Polk Eyes Building

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County sheriff's department is in 'desperate'' need of more space and must bring all its operations under one roof, Sheriff Joun Polk told county commissioners Tuesday. He urged them to approve the leasing of Building 310 — the former Navy barracks at the Sanford Airport - not only for his department but also for other county use as well. The suggestion was referred to the county's space committee, composed of Commissioners Bill Kirchhoff and Sandra Glenn; Office of Management, Analysis and

Evaluation (OMAE)

Director Jeff Etchberger and County Administrator Roger Neiswender. Polk said the sheriff's office currently has 10,445 square feet of office space in the old jail building; 412 square feet for its communications center in the courthouse and is leasing 3,600 square feet at the Sanford Airport and 1,129 square feet in the Sanford Masonic Building.

New Ideas Offered To Use Buses

By JANE CASSELBERRY Herald Staff Writer

Will the drivers on Sanford's buses replace the Whirlpool repairman as the loneliest guy in town? Concerned over the many empty buses, local businessmen are coming up with some ideas to educate the public to the availability of the bus service provided by the Orange-Seminole-Osceola Transportation Authority and entice them to ride.

"We've got something good, let's take advantage of it," Vic Arnett vice president, First Federal of Seminole, told those attending a meeting of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Commercial Committee today. Arnett said OSOTA is concerned over the lack of ridership on the three lines it operates in Sanford. There are approximately 150 persons riding the buses each day and consequently some of the runs are empty, OSOTA officials

A "Nickel Day" was suggested when passengers could ride for five cents and stores would coordinate a special Nickel Day sales promotion with the transport authority.

Bob Ball, Ball Music Center, suggested a promotion in which the bus driver would hand the rider a ticket which they could redeem to get their 50 cents back or would apply to merchandise. Major shopping centers such as downtown Sanford, Sanford Plaza and Zayre Plaza are served by the buses in addition to the courthouse, library, and Seminole Memorial Hospital. "A "free ride" day in which local merchants would subsidize bus rides in conjunction with sales promotions was suggested as another possibility.

Arnett pointed out that many people are only familiar with the parts of the city where they live or work and suggested a "Tour Sanford" day to help them get better acquainted with other areas of the city. He suggested high school cheer leaders or other students could serve as tour guides and it could be coordinated with a festive promotion by stores. A refreshment stop at shopping centers could also be included, he said.

Bill MacLauchlin, president of Celery City Printing, suggested local churches could help call attention to the availability of bus service in their bulletins.

Oil And Inflation Pocketbook Tappers

President Carter and his top energy and economic advisers are said to be "agonizing" over how to relax price controls on domestic oil without undermining the administration's own antiinflation program, their agony is misplaced. The conflict, if there is one, is out of their hands.

The urgent need to stimulate production of domestic oil makes the case for decontroling prices. The American Petroleum Institute estimates that a 30-month phased decontrol program would increase production by 400,000 barrels a day by 1981 and by two-million barrels a day by 1985.

No one denies that decontrol would increase the price of gasoline, heating oil and all the products made from petroleum. But how much? By the government's own estimate the 30-month program would add one-tenth of one percent to the consumer price index in the first year and threefenths of one percent in the next two years.

That's relatively mild, but Mr. Carter is said to e worried about consistency - that his wage and price guidelines would be all the harder to enforce if the government itself triggers an advance in energy prices. What should resolve his agony is the nowledge that those prices are going up anyhow.

For every barrel of domestic oil that is left in the ground because price controls make it uneconomical to produce, a barrel of oil is being imported from overseas. The OPEC price currently is $14 a barrel and going up. The only question, then is whether we pay an OPEC producer $14 for our next barrel of oil, or raise the domestic price high enough to make it worthwhile for an American driller to produce it.

If Mr. Carter's advisers are having trouble answering that question our energy policy is in a worse muddle than we believed.

Of course, decontrol is no miracle cure for our energy problems, but it is hard to see how an effective strategy on any other front can be pursued without it. Price increases can achieve the conservation goals that Americans have been reluctant to pursue as long as energy costs

More important, conversion to alternate fuels has been denied the stimulus that a free energy market would produce. Recent price increases for unleaded gasoline, for instance, have caused a boom in sales of "gasohol" in the Midwest, the only area where the mixture of gasoline and alcohol is widely available to motorists. The debate over whether wood or grain alcohol is a practical additive gasoline could be ending, not through a government-sponsored "study" but by a harrowing of the gap between the price of gasoline and alcohol

It is a mistake for Mr. Carter to try to reconcile his energy policies with his anti-inflation program. Inflation of the currency is the result of a government's fiscal and monetary policies. Rising oil prices are the result of demand exceeding supply. The United States has an inflation problem, which is one thing, and an energy problem, which is another. They are both aggravating our pocketbooks, but they both have separate solutions.

It's An Unseeming Trade-Off

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Throughout the recently renewed national debate over limitations on the outside income earned by members of Congress, one crucial aspect of the complex issue has received scant attention.

Senators and representatives have good reason to avoid discussion of that element abuse of their official positions for personal financial gain - because it exposes to public scrutiny the dark side of congressional behavior.

But the voters ought to be aware that both houses of Congress agreed in recent years to accept ceilings on outside income not merely as a "good government" trade-off for their higher salaries but also because some lawmakers had engaged in conduct that was unseemly if not

Were it not for that behavior on the part of a relatively few legislators, the Senate might have a convincing case to support its recent decision to postpone for an additional four years resolution adopted in early 1977 that would limit outside income to $ $8,625 a year, 15 percent of their annual salary.

instead, the senators now will be governed by the $25,000 yearly ceiling contained in the Federal Election Campaign Act. In addition, the maximum fee for any single speech will be $2,000

Those inflated speaking fees are, by far, the largest single source of outside earned income for the lawmakers. But many senators are rightfully cautious about accepting such personal compensation from special interest

Some decline all honoraria, others limit their fees to a relatively modest $500 or $750 per speech and few even donate those proceeds to charitable organizations. A few, however abuse the privilege.

Sen. Edwin J. (Jake) Garn, R-Utah, is the senior Republican on the Senate Banking Committee. In 1977, the most recent year for which full records are available, he collected the maximum $25,000, including speaking fees from these groups:

Colorado Bankers Association, $2,000: Arkansas Bankers Association, $2,000; Kansas Bankers Association, $2,000; Washington Bankers Association, $2,000; Texas Savings and Loan League, $1,000; Independent Community Banks, $1,000; Illinois Bankers Association, $1,000; and Associated Credit Bureaus, $1,000.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr., D-La., is chairman of the regulation subcommittee of the Senate Energy Committee. His biggest speaking fees in 1977 included: American Mining Congress, $2,000; Domestic Petroleum Council, $1,000; New England Fuel Institute, $1,000.

Phineas Taylor Barnum once said, "There is a sucker born every minute." With the number of con games, swindles, frauds and miscellaneous rip-offs perpetrated on hapless victims each day it would appear that there has been a population explosion made up of this gullible breed.

You don't have to go out looking for con-artists. they're out looking for you, even to the extent of beating a path to your front door. An old swindle that is often tried, and frequently succeeds, begins when a "fly-by-night" business mails second rate and over-priced merchandise C.O.D. to someone who did not order it, according to the FBI. Many times such material is accepted and paid for by someone who believes another member of the family ordered it.

Another form of this same fraud is staged by a con man who dons a delivery uniform and comes to the door asking the occupant to accept and pay for a package for a neighbor who is not home. In fact, the package contains nothing of value and was not ordered by the neighbor or anyone else.

A third common scheme is the home repair racket. After a free home inspection, the "repairman" or "utility man" advises the

Another Viewpoint

It is, indeed, a sad situation when a newspaper allows its reporters to put into print such an apparently biased article as the one entitled "Meals On Wheels Hassle: S.C.A. Looks Toward Legal Remedy" by Donna Estes, February 16, 1979.

However, it should be your obligation, as a responsible newspaper, to present the facts from both sides and print a factual report so that your readers can arrive at their own conclusions. This eliminates irresponsible reporting and biased or slanted stories. In view of the above I would like to present some facts, which were publicly available to you and which you chose to omit, or irresponsibly failed to make known to your readers:

1. During the last quarter of 1978 with Oasis handling the Meals on Wheels, 50 percent of these went to so called minority persons. 2. During the last quarter of 1978 with Oasis handling the Congregate meals, 46 percent went to so called minority

Peter Principle According to the Peter Principle, a theory well-known in the business world, people are promoted continually until they reach a level at which they are incompetent. It may be true of government monopolies, too. Take the U.S. Postal Service. Strange as it may seem, it once had a reputation for delivering the mail on time. Today, however, most people would no more think of asking the Postal Service to deliver a package across the country than they would train a pigeon to do it. Private firms such as the United Parcel Service have long since captured the market with competitive prices and reliable service. Despite the installation of expensive and fancy machinery to handle packages, the USPS just couldn't compete.

Meanwhile, private delivery of second class mail (magazines and newspapers) is outcompeting the USPS in many cities, but the Postal Service isn't taking any chances on losing its big monopoly - first-class mail. A few months ago it let loose its terrible, swift sword in tochester, N.Y., where it persuaded the courts to ban a young couple from private delivery of mail downtown for 10 cents a letter.

In another celebrated case, the scales of justice came down hard on an outlaw teenager who was caught delivering wedding invitations (on his bicycle) to neighbors for a small fee. Having knocked off these deperadoes, the USPS is now after bigger game. Human nature and technology being what they are, as the Postal Service became less efficient, more and more businesses and organizations shifted to electronic transmission of messages and sales of telecopiers boomed. These little machines, using telephones, transmit exact copies by electronic facsimile from one point to another over long distances.

propose revisions to the so-called "private ex press laws" which give it its first-class mail monopoly. Apparently, it reasoned that if you can't beat 'em or join 'em, you can use the bureaucrat's favorite tool - a new regulation to drive 'em out of business.

Among the proposed new regulations the Postal Service drew up last December was one to narrow the definition of telegrams so as to extend its monopoly to such things as electronically transmitted letters. Another new USPS rule would redefine Varn urged Gov. Bob Graham Tuesday to declare a 90day state energy emergency under the federal Clean Air Act and ask President Carter for a similar declaration. Deputy press secretary Jill Chamberlin said Graham will decide whether to accept Varn's recommendation "soon." possibly today.

Ray Knight Gets His Chance

.Tampa, Fla. (UPI) - Pete Rose didn't just walk off and leave the Cincinnati Reds holding the bag. He turned it over instead to an eager, pleasant, polite young man in whom he felt he could put his confidence. So far, Ray Knight hasn't let him down. For the past two years, Knight was Rose's caddie with the Reds. He'd usually replace him at third base for defensive purposes in the late innings if Cincinnati was ahead. All the time this was going on, Pete Rose did everything he possibly could to help Ray Knight. Rose talked to him about pitchers, about hitters, about the different plays that come up. about everything. When Rose decided to take the money and go with the Phillies, Knight automatically inherited the Reds' third base job and it's his now unless he loses it to the best friend he has in the world, Harry Spilman, or Rick Auerbach.

"I know it's my job to win," says Knight. "The opportunity is right there. It's just a matter of me producing." Up to now, Knight has. He's hitting this spring and figures to be at third base when the Reds open the season at home with the Giants next Wednesday. If he does, you can also figure he'll give much of the credit to Pete Rose. "Nobody has helped me more," says the husky, cleancut osking 25-year-old Georgian. "More than anything else, he aught me to think positively. Pete is the most positive person I've ver been around "Pete also taught me playing baseball should be fun and not a chere," Knight goes on. "He really enjoys playing. It's not a job will him, it's a joy. You'd be surprised how many guys consider it will him, it's a joy. You'd be surprised how many guys consider it will he has a let Ray Knight already has the reputation of being a defensive ballplayer, having hit only .200 for the Reds in 65 times up last enson. He's sure he can do much better if he plays more. "When you don't play regularly, you lose your timing," he says. "When you lose your timing, you don't get hits, and when you don't get hits, you lose your confidence. I know I'm a better hitter than I've shown with the Reds. In the minors, I never had a problem making contact, never struck out much and I hit with nome power, so why can't I do it in the major leagues? "I know I'm no Pete Rose and I know there's no way I can put the statistics on the board that he did, but I just hope I can play nesistently and with the ability I know Ray Knight has." Nobody is ever really going to compare Knight with Rose scause they don't look anything like each other, their style of ay is entirely different and so is their general life style. The only Galaxy Carpets, 10-5, as Mike milarity between them is that both speak rapidly.

Rose, a native of Cincinnati, has big city ways. Knight, from Albany, Ga., is more smalltown. His biggest competition at third there is Harry Spilman, who is from Dawson, Ga., only 15 miles 16, as Jeff Seefelt went 5-for-5 from where Knight lives. The two Georgians always wanted to be and Bobby McCain keyed a his league ballplayers and have been very close all their lives.

"He's like a brother to me," Knight says about Spilman, who is two years younger. "We grew up in the same type of background d I know if I don't produce, he'll get the job. Both of us unerstand that and there is no rivalry between us in the sense that are rooting against each other. I want the best for Harry and wants the best for me."

Ironically, Graham recently set up a special council to try to increase the state's participation in sports events and make an all-out effort to persuade the ball clubs to move

In addition, when one of the leaders does something noteworthy in another part of the course, that, too, will be relayed on the scoreboards.

The computerized boards, one of which would be placed at each hole with large ones at No. 18, near the clubhouse and in the press tent, would replace the standard-bearers, usually teen-agers, who accompany each group around the course, and the leader boards, which are kept manually by volunteers.

"The idea certainly isn't original," said Beman. "Baseball and football stadiums have had the scoreboards for years now. We've been working on the idea with several companies for several years now and it's technically and economically feasible. "It's something we feel we have to do for the good of the game," he said. "We're shooting for 1980."
