.

the bricklaying. The carpenters might speak English — but with a singsong Irish brogue. When the Mexican drywall crews arrive, the language might change to Spanish. Finally, a SWAT team of Guatemalan, or perhaps Honduran, landscapers will zoom by to plant the sod. ... Chicago will have another house built in good measure by illegal immigrant labor." In New York, in the cabs, candy stores and little markets where you once heard Yiddish or Italian, now it is Urdu and Korean. More and more on the streets you hear the clicking sounds of African languages. American Babel.

And it is not only in big cities. I came to Chicago and Los Angeles from Sag Harbor, N.Y., a village of little more than 2,000 people on the far eastern edge of the country, and you can hear most of the same languages as the construction crews, gardeners, maids, dishwashers and waiters arrive each day.

There are believed to be 6 million to 7 million illegal immigrants in the United States now, 60 percent of them from Mexico. Whatever that number, there are more legal immigrants speaking those languages, particularly Mexican-accented Spanish. Nothing indicates how fast the United States is changing than the panic of the Republican Party and its leader on immigration issues.

It was only a few years ago that Republicans, at least in California, believed that immigrant-bashing was the path to power. Gov. Pete Wilson was the driving force behind Proposition 187, an initiative designed to mobilize both white power and black power against Mexican immigrants — cutting off welfare help, medical care and education to illegals. Voters went for it, but the courts did not. Perhaps more important, the people who actually mobilized were legal Hispanic and Asian families, registering and voting Democratic in numbers that turned California into a more Democratic state than Massachusetts.

Now Republicans, led by President Bush, have tried to compensate for that blunder by going as far the other way, granting amnesty (and eventually citizenship) to resident Mexicans, however they got here. Forget that one. What makes Mexicans better than Canadians, Ethiopians Bush's panic is shared by politicians of both parties, though they tend to favor whichever immigrant group has the most voting power in their own precincts. In fact, the only thing they agree on often seems to be that it is better to do something than do nothing.

Why? It seems to me that U.S. immigration policy has worked well and served national imperatives over the past 30 years or so. To be crude about it, what that policy nas done is make it difficult but not impossible for the most determined and craftiest of foreigners to sneak into the United States when their own countries seem incapable of utilizing their energy and ambitions. The best and the brightest find a way.

They may not have documents, but somehow they seem to have whatever our country needs at a given moment: the mathematical skills of the Russians and the Indians; the work ethic of the Mexicans and their willingness to do what Americans no longer are willing to do; the entrepreneurship and family values of South and East Asians — and, most of all, the young people the United States needs to support our aging population. Besides, many of these immigrants contribute to global stability by sending money back to their home countries, which kind of makes up for American stinginess when it comes to

So, whatever our policy actually is, it seems to working very well — at least to me. Why fix it if it's not broken?

..... what was then East Lake most notoriously violent nounced speech impedigreatest ambition for our learn to understand her when she spoke.

T. was in junior high school before she even got her first glimpse of a college campus, even though Atlanta has several. When she was about 14, I took her with me when I had research to do in the library at Emory University, Atlanta's wealthiest institution of higher education. She looked around in wonder at the well-tended commons and the students carrying book bags. Finally, she asked, "Is this a college?"

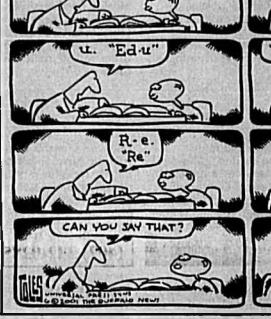

With work, support and lots of luck, she has blossomed since then. Unlike her older sister, who had her first child at the age of 14 and never finished high school, T. graduated from high school in May. She managed to get all A's and B's, qualifying her for Georgia's HOPE scholarship that pays for tuition at instate public colleges.

And because she has a sparkling smile and a usually genial disposition, T. impressed a member of a suburban service organization, the Roswell Women's Club, who recommended her for a $1,700 scholarship the club grants. With the two scholarships, T. will be able to pay for her first year at Gordon College, a small two-year residential school where she will study nursing.

The credit for her academic success so far goes largely to the Cottage School, a small private school in a northern Atlanta suburb that specializes in teaching children with fearning disabilities.

With classes no larger than 10 and teachers with an unmatched zeal for their students, the school has done wonders for kids struggling with obstacles ranging from dyslexia to severe head injuries. But the credit for T.'s journey from severely limited social circumstances to college student goes largely to Cool Girls, a small Atlanta mentoring organization modeled loosely after Big Sisters of America.

That's where I met her. As her "cool sister" for seven years, I have taken her shopping, to movies, to plays, to ballet performances and on her first airplane trip. I have read to her, yelled at her, coaxed her to study and talked to her about sex.

Yes, sex. Frankly. No-holds-barred. Cool Girls, thank heaven, isn't one of those head-in-the-sand abstinence-only outfits, sending girls put into the world armed only with pledges to wait for marriage. Oh, the organization encourages abstinence, as do I. But the counselors at Cool Girls know that many teen-aged girls - whether poor or affluent - will become sexually active no matter what they are told, so they ought to be prepared to act responsibly if they do.

Cool Girls' approach has worked. In the impoverished Atlanta neighborhoods where the organization is active, teen pregnancy has fallen. And T. has been one of the group's many success stories. She has done me - and her parents — proud.

In public service announcements for America's Promise, the nonprofit organization he founded, Secretary of State Colin Powell encourages adults to get involved in mentoring programs.

He is right to stress the strides that kids from modest circumstances can make with the help of a kind, patient and responsible adult. But the ads ought to remind well-intentioned adults that there are no guarantees in mentoring, any more than there are in parenting. There are disappointments as well as triumphs. T. has her adolescent moments. We have argued over her fondness for misogynistic rap music, tight shortshorts and the World Wrestling Federation. But she has also kept me from freezing into middle-aged rigidity.

So, as I watch her go off to college, I've signed up for another tour of duty, as cool sister to her 8-year-old sister. May she do as well as T. has done.

"They were probably the top team going into the selection process," VanDerworp said. The Acquest/Benchmark team Rabun would also be the project architect.

VanDerworp said the meeting in Michigan was productive in laying the groundwork for the memorandum of understanding, would oversee the development but he said he was impressed with the enthusiasm Acquest/Benchmark showed.

"These guys have done a lot of products, and they are very pumped up about the opportunity in Sanford," he said. "They don't do cookie cutter type projects, and they see Sanford as a unique project to develop."

David Ong, president of Acquest Realty, agreed that his team's projects are usually, "a little outside of the norm," and that was an aspect the team wants emphasis in Sanford.

"One of the things that struck s about the Sanford project is the ocation," One said. "Downtown sanford and the lakefront makes tor one of the most unique settings we've been involved with. Rarely do you see a conference center and hotel with such a tranquil vista like Lake Monroe, that also provides the quaint urban retail center that downtown Sanford offers."

The niche his team is aiming for, Ong said, is a high-quality facility that is affordable.
"We don't intend to build a the limited services facility," Ong said. "This will be a full-service facility. Yet it will be affordable to state associations and other groups who might be priced out of the Orlando resort facilities."

The project would also fit into another unique niche, Ong said. Fconomic development.

"One of the aspects that can't be ignored in this project is the 'ripple effect,'" said Ong. "These types of projects bring people downtown and provide an economic multiplier for local businesses."

So far there are no specifics on conference center size or the number of rooms the hotel would provide. Those details will be determined during the next three to six months. Ong did say, however, that the conference center "would exceed the capacity of the hotel."

"The idea," he said, "would be to create a relatively large conference center that would provide spin-off to other hotels in the

The city's consultant, Hunter Interests, had indicated in a feasibility study that the market could support a 40,000-square-foot conference center. Ong says he expects the size to be "something less than that, but that's part of the process we will be undergoing in the coming months." As for the overall feasibility of the project, Ong said his team's calculations and past experience indicate a Sanford hotel/conference center can be a success.

"It goes without saying that we are fairly selective in the opportunities we pursue," Ong said. "If there were any questions as to the economic feasibility, we would not pursue this project."

The issue is do the economics of the project conservatively pay for itself. We believe it does.

Among Benchmark's past projects are:

 AT&T Learning Center in Basking Ridge, N.J.; 171 rooms, two restaurants, 31,265 square feet of meeting space and an 85seat amphitheater.

VOTE SEPTEMBER 4, 2001

Police officer's call for help answered with lots of laughter

Dear

Abby

DEAR ABBY: Here's my "Locked in the Loo" story: As a police officer patrolling the streets, I sometimes had to use public restrooms. On one occasion, I went to a friend's business to attend to the call of nature. To get to the restroom, I had to walk through the showroom, office area, warehouse and garage. When I tried to leave the restroom, the door wouldn't open.

I didn't have the luxury of having a window through which to escape. I yelled and banged on the door, but got no response. Having no other choice, I used my portable police radio to ask the dispatcher to call the business and inform them of my plight. There was no immediate response from the dispatcher. When he did respond, I heard loud laughter in the background.

I knew immediately when my friend at the store received the phone call because I could hear howls of laughter coming from the showroom.

This happened more than 20 years ago. I'm sure that when the citizens of that fine city read this in your column, they will have another good laugh since everyone who had a police monitor heard my plea. You may use my name.

JÁMES A. OEHMKE, RETTRED TOLEDO POLICE OFFICER

DEAR JAMES: When I read your letter aloud, howls of laughter echoed throughout my office. Interesting, isn't it, how funny a predicament can be when it's happening to someone else.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married 19 years. We have one daughter in college and three at home, ages 17, 15 and 11. We went to therapy because I was unhappy. The therapist said my wife was not allowing any of us space, including me. My wife was making all the decisions which included having the kids believe in the tooth fairy and the Easter bunny.

My wife doesn't like one suggestion the therapist made. I believe it could work well. The therapist said we should have one weekend a month free. From Friday at 6 p.m. to midnight Sunday (54 hours), I take care of the kids and house, and my wife can do whatever she wants with the time and $120. I get the same on my weekend. The other two weekends are for the family, and the children choose alternating activities from my wife's list or mine.

On my weekend I go away fishing, camping, hiking or whatever. This is what my wife hates. Abby, I need the time alone, undisturbed, and have felt much better since l started doing it. I also enjoy having the kids alone without my wife constantly interrupting or contradicting me. My wife will sometimes stay around the house on her "alone" weekend and try to interfere even though she's not even supposed to have dinner with us or be involved in any way when it's my weekend with the kids.

How can I get her to understand how much this means to me? How can I get her to get a life? She hates camping and fishing. Please answer soon because she's driving me and the kids crazy on my weekend with them.

NEEDS TIME OUT IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR NEEDS TIME OUT: Your wife already understands how much your separate time means to you - and she finds that threatening. What's sad is that the harder she clings and tries to control, the more uncomfortable she's making you and the further she's driving you away.

Some individual counseling to resolve her insecurity would be helpful. If she refuses, I see difficult times ahead.

Persimmons: An Oriental delight

Oriental persimmons have been grown in Florida for many years since their introduction to this country in 1856.

Recently, plantings of non-astringent types are increasing and becoming a popular dooryard fruit in Florida. In central Florida, trees grow well and produce high quality fruits.

Classification

Ferrer Persimmons are classified into astringent and non-astringent types based on fruit characteristics. Astringent fruits must be soft or artificially treated before they are suitable for eating. Fruit of the non-astringent types lose astringency while still hard and can be eaten hard or soft.

Recommended Commercial Varieties

Plantings of non-astringent persimmons can be made to include varieties that will ripen fruit from late September to early December.

The varieties recommended seem to produce the highest percent of marketable fruit. "Izu" is the choice for the early season, 'Matsumoto Wase Fuyu' for the mid-season, and 'Puyu" for the late season. Fuyu is the most readily available and is generally considered the best commercial nonastringent variety in Florida.

Planting

The trees will grow in many different types of soils but should be planted on moderate to well drained soils. Select a site that allows for good air drainage or protection to reduce the possibility of freeze damage. Plant bare-root trees from December through February, keeping the roots moist when out of the ground.

Prune the tree back to twothirds the original height at planting.

Trees purchased in containers can be planted any time of the year, but water must be applied often during establishment since the container medium will dry out quickly. If the tree has been growing in the container for over six months, It is best planted when dormant by shaking off the potting soil and spreading out the roots that have grown around the container.

Transplanted trees can be staked for support.

Fertilization And Cultivation The tree need not be fertilized at planting, but should have light monthly applications during the first year from April through August. Established trees should be fertilized three times a year; in March when still dormant or about two weeks before leaf formation, in June, and again in late August to early September.

An area approximately 2 to 3 feet from the trunk of the tree should be mulched or shallow cultivated to control weeds.

Propagation

Most of the oriental persimmon trees grown in Florida are rafted onto the common ative persimmon. This native ree is distributed from Connecticut to Florida and as far west as Kansas and Texas. It produces small fruits, seedy and astringent until fully soft with a delicious nutty flavor. This rootstock is desirable because of its adaptability to Florida conditions. Its vast root system will handle both flooding and drought conditions. For seed production, both male and female trees should be selected for vigor and fall leaf retention.

Chip Budding Trees can be chip budded a few weeks before leaf formation in the spring to a month before the leaves become inaclive in the fall. Chip budding is the easiest and most versatile technique for propagation.

Chip budding is often used from late August into October on 5-to 7 month-old seedling nursery trees. Fall frosts must budding to allow for sufficient callusing.

Fruit ripening

Softening and astringency removal can be induced by covering the fruit with uncooked dry rice for three to five days. Freezing the fruit for 24 hours will have similar results. Ethylene gas can be used to speed up the ripening process and develop more fruit color.

Harvesting

Persimmons ripen from August through December. Non-astringent fruit are picked when color has developed to the yellow/orange/red stage and most or all of the green is eliminated. Astringent fruit are picked when soft or just before softening occurs.

Pests And Diseases

Scale insects, tree borers and stink bug damage to the fruits are the most important insect pests. A wilting disease occur in native persimmons.

The most likely method of transmission of this fungal disease is the twig girdler.

The police report states Scott had been drinking, but a breath test to check his blood-alcohol level was not done because of his injuries. The report continues stating Scott refused a blood sample, but later agreed.

Blood was taken from Scott at the Florida Hospital Altamonte where he was treated for minor injuries to his head and hand, said Harris.

Scott will not be charged in the case until the blood analysis returns from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, which according to Harris will take about two months.

"The letter was short and basically said he enjoyed his service here and will miss it here, but nothing else was in the letter," Harris said. "Nothing like this has ever happened to the department to my recollection."

While commissioners did not single out a particular site, they were intrigued with VanDerworp's proposal to locate a public safety complex on 13th Street on land currently behind the State Farmers' Market. The site not only has enough space for police and fire headquarters, but the city could provide a master retention area hat would ease flooding along Mill Creek.

"This site provides us with a lot of pluses," VanDerworp said.

The land is owned by the state and had previously not been con-sidered a prime spot because of the bureaucracy involved in transfer-ring the land from the state to the

The Front Porch program is a revitalization initiative that targets key urban neighborhoods for improvement. Earning the designation provides communities with direct access to state and federal funds, as well as the necessary personnel and support structures to assist in planning revitalization efforts. In essence, Front Porch communities are moved to the front of the line for funding and legislative initiatives.

With the Farmer's Market site, there is the possibility of getting help and money from the Front Porch program," Williams said. "Being in Front Porch drastically increases our chances of getting the property," VanDerworp added.

Williams said locating the public safety complex on the Farmers' Market site could boost economic development along 13th Street.

"I think that locating the police station there will go a long way to encouraging people to invest in 13th Street," Eckstein added.

Sanford Police Chief Brian Tooley said the site offered a cerrtralized location and provided good access both east-west and north-south to other parts of the

"If we're going to get this land, now's the time," said Mayor Brady Lessard. "With the Front Porch program, and our governor facing re-election, I think our chances are pretty good."

Whatever choice Commission makes about a location will come with a cost to taxpayers. VanDerworp estimated the millage rate will need to be increased by nearly .9 mills to build a new law enforcement center, a new fire headquarters and a new facility for Station 32 on the south end of the city.

Golden Lamb Restaurant

Anastasios Margeolas, better known by his American nickname "Steve" came to the U.S. in 1951, a 1/2 a century ago, from a small village in the mountains of Greece called "Nestane." He was one of 9 children of which on 5 survived. Steve had lived a life of a shepherd and survived mostly on milk bread and cheese. He was unable to continue his education past the 4th grade.

Margeolas was chosen out of 7 million greeks to immigrate to the U.S. A Connecticut restaurant owner sponsored him and gave him the opportunity to come to America. Margeolas had dreams of a better life, making lots of money and being able to rescue his family from a life of poverty. Instead he found a job washing dishes and a room in an attic and a lot of communication problems, because he couldn't speak English.

After a couple of years working 2 jobs and going to night school to learn English Steve was able to save enough money to become a partner in a restaurant and send money back to Greece for his sisters dowries, and so that his parents could live comfortable.

Margeolas had some success and some failures over the first 30 years. He had opened a total of 12 restaurants prior to moving to Sanford, FL and opening the Golden Lamb Restaurant which he now calls the lucky #13. The Golden Lamb was established in 1980 and has catered to Seminole and Volusia county residents, with home style cooking. Many of their employees have been there from the begin-

ORLANDO - While the rest of the players at the University of Central Florida worked out for the first time in full pads on Monday, senior tailback Terrance Williams (Clearwater HS) watched.

Williams entered camp as the starting tailback but has since given way to redshirt freshman Alex Haynes (Evans HS), who is being challenged by sophomore Corey Baker (Seffner/Armwood HS). Williams, meanwhile, is just looking to get healthy.

"It's a shame," coach Mike Kruczek said. "He's missing a lot of work that he needs and it's going to hurt him as far as being able to give us any help participating in games right now."

His current ailments are the latest in a series of injuries that have combined to slow the UCF career of the 1998 Junior College Player of the Year. He played in 1999 until a sprained ankle sent him to the sidelines. He finished the season in pain and opted for surgery on his ankle in the spring and redshirted during the 2000 season.

"I feel bad for Terrance," Kruczek added. "He tried to rehab his ankle all last season and came out with high expectations in the spring. He injured his hip the first day in pads in the spring and it has never really healed."

On Friday, Kruszek had summoned the players to the practice field a little earlier for the afternoon session in an attempt to avoid storms that were projected, but the squad was chased from the field by lightning half-way through the twohour session.

Kruczek was happy with the effort when the team was in just helmets and shorts on Thursday and equally happy with what he saw when his players added shoulder pads to their wardrobe Friday morning.

"The tempo was good," said Kruczek. "I thought the execution was exemplary considering that they had been out one day. We had to combine two practices as far as installation of scheme is concerned and it worked out pretty good."

Cody and receiver Al Peterson (Alachua/Santa Fe HS) missed practice Friday because of strained right hamstrings. Both spent time in "the pit," a makeshift training facility near the practice field where strength and conditioning coach Reese Bridgman put them through a workout.

Linebacker Mike Lynche (Gibbs HS) injured his right ankle in the afternoon practice and was taken to the training room. His status was not immediately known after practice.

Another time change was made to the 2001 schedule Friday as UCF was informed that kickoff for the Virginia Tech game set for September 29, was moved an hour and will now take place at noon. The Sunshine Network will televise the game in Florida.

Weather also played a factor on Saturday, but this time it was more than lightning. After two days with little or no heat related problems, Saturday's morning practice was a different story as receiver Tavirus Davis (Ft. Lauderdale HS) and linebacker Elliot Shorter (Quincy/Greensboro HS) had to be taken from the field because of cramping. "Shorter perfunially has a problem," Kritzek said. "He's such a highly muscular kid with low body fat and the heat's going to do that. TD shocked me a little bit to be in there, but he's been pushing real hard during camp."

UCF practiced in shells and scheduled extra team work to make up for the time missed as a result of storms that cut short Friday's afternoon session in half. AME LET LING R (team passing drills) and two sessions of team in an effort to make up for what we missed last night," sald Kruczek. "I think it worked out well.

"Offensively, I've got a lot of stuff in. That's the way you teach it, whole-part-whole. You put it all in in six days and then you come back and re-teach it.

A lot of these young kids' heads are spinning, but they're doing a remarkable job."

Lynche returned to the practice field on Saturday, while offensive guard Norm Lewis (Port Charlotte HS) returned in the afternoon after missing the morning session with back Quarterback Ryan Schneider (Plantation HS) had his reps decreased in the afternoon and sat out the last half of practice while resting a sore right (throwing) elbow. The Golden Knight will open the 2001 season on the road at Clemson University in Columbia, South Carolina on Saturday, Sept. 1.

The Sanford Babe Ruth All-Star coaching staff (right) ponders changes during a break in the action during the District 8 Tournament at the Oviedo Sports Complex. Sanford dropped its opening game of the tournament but came back to win three games in a row and finish second to Altamonte Springs. The Sanford All-Stars were managed by Frank Hicks with Jack Castelow and Randy Nelson serving as coaches. Members of the team were Kahill Farakahan, Dontas Johnson, Johnathan Bean, Lyndon Merthie, Jeff Bowers, Larry Thomas, Luke Kimmig, Richard Nelson, Cleo White, Eric Bryant, Cody Miller, Sean Jackson, Brett Stalker, and Darrell Jackson.

The first game of Day Two of the tournament saw Altamonte Springs bounce Oviedo into the loser's column and then Sanford went out and ousted Holly Hill by a 5-4 score.

DeWease then ripped another double to score Mallory, but the game ended when Bryant gunned down pinch-runner Black at the plate trying to score the tying run. Providing the offense for Sanford were Bean (double, two singles), White and Sean Jackson (two singles, two runs), Farakahan (single, run), and Johnson (single).

On Saturday, Altamonte Springs advanced to the Championship Game by dropping Longwood into the Loser's Bracket.

In the only other game played that day because of rain, Sanford again got a fast start as it eliminated host Oviedo, 7-3, scoring three runs in the top of the first inning. White led off with a walk and beat a throw to second on a grounder by Larry Thomas. Farakahan followed with an RBI single and Sean Jackson

Nelson then scored on a balk and Merthie walked. White and Merthle pulled off

Bean then made the lead stand up, getting a pair of ground outs and a strike out to retire Longwood in order in the top of the seventh inning.
