SANFORD - it's a matter of perceptions.

A group of about 50 parents and other concerned Sanford citizens who met with the Seminole County School Board last evening. believes the board must cooperate with them if the perceptions that schools in Sanford are Inferior to other schools are to be dispelled.

"If there is one thing that is in your control." Judy Williams, the group's spokesman at the work session, told the school board, "it's that you can send a message out that it is not catostrophic to go to school north of Lake Mary Boulevard."

You can send a message out that it is not catostrophic to go to school north of Lake Mary Boulevard.

-Judy Williams, addressing school board

Because the meeting was technically a board work session, no official action could be taken on any of the matters discussed, but the board listened to committee concerns and answered direct questions. The group politely addressed the board on a number of concerns facing Sanford schools, especially Seminole High School.

The primary concern of the group is that Sanford schools are becoming racially identifiable as "the black schools" and that such perceptions are often seen as negatives by those who do not live in the community.

"I resent the attitude that because we are high minority we are somehow less," said Gail Stewart, a member of the committee.

The group believes that the lack of a balanced student population is hurting the school's ability to be self-sufficent.

Christmas lighting improvements planned

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Christmas will be a little brighter in downtown Sanford this year. A list of electrical improvements for decorations has been approved. The City Commission voted Monday night to approve spending $5,909. The money is to be used in improving electrical connections that will be required for decoriting the downtown area during the holiday period.

The original request list for improvements was submitted to the City by Chris Cranius and the Sauford Historical Downtown Waterfront Association. SHDWA: Sanford Public Works Director Jerry Herman explained, "This is their project list to improve the electrical outlets and capabilities at various locations that will be used for decorating purposes.

This will not only help during the holiday season, but for all downtown area events.

-Chris Cranius

The original list proposed by SHDWA, contained eight separate items, with a total cost of just under $39,000. Only the first three of the projects were requested for this year, and all three were approved by the commission. The most expensive of the proposed items, originally estimated at $1.818 was installation of electrical service on Palmetto Avenue, near the marina, According to Herman, "Chuck Volk, at the Monroe Harbour Marina, will let us use some of the efectrical boxes already in place for the boat.

docking areas, which could end up saving us as much as $1,000 of the total amount." Herman stressed however, "We'll just be using the powerhoxes. The electricity will still be the City's.

Another Item approved Monday night was the upgrading of electrical power in the Magnolia Mallarea. "This will not only help during the holiday." season." Crantus said, "but for all downtown area events such as the weekly Market on the Mall, held every Friday.

The actual holiday decoration of downtown Sanford will begin on Saturday, Nov. 23. Cranius explained. "The downtown merchants each have areas they are responsible for decorating, and there are some common areas where we get volunteers to handle the project." All of the decorations are paid for by the merchants and SHDWA

TALLAHASSEE - Leo Alexander Jones, who came within an hour of execution three years ago, got within 24 hours of going to the electric chair today before getting a temporary stay.

Jones, 41, was condemned for the 1981 sniping death of a 28-year-old Jacksonville police officer. His electrocution had been scheduled for 7 a.m. today but was pushed back to Friday at 12:01 p.m.

Defense attorneys say they have witnesses that another man fatally shot Officer Thomas Szafranski in the early morning hours of May 23, 1981. The state Supreme Court Tuesday agreed to give Jones a 21/2-day reprieve and scheduled oral arguments for Thursday morning.

The Department of Corrections then rescheduled Jones' execution for one minute after the temporary stay expired at noon Friday. The death warrant. Jones' second, is good until Larry Spalding. Tuesday. whose state office represents death-row inmates, said there's good evidence that another man

Police obtained a confession from Jones, but he later said it was forced by a beating. Spalding said that several people. many of them prison inmates. are ready to testify that Glen Schoffeld of Jacksonville has bragged about committing the crime.

When Jones was arrested. police found loaded guns in the apartment, including a rifle like the one used to kill Szafranski. It was never established, however, if the rifle actually fired the fatal bullet.

Mark Menser, an assistant attorney general, said the defense's new evidence is not compelling enough to warrant a new trial.

At Jones' trial, prosecutors said Jones had been arrested a week before the shooting and promised to kill Szafranski.

County delays utility purchase

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD - Seminole County commissioners balked last night at giving their formal approval of a proposed $25.5 million purchase of Sanlando Utilities by a homeownercontrolled corporation because utility customers said they needed more time to review the proposal.

Commissioners voted unanimously on commissioner Larry Furlong's proposal to delay their decision until Feb. 11. Until then, commissioners directed Wekiva Utilities Inc. to hold information sessions for customers and poll the nearly 10.000 utility customers to see if they approve of the sale. Wekiva Utilities is a company to be operated by a board of directors made up of utility customers. The vote last night represented a hesitation by commissioners from their unanimous conceptual approval of the plan Aug. 27. Last night's vote would have formalized that approval.

About 50 people attended the hearing last night and about 40 of them either opposed the sale because of proposed increased rates or said they wanted more information, said county records clerk Sandra Wall. Ten people raised their hands in support of the proposed deal, she said.

Commissioners had considcred sponsoring the purchase which would allow Wekiva Utilities to issue tax-exempt bonds to purchase the water and sewer company from Sanlando developer Lester Mandell and other officers of Greater Construction Corp.

Wekiva Utilities officials propose to sell up to $32 million in bonds to pay $25.4 million for Sanlando Utilities and pay for bonding expenses. The sale package includes three water treatment plants and two sewthrough their rates, the utility will be converted to county ownership.

Garbage collection consolidated

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — And then there were five.

When Seminole County commissioners first adopted their controversial Solid Waste Ordinance on Aug. 28, 1990, they divided the unincorporated areas of the county into 12 garbage collection franchise areas for the existing garbage companies. Each area was based on the number of customers each company could document with some allowance for growth.

But since the franchises were created, the larger companies have shown a hunger for smaller companies and yesterday, commissioners unanimously approved a consolidation of the 12 franchise areas into five new areas. The five franchises won't change any current customercompany relationships.

Residents opposed the franchises, saying it removed their freedom to choose whatever company they wanted. Many of the garbage haulers grumbled because they said other companies cheated with their customer SANFORD - Three new housing proposals in the Weklva River-Markham Woods Road area will be under review by Seminole County during the next seven months.

Seminole County commissioners were to meet today to review new rules they must consider when they approve changes to county's compehensive development plan. Under the new state-required rules, commissioners cannot allow new homes or businesses unless adequate services, such as roads or sewer treatment, are available for the new construction.

Planning and Zoning commissioners will review the projects Dec. 4. Commissioners will review them Jan. 14 and consider final approval May 12.

The only new housing development proposed for the Markham Woods Road area is Lake Marietta, an 86-home subdivision. The 21-acre development proposed by Engineering Management and Design Inc. of Orlando is located east of Markham Woods Road and Is bounded on the north and east by Heathrow. Heathrow Elementary is located at the northwest corner of the site.

Because 61/2 acres of the site is either under water or wetlands. the actual density of the project will be greater than seven homes to the acre. Nearby Heathrow is approved for an average of three homes per acre although the closest Heathrow homes to the site are built at four houses to

It's only skin deep

It's a sign of our society's skin-deep view of attractiveness that women by the millions and growing numbers of men are turning to cosmetic surgery. Tummy tucks, eyelid lifts, liposuction, breast and calf implants — all are touted as psychological boons that lift sagging spirits, tone up slackening relationships, even enhance employability.

But the U.S. Food and Drug Administration

soon could throw a curve at one of the most popular procedures: breast implants.

While plastic surgeons have been inserting the silicone gel-filled implants for the past 30 years — now at a rate of about 130,000 a year - the safety of these devices remains in doubt.

According to manufacturers' own test results, as many as one-third of the implants have resulted in complications, including walls of scar tissue contracting painfully around them, infections, blood clots, allergic reactions and leakage of the silicone gel, which has caused cancer in lab animals, into

Given that more than 80 percent of the 2.5 million women who have had breast implants have had them for cosmetic reasons, the temptation to simply order them off the market is great.

But banning the implants outright could have grave health consequences.

As it is, 175,000 women will develop breast cancer this year: another 44,500 women will die of the disease. Eliminating the availability of reconstructive breast surgery could push the toll higher, as it could dissuade women from seeking early diagnosis of problems and prompt treatment, including breast removal.

At the very least, the FDA should permit implants in such cases.

In all cases, patients should be fully informed in writing of the risks involved in such surgery, at legislation passed by the California Asserbay and inform patients about the risks associated with collagen implants, is pending in a Senate committee.

The FDA should demand further long-term testing of the implants. Fully 15 years after the agency first was charged with regulating medical devices it finally collected test results from implant manufacturers this summer.

The tests, however, have been condemned as superficial and inconclusive, with far too few patients studied for more than two years.

While the FDA should not make up for lost time with a harsh and potentially dangerous total ban, doctors must notify patients of the considerable risks associated with this controversial surgery.

Story has sad consequences

I am amazed and distressed that the Herald should have taken the sensational, misleading and destructive approach to its story on the incident at Seminole High School last Thursday.

It would appear that the handling of the story was determined not by the desire for accuracy but by the desire for a dramatic headline.

The sad and distressing consequences of that decision were immediately apparent at the Seminole-Lake Brantley game that night, and o doubt your reporter can verify that the students, the players and the adult crowd were disheartened and depressed.

The students at Seminole have so much to deal with: many of them come from families who are among the hardest hit by the current recession. and we have a minority population for many of whom life is a daily struggle. These kids did not deserve to be sandbagged by their hometown newspaper!

For many of these kids, school spirit is more than an afternoon's rah-rah and the school's image is more important, too. School may be their only opportunity to identify with a group presenting a positive image to boost its members' sense of self-worth, a positive image to help them work toward affirmative self-esteem. Your story attacked this positive image.

Seminole is not without its problems - no school, indeed no organization at all, is. We've got some bad apples, but we are far from the Blackboard Jungle that your story implied. Our substance abuse problems are actually less than those at more affluent high schools, and our campus violence is not very different in kind or amount than other campuses in the area, as a simple investigation will reveal. As an adult. I know that today's headlines are tomorrow's fish-wrapper. But to teenage kids, to be on the front page in such a negative way and so unjustly - especially contrasted to the very positive and extensive coverage given to their neighbor and rival — was devastating. You should be ashamed!

What do "medical care," "taxes," "the economy," "term limits," "quotas" and "voter alienation" have in common? According to interpretations of the recent scattered elections, this: That an allegedly alienated body called "the middle class" is concerned about all of them.

And are mades are cuttled to any little.

And so, sages are entitled to say, "the swing one in 1992 will be the middle class." Of course it is: it always is. And the questions about the diffe class are always about the same: Are they aking progress, and are they making progress

In theory it can be measured by money, but the straight money argument has become confuddled. Realists, like me (called "optimists" by pessimists), will tell you that the middle class has been doing better over recent decades, and will show solid income data to prove it. Other statistical sharpshooters will tell you otherwise, and will show other income data.

Lawkilly, there is another way to look at the firm

Luckily, there is another way to look at it. If we can't agree on how much money is coming in, let's take a look at how much money is going out. Let's look at what people are buying. After all, if folks are able to buy more, they're probably doing better. And vice versa.

This happens to be exactly the right moment. It's near. but not to go through that exercise. The world's best book has just been published: The Statistical Abstract of the United States, with 1,490 tables. It tells lots about what Americans have been buying. Thus:

The number of assenger cars went up by 62 percent from 1970 to 1989 (to 122 million) while the population was growing by 21 per-cent: The number of motorcycles also went up 62 percent, to 4.6 million.

The median size of a new home went up by 38 percent, to 1,905 square feet (1970-90). The home

family affair and a new twist

BOSTON — We are talking about sneakers. Big sneakers. Size 12 sneakers. The new ones that are currently located on my friend's son's feet which are currently located on a high school floor.

The sneakers, which loom even larger than a size 12 in her mind's eye, came into her life all pumped up with hostility. Parent and child had wrangled over them for weeks.

This woman did not approve of the purchase. She and her husband regard $150 sneakers as proof of warped values, rip-off materialism, not to mention the decline and fall of Western civilization. Her son regards them as a necessity, an object of desire, proof of his need to make his own choices.

At the end of the family wrangling, the boy played his trump card or, more specifically, his paycheck. This is what he said: "I'll use my own money." He went into the store with a portion of his summer earnings and walked out with scientifically designed, engineered and marketed ego-building shoes.

The woman and her husband were silenced by his declaration. And bothered by it.

This is what we talk about in the shadow of these sneakers, this woman and I: Our parents. ourselves, our children. Money and independence and family.

Our parents who were young during the Depression used to bring money home, put money on the table. Those were the expressions they used. The assumption was that whatever they earned went into the family pot for distribution. Little went directly to their own pockets.

Now half a century later, teen-agers earn "their own money." They are much less likely to "bring it home." In others it may be designated for college as well as compact discs and sneakers. But it is usually described and circumscribed as "theirs." To do with as they Immigrant families still seem to pool their resources. But American parents who depend on a teen-ager's earning for groceries or rent are more likely to feel ashamed of themselves than proud of their children.

Is this an economic piece of the heralded breakdown of the American family? My friend thinks so.

We count the many ways in which the marketplace treats us as individuals rather than members of families. Most adults are employed on their own as workers who now earn single wages, not family wages. We are subdivided as consumers with separate wants sneakers and Walkmen — not shared needs. Even pre-schoolers have their Saturday morning TV market.

Increasingly each generation is on its own. liberated and isolated in and by the economy.

We appear less like a permanent family unit than like temporarily connected individuals, currently cohabiting.

it happens up and down the age spectrum. On the turnpike this summer, I passed an elderly couple in a car decorated with a bumper sticker that read: "If you don't go first class, your children will." My friend remembers laughing at a boat named "My Children's Inheritance.

We both know parents of our age wrestling with the costs of college. Should they borrow money on their house or have their children borrow? Should they invest in their children's future or their old age? Will helping their dependents leave them dependent? What do they want/expect of their children later in life? The assumptions of family - I will raise you and you will care for me - have been replaced by the assumptions of independence. A reluctance to ask, a fear of needing.

Even divorce laws are now infused by the idea that husband and wife are separate economic units. The goal is to achieve independence, self-sufficiency as quickly as

My friend's paycheck is, of course, not entirely her own, nor is her husband's. It is owned by the bank, the supermarket, credit card compnies - the whole catastrophe, as Zorba might describe it. They don't ask their children to pay room and board, although in rancorous wrangling over these shoes, an ugly reference was made to this expense.

But in the aftermath of the Sneaker Affair. her family has done a great deal of thinking about money earned and shared. The pros and cons of our famed American self-reliance. About economic rights that belong to an individual and responsibilities that belong to a family.

This is not a simple talk. The mess of economics and emotions do not lend themselves to a bottom line. But this is what my friend has learned: It has become far too easy to run away from family in a pair of $150 sneakers.

BIA lets Indian schools crumble

WASHINGTON - Today, as they do every weekday, 200 children of the Puyallup Tribe will crowd into the Chief Leschi School in Tacoma, Wash. — a massive five-story building that the Bureau of Indian Affairs has been warned could collapse in an earthquake or even high winds.

The 50-year-old school ignores a handful of building codes. It is an unsound mishmash of concrete, rubble, clay tiles, plaster and bricks. Diagonal cracks from water and past earthquakes mark the corners of the building. Several walls are visibly bowed.

In March, a consulting firm warned the tribe that "large sections of brick could fall off at any time." The tribe asked the BIA to put lence around the building so children mingling around the school at least couldn't stand close enough to be injured by the falling debris. But nothing has been done.

Last month another building consultant reported that the school does not meet minimum wind or earthquake standards. If an earthquake rattled

The school

Tacoma, the consultant said, "it is our opinion that major damage to the existing school would result." Still, nothing has been Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., has asked the BIA to "take immediate steps" to move the children to another school. The BIA says it is deing its best to find another building, but its best is marginal. BIA officials appeared surprised when Adams told them late last month that the fence the tribe asked for "immediately" seven months ago has not been delivered.

Obliviousness is standard operating pro-cedure for the BIA. The agency rarely does anything "immediately." especially when it comes to repairing its wobbly schools. As a BIA spokesman told us, "Too many of them are old and not built for schooling children."

The Chief Leschi School began life in 1941 as a hospital. Then it was used as a facility for juvenile delinquents before it was converted to a high school/middle school complex and tribal government offices for the Puyallups.

The Interior Department's inspector general was tipped off to possible BIA deathtrap schools last spring and investigated the backlog of maintenance problems. The report, obtained by our associate Jim Lynch. concluded that despite the fact the BIA spends $70 million a year repairing its buildings, the agency has "failed to correct the life-threatening safety deficiencies, code violations and hazardous health conditions existing in Bureau schools, dormitories and other buildings."

The report cited a pattern of buck-passing that shows little hope of reform. Examples of hazards include:

☐ The Teec Nos Pos School in Arizona. which is "imminently hazardous" because it has no fire doors, fire protection or working fire alarm system:

The Many Farms High School in Arizona, where the inspectors found that the boys' dormitory roof leaked, windows were broken, light fixtures were dead and restrooms were unsanitary with corroded and broken toilets:

☐ The San Ildelfonso Day School in New Mexico where the main classrooms are in an adobe structure built in the 1920s. One wall of the building was found to be cracked and in danger of collapsing into a classroom.

The BIA spokesman conceded that repairs have been delayed in the past because of the "warped system we have on how repairs are done." But he blamed that system on red tape created by Congress and said the BIA was streamlining it to speed response time.

Steve Letchworth, owner of Steve's Pharmacy in Sanford, has gotten into the Seminole High School Homecomng spirit by having the window of his pharmacy painted with an Indian on the warpath in honor of the the 'Noies.

Seminole High offers nine advanced placement courses being taught. Lake Brantley with 17 such classes offers the most in the district."

At the root of many of the groups' arguments is a 1981 court order which states that no school may have substantially less than 2,000 students or a minority population substan-tially greater than 35 percent.

Currently. Seminole High has 1.818 students, district figures show. Figures show that 44 percent of those students are minorities. 39 percent of those are black. Members of the committee asked the board directly if they believed 1.818 was "substantially" less than 2,000 students. 'No." said board chairman Joe Williams, reminding the group that Sanford was growing and that those numbers would

Many said they had heard that promise before and they were tired of waiting.

Forgive me if I am impatient when you say those numbers are going to come." said Bill Royster, a member of the committee, "(it has been 3 years since the last rezoning and) we hasn't happened yet." Amelia Royster, another member of the committee pointed out, however that they did not need mere numbers of students.

A balance, she said, must be struck in the composition of the student population.

"We don't want numbers just for the sake of having the numbers," she said. "We do not have balance now...we are heavy on the student who has special needs which require special funding and light on the numbers of students in AP (advanced placement) classes."

Members of the group expressed concern over the perception that Seminole n more vocational programs rather than more upper level courses.

"We do not to be thought of at the vo-tech school," said Mayor Bettye Smith, a member of the committee. "Why (do people) not automatically think of (Seminole as needing) AP increases?"

Dave Farr, executive director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce and a member of the committee, said that changing public perceptions of the school could benefit the board as well as the school itself.

"The school board is constantly looking to broaden its tax base." he said. "The best way to do that is through industrial and commercial development. The best area for economic development is northern Seminole County...Sanford. If we're going to broaden our tax base we have to attract industry and office parks and we can't do that if perception of the schools is poor.

The group suggested that magnet programs be instituted to attract more students to the school. They asked that the board direct the professional staff to see what programs were being instituted in other districts in similar situations.

Committee members said they believed some progress was being made at Seminole High School, but there was some concern that there would be regression of imporovements in public perceptions about the board failed to take actions that would help the school become more self-sufficient.

Committee member Pat Southward pointed out, as an example of how low enrollment figures were hurting Seminole, the accountability grants given by the state to schools which met certain requirements for improvement in areas such as graduation rates and drop out prevention.

1991 Golden Age Games

It's history, but plans in works for next year

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - The Golden Age Games are over for 1991. Plans are already being considered for next year's events.

The final events. Track and Field, and Horseshoes, were held Saturday morning, culminating the week of approximately 36 separate competitive events and a number of social functions.

Outgoing games Chairman Jim Jernigan said. "In all, we had over 1,750 people entered in the combined events." Jernigan had hoped to see as many as 2,000 participants for this. his final year as head of the games. having served in that position for the past 17 years.

"There are now 23 similar games being held around Florida these days," Jernigan said, "so many people who would have Games. come to Sanford, now go to more local events." He added, "This was also an off-year for national games qualifying, so that accounted for some of the drop from our expectations."

Prior to the games, officials predicted the participants and visitors would possibly bring as food purchases, and other spending. "We probably came very close to that figure," Jernigan said. "especially since we seemed to have more visitors than usual."

Kirby commented, "The games this year were very smooth. "They'll be working hard much as $3 million into the local on it however, with the aim to economy, through motel rooms, always improve it from the previous time."

Agreement on unemployment close

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration and top congressional Democrats and Republicans are very close to reaching a deal on extending unemployment benefits that would end one of the year's sharpest political fights.

The House Ways and Means Committee planned to debate the $5.1 billion package today and send it to the House floor Thursday. The plan would provide from six to 20 weeks of extra benefits to people who use up the regular 26 weeks of Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., offered the proposal to Republican leaders on Tuesday. House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-III., and White House budget director Richard Darman said minor work, including an analysis by the Labor Department, was needed before they would endorse it.

"We want to make sure it passes muster down there and gets the president's signature." Michel said.

Millions to benefit from legislation

WASHINGTON - Millions of Americans would gain financially from Senate-passed legislation to end the current earnings limit for many working Social Security recipients.

The provision, adopted by voice vote Tuesday, would eliminate the earnings test now in effect for beneficiaries between ages 65 and 70 who earn more than $9.720 a year. These recipients lose $1 in Social Security benefits for every $3 earned over the limit. The Senate attached the provision to the reauthorization of the Older Americans Act and then approved the overall bill by voice vote. The reauthorization calls for $1.7 billion in spending for senior citizen programs.

Democrats say Bush is 'out of touch'

DETROIT - The 1992 Democratic presidential candidates are promising swift action to revive the economy and provide universal health care while portraying President Bush as out of touch with average Americans.

The six major Democratic candidates held their first debate Tuesday, with the economy and health care dominating a 90-minute forum that also provided early evidence of the likely lines of division within the Democratic field. The overwhelming audience favorite at the forum held by the national AFL-CIO was Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, who implored labor for its support while brushing aside the potential pitfalls of such backing. But even as they expressed support for Harkin, many of the union leaders said it was too soon for labor to rally behind one candidate. Many said they also were impressed with Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey, who for now appear to be Harkin's chief rivals for the nomination.

Fusion power won't be cheap

WASHINGTON - Fusion power, touted as the ultimate solution to the world's energy needs, won't come easily - and is not likely to bring cheap electricity, either.

Controlled nuclear fusion, the same process that lights the sun, promises virtually unlimited power without the radioactive waste or safety problems that have plagued the current nuclear power industry.

But just overcoming the immense technical problems of combining instead of splitting atoms is a daunting task: making such a process economical may be an even larger challenge, say both critics and supporters of the yet-to-be achieved technology.

Efforts to develop controlled nuclear fusion as a source of energy made front page news this week when European scientists announced that for the first time they were able to produce for several seconds more than a million watts of energy from a nuclear fusion reaction.

Bush hits Democrats on economy

WASHINGTON - President Bush, struggling against a stubbornly sagging economy and trying to keep Americans from turning their unhappiness against him, is blaming Democrats in his early re-election forays.

In the face of polls that show his popularity sliding. Bush on Tuesday stepped up his anti-Democratic rhetoric, throwing the blame for the nation's ills on "the liberals that control the Congress. Time and again, Bush told a $1,000-a-plate New York luncheon, he has sent proposals to Congress only to have them thrown into "liberal limbo." His domestic policy proposals were "mugged by party leadership locked in the tired old liberal mindset and determined to go one up politically," Bush said. That brought a quick retort from House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., who said. "If he has been mugged, he has been mugged by his own unwillingness to lead." Today, after raising $2.2 million for his still unannounced re-election bid. Bush was off for more politicking - this time helping Sen. Christopher Bond, R-Mo., fill his campaign coffers in St. Louis.

Vote on holy days tests faith, culture

WASHINGTON - Faith and culture and the Bible clash as the National Conference of Catholic Bishops considers a two-thirds reduction in the number of holy days of obligation.

The prelates were voting today on whether to drop the requirement to attend Mass on three holy days and move another holy day to a Sunday in response to the estimated nearly 14 million regular Roman Catholic churchgoers who skip the special services.

The heart of the question is what is fueling American religious practice at the end of the second millennium," said Auxiliary Bishop Wilton Gregory of Chicago. "Merely retaining a custom that's widely ignored, is that addressing the issue?" But some lay Catholic groups have protested that the church should not surrender to an increasingly secular culture. "Instead of conceding to a sort of secular drift, we should continue the holy days and continue to encourage the faithful to attend the liturgy on those days," said James Sullivan, vice president of Catholics United for the Faith.

Only Christmas and the Immaculate Conception on Dec. 8 would be left as days other than Sunday that Catholics would be required to attend Mass if all the proposed changes were approved.

Woman urges suspension of implants

GAITHERSBURG, Md. - Terry Davis' problems with silicone gel breast implants began a few days after she got them when they slipped down to her waist.

Seven operations later, including removal of the implants, and still in constant pain, the Palm Beach Gardens woman says the government should halt sales of the implants until they are proven safe.

'We aren't against implants, we just want a safe one," she told a federal advisory committee Tuesday.

But dozens of other women told the panel that breast implants had transformed their lives, had made those who lost their breasts to cancer feel "whole" again and had given small-breasted women self-confidence.

Despite compelling emotional arguments on both sides of the issue, the Food and Drug Administration panel today will turn its attention to scientific safety data that has been compiled by four manufacturers of implants. The data, which the manufacturers are relying on to justify keeping their products on the market, has not been released by the FDA

Bush pushes for lower card rates

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - President Bush is the latest in a long line of people who have pressured banks to lower interest rates on credit cards.

But despite his powerful position, his lawboning likely will have the same negligible effect as the pleadings of those who've gone before him, according to economists, consumer activists and bankers

Bush's comments came amid growing fears the recovery from the recession is fizzling and only two weeks before the start of the crucial Christmas shopping season.

"I think it will have less than zero effect." said economist Michael K. Evans, a Washington-based consultant. "No major organization is willing to come along and break

The president is discovering what millions of average consumers have known for a long time. Their interest income from savings has fallen dramatically, but their borrowing expenses have remained high. Rates on six-month certificates of deposits, for instance, have dropped nearly four percentage points over the past 21/2 years to 5.19 percent last month, according to recent study by the Consumer Federation of America. Over the same period, credit card rates have actually risen by nearly a percentage point to 18.88 percent.

Many smaller banks have cut their credit card rates by several percentage points, and a handful offer cards with rates as low as 9.5

Playing the AIDS odds can be fatal

By LEE SIEGEL AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES - The average heterosexual American faces an extremely small chance of getting the AIDS virus during sex. but as Magic Johnson learned, even a remote risk can become a deadly reality.

"Even if the risk is small, why take a chance? There is no cure for this disease." said Nancy Padian, an epidemiologist at the University of California at San Francisco. She added. "Unless you're damn sure your partner is uninfected, then use condoms."

Other than abstaining from sex, heterosexuals can minimize the chance of getting AIDS by knowing their lovers well so they can avoid sex with people who had numerous lovers, had homosexual encounters, used Intravenous drugs or tested positive for the AIDS virus, experts

Health officials also say heterosexuals are more likely to get AIDS if they have sex with strangers or many partners. If they fall to use condoms, if they are female, if their sex partners are inner-city blacks or Hispanies - groups more likely to be infected with the virus - or if they or their lovers have sexually transmitted diseases.

How AIDS virus is spread

By Associated Press

LOSANGELES Heterosexuals can spread the AIDS virus in several ways during sex.

Anal Intercourse is the easiest way, followed by vaginal-penile intercourse and oral sex, said Dr. Beth Marcus, an AIDS risk-reduction expert at Childrens Hospital in Los

AIDS-infected people carry the virus in their blood and semen or vaginal fluid. Low concentrations of virus also are found in saliva, tears and sweat, but there are no proven cases of AIDS being spread through those fluids, Marcus

However, the Centers for Disease Control recommends that people do not exchange deep-mouth, or French, kisses with someone infected with the virus.

Male · to · Female Transmission

Infected men can spread the virus to women during intercourse when their semen or blood from any cuts, sores or abrasions on the penis comes in contact with the mucous membrane lining the vagina, uterus or rectum.

The AIDS virus in semen can directly infect certain cells or can enter a woman's bloodstream through microscopic tears or sores in the mucous lining.

A woman who performs oral sex on a man can become infected if the virus in semen or blood enters her bloodstream through microscopic cuts or sores in her mouth. Virus in swallowed semen is probably killed by stomach acids.

Female-to-Male Transmission

The virus in vaginal fluid can enter a man's bloodstream through large or tiny cuts, sores or abrasions on his penis. in addition, virus-infected vaginal fluids probably directly enter the penis through the urethra, since that is a known route by which women can infect men with chlamydia, gonorrhea and other veneral diseases.

A man who performs oral sex on a woman can become infected if the virus in her vaginal fluid or menses enters sores or cuts in his mouth and reaches his bloodstream.

Tourism drops, revenue stable

Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Tourism has dropped slightly in Seminole County, but has not had a significant effect on tourist tax revenues, said county tourism director Jack Wert.

"A large number of the hotel rooms in the county enter to the business traveling public," Wert sald. "That was not affected much. What was affected was the weekend mom and pop and kids business."

Wert said overall occupancy rates declined by about 10 percent by end of the county's fiscal year, Sept. 30, 1991, but reve-

Wert said next year's tourist development grants will place a special emphasis on amateur sporting events. He said Tourist Development Council members have decided to allocate $75,000 of the $695,000 anticipated to be collected from the 2 percent "bed tax" to amateur sporting events. The tax is only collected from hotel customers and those slaying in other short-term accommodations.

"We are really targeting amateur sporting events," Wert said. The Central Florida Zoo will also be granted $180,000 under "It's very definitely an area nues dropped by a smaller other counties are not focusing Wert said the TDC will also consider applications for a total of $100,000 in grants to municipal projects, such as the Lake Mary amphitheater which was issued a grant this year. Another $50,000 will be allocated to continuing sponsorships, such as the Golden Age Games. And $10,000 will be allocated for small events.

Graham's office pledges help for Midway water

By MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

MIDWAY - Sen. Bob Graham's office has asked the Florida Department of Transportation to resolve the water line situation on State Road 46 and a Graham assistant pledged his assistance in financing the resolution.

"We called the (FDOT) secretary's office and asked them to look into It." sald Patricia Grise, staff assistant to Graham in Tallahassee. "The senator will be happy to provide any assistance in reallocating community development block grant funds for the project."

Grise said she will not take any further actions unless requested.

Last week, local FDOT officials stopped work on the widening and repaving of SR 46 by Midway until it can address the community's aging main water line. FDOT wanted to build the road over the line, but found it was leaking and made of a material that can be damaged by construction.

County plan may restrict construction

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Some property owners could be prevented from building under existing zoning specifications in unincorporated areas of the county under Seminole County's proposed growth management review methods.

"It will place further restrictions on what property owners believe they can build," said Pam Hastings, county capitol programs analyst. "They will be told to wait before they build. phase development in or they will be restricted to building 10 percent of what they want."

Some property owners may be told that they don't have county permission to build a specific development because they don't have an agreement with the county or have a plat for the property, said Hastings. They will be allowed to develop according to surrounding land use specifications, which may not be what they believe they can build. Hastings sald.

In May, commissioners will consider changing the zoning or land use designation on 15 properties throughout the county, including a suburban residential site in a rural residential area on Oak Way near South Sanford Avenue.

Beginning April 1, 1992, Semmole County will have in place a concurrency management" system. The system assures that roads and other public services will be available at the time the homes, stores or offices are built, a state-required growth management technique called "concurrency,

A county-appointed committee of development professionals and homeowner representitives has been drafting their recommendations for the concurrency management system since June 1990 and will present their final recommendations to county commissioners in January.

Under the concurrency management system. Hastings said county planners will review nearby road congestion, water and sewer capacity and other services to see if they will be available for the development. If they are, and the development meets zoning and land planning requirements, the development can proceed.

If the services aren't available, the developer may provide them. Hastings said. The developer may widen a road to meet the additional traffic of the housing development, for example. The county may also ask the developer to "phase" the project, or build portions of it throughout a period of time up to 20 years instead of all at once, she said.

Or the county may require that the developer build only 10 percent of the project until adequate facilities are available. Hastings said.

Lake Mary claims first volleyball region title

terald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY - From also-rans to state contenders. The Lake Mary High School girls volleyball team, losers in the 4A-District 9 championship match three years in a row, continued to take out its revenge on the rest of Central Florida with a 15-12, 15-5 rout of the Dr. Phillips Panthers Tuesday night in the 4A-Region V championship match.

With the win, the Rams (33-1) join the other seven regional champions from around the state in the sectional round this Friday night. Lake Mary will travel to Boca Raton to play Spanish River (a 15-4, 15-7 winner over Vero Beach) in the 4A-Section III title match.

According to the Rams, this is exactly what they had in mind all

"After the first couple of matches, we saw that this team had the potential to go all the way." said senior co-captain Melissa Mau. "Since then, our focus hasn't been just to win the district, but to go all the way to the state title."

Tara Calvin. Lake mary's other senior co-captain, agreed, saying, As the season progressed, we saw that this was the team to do it. Everything is starting to click."

It took a little while for things to click Tuesday night as Dr. Phillips - which had lost the regional championship game three years in a row to a Seminole County school took a 12-9 lead in the first game.

But as they have so many times the last four years, Calvin took a set from Mau and hammered it to the floor. After a block by Diane Duber cut the lead to 12-10. Angle Snow came on and served five consecutive points to close the first game for the Rams.

Letting the first game get away seemed to dishearten the Panthers and the Rams were quick to capitalize on the emotional letdown, racing out to a leads of 6-0 and 12-1. After that, it was academic.

t: Niceville det. Penama Ney, 15-12, 15-0. Nr. Jacksonville-Platcher det.

III: Loke Mary at Boca

"After winning that come-frombehind, sloppy game, we seemed to relax." said Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry. "When we're relaxed, that allows us to play a more aggressive game."

Actually, what the Rams started to do was play a more patiently aggressive game. What seemed to disrupt Lake Mary more than anything in the first game was the backboard-like defense played by Dr. Phillips. There were several times the Rams thought they had a point put away, only to see the Panthers dig the ball out.

Late in the first game and through the second, the Rams made sure that the point was theirs before

"I think that has to do with our two big leaders (May and Calvin)." said Henry. "They keep the young ones in the game and didn't allow any dying to go on in the first game (when the Rams fell behind on five different occasions).

According to the Boca Raton News, the 4A-Section III championship match between Lake Mary and the Spanish River Sharks will be played at 7 p.m. Friday night in Boca Raton.

It took a while for them to get the attack going Tuesday against Dr. Phillips in the 4A-Region V title match, but once they did, Melissa Mau (No. 6), Jennifer Greissing (No. 1) and the Lake Mary Rams swept past the Panthers.

Defending track champ Marshall posts Late Model win at SpeedWorld

Special to the Horold

ORLANDO - Defending FASCAR Late Model champion Ricky Marshall scored his first win of the new season on Friday night at Orlando SpeedWorld.

At New Smyrna Beach Satur-day night, cold weather and intermittent showers forced FASCAR officials to cancel the full card of racing at the New Smyrna Speedway.

Bill Posey looked to be the class of the Late Model field on a cold. damp Friday night at the Orland circuit that found drivers trying to hold on to a slick race track.

Posey led the heat when a back marker spun right in front of him. With no where to go, Posey slammed into the errant car. But his crew had the "Bat Mobile" ready for the feature and he led for the first half of the race while wrestling with his ill-handling car.

At that point, back markers came into play again, creating a five-car chain reaction crash. Leader Posey pitted on the caution, handing the point to John Kennedy. But Marshall wasted no time in taking over the lead and went on to win over Kennedy and Doug Lathem, who is back once more from retire-

"The doctor ripped me up one side and down the other because of my weight. He told me I wouldn't live to (age) 25 if I didn't lose weight." the 24-year-old recalled. "But it didn't influence me — it made me angry that he yelled at me."

A veteran of various weight loss plans, Albritton said he gained weight using a popular liquid diet program. The only thing that happened when he used over-the-counter diet pills in high school was he would be playing his trumpet in his yard in the middle of the night.

"The neighbors didn't like that!" he recalled.

Albritton attributes his sucmaintained for two years in large measure to the move from a small town to the Orlando area.

"I have always wanted to be an ctor." he said. When he read about the planned Universal Studios in Orlando, he decided to move to the area because he has relatives in Sanford.

Slimming down from a 52inch waist to a 30- or 31-inch waist size and his new surroundings has given him a new perspective.

"Life is fun now," he says with a smile. "It is amazing how life can change by losing weight."

comments from strangers. Although Albritton did not exercise while losing weight. he does now. After two health clubs he belonged to closed their doors, he relied on a home exercise bike, rowing machine and walking as his principle forms of exercise.

Learning to cook as a young boy while his mother worked. Albritton now tries to cut calories by using little fat in recipes and reading food package labels. He never uses salt because his father heavily salted and peppered all his food.

"Everything he ate was black essful weight loss which he has and white (with pepper and salt)." he recalled.

Although today he eats a more healthy diet. Albritton says he does have a recipe for a "mean" chocolate pound cake that includes melting two giant Hershey bars and mixing in cocoa. With his focus on healthy eating, he decided not to submit that recipe for the Cook of the Week column.

Bubbling with enthusiasm. Albritton is looking forward to filming a television show pilot soon. He is also doing some modeling while hoping for the 'big break."

Like fashion, trends in food come around more often than we realize. An example is the growing popularity of so-called peasant foods, such as stews. These dishes are beginning to appear more and more on menus in major cities, just as they once did in Mom and Pop diners in the '30s. Incidentally,

Many ways to prepare old favorite, meatloaf

A friend asked me for a recipe for a microwave meatloaf. There are many! Some of these recipes were favorites in classes I've taught and have proved to be easy and have good flavor and texture. All of the meatloaves micro-cooked in less than 15 minutes which is a great savings both time-wise and on the electric bill.

If you are cooking for one or two and don't want any leftovers you may find this first recipe a problem solver. MEATLOAP-IN-A-MUG

causes acid reflux in the stomach? is there a treatment for this condition other than ulcer

DEAR READER: Acid reflux doesn't occur in the stomach; it occurs in the lower esophagus, which is not lined by protective mucus and is, therefore, especially susceptible to being irritated by gastric juice.
At the junction of the esophagus and the stomach. there is an opening in the diaphragm that is controlled by a sphincter. This ring of muscle prevents backwash of stomach contents during gestric contractions.

However, in many people particularly those with hiatal hernia — the sphincter is defective, so when the stomach contracts, acid contents flow back into the esophagus. Called reflux, this causes heartburn, indigestion and gas.

In the absence of a safe and easy method to tighten the sphincter (surgery is expensive and not consistently reliable), most patients rely on antacids to neutralize the stomach contents. thereby relieving symptoms. As an alternate, people often use anti-ulcer prescription drugs. too, such as Tagamet or Zantac. By reducing the production of gastric acid, these drugs alleviate the heartburn of reflux.

I suggest people with reflux carry out several simple sugges-

Don't stuff yourself. A full stomach is more likely to cause symptoms.

If you're obese, lose weight. Abdominal fat deposits can press on the stomach and increase reflux.

Use antacids plentifully. Initially, the liquid forms usually Leadside, do you have a twin brother?" asked Maxwell Smart. 'No. Smart. Why do you inquire?"

Because I saw someone who looked just like you running in the Washington Marathon a month ago.'

"That was I. Smart."

"But you use a wheelchair." "Not if I keep running. Only when I slow down do I need my chair."

"Enough of zis chatter. Let us get on viv zee game," protested Siegfried.

the queen, successfully finessed the club queen, and then led a children, Shmart.' diamond to his nine and West's jack. Siegfried cleared his heart suit, dummy's ace winning.

If Max had led a low diamond at this point, Leadside's king would have appeared and Max would have had nine tricks: two spades, two hearts, three diamonds and two clubs. But he saw an extra chance. At trick six. Max cashed dummy's club ace. If the king didn't drop from West, he planned to revert to diamonds. But Siegfried was ready - in tempo, he played the club king.

Now Max should still have led a diamond, planning to play the ace, but he was deceived by Siegfried's false card. Max led the club four and confidently finessed the nine. Siegfried triumphantly put his club 10 onto the table and cashed two heart winners to defeat the contract.
