43 years of service: Sheriff's deputy honored

By RUSS WHITE
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Jim Brantly was the best of cops and still is. Said Sheriff Steve Burnett of the Seminole County Sheriff's Office.

Brantly was one of the many who came to the County Services Building Tuesday when the Board of Commissioners honored Brantly, 65.

The man made an issue of officer safety, career path, training, who can serve with a gun, Brantly knows how and he cared about his work and about serving the community. We're glad to be there.

Jim Brantly served the county 43 years, mostly with the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, and from 1972 with the Sheriff's Office.

Brantly was instrumental in the development of the Firearm Range and was an instructor in the Law Enforcement Training Academy at Seminole Community College. The firing range is considered among the best in the county, started by him.

Brantly taught my wife how to use a revolver, said county commissioner Editt Maloy. Now I don't criticize her spagetti.

Special delivery of marijuana lands pair in jail

Sanford police QUAD Squad (Quick Uniformed Attack on Drugs) seized a special package filled with 20 pounds of marijuana Tuesday delivered to a home in Georgetown. Officers arrested Christopher Ferguson, 34, and Lacosha Conyers, 20, shortly after UPS dropped off the box.

Cmdr. Ray Bronson said QUAD was notified by an informant that there was going to be a package coming in from San Diego containing 20 pounds of marijuana from UPS. Officers called the shipping company, which notified police when they received the cache of drugs.

QUAD officers set up a surveillance outside the residence of 815 N. Valencia Ct. and waited for the package to arrive. Shortly after 5 p.m., the squad apprehended Ferguson in the driveway. Officer Hill McMurrer entered the residence and said he heard Conyers, who had hidden in the bathroom. No one else was inside the home, he said. "It went pretty smoothly," McMurrer recalled. "The package was right inside the front door, sitting on the floor. I believe they had just

Wendorf cleared in parents' slayings

TAVARES — Heather Wendorf, who police say was a member of a self-styled vampire cult, was in seclusion today after being cleared of murder charges in the brutal slayings of her parents.

She was released from a Juvenile Detention Center Tuesday, shortly after a grand jury found no reason to believe she took part in the Nov. 25 slayings of Richard Wendorf, 49, and Naoma Ruth, 54, at their Eustis home.

"She will be decompress from the whole ordeal and make a new life for herself," said her attorney James Hope.

Hope gambled, advising her to voluntarily testify before grand jurors. He believed her testimony would exonerate her.

On Tuesday, Heather spent two hours behind closed doors telling the 17-member panel her side.

"I was privileged to know what her account would be and I was convinced it was the truth," Hope said after grand jurors made their decision.

"I knew we had to take her testimony to the people who could make a difference. For two months, the whole world thought she was a murderer."

State Attorney Brad King agreed with the grand jury's action.

"They did what was right," he said. "We spent a lot of time together going through the evidence."

King said one of the witnesses gave perjured testimony and came back and admitted it to the grand jury. However, he would not say whether it was one of Heather's teen-age friends.

In a two-page decision, the grand jury cited recantations by two witnesses, inconsistencies in witness statements and the unreliability of witnesses.

It was an unusual and risky choice for the teen. A grand jury can subpoena anyone it wants, but rarely does a suspect volunteer to testify. The same grand jury had already indicted four other teens in the slayings.

Last month, the grand jury indicted Rod Ferrell, Scott Anderson and Charity Keecec, all 16, and Dana Cooper, 19, in the murders. None of those defendants addressed the panel.

In addressing the grand jury voluntarily, Heather was waiving any Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination, Hope said. So whatever she told the grand jury in a closed session could have been used against her at trial, he said.

Heather had been held in an Ocala juvenile detention center on two counts of second-degree murder and one count of robbery since she and four other teens were arrested Nov. 28 in Baton Rouge, La.

"I don't know if she dropped the phone or what," Hope said after he gave her the news by telephone. "She was near hysterical crying."

"It doesn't change the fact that she has been orphaned by the murders. But it certainly gives her some reprieve in the immediate sense."

Hope said she would try to rebuild her life with the help of a court-appointed guardian.

Her grand jury testimony is secret, but she told police from the time of her arrest in Baton Rouge that she wanted to run away with Ferrell, a former classmate at Eustis High School who had moved to Kentucky with his family.

Ferrell was the leader of a group of youths, most of them from Kentucky, who called themselves the "Vampire Clan," police say. The youths became attracted to vampires because of a role-playing game and drank their own blood and that of mutilated animals, investigators said.

Hope said Heather did not think Ferrell intended to harm her parents.

Jehovah's Witnesses buy auditorium

WEST PALM BEACH — The Jehovah's Witnesses have agreed to buy the Municipal Auditorium and baseball spring training complex for nearly $12.2 million, the city announced.

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, the denomination's corporate entity, will split the 74-acre site and renovate the 6,000-seat auditorium for its conventions.

It plans to sell or lease the rest of the property and develop it into housing, shops and offices, Bob Sanders, the deputy city attorney, said Tuesday.

"It still retains a great deal of people going through the area," said Sanders. "They expect 350,000 people a year. It helps the mall, it helps the hotels."

The Jehovah's Witnesses have held 12 conventions in the Palm Beach Jai Alai fronton, and have used the auditorium in the past, said Gerald Grizzle, the Watchtower's convention manager. He added that the denomination had not yet decided exactly how it would use the auditorium or develop the rest of the site.

"Different buyers will be invited to look at the various parcels of the property," Grizzle said.

Auctioneer cancels sale after being accused of selling fakes

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — A veteran auctioneer says he's out $80,000 after canceling an art sale because some of the almost 300 works were found to be forgeries.

But Pompano Beach auctioneer C.B. Charles noted: "I'm more steamed about my reputation than the money."

The Sunday sale was supposed to include works by many top American artists like Georgia O'Keeffe and Jasper Johns. But Charles said Tuesday he stopped the auction when experts confirmed accusations of fakes.

"When I heard the word forgery ... forget it, cancel it," Charles said. "I don't want anything to do with it."

Law enforcement officials had confirmed earlier Tuesday that they were investigating Charles' planned auction of 294 pieces of art.

He said he was handling the sale for a Florida collector, whom he would not identify. Investigators also did not give the name of the collection's owner.

"The owner made up the catalog, made up the descriptions," Charles said in a telephone interview.

Robert C. Graham Jr., president of the New York City gallery of James Graham & Sons, said he'd never seen "an entire catalog where the sale appears to be obvious fakes. The promotion included major advertising up here."

Graham said he has seen auctions with phony art in the past, but the fakes usually are only scattered through a collection.

"This is the first time we've seen anything on this scale," said Graham, a director of the Art Dealers Association of America.

The FBI and Florida consumer-service investigators were among those looking into the case, said Scott Dressler, an assistant state attorney who is head of Broward County's Economic Crimes Division.

Dressler said authorities were contacted by a lawyer and art enthusiast.

"Members of his organization had viewed a pamphlet or brochure being sent nationwide and they were calling in to him that people who owned original of artwork in the brochure knew that this was potentially a fraud on the public," Dressler said.

Charles described himself as an estate auctioneer, with 30 years of experience in such things as estate sales, antiques and collectibles. He is known for handling auctions of jewelry and other property of late celebrities such as Mary Pickford, Orson Welles, Mae West and Audrey Meadows.

"I am not an art expert and never claimed to be," he said, noting the timing of the discovery was better for him.

"God must be looking over me," Charles added. "I'm just glad I didn't go through with the auction."

Leadership meeting

Members of the Sanford Historical Society met recently to celebrate the changing of the guard in the leadership of their organization. Among those on hand were treasurer Walt Smith; outgoing president Grace Marie Stinescoper, who will become the corresponding secretary, and who passed the gavel to president Millard Hunt; and recording secretary Alfreda Wallace.

TALLAHASSEE — Florida motorists can add fishing, farming and Girl Scout tags to their choices of specialty license plates.

New tags created during the 1986 Legislature brought the total number Florida will offer to 38, and Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet approved three new designs Tuesday.

Longwood, opened their doors to parents and local officials, inviting them to participate in a "Provider Breakfast Ceremony."

A Tot's World, located on Orange Avenue in Longwood, was selected as the Seminole County site. The center is owned and operated by Lake Mary residents, Arzu (Adam) and Shireen Suleman.

While the school is 15 years old, Shireen Suleman has been the director for 3 and 1/2 years, moving to the area from Canada. She was a childcare provider for more than 15 years and is herself a working mother of two sons, ages two and six.

A Tot's World has a total enrollment of 56 children. More than 30 parents of children who attend the school were present for the breakfast, according to Suleman.

The parents and officials, who include Longwood's mayor, William Winston, were treated to croissants, bagels and cream cheese, muffins, fruit, coffee and orange juice, as Suleman outlined the programs that are in place at the center.

Not only just a child care center, A Tot's World offers preschool as well. Suleman said she requires here teachers to have training beyond HRS requirements.

"I require my teachers to do in-service training all of the time," Suleman said that the center offers a balanced curriculum, which includes music and Spanish lessons once each week.

"My teachers don't consider themselves babysitters," Suleman added.

Community Coordinated Care for Children, according to Dorothy Dukes, president, is a "children's utility," contracted by the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services to be a clearinghouse of information about services, a provider of training programs for childcare workers and quality assurance to childcare centers in the area of immunizations and health-related policies, to be a caregiver resource and to oversee the childcare fund program. It is also the grantee for Head Start programs in Seminole and Osceola counties. Funding for 4C programs come from private sources as well as public foundations, grants and from HRS.

Parents who qualify for subsidized childcare through 4C pay a pre-determined amount for the service, based on their income, and the program picks up the rest.

Facilities such as A Tot's World have children on subsidized tuition as well as children whose parents pay full tuition. The level of care is the same.

4C also advocates aggressive policies for child care legislation, through Florida Children's Forum.

Events such as the "Week of the Working Parent" are meant to emphasize the value of the service quality childcare providers give to the business world.

Brantly, accompanied by his wife, Barbara, gave a short thank you speech to those assembled Tuesday. "I'm fortunate to be able to serve my county, my state and my country," he said.

"Remarkable man," Harriett said. "Almost to the time he retired two years ago, Lt. Brantly wanted to and enjoyed working the midnight shift. He's still a deputy, of course. Always will be."

Brantly, who was born and raised in Jacksonville, said he joined the Naval Reserve right after high school.

"I served two years," he said. "Then I decided to join the Army...and you know what the boatwain's mate did - he threw me overboard."

Brantly then served seven years with the 82nd Airborne Division as a charter member of the special unit.

Acting County Manager Gary

Kaiser said he learned more about toughness on a 2 a.m. river patrol with Brantly than he did in six years with the U.S. Marines. "This is quite a man," Kaiser said.

giving the schools a racial balance that is cost-effective and practical.

The school district and the justice department wanted to reach an agreement on the plan at this time so they could be prepared for the opening of Winter Springs High School in Winter Springs and Wicklow Elementary School in Sanford at the start of the next school year.

Sanford students currently in the Goldsboro Elementary School attendance zone will be split in two when Wicklow opens its doors on Airport Boulevard in the fall. Those who live north of 25th Street in Sanford will remain at Goldsboro, while those south of that border will attend Wicklow.

In two years, Goldsboro will become a magnet school program for youngsters interested in math and science. Students from around the district will be able to attend the school without regard to attendance zone requirements. Like the high school magnet programs, students will have to be accepted into the program before they can attend the school. Other magnet programs are planned for Midway and Hamilton Elementary Schools.

Magnet programs are also planned for Sanford Middle School in 1998-99 and Lakeview Middle School in 1999-2000. According to Hagerty, the magnet programs will provide an educational continuum for students who will be involved in the International Baccalaureate program planned for the 1998-99 school year at Seminole High.

Transportation will be provided for those students who attend magnet programs.

In addition, the plan calls for the opportunity for students to make "desegrative transfers" with transportation provided.

In that case, a black student who attends a school that is already 15 percent black or more, may transfer to a school that has a black student population of less than 15 percent. A non-black student who attends a school that is less than 15 percent black may transfer to a school that has more than 15 percent black students.

Transfers that do not affect the racial balance of the school will be considered on a space available basis.

Finally, the district and the justice department have agreed to develop a plan of controlled choice, which will give students at cluster schools (Wilson, Midway and Wicklow, as well as Pine Crest, Hamilton and Midway) to choose between the schools in their cluster rather than only having one choice.

"No plan is perfect," Hagerty said, "but I believe we have a pretty good plan here."

It's Tough Being Number One.

But we learned the secret long ago. (There's More Room At The Top, Than There Is In The Middle!)

Shoplifting

Since the beginning of this week, Sanford police have arrested almost a dozen people on charges of retail theft (shoplifting). Items range from several hundred dollars worth of merchandise, to a mere pack of cigarettes.

Some arrested for this crime are listed as homeless. They perhaps have no money with which to purchase items. Some of the items taken were health products and over-the-counter medication.

Others however, apparently come from families from whom they could, if absolutely needed, obtain enough money with which to purchase headache pills or cigarettes. Are they therefore just trying to see if they can take something from a store without being caught? Is it a spirit of adventure?

Shoplifting accounts for a large number of arrests being made these days, not just by Sanford police, but by other city police departments and sheriff's departments throughout the area.

Merchants are well aware of this growing problem, and most of them have security devices at their stores which allows them to identify people taking items hidden in their clothing, their purse, or in a shopping bag.

Many stores also employ security personnel to apprehend people caught attempting to take items without paying.

What we suspect is that shoplifting isn't increasing as it may seem, but the number of arrests are increasing through these improved security precautions.

We are pleased to see merchant after merchant willing to press charges against a shoplifter even if the item taken is worth only a few dollars. We have even had a case in Sanford recently where the shop owner was willing to charge a person instead of taking a candy bar worth only 30 cents.

The shops in the Seminole Towne Center appear to be most hit. But there are more shops there, so it is natural that there are more arrests made at that location. This should certainly not reflect anything negative regarding the mall. In fact, along with other merchants, it should be commended for taking appropriate steps toward combatting retail thefts.

After all, if someone steals several hundred dollars of merchandise from a store and gets away with it, who ends up paying for the loss? You, the average shopper.

One major chain store which operates across the entire nation, has already added a certain percentage to retail costs of its merchandise, to compensate for merchandise they expect will be stolen, even before the items get on the shelf.

For law abiding people, there are a few tips to remember. If you have children with you, be certain they don't accidentally take a candy bar or some other goodie and put it in their pockets, believing "mommy will pay for it."

Don't place an item in your purse or pocket because you can't reach your shopping cart or for the sake of convenience. You may forget about it and end up being embarrassed when security personnel apprehend you.

If you see someone cramming a steak down their shirt, don't do anything directly, but find a clerk and tell them.

Shoplifting has been a part of our society ever since the first store opened. But with continuous vigilance on the part of our store merchants and law enforcement officers, we'll go a long way toward helping reduce the number of incidents.

How desirable is bipartisanship?

Washington is currently in the midst of an orgy of avowed bipartisanship. What's more, it apparently thinks that's what the public wants. As President Clinton put it in his Inaugural address, "The American people returned to office a president of one party and a Congress of another. Surely they did not do this to advance the politics of petty bickering and extreme partisanship they plainly deplore."

But if you think all this talk is actually going to result in an era of good feeling, I've got a bridge to the 21st century that I'd like to sell you.

In the first place, it is by no means clear what the voters are aiming for when they elect a divided government. There can't be many people naive enough to put two scorpions in a bottle and then expect them to set up housekeeping.

On the contrary, if my mail is any indication, many people vote systematically for a president of one party and a Congress of the other in the frank hope that "they'll spend so much time fighting each other that they'll leave us alone." I have never regarded that as a particularly elevated political strategy, but there's no doubt that, up to a point, it works. The result is called "gridlock."

What's more, Mr. Clinton to the contrary notwithstanding, it was not "the American people" who chose to elect a Democratic president and a Republican Congress. The great majority of voters cast their ballots for presidential and congressional candidates of the same party. According to one exit poll, only 7 percent split their tickets. Whatever the actual figure, it was relatively small -- yet enough to give Mr. Clinton his margin over Sen. Dole, and to keep the GOP in control of Congress.

There is no reason, then, to assume that the great majority of American voters are in a particularly lovey-dovey mood right now. On the contrary: The evidence seems clear that the American electorate is splitting right down the middle, and that the gap between the two halves is widening.

The trend was first evident in the 1994 congressional elections. Conservative Republicans, especially in the South, ousted many Democrats who qualified, in Democratic terms, as "moderates." The Democrats who held on to their seats were by and large liberals from northern urban constituencies well to the left of the national mainstream. That is why the Democratic minorities in the House and Senate today are, broadly speaking, far more liberal than the country as a whole, and indeed far more liberal than the current version of Mr. Clinton.

Between 1994 and 1996, a large number of relatively conservative congressional Democrats either changed parties or retired from Congress. The result was simply to leave the Democratic caucuses even pinker than before. Meanwhile, several relatively liberal Republican senators similarly read the tea leaves and decided not to run for re-election. Almost to a man (and woman), they were replaced on Election Day by Republicans well to their right. The Senate in particular, therefore, is distinctively more conservative than it was just two years ago.

The net result is that the 105th Congress is, ideologically speaking, divided even more sharply than the 104th, and far more so than any other Congress in recent times.

Moreover, don't lose sight of the fact that this sharp division simply reflects the sharp division between the voting blocs that sent these people to Congress to represent them.

Washington is currently in the midst of an orgy of avowed bipartisanship.

MORTON KONDRACK

Gore fails to scare off Gephardt

Political guru Dick Morris claims President Clinton will work "ceaselessly" to deliver the 2000 Democratic nomination to Vice President Al Gore without a primary, but Rep. Dick Gephardt's, D-Mo., supporters say they aren't scared off.

"They are trying to create an aura of inevitability for Gore," said a top aide to the House Democratic leader, "but for the president or Morris to say that Gore is entitled to the presidential nomination without a fight is just ridiculous."

Gephardt is not declaring his candidacy for the nomination, claiming that his focus is strictly on winning back control of the House in 1998. But friends say that he definitely "wants to be president."

Gephardt's former top aide, Tom O'Donnell, has left his House staff to join a political consulting firm, but is expected to use that perch to begin organizing a Gephardt candidacy.

Gore, meantime, has already started his 2000 campaign. Sources say that while other Democrats were partying in Washington over inauguration weekend, Gore held strategy sessions with his top fund-raisers and political advisers.

Both sides say that Gore vs. Gephardt now shapes up to be the cataclysmic struggle of New Democrats vs. Old Liberals -- except that Gore will use his vice presidential prestige and an occasional left tilt to peel off significant liberal and labor support from the Gephardt column.

As part of that effort, Gore defended Medicare from GOP cuts in 1995, has been wooing the AFL-CIO, and recently delivered a stirring defense of abortion rights on the anniversary of Roe v. Wade.

Inside the Clinton camp, sources say, Gore wielded his influence against that of first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton to prevent liberal Democratic activist Ann Lewis from becoming either chairwoman of the Democratic National Committee or White House political director.

Lewis is now deputy communications director under New Democrat Don Baer, who plans to leave government this spring. A new tussle may occur if Mrs. Clinton tries to install Lewis as chief of the key White House "message" office.

In the Gephardt camp, friends say that the minority leader's challenge will be to retaylor his traditional trade union liberalism to a more conservative era -- or hope that a recession hits and makes Democrats more aware of the chronic wage stagnation and income inequality that afflicts the country.

Other candidates conceivably could enter the fray, including retired Sen. Bill Bradley (N.J.) and Sen. Bob Kerrey (Nebr.), John Kerry (Mass.), Chris Dodd (Conn.), and Dianne Feinstein (Calif.). But Morris thinks that other contenders -- Gephardt included -- will have a difficult time winning unless Gore or Clinton is discredited during the next four years.

"Gephardt does Gore a huge favor by holding onto the liberal-labor slot for the next four years and preventing anyone else from grabbing it," Morris told me, "because Gore will kill him in the first primary."

In his book, "Behind the Oval Office," Morris quotes Clinton as telling him, "I just want you to know I will work ceaselessly, ceaselessly, to be sure that Al Gore is the presidential nominee ... without a primary if at all possible. Ceaselessly."

Morris told me Clinton likely would do so by continuing to give Gore viable jobs he will succeed at.

Morris said he expected that Gore would continue to play a lead role in U.S. relations with Russia, aerospace policy affecting California, his base environmental issue and technology policy.

Gephardt will be discouraged from running, Morris said, because private Clinton polls last summer showed Gore with a 55-25 percent favorable-unfavorable rating, compared with 25-30 percent for Gephardt.

"If Gephardt runs, he'll drop dead in the first primary because he's seen as an old-fashioned, ultra-liberal, labor-dominated Democratic hack while Gore is seen as a moderate, centrist New Democrat. We know how that contest comes out."

Even though he does not, like Clinton, have a long history of association with the Democratic Leadership Council, the lead group in the New Democrat movement, Gore has attracted support from centrists in Clinton's entourage.

But friends say that he definitely wants to be president.

JACK ANDERSON

Doves appeared after Chernobyl

WASHINGTON -- Incoming Defense Secretary William Cohen said recently that one of his first goals is to jumpstart the stalled nuclear arms negotiations with Russia.

Cohen may be surprised by what he finds. For the Russians may be more willing than the Pentagon brass to accept radical reductions in nuclear weapons. The reasons for this dovish posture date back more than a decade, to the Chernobyl disaster.

The last arms accord between Russia and the United States, START II, was signed just days before President George Bush left office in January 1993. Congress waited until last year before ratifying the pact, but the Russian Parliament is still stalling.

But Russia's reluctance has little to do with any desire to retain its massive nuclear stockpile. Rather, Russian politicians felt the treaty did not go far enough to reduce the overall arms level -- and in fact would virtually force Russia to build more strategic nuclear weapons than they already have.

START II set a ceiling of 3,500 deployed nuclear weapons per country, prompting the Russians to complain that they'd be forced to build 500 new intercontinental ballistic missiles just to keep pace with the United States. Instead, they have been telling U.S. negotiators they want a new treaty, START III, which would lower the ceiling to 2,000 deployed nukes.

As more classified documents from the former Soviet Union have become available to U.S. espionage services, it's becoming increasingly clear that the 1986 Chernobyl disaster was the chief catalyst behind the Soviet Union's decision to start reducing its nuclear stockpile. A key U.S. report, classified "Top Secret," and authored by the Defense Nuclear Agency, first concluded this several years ago.

For Soviet military strategists, the main purpose of a nuclear arsenal was to hold the United States at bay while European nations were being added to the Warsaw Pact bloc. But Chernobyl changed even the hardest hard-liners in the Soviet Union, and gave Mikhail Gorbachev much more room to negotiate.

U.S. intelligence reports, summarized to our associate Dale Van Atta, reveal that after Chernobyl, the Soviets began to ponder the vulnerability of nuclear facilities in Eastern Europe. Even a regional battle, they feared, could result in "significant" damage to the Eastern European states, and perhaps even Western Europe. This fear, analysts say, helped compel Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to begin negotiating medium-range nuclear and conventional-force treaties in the European theater.

Experts agree, of course, that the most significant deterrent to the Soviets launching a conventional war against Western Europe was the nuclear deterrent force provided by the United States and our NATO allies in the region.

The Chernobyl explosion robbed the Russians of any illusions that a European conflict could be non-nuclear. It suggested to them that in any military engagement, an errant strike could hit a civilian reactor and cause a dispersal of radiation worse than most nuclear bombs.

Reactor No. 4 at the Chernobyl complex exploded in April 1986, becoming the worst nuclear reactor accident in history. The fallout was the equivalent of 10 Hiroshima-sized nuclear bombs.

Cohen may be surprised by what he finds.

Officers also found a loaded gun, drugs and paraphernalia including scales to weigh marijuana inside the home.

According to police, 20 pounds of marijuana has a street value of $30,000.

Conyers, 20, has no prior record, but Ferguson, 34, has a lengthy one. From 1985 to his last arrest in 1993, he has been apprehended 15 times with charges including aggravated battery on a police officer and inciting a riot. Ferguson, a private DJ, has never been arrested before on drug charges.

Bronson said the charge against the couple will be possession with intent to distribute. Ferguson and Conyers were transported to John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Winter Park over two other firms to oversee the courthouse expansion. By a 3-2 vote the commissioners went with the local firm rather than with Space Management Consultants, Inc. of Bellevue, Wash.

"It's a good selection...I'm really pleased," said Community Redevelopment Agency Vice Chairman Larry R. Strickler. "These people realize all that's happening in the area, know all the players in both the public and private sectors."

Architects Design President Ken Reeves vowed his firm would be "a guardian to the taxpayers' dollars." He said the study will take approximately six months by which time the county will be advised of its best possible building or expansion of a courthouse facility.

"We're only 20 minutes away and we know the players and the importance of our study," Reeves said. "We know what the courthouse will mean to the growth of Sanford and to the county. It's a complex issue - three dimensional chess - which makes it all the more challenging."

Strickler, who warned the commissioners a week ago to "get moving," sees nothing but blue skies over Sanford when the courthouse becomes a reality. "The second the county commits the big dollars to this project, the private sector will follow because it will be a sure thing - not a gamble - to invest."

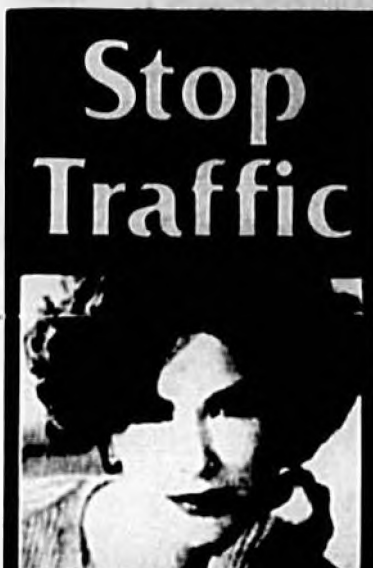

How much will the county chalk up? Anywhere from $25 million to $30 million is the estimate of Commission Chairman Randy Morris, who is eager to set a cap on the project. He gained support on this Tuesday from fellow commissioners Grant Maloy and Win Adams.

The sooner Architects Design knows what the county is willing to contribute the quicker it can huddle with possible partners from the private sector. SunTrust bank, for one, has expressed interest. There also must be financial support from Sanford, whose gains were said to be well worth the investment.

Morris was enthusiastic, relieved. "We're moving along. Setting a cap is important. I pushed for this last week, got nowhere. Now, I think we're coming around. We're thinking on the same lines."

Commissioner Adams, sounding a familiar "united we stand, divided we fall," was pleased not only with the courthouse progress but with the interlocal agreement that helps unite all the cities in the county and the School Board. "We've got to be able to communicate," he said.

Girls edge Oviedo to clinch SAC

LAKE MARY — Down by a point early in the fourth quarter, with a Seminole Athletic Conference title on the line, the Lake Mary girls basketball team hung in the balance. That's Ashlee Ballance, the Rams' sophomore point guard and team leader. Lake Mary trailed Oviedo, their last major competition before district play starts, by a point and Ballance was eyeing a three-pointer. Nothing but net. Her trey gave the Lady Rams a 42-40 lead and Lauren Bradley hit some key free throws down the stretch as Lake Mary pulled out a 52-46 win over the Lions. The win gives the Rams, ranked No. 3 in the state in Class 6A this week, the SAC title and number one seeding in the districts which start in two weeks at Winter Springs High School. For Lake Mary, winning the SAC is almost an afterthought to an incredible season that has the team looking far past Seminole County. It wasn't too noticeable last night, however, as both teams got off to sloppy starts. The game wasn't two minutes old when Lake Mary coach Carl Brown called a time out to let his players know he wasn't pleased. "They were just going through their plays instead of playing hard," an exasperated Brown said after the game. See Basketball, Page 2B

Magic streak halted

By DAVID GINSBURG

LANDOVER, Md. — The box score confirmed what Brian Hill already knew. On this night his basketball team was sorely outthrust. The Washington Bullets out rebounded Orlando 53-37, had eight more assists and 14 more points off the last break Tuesday night. It all added up to a 102-82 Washington blowout. The Magic came in with a four-game winning streak and a 9-3 record this month, but they never held the lead after. See Magic, Page 2B

Ritchey's romps at Pinehurst

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — So much for a showdown. Ritchey's wasted little time in showing who was going to be the best on this night as it scored five runs in the top of the first inning and went on to win the battle of the unbeaten 17-1 over the Sanford Magic in the Sanford Recreation Department Women's Pinehurst Park Polar Bear Slow Pitch Softball League Tuesday night. Ritchey's domination was so complete that it tied 10-0 before the Sanford Magic could score and limited the Sanford Magic to only three singles and an unearned run over the five-inning game. In the other game, Hopkins Meats rolled to a big early lead and withstood a Lady Knights challenge to win its first game 15-10. Next Tuesday, Ritchey's (3-0) and the Sanford Magic (2-1) will meet in a rematch at 7 p.m., while the Lady Knights (0-3) and Hopkins Meats (1-2) will also tangle again at 8 p.m. Providing the offense were: Ritchey's four hits — Jackie Tolea (two runs), RHH. See Pinehurst, Page 2B

Dream Catchers get upper hand

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Barbara Barlow had a hand in three of the four run-scoring innings for the Dream Catchers as they became the final undefeated team in the Sanford Recreation Department Women's Chase Park Polar Bear Slow Pitch Softball League with a 6-3 victory over the Eagles Tuesday night. Barlow, who finished three-for-three, got a two-run rally started in the second inning with a triple, singled in the final of two runs in the third inning and had an inside-the-park home run in the sixth inning as the Dream Catchers improved to 3-0. With two games remaining against teams with a combined 1-5 record, only an upset will deny the Dream Catchers the league title. In the other games, T's Angels held the Sharks to six hits in a 5-1 win, while Sunniland Corporation used a 10-run second inning to get its first win of the season, 15-1 over the She Devils. See Chase, Page 2B

Should Seminole play schools its own size?

SANFORD — Is it time for Seminole to jump out of the SAC? Think about it for a minute. Sure, the 'Noles have been part of the Seminole Athletic Conference for years and have had their share of success stories. But check out the win-loss records recently. What good does it do for Seminole, especially in football, to take on a SAC schedule each season, only to add losses to their records because of the obligation to play the other five, and soon to be six, teams in the county? Seminole has about 700 students less than anyone else in the SAC. Playing on that kind of uneven playing field all season is suicide. Let's start with the football program. Last season, Seminole finished with a 3-7 record. They did that despite having the fifth best defense in Central Florida, the best defense in the SAC, and perhaps the best group of receivers in the county. Why does that translate to 3-7? Because, out of 10 games on the schedule, five were played against Lake Mary, Lake Howell, Lake Brantley, Lyman and Oviedo, all of whom have much larger enrollments than Seminole. They are required to play those teams in the SAC conference schedule but ended up 1-4 against those teams, the only win being over a Lake Mary team that barely showed up in the season finale. Against teams from their own district, the Tribe was a respectable 2-3 and had a shot at a district playoff berth late in the season. How would things have been if the undermanned Seminoles didn't have to get their brains beaten out by the bigger boys four times? Losing demoralizes a team and that is what happened early in the season when Seminole got off to a slow start. Anyone who watched the Tribe all season saw how the team improved once it knocked off Class 5A Titusville and got some confidence. Seminole played everyone tough the rest of the season even though it was a foregone conclusion that a losing record would be there at the end. The alternative? Play the neighborhood game against Lake Mary. That's the classic end of the season backyard brawl and should be kept on the schedule. But except for the Lake Mary game, wouldn't games against schools with similar enrollments be a better alternative? As the home attendance showed this season, playing local schools isn't enough to sell tickets so what about dropping the quality of opponents to allow the Tribe the chance to return to the glory they once had. One or two 6A opponents is enough. Drop some of the others and add some 5A teams and maybe a cupcake for homecoming. Give the Seminoles an even playing field. In basketball, there's a similar problem on a much smaller level since win-loss records are really nothing until playoff time. The girls' basketball team is ranked fifth in the state. It would be higher except for losses to 6A Oviedo and Lake Mary. Take those off the schedule and the Tribe is undefeated. With two weeks remaining until states start, does Seminole really need a second loss to Lake Mary tomorrow night? Without injured star Dana Merrick, it could get ugly. That's the last thing Seminole needs as it dreams about the Final Four. Boys basketball is much the same. Coach Bob Traina doesn't have the best team around but it is competitive. Against a schedule of equals, the Tribe is probably way over .500. What good does getting beaten by 6A do for their confidence? It wouldn't be cowardly to lessen the schedule. It makes perfect sense. Let the rest of the SAC pick on someone their own size.

the opening four minutes of the second quarter.

"I don't think we were ever really into the game for whatever reason," said Hill, peering at a box score that had all the incriminating numbers circled in red ink. "We didn't have any energy out there. They were definitely the more active, the more aggressive team. They destroyed us on the boards."

Chris Webber, left off the All-Star team, had 17 points and 14 rebounds. Juwan Howard had 26 points and 10 rebounds, and George Murrean finished with 12 points and 14 rebounds.

Anfernee Hardaway scored 22 and Rony Seikaly 21 for the Magic, but Dennis Scott was 0-for-10 and Orlando made just 41 percent of its field goal attempts.

"There's a couple areas we call effort points — your fast breaks, second shots and deflections," Hill noted. "Tonight we were getting beat in every area. They were beating us up and down the floor almost every time."

Although he ranked 19th in the NBA in scoring, 13th in rebounding and 10th in blocks, Webber was not among the reserves named to the Eastern Conference squad earlier in the day. He took out his frustration on Orlando, hitting half his 14 shots in addition to registering five assists.

"I'm disappointed for Chris. He had an All-Star caliber first half of the season," Bullets coach Jim Lynsaw said.

Webber was hesitant to rip the selection process, even though he was the only one of six players averaging 20 points and 10 rebounds not chosen to play in the All-Star game.

"I'm not going to acknowledge it's going on in my life. I'm not going to think about it," he said. "It just makes me numb."

Washington pulled away in the third period, outscoring the Magic 32-20 to turn a three-point halftime lead into a secure 18-point advantage.

Tim Allen leads TV invasion of Rolex 24

Special to the Herald

DAYTONA BEACH — When Tim Allen, the star of the hit ABC television sitcom "Home Improvement," heard that drivers in the February 1-3 Rolex 24 at Daytona had to make their own repairs if their cars broke down on the course at Daytona International Speedway during the 24-hour race, he was thrilled.

"I'm gadget-oriented, and proud of it," says Allen with the gusto that would make his Home Improvement character, Tim Taylor, swell with pride.

The actor, who is co-owner of Saleen-Allen Racing with championship driver and car builder Steve Saleen, will drive a GT-2 class Saleen Ford Mustang in the 35th Rolex 24, the season opener for the International Motor Sports Association (IMSA) Exxon World Sports Car Championship and Supreme GT Series.

Least it be thought an act, proficiency with gadgets is not out of place in the Rolex 24. Buddy Norton, driver of a front-engined World Sports Car, once had to run a wire from a broken throttle linkage over the windshield and into the car's open cockpit

We're all nuts for walnuts

By MANALISA GALYA
NEA Food Writer

One of the perks of writing about food is that sometimes people send you good things to eat. For the record, I don't ENCOURAGE this practice, and try to give most of the stuff I receive to the local food bank. And sometimes the products sent are things I would never in a million years want to buy, or eat, or write about. For example, I've received envelopes of powdered, fat-free (and flavor-free) gravy mixes, a basket of sweetened flavored coffees (I HATE flavored coffee), a pastry so sweet it made my teeth ache, and some truly inedible snack foods. But occasionally I hit pay dirt. Once, an Italian wine promoter sent me wine. And recently I was sent a mess of walnuts.

I confess that neither the wine nor the walnuts went to the food bank. But, if the truth be known, I didn't need free samples to persuade me either to drink wine or to cook with walnuts.

For years, I've been using walnuts in my pesto when pine nuts become too pricey or too scarce. My favorite Christmas cookies recipe uses tons of chopped walnuts. I make a killer anchovy-walnut pasta dish.

But the walnuts came along with recipes, which started me on some diabetes that I would probably never have made. The Walnut Cappuccino Biscotti recipe was developed by Dana Allen Parker of Seattle and won first place in a baking contest. The Asian Walnut Chicken recipe comes from marketing fillet. I've included here the killer anchovy-walnut pasta recipe, which is from one of my all-time favorite cookbooks, "Cucina Simpatica," by Johanne Killeen and George Germon.

WALNUT CAPPUCCINO BISCOTTI

- 2-1/2 cups all purpose flour
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons cocoa powder
- 4 teaspoons fresh espresso-ground coffee
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 cup toasted walnuts, chopped
- 3 eggs
- 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- 1/8 cup whole milk

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a mixer bowl using a paddle attachment, mix all of the ingredients until a sticky dough is formed.

Place the dough onto a floured surface. Divide evenly into 2 pieces. Roll the dough into two 12-inch logs. Place on a parchment-lined or greased baking sheet, and pat the logs down flat so that they are approximately 3-1/2 inches wide.

Bake the logs until they spring back when pressed lightly. Allow the logs to cool, then, using a bread knife, cut biscotti about 1/2-inch thick, on the diagonal. Arrange on the baking sheet, flat on their sides. Bake again at same temperature for 8 more minutes. Allow to cool. Store in an airtight container. Yield: about 4 dozen.

Recipe from Dana Allen Parker, Seattle.

ASIAN WALNUT CHICKEN

For the chicken:

- 1/2 cup reduced-sodium soy sauce
- 1/2 cup sherry or red wine
- 1/3 cup vegetable oil
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 3 cloves garlic, peeled and minced
- 2 tablespoons grated fresh ginger, or 1 tablespoon powdered ginger

10 skinless, boneless chicken breast halves (about 3-1/4 pounds, total)

For the lemon olive sauce:

- 1/2 cup fat-free mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup plain nonfat yogurt
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 3 tablespoons chopped green olives, or ripe olives
- 1 clove garlic, peeled and minced
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1/2 cup walnuts

Make the marinade: In a medium bowl, combine the soy sauce, sherry, oil, sugar, garlic and ginger root (or powdered ginger). Whisk until the sugar has dissolved. Put the chicken in a large lock-top plastic bag and pour in the marinade. Press the air out and seal the bag tightly, then massage the bag gently to distribute the marinade. Place in a large bowl and refrigerate for at least 2 hours or up to 12 hours. Remove the chicken and reserve the marinade.

Prepare the lemon olive sauce. In a small bowl, stir together the mayonnaise, yogurt, lemon juice, olives and garlic, or puree the ingredients in a food processor. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Stir in the walnuts. Cover and refrigerate until needed.

Preheat the barbecue grill or broiler. Cook the chicken by either method, brushing with the marinade several times during the first 8 minutes of cooking, and turning to cook on both sides. The chicken is done when opaque throughout, with no trace of pink in the center. Cut into a couple of pieces to be sure. Total cooking time will probably be around 15 minutes.

Serve chicken hot or cold, with sauce drizzled over top. Yield: 10 servings. Recipe from the California Walnut Marketing Board.

SPAGHETTINI WITH ANCHOVIES, WALNUTS AND GARLIC

- 1/2 cup walnut pieces or halves
- 2 2-ounce cans anchovy fillets packed in olive oil
- 1/2 cup virgin olive oil
- 2 tablespoons minced fresh garlic
- 1 cup water
- 1 pound imported spaghetti

Bring 5 quarts of salted water to a boil in a large pot.

In a food processor, grind the walnuts to a fine powder, being careful to stop before turning them into nut butter.

Drain the anchovies, rinse under cold running water to rid of excess salt, pat dry with paper towels and chop.

Heat the oil in a large skillet. Add the garlic and anchovies and gently saute, stirring often, until the garlic turns a rich golden color. The anchovies will dissolve and become almost a paste.

Immediately add 1 cup of water to the skillet, being careful not to burn yourself, as the oil may splatter. Raise the heat and boil vigorously until the liquid has reduced by half. Keep the sauce over very low heat while the spaghetti cooks.

Cook the pasta in the boiling water until still quite firm, 4 to 5 minutes. Drain and add to the sauce in the skillet. Toss for about 2 minutes over low heat until the pasta is al dente. Sprinkle the walnuts over the pasta, tossing to distribute the nuts evenly. If the pasta becomes dry, add 1 to 2 tablespoons of the pasta cooking water.

Yield: serves 8 as an appetizer, 4 as a main course.

Recipe from "Cucina Simpatica," by Johanne Killeen and George Germon (HarperCollins, 1991).

Wife lacks Ginger to join husband's act

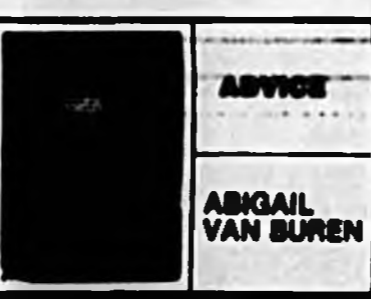

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 14 years. He is a good provider and a loving father to our two children.

We are part of a social circle that entertains frequently, and that is where the problem lies. My husband dances with every woman at the party while I sit at the table watching him make all kinds of sexy movements with them. He doesn't ignore me completely, but I am uncomfortable watching him touch all these other women.

If I say anything, my husband argues that I am the one he goes home with, buys the jewelry and gifts for, and comes home to every night. He says my disapproving looks spoil his fun, and claims he just likes to have a good time.

He shows his affection toward me when we are alone. We go on vacations together frequently. He says he loves me and the children and that our marriage is forever. But this dancing thing is bothering me.

How do I handle this? Should I just not pay attention, or try to give him a dose of his own medicine (but I am not the type to go around asking every woman's husband to

SITTING ON THE SIDELINES IN NEW YORK

DEAR ON THE SIDELINES: Your husband is acting as though he has nothing to hide, and apparently he doesn't. He comes home to you every day and is affectionate and generous in word and deed.

Since no one else reacts negatively to his dancing, evidently he is not behaving inappropriately. Consider taking some lessons, thereby making yourself a more interesting and enjoyable dance partner. Then perhaps your husband will ask you to dance more often.

DEAR ABBY: This is another true story about a kind act from a man of character: Harry S. Truman. Many years ago, I was a young Army wife traveling with an infant. I was at Washington National Airport, having been bumped from my connecting flight, badly in need of a bathroom, but I could not leave my baby alone.

A gentleman sitting on the bench with me saw my distress and said, "I will be here for the next half-hour and I am experienced in child care, as I have a young daughter." His face was familiar, but I could not place it until the loudspeaker blared, "Senator Truman, please come to the desk." As he left, he said, "Don't worry, I'll be right back."

He was true to his word, and I felt very comfortable letting the man who had recently been nominated for the vice presidency babysit for me. When I returned, he proudly said, "Your baby needed a change, so I found your diaper bag and took care of everything."

How the world has changed! NANCY HERTZBERG, PALM BEACH, FLA.

DEAR NANCY: What a wonderfully warm memory of President Truman. Obviously, he could be counted on to do whatever had to be done in any situation. Thank you for sharing it.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman whose husband talked too much reminded me of a humorous incident in which I was involved.

Some years ago a new priest was appointed to our parish. Shortly after he arrived, my wife invited him to get her for dinner as a welcoming gesture. As a special treat, she also invited another couple who were mutual friends. The wife had been a parochial school classmate of the priest, and the husband had been his fraternity brother at the university before he decided to study for the priesthood.

Abby, I love this woman like a sister, but I've often said that she's the only person I know who talks more than my wife. All through the cocktails, hors d'oeuvres and well into dinner that woman dominated — no, she monopolized — the conversation.

After we finished the main course, the women went into the kitchen to prepare dessert. At this point, the priest turned to the two of us and said, "You know, celibacy isn't all that bad!"

NO NAME OR TOWN PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: Why do people with small children feel it is necessary to take these children with them when they go to the movies? I went to four R-rated, action-packed movies last summer, and in three of them there were parents with crying children.

I see the same thing every time I go to the movies. Don't these parents know that their children are not going to enjoy the movie? Why should they? They are sitting in a dark, strange place with many strangers they can't see, there is nothing for them to play with, and there are loud, strange noises all around them.

Here is my message to parents: If your child is under the age of 2, he or she is not going to enjoy a movie no matter what the rating is. If your child is under the age of 6, he or she should not be going to anything over a PG rating. Make the cost of the baby sitter part of the cost for an evening out. Most sitters will charge only $3 or $4 per hour for a small child.

If you can't afford a baby sitter, stay home and rent a movie. It's better for you, better for your child, and for all of us sitting in the theater.

IRRITATED IN TEXAS

DEAR IRRITATED: I'm printing your "message," but let's be realistic: Parents who bring infants and small children to the movies often do it because they can't afford a sitter. There's no law against it. However, when a child creates a disturbance, good sense and good manners dictate that it be taken outside so it's not a distraction to others. But if it's not the manager of the theater should be notified so he (or she) can quell the disturbance.

DEAR ABBY: My son's wedding went an interesting step beyond the standard non-reply to an RSVP.

When many self-addressed, stamped responses to this question were not received by a reasonable length of time, I called other respondents from our immediate family. Since my son and his fiancée were committed to pay a considerable amount of money for each dinner at the country club — in advance — it was important that the number of guests be accurate.

I telephoned each invited guest and almost all assured me that they would be attending, several with children — one family totaling five.

However, on the happy day, there were an innumerable number of "no-shows" who hadn't even bothered to call at the last minute with an excuse. Consequently, the bridal couple had to pay for a lot of thoughtless relatives who had accepted when they should have been honest and said, "If we don't have anything better to do, we'll be there."

FED UP WITH RELATIVES

DEAR FED UP: Believe it or not, some people do not know that "R.S.V.P." means "Please respond" in French.

WORTH QUOTING: Clarence Darrow, world-famous American lawyer in the 1900s who earned a wide reputation as a brilliant criminal defense attorney, said: "The trouble with the law is lawyers."

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding" from a business-savvy, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $15 (plus $2.00 in Canada) to Dear Abby, Wedding Specialist, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)
