Junior High

On Friday Nov. 4 the Eighth grade of the Sanford Junior High was very proud to have as a speaker on "Germany", Mrs. Russell Wallace.

Mrs. Wallace has just arrived in the United States for the first time. Her husband, a Sanford man, is a member of the US Air Force and had been stationed in Germany for some time.

Mrs. Wallace told us about the sectors into which Berlin is divided. She explained to us the

Three Ships Sail For Bottom Of World

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Three sturdy gray ice breakers blinked greetings to each other off Norfolk, Va., a few days ago, and set a southward course for the bottom of the world.

After a year of planning, phase two of preparations for the 1957-58 International Geophysical "Year"—really two years—was moving out of the paper work stage. Phase one was the exploratory voyage of the USS Atka to the Antarctic last year.

These two years, Jan. 1, 1957, to Dec. 31, 1958, will witness mankind's greatest single coordinated quest for knowledge about the world in which we live.

In all 3,000 scientists will explore the atmospheric blanket which wraps the world; search the faces of the sun and the earth.

While the assemblies of Asia will go on all over the world, the most dramatic of the quests, outside of establishing a satellite in space, is the South Pole expedition. Those three ice breakers, the Edisto, the Glacier and the East Wind, are the first departures of a seven-ship American task force. They are bound for the Ross Sea conditions under which the people live and described for us the way the people dress, the kinds of games and sports they play and the difference in their jobs and currency as compared with those in our country.

"German children listen to American music and music of their own country as well as that of other foreign countries," she said. "They watch American movies regularly," she went on.

We all enjoyed her talk very much and hope that she will enjoy living in the United States as much as we do.

Tennis Racquet Is Gilt-Edged Ticket To World Travel

By DOROTHY ROSE Associated Press Women's Editor

Want to go places, do things and see the world, girls? Then take up tennis.

Doris Hart, American women's tennis champion, has found her tennis racquet a gilt-edged ticket to international society and an exciting life of worldwide travel.

This ratty, modest young woman also found tennis a magic cure for the effects of an invalid childhood. Although she had been almost crippled by a leg injury in infancy, she took up tennis at the age of 10 and proceeded to rake in most of the major laurels of international competition. She has won the Wimbledon, French and U. S. championships in 1914 and 1935 after having failed in 5 previous finals.

"I guess I always wanted to see the world," says Doris, "and for the last 10 years, I have seen it. Sometimes I've traveled as much as 30,000 miles in one year. It's wonderful. If I had a daughter, I'd see that she started playing tennis at 10 as she was big enough to hit a ball over the net."

In her travels Doris has met such personages as the late King George VI, Queen Elizabeth, Princess Margaret, Clement Attlee and Adm. Lord Mountbatten.

She has played tennis in Australia, South America, India, Ceylon, Egypt, South Africa and practically every country in Europe — except Russia.

Now that she has won about all the honors possible in her field, Doris is starting on a new career. She has turned pro. and will design tennis racquets and conduct tennis clinics for Spalding. She starts this winter teaching tennis in Miami Beach, just a hop, skip and jump from her home in Coral Gables Fla.

Later she will conduct tennis clinics in 40 or 50 cities.

conditions hold up re-supply.

A complete field hospital will be manned by two doctors and a dentist. Most of their work probably will be surgery for as soon as you work out the germs you brought with you, you aren't bothered with respiratory infections. There are no germs in the Antarctic."

W. H. Sandefer Is Principle Speaker At Reserve Meeting

The National Vice-President of the Fleet Reserve Association was the principle speaker at a meeting of the local organization last night.

W. H. Sandefer, of Jacksonville, addressed the local members, using as his subject "The Highlights of the 1955 National Convention."

Plans for the Pre-Thankingsgiving picnic, to be held in Fort Mellon Park beginning at 2 o'clock tomorrow, were completed at last night's meeting. Last minute changes in the schedule of speakers for the event, and the planning for the games in which visitors will participate, were approved by the group.

National V.P. Sandefer told the Sanford Fleet Reserve Association that "proposed laws for a ladies auxiliary of the organization were approved."

He said that "a resolution to change the name of the association was discussed at length and that the proposed change was defeated by a huge majority."

"We decided, by voice vote," said Sandefer, "that a resolution to obtain a national charter would not be adopted."

"We are enjoying the greatest year in membership gain the association has ever experienced," Sandefer explained, as he brought out the many details discussed at the 28th National Convention held in Chicago, Ill., Oct. 28, 29, and 30.

The National V.P. said, "I appreciated your loyal support and will endeavor to serve you to the best of my ability during the coming year."

Local Company Reports Truck Is Stolen Yesterday

A truck was taken from Southward Fruit Company sometime before 7:22 p. m. last night, said Billy Southward, who reported the incident.

The truck is described as being a green one with yellow trim on the grill, has airplane tires and bears the number nine on both sides.

Southward, in making his report to the Sanford Police Department last night, said that when he returned to the packing plant a light gray 1947 Ford came up near the rear of the building with two white boys in it. "As soon as they spotted me," he said "they made a U turn and sped away."

The truck, according to the Sanford Police Department, has not yet been recovered.

Mapping Program Of Forty Counties Is Now Completed

Every year about this time, folks can get their favorite storage container from one of the local stores, at no charge at all.

B. L. Perkins and Son, local men's store on East First St., has hat boxes for those who would like to have them, for free.

Sanford and Seminole County folks, as well as friends throughout the trade area are invited to come in and get their hat box just for the asking.

Man Shot, Wounded; Motive Is Unknown

A rural negro was shot last night and seriously wounded as he stood on the street corner in Sanford at 3rd St. and Sanford Ave.

According to a Sanford Police Department report, Junior McNeal, of Route No. 1, Box 242, Sanford, was shot in the back with a .38-caliber revolver. The cartridge, entering the back came out the negro's right side. The Sanford Police Chief, Roy Williams, said that the negro suffered a possible punctured lung.

McNeal was sent to the Orange Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Curtis Stanley, a 30-year-old negro, who gives his residence address as 301 1/2 Sanford Ave., was arrested by Lt. Jack Hickson, of the Sanford Police Department, and charged with the shooting. He is at present, being held in the Sanford City Jail.

Charges, said Chief Williams, will possibly be "assault and intent to murder."

The shooting took place at 8:59 o'clock last night, according to the report, and Stanley was arrested about an hour after the shooting as he returned to the scene. Time of Stanley's arrest was given as 9:59 p. m.

The negro gives no reason, so far, for his actions. A .38 caliber, Smith and Weston revolver was taken from him at the time of the arrest. Chief Williams said that, even though two fired cartridges were found, the shooting was not a double.

Mrs. Louise Gilpin Reports 2 Courses Being Conducted

Mrs. Louise Gilpin, Casselberry, Chairman Nursing Services, Seminole County Chapter, American Red Cross reported at the board meeting held Monday that there are now two courses in Home Care Of The Sick being conducted in Seminole County.

The first, which is well under way, is being held in Slavia in the auditorium of St. Luke's Lutheran Church under the instruction of Mrs. John Dye, Jr. Those taking this course are Mrs. Marie Atkins, Mrs. Sadie Ziegler, Mrs. Adella Woodall, Mrs. Bernice Cook, Mrs. Bernice Robinson, Mrs. Essie Ziegler, Mrs. Emma White, Mrs. Katherine Doe, Mrs. Lena Lanier, Mrs. Daisy Jones and Mrs. Annie Lovett.

Mrs. Edith Olsen, field representative nursing services, American Red Cross, for the entire state of Florida, visited both these classes this week and expressed herself as very well pleased both with the set-up and enthusiasm manifested by those participating.

Plans are under way to hold a second course in Home Care Of The Sick in both these communities after the turn of the year.

Pincrest School Holds Open House

Pincrest School Instructional personnel observed American Education Week by having open house for parents and friends.

Most of the children wrote the invitations.

Of primary interest to parents were the exhibits of each child's school work. Several rooms showed art projects done by the entire room.

During Wednesday afternoon, from 2 to 3 o'clock, approximately 150 visitors went to the school where each teacher served as hostess in her own room, serving refreshments of orange juice and cookies.

Parents took time to tour the school in order to see for themselves the progress in the construction and completion of the new building.

Householder Delivers Veterans Day Address

Lions Annual Bulb Sale Gets Underway Tuesday At Noon

The second annual Lions Club Bulb Sale will get underway Tuesday with a kick-off luncheon when teams will be named and last minute details and plans completed.

Areas of the city and of the DuBary area will be assigned teams at the Tuesday luncheon meeting which will be held at the Yacht Club. Co-Chairman Dallas Loop and Tommy Stringer said that "the whole city will be covered by the two-man teams to sell the bags of light bulbs."

Money derived from the sale of the light bulbs, said the co-chairmen, will go to carry on the sight conservation program of the local Lions Club. Through this fund, glasses are furnished school aged children who otherwise would not be able to obtain the glasses for themselves.

Last year, said Tommy Stringer, the local Lions Club sold 500 bags of bulbs. The sale, which will begin Tuesday, Nov. 15, is our second annual sale in which we hope to sell about 750 bags. Last year we ran out ahead of time.

It was emphasized that the bags will contain value received when $2.00 worth of bulbs will be in each container. At the same time, said the co-chairmen, folks purchasing the bulbs will be helping the Lions Club in their sight conservation program.

Ceremonies Are Held At Plot Local Legion Sponsors Event

A representative crowd heard Prosecuting Attorney Karlise Housholder deliver a Veterans Day address this morning at the local Veterans Plot at Evergreen Cemetery.

Following the invocation, Housholder told the group observing Veterans Day, "all of those who have died have left us a duty and obligation to preserve the freedoms and liberties of our country."

He said, "We must make sure that our country is never lulled into a sense of false security such as we found existing on Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese hit us with a sneak attack."

"The only answer," said Housholder, "to this Russian threat to world peace is for us to stay so strong, that any nation, including Russia, would not attempt any aggression toward us."

"And that we would immediately be in a position," said the Seminole County Prosecuting Attorney, "to carry out aggressive warfare on the offensive and not in any way be on the defensive." "While the Russians are apparently following a policy of appeasement we should not in any way be fooled by them," he said.

"We must remain," Housholder concluded, "in a position to aggressively face them any place on the face of the globe, at any time."

The memorial services and observance were held under the auspices of the Campbell-Lossing Post of the American Legion.

Mrs. Bea Newsome, president of the local Auxiliary, opened the services this morning and the invocation was given by Mrs. Henry Thurston.

The committee in charge of arranging the ceremony was: Mrs. F. E. Roumillat, Mrs. Bea Newsome, Mrs. Henry Thurston, Mrs. B. L. Miller and Captain Earl Loucks.

George Maybury, commander of the local American Legion Post gave a few remarks following the address by Karlise Housholder.

The benediction, this morning, was given by the American Legion Post Chaplain, K. A. Monforton, and taps were sounded by Giles Niblack and Henry Morgan.

Nationwide Event Offers Parents Many Advantages

There's an education for parents in American Education Week. And if you haven't taken advantage of the opportunities offered during this year's nationwide event, then never miss another one.

Parents had lunch with their children yesterday at Southside School when fourth graders, as a part of their "acquaint the parent with what we're doing" move, invited mothers and dads to come in, sit with them at school desks, look at their work, find out what they're thinking, during school hours, talk with the teacher, and then enjoy a real lunch.

For the big treat of the week, the luncheon yesterday at Southside School served roast beef, rice and butter, a congealed vegetable salad, peach halves, hot (Continued On Page Ten)

Florida State Bank Personnel Leaves For Day Celebration

It was more than just a holiday for the staff of the Florida State Bank in Sanford.

The entire force left Sanford shortly before nine o'clock this morning, aboard a chartered Greyhound Bus to visit Haines City and First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Winter Haven's Haines City Branch, join hands for the day-long celebration.

Headed by T. E. Tucker, president of the Florida State Bank in Sanford, the bank's personnel will be guests of the Haines City financial institutions.

The open house began at nine o'clock this morning and will continue until four o'clock this afternoon. The First Federal Savings and Loan Association's new office building at 615 Hinson Ave., and the completely remodeled and enlarged quarters of the State Bank of Haines City at 6th and Jones Ave. will be the location of today's open house event.

The climax of the open house celebration, an unprecedented affair, will be at the noon hour today when a gigantic free luncheon will be served to which people of the area as well as out-of-town guests were invited.

Hosts for the occasion will be Carl Oaker, director and local manager of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Winter Haven's Haines City branch and C. H. McNulty, president of the McNulty group of Florida Banks, and Fred McNulty, vice-president of the Haines City bank.

Included in the new installation of the State Bank of Haines City is a new drive-in banking service similar to the service of the local Florida State Bank.

'S-D' Day Is Aimed At Sanford Women

As if wives didn't have enough to do, hundreds of thousands of them have been taking on still another task that of family chauffeur.

It's one of the many changes wrought by the vast exodus of American families from cities to the suburbs. In many Seminole County and Sanford families wives are now in charge of the family automobile from Monday through Friday, leaving their husbands to take over the wheel on weekends.

For these women the job of chauffeuring the family throughout the week has meant a constant, unending—and often nerve-racking—round of pickup and delivery, usually against the background of automobile horns and school bells. First deliver the man of the house to his place of business. (Continued On Page Ten)

Holy Bible

Take and Read

Nearly 16 centuries ago, a man named Augustine lived in a Roman colony in Africa. He was vain, greedy, lustful—in fact, few men have been less exemplary. Then, when in his early thirties, he began to be increasingly dissatisfied with his life.

One day, feeling particularly miserable, he went into his garden and wept. While weeping, he heard, from a neighboring house, the voice of a child saying again and again, "Take up and read. Take up and read."

Struck by these words, Augustine went to his room, opened his Bible, and read. And when he had finished reading the turning point in his life had been reached and passed and he was a man transformed.

Through the centuries men and women have gone to the Bible seeking, and have come away with their answer. For in no other book is there such truth, wisdom, and promise. That is why the American Bible Society has been at work for more than a century, bringing the Bible to millions of persons in more than 60 countries, translating it into hundreds of languages.

The Bible is everywhere, yours for the asking.
 Take it up—and read.

Revival Services At Local Church Conclude Sunday

Fall Revival Services at the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church will be concluded Sunday Nov. 13. The Evangelist, the Rev. William H. Stephens Jr., will speak at both morning and evening services. The Rev. Stephens is the pastor of the Alliance Church in Minnesota. He has been preaching in Sanford each night during the past week. The blessing of God has been evident in his ministry. His stress upon the practical aspects of the Christian's life and service has been a blessing to all those who have attended the meetings. Special music will be presented at both Sunday Services. The Carol Choir, composed of the Junior age young people, will sing "Guard the Temple" in the morning service. A duet, "When I Survey The Wondrous Cross" will be sung in the evening service by Mrs. Eloise Pfeiffer and the Rev. David S. Carnes.

The morning worship begins at 10:40 a.m. and the evening service at 7:45 p.m. Mr. Stephens' subject in the morning will be "When the Saints Go Marching In". At the evening hour he will bring a message stressing evangelism and prophecy entitled, "A Year and a Day". A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend these services.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

Veal is a welcome but not red-hot variation in a household that does its best. It's a meat that lends itself delightfully to a host of recipes—for example, the Italian dish, Veal Risotto, which is this week's Sunday dinner suggestion by the A & P Service For Homemakers. Enough for four persons.

Dip few veal shoulder strips—half-inch thick—in flour. Brown with half-cup chopped onion in two tablespoons hot fat. Stir in the following: two cups cooked rice, one cup zested tomatoes, one cup beef bouillon, two tablespoons chopped parsley, quarter teaspoon basil and quarter teaspoon oregano and one teaspoon salt.

Cover and simmer about 40 minutes, or until meat is very tender. Serve with a tossed green salad and your favorite vegetables. For dessert, try this recipe for delicious home-made lime sherbet. Boil two thirds cup sugar and one and three fourths cup water for 10 minutes. Stir in one and one-quarter teaspoons gelatin dissolved in quarter-cup cold water. Cool sugar slightly. Then add half cup lime juice and two drops green coloring. Chill mixture and fold in two sifter-beaten egg whites and an eighth teaspoon salt.

To freeze the sherbet, put it in the cube trays and place them in freezer compartment of your refrigerator. At half-hour intervals stir from back to front of trays. Sherbet should be frozen for four hours or more. Just before serving beat it to light texture with hand or electric beater. Make 8½ servings.

In finishing painted woodwork, one advantage of choosing a self-polishing wax is that it can be removed with warm soapy water. And remember that all of the old wax finish should be sanded off before a fresh coat is applied.

Don't Risk Health With Extra Pounds

By HERMAN N. BUNDISIN, M.D.

SO you're a little overweight. Well, maybe that isn't too serious. But if you're fat, you'd better do something about it. Now just how fat is fat? Your physical appearance probably provides the best answer to that question. When the girth around your abdomen exceeds that of your chest (unexpanded, mind you) then you're fat.

Best of Health
Maybe, though, you feel fine. In fact, you might feel in the best of health.

Then why redouble? Life insurance companies can give you some pretty good reasons. They have statistics which show that if you are fat:

You are more susceptible to diabetes, more likely to have high blood pressure, various types of cancer and suffer from gallstones and gallbladder trouble.

You are more apt to have heart trouble, and you will have more difficulty recovering from acute infections such as pneumonia. You are more likely to have other diseases and ailments.

The life insurance companies say you are a greater risk to them than a person of ordinary weight. How then, why are you fat? Now then, why are you fat? On, I know you've got a good excuse. You probably blame it on a family tendency to overweight, or maybe you insist that some of your internal organs are at fault. While it's true that certain conditions within your body can cause obesity, I'll bet most of you are overweight simply because you eat and drink too much, and lead too easy a life.

Basic Cause
It's this simple: You take in more calories than you convert to energy.

Some of you I'm afraid should probably blame chronic beer drinking. On the other hand, some of you can blame the fact that you don't drink beer or alcohol. Quite frequently a person who doesn't drink or smoke will compensate for denying himself these, by maintaining a diet out of proportion to his requirements.

You know the type. He eats a lot of sweets and chocolates, and thinks he is being a good boy!

QUESTION AND ANSWER
Q. I. K. I have had tuberculosis, which is now cured. Will my children inherit the tendency to get this disease?
A. Answer: No; children do not inherit tuberculosis or a tendency to develop it.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

FROM the kitchen came the muted sound of running water, the tinkle of silver, the scraping of kettles and the voices of women. Carol stretched out comfortably. "So that's Jane. I never pictured her like that. Roger was always so generous, never a word against her. He said she was a fine person. But I'd have expected her to be more attractive, wouldn't you? Do you think it's true that she won't write about Roger?"

"We have the same agent," Lois said. "She would never set us at conflicting jobs."

"I suppose not. Still, it's queer that Jane should come back here now unless she wants something. She hasn't been in Stoweville since the divorce and now she comes back just when Roger dies. I heard she was in town and at the— the service—though I didn't see her myself. Unless she thinks—but Roger didn't leave her a cent. Anyhow," Carol conceded, "I don't believe she is mercenary. She wouldn't accept a cent of money from Roger, though he felt awful about it."

She brooded for a moment. "I wonder just how Shandy will get out of taking her to dinner. He's never gone to public places since the war because of the way he looked. Getting him here in lunch was an achievement, I can tell you." Her voice changed. "Unless he wanted to see you again."

With a murmured excuse Lois got up to leave.

"I'm terribly sorry," Carol told her. "You know I made that idiotic mistake about the day you were coming and I'm dining with Dr. Thomas and his wife tonight. They wanted me to get away from the house and my great sorrow for a little while. So I've asked Bease to fix you a tray. Do you mind?"

Lois assured her that she did not mind in the least and went out into the broiling sun with a feeling of escape. She strode up the path through the woods that led to her cottage, in the dark shade of the trees, watching a tiny orange lizard scramble over a minute twig.

Their were voices at her cottage; evidently the Hatterys were at work. But when she came in sight of the place she saw that the voices belonged to Shandy Stone and Joe Hattery.

"... as a second offender," Shandy was saying. "I'm not going back to prison. Nobody's going to railroad me. Nobody is trying to. But I warn you to drop this now."

"Yeah? I'm not dumb. Mr. Stone, I got eyes and 20/20 vision."

"And a big mouth. Watch R. Hattery, or you'll be sorry you were born."

Hattery brushed off his hands with a gesture that was vaguely impertinent, faintly challenging. Then he straightened and saw Lois. Warned by his eyes, Shandy turned around.

"Hi there," he said cheerfully. "The Hatterys have the cottage cleaned; she's getting fresh bedding and soap and towels. Joe will put that windowpane in for you and bring you an electric heater." He steered her quickly inside the house as though eager to get her out of Hattery's presence.

Already the cottage looked more cheerful. It was spicily clean. The Dutch door was wide open. On the big worktable were piled a dozen or more heavy scrapbooks.

Shandy looked around dubiously. "Does it look all right? Anything more you need?"

"Thanks, it's fine."

"Sorry I can't knit the faded sail for you tonight but Jane—"

"Of course."

He looked down at her with a faint smile. "Tomorrow, then. It's good to have you here; better than good. I never really expected to see you again. As though a chapter had ended. Or the whole book." For a moment he bent over as though he were going to kiss her, then he changed his mind and went quickly out of the cottage.

Lois lit a cigarette, settled down at the overcast table that had been Roger Brindle's and arranged the scrapbooks in chronological order. They contained all his columns from the beginning, twenty years before, with one volume devoted to pictures. She opened this one first. It was, she discovered in surprise, simply an old-fashioned picture album.

Each picture had been neatly dated with name printed underneath. The first pair on the first page were Sarah and Jeremy Grant; Sarah, smiling in leg of mutton sleeves, a large plumed hat and trailing skirt, was not even in the thinnest of her mouth. She appeared to be the sister of Roger's father and it was she and her husband who had brought up the boy after the death of his parents. Not, Lois ruminated, a congenial home for a small child. Her agile imagination pictured the boy being sent back in those days, noticeably, wrapping his arms before entering a spottish kitchen, being seen and not heard at table.

She studied carefully the pictures of Roger as a small boy, trying to learn something from the child he had been. He had always been homesy, but even in group pictures, taken with other children, Roger was a face to which one turned back. He had the elusive, intangible thing called charm.

There was a sound of heavy breathing behind her and Lois, who had not heard a footstep, turned with a start. A woman with flaxen braids wrapped around her head and a pinkmarked face was looking around the cottage as though seeking for something.

"I am Ethel Hattery," she said. "You must be Mrs. Fleming."

Lois held out her hand. "How do you do, Mrs. Hattery. I've looked forward to knowing you."

Ethel smiled faintly. "That's nice of you." She dropped a heap of linen and blankets on a chair. "The place will be ready as soon as the bed is made up. Then you won't be disturbed. I'm used to writers. Mr. Brindle didn't like to have anyone around when he was working."

Smallpox had left her skin pitted and doughy in texture but her features were good. Her eyes glinted like those of a cat. She had a healthy distrust of untraced emotion.

Ethel Hattery opened the big couch, made the bed, hung towels in the bathroom. Lois watched her. "Talking around like Lady Macbeth," Carol Brindle had said, and had added resentfully, "as though she were the widow."

Not Lady Macbeth, Lois thought. Roger Brindle's secretary was a heroine straight out of one of the frontiers novels. Not, Lois told herself, that she minded emotion, but she respected its control. If only people didn't pride themselves on their emotional origins.

Energy From The Sun

Ever since the dim beginning of recorded history, men have acknowledged the pervading significance of the sun in their lives. Many cultures have gone so far as to give it a central place in their hierarchy of gods.

Within the past few generations, men have come to realize that the sun is indeed all-important to life. It is now well known that the source of all our food and all the fuel that powers our complex civilization is the great flaming orb that dominates the heavens.

Despite all this, however, the human race makes very little direct use of the sun's rays. Science, so profound in other fields, has not learned to harness solar energy directly.

Yet recent developments hint at swift progress along this line. A claim has been made that photosynthesis, the process by which plants transform sun, air and water into fats and sugars, can now be duplicated in the laboratory. Small solar ovens have proved useful. A solar battery has been devised and is now undergoing field tests.

Perhaps the most hopeful recent development is that 700 scientists representing about 30 countries gathered in Arizona at the end of October for a world symposium on solar energy. This indicates that widespread, intensive work is going on. It may be that the middle of the 20th century, already des-tinued to go down in history as the dawn of the atomic age, also will be remembered as the dawn of the age of solar energy.

Middle East Tension

Every step must be taken to prevent an outbreak of full scale war between Egypt and Israel. It is highly unlikely that the fighting could be confined to those two countries and it is quite possible that the whole Near East would be involved in the bloodshed.

A great deal of the responsibility for the present crisis must rest with Soviet Russia. The Egyptians are receiving arms from the Soviet bloc and it is this that seems to have emboldened the Egyptians into forcing a shooting showdown.

At Geneva and in statements from the Kremlin the Soviet Union has been proclaiming its new approach—its desire to help tensions and establish peace. Yet the old Communist technique of arousing trouble wherever possible has not been abandoned.

If Molotov and his colleagues want to prove the sincerity of their peaceful words this would be an excellent time to do it. It is ridiculous to believe that Communist Czechoslovakia entered into an agreement to send arms to Egypt without the consent of Moscow. A word from the Kremlin and Czechoslovakia would stop. Will the Russians say that world and prevent a bloody war? If they don't all their talk of peace will have a hollow ring.

One Of The Greatest

Cy Young—who died recently at 88—was one of the truly great pitchers. Indeed many people make the flat statement—with a great deal of justification—that he was the greatest.

The fame of Cy Young survived even though he pitched for the last time more than 40 years ago. A great many of the records he set still stand and it seems unlikely that some of them will ever be broken. Over a twenty-two year span in the major leagues he won 511 games while losing only 315. He pitched three no-hit games—including a perfect game in which no runners reached first base. His record of pitching 23 hitless innings is still a mark for present day pitchers to aim at.

Cy Young starred in baseball in the days before players received large salaries. The most he ever earned in baseball in a single year was $2,500—a far cry from the salaries paid unproved players today.

He was one of the first players elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame, and justly so. As long as baseball is played the name of Cy Young will be remembered. He was a credit to the game and a big factor in the popularity it enjoys today.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor:

With National Safety Day approaching Dec. 1, it might be well for our legislators to ponder the fact that two traffic fatalities occurred within a twenty-four hour period, right here in our own Central Florida area—both because of a break away of towed automobiles from the towing vehicle.

Many states have long required that trailers be doubly secured to the towing car by means of an auxiliary chain of sufficient strength to maintain contact between the two, in case of severance of the main towing connector. Such additional safeguard, if its use were compelled by proper laws, could well be the means of saving many lives in future on our highways. The cost and inconvenience of this added safeguard would be negligible, and would certainly evoke no serious opposition from car owners. Furthermore, it would be an asset in the way of safety to the driver of the towing vehicle.

The writer, with many years of experience in towing and as proprietor of body repair shops, recalls several instances in various parts of the country, where failure of the towing connection between two vehicles resulted in severe damage.

Will our representatives to Tallahassee give this idea some consideration along with their never ending search for extracting a little more money from the motorist?

Send Wife To Obedience School

NEW YORK (AP)—Curbstone comments by a pavement poet:

Would obedience schools for wives make for happier marriages in America?

The question has been raised by a reader who wisely chooses to remain anonymous.

"Obedience schools for wives have worked out very well," he wrote, "So why not an obedience school for pet wives?"

"Such schools could teach most wives some things they badly need to learn, such as self discipline and the willingness to carry out a man's orders without barking back."

"What do you think of this idea? Wouldn't it restore to the average husband the prestige he once held as head of the family? If you hear of such a school, please telegraph me at once I want to enroll my own wife as the number one trainee."

Frankly, the proposal at first glance sounds fine. The ordinary husband can think at once of many ways in which his wife might benefit from attendance at an obedience school.

"She could, for example, be taught to get up off the sofa and say 'hello' whenever he returned home from work. She could be taught to take off his shoes and fetch his slippers."

She could be taught not to interrupt him when he is telling his favorite joke at a party. She could be taught not to show up at breakfast with her hair in wire curlers, looking like a fugitive from the electric chair. It might even be possible to teach her when it was all right to talk to her husband, and when she should bring him his newspaper and let him read it in silence.

There is even a bare likelihood that she might be coerced into letting him handle the spending of his own paycheck, although this could well force 7 out of 10 American families into bankruptcy in six months.

The list of things a well-run obedience school could teach a dutiful wife to help make her husband's life more cheerful is well nigh endless.

However, the idea of obedience schools for wives, while it sounds highly logical, is basically impractical. The big flaw in the proposal is this: Where would you get the teachers?

You couldn't use women as teachers. No wife with any spirit would let another woman teach her how she should behave toward her own husband.

No, the teachers would have to be men. But consider what kind of a man it would take. Women know they are smarter than the average man, and they would merely sit in class and throw spit balls at a male instructor of only average brains or charm.

The teacher would have to be really extraordinary. To dutybreak a stubborn, willful wife he would have to have the physical appeal of Clark Gable, the magnetism of a hypnotist, the wisdom of Socrates, the oratorical skill of Demosthenes, the daring of a wild animal trainer.

Let us suppose such a teacher could be found. What then? Well, no wife would want to return to a dull husband after studying under a professor like that. They'd all fall in love with teacher and want to spend the rest of their lives in obedience school.

That seems to rule out the possibility of obedience schools for wives.

The question naturally arises then: "How about a few obedience schools for husbands—wouldn't they improve matrimony?"

The answer to this is there simply isn't any demand for them. Every marriage is an obedience school for husbands. That's the way it is—and that's the way it's likely to stay.

German Unification Still Problem

WASHINGTON (AP)—RUSSIA'S Foreign Minister Molotov at least has had the distinction of rendering the three Western foreign ministers speechless at Geneva.

For one diplomat to be able to knock the talk out of three other diplomats is quite an achievement. But why Molotov had such an effect on them is hard to see.

When he told them yesterday Russia wouldn't agree to their plan for unifying Germany, the three ministers had to call a recess until today. Secretary of State Dulles said he had to consider the matter overnight before speaking.

Yet Molotov's performance was no surprise. The No. 1 problem before the four ministers before they ever reached Geneva, just as it has been the No. 1 problem since they arrived there, is the unification of Germany.

The West and Russia had never been able to agree on it before. And there was no reason to believe the Russians this time at Geneva would soften up or cave in. There was no widespread optimism here that they would.

The best anyone could reasonably hope for before the conference—was that the two sides might reach some small agreements on other problems and finish up without calling each other names.

That would permit them to have another meeting next year when, if relations between the West and Russia hadn't become too wretched again, there might be some more agreements on some other problems smaller than the unification of Germany.

The United States, Britain and France would like to see Germany united under a democratic government favorable to the West and linked to it, just as West Germany now is linked to it through the North Atlantic military alliance.

And that's exactly the last thing the Russians want to see. From all reports the East and West Germans—if they were permitted to unite and have free elections to choose a new government—would choose a democratic government favorable to the West. The Russians certainly have reason to fear that would happen.

For that reason they will not permit free elections, as Molotov has made clear. He denounced the idea of free elections. He called it "unreal and dangerous."

He indicated—so the press officers of the United States, France and Britain said—that the only kind of unified Germany the Russians want is a Communist Germany. And there can hardly be any doubt of that.

And where does this leave the West and Russia so far as Germany is concerned? So far as can be seen it leaves them right up against the same stone wall that separated them before the Geneva meeting began Oct. 27.

Dulles and Molotov did a little traveling during a weekend recess in the conference. Molotov went to Moscow. Dulles went to Yugoslavia to see Marshal Tito, who is friendly with the West and recently became friendly with the Russians all over again.

Since both Russia and the West want Tito on their side, he's in a good spot to play off one against the other, saying something that pleases one side one time, and something that pleases the other another time.

After their meeting Dulles and Tito issued a statement. They said they'd like to see the Russian satellite countries independent. That means independent of Russian domination.

That was a first-class propaganda harpoon, thrown directly into the hide of the Russian bear. The least it could do was stir up some discontent among the non-Communist satellite people.

But just how smart Dulles was in hearing this harpoon, right in the midst of the Geneva conference when he was hoping for some agreement with Molotov, is a question which will probably be debated for some time.

Someone asked me the other day why I did so much talking before our recent City Commissioner election. I thought perhaps some of the citizens would be interested in my answer:

Seventeen thousand citizens of Sanford have no right to disagree with any dictate the city government may decide on.

Seventeen thousand citizens disregarded their right to liberty and government through their own hands.

Seventeen thousand citizens have no right to complain if a little Hitler or a Louisiana "Jim Crow" election which will probably be debated for some time.

Just before he left Moscow for Geneva, Molotov told foreign correspondents he was taking "better baggage" back to Geneva with him. At once the Western optimist market took on a bullish turn. But, judging from Molotov's almost brutal position on Germany when he got back to Geneva, that "better baggage" he talked of consisted of one Mg torpedo.

Beyond the Realm of Argument!

This is the reason when you compare the Cadillac and often to motor cars.

And, in almost any gathering, you're likely to find a wide difference of opinion about the relative merits of the year's automotive offerings.

Until the talk turns to Cadillac!

Here is one car concerning which most intelligent have a meeting of minds. And never before has Cadillac left so little room for argument as in 1955.

Certainly no one could behold the new Cadillac without recognizing it as the "car of cars". Its beautiful, graceful flowing lines, its powerful bearing on the highway... and its long, low silhouette are simply too significant to misunderstand.

Ready to go and would ride in a new Cadillac and not regret that it is the standard of the world. It is the most beautiful and luxurious car ever made.

And we doubt if anyone could drive a new Cadillac and not understand that it is the finest performing motor car of all times. Its great new engine is a revolution in power and performance... and its new Hydro-Matic Drive is incomparably smooth and responsive.

Truly, the evidence on the side of Cadillac has never been more apparent than it is today.

Why not come in soon—and see for yourself?

We'll be delighted to introduce you to Cadillac's great new styling... and to arrange a demonstration of the wheel... and to acquaint you with the new Sedan de Ville and Eldorado Seville.

You'll agree, we're certain, that Cadillac is the most logical and sensible of arguments!

Marilyn Intends To Be Permanent Resident Of N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP)—Marilyn Monroe says she intends to be a permanent resident of New York, but will go to Hollywood for occasional movies.

In a rare interview, she also disclosed:

That she considers herself free of her film contract;

That she is willing to return to work at 20th Century Fox—under conditions;

That she doesn't insist on doing straight dramatic parts only.

The scene was the Edwardian room of the Hotel Plaza. Marilyn came to breakfast, dressed in a black skirt, brown jersey top, tweed coat and a fuzzy white tam that hid her honey-blond hair. Despite dark glasses and no make-up, her entrance attracted the stares of waiters in the room.

She seemed to talk more freely than I ever heard her do in Hollywood. She was especially enthusiastic about New York.

"I love it here," she remarked. "I live in California all my life; now I plan to stay here. The California climate is wonderful, but I love to see the seasons."

Marilyn came to New York a year ago, following her divorce from Joe DiMaggio. She announced plans to study dramatics here and produce pictures for her own company. Her studio declared she is still under contract and has sought her return.

She discussed her return to work a matter in which 20th-Fox is extremely interested.

"I'm willing to go back to work as long as I can get what I want," she said. "It's the same thing I've always wanted. I want to work with good directors, ones I can learn from. I want a variety of roles in good stories. And I want to make pictures for my own company."

"Money has never been an issue. The studio can afford to pay me."

She reported her own company is negotiating for a story to film. But is she free to work?

"I have no contract," she said flatly. "There are good reasons why my contract with Fox is not valid."

The studio doesn't see it her way, and the matter is up to the courts.

She is being asked to return to the studio for "Bus Stop." She said she'd like to do the role—if she gets her terms.

Her best acting role, she said, was the one that started her off to fame—in "The Asphalt Jungle. She made it plain that the pictures she doesn't want to do are ones like "Pink Tights" and "How To Be Very, Very Popular." She was suspended for refusing those two.

FLYNN'S ESTATE AUCTIONED

But Flynn, now in Spain, has a bid in which to pay the $1,900,000 and recover the Hollywood Hills property estimated to be worth $200,000.

News Of Men In Service

WELDON R. BRIDGES

Weldon R. Bridges, whose mother, Mrs. W. W. Bridges, resides at 1811 Maple Ave., Sanford, has recently been assigned to the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, Fort Bragg, N. C., for advanced military training.

A former student at Seminole High School, he has volunteered for parachute training but will be required to undergo routine advanced individual training prior to becoming a Paratrooper. Upon completion of the eight week ground course he will graduate to Airborne training, where he will be taught the techniques of making a parachute jump.

He will receive advanced military training under direction of men and officers of the famous 187th Airborne RCT which saw action in World War II and Korea. The 187th returned to the United States in July of this year by giant airlift from Japan under "Operation Gyroscope" after five years of duty in the Far East Theater.

Stoa Of Attalos Is Rising Again

ATHENS (AP)—The Stoa of Attalos is rising again on the ancient market place just as the Athenians of 2,200 years ago knew it. The operation crowns 20 years work by archeologists of the American School of Classical Studies here.

The market square was the political, commercial and social center of classical Athens. In its stoa, or long porches, merchants had shops, people met to conduct business or to gossip, philosophers expounded their views. Sometimes public banquets were spread in their shelter.

Most splendid of all the stoas was erected by Attalos II, King of Pergamon—Asia Minor. He had studied in Athens as a youth. On ascending the throne in 139 B.C. He gave the stoa as an expression of gratitude to the old city.

His stoa was 382 feet long, 64 feet wide, two stories high and with a broad terrace along the entire front. From the back of each floor a row of 21 shops faced out through a deep porch supported by a double row of columns. The facade facing the square was of snow white pentelic marble.

When the Herulians raided Athens in 267 A.D., the market square buildings were almost all destroyed. The shell of the Stoa of Attalos, however, was incorporated in a new fortification wall. This accounts for its preservation.

Director of reconstruction is Homer A. Thompson, professor of classical archeology at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N. J.

The aim is to give the modern world a tangible example of a type of civil building important in the life of ancient Greece.

The reconstructed stoa also will serve as a museum for some 65,000 objects uncovered by American excavators in 20 years digging at the market square.

Something different from the usual run of tourist attractions is now under construction at Clermont. On a point nearly 300 feet above sea level, the tower itself will stretch another 200 feet into the air, giving visitors an unequalled view of Florida's landscape. The above picture shows approximately 100 feet that has been completed with 18 additional feet expected to be erected weekly. Official opening of the Citrus Tower has been set for approximately February 1.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

SIPPING JULEPS after eighteen tough holes under the summer sun, two members of a swank golf club glanced curiously at an overdressed blonde who sashayed up to the bar.

"It's just eight years to the day since she came to work for poor old Tom and set her trap for him," recalled one.

"Yes," sighed the other, "and she hasn't shut it since!"

Met over coffee in the club car of the Super-Club, two substantial-looking citizens exchanged confidences. It was revealed that one was a banker, the other an actor.

"Bet I haven't been in a theater in five years," mused the banker.

"That nothing," the actor assured him. "I haven't been in a bank in ten."

"Why didn't you answer my letter?" demanded the love-lorn youth from Purdue. "I didn't get it," pouted his adored one, "and furthermore, I didn't like some of the things you said in it."

CIRCUS TO RETURN
NEW YORK (AP)—The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus will return to Madison Square Garden next April for its usual spring stand.

John Ringling North, head of the circus, and James D. Norris, president of the Garden, announced yesterday they had agreed on a new contract. The terms were not announced.

The old contract expired last spring.

Additional Society

Seminole Hi

By MARGARET MOORE
This week was Education Week and Robert Armstrong gave a speech on "The Necessity of Education". Tuesday Faye Ashley gave another point of interest on Education. They were both very good and enjoyed by all the students.

Different organizations held their meetings Wednesday to plan for Homecoming. It should really be a big affair. Last night a big pep rally was held at SHS to start the ball rolling. With all that spirit and pep stirred up we should be able to beat the Seabreeze Sand Crabs easily. Don't anyone forget to turn out tonight for the big game. The Pep Club and Band have a wonderful show planned during the half time.

I was talking with the sponsors, Patti Witte, Nancy Mary Esther Powell and Mary Rose Speer yesterday and they seemed very excited. Well, who wouldn't be after all it's a big moment for any girl to be chosen sponsor.

An announcement was made this week concerning students sitting in cars before and after school also at lunch. The students have followed the rules so far and the teachers appreciate it very much.

Jim Hawkins opened the chapel program Thursday morning by introducing the speaker, The Rev. Perry Stone of the First Christian Church. The Rev. Stone gave an inspiring talk which was enjoyed by all the students. After his speech the gospel singers, Patti Witte, Pat Dunn, Mary Ann Wright and Mary Rose Speer sang their songs. Mary Rose is a recent addition to the group by the way. I have to laugh for if anyone would go by what they sing in those songs. For instance Robert Samuel is an old hand at taking out girls on their first date. I hear that holding hands is his favorite occupation.

Another cute guy is that James Lee. The Gossip Singers say that he thinks Mildred Howard is his one and only. How's that Mildred?

Ray Hudson and William Bowen have a favorite seat all picked out in Touchton's to take their girls to.

Sue Hayes is "sportin' a sparkler" lately. She sure is a mighty lucky girl and everyone is very happy for her. Joe Fisher is the guy and according to most of the boys he too is lucky. When is the date set kids? Clue us in.

The gym teacher Miss. Robb had a nice easy test set up for her sixth period class. Iris Cauley and Jackie Lewis nearly went crazy trying to figure out which way a volley ball team rotates. They were still at school when I left. The rumor is girls that it's clockwise. Maybe that will help now huh?

Trudy Hopson has all the boys guessing now a-days. She is a darling girl with beautiful long blonde hair. Watch it boys I think she's almost found her man.

Well I must go get ready for homecoming. See you at the same. OK. Oh! I almost forgot Seminole Song for the Week is "Only You" by the Hilltoppers. Bye now.

Helpful Hints on Horticulture
The Garden Club, an entirely new DeBary project numbering 117 members met at the Civic Center on Friday. Mrs. James Richards and Mrs. Harold Lynch explained their methods of preparing garden compost heaps. Mrs. Arthur Lambert was the afternoon speaker. She gave Helpful Hints on Horticulture. Her hints were both helpful and humorous, interesting to all members. She said that one must not only work but enjoy the fruits of her labor, to be a real horticulturist. "100 sq. ft. of corn is horticulture." "100 acres of corn is agriculture."

She closed with a quotation from Archibald Noylodge: "Oh, you gotta get a glory in the work you do; a halli'uh chorus in the heart of you Paint or tell a story; sing, or shovel coal. But you gotta get a story or the job lacks soul."

Visits and Visitors
Mrs. Harry F. Brown is attending the Music Teachers' Convention at Gainesville. She has spent ten days at Jacksonville Beach with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Walter.

Flower Show Announced
Mrs. Wade Garner entertained the Palm Circle of the Sanford Garden Club at her home on Lake Monroe yesterday. Mrs. H. J. Finch was co-hostess. As Chairman, she called the meeting to order at 9:30 a.m. She announced that a Flower Show School is to be held at the Garden Center Jan. 25 and 26th. Those interested should contact Mrs. Carlyle Housler. Also the Orlando Flower Show is to be held Dec. 9 and 10.

The Palm Circle will exhibit coffee table at the Sanford Flower Show on Dec. 3 and 4, at the Mayfair Inn. An orchid exhibit will be a high spot of the show.

As most of the members wished more of the colorful Florida calendars, 21 more were ordered. Harold Kasper, agriculturist and experimenter with produce packing spots on proper packaging of lettuce, greens and vegetables to hold their freshness for six weeks. The next meeting will be a covered dish luncheon and picnic at the Barn in Duncan, Mrs. W. W. Lutz and Mrs. Arthur H. Ferber Jr. will be co-hostesses.

Mrs. Warner and Mrs. Finch served coffee, sandwiches and cakes to the guests. A social hour was enjoyed.

The Swift award is being presented this year to livestock men who have made outstanding contributions to the livestock and meat industry. It commemorates the 100th anniversary of G. F. Swift's start in the meat packing business - a business that later became Swift & Company.

Bronson, who is in partnership with his father, George C. Bronson, has served four years as president of the Florida Cattlemen's Association. During his term of office, he led the campaign to secure the central and south Florida flood control district. The association also was host to the American National Cattlemen's Association during that time. A member of the Florida legislature, Bronson has played an active part in promoting the interests of the Florida cattle industry. The Bronson ranch near Kissimmee is one of the largest cattle ranches in the state.

ness. Then dash home to fetch the youngsters to school (less than half our children get to school by bus). In the afternoon reverse the process: retrieve the children, and then the husband. The daily routine is punctuated by periodic trips to the supermarket and to other stores, to club meetings, and so on.

Added up, it means a lot of driving. While no one knows exactly how many women are week-end drivers must be plenty. Likewise, no one knows the exact number of miles driven by women. The National Safety Council's estimate for last year gives a figure of 7,800 miles for both men and women. Men average more miles than women, and the Council assumes that women drivers averaged about 5000 miles last year. On this basis, the Council calculates that women may actually have a higher rate of involvement in accidents than men.

Whether or not such a conclusion is true, it does point up the big personal responsibility women drivers have in traffic safety, S-D Day—Safe Driving Day—which is coming up Dec. 1 after a month of intensive public educational activity, the Institute of Life Insurance points out.

Now in its second year, S-D Day is sponsored by the President's Committee for Traffic Safety. By setting aside one day out of the year as a target for safety, the committee has set this goal for the nation: Not a single traffic accident during the 24-hour period darkness as well as daylight. Dec. 1 happens to fall on a Thursday, and is consequently one of the days that so many wives will be acting as their families' chauffeurs.

The first S-D Day in 1954 produced results. There were fewer deaths and injuries on that day than on the comparable days a year earlier, showing that the traffic toll can be reduced through individual action. With this as a beginning, the President's Committee wants to drive home the simple truth that driver safety can be improved the year round.

G. Smathers

He said the Soviet Union is turning out fifty thousand engineering graduates a year while the United States is graduating less than twenty thousand.

"If we do not train more chemists, more physicists, more mathematicians and engineers, we will lose our superiority in the technical fields," he stated.

Smathers stressed the responsibility of the free world to its war dead.

"On this Armistic Day of 1953, at the historical hour set in 1918, the memories of two world wars and the Korean war weigh heavily upon us," he declared.

"We gather here in full awareness that the world has not achieved the twin dreams of peace and freedom for which the young Americans of two generations paid the total sacrifice."

SHS Observers

We are free to use or neglect these gifts of God." And in order to determine what one will make of his life, he must study himself, the Rev. Stone told his high school audience.

The American Education Week programs were concluded with a talk today by Shirley Anderson, a member of the Seminole High School senior class who reminded the students of the significance of Veterans Day. "We have a strong nation, given security through the strength of our armed forces, we have so many things to be thankful for because we are Americans," she said.

The series of programs for the entire week was prepared by the Student Council of Seminole High School under the guidance of Miss Ethel Riser and Mrs. Gladys Smith.

To determine the proper amount of profit is present. Do the mixture as denatured alcohol is poison.

The fact that S-D Day comes in December poses a special kind of challenge to American families. Reviewing the driving conditions at the time of auto accidents the National Safety Council has found that rain, snow or fog was associated with one out of five accidents last year.

Speed is a worse offender, the Council said. Last year speed violations were reported in nearly one-third of all accidents, with the most dangerous speeds beyond 40 miles per hour.

There are fewer women drivers than men, and as might be expected, women are involved in numerically fewer accidents. Yet when one examines the actual figure—2900 women drivers killed last year, and 2,200,000 women involved in all types of traffic accidents, it gives women something to think about on S-D Day—and every other day of the year too.

ing their biggest guns on the highly skilled and professional shoplifters. Gangs of these thieves have been stealing thousands of dollars worth of merchandise in every part of the state, according to the Florida State Retailers Association. Florida shoplifting losses total $5,000,000 a year.

File on each convicted shoplifter will provide name, aliases, address, place of birth, age, height, weight, color, fingerprint classification and conviction information. Strong effort will be made to secure enactment of local ordinances calling for mandatory jail sentences on third conviction.

Special Assistant Attorney General David U. Tunin will participate in the conference, representing the Florida Attorney General's office. He is among Florida's best informed public officials on the overall shoplifting problem.

The Tampa conference will be held at the Floridian Hotel in conjunction with the fall meeting of the Florida Retail Controllers Association. The two-day session will begin at 1 p. m., Nov. 16. It is open to all Florida retailers.

On the retail controllers' program for discussion are credit and accounting methods, delivery policies and planning capital expenditures. Henry Neyer, controller of Burdine's, Miami, and president of the association, will preside. K. D. Hilspey, Mass Brothers controller, Tampa, is program chairman.

Mapping Program

Road Department, who supervised the program.

Jones said today that completed maps of 40 counties already have been printed and are ready for distribution. They will be sold at reproduction cost. Maps of 19 other counties are in the process of completion, and work will start immediately on maps for all remaining counties.

Purpose of the gigantic mapping program, Jones said, is twofold. "First, there are more than 47,000 square miles of Florida which have never been accurately nor adequately mapped for any purpose. Detailed planimetric maps of local areas are essential to carrying forward a well conceived program of road construction. Our every activity is hinged at some phase on a map. The Road Department is essentially a map user, not a map maker. But the absence of comprehensive and accurate map information of so many square miles of territory in our state has forced the Road Department into the map making business to protect the taxpayer who is investing money in good roads.

"And, secondly, these maps are of immense value to the general public, as well as county engineers, and our many drainage districts and units throughout the state. While these users are actually incidental to the prime purpose of the Road Department, there is a crying need for accurate county maps by every level of government in the state."

Beasley said that those counties for which maps have been comly magazine, Florida health notes. An example of such carelessness was demonstrated in a recent case of a child being in critical condition from rat poison. This accident occurred in Seminole County.

Citing the childhood perils of diphtheria, polio and tetanus, the article states: "All the three diseases named above are dangerous, and children should be protected against them, but day in and day out in Florida, more children lose their lives from accidents than from any other cause."

The State Health Agency's Bureau of Vital Statistics noted that accidents snuffed out the lives of 228 children from infancy through four years, while the death toll in the 5-14 year age group totalled 144, for a childhood total of 372 deaths during 1954.

Principal locations for fatal childhood accidents included the home, where multiple hazards, such as fires and explosions, poisons, firearms, falls and other types of accidents, accounted for 157 fatalities in the first through the seventh years.

Accidents occurring in public places, including transportation services, 117 deaths.

Pointing out the need for safeguarding children more carefully against accident hazards, the article noted: "The problem of accident prevention in childhood is unique. No endowed foundation, no research laboratory and no inspired investigator is going to develop a vaccine, serum, antibiotic, endocrine extract or operation that will prevent accidents.

"Though interest, thought and statistical research can be stimulated at the community level, the ultimate mediators of any accident-prevention program are the parents."

WEEKLY MAGAZINE
THE SANFORD HERALD
MAGAZINE SECTION ★ NOVEMBER 11, 1955

I am a peaceful, home-loving girl. But if I read one more article on what European women have that American women haven't I WILL SCREAM!

AND—one more essay on the merits of American lovers versus Latin, French, Mongolian and lower Tasmania, may start me on the road of premeditated crime.

The whole routine is getting real dull. With the consensus being any man, woman or child who speaks English with an accent is endowed with divine romantic powers—eats nothing but manna—and bleeds green.

I have just finished a worthy tract by a man who was extolling the role women played in the heyday of European courts. Their beauty—their wit—their fragile grace. The utter femininity of it all. And then he said how sad it was there had never been such a "brilliant era" for American women.

Well, it just so happens, at the "brilliant era" he was speaking of, the majority of American women were brilliantly going west in a covered wagon.

I have noticed, too, that the guys who weep the longest in their beer for Suzette, Soo Li, or Sigrid—are usually the lads who were not in great demand back home in Indiana.

I just don't get it. People are people. Matter of fact, in this great wide scientifically progressive world of ours—people are the only things that haven't changed in the last 4,000 years. (Which is frankly, somewhat frightening.) And what I mean is—from Kansas to Tibet, women are women and men are men. Which, after all, is a dandy arrangement. So why is somebody always trying to make a production out of it?

And don't think I can't get just as incoherent on the other side of the street.

From female psychiatrists to middle-aged Hungarian debutants, somebody is always standing up to say a few words on the defects of American men. This is beginning to pall.

American men are taller, bigger, better looking, healthier, live longer, make more money, fly faster, knock down harder, laugh louder and hurt quieter than any other men in the world.

And as far as their having to compete with their Latin brothers—I've met a few of our little amorous good neighbors. And they kept looking at me with great brooding awful eyes. Naturally I assumed it was poison. But it wasn't. It was strain. Those poor boys are under positive duress trying to continually live up to their publicity agents.

That's why none of them last very long north of the border. Sometimes they would just like to go fishing. But of course they wouldn't dare.

Oh well—end speech. And the moral is: the grass may look greener on the other side—but that usually means it just has to be mowed down more often.

Captiva Island on Florida's west coast, noted as a winter resort, is really a place to get away from it all. The docks lie serene on a peaceful summer day.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OTHER "GOOD TERNS"

I have read Sue Pope Burkhardt's contribution to All Florida Magazine (September 25) on "A Good Tern," relative to terns' use of Phipps Park Island.

Referring to the statement "for this is the first time this species has been reported nesting in that part of Florida," as far back as 1940, I know this bird nested on the shores of Lake Osborne.

I enjoyed the article very much.

YES, WHY?

Thanks for giving us Mrs. Annie Ostern's good article about Plant City.

That's one of my home towns. A battered school desk there might well bear the inscription "Allen Slept Here."

I might well do I know the names she listed—Mays, Waver, Evers. I knew the people, too; that is, I knew how to go in at their back doors with the baskets of groceries from Magann's.

DON'T DO THIS!

Please take a good long look at that picture of the two hunters, dog and guide, which you printed with your article, "A Hunting We Will Go," in today's issue (Sept. 4) of your magazine and then print it again in your next issue with a caption in big red letters—DON'T DO THIS!

Maybe the two men are mad at each other or something, but if that's the way they usually carry a shotgun, I'd hate to hunt with either of them. A picture like this is certainly no example to set before the hunting public. How about a good article on hunting safety to make up for this "good"? Aside from this I think it's a swell issue.

ANOTHER FISH STORY

Please tell Dan Andrews to go to Port Orange and ask about Lige MacDonal. He was over six feet, six inches tall and about 200 or 250 pounds in weight. His net was 16 feet and he could spread it out level. Before his death he was making one of 18 feet.

How much lead was involved I do not know. I can throw a five foot one and that is about all.

Looking Over All Florida

All Florida Magazine really gets around! M. B. Passe, Col. Retired, U. S. Army, of Waveland, Miss., has seen our August 21 issue in which ran a story on the Rhodesian Ridgeback. Since this breed of dog, known as the South African Liondog in its native land, is such a new breed in this country, he feels he, as a breeder of the dogs, has information which would add to the history of the Ridgeback, with reference to origin and development.

Mr. Passe says "The South African Ridgeback Club is making intensive research to determine the actual origin of these dogs. The eminent historian, Theal, describing the domestic animal found with the Hottentots on the Cape of Good Hope by the first white men to set foot on African soil, writes of a dog 'whose body somewhat resembled that of a jackal, and the hair on the back turned forward.' It is a known fact that, up to the present, the Ridgeback is the only pure-bred canine that has its origin in that sub-continent.

"Although the Rhodesians, to their lasting credit, were the first to develop and standardize

Designs and makes jewelry in a home workshop.

Professor of Jewelry

By HOLCOMB KEENS

If Dr. James S. Lanham ever gets tired of accounting, he has a sure-fire living in his home workshop.

This college professor, head of the Department of Accounting at the University of Florida, text book author, certified public accountant, holder of a Ph.D. degree in economics, and retired Air Force colonel, designs and manufactures jewelry in a small home workshop with very little equipment.

Prices for his hand-made creations range from $3 for a pair of cuff links to $150 for a special commission piece. He estimates his total investment in equipment, some of which is used solely in the making of ceramics (his hobby), at approximately $1,000. Most of it was purchased or made after he had actually gone into business, so his original investment was relatively small.

He has been making jewelry for about five years now, but traces the real beginning of his hobby, turned spare-time business, to his childhood, when he says his mother was determined that he have a knowledge of the arts, and made him study painting.

Metal parts of the jewelry are made of copper or silver, depending on the design of the piece and the value of the setting. Cuff links which sell for $3 a pair or more, are enameled on copper. Dr. Lanham buys the blank squares of copper, designs the cuff links, then enamels them with a variety of colors. After the enameling process is complete, the findings which hold the cuff links in the shirt sleeve are soldered to the back. The same method holds true for the lower priced earrings.

Since he designs and makes jewelry principally for fun, and uses the profits largely for the purchase of new equipment, Dr. Lanham has few inhibitions when it comes to the design and materials used. But, attesting to his ability as an artist and craftsman, are his retail outlets which include a number of contemporary shops in Florida, New York, and the well-known Palmer House Galleries in Chicago. And, one of his creations was selected from thousands of entries all over the nation to be shown in a special exhibit now touring the United States under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institute.

The more expensive pieces of jewelry are individually designed with the metal parts usually made of sterling silver. Settings are usually semi-precious stones which he shapes and polishes to fit the design. Or, they may be shells, various woods, ivory—or almost anything may appear in a piece. One set of cuff links with tie clasp to match was made of sterling, with the setting made of coconut shell!

Each of the more expensive pieces is actually made three times. After a drawing or sketch of a proposed piece is complete and Lanham is satisfied, he makes a model of pasteboard or thin copper. Then, if he is still satisfied, he makes a cardboard pattern from which he will cut or shape the silver. After that, the finished piece is created in the finer material.

Each piece is individually signed before shipment. Even the low priced cuff links bear Lanham's signature on the back. When he makes a mistake and ships any of the merchandise without it, the shops promptly return it for this finishing touch.

Stones are purchased for the most part in slab form from various and sundry firms which either mine or sell them. And at times he, himself, picks up stones, shells or other ornamental materials for use in his jewelry. One pair of unusual (and expensive) banded agate cuff links was made from stone that he spent an entire day getting in an Iowa gravel pit.

Since entering the business on a part-time basis, Lanham has studied with some of the best designers and craftsmen in the business, to improve his technique. Kenneth Bates, the famous enamelist, was one. He also learned a great deal about the use of silver from Aida Husted Anderson, one of the nation's outstanding silversmiths.

Jewelry is a funny business, Lanham points out. "The better you become known, the more money your work is worth." If Lanham keeps progressing at his present rate, his part-time job is going to provide him with more monetary returns than his full-time profession, which is one of the highest paid in the nation today.

Lanham's jewelry includes a wide variety of designs and materials, ranging from semi-precious stones to sea shells.

Jewelry hobbyist in his leisure hours at home, Dr. James Lanham removes enamel cuff links from kiln. He built the homemade kiln in background of above photo.

DAVY CROCKETTS

By A. J. McCLANE

Florida's Would-Be Davy Crocketts Learn "B-ar"-Shooting Technique Professionally

The winter and spring courses held out of Lake Park are devoted to practical fishing and shooting problems. It is obvious (above) that it's only the bass which have problems.

This fall, Dan White will be looking down the barrel of a .300 Weatherby magnum at one ton of man-killing Kodiak bear. Until two years ago, this New York City manufacturer and part-time Floridian had never held a shooting iron bigger than Junior's air rifle. Up to now, he has never faced an animal more vicious than his neighbor's pet fox terrier.

Next year, he hopes to square off on the shaggy-maned lions of French Equatorial Africa.

How Mr. White, a starched-collar suburbanite, will keep from being bear bait, or expiring in Leo's lunch, is explained by Ellis Newman of Lake Park, who instructs at the West Palm Beach Gun Club, located just south of the airport.

Newman came to Florida 15 years ago, with a varied career of professional trapshooting and casting, which he polished enough to make the National Sport Show Circuit in New York, Minneapolis, and

Los Angeles. Between trips, he found more and more South Florida residents coming to him for advice on gunning and fishing problems.

From this casual relationship with local sportsmen, Newman conceived the idea of running a full-time school, which is probably the only one of its kind in operation today.

Headquarters of this, the Forest Lake School, is a 15-room farmhouse which squats in the middle of a wild 2,000-acre preserve at the rim of a blind valley northeast of Turnwood, N. Y.

Newman takes his pupils into the field and literally teaches them to shoot and fish, until they develop the confidence and familiarity needed to become experts.

"Like Mr. White, for instance. When he came to me, he hadn't even smelled burned powder. But after a dozen weekends, he was busting doubles on clay birds with a 12-gauge shotgun. Today, he can puncture a four-inch ring at 300 yards with his magnum.

"More important though, I've worked him out on all kinds of terrain under different conditions of weather and light. He can move easily through the 'Glades or over mountain tops.

"Learning how to shoot isn't the whole story," Newman continued. "I found that many folks who came for help were planning to make trips out of Florida. They were going trout fishing or antelope hunting for the first time, and I couldn't do everything by way of actual instruction here in Lake Park, so that's how I started the Forest Lake School. You might say, it's the post graduate school."

Luminaries such as Jay Kingdon Gould, Admiral Emory Land, Glenn Curtis, Count Giovanni di Castagnola, Dr. John Randolph Page, Arthur Hudson Marks, and ex-President Grover Cleveland, once gathered here to hunt and fish in the days when people traveled the winding dirt road by buckboard.

For a modest fee, modern outdoorsmen motor the same dirt trail to learn everything from nocking a broadhead on a 50-pound bow to distance fly-casting. Strangely enough, the country between Last Chance and Double Top Mountain is as wild today as it was in the buckboard era.

Newman began operating with none but Floridians, but he soon found people coming from Chicago, New Orleans and San Francisco to study camping, camp cookery, angling, fly tying, trapping, tracking, wildlife photography, snow shoeing, and shooting. No hotel in any sense of the word, Forest Lake students must do their own cooking, and under the able aegis of Francis Davis, they learn everything from flipping featherweight flapjacks to the fine art of baking pies. Sometimes a guest such as Gus Pucillo, owner of Palm Beach's Petite Marmite, will liven up the kitchen, or Maitre de Pietro Frigerio of Miami, will lecture on the making of truite au bleu.

Davis, who runs the northern branch of the Newman enterprise, has spent all of his 34 years in the outdoors except for the time spent in the Art Center School at California. In contrast to ex-featherweight boxer Newman, who has collected a trunkful of awards in national trapshooting and casting, Davis made his mark with paint and pencil in the complicated field of wildlife conservation.

"Although we usually have instructional movies, or have classes in cooking, fly-tying and tackle repairing in the evening, I find more and more folks want to sketch or paint things they've seen or done during the day," Davis said. "I guess we'll have to add an art course soon.

One of the more popular courses of instruction at Forest Lake is wing shooting. Although the preserve holds a good population of grouse and woodcock, off-season shooters work on the hillside traps, spring trigger devices which skate clay birds through the air just the way nimrods see their birds flushing in October.

But, unlike the standard trap layout used to instruct students in Florida, Newman spots his traps under the cover of brush or along a mountain-side. He can fire from one to four clay-birds at any point in the "walk" and instead of the booming of a real grouse's wings, the hunter hears his birds snap out and sees them scaling through the tree tops just the way grouse fly.

For Florida shooters who plan on hunting quail, Newman gives them the covey rise, with all four "birds" rocketing out at once, in a typical quail take-off.

"We've developed a good rig," Newman said, "for older people who want to hunt grouse, but who can't walk up mountains anymore. I have a tractor with two armchairs built out from the back and all I have to do is run my shooters up the hills, then let them hunt back down.

"Last year I had a man who was 81 years old, and he couldn't walk up or down. So whenever we spooked a grouse with the tractor, the old gent would get out and follow the bird. He finally got one, and he was so happy he had tears in his eyes. He said it was his last hunt."

"Folks who spend their lives on concrete and give all their problems to clerks with adding machines, eventually lose their self-confidence," Mr. Newman reflected. "I believe they need the kind of therapy we give them, even if they never go on safari. Everybody imagines himself a Davy Crockett, and one way or another he is.

"But, we're helping folks to learn things they might never understand in a lifetime of reading and unsupervised practice. America was built by people who had complete confidence in themselves, and there's no quicker way to make a man out of a person than get him out in the woods where he can taste his dirt beginnings."

Exploring the Buccaneer Trail

By Max Stone

TUCKED away in the northeast corner of Florida is one of the most historic areas of the state. Here, eight different flags have flown; here, European powers battled for colonies, slaves were landed; and pirates flourished. Here, today, is developing a new beach resort area in what was a little visited section.

This area is developing rapidly, as more and more motorists discover that they can travel from Fernandina to Key West, often times only a stone's throw from the ocean, and at the same time avoid many of the traffic bottlenecks which plague travelers in Florida. Previously, it had been possible to travel from Jacksonville Beach along the coast to Key West, but the most recent link extends this coastal trip to include the Fernandina - Mayport section as well. The newest link is appropriately entitled the Buccaneer Trail.

Motorists heading south for Florida from the North, to reach this new route, must swing eastward from the main highways. Those speeding south on U. S. 1 can turn east onto A-1-A at Callahan, and proceed to the Trail. Those coming south on U. S. 17, can turn east onto A-1-A at Yulee.

For years, this corner of Florida has been in the backwash of tourist plans, since to reach it meant a cumbersome, back tracking detour. Until 1960, it was impossible to proceed south from Fernandina to Mayport directly. A chain of intervening islands and the broad St. Johns River prevented such a route.

However, this is all changed. A modern highway covers the distance, leaping from island to island via new concrete bridges. A pair of modern, high-speed ferries provide the final link at Mayport.

History has dealt this area an important role, although few are aware of it. The French, Spanish, Confederate, English and U. S. are major flags that have waved in the breeze. At brief intervals, to these have been added the flags of Mexico, the Republic of Florida and the banner of Gen. Sir Gregor MacGregor.

Jean Ribault, the French explorer, hoisted the first flag—the lilies of France—

Inner parade ground (above) surrounds museum at Fort Clinch State Park near Fernandina. Here are housed eight flags which have waved over the area.

when he dropped anchor in the St. Mary's River on May 3, 1562. The French rule was short lived as the Spanish prevailed. Warfare between the Spanish and the English over the area was almost continuous until Florida was ceded to Great Britain during the French and Indian War.

England returned Florida to Spain in 1783. This resulted in a mass evacuation of a large Tory colony which had developed during the American Revolutionary War.

Tiny Fernandina, at the north end of Amelia Island, found fortunes of history playing a bit part in her life when Jefferson's Embargo Act closed American ports to foreign shipping. A free port convenient to the U. S. border, Fernandina soon found her harbor jammed with vessels of all nations, and her wharves groaning under the pile of goods destined to be smuggled into the U. S.

Commercial activity increased still more in 1808, when the U. S. banned the importation of slaves from Africa. Fernandina became a major port for human contraband. And bloodshed was frequent, for the hazards of slave running were many. Captains caught smuggling slaves were subject to the death penalty, and many human cargoes were jettisoned when slave ships were hard pressed by the U. S. patrol. And even the placid waters surrounding Fernandina were no certain haven, for here lurked ruthless hijackers anxious to capture a slave cargo and reap the profits.

Spanish colonial rule was oppressive, and led to the revolt by a group of patriots who organized the Republic of Florida. They seized Fernandina and hoisted a white flag with a charging soldier carrying a fixed bayonet.

This revolt was short lived, and the area had been returned to Spanish domination briefly when in June, 1817, Gen. Sir Gregor MacGregor, a picturesque young Scotsman, sailed into Fernandina Harbor and demanded the surrender of the town. Aging Colonel Morales, the Spanish commander, gave up without a fight. MacGregor, who had served with Simon Bolivar in South America, ran up the white flag with the green cross.

His rule in turn was short lived. The French pirate, Luis Aury, seeking to make Fernandina a pirate stronghold, took over Amelia Island, raising the Mexican flag on Oct. 4, 1817. Aury had been appointed first governor of Texas under the newly formed Mexican government, and in this capacity hoisted the Mexican flag in Florida.

The United States took a dim view of the following freebooting activities, and shortly sent troops to take Fernandina into "protective custody" for Spain, and to terminate the pirates' activities. The protective custody ended when the U. S. gained full possession of Florida by purchase from Spain in 1821.

It was under the U. S. flag that a sturdy brick fort was built on the military reservation at the north end of Amelia Island. Begun in 1847, the fort was named in honor of Gen. Duncan Lamont Clinch, a veteran of the Seminole and Mexican Wars.

Fort Clinch is now a state park, and comprises the largest historic site in state ownership. The Confederate flag waved over the fort for a short time and by 1862, the Union forces were in possession of the area.

The Fernandina area appeared boldly in history once more in the 19th century, when it became the center of filibustering activities preceding the Spanish-American War. The citizens were deeply stirred by the Cuban Revolution of 1896. Although the U. S. was officially neutral, and the U. S. Navy patrolled the Atlantic seaboard to prevent the smuggling of arms to Cuba, a lively filibustering trade developed.

South of Amelia Island are Big and Little Talbot Islands, reputed to be the sites of numerous buried treasures. Fort George Island to the south, too, is steeped with history. It was here the Indians murdered Father Martinez, perhaps the first Jesuit priest to come to America.

Recreational facilities in the area are good. To the southbound traveler, Fernandina offers the first in a long string of beaches that have made Florida famous. The beach is 14 miles long. A huge fishing pier—1,180 feet long—offers ample opportunities for still fishing, while those who want to go deep sea fishing can find ample facilities.

Modern motels and seaside cottages are available for the visitor whether he wants to stay for a night, a week or a month.

From Fort George the traveler ferries across the St. Johns River to Mayport. South of Mayport, he can turn west and drive to Jacksonville, or he may continue southward to St. Augustine, where A-1-A makes a temporary junction with U. S. 1.

Mayport, on the northward flowing St. Johns River, is noted as the southern terminus of the Buccaneer Trail, and as a shrimp port. Some of the shrimp boats are docked along the river bank.

A youthful visitor to ancient Fort Clinch poses (above) for her picture, sitting on a rusted anchor on the grounds of Fort Clinch State Park. The park is one of the historic places along the Buccaneer Trail, near Fernandina.

The Ferry Jean LaPitte—named for the famous pirate who once operated in the area—crosses the St. Johns River at Mayport, providing an important link in the Buccaneer Trail.

EVERYBODY'S CIRCUS

By CLIFF KING

Pensacola has installed a unique entertainment and hobby for kids of all ages who have dreamed of becoming a "big top" performer.

THE smell of sawdust, the blare of circus music, the chalk-faced clowns who keep you laughing! What youngster hasn't wished he, too, could belong to the circus and live in the constant excitement that is the Big Top?

Children of all ages love the circus. Most of them have longed for the opportunity to be a circus performer. With this in mind, the Pensacola Recreation Department conceived the idea of conducting, as a year-round activity, an All City Circus—a real circus atmosphere where anyone in the city could be a circus performer.

This all began a year ago, and, today, the Pensacola All City Circus boasts of its fine performers and top-notch equipment. Two steel poles, reaching high into the sky, hold the trapezes and other aerial equipment aloft. No matter what the performer wishes to do, a place can be found for him in the All City Circus.

Three of the featured aerialists of the All City Circus (above), Carolyn Condit, Lois Guthrie and Bess Cook, take time out during the show to pose for photographers.

There are tumblers, hand-balancers, unicyclists, trampoline artists, aerialists, adagio groups—in short, almost everything that is to be found in the circus.

What youngster hasn't longed to be a clown, the madcap funny man of the circus who keeps everyone in stitches? In the All City Circus, clowns are prevalent. They joke and prank and do the impossible, to the amusement of the onlookers. But the important part of this is that any boy or girl, who shows the desire, can be a circus clown. Here they are able to learn the tricks of the clown trade and have the opportunity to practice them.

The Pensacola All City Circus first began in December, 1954, as a Youth Circus. Sponsored by the Pensacola Recreation Department, the Youth Circus sought to gather acrobatic acts from the various schools and youth organizations of the city and put them together to form a circus. The first show was a flop from a spectator standpoint, with only 400 people attending three shows. However, it was such a success from the participation standpoint, that the Recreation Department set out to make it a regular activity.

Crowds Hock In

Slowly but steadily, the department lined up coaches and secured pieces of equipment. The result was that on August 19 and 20, the Pensacola All City Circus played to over 4,000 people at Lion's Park in Pensacola. A small admission charge was made to defray expenses.

The Circus has year-round practice facilities at Sanders Beach, a community center located on Pensacola Bay, where the group rehearses every afternoon, and on Monday and Wednesday nights.

The show is held in August each year to close the summer recreation season. In addition to the regular circus troupe, the show includes all those about the city's playgrounds in a series of mass numbers, such as pyramids, chariot races and parades.

During the year, the various circus acts make many appearances before adult and youth groups.

Professional's Coach

Instruction is furnished by local people who have had some experience in the circus, or related fields. Dean of the circus coaches is 76-year-old Willie Farine, a circus man and performer all of his life. Willie was with Barnum and Bailey at the turn of the century, as a member of Dunham Troupe. He has played with shows the world over, including a command performance before the King and Queen of England. In addition to his coaching, Farine is a regular performer with the All City Circus, doing round-offs and back-flips with all the ease and grace of a teenager.

The All City Circus is proudest of the fact that they pay a portion of their way as the show grows. With the assistance of the recreation department in devoting staff time to the success of the show and securing major pieces of equipment and rigging, the Circus has gone far toward seeing that the show is a success financially.

There's lots of fun to be had in the circus, and it is an educational experience, too. It is an activity which gives boys and girls of all ages "something to do"—a way to occupy and enjoy their leisure time.

The circus membership has grown from just a few to over 200 performers, and Pensacola folks are really "Going To The Circus."

Doug Herren, 12-year-old, sits atop a precarious perch as he rides on the shoulders of Roger Jackson.

The feet of Marvin Wallace and Fred Burke (above) are called by other members of the All City Circus, "hand balancing supreme." Here they execute intricate combinations of balancing atop chairs.

Is It Music or Trash?

A Jacksonville Composer Who Penned Lyrics At The Beginning Of The Century Emphatically Says Modern Music Won't Last Without Rhythm

By ANDREW H. PLANET

Many youngsters agree with composer Harold Diggett that the "good old days" of music were best. They often gather at his home to sing and hear his early compositions.

Still musically alert at 66, Diggett plays back a tape recording of a series of his songs rendered by two proteges, Elizabeth Green, left, and Sandra Freeman, of Jacksonville.

U-19-48 Florida Magazine - 11-12-55

THIS raucous rhythm and blues mania which has won over a good part of the younger set, may be the rage; it may be loud and it may be spicy—call it anything you like, but please do not call it music.

A man who wrote popular ditties before the present crop of "cool cats" was born, thinks we are scratching the bottom of the barrel. He believes that if we don't get back on the track, musically speaking, we won't have anything in the way of real music to hand down to the next generation.

The present batch of "trash," as he calls it, which blares at us from radios, television sets and juke boxes, should be given a name other than "music." It definitely is not that," says Harold Diggett, now 66, who penned lyrics and composed music under the name of Harold DeGrosse in the early 1900's.

Diggett, who has never really quit composing songs, even though he gave it up as a livelihood in 1921, says that the present songs have nothing but a "unique combination of oddly blended sound effects with novel twists which create a momentary emotional binge to the ears, then quickly die away." Emphatically he stated, "Today's song does not last simply because it is not music . . . there is no rhythm."

The 66-year-old resident of Jacksonville, who was born in England, the son of an operatic tenor father and a mother who was a very fine pianist, has written over 127 songs. He is one of those rare fellows who writes the lyrics and composes the melody in pure harmony.

A graduate of the Royal Academy of Music in England, and one of the youngest graduates to attain a degree there, Diggett played concert piano at the age of 16, receiving a medal from royalty, presented by Lady Margaret Ismay.

He dabbled in song writing while attending the University of Michigan, composing an instrumental number which he called "Michigan," a marching song dedicated to the school. It was played regularly on the campus, but was never published, and so never officially adopted.

"In those days one could not obtain a copyright on a manuscript, and it would have cost about $1,500 to have one's own song printed," recalls Diggett.

Why his number "Michigan" was never published, is just the beginning of several frustrations experienced by Diggett. He recalls: "I did submit the number to a well-known publishing house, but they did nothing with it. Strangely, however, a song very similar to my number was published by this same music publisher. Since I had no copyright, I lost it completely."

Harold Diggett graduated from the University of Michigan with a degree in engineering. He worked for a time as a designing engineer, but his heart was still in song writing.

He soon landed in Tin Pan Alley, and made connections with the Jerome Remick Corporation in Detroit. Three other young fellows with Remick then were Gus Edwards, Egbert Van Alstyne and Neil Moret.

Assuming the pen name of Harold DeGrosse, the talented Diggett offered his first real composition, "Moon Dear," a ballad. Remick turned it down because they were publishing "By the Light of the Silvery Moon." Too proud to ask his family for financial aid, Diggett sold his piano and with the proceeds floated his song via a five-and-ten-cent store chain.

Soon, "Moon Dear" was outselling "By the Light of the Silvery Moon" eight to one. DeGrosse was offered a price for "Moon Dear." Little did he suspect that his acceptance would kill his song, for the publisher simply put it "on the shelf" until the wear and tear was gotten out of "By the Light of the Silvery Moon." "Moon Dear" made a later appearance in 1910, and still was a hit, but the punch was gone.

Diggett (or DeGrosse) made connection under contract with Bert Whitney Musical Productions and collaborated on music for "The Three Twins," "The Broken Idol" and several others. One of the hit tunes from "The Three Twins" was the still popular "Cuddle Up A Little Closer."

After trying the national circuit, Diggett made a trip to Jacksonville in 1921 to visit an uncle, and for all purposes that visit finished his physical association with Tin Pan Alley. He liked Jacksonville so much that he stayed there, gradually giving up song writing as a profession.

Diggett's 127 compositions, some of which could be real hits today, are songs of the heart and soul. There are ballads, instrumental numbers, sacred, secular, and patriotic. There are many beautiful love songs dedicated to his wife. There was a dedication to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, used in the 1940 bond sales drive in Washington, called "Democracy." This is now sung in Jacksonville schools.

The contrived promotional schemes used to plug songs today bring a chuckle from the wise Diggett, who recalls the method used in the past years: "People had no radios or juke boxes, and few owned talking machines. Song writers relied mostly on the sales of sheet music."

Other Diggett songs include: "It's All Because of You," "Darling, I Know," "Someday I'll Miss You," "I've Always Known," "With the Dawning of Tomorrow," "Goddess of Love," "If I Could Hold the Girl of My Dreams," and "Sweetheart of Mine."

Although he still writes and composes songs, he does it more for a hobby. He is a civil service worker, employed by the Navy in Jacksonville.

Recently he has given song writing a real lick again, and has three numbers in the hands of publishing houses. They are: "Someday You'll Miss Me," "I've Always Known That I Love You," and "Because of You."

Gay Tulips The Year 'Round

By HARRY J. MILLER

A true lover of flowers, Mrs. Walter Patufka of Sarasota was determined to have beds of tulips all year around.

She saved the shells she picked up along the Florida beaches and her husband drilled a hole in each one, then punched through the hole a foot-long piece of iron coat-hanger wire to make a fastener.

The shells were then dipped in oil paint and after thorough drying they were dunked in appropriate shades to match those of real tulips. Then the wires were stuck into the ground in groups of three, surrounding green plantings for contrast.

So gay and colorful is Mrs. Patufka's lawn and walkway, as shown below, that passersby who get a hasty glance when tulips are out of season, blink their eyes in disbelief, then back up their cars for a closer look.

If the colors fade, a trip to the paintpot restores their hues. Mrs. Patufka was caught by the photographers, above, in a re-touching job.

The Rise of GASPARILLA

By JOHN R. HABERMAN

A MAJOR symptom of the lack of control exercised by the Spanish colonial government in Florida after the British evacuation was the number of pirates permitted to operate along the coast. The most notable of these and, as far as Floridians are concerned, the most famous of all pirates was Jose Gaspar, who called himself Gasparilla.

Long considered to be a purely legendary figure, Gaspar has been identified as an actual historical personage.

During the early 1800's, Gasparilla attained notoriety as the Terror of the Gulf, but his piratical career began much earlier than that, in the year 1783, to be exact. Enigmatically enough, he was born and educated a gentleman.

Jose Gaspar was born of a highly respected family in the province of Barcelona, Spain, in 1756. Being an intelligent and ambitious youngster, he was admitted at the age of 18 to the Spanish Naval Academy in the city of Barcelona to prepare for a naval career. During his four years as a midshipman, Gaspar proved to be a good scholar, diligent in his seagoing studies as well as acquiring a taste for the classics and the best literature of his time. During his academy days also, young Gaspar acquired the polish of manner and attitude of gallantry toward the opposite sex which were to remain with him in some degree to the end of his life.

Graduated a naval lieutenant, Jose Gaspar first saw action when Spain seized Minorca and besieged the British bastion of Gibraltar. The latter part of that engagement found him serving as a junior officer aboard the Spanish sloop-of-war Florida Blanca.

Then in 1782, the British Navy under Admiral Howe defeated the Spanish fleet.

Gaspar now realized that the naval power of Spain was broken and that there was little chance for advancement in his chosen career. He was ambitious and impatient to accomplish great deeds, for he was in love. He was engaged to a beautiful maid of Barcelona.

As disappointed and dejected as Gaspar, were most of the other men of the Florida Blanca's crew, particularly Gaspar's closest friend, another young officer named Rodrigo Lopez. Gaspar and Lopez were not willing to accept defeat, inaction, and possible termination of their naval careers. With the backing of the crew, they approached the captain with an amazing proposition:

"Since our fleet is out of action and we are no more than fugitives at sea," Gaspar said, "let us embark on a career of adventure. Turn the Florida Blanca into a privateer, Captain, and sail for the West Indies."

"No!" the captain roared. "I hold the King's commission. What you propose is treason!" And he took disciplinary measures to curb Gaspar, Lopez, and the other malcontents of the crew.

The disciplinary measures, whatever they were, did not set well at all with the fiery young Gaspar and the others who now became his sworn followers. They rose in mutiny, murdered the captain and all the other loyal ship's officers and crew members, and threw their bodies overboard.

Gaspar proclaimed himself the new captain, hoisted the Jolly Roger, and set sail for Florida, where he had heard there were many ideal hideouts for freebooters along the coast. His crew now numbered about 40 men.

But the young corsair captain was not satisfied with his name. It didn't sound romantic enough for the sort of adventures he had in mind. He changed it to Gasparilla, which seemed more appropriate for a swashbuckling buccaneer. Also, to disguise her identity, he rechristened the Florida Blanca with the same title — "Gasparilla."

Reaching the lower west coast of Florida, Gaspar selected the northernmost of the four islands at the mouth of Charlotte Harbor as his base of operations. That, too, he named Gasparilla Island.

He called for a final decision. "We are now at war with all nations," he announced. "And if any of you, my bully boys, wish to turn back, this is your last chance."

There was none who turned back. It was impossible. All the men of Gasparilla shared equally in the guilt of murder and mutiny on the high seas. The gallows awaited them one and all in Spain or in any civilized land.

Gasparilla's first order was to build houses on his island, which were constructed of palmetto logs. Then he engaged for a time in searching for treasure along the coast. He concluded that the many buccaneers and pirates who had frequented Florida in the past must have buried some of their loot along the shore.

The search was fruitless. So Gasparilla prepared to take his own loot in time-honored buccaneer fashion.

It was "Ho for the Spanish Main!"

Yet Gasparilla was never able to banish from his heart and tender memories of the sweetheart waiting for him in Barcelona.

SOMEBODY'S BOY

"I Looked At John—John Looked At Me" Which Shall It Be?

I JUST ran across an old poem of the "tear jerking" category entitled "Which shall it be? I looked at John, John looked at me!"

The plot was simple: John and Mary were poor folk. They had seven children—had not even heard of the "Planned Parenthood League." They were having a desperately hard time making ends meet.

Rich Uncle Robert offered to give them a house and farm, in fee simple and forever, if they would give him in final adoption one of the seven children.

Would they? Well, they thought about it. They even made a personal survey and inventory of the seven after they (the seven) had gone to bed.

Praised be Allah, they would not part with a one of them. Not even their wayward and problem lad—they were afraid no one except his mother would love him enough and be patient enough to put up with him.

And the baby with the unruly golden curl that fell across the damp sweet cheek of the sleeping child—give HER up?!

"No," they courteously advised rich Uncle Robert, "they'd keep them all and with God's help get by some way."

Awfully "corny," don't you know!

Recognizing that the problems of children and their parents are close to every one of us, All Florida Magazine has obtained permission from the Jacksonville Boy Service Council to reprint, from time to time, excerpts from or the whole of their weekly report entitled "Somebody's Boy."

Written and edited by Judge Walter Scott Criswell.

But if you are so sappy you'd like to read it, and brave enough to face down the brow raising sophisticates, who don't believe in sentimentality—or much else, for that matter—the Editor will tell you where you can get it. (Line forms to the left, please!)

All this is preparatory to, and apologetic for, the following letter from Hazel to Aunt Sophie, both charter members of the Clover Club, both known by the readers of Somebody's Boy, in which Hazel deals from a bovine and pony angle with the problem of

Which Shall It Be?

"Dear Aunt Sophie

For once I have a couple of hours to myself and I'm taking advantage of it and writing to you. The children went with their daddy to a neighbors.

How have you been standing this hot dry summer? Some ways it has hit us right hard but we had a very nice early garden. The girls and I have been canning almost every day, but we are about caught up. We have lima beans and some snap beans to can next week. The farm work is about caught up too, we have our hay all in and the wheat and oats combined, yesterday we baled the straw and got it to the barn. I'm glad everything is about done for a couple weeks, as Bible School is starting up at our church week after next and I like for the children to attend regular.

LaVerne is a teacher for the beginners this year. You would be surprised to see how LaVerne has grown and a regular lady, too. She is the only girl out of about 18 in this neighborhood that is over 14 and doesn't go with the boys. A young man came here to take her to the show. We told her she could go if she wanted to. We know the young man. He is in my Sunday School class and is very well behaved. But LaVerne told him she would rather go with Daddy and Mom and the rest of the kids. It made Law and I feel real good and we try to take her places she likes to go.

I have a little picture she had taken over at the carnival. Her hair is blown up as she had just had a ride on the ferris wheel, but it will give you a little idea what she looks like. She will be in the 11th grade this winter. She says she wants to be a doctor that works mostly with children.

The School Band—Or Gideon's Band?

I'll send you one of Mary Ellen's carnival pictures, too. She's growing like a weed and is a lot of help, especially in caring for the little ones. She will be in the fifth grade this winter. She was the only one of our children on the honor roll. She had all A's and B's, she got a certificate for penmanship and her music teacher said Mary Ellen is ready for the school band. We would love to see her enter the band, but we can't promise for sure. It doesn't look like our tomato crop will help much and we will have to save all the grain for the cattle. We only have half the amount of hay we had last year and twice as many cattle, the pasture fields are burned up, we have been feeding hay and dry feed for over a month now.

Which Shall It Be?

Last week Law decided to sell all the calves under a year old. We had 16. You should of been here when Law backed the truck up to the calves' pen the morning he was going to take the calves to the auction to be sold.

Not Beulah!

We have a little black calf we call Beulah, as we started to take her up the plank to the truck Rebecca and Peggy Lou came running and crying. "Don't sell Beulah, Daddy, please don't." They grabbed her around the neck, Law said "OK, I'll keep Beulah."

Beesobud? Ah No!

I think we got about one on when we came to Jackie's Beesobud. (Continued on page 15)

Construction Service

By ROBERT L. TAYLOR

FROM the "here it is, come and get it" custom of the past to the present-day efficient service offered to the construction industry—that's the story behind the success of Maule Industries, Inc., at Miami.

This huge building material firm, consisting of 10 plants and warehouses covering the principal metropolitan areas of Dade and Broward counties, is the product of a modest beginning.

When Evert Price Maule came to Florida in 1911, the boom in building was little more than a possibility. He kept in step with progress and planned a series for construction companies that offered increased speed of production, a variety of new materials, and modern designing and building methods for a rapidly expanding industry in Florida.

Maule Industries were affiliated with many firms in Miami and were pioneers in the use of precast concrete joists and beams, concrete column blocks, present concrete wall slabs, interlocking concrete roofing tile and many other innovations in the building field.

The necessity for an expansive central office building, now under construction, grew out of the rise in population and the myriad industries attracted to the section because of the ease with which materials may be obtained, and its desirable year-around climate. Three stories tall, the impressive structure is to occupy the site from Biscayne Boulevard to N.E. Court, between 52nd and 53rd Streets.

The Maule family controlled this enterprise until 1951, when it passed into other hands and the stock appeared on the Florida boards.

Ashe Memorial, on the University of Miami campus, is designed with Maule's exposed aggregate precast wall panels.

Beach Club at Fort Lauderdale shows new modern designs and materials which Maule Industries developed from concrete.

New Maule Industries central office building and headquarters in Miami exemplifies forward thinking and planning of this Southwestern Florida concern.

Jackie dropped the rope and ran behind the barn. Lew looked after Jackie a few seconds and took the rope off and called Jack to come put Rosebud in the pasture field.

Even Father Lew and Mother Hazel Were Sentimental

We all have our special and when one of the children didn't put up a protest, Lew would say "I hate to sell her she'll make a dandy cow"-back to the pasture she'd go. My pet is a dark Jersey. I call her Dolly. (They are a small cow, but are wonderful for cream.) She will be a year old this month and I have her spoiled. Every time she sees me she comes to me and rubs her nose in my hand for a little food. When Lew started to put her on the truck she got away from him and came to me. So Lew said "O.K. put her in the field." When we got through we had four calves on the truck and 12 back in the field, so Lew took the oldest cow and put her on the truck to make the trip worthwhile. After they were sold Lew was glad he didn't take more, we only got $170 for all of them. We should have got at least $300. We gave $135 for the cow a year ago, but almost all the farmers are selling their stock because pasture and feed are so scarce. A man who had a pony farm was selling his ponies.

Please Change! A Pony!
Lew just took the money we got for the cow and calves and bought a mare pony. She is a beautiful brown and white four year old. I think about half pony. She is big enough for LaVerne and Jack to ride and small enough for even Norval and Rebecca. She will have a little pony colt next March. The children all love her and call her Trixie because she does tricks. She can walk on her hind feet, shake hands. Jack cares for her like a baby. Lew and I don't mind the way we took on the calves now that we got the pony in exchange for the children and they love her so. The enjoyment they are getting is worth it.

Dr. Doolittle Jr. An Animal Doctor
Jack said March is a long ways off. He can hardly wait for the little pony. I love to watch Jack with the animals. He's so kind and gentle. He has Trixie so she will follow him like a little puppy. Jackie doesn't get as high marks in school as the other children, but he does all right. He says he wants a big farm when he grows up so he can have all kinds of animals and be an animal doctor, and I think he'll make a good one. I only hope Lew and I can do our part by the children and give them the right kind of start so each one can be what they want. But even with Lew working regular it is hard to save and keep things going.

The old station wagon just came in the lane so I must close. Take good care of yourself and let me know how you are. I'd love to see you but I guess we won't get to Pittsburgh this summer again. Lews doesn't get a vacation. They are all in the house and already I heard at least a dozen times. "Mom, I'm hungry."

Give my regards to all I know. With love and best wishes,
Your Clover Club,
Hazel and Family.

There is No Substitute
Hazel and her family reminds one of "The Cotters' Saturday Night" of Robert Burns. Such God fearing homes and such cohesive families warmly held together by mutual love are the salvation of our nation. The home doesn't have to be in the country; but I'm sure it does help to have the dumb (?) beasts around.

Annual Meeting Of C of C Told

Kick-Off Luncheon To Start Club's Light Bulb Sale

The annual Lions Club light bulb sale begins tomorrow with the kick-off luncheon held at noon at the Sanford Yacht Club, according to Dallas Loop and Tommy Stringer, co-chairmen for the local event this year.

Packaging of the light bulbs was begun yesterday as members of the Lions Club gathered at the Robson Sporting Goods warehouse. The work will be climaxed tonight and tomorrow morning when everything will be in readiness to get the sale underway.

This year, the local Lions Club has provided 150 bags of light bulbs to assure themselves that they will not run out of the packages as they did last year.

A truck, loaded with bulbs, and manned by a member of the local club, will be located at the intersection of First and Magnolia, next to Touchton's Drug Store, where bulbs will also be sold.

The club, at its kick-off luncheon tomorrow, will appoint team captains and teams to get the annual sale underway. The various teams will begin calling on local homes tomorrow night and anticipate covering the entire Sanford area in the gigantic attempt to secure funds for their underprivileged children's sight conservation work.

Last year, according to Hugh Dunson, the local club's secretary, 81 eye examinations were made of underprivileged school children, 44 pairs of eye glasses were bought, at a cost of $271.60.

Funds, derived from the sale of light bulbs will also help finance the Little League Baseball team. Last year was the 20th year of the club's Little League team.

One hundred and forty five boys participated last year, Dunson said, at a cost to the local club of $248.

The local Lions Club also sponsored a boy to Boy's State, contributed to the flood relief in Connecticut, and bought a number of red and white canes for the blind.

The co-chairmen of the bulb sale event say "this year's sale will be the biggest ever."

Preliminary plans and the date for the annual meeting of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce were announced today by officials of the committee planning the event.

John Fitzpatrick, chairman of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting Committee, said today that this year's meeting will be held Tuesday, Dec. 6.

The meeting, said Fitzpatrick, will be a banquet affair held in the Ballroom of the Mayfair Inn, beginning at 7:30 p. m. An excellent and most entertaining program, said the committee chairman, is being prepared for the occasion.

A nationally known speaker will be featured at the meeting, according to plans made known today, and a well known musical group has been contacted relative to their appearing also as a part of the program.

President George Touhy will preside, Fitzpatrick said, and a report of the year's activities will be given by the immediate Past President, Earl Higginsbotham.

Tickets for the annual meeting of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce will be available to the membership and their guests during the latter part of the week.

Blood Test Survey To Be Conducted Throughout County

For 17 days, the State Board of Health in cooperation with the local Seminole County Health Unit, will be looking for trouble.

The trouble that this particular survey looks for will turn up in blood tests which reveal the existence of diabetes and syphilis.

A blood test survey will be conducted throughout Seminole County with a schedule that will touch every section, every community, in order to give everyone an opportunity to reveal, for himself or herself, the existence of either of these two diseases.

James Fly, in charge of the survey for Seminole County, and representing the State Board of Health of Jacksonville, said that diabetes is a serious disease which, if not treated, can lead to heart trouble, strokes, loss of feet or legs, blindness, kidney trouble and death.

With modern treatment, said Fly, it is possible for diabetes to lead normal lives. For this reason, he said, it is necessary to find those who have the disease before it has done damage to the body.

Dr. Terry Bird, head of the Seminole County Health Unit, said that this is one of the most important surveys that has come to Seminole County and he urges everyone to take advantage of the free blood test.

Dr. Bird brought out today that Florida had the 4th highest venereal disease rate in the country last year. While there has been a 49 percent reduction in reported cases of Syphilis over the nation in the past five years, all cities

Breckenridge Speaks On Veterans Day

"The youth of today has a great responsibility to the future in that they alone hold the key to the continuing of our American way of life," Forrest Breckenridge told a Veterans Day audience at Lyman School Friday as they celebrated the annual observance in Longwood.

"They alone can assure our veterans of past wars that they did not fight in vain to protect our liberty and freedom that we hold so dear," he said.

Speaking to an audience of Junior and Senior High School students of more than 400, Breckenridge said, "in order that you may be better qualified to assume the great responsibility, you must realize that right here in school you can get all the most important equipment and training you'll need for life after graduation." And he emphasized, "if you'll take everything your school has to offer—mentally,

Men At Local Navy Base Are Praised

The men of the Sanford Naval Auxiliary Air Station and the fleet units based there are taking good care of the youngsters of Sanford.

Not one man attached to the local Navy Station has been apprehended for exceeding the 15-mile an hour speed limit in school zones or passing a stopped school bus this year.

The record is one to be commended and upheld, said the Sanly weekly paper edited and published at the U. S. Naval Auxiliary Air Station here.

The paper says, "remember, a heavy penalty is invoked for not observing the slow down signs in school areas and for passing a school bus that is loading or unloading passengers."

Traffic Arrests Are Main Issues Over Weekend Here

Weekend arrests, reported by Seminole County Sheriff Luther Hobbs, were mainly traffic arrests as the entire department emphasized the "safe driving" campaign underway throughout their state to reduce accidents, injuries, deaths, and property damage.

Raymond Junior Ringwater, 22-year-old OAFB negro, was charged with improper passing and with operating his car with no drivers license. Charges were made by Florida Highway Patrol Trooper T. Mark Mack five miles south of Sanford.

Bonds of $100 were set on each of two charges against Lee L. Bauman, Sanford man. The $500 bonds were for driving while intoxicated and resisting arrest and interfering with an officer while attempting to perform his official duties. Another charge against Bauman for driving while license is revoked drew a bond of $200.

Warrant against the man charged with the three offenses was served by Deputy Sheriff Morgan McClelland, after charges were made by Trooper T. Mark Mack.

Various Subjects Are Heard Sunday At Local Churches

The reactions of people are many. But on Sunday, they thought are but of one.

Thousands yesterday flocked to their churches to hear pastors speak on subjects taken from the Holy Bible.

At the final service of the special series of meetings at The Christian Alliance Church, the Rev. William H. Stephens Jr. spoke on the subject "A Year and A Day." The text was found in Luke 4:14-20 and the Old Testament counted down from Isaiah 41.

The acceptable year referred to in these passages is the period in which we now live. It is sometimes called the dispensation of Havens is the closest interrelationship. When Christ read from Isaiah as recorded by Luke He quit reading in the midst of the passage. He knew well what He was doing.
