CHAPTER I

"I got gyarden on de haill, all you missis! Gyarden on de haill—I got gyarden on de haill..."

The black girl, balancing a basket of white camellias on her head, threaded her way through the hilarious throng, swinging her malarious, withered legs in the air, and to the right of the other vendors, for the Mardi Gras was at the height, and tomorrow the fabulous Proteus Ball would be the festivities in a blaze of glory.

The business streets were filled with a picturesque hodgepodge of vendors, well-groomed, horse-drawn, holding back their spritely steeds in the slow moving traffic, exchanging halcones were fed with flags and bunting, and the gayest elegants and ladies in the city, wearing gowns of 1850, moved among the humber holiday.

"The quality folks" of New Orleans had been asked to an "evening reception" at the stately mansion of General Bogardus, at which his unpredictable ward, Miss Mardou, was to announce her engagement to Preston Dillard, the banking firm of Dillard and agies! Funtality, I always say, as my mother said before me, is the politeness of queens!"

"Politeness, darling, has never been one of Julie's virtues!"

"I surely sympathize with Pres Dillard! Such a gentleman! Oh, how I wish I could see him, dear boy! I'm this excited! I think your brother is the luckiest man in the whole world, really! Tell me, Ted, wasn't Mr. Cantrell just crushed at losing her?" Ted's loyish grin changed to a scowl. "Bud Cantrell!" he said coldly. "I'd take more than any girl to crush Bud! Look at him over there now, makin' 'em rear! Does he look crushed!"

Julie, at the moment, was dismounting in front of the house. Twenty, slim and imperious, wearing the graceful riding habit of the period, she ran lightly up the steps and entered the great hall. "Praise be, Miss Julie!" Uncle Cato cried. "Miss Belle been high onto a fit!" The matron maid pushed forward. "I done laid out yo' party dress, Miss Julie!" "Thanks, no, Zetta! Got to go in to my guests!" "Not in dem haws e'ers, Miss Julie!" gasped Uncle Cato.

Julie tossed her crop to him, flicked the train of her habit over

She loves him as the signet stone

Dillard, younger of the had been driving through the back streets with his horse-drawn, hard-drinking, Buck coach, who in the past had more than once been the accepted miler of the St. Charles and had made their way to the fashionable, where General Bogardus held them in his most courtly manner. Further on a group of more distinguished horses and drivers refused to let himself be drawn into the argument, De was a big-framed, swarthy, dark-skinned man, and several of the coming deal arranged, place and weapons of the time, ten that night, the slaying of the moon. Ted offered himself as Bud's traveling comrade, but it was himself who should have been the coach to his brother's house. As they left, General Bogardus gravely expressed his regret at the affair, and his conviction that the Leathers' was unworthy of the notice of a gentleman.

Bud and Ted arrived at the opulent rooms of the Leathers house a pair of horses, wearing harness and drivers, who were present—except Julie and her nurse, Miss Zetta. Julie was all but in tears when she saw her absence from the party. (To be continued tomorrow) her arm and entered the drawing room. "Good afternoon, everybody! Terribly sorry to be late! I had trouble with the coat. You all know when a coat gets high-headed, it's best to let it mangle itself, it's best to let it mangle itself now, or ruin him!"

Uncle Cato was passing obsequiously with a tinkling tray laden with toddies for the gentlemen and small glasses of sherry for the ladies and Aunt Belle noticed with dismay that Julie chose the former. Bud Cantrell raised his glass and said, smiling with crystal eyes, "To the very best health of the future Mrs. Pres Dillard!"

"Aren't you going to wish me happiness, too, Bud?" said Julie softly, her words lost in the din of voices. "What's the use?" he answered with a disconcerting grin. "You won't get it, marrying a trader, gals' up North!" "Pres is not a trader, Bud Cantrell, and I'll thank you to remember that!"

But she was surprised by Pres's continued absence.

From the way on the way to the back in the family vehicle, Aunt Belle by her side, protesting feebly. Julie sent Ted, the black boy, with a message for her father, telling him to come to her at once.

"Miss Julie, I done bid" him," said Ted miserably, wringing his woolly head. "But he say he ain't comin'—not for no party!"

Julie snapped that her tiny parcel, mailed from the carriage and was half-way up the back steps when Aunt Belle realized it.

"Oh, he he won't come, won't he!" she was saying to herself, as the great door banged shut behind her.

Chemical Process Used To Make New Fuel For Motors

NEW YORK—Several factories are going up in Europe to make synthetic the newest of the substitutes for gasoline as a motor fuel. The substitutes are being used increasingly in countries that lack the tenuous petroleum supplies of the United States.

The new fuel comes first from water gas. If this gas is allowed to flow over hot alkalal and iron, at nearly 900 degrees Fahrenheit and under great pressure, it forms an oily liquid. The pressure is 200 atmospheres or more than 2,000 pounds to the square inch.

The oil is called synthol. When this oil boiled under the right pressures some of its molecules "crack." They break down into the hydrocarbons which form explosive motor fuels.

These new gases are called synthones. When the process was discovered about 15 years ago, synthones contained too much oxygen. This is now cleaned out of the gas by adding hydrogen from catalysis.

Europeans hope that the new fuel will not cost so much as gasoline made from cheap grades of coal which have been in the market for years. In England the government promotes manufacture of this coal-gasoline as an economic and defense measure.

report on the 1938 revenue bill probably would be taken up in the Senate later today and, if approved, could be passed by the House tomorrow.

Some of President Roosevelt's supporters in Congress today proposed he stump the country this summer in an attempt to defeat legislators who have opposed his policies.

They cited the renomination last Tuesday of Senator Pepper, Florida Democrat, as evidence the power of the White House is still great at the ballot box, despite any insurgency in Congress.

Early in the Florida primary campaign James Roosevelt, the President's son and secretary, said that Pepper should be returned to the Senate.

Others were bestirred by the President on Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky and Senator F. Ryan Duffy of Wisconsin.

Administration supporters contend Pepper's victory demonstrates that Roosevelt should strike a bold course by carrying his policies directly to the country in the primaries as well as in the general election in the Fall.

"And they list her: HOUSEWIFE"

On census report, or tax return, she may be listed only "housewife," while her husband bears the more definite title of "lawyer," or "doctor," or "storekeeper."

But housewife hardly does this wife and mother justice. She is the modern Jill-of-all-trades. Her job includes being dietician, interior decorator, costume designer, gardener, chauffeur—not to mention educator and health authority.

How does she get away with it? She is informed! Just as her husband depends upon business news in this paper, she finds in the advertisements the latest facts and price quotations on all the materials needed for her various jobs.

Food for the family? Butcher and grocer answer on these pages. Curtains, spring dresses for mother and daughter, big covers? Department store and specialty shop get ready. She has preferences about fresh milk, cream, eggs and even motor oil—all determined by the persistent, intelligent reading of advertisements.

That's why, when she is listed officially "housewife," she can get the latest news and have time left over for her own recreation. (The advertisements on this page.)

ATTORNEY GENERAL CARY LANDIS DIES

Prominent Jurist Succumbs To Illness On 65th Birthday In Tallahassee Home

Had Been Confined To Bed Two Weeks

Official Had Played Prominent Part In Affairs Of Florida

TALLAHASSEE, May 10. —(AP) Attorney General Cary D. Landis died here today.

The Attorney General, 65 years old today, had been confined to his home for two weeks but his illness had not been considered serious.

Landis' successor will be appointed by Governor Fred P. Cone to serve until the next general election in November.

The nomination of a successor whose name will appear on the central election ballot may be either by the State Democratic Executive Committee or in a special primary.

Landis as attorney general handled many cases of major importance, the latest being the effort for Florida to collect $5,000,000 in inheritance taxes on the estate of the late Col. E. H. B. Green.

When he returned from his retirement he was 63 years of age.

Physical Education Director Is Visitor At City's Schools

Joe Hall, a member of the State Department of Education, was a visitor at Sanford schools today and conferred mainly with physical education directors and coaches at the various schools according to Superintendent of Schools T. W. Lawton.

In his conferences with the physical education directors, Mr. Hall, it was stated, developed plans for promotion of a letter and more extensive physical education program in the schools of the state and requested the co-operation of local directors in this direction.

Mr. Hall announced that for the first time a physical education course will be included in the curriculum for the summer session at the University of Florida. He encouraged all teachers to take this course regardless of the subjects they teach, particularly, he said, in elementary grades where there are no physical education directors.

Delegates Named By Jaycee Body To Miami Convention

Delegates to the annual Junior Chamber of Commerce convention to be held in Miami in June were appointed today at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Jaycees at the Valdez Hotel. It was reported by E. E. Laney.

Delegates appointed were Eddie Kirchhoff, Joe Davis, E. E. Laney, Andrew Carraway and J. E. Rowland.

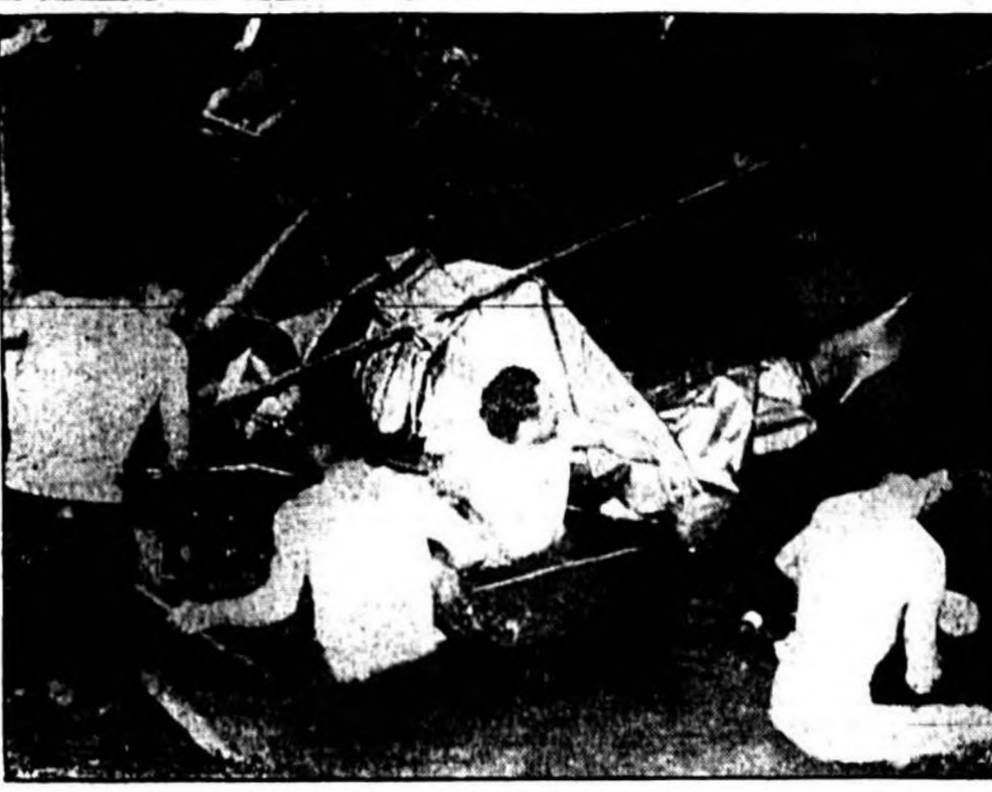

M. L. Rayburn had charge of the program, Mr. Laney said, adding that due to the fact that a speaker for the program was unable to present Mr. Rayburn entertained the Jaycees himself with a "Professor Fix" comedy.

In this contest Mr. Rayburn asked each of those present three questions. Those who missed one of the three were eliminated. The contest was continued until Joe Davis emerged the victor. A bottle of fix water was the prize. Albert Collins was appointed program chairman for next week.

49 Are Injured And Others Entombed In Wrecked Shafts

DUCKMANTON, Derbyshire, England, May 10. —(AP) Seventy-two miners were killed, 49 known to be injured and numbers of others were entombed in wrecked workings after two violent gas explosions in the Markham Coal Mine.

Sublime women gathered around the pithead as the dead and injured were brought to the surface. Scores of rescuers, stripped to the waist, fought through roof falls to reach the trapped men. The disaster was one of the worst in the history of British mining.

Ralph Wight Heads Group Purchasing Big Ranch Acreage

Ralph Wight confirmed today a report that he had purchased together with his son, Henry, and Walter Hand, 2,500 acres of land bordering Lake Jessup known as the old Humphrey Ranch, for $30,000.

Negotiations were handled by the Walter L. Cooper Agency, Mr. Wight said.

He reported that over 450 head of cattle had also been involved in the deal.

The property which has been held by W. E. Kirchhoff, Jr., owner of the Mayfair Hotel, and reputedly the largest grower of gladiolus bulbs in the United States, is said to be among the finest cattle land in the state. Lying on the shores of Lake Jessup, the land is said to be ideal for the purpose of cattle raising as grass is thick and luxuriant.

Mr. Wight said he, his son and Mr. Hand would incorporate as soon as the abstract has been checked and the sale made a matter of record.

Right-Of-Way Swap Is Given City Approval

Smoke Ordinance Is Discussed At Meeting Of Commission; Passage Deferred

The City Commission passed a resolution cancelling special assessments on certain property in the Country Club Road, Highway 100 and Geneva Avenue "at large" district as a result of the right-of-way swap between the City and the County Commission.

The action taken by the Commission at their regular meeting in the City Hall last night followed a recent request of the County Commissioners who attempted to get rights-of-way from property owners in these districts so that a WPA project for improvement of the streets could be submitted.

Property owners, however, refused to execute the necessary deeds unless the City cancelled outstanding special assessments against the property which is now outside the City Limits. The proposed project for improvement of the streets along with a drainage ditch in the section will be submitted jointly by the City and County Commission.

Considering mainly routine affairs, the City Commission heard the reading of a newly drafted ordinance prohibiting any firm or company from operating a boiler or steam engine from which smoke is issued in such a manner as to be considered a nuisance. The ordinance provided "black" or "grey" smoke could be termed a nuisance.

The ordinance was directed mainly at dry cleaners' plants. Several citizens had previously (Continued on Page Three)

Davis Withdraws From Race Giving Mathews R R Post

Decision Leaves Only One State-Wide Contest In 2nd Primary

TALLAHASSEE, May 10. —(AP) —Bruce Davis withdrew from the State Railroad Commission race today and thereby assured the re-nomination of Eugene S. Matthews.

Davis ran second to Matthews in the three-cornered contest in the first primary. The third man was W. E. (Buck) Hanceck of Maitland.

Davis' withdrawal left only one state-wide contest for the second Democratic primary on May 24. In this Elynn Thomas of Fort Lauderdale and J. Tom Watson of Tampa will run for Supreme Court Justice.

Davis sent a formal notice of withdrawal to Secretary of State R. A. Gray.

Reports from 1308 of the state's 1326 precincts in last Tuesday's first primary showed Matthews received 121,269 votes, Davis 81,314 and Hanceck 70,119. "I am withdrawing from the race at this time because it is financially impossible for me to continue," said Davis.

In addition to the Thomas-Watson runoff May 24, there will be a contest between Henry H. Files and Pat Cannon of Miami for the Democratic nomination for representative in Congress from the Fourth Florida District.

Overstreet Speaks At Oddfellows Meet

District Deputy Grand Master of the Tenth District Murray Overstreet was the guest speaker at the weekly meeting of the Oddfellows in the Lodge Hall last night, according to Secretary A. J. Lossing.

Mr. Lossing reported that over 20 members of the Ocoola Lodge of Klansmen were present at the meeting but that the degree rites of which the Ocoola Lodge members were to be in charge were not conducted because of the absence of the candidate. Refreshments were served and games were enjoyed following the Lodge meeting, Mr. Lossing stated.

Referendum To Be Held May 9 For Determining Potato Control Pact

A proposed marketing agreement and order to regulate the handling of Irish potatoes in designated early and intermediate producing sections of Florida and 12 other southern states will come before the growers in a referendum on May 9 to 14, according to an announcement made today by County Agent C. R. Dawson.

The proposed pact, according to the County Agent, will be similar in operation to the Celery Marketing Agreement now in effect and will operate under the General Crop Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1937.

Mr. Dawson stated that growers who desire to vote in the referendum may do so in his office during the designated period. He declared, however, that Seminole County growers, to date, have shown but little interest in the proposed pact since only a small quantity of potatoes is produced commercially in this county.

The proposed marketing agreement, which would apply to the next crop, has been tentatively approved by the secretary of an interstate marketing pact of potato growers held recently, at which time the pact was signed in the presence of Mr. Dawson.

Mrs. Herring Praises Work Of Local Boy

"Sanford should be proud of Oks Nordgren," said Mrs. George O. Herring of Washington, D. C., formerly of this city, in a recent letter to friends after a visit to the Corcoran Art Gallery where an exhibit of the oil paintings of Mr. Nordgren were exhibited last week.

"I want to see the Nordgren boy's exhibit. He has a whole span of it and it seems exceedingly good. Sanford should be proud of him," she said in her letter.

Mr. Nordgren is a graduate of Sanford High School and at the present time is an instructor at the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, D. C.

Sharon Addresses New Smyrna Elks On Mothers' Day

Delivering a tribute to mothers, James G. Sharon spoke at the Elks Mothers' Day services at 1:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Victoria Theatre in New Smyrna.

In concluding his address Mr. Sharon said: "When we come to make a proper survey of our mother's position in our human scheme of Christian society, we find it rising like a huge mountain above the undulating plains of humanity and we must raise our eyes high towards Heaven to catch its summit.

"Our mothers," Mr. Sharon declared, possess every virtue of the other members of the human race without their vice of selfishness and greed. She defends into the jaws of death that a new life might be born. She is a martyr without a cross; she is a nurse without her reward; she is a slave without her hope of liberty; she is an angel without her halo of glory.

"She is as gentle as a dove in her motherhood; she is as patient as a saint in her trials; she is as loving as a savior in her affection; and as brave as a lion in her courage."

Jap Armies Make New Attack On Vital Railway Center

Reverberation from wars in China, Spain, and Ethiopia dinned in the ears of the League of Nations Council members, along with British and French declarations in support of their "realistic" diplomacy.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate, asked the council to apply provisions of the covenant to give China aid against Japan.

He cited two resolutions, one by the assembly last October and another by the council in February, which recommended that League members consider individual cases.

"With one exception," he said, none of the League members had come to the aid of China. This was believed to be Soviet Russia.

Vicount Halifax, British foreign secretary, told the Council the recently negotiated Anglo-Italian agreement was a contribution to world peace—attaining the same objective as that for which the League was organized.

Georges Bonnet, French foreign minister, echoed Halifax' contention. But to Haile Selassie, fallen emperor of conquered Ethiopia, the British and French swing to realism meant almost certain defeat for his battle to (Continued on Page Three)

Reverberation from wars in China, Spain, and Ethiopia dinned in the ears of the League of Nations Council members, along with British and French declarations in support of their "realistic" diplomacy.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate, asked the council to apply provisions of the covenant to give China aid against Japan.

He cited two resolutions, one by the assembly last October and another by the council in February, which recommended that League members consider individual cases.

"With one exception," he said, none of the League members had come to the aid of China. This was believed to be Soviet Russia.

Vicount Halifax, British foreign secretary, told the Council the recently negotiated Anglo-Italian agreement was a contribution to world peace—attaining the same objective as that for which the League was organized.

BEYOND THE HORIZON

When men go down to the sea in ships,
The not to the sea they go;
Some lie or pole the mariners'
goal,
And thither they sail through calm and gale,
When down to the sea they go
When souls go down to the sea
by ship,
And the dark ship's name is Death,
Why mourn and wail at the van ishing sail?
Though outward bound, God's world is round,
And only a ship is Death,
When I go down to the sea by ship,
And Death unfurls her sail, Weep not for me, for there will be
A living host on another coast
To beckon and give "All Hail!"

With the possibility that only a handful of votes will be cast in the May 24 primary, at a late hour this afternoon it was anybody's guess.

Fortunately the wage-hour bill does not apply to farm labor. If it did, we are afraid most of the farmers would go to work for their employees.

Latest reports from the lower Main Coast indicate that Miami is being run by the Ku Klux Klan, and we thought that organization and gone out of existence years ago.

To read some of the comments on the recent senatorial election you'd think those 110,000 Florida citizens who voted for Mark Wilson were not people at all, and that all of them belong to the
"Dirty Families."

Many a person puts off paying his bill until he is actually convinced to send his check. But as far as we are personally concerned, we are always glad to get them from old customers as fresh new ones.

Senator Claude Pepper's great victory in Florida's primary election on Tuesday was a victory for the Atlantic Gulf ship canal.
We're the Ocala Star. We're afraid we are right. Seminoles County is the only place where any real progress was made.

Those Chicago parents who are trying to decide whether to return a tumor in their baby's eye should remember that while there is life there is hope. Sometimes another operation might give the child new eyes by some surgical miracle yet undiscovered.

One of the main difficulties of the railroads of the country is the operating costs are so high that when a railroad charges the necessary to pay operating expenses and leave fair return on the investment, people use the means of transportation and leave. Transportation and legislation travel are no longer a luxury, and the quickest way to increase the railroads is to increase operating cost and to limit the amount of the investment.
All the congressional legislation that has been passed in the past few years has been to increase the operating cost of the railroads.

China Fights Back

The natural sympathies of Americans are with the under-dog, and the case of Japan and China is no exception, for here is a situation where a military-impotent and peace-loving people is being attacked and invaded by a war-like nation possessing one of the world's finest fighting machines.

The predicament of the Chinese seemed hopeless when the legions of the Mikado began to hammer their way through Shanghai and northwestward to Nanking. The rest of the world became reconciled to an overwhelming victory and the complete subjugation of China.

In recent weeks the picture has changed and we find the Chinese standing toe to toe with the Japs and rocking them back on their heels in some of the most ignominious reversals ever suffered by Japanese troops.

The cause of this sudden change in the fortunes of war is ably discussed by the New York Times writer, Hanson Baldwin, who gives the following account of the war pictures in the Far East:

"The Japanese military machine continued to stall and sputter last week as Chinese guerrilla bands whacked at enemy communication lines and as Chinese mass armies, their strategy directed by German advisers, continued to interpose themselves between the invaders and the Lung-Hai Railway.

"The Cannae—or victory of annihilation for which the Japanese have long been seeking—again evaded them, and instead of smashing through to the east-west Lung-Hai line, goal of their armies for some four months, they apparently were rocked back on their heels by a series of minor Chinese successes.

"Thus, after ten months of war, the Japanese were not yet able to link their conquests in North China with the conquered Shanghai-Hangchow-Nanking area in Central China.

"Nor were the Japanese troubles confined to the northern front near Suchow, where one of the largest battles of the war had been expected last week. For Chinese guerrillas and partisans—soldiers one minute, peaceful peasants and laborers the next—were operating even in the outskirts of Peiping and Shanghai.

"Moreover, on the home front in Japan, there was apparently a growing realization of the difficulties of the task that Japan had undertaken; part of the bitterly fought National Mobilization Act with its governmental control of the life of the nation was invoked; more men were called to the colors and Japanese gold reserves fell as war imports increased.

"The Far Eastern dispatches, although largely negative in results achieved by either side, were all the more significant for that reason. For while time is precious to the Japanese it is nothing to the Chinese, and the longer the war can be protracted, generally speaking, the more favorable are the chances for ultimate Chinese victory."

Another Primary Coming

During the last campaign the Junior Chamber of Commerce did a fine piece of work in "getting out the vote." More than four thousand persons went to the polls in this county on May 3, a larger number, we believe, than in any previous primary or general election. Even so, there were some 1,600 persons in this county who were qualified to vote and did not do so.

Now we are wondering how many persons will take the trouble to go to the polls on May 24 unless some unusual effort is made to get them there. We are afraid the possibility exists that no more than a handful of votes will be cast, or at best 1,500 or 2,000, and under such circumstances no fair test of the wishes of the electorate can possibly be made.

In the first primary there was the excitement of a heated senatorial campaign to draw voters to the polls, and there was at least one local contest which in the last few days stirred considerable interest. It is such things, even more than the appeal to the voters to do their civic duty, which get out the vote. People naturally like a fight, and a good political fight always results in a heavy vote.

In the May 24 primary, however, no likelihood of any such political fight exists. The senatorial race is out of the way and only a couple of statewide contests involving the Railroad Commission and the Supreme Court remain, neither of which is likely to produce much fireworks. Locally there are two posts on the County Commission to be filled, and one representative to be named.

Now these County Commission posts are important, and so is the legislative position. The Commission, from the standpoint of the County's taxes, and the management of the people's affairs closest to home, is one of the most important political groups in the country. And the County's representation in the Legislature has a great deal to do with seeing that we get our fair share of school and road funds, as well as in passing proper state-wide laws.

But we are afraid that the importance of these offices will not be sufficient to get out the vote. There is not enough excitement connected with these races. There are not enough contests involved. The ballot is too short. There will probably be no flaming speeches made before the primary. And when the time comes to vote, half the people in the county may be too busy or too disinterested to go to the polls.

Something should surely be done to get out the vote.

AN OFFER OF $2250 FOR ANNOUNCING THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA TO THE KING AND QUEEN OF SPAIN, SET ADRIPT BY CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS IN A WATER-TIGHT CASK IN 1493-- HAS BEEN UNCLAIMED FOR 445 YEARS!

THE CASK HAS NEVER BEEN FOUND...

BASE RUNNERS WERE NOT REQUIRED TO TOUCH EACH BASE PRIOR TO 1864...

UNPAID REWARD There stands today strange as it seems, an offer of $2250 for anybody who will convey the important information to the King and Queen of Spain that America actually existed.

Christopher Columbus signed and sealed the offer 445 years ago but nobody, it seems, has been able to find the document of discovery and deliver it.

While returning to Spain on February 13 or 14, 1493, after his memorable first voyage to the New World, he concealed the odd plan to insure delivery of news of his work to the Spanish royal household.

Best by violent winds, Columbus realized there was a danger that his caravel might founder and carry to oblivion all the important data he had collected. He was so apprehensive that the "Pinta" had already gone down.

Columbus set to work, drafting two accounts of his discoveries, which he sealed hermetically in wax. To them he added an offer of 1,000 ducats to be paid anyone finding and delivering the message intact to Spain's rulers.

He placed the documents in two barrels, one of which he set on the deck. The other he threw overboard trusting that, someday, some unknown person might find the message on some lonely coast and carry out his instructions.

Strange as it seems, history has no record of the cask ever having been found. Of course, Columbus did reach his destination and was able personally to convey his amazing story to Ferdinand and Isabella.

Yet somewhere, today, lies Columbus' offer—possibly still intact and sealed in wax in a barrel. Its fate in all probability will forever remain a mystery.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—How much is a billion dollars? Senator Bulow of South Dakota, a shy and humble man, asked the question in the Senate when he arose for one of his almost-never speeches. He opposed the billion dollar naval bill. He was sure the Germans were not going to invade the United States—at least for a while.

"It may be said that we are in danger from Hitler," he said. "I am of German descent. My father and mother came from Germany. I want to assure the Senate that God is not going to tell Hitler to come over here and take us until he gets through taking the rest of Europe. That task is going to take him quite some time."

But let us get back to the billion. "When I first came to the Senate," said Bulow, "I heard reference to a billion dollars, and I did not know what the Senators were talking about."

"Then I got a notion that perhaps while I was in the Senate, I ought to get for myself a billion dollars, and I started to figure to see just how long I would have to be here in order to get a billion dollars. I soon discovered that I would have to be re-elected before that was brought about. (Laughter.)"

"I went home and got myself re-elected, and then did some more figuring, and when I got through I discovered that I would have to be here earning $10,000 a year as a Senator for 100,000 years before I would get a billion dollars. That was somewhat disturbing. It was discouraging. I was afraid some Republican would beat me before that time elapsed." (Laughter.)

PERISH THE THOUGHT While the Senate laughed Mr. Bulow got his breath and went right on:

"This morning I received a letter from a constituent of mine who apparently is very strong for the pending naval bill, and he wants me to vote for it. He said we needed what was called the 'Pinta' to carry our fleet."

WASHINGTON, D. C. (AP)—The Senate today voted to amend the evolutionary theory better than the existing law. It is the object of a search being conducted in England by Dr. John Patten of Yale University.

LOST OF LUCK VALENTINE, D. C. (AP)—A man who had been missing for a long time was found in a cave in the mountains of the United States.

MISSING LINK HUNTED MANILA, P. I. (AP)—The British navy, said to be the most powerful in the world, is hunting for a missing link in the chain of islands in the Philippines.

WORLD WAR CARRIER Pigeon Reaches 21 FORT MONMOUTH, N. J., May 10.—(AP)—"Kaiser," believed to be the last surviving World War carrier pigeon, lives here in the folds of the U. S. Signal Corps. He is now 21 years old, which is venerable for pigeons.

IN 1918 "Kaiser" alighted on the deck of a U. S. warship in the English Channel, bearing a German message. On his leg was a ring marked with the insignia of Kaiser Wilhelm's personal pigeon loft.

Recently the captive bird was found with a 1-year-old female pigeon. Two eggs hatched out naturally.

"Kaiser" was captured by Sergeant C. A. Patten, a pigeon fancier himself.

DISPELLING THE FOG

BY CHARLES MICHELSON Democratic National Committee

The haze that besets the Republican party in relation to a program or platform seems to have spread to the field of practical politics.

Dr. Glenn Frank, in his numerous speeches and proclamations, has with great clarity pointed out that something has got to be done and that President Roosevelt was once a good man and a statesman-like leader but isn't any more and that therefore the Republican party, in its effort at self-resuscitation, must do something vital, drastic and impressive, but is strangely reticent as to what this something ought to be. Let me interject at this point a quotation:

"The empirical quantum of the gravitational equation bridges the corporeals of the material exchangelogy by subliminal energy evolved counterclockwise out of analogical infinities." No, that is not from Dr. Frank, but from Professor Einstein. But it seems so applicable to the situation and so lucid in its failure to convey any meaning to the average person that I think the head of the Republican "Program" Committee ought to put it in his masthead.

However, it is with great interest that I observe the various suggestions made as to the policies of U. S. P. should adopt and follow in coming political battles. Now, Senator Arthur Vandenberg elaborated and elucidated the process he has in mind through a great many thousands of words. And he thinks he comes to the conclusion that in coalition lies the salvation of his party.

He carefully explains that by coalition he does not mean a third party, and of this coalition he says, with logic comparable to that of Dr. Frank, "I decline to anticipate its mechanism. The advisable mechanism will be dictated by the electoral necessities which we confront on the eve of the last round-up." He continued that it may remain wholly Republican, or nonpartisan, or part Democratic, or it may go to the extreme of requiring a new political entity.

Any Old Coalition Will Do Senator Vandenberg does not, of course, state in so many words that he doesn't like what he has in mind. He provides it rises to the opportunity of saving the country by nominating him for the Presidency.

With such a clear chart, there should be no difficulty whatever in coalescing—provided that the coalescees are available. It ought to be simple to coningle the liberal West with the Liberty League, according to the philosophy implicit in Dr. Frank's declarations, which paint a picture of something intended to be black to those who like sombre colors and vivid red to those who prefer livelier tints, and spolelessly white to whatever remainder objects to color of any kind. Incidentally, Senator Vandenberg, in his recent effort to suggest for the abstraction that he has in mind, "It is a coalition which would again bring Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson in partnership for the common good, precisely as they once cooperated to save America from Aaron Burr." President Roosevelt has, of course, been accused by his political foes of aspiring to be a dictator, as being bent on communism, and a few other little things of that sort, but this is the first time, I believe, that the President of the United States is presented as a prototype of the politician who was tried as a traitor.

That other proponent of Republican return to power, Mr. Frank Kent, has a little different thought. He suggests that the Republicans postpone their national convention in 1940 until September of that year. Then, in the event of the Democratic convention having nominated New Deal candidates, there could be held a rump Democratic convention consisting of anti-New Deal delegates to nominate a conservaative ticket. The Republicans, in their delayed convention, would "adopt verbatim the independent Democratic platform. This they would follow by nominating in the States the presidential electors nominated by the independent Democrats." In this way, the columnist figures the coalition would be avoided, the party labels would be preserved, and everything would be lovely.

It seems to me that something like this expedient was attempted, in reverse, in '36. It's a Great Thought Anyway. If my recollection is correct, a gentleman named Breckinridge ran as the anti-New Deal Presidential candidate in a few State primaries, with negligible results. Mr. Breckinridge was not nominated by the Republicans, but instead came out for Governor Landon.

In fact, there were several formerly eminent Democrats in the Liberty League crowd that year, which is perhaps partly accountable to the circumstance that Governor Landon was defeated by only 11,000,000 votes. Mr. Kent's brilliant thought, he says, resulted from a discussion by a number of Republicans and Democrats equally opposed to New Deal policies. Of course, we do not know whether these evangelists of the plan to make a Democrat the Republican nominee belong to that strange family of beings as "the President's intimate friend" and "close adviser" who figure so often in that columnist's articles, as disclosing to him the President's intimate thoughts—but the connotation does suggest their same phantom quality.

Incidentally, it might be rather difficult to get together the rump Democratic convention that appears in this fable. Nearly all of those who have opposed the President in Congress on individual measures have loudly proclaimed that they are progressive and staunchly in favor of the New Deal principles but object to particular details in the Roosevelt program.

However, why should a scintillating thought be circumscribed by mere improbability? And with the idea of helping "Kaiser" who of course, I suggest as the nominee of Mr. Kent's blue print convention the Hon. Henry Breckinridge of Kentucky and New York.

A camel has twice the carrying power of an ox.

Literature Group To Give Final Program

The Literature Department of the Sanford Woman's Club will present its closing program Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock at the Woman's Club.

The speaker of the afternoon will be Dr. H. C. Garwood, Professor of Bible and philosophy at Stetson University. His subject will be "The Place of Character in Education."

Dr. Garwood did his undergraduate work in Stetson University and received his Ph. D. at Yale University.

In commenting on Dr. Garwood, Mrs. E. D. Brownlee, who will introduce him at the Woman's Club, said: "He is a speaker of force and charm. Since the turn of the century there has been an increasing recognition among educators and educational leaders of the need of character education. The General Federation of Women's Clubs has approved studies in character building and crime prevention and has urged school authorities and clubs to give these subjects their special attention and support."

The special guests of the department on Wednesday will be the teachers of the Sanford city schools. The woman's Club has also extended an invitation to the general public to attend the program.

Circle Has Meet At Mrs. Roberts' Home

Circle Number One of the Baptist Church met Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. W. Roberts with Mrs. Roberts and Mrs. Sam Gardner as hostesses. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Roberts, circle chairman, and the devotional services were conducted by Mrs. J. E. Page. Several spiritual poems were read by Mrs. F. W. Stanley.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served to the following: Mrs. J. E. Page, Mrs. J. T. Newby, Mrs. Homer Little, Mrs. B. C. Moore, Mrs. Mary Hall, Mrs. F. W. Stanley, Mrs. P. P. Charlie Atwater Hurls Lookouts To 8 to 1 Win Over DeLand

Hudson Leads Lookout Attack With Double And Two Singles

Atwater Nicked For Only Six Hits While Mates Collect Total Of 12 Off Pair Of DeLand Moundsmen

Behind brilliant six-hit hurling by Charlie Atwater, the Sanford Lookouts blasted out an 8 to 1 decision over the DeLand Reds in Conrad Park last night.

The Lookout offensive power produced 12 hits off a pair of DeLand hurlers, Eddie Johns and Fred Dudek. They were paced by big Sid Hudson, Lookout first baseman, who doubled and singled twice in five appearances at the plate.

Atwater went the entire distance for the Lookouts. He was nipped for only six hits and he kept them well scattered. His less baseball behind him, he considered. He fanned three of the Reds and walked three others.

Sid Hudson led the hitting for the game and was followed closely by Joe Ruggiero who doubled and singled in five trips. Holland singled twice in five official trips and Buck Rodgers doubled and singled in five attempts.

Bob Jones, capable DeLand first sacker, captured second batting honors with a pair of doubles in three trips to pace his mates' attack.

Felding gems were displayed by Ray Clark, promising Lookout center fielder who made several neat catches in center field to rob DeLanders of possible extra base hits.

The Lookouts started the scoring activities in their half of the second inning when with one out, Holland was walked by Johns. He advanced to second on a passed ball by Ryan Hudson since a deep third base to send Holland to third. Buck Rodgers then tripled to deep center field to score both Holland and Hudson. Watts walked and Atwater grounded to Rutledge who threw Rodgers out.

From the Stage Play by Owen Davis, Jr. Produced by Harry Lee

THE STORY THUS FAR: During the Mardi Gras of 1850, New Orleans society is invited to the home of General Bogardus, where his selfish son, Miss Julie Marston, is to announce her engagement to the young banker, Fred Dillard. A former lover of the girl, Buck Cantrell, arranges a duel with De La Roche, a Creole, for disparaging remarks about her. Julie is breaking a coil and comes late to her party, appearing to the horror of the guests, in her riding habit. Because her fiancé is kept at a bank directors' meeting and misses the reception, she sends a negro with a message, commanding him to come to her. He refuses and she goes to get him in a rage.

CHAPTER II

"As I said before, gentlemen, the South is doomed to economic extinction, unless it is willing to compete with the enterprises of the Northern States—by building this railroad."

Young Fred Dillard was agreeably conscious that he was winning the conservative bank directors to his way of thinking, and when the bookkeeper tipped up behind him, picked his sleeve whispering that Julie was outside he flung with embarrassment, and covered himself as well as he could.

"Well, Mr. Dillard," Julie said with quiet menace, "Are you coming with me... or am you not?"

"Julie, honey, try to understand! This is so important!"

"I came up here to—to—" He realized that he could not go through with it. "Oh, Julie, honey," he pleaded, "how long must we go on like this... fighting like children?"

"Why do you treat me like a child then?"

"Because you behave like one—a spoiled one!"

"You used to say you liked me like that!" she pouted, retreating ever so slightly. "You never want me to grow up, you said... remember?"

"Julie!" He remembered only too well, and took her in his arms. "Want to see my new dress?" she asked sweetly, "the one I got to wear to the Proteus Ball? You see it is, on the bed! Isn't it lovely?"

"But Julie, honey, do be reasonable..."

"I suppose it isn't important," she retorted, with narrowing eyes, "I'll have my maid bring my ball dress made for tomorrow night—and that you promised to come and see it fitted. In fact, I don't suppose that it's important what I wear to the Proteus Ball. It's only you that's important! I don't suppose Mr. De Cour and the rest of the big business, could possibly get along without you?"

"Julie—right now I'm having the fight of my life in there—a grand fight! I've got to get back here along now, and later tonight I'll come to you and we'll—"

Julie left in fury, drove to her dressing room, ordered a villainously red dress to be delivered that evening—in spite of Aunt Belle's protestations—and ordered the black dithers to take them home.

Fred Dillard was accosted by the Livingston, eldest of the directors, after the meeting ended, he ventured to say that in his day a man who had the sort of trouble he was evidently having with Miss Julie, would not be a nobody, see it in her, grasp the wits and then say her a diamond speech!

Determined to be firm, Fred hastened to Julie's home, where his own attitude was highly approved by Aunt Belle and the General.

The perturbed young man bounded up the stairs, his eyes walking back still in his hand, and knocked at Julie's bedroom door. He called her, called again, but got no answer. Julie, in a tresser of malicious delight, was spreading the red dress on her bed.

As he opened the door the woman came. "Why, Fred Dillard!" she exclaimed, "Knocking at a lady's door! I'm scandalized at you!" He was grabbing his hat, his face white with confusion, when she made the fatal discovery, that if he did not go in now he would be the greatest scoundrel in the city. "Well," she cried, "I'll see you come up here tonight to stand!"

"But, Julie," he gasped, "it's—it's real! You never saw an unmarried girl there in anything but white! You know that! It's only custom, I know—but you're a position to maintain and—"

"Oh!" she was suddenly scornful. "Will you please hold another directors' meeting, so they may decide what I can wear?"

"Julie, for heavens' sake be reasonable!"

"Were you reasonable this afternoon?"

"So that's it, is it? Nursing your spite!" He gripped her arm.

"Well, I'm not going to let you! I am calling for you tomorrow night at ten—and you're going to be properly dressed for the ball—in white!"

"Am I?—Oh, of course, Mr. Dillard, if you say so!"

The moment he was gone she sat down at her desk and began to sew a note to Buck Cantrell. She was sure he would not have left his home yet for the place of the duel, but commanded Sette, the mulatto girl, to deliver it to him with all speed. Some time later Buck might have been seen with the letter in his hand, and Ted, rushing down to the gate to meet him. Then, in a whisper, "Did you—kill him?"

"She's Min Julie," he answered, "I don't rightly follow you. I never did him that bad! By King—that red dress of yours! It's like a home ache!"

"That he became serious. "Min Julie—what you want me for, say now!"

"I want you to take me to the Proteus Ball!"

Don't Blame the Car

Less than 10 per cent of the fatal and non-fatal crashes on our highways last year were caused by mechanical failure, according to The Travelers Insurance Company's analysis of the 1937 automobile accident experience.

In more than 90 per cent of the accidents, the vehicle was found to have been in apparently good condition. The trouble lay in human failure.

In the vast majority of cases it is the driver or the passenger and not the car that causes accidents.

Fear Of Reprisal To Be Safeguard During Next War

Retaliation In World War For Atrocities Taught Its Lesson

By DEVON FRANCIS

When bombing planes roar over populous cities in "the next war," they probably will spare the rules of national and even treaties of art.

It will not be a matter of international courtesy. The "niceties" of modern warfare are dictated by fear of reprisal.

A my man acquainted with what are known loosely as the "rules of war" have discounted in advance the need for the elaborate precautions being taken for protection of Europe's royal families and certain of the dictators in the event of bombing raids.

The British mission now in the United States for the ostensible purpose of buying warplanes wants to insure the safety of munitions dumps and wharves, not of Buckingham Palace.

The World War taught its lessons in indiscriminate bombing. Retaliation was swift and world opinion outraged.

Kaiser Wilhelm himself issued strict orders that such places as the residence of King George, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's cathedral and the residential sections of London should not be bombed by zeppelins, even accidentally.

Allied warplanes had ample opportunity to drop explosives on the field headquarters of the German high command. Sometimes the Kaiser visited Field Marshal von Hindenburg in the latter's quarters. The intelligence services knew when it occurred. So did the Allied high command. But the head of the imperial empire and the man who established the "Hindenburg line" went untouched.

On April 13, 1915, the Zeppelin LZ-55 was ready to set out on a raid over supply centers behind the British lines—Cassel, St. Omer and Hasebroeck.

"Just before departing, the commander, Captain Mealus, was handed a telegram in code," wrote the late Capt. Erns Lehmann, veteran airship commander, in a book published in 1927. "By direct order of the Kaiser the attack on St. Omer was forbidden and Poperinghe substituted. The reason was soon made known."

Headquarters had received word that the Allied leaders were to hold a secret meeting at St. Omer and the kings of both Belgium and England were to be present.

By tacit understanding, munitions never became the conscious target of airmen.

World indignation when the Germans rained London and killed civilians with bombs from the air was instantaneous, while British warplanes made immediate reprisals on German cities.

Experts in wartime propaganda were "inclined to discount" also, some of the terrifying prophecies of destruction growing out of practices in the Spanish and Sino-Japanese wars.

Whether a bombing is an "atrocious," they point out, depends largely on the point of view.

During the World War both the Allies and their enemies tried placing hospitals, liberally marked with Red Crosses, next to ammunition dumps—so placed the ammunition. Seldom did either side get away with it. Stray bombs landed for the dumps hit the hospitals, and propaganda "atroc-

HOW SANFORD'S BOAT DAY BECAME HISTORY

"She's comin'." That excited cry from children watching for the first sight of smoke heralded the arrival each Monday of the steamer Darlington from Jacksonville during the 70's.

Those who came to watch the boat dock searched faces of new arrivals for those of friends or relatives and pressed anxiously around the postmaster hoping for news-bringing letters. They lingered to watch with more than passing interest the unloading of freight consigned to Doyle and Brantley's General Store, supply headquarters for all of Central Florida.

They were eager for this one link with the outer world. It meant more abundant living. And eager in working for abundance, Sanford people built the world's celery center, a leading citrus district, a number of industries, a vacationland prized by discriminating people. Daily railway, bus and boat schedules were inaugurated. "Boat Day" became history. But the eagerness for more abundant living goes on.
