County Attorney Gets Broward Job Offer; No. 2 Counsel Quits

LaPeters To Polk: Any Spots?

By MAX ERKILETIAN
Herald Staff Writer

WALLACE LAPETERS

Fired Sanford Police Chief Wallace LaPeters has confirmed he has made informal inquiries into job openings at the Seminole County Sheriff's Department but had not officially applied for a job.

"I went into John's (Sheriff Polk) office and during the conversation I asked if there were any job openings," he said. "I and we continued our conversation," LaPeters said.

LaPeters added he has not applied for any other law enforcement job in the county, but does have plans.

"I have some things in the fire, but they are personal and I would rather not comment," he said.

Meanwhile the state's attorney's office continued its investigation into possible Sunshine Law

Seminole County may soon be in the same position it was in six months ago—minus a full-time county attorney. In addition, assistant County Attorney Louis Guttman already has handed in his resignation.

The departure of Guttman and County Attorney Harry A. Stewart would leave the county without any full-time attorney. The Broward County Commission named him as their choice for general counsel on an unanimous 5-0 vote Tuesday. He has until next Tuesday to let Broward officials know if he will take the position.

Stewart did not actively seek the position, he said today. He was contacted by a committee named by the Broward County Commission to seek someone to fill the spot, he asserted.

"I told them I didn't feel I could formally apply, because I hadn't been here too long," said Stewart. "I told them I was flattered and that if nominated I would run and if elected I would serve."

Though Stewart commented, "I've never had so many conflicting feelings about a decision before in my life," he conceded he will "almost definitely" take the Broward County post. Part of the reason is a salary offer of $45,000.

Stewart earns $32,000 a year as Seminole County Attorney.

"The job offers some new opportunities and there's the size of the staff and the money," Stewart said, in citing his reasons for considering the Broward County offer.

Stewart plans to send a letter to Broward County Commission Chairman Hugh Anderson late this week or early next week outlining the terms under which he would take the job. However, those are expected to be readily approved.

In addition, Guttman, handed in his resignation effective Aug. 8. Guttman had been with the county since May 15.

He will be going to work for the Safeco Title Insurance Co., Altamonte Springs, as its state-wide legal counsel.

In Stewart's case, a review board representing the Broward County Commission and Broward Bar Associations screened applicants for the job. The applicants were narrowed to five. These five were referred to the commission for oral interviews.

Stewart was notified of the Broward County Commission's decision Tuesday in a telephone conversation with Anderson, County Administrator Roger Neiswender was notified the following day. Stewart served as Broward County Assistant General Counsel before coming to Seminole County.

Joe Mount, Stewart's predecessor, resigned Aug. 3, 1977 after serving six months. He was retained by the county to work two days a week at the same rate he had been paid as full-time attorney, to serve until his replacement was found.

Stewart will continue to represent the county from Broward County until his replacement is found if needed, he said.

The only commissioner who could be reached today for comment was Harry Kwiatkowski. He said he was unaware Stewart was considering the move and commented, "all I can say at this point is, I wish Mr. Stewart well, whatever he does."

Board Tables Longer Day Plan; Seeking Alternative

By LEONARD BRANSFORD
Herald Staff Writer

A proposal to keep kindergarten and first graders in school a longer day was tabled Wednesday by the Seminole County school board to look over an alternative idea.

The original proposal was recommended by Superintendent William Lauer because of the $70,000 to $80,000 in transportation costs the school district might save. Kindergarten and first graders currently leave school at 1:30 p.m. and are bused to their drop-off points. The buses return to the schools for the remaining students who are dismissed at 2:45 p.m. The original proposal calls for all students to be bused from school at 2:45 p.m.

The alternative proposal suggested at Wednesday's board meeting is to keep the current method of kindergarten students leaving at 1:30 p.m., but have the first-graders get out with the remaining grades. Since the proposed savings submitted by Lauer covered both kindergarten and first-graders the board instructed Ruben and twice visited the rule of confidentiality, causing Ruben to suffer from undue and unanticipated publicity.

In ruling, the court said the Florida Bar failed to comply with the established rules for disciplinary proceedings in handling Rubin's case.

The court said the Bar violated rules requiring prompt filing of complaints against Rubin and twice violated the rule of confidentiality, causing Ruben to suffer from undue and unanticipated publicity.

Because of the Bar's handling of the case, the court said he was subject to the "agonizing ordeal of having to live under a cloud of uncertainty, suspicion and accusations for a period in excess of that which the rules were designed to tolerate."

The Bar had charged Rubin, habitually showed a lack of longer day would have any detrimental effects on the children.

School board member Alan Keith said it was his understanding that the extra hour would "not necessarily be used for a learning type situation."

In noting his wife was a teacher he added "and she told me that after lunch you can forget it, with keeping the children's attention."

Mrs. Howe suggested that professional psychologists be contacted to see if they think a the longer day specifically on the kindergarten children.

Several parents and teachers present at the meeting agreed with that concern.

Board chairman Pat Telson noted that she had received several phone calls from teachers and parents who said their concern is for the effects canor or concern in the affairs of his clients and in one instance failed to pay weekly checks to a woman for whom he was the acting guardian. In another case, the Bar charged, Rubin failed to expedite a property easement case for a client who contacted him 21 times over a six-month period.

The veteran attorney also was accused of failing to handle the case of 16 jail-indebtors who paid him a $1,000 retainer to represent them in a damage suit against several frontons that allegedly black-listed them.

Test-Tube Baby And The Future

It had been talked about for years. Now it has finally happened.
And, because of it, John and Lesley Brown of England are the proud parents of a baby daughter.
The baby, a girl, was conceived in a piece of glass, a test tube. The egg was fertilized by the sperm outside the mother's body.
Predictably, the medical breakthrough has been greeted by some criticism, a criticism coming mainly from certain religious spokesmen to whom any deviation from the accepted norm is a deviation from morality.
These critics, fortunately, have been muted effectively thus far by rational, reasonable, sensible clerical voices—including those of representatives of churches right here in Seminole County.
The only difference from the normal reproductive process is the fertilization takes place outside the body. I don't see anything immoral about it at this point," observed Dr. Virgil Bryant of Sanford's First Presbyterian Church.
His sentiment was echoed by Rev. Leo King of the First United Methodist Church of Sanford. "I can't say it is morally wrong," he said. "The natural process was the way God intended, but I could see where this may be a necessity."
The "necessity" in this case was the inability for physiological reasons for Lesley and John Brown to conceive a child.
That's when they turned to the prospect of their "test-tube baby."

Most of the fears resulting from this scientific breakthrough center upon the possibility or prospect of genetic maneuverings that would lead to a race of manufactured beings.
Observers voicing these fears are urging adequate safeguards to prevent such happenings.
"I don't see anything wrong with it," notes Rev. Arthur Padgett of Casselberry's Community United Methodist Church. "But where it will lead, that's something else."

That, certainly, is the key. But the development and historic technique cannot be ignored, even though hazards do exist and abuses are possible—as they are in other scientific advances.
But the march of science cannot be stilled. It is now up to man to accept the new-found technology harness it responsibly and initiate needed safeguards, and continue research into the technique and procedure.

In the meantime, Dr. Patrick Steptoe, the gynecologist who performed the procedure with Mrs. Brown, is to be commended for his professional advancement and perseverance. It is reported that he had had at least 100 failures.

Two facts, however, now are indisputable: First, there are now no two happier people in the entire world than John and Lesley Brown.
Second, their new baby will be given the care and love too many other unwanted, accidental babies never are given.

We join the world in sharing best wishes with the new parents.

ANGLE-WALTERS Finding Common Ground

WASHINGTON—William K. Reilly appears to be a dedicated environmentalist when he speaks fondly of "a vision of man living in harmony with nature, a resulting respect for natural processes and... use of the earth's resources."

But Reilly sounds like a businessman when he warns that "conservationists must be willing to work in the contexts of bigness and growth—the contexts in which decisions about development and manufacturing are made in this country."

That very disparate rhetoric reflects neither indifference nor ideological schizophrenia on the part of the talented, enthusiastic young man who serves as president of the Washington-based Conservation Foundation.

What it does symbolize is his commitment as a mediator in the seemingly endless confrontation between environmentalists and the business community—a dispute that has generated more shrillness, antagonism and hostility than perhaps any other contemporary issue.

Operating with an annual budget of about $2 million, the Conservation Foundation seldom receives publicity because it aims the role of adversary in the myriad environmental controversies that have become a hallmark of the 1970s.

Instead, it works quietly to help the protagonists find common ground, distributing reports with titles such as "Environmentalists and Developers: Can They Agree on Anything?"

The foundation also hosts periodic meetings for a small group of representatives from both the chemical industry and environmental organizations, to discuss implementation of the new Toxic Substances Control Act.

From these sessions have emerged recommendations to the federal government for new testing requirements for chemicals and for recruitment and training of an expanded crop of toxicological specialists.

Still under discussion is the complex issue of how to balance the business community's perceived need for protection of trade secrets with the public demand for maximum disclosure of health and safety information.

More than 100 business executives and conservationists gathered in Chicago last year for a foundation-sponsored conference on a pollution control strategy that calls for imposition of taxes corresponding to the amount of pollutants a company discharges into the air or water.

Another meeting, held in San Francisco, again attracted a mix of business and environmental leaders for a discussion of future strategies for urban planning and development.

A foundation-published book, "Business and Environment: Toward Common Ground," is an anthology of 16 essays exploring major issues dividing the corporate and conservation communities. Contributors range from the Mobil Oil Corp. to Ralph Nader.

Red Dye Targeted In Cancer Studies

WASHINGTON—The nation's food supply is littered with hundreds of artificial dyes and colors that make eating more pleasant to your health. Many of these dyes have been approved without adequate testing to assure their safety. Yet they add nothing to the food, except to give it more eye appeal.

The second most widely used artificial color, Red Dye No. 40, has now aroused the concern of consumer scientists. American consumer groups have petitioned the Federal Food and Drug Administration to ban the dye from use in cherry, candy, soda, frosting and ice cream. It is also used in barbecue sauce, pancake mix, sweet rolls, cakes and cookies, gravy mix and other foods.

It is the only remaining red dye on the market since the Food and Drug Administration banned Red Dye No. 2 as a cancer-causing agent. Scientists now fear that Red Dye No. 40 may also cause cancer.

The dye is based on a food coloring in Canada, Britain, France and most other European countries. Yet the Food and Drug Administration, acting on the advice of some of its own scientists, have refused to restrict the dye in this country.

The dye's original manufacturer, Allied Chemical Company, conducted one study in which it fed Red Dye No. 40 developed cancer. But the study was never published. A more recent study was ambiguous; some

The Clock

By LEONARD KRANDORF

Hundreds of typewriters and thousands of desks. These were among the various items that Seminole County residents scoured through last week when the school board had its annual auction of items that have been taken off inventory.

The sale was successful from a monetary viewpoint and for Hugh Carlton, director of auxiliary services it was much more peaceful company than last year.

Carlton recalls that even before the sale opened last year he arrived to find two men sitting on a table, claiming the saw was theirs.

Carlton tried to explain there was no such thing as squatter rights but each man stood his ground so to speak.
So, Carlton came to what he thought was an adequate compromise and decided to auction off the saw. "Well it got hot and heavy but finally we auctioned it off to the highest bidder," Carlton said.

And Carlton got his first shot at being an auctioneer while the school system picked up a little extra money.
Oh, yes, the saw that originally had a price tag of $50 was sold for about $200.

Those visiting the Seminole County School Board office may have noticed a brochure entitled "A Look at Seminole County Schools."

The new color brochure gives a detailed look at the county school system covering everything from financing, food service and a list of all the county schools.

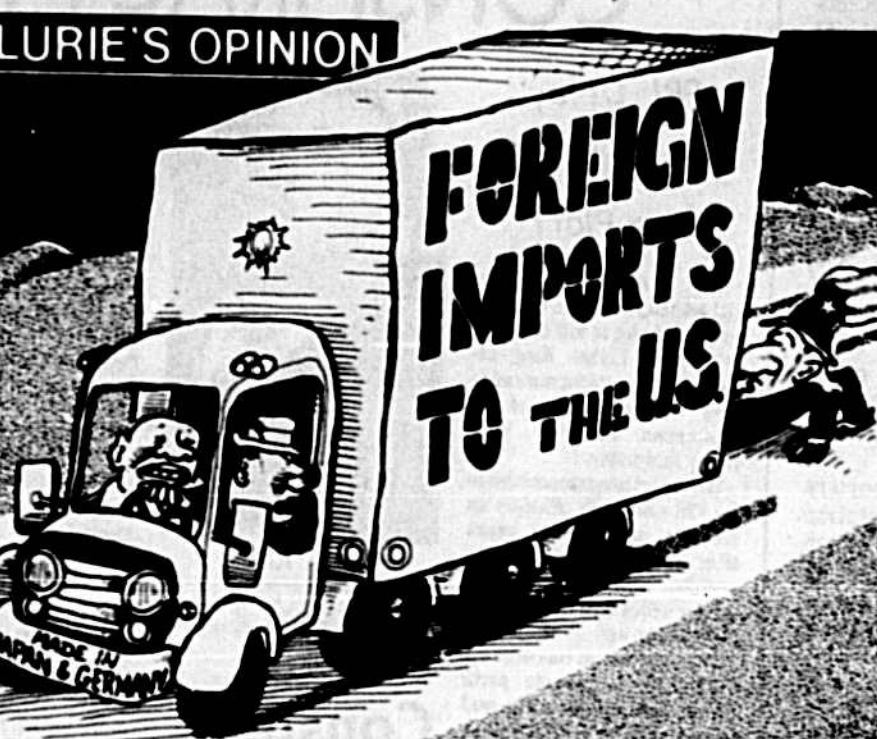

The school system ordered 5,000 and paid about $1,000, according to Ralph Ray, public information officer.
So far about 3,000 have been delivered and the rest will not arrive until after the school elections this fall.

The brochures have been distributed free to all county schools, non-profit organizations and chambers of commerce.

Ray noted the brochures will also be made available to real estate officers which will have to pay 25 cents for each one.

One interesting sidelight of the brochures is the portrayal of the school board members. To identify the members, a card is shown with the members' names and district number.

The one interesting aspect to this is the cartoon character of newly-appointed member Roland Williams. Williams is pictured peaking out from behind his card and, lo and behold, Williams, a black man, is depicted with a white face.
Well, I guess that shows that even a professional-looking brochure, no matter how much is spent will still contain some mistakes.

'YOU'RE RUINING OUR TIRES!'

LURIE'S OPINION

Science World Sunship Is Suggested

LONDON—An idea is now floating through scientific circles that seems so obvious it's a wonder no one ever thought of it before.
It's a proposal for a dirigible covered with solar cells which would power it economically and efficiently over those vast stretches of the world richer in sunshine than in currency.

The idea was put down in its most concrete form thus far by two British engineers who foresee the day when airplanes cruise along at 60 miles an hour or so carrying tons of freight to the arid regions of Africa, Arabia, South America and, perhaps, Australia.

The technology is already available, according to Gabriel Khoury of Imperial College and Edwin Mowforth of Surrey University.

In an article in New Scientist, they point out that solar energy is the only alternative energy source that can be reliably used on vehicles without a cumbersome storage system. And of all the vehicles that operate over long distances terrain only one has a large enough surface area for significant power to be generated by solar cells alone.

The airship.
Combining these two creates what they call a "sunship." There is a third essential of the sunship—large geographical areas of clear skies, lots of sunlight and light winds as well as fairly flat terrain or, at least, a terrain that would permit operation at under 3,000 feet above sea level.

North Africa and the Arabian Peninsula have winds of less than 10 miles an hour for over 300 days a year. These are large undeveloped areas that the sunship could provide immediate relief to the remotest areas without the need for expensive construction of roads and airfields.

Although it has been conceived as a hot climate vehicle, the solar principle could be applied with advantage to provide secondary power in less favorable climates, the authors claim.

VIEWPOINT

Good Start In Bonn

It wasn't on the agenda.
And it does not, at least directly, have anything to do with economics.

But the agreement on joint action to counter skyjacking could well turn out to be the most meaningful development of the seven-nation Bonn economic summit.

At this point, there really isn't much to it — merely a three-paragraph statement in which the seven leaders express their concern over terrorism and hostage-taking and pledge their governments to halt air traffic to and from countries failing to deliver up skyjackers and skyjacked aircraft promptly.

It could, however, mark the real beginning of an effective international program to bring under control a problem which so far has defied efforts at solution by international bodies up to and including the United Nations.

There are already in existence a number of multilateral agreements on air piracy. Specifically, conventions adopted by the International Civil Aviation Organization in Tokyo (1963), the Hague (1970) and Montreal (1971) defined the crime, national jurisdiction and obligations in prosecuting or extraditing offenders.

Their weakness is that the focus is on the countries in which skyjackers seek haven, with companies remaining vulnerable. And, most important, the really crucial nations — those prone to provide shelter — have declined to join the team.

The Bonn declaration is the first to commit its parties to meaningful sanctions. The seven nations do not control world air commerce. But, just as they carry the most economic clout in the non-Communist world, so are they more equal than other in the airways.

Their severing of air connections would not in itself bring the government of Algeria or Libya — the two most countries especially hospitable to skyjackers in recent years, particularly if they happen to be Palestinian or sympathizers — to its knees. But it would hurt, and it would brand an offender as no carefully vague U.N. resolution is likely ever to do.

Details of implementation are still to be worked out. And there is some bad news with the good. It is agreed that to be effective, the compact can allow no exceptions. It must apply to all aircraft, including those in international countries by people seeking asylum in the West.

There was no advance preparation. The suggestion was dropped into the Bonn discussions almost off the tops of their heads by Prime Ministers Takao Fuda of Japan and Pierre Trudeau of Canada.

It was a particularly gratifying development for the United States, which had been thinking of pushing for similar action in the United Nations but had no hope of getting it through.

Indisposed in a bit of diplomatic hyperbole, President Carter soon the skyjacking declaration as alone "won't solve the entire preparation and conduct of the summit."

Target: 2,000 'Nuisance' Tires

By LEONARD KRANDORF
Herald Staff Writer

What do you do with almost 2,000 tires you do not own?
This is the question faced today by Mr. and Mrs. John Freeman of 461 Melville Ave. in Sanford.

The question arose this week when a lot owned by the couple on which some 2,000 tires are stacked was cited as a health hazard by the city.

Additionally, the Seminole County Health Department has found the presence of the tires and the mosquitoes breeding inside constitute a "sanitary nuisance," according to Val Robbins, county sanitarian.

He added that notice has been sent to the owners saying they have 14 days to alleviate the problem.

However, Mrs. Freeman said today she was notified Wednesday by the tire's owner that he would begin removing them from the property today.

The city told the couple they can appeal to the city commission and if turned down have 10 days from that meeting to correct the problem.

Mrs. Freeman, co-owner of the property, said the couple was aware of the problem and was trying to do something about it.

She noted the lot had been rented to a man about six months ago who was in the business of collecting old tires and then retreading them. The renter recently left without notifying the couple, Mrs. Freeman said.

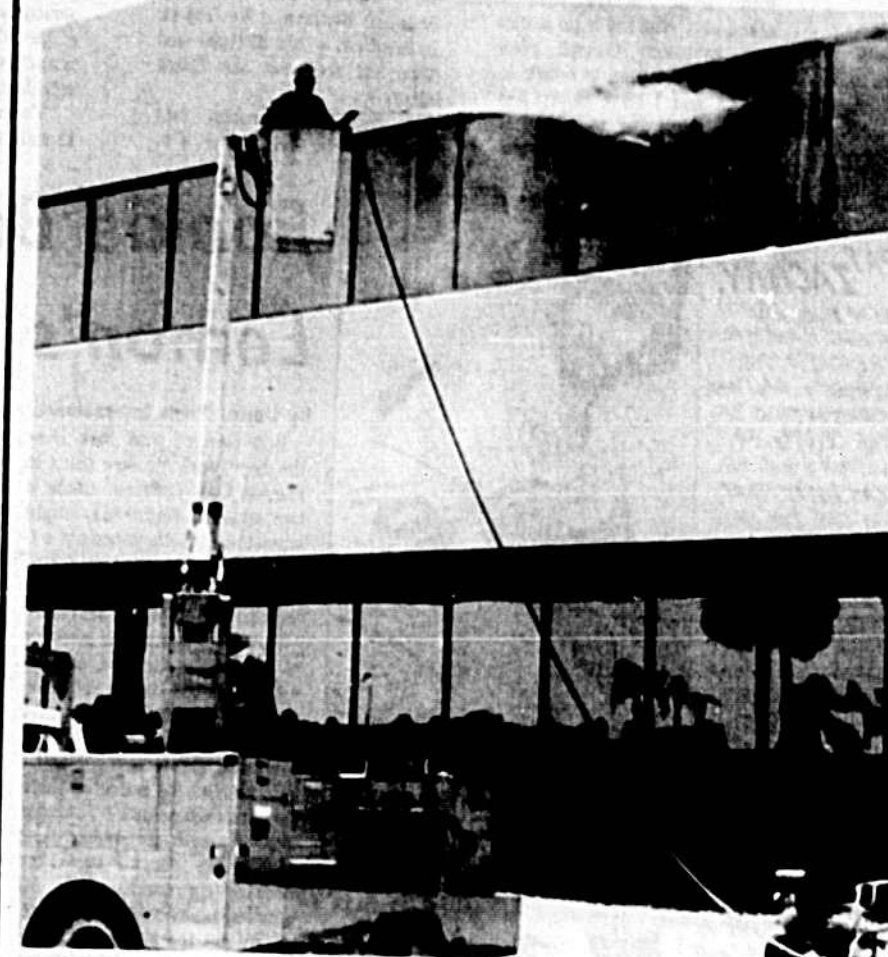

"We were under the impression he was supposed to stack the tires and cover them so there wouldn't be a health hazard, but obviously he didn't do that," Mrs. Freeman said.

She added that because both she and her husband work during the day it may take a little while to remove the tires. She said they have a chemical that can be sprayed on the tires that could kill the larvae and provide a temporary solution.

"We will try to get them out of there as soon as possible, but it's hard to get rid of that many tires," she said.

Public Works Director Bob Kelly noted the couple could ask the city commission at its next meeting for an extension.

Kelly added that as far as he knows there is no place to dump the tires in the city.

In And Around Winter Springs VFW Lists Events For Raising Funds

Jr. Vice Commander Bill Mayo of the Winter Springs VFW Post, appeared before the Ladies Auxiliary at their last meeting to bring them up to date on the 1978-'Let's get ourselves a Post Home-campaign'.

Mayo told those present that negotiations for the parcel of land adjacent to the city's recreation building had broken down, and it would not be in the best interests of the Post to purchase that particular property.

He added, "The Post finances are in good shape and we are looking for a piece of property in the Winter Springs — Longwood area suitable for our needs."

In other business, chairman for the various committees in the Ladies Auxiliary announced forthcoming fund raising events to meet the obligations in their various areas.

He added, "The Post finances are in good shape and we are looking for a piece of property in the Winter Springs — Longwood area suitable for our needs."

Nov. 3 was chosen by youth activities chairman Mary Howell to hold a pancake breakfast to aid her various projects.

Ruddy puppies will be sold in designated areas by the Ladies Auxiliary on Nov. 10 and 11, according to Buddy Poppy chairman Bayler.

It was also announced that Barbara Seried was appointed co-chairman of the Post and Auxiliary Blood Bank program. Donna Kay Bayler was appointed a delegate to the Veterans and Patriotic Council. These ladies have set a formidable task ahead of themselves, but judging from past performance, they will meet the challenge.

The 1978-79, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bellamy, 612 W. 18th St., Sanford. The bridegroom's parents are Gordon Richard Reid, El Portal Drive, Sanford, and Mrs. Faye Deane of Farmer's Beach, Texas.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a white bridal satin gown overlaid with chiffon. Hand embroidered Chantilly motifs were appliqued over the gown and train. An European style headpiece covered in matching lace secured her fingertip veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of white miniature roses and carnations showered with lace streamers.

Becky Halls attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a mint green gown. Her bridesmaids were a spray of mint carnations and she carried a bouquet of spring blossoms.

Bridesmaids were Becky Halls, Mary Ann Fontana, Linda Fontana, Laurie Oranahy and Angel Ballash. Each wore pastel gown with matching flowers in her hair and carried a matching bouquet.

Lewis (Butch) Counts served the bridegroom as best man. Usher-groomsmen were Jimmy Bellamy, James Dycus, Richard Forbes and Jeff Thompson.

The reception was held at the parish house.

Following a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the newlyweds are making their home in Sanford. The bride is employed by Dr. W. Vincent Roberts and Dr. Stephen H. Phillips. The bridegroom is the owner of Reid's Automotive Garage.

Programs Offer Training For Jobs

People from all walks of life are realizing that continued education, in all fields, has become an important factor in present day living.

Soaring inflation, the high cost of most services, has created conditions which make it almost impossible for a single wage earner to support his family as he was once able to do, in what was considered a normal standard of living.

Two wage earners in one family is fast becoming the new way of life by necessity, and because of this trend, vocational and technical colleges are being looked at with serious interest by many prospective wage earners.

The opportunities offered by Seminole Community College (SCC) for continued education in a practical way, are many and varied. Programs that each a trade, to programs that offer students degrees, for professional careers are available at all times.

Fully equipped labs facilitate the process of learning enabling instructors to teach practical application in various fields. The Division of Personal and Public Services offers programs which include: Child Care, Fire Fighting Services, Fashion Design, Health, Child Day Care, to name but a few.

Information concerning any or all of the programs offered may be obtained by calling 323-Design, Data Processing, 1550, Est. 228, or writing Ornamental Horticulture, Registrar.

Eat Lightly If You Have Hiatal Hernia

DEAR DR. LAMB—I have recently been in the hospital with X rays. They show I have a hiatal hernia. Every time I eat I feel bloated and cannot sleep because of a smothering feeling. I get a wedge for my head to elevate my head and take Gevason tablets after meals and also a Valium. My doctor did not give me a diet to go by. Also, I have been seriously constipated and seem not to be able to get relief except from an enema.

Will I always feel this bad? I'm 47 and weigh about 130. I'm 5-foot-6. All my weight is in my stomach and waist. I am so uncomfortable and just drag around all day. The doctor did not explain what this is and what I can expect. So I can get to feeling better and become a wife and mother again.

DEAR READER—A hiatal hernia literally is a rupture of a portion of the stomach through the normal hole in the diaphragm. The hole gets enlarged and the portion of the stomach slides in and out of the large hole.

When a portion of the stomach slides through the hole into the chest cavity it affects the normal closing mechanism so that the contents in the stomach can leak backward into the lower esophagus. That's why girdles, tight belts and any other tight garments are forbidden. It also should be obvious propping up the head of the bed is advisable, although some people do use a wedge.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-4, Hiatal Hernia. Esophageal Reflux to give you more information about what the hernia is and what you can do in your daily life and the types of meals you can use to help you out.

Hiatal hernia is a very frequent problem and other readers who want this issue can send 30 cents with a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope for me to care of this newspaper. P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10101. I am also sending you The Health Letter number 3-1, Irritable or Spastic Colon and Constipation to give you a program for this problem.

Your bloating and swelling may not be related to your hiatal hernia in view of your comment. I doubt being constipated. Rather it may indicate the presence of a spastic or irritable colon and gas problem.

Your doctor didn't give you a special diet for a hiatal hernia because it doesn't always matter quite so much what you eat as long as you don't eat very large meals.

HOSPITALITY: 'INCREDIBLE' impressed with the young guide, chaperone Mrs. Harry Psyche and her daughter (center) of Forest City, invited him to Florida as their guest, an invitation he readily accepted. Lake Branley High School Principal Darwin Bosche (right) presented Valdivia with a tee shirt, followed by a tour of the spacious high school. Obviously impressed was the University of Mexico senior; his comment — "It's incredible!"

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE ODOM

For Friday, July 28, 1978

YOUR BIRTHDAY: July 28, 1978. You should take positive steps this coming year to strive for several things that might have appeared difficult to obtain heretofore.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 19): Fault finding will delay any progress you hope for in your work today. Don't be a part in any hypochondria or disappointed behavior.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19): In social situations today, take care what you tell another. You may not know it but you could be saying the wrong things to your detriment.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20): Unrestrained family topics that get everyone uptight might make a shoving match today. Nothing will be gained except frustration.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): None of your natural talent will be able to come through and projects will be more difficult today if you're too negative about something you're working on.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby and Albee Jacobs

Some 60 years ago the late Norman Ramsey of Boston reached three notrump on the simple bidding system of the book.

Other words, he bid it. West was allowed to hold the first trick with his queen of hearts, but Norman had to get his bid on East's line when the suit was continued.

He cashed his ace of diamonds, ordered West to lead the king of clubs and lost the diamond finesse to West's doubleton queen. Three more hearts left him one trick short.

The hand was dealt in the finals of the Resinger team of four. The bidding at the other table was long, arduous, optimistic and unending with South eventually landing at six notrump against that same heart lead.

AGUE looked over the dummy unhelpfully, but finally saw that there was a chance. He broke up with slam because he said I wouldn't let him go out with the boys as often as he wanted to.

Downtown Facelift: Sanford Group Names Coordinator For Next Phase Of Restoration Plan

By LEONARD KRANSORF
Herald Staff Writer

Buildings in downtown Sanford are "in good shape but just need a little painting, need to be cleaned up a bit or just a minor facelift."

These are the words of Gerry Gross, a Winter Park architect and contractor who was selected Thursday to coordinate the next phase of the downtown restoration project.

Gross, 31, will have specific duties to perform during a 30-day probationary period and his success in those areas will determine whether he is hired on a permanent basis, according to Sara Jacobson, who along with Shirley Moak has served as project manager for downtown restoration on behalf of the Greater Sanford Development Corporation, Inc.

Gross will evaluate the designs and cost figures which have been developed for the 11 buildings targeted for restoration. Additionally, he will meet with the property owners to develop a schedule for the restoration.

If these are accomplished, the board will have the option of hiring Gross at an amount not exceeding $8,000 for his work in the project.

The property owners will have the option of using Gross' services as a contractor or going to another contractor. However, Gross will still serve as the coordinator.

Gross will be moving his Winter Park office to Sanford. He has bought the Garrett Building in downtown Sanford and will move into the second story of the building "in the next few days."

"I just found that Winter Park and Orlando were just not offering me anything to date," said Gross, commenting on the move.

Gross also intends to start immediately to restore the building to its 1910 condition.

For Gross, who has been an architect for eight years and a contractor for two, this will be the second restoration of a city he has been involved with. "I've recently finished a similar restoration at Haines City," he noted.

He added that once the Sanford work is completed, "it will be a

The Plan: Speeding Up Emergency Services

By MAX ERILETTAN
Herald Staff Writer

Rural areas lend themselves to a lifestyle different than urban areas. They are said to be generally more peaceful and removed from tension.

They are also removed from highly technical medical facilities which might mean the difference between life and death in an emergency situation.

However, the "gap" between emergency services for urban and rural areas may be closing in Seminole and four other counties in east central Florida. The Department of Health.

The money is directed to be used where it is most needed.

Education and Welfare is pouring $21,211 into Seminole, Volusia, Broward, Orange and Osceola Counties for the development of an emergency medical services program which would cut response time and ensure better emergency treatment to those needing it.

The East Central Florida Regional Emergency Medical Services Council (REMESCO) will administer the program through the five counties. REMESCO is a non-profit agency with three Seminole County representatives serving on its board. They are Drs. Benjamin Neuman, Robert Gay and county Public Safety Director Gary Kaiser.

Suppose you are involved in an auto accident while driving through a rural area not served by a major hospital? The seriousness of your injury, or several medical problems may dictate you deserve more than routine care.

The program being set up is designed to insure that the emergency vehicles which serve you and the personnel who treat you can deliver you to a major burn center, you would like to have a vehicle that will give treatment on the way if necessary," said Nicholas Nich, HRS project director.

"Instead of an ordinary ambulance when you have a burn victim you want to transport to a major burn center, you would like to have a vehicle that will give treatment on the way if necessary," said Nicholas Nich, HRS project director.

Most of the ambulance uses will be transporting patients with special medical needs, according to Nich.

"The money is directed to be used where it is most needed," said Nich. "These are the monies which are hardest to get local support for."

MACK LAZENBY WITH DAMAGED WATER METER AND RATE BOOK

Break It, You Pay?

The city of Sanford spends an estimated $2,000 a year to repair damaged water meters which often are vandalized by property owners to repair or pay for repairs to damaged water meters.

But if that city official, Mack LaZenby, city engineer and utility director has his way, the permit to install the meter is in his hand, the account is in his hand, the bill is in his hand, the meter is in his hand, the water is in his hand, the city is in his hand.

LaZenby is preparing a policy program he said he'll present to city commissioners for approval — one which will require property owners to repair or pay for repairs to damaged water meters.

It's just disgusting to know that people would do something like this," said LaZenby. "These few who do it could make it bad for the rest."

Chlorine Gas Routs 1,000, Injures 27

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) — At least 27 people, including three fire chiefs, were injured and nearly 1,000 evacuated today as a cloud of lethal hydrogen chloride gas sprang from a railroad tank car derailed over a semi-residential area on the west side.

Police Information Officer Mike Gould said most of the injured from inhaling the poisonous fumes were not in serious condition. They were treated at six Jacksonville hospitals.

The leak occurred when a worker, identified as Sam Smith, opened the lid on the tank car about 7 a.m. Smith reportedly suffered a burned throat when he inhaled the toxic fumes.

Robert Webb, vice president of Union Camp Corp., said the gas was escaping from a 30,000-gallon capacity car owned by Dow Chemical Co.

The Sanford Police Department — 11 Days Later

By DENNIS FIEDLA
Herald Staff Writer

It has been less than two weeks since the surprise firing of Sanford Police Chief Wallace LaPeters and since then some major changes have taken place within the department.

Three administrative officers of the department say the changes have improved morale, efficiency and police protection in the community.

The changes were initiated by Mayor Warren E. Knowles who has personally taken charge of police and

"This city was virtually without police protection during certain hours"

The administrative division of the department has been cut from six to three persons including Mayor and two captains. Lt. Paul Whitley and administrative aide Steve Harriott serve in that capacity along with Harriott.

"I think the citizens are receiving more service and protection" read and are responsible for the patrolling men during their shift.

The other shift commanders are Lt. Richard Housley and Lt. Doug Bishop.

The third administrative officer transferred was patrolman Richard Beaman. Under LaPeters he was "The changes initiated by Mr. Knowles and his staff only serve efficiency," Harriott said.

Transferred out of administrative duties are Lt. William Bishop, Russell and Edward Brown. Russell was in charge of community relations before being discharged. Russell's successor is William Bishop.

Harriott also is working as a shift commander. He was serving as head of the records department and he was responsible for administration of the police building. Thursday four shift commanders, who often work on the
