BRIEFS

Road work under way

CASSELBERRY — Construction work has now begun at the intersection of U.S. Highway 17-92 and SR-436 in Casselberry. The intersection is considered as one of the busiest in Seminole County during peak traffic hours with an estimated 120,000 vehicles passing on an average day last year.

Most of the work will involve resurfacing of approximately 2,500 feet in either direction on 17-92.

The Department of Transportation said the contractor is only being allowed to close lanes between 9:30 p.m. and 5:30 a.m. No lane closures at all are anticipated during the first days of this week.

The project is expected to take nearly six months to complete.

Turfgrass seminar

SANFORD — The University of Florida Cooperative Extension Service will be holding a Turfgrass Seminar and Field Day beginning Tuesday, May 9, for professional turf managers and maintenance personnel.

The free seminars will begin at 8 a.m., at Sylvan Lake Park in Sanford.

For additional information, contact Dr. Cathy Neal at 323-2500, ext. 5551.

Lake Mary P&Z

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary Planning and Zoning Board will meet Tuesday, May 9, beginning at 7 p.m. Items listed on the agenda include a report from the city planner on sign regulations, a request for rezoning from R-1A to Professional Office, (PO) a half acre at 253 Seminole Avenue, and a request for a preliminary subdivision review of 29.98 acres at Timacuan, units 11 and 12.

The meeting will be held in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

Spring auction

MAITLAND — The PACE Private School 22nd Annual Spring Auction "Live with Auction '95" will be held May 13 at the Sheraton Orlando North Hotel, 600 N. Lake Destiny Road (near I-4 and Maitland Boulevard) at 7 p.m. with auctioneer Scooter Sherwood of Cool 105.9 FM. Tickets are $20 per person and may be purchased in advance by calling PACE School at (407)889-8882 or at the door the night of the auction. The cost includes a tantalizing buffet of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, 1950s or casual attire is encouraged.

Special school board meeting

WINTER PARK — The Seminole County school board will hold a public hearing and a special school board meeting on Wednesday, May 17, at 8 p.m. at Lake Howell High School.

The meeting, which will take place in the auditorium, will consist of a report from the rezoning task force, public input and a one-item agenda meeting for possible adoption of a county-wide high school rezoning plan for implementation for the 1997-1998 school year.

Senior Prom

Members of Sanford's First United Methodist Church gathered Saturday evening to attend the first Senior Prom when three seniors were honored in an elaborate "prom" setting. A spirited sing-along and spectacular floor show completed the festivities. The Rev. Vicki Reece (left), minister of evangelism and co-chairman of the event, and the Rev. Cliff Melvin (right), church pastor, congratulate the winners, Frieda Tyre (second, from left), Boyd Coleman and Georgia Chorpensing.

Lake Mary summer rec program back full time

By NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The summer recreation program will return in Lake Mary once again this year. Last year, the full-scale program was not conducted as the result of the change in school terms to year-around classes.

Now however, the Parks and Recreation Department has received enough phone calls regarding the summer program that two short sessions are being added to the program.

The 3-week sessions for Lake Mary residents will be $56 for half days, and $112 for full days. Non-residents will be charged $67.50 for half days and $135 for full days.

The registration period for children five to 11 years old, is now officially underway for residents, and will begin May 15 for non-residents.

Since the summer recreation program was not included in this year's budget, a funding source

Two-cent container tax set to be repealed

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The 1995 Florida Legislature promised not to raise your taxes. Now, it's even going to make one go away.

On Oct. 1, the two-cent container tax known as the Advance Disposal Fee will disappear. Lawmakers killed an attempt this session to extend the two-year-old tax that encourages manufacturers and consumers to recycle.

Lawmakers, particularly Republicans leading the Senate, didn't want to be seen as supporting any statewide tax increases this year.

"Everybody saw the writing on the wall about that one," said Senate Ways and Means Chairman Mario Diaz-Balart, R-Miami.

Consumers began paying the one-cent tax in October 1993 on a variety of metal, plastic and other types of containers. It raised about $45 million in its first year, but the amount has dropped as more containers were exempted as they reached recycling goals under the law.

On Jan. 1, 1995, the fee increased to two cents per container.

Money raised goes to help small counties close landfills and tackle other solid waste problems, and operate recycling and sewage treatment programs for small communities.

It was expected to raise about $30 million next year. Small counties with limited tax bases will particularly feel the loss of money, including the matching federal dollars they could receive.

House Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, said the small communities that counted on ADF will have to raise the money locally because the state doesn't have the resources to replace the money.

"The feelings were mixed on both sides of the House and Senate," said Wallace. "Because of positive impact on recycling and the environment I would have preferred to keep ADF."

Opponents called it a hidden, confusing tax that unfairly hits the poor, elderly and families. They complained all the money should go to recycling programs, not landfills

Head Start parents, kids visit resort

By VICKI DESORMIER

SANFORD — Parents, regardless of their economic status, want what is best for their children.

Still, poorer parents are often perceived as being less caring, said Rose Sheppard, teacher in the Head Start program at Midway Elementary School. And that is just not the case, she noted.

"These are some of the most involved parents," Sheppard said.

The Head Start program is dedicated to giving economically disadvantaged not be disadvantaged academically as well.

The program helps prepare three and four year olds ready to enter school. In addition to academic and nutritional assistance, the families are brought together to help the youngsters find success in their endeavors from the earliest ages.

"We want to celebrate parents and kids," Sheppard said.

This year, the theme of Midway's Head Start program has been life in the oceans.

From colorful bulletin boards where schools of fish swim happily in a sea of construction paper to the books the teachers read to the kids and

Hotel's future eyed tonight

By NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The future of the Marina Hotel, formerly the Holiday Inn, on Sanford's lakefront, may be decided tonight. The Sanford City Commission plans to consider a land lease for the property.

The matter is scheduled for discussion during a work session beginning at 4 p.m. today. It is also listed on the regular meeting agenda tonight for a formal vote.

The proposed lease for the property located at 530 N. Palmetto Avenue, on the Monroe Harbour Marina land, would be between the city and

Airport asks Comair to stay

EDITOR'S NOTE: Due to a computer glitch, comments from Orlando Sanford Airport Director Steve Cooke were omitted from Sunday's story on the Comair Aviation Academy's request for improved facilities and lower rent or the school may move away to another airport.

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Comair Aviation Academy officials have requested their Orlando Sanford Airport facilities be upgraded and the rent reduced or they may move the school to Kissimmee or Titusville, taking its $64 million economic impact on the community with them. Comair officials will make a presentation to the airport board Tuesday.

"We're not wantin' them to go," airport director Steve Cooke said, noting about $25,000

Legislature: Winners and losers

By The Associated Press

The results of the 1988 regular session of the Florida Legislature, which recessed early Saturday, lawmakers extended their 60-day session by one week and will return to Tallahassee to pass the budget. With a two-thirds vote, they could consider bills that didn't pass.

Gov. Lawton Chiles has 15 days once he gets a bill to decide if he wants to veto it or let it become law, with or without his signature.

CRIME & PUNISHMENT:
 -Streamlines death penalty appeal process.
 -Prohibits inmates from changing their names.
 -Expand domestic violence laws.
 -Suspend driver licenses of teen-age graffiti artists who are convicted of delinquent criminal mischief.
 -Allows authorities to publicize if sexual offender is released to a community.
 -Imposes 48-hour incarceration upon conviction of second drunk driving offense.

EDUCATION:
 -The state's public universities won't be able to require more than 150 credit hours - which full-time students should be able to earn in four years if they can get their classes - without special approval from the Board of Regents starting next year.
 -School districts can levy a half-cent sales tax with voter approval to build new schools.
 -Allow students taught at home to participate in extracurricular activities at public schools.

ENVIRONMENT:
 -A bill to prevent the state from restricting Atlantic coast beach restoration projects if the applicant agrees to relocate marine turtle nests from the area.
PROPERTY RIGHTS:
 -Makes it easier for landowners to seek financial relief for government actions that hurt the property value.
HEALTH CARE:
 -Allows people to test themselves at home for the virus that causes AIDS.

WINNERS

CRIME & PUNISHMENT:
 -Inmates have to serve 85 percent of their sentences.
 -Impose mandatory sentences on repeat violent offenders.
 -Strengthen sentencing guidelines.
 -Expand prison system capacity for 4,000 additional beds.
 -Allow the Department of Corrections to use prison chain gangs.
 -Restrict pornographic material in prison.

EDUCATION:
 -Repeal law that makes it easier for state to sue tobacco companies for the cost of treating sick smokers on Medicaid.
 -Allows telephone companies and cable companies to compete for providing local telephone service.
 -Commercial anglers will be eligible for some economic assistance after the net ban takes effect July 1, but the bill won't be paid by a 66 surcharge on saltwater licenses. Instead, commercial fishermen will be allowed to join the unemployment compensation system. The state will spend $60 million to go to buy nets, retrain fishermen and make compensation for lost income.
 -Outlaw making or selling fake goods.
 -Allows Tampa Bay Buccaneers to receive $60 million in sales tax money over 30 years to help refurbish Tampa Stadium.

EDUCATION:
 -The state's public universities won't be able to require more than 150 credit hours - which full-time students should be able to earn in four years if they can get their classes - without special approval from the Board of Regents starting next year.
 -School districts can levy a half-cent sales tax with voter approval to build new schools.
 -Allow students taught at home to participate in extracurricular activities at public schools.

ENVIRONMENT:
 -A bill to prevent the state from restricting Atlantic coast beach restoration projects if the applicant agrees to relocate marine turtle nests from the area.
PROPERTY RIGHTS:

Dentist hired hitman to kill his wife

SARASOTA, Fla. - Cive Mohammed had almost all the angles figured, police say: he hired someone to kill his wife, then hired a second hitman to make sure the first killer would never tell the story.

But authorities say Mohammed hadn't figured on the second hitman actually being a police officer.

Mohammed is charged with first-degree murder and solicitation to commit murder.

"It's like a movie of the week," said Valerie Veve, a stepdaughter of Mohammed's who remembers him breaking into tears several times at her mother's funeral. "That makes this even more bizarre."

Sarasota authorities said Mohammed paid the first hitman $10,000 to kill his 54-year-old wife, Irma, who was found dead in her condominium shower Feb. 21.

Mohammed, 65, became convinced the killer had failed to make the slaying look like an accident, police said.

He met with the second hit man last week, handed over some of Mrs. Mohammed's jewelry and a note about drugs that were to be placed on the body of his wife's killer.

Authorities said Mohammed wanted to trick police into believing Mrs. Mohammed had been killed by a burglar linked to drugs.

Sex allegations difficult to prove

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. - Prosecutors may have trouble proving their case against a psychiatrist accused of having sex with two under-aged patients who subsequently committed suicide.

Dr. Keith Haynes, 54, is charged with four counts of sexual activity with a child, based on allegations made by patient Keith Pillow before he killed himself last year by overdosing on sleeping pills and pain killers. The case is set for trial May 23.

At a March hearing, Circuit Judge Marvin Mounts said his "curbed opinion" was that the state couldn't be able to proceed. But assistant State Attorney Dale Buckner said prosecutors will try to prove their case by using statements Pillow made to other doctors.

And Pillow's mother has vowed to follow through with the criminal case.

"I'm not letting go of this," said Sara Quay, "until every bit of justice that can be done is done for my son's sake."

The state began investigating Haynes in the 1980s, after Pillow and another patient, Mike Crowley, reported he had sex with them before they turned 18 years old.

Abortion foe sues federal government

CINCINNATI - A convicted abortion clinic bomber is challenging for a second time parole restrictions he said are unconstitutional.

John Brockhoff, who was imprisoned for firebombing a Cincinnati Planned Parenthood clinic in 1985, has sued the federal government to demand that the parole conditions be dropped.

He also was convicted of trying to bomb an abortion clinic in Pensacola, Fla., in 1988.

The restrictions deprive him "of his right to counsel, freedom of speech and association, freedom of speech, freedom of peaceful assembly and his free exercise of religion," said documents filed Friday in U.S. District Court.

Move over shopping carts, green stamps targeting big rigs

By JAMES BARTYNE
Associated Press Writer

POLK CITY, Fla. - At the Dixie Boy Truck Stop, a scruffy namesake in blue denim and cowboy boots snuffed out his cigarette and took a last gulp of coffee.

He fueled up his 18-wheeler and paid the clerk on his way back out to that endless black ribbon.

"Don't forget your stamps," the smiling clerk said as she unfurled a seemingly endless green ribbon of trading stamps.

"I don't collect them myself - uh, I give them to my mom," explained Jim Murphy, an Edgewater, Fla.-based long hauler. "She's the one who collects them."

Clerk Robin Barnes had heard that line before. "Don't let them fool you. These truck drivers will fight you for them," she said.

Move over housewives, the 59-year-old Sperry & Hutchinson Co. is targeting truckers in the big rig to dutifully collect stamps and redeem them for cash and merchandise.

Stung by the loss of much of its supermarket business over the last decade, S&H is wooing the trucker trade nationally. About 15 percent of the company's business now falls to those driving the 18-wheelers.

Of the approximately 2,000 businesses across the country that give stamps, about 300 of them are truck stops.

Florida, for example, had been one of S&H's top states until the large Publix supermarket chain dropped the stamps in 1986 in favor of coupons and other less expensive promotions. The stamps couldn't be found again in the state until they reappeared earlier this year at five truck stops.

"Truckers are a natural fit because they buy a lot of fuel," said Dixie Boy manager Rex Sharp. "Most of them big rigs on the road take 175 or 200 gallons with every fill up - they can fill those books a lot quicker than you can buying a tank of gas for your car."

The basic rate for truckers is two stamps for every gallon of diesel, and most truck stops offer double stamps for big fill ups. Buy 100 gallons of diesel, get 400 stamps. Buy more than 175 gallons, you get triple stamps, giving you more than 1,000.

It takes 1,200 stamps to fill a book and 50 to 40 books to buy a small television set or CB radio. Or they can cash their books in - at $1.50 each - for cash or towards purchases at the truck stop.

"This is a way to give them something back," Sharp said. "This is like a kickback for them because, for most of them, the company's paying for 'em fuel."

Sharp said the stamp promotion has increased the price of his diesel about a half cent a gallon, but has also boosted repeat customers and his fuel flow by several thousand gallons a week.

"It's like frequent flier miles," said Luke Dinsdale, a national S&H sales manager. "Truckers can get seven or eight books a trip. They can save them up and at the end of the year buy a nice gift - it's a perk."

S&H has long been entrenched as a part of Americana, with generations of housewives and grandmothers saving up stamp books in shoeboxes and perusing the catalog for such items as electric can openers, folding tables and cribs.

That bears little resemblance to the scene at the Dixie Boy Truckstop off busy Interstate 4. The smell of diesel fills the air along with the piercing squeal of brakes.

Inside, bleary eyed long haulers eat eggs and grits at a diner. A few feet away, on the magazine rack next to Playboy, Penthouse and Hustler are five copies of a special S&H catalog with the picture of a big rig on the cover. "Truckers! Time To Hit The Road With S&H," it reads.

It's a normal S&H catalog with additional items geared to truckers: long-haul cowboy boots (56 books), a quart pocket watch with etched truck design (49 books), wood-based seat cushion (7 books), and a 40-channel CB radio (29 books). Some truck stops even have small displays of items and customer service counters to help process orders.

"I just started. When I get enough, that's when I'm going to start looking to see what I want," Tampa-based trucker Jerome Griffin said as he fueled his rig.

"I figure I've got to stop here and get fuel anyway, I might as well try to get some personal compensation out of it," Griffin said. "I just get them and throw them in the glove box. Sooner or later, me and my grandson will get to it. I'll let him do the licking and I'll do the peeing."

Nurturing a steady trucker business is important for the New York-based S&H company that is but a shadow of its former self.

Officers said he had reportedly been in a dispute with his wife. Police reported finding burn spots in the kitchen, and summoned firefighters. Aleahs was subsequently charged with battery domestic violence, and arson on an occupied dwelling.

Montana, home to vigilante legend, prepares first execution in 52 years

By The Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. — In Montana, where the vigilantes of gold rush days became legend, 52 years have passed since a murderer awing from a hangman's noose. That slunk of history may end Wednesday when Duncan McKenzie Jr., on death row 20 years for the torture-murder of a rural schoolteacher, is scheduled to die at the state prison in Deer Lodge.

McKenzie, 45, passed on the gallows and chose to die by injection. He has more appeals pending and has asked Gov. Marc Racicot for clemency. The Board of Pardons recommended against it late Saturday, but Racicot has not announced his decision. The victim's mother, a state senator, wants McKenzie dead. "I've tried to be patient," Ethel Harding said. "I believe he should pay for his crime, and he has to do it personally."

Most people in Conrad, a town of 2,900 in Montana's wheat country where McKenzie killed his victim in 1974, also want the execution carried out. "Conrad's never forgotten," said farmer Jerry Hepp. He said his Bible-study group at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church once voiced unanimous support for McKenzie's execution, despite the church's stand against capital punishment. Paying for one's crimes has been a theme in Montana justice since gold drew miners and crooks to the Rocky Mountains. Among the outlaws was a band of thieving desperadoes known as "the Innocents," blamed for the murders of more than 100 people in the gold camps from 1852 through 1864. Their leader, Henry Plummer, was the sheriff of Virginia City. In reaction, local businessmen formed a vigilance committee. The vigilantes broke the back of the innocents by forcing a captured outlaw to provide his cohorts' names and hanging every member they could find — anywhere from 24 to 30 of them according to various accounts. Plummer was strung up Jan. 10, 1864. The vigilantes are legend in Montana. Their cryptic symbol, "3-7-77" — once left behind as a sort of sinister calling card with those they wished to intimidate — is now emblazoned on the Montana Highway Patrol shield. But they weren't saints.

"They weren't necessarily the good guys history has portrayed them as being," said Richard Roeder, professor emeritus of history at Montana State University. "They employed absolutely no concept of due process. ... Once you were accused, you were guilty."

Eighty-four people were known lynched in Montana in territorial days before statehood in 1889, including more bystanders and suspects dragged from jail. There were 70 legal executions from 1889 to 1945. The last one was Sept. 10, 1945, when Philip "Slim" Coleman was hanged in the Missoula County Jail for murdering a railroad foreman who'd hired Coleman a few days earlier. He was put to death just 48 days after his arrest.

Half a century later, McKenzie is without doubt the longest-term resident of Montana's death row. In 1974, McKenzie, then 22, was fresh out of prison after a three-year sentence for assaulting a woman. He had a new job at a Conrad seed store and had just bought an old truck. The morning of Jan. 31, he was heard boasting that he "broke in" his vehicles by having sex in them. He said he preferred teachers. And he told a co-worker he "had one in mind." A few hours later, 23-year-old Lana Harding was attached in her living quarters next to her one-room school. When Harding did not show up to teach class the next day, a search began. Her body was found in a snowy field 4 miles away. She had been raped, choked and beaten. A rope was tied around her neck and the right side of her head lay open. No one needed vigilantes to tie McKenzie to the crime. His truck was seen driving toward the field the night of the murder. His bloody gloves were found nearby. Blood was found in the bed of his truck, along with purple fibers that matched Harding's sweater. Brain tissue and blood matching Harding's were detected on an exhaust manifold found in the back of McKenzie's truck. Convicted Feb. 1, 1978, McKenzie has survived eight scheduled execution dates because of appeals. These appeals continue. McKenzie now argues that he has been on death row so long that executing him would constitute cruel and unusual punishment.

Woman found neglected, is improving, son jailed

By The Associated Press

CLEARWATER — An elderly woman found lying in her own excrement with maggots crawling on her had improved greatly by this morning, hospital officials said.

Eleanor Templar, 71, was awake, alert, and in fair condition early this morning, said nursing supervisor Diane Rose at Mease Hospital in Dunedin. Mrs. Templar had arrived Friday in critical condition. Detectives figured she had been left in the same spot on a couch for six months before being discovered that day. They were tipped off by a drinking buddy of her son's.

"It was someone he shared beer with," said Sgt. Greg Tita, spokesman for Pinellas County Sheriff's Office. "Someone who had been at the house and felt it was in the best interest of her to let us know."

Lynne Gene Templar, 40, has been charged with abuse and neglect of the elderly. He was being held in the Pinellas County Jail this morning in lieu of $10,000 bond. He seemed oblivious to the seriousness of his mother's condition when detectives questioned him, authorities said. It was unclear what he was feeding his mother or how much.

"But there was very little in the refrigerator," Tita said. "It was obvious he was taking better care of himself than of her." Paramedics found Mrs. Templar in her son's duplex, surrounded by garbage and used diapers. The home was filthy, unsanitary and lacked running water. Tita said. Clothes and trash were scattered throughout the rented house, which smelled of human and animal feces. Arrest records said worms, ants, cockroaches and maggots were crawling over Mrs. Templar, and her flesh was rotting away. It took 45 minutes to move her out of the house, said Chuck Kearns, spokesman for Dunedin Police.

Fearing contamination, paramedics first donned full-body gowns, rubber gloves, goggles and hair bunnets before touching her. Once at the hospital, they decided to leave the ambulance parked there so it could be towed away and fumigated. They also were allowed to take off for the remainder of their shifts to recover from what they had seen. Doctors characterized Mrs. Templar's condition as "the liv-

On the positive

I want to commend the Sanford Herald for the editorial position taken in the Sunday, April 30, 1995 edition of the paper. I could not agree more that what we need to do is "keep our eye set on the positive aspects" of Sanford.

However, I want to challenge the Herald to do what you encourage others to do! The recurring comment from those that read the Herald is "Why does the paper have to accentuate the negative on the front page everyday?" We constantly pick up the paper and see the seamy side of our community promoted through the headlines and articles. The Friday, April 28, 1995 edition is an example: "Crime in Sanford: Loved one pays price when someone dies." To a visitor in Sanford this headline seems to portray a crime-ridden city, not the community you depicted in the Sunday editorial.

I am confident if you would do exactly what you ask others to do in the Sunday editorial, your readership, image and respect would increase beyond your expectations.

So, I challenge you to look at each front page to make sure it follows your own advice: set your eye on the positive aspects of the community you serve. We will all benefit! Be a leader... show us you mean it!

David T. Farr
Executive Director
Greater Sanford
Chamber of Commerce
Sanford

Editor's note: What Mr. Farr is asking us to do is become a newsletter instead of a newspaper. We feel the chamber does an exemplary job with its own newsletter, and we need not compete with it.

As a newspaper, it is our job to mirror the WHOLE community and all residents' concerns. The "seamy" side of Sanford as Mr. Farr suggests we promoted in the April 28 article was in fact, the heartfelt grief one family shared with us and our readers over the shocking death of a loved one. The Herald is not a "tabloid" or "sensationalist" paper. We do not report on drug dealers and prostitutes crawling through his neighborhood. Other Sanford residents aren't so lucky. Ask the residents of the historic district who have rekindled Neighborhood Watch because they're tired of the drug deals and hookers. Ask residents of 13th Street who are frightened to leave their homes at night because of gunfire.

We as a newspaper would be remiss if we shoveled negative news off our pages. We feel it is a fairer picture of Sanford to report everything we see: the good and the bad. Much change for the better occurs when a newspaper helps residents see they can make a difference by organizing and fighting issues and elements that are detrimental to the community.

It is interesting to note, in the same edition Mr. Farr cites, Page 1 also covered an FHP sweep to remove illegal drivers from our roads, a thank-you breakfast at an area elementary school, a government meeting dealing with area growth and a call for scholarship applicants, among other items.

We are proud of our local students, and never fail to report their accomplishments including the chamber's own scholarship awards. We have consistently backed Main Street, the city's historic status and the waterfront development.

We thank you for the compliment about our editorial. We do think there is a lot right with Sanford. More right than wrong. And we think we can be instrumental in helping fight some of what's wrong, by printing stories that tell it like it is.

Problematic protectors of liberties

In 1987, Justice William Brennan spoke at the Hebrew University Law School in Jerusalem. The sounds of the intifada nearby were an apt obligato because his subject was: "The Quest to Develop a Jurisprudence of Civil Liberties in Times of Security Crises."

Brennan focused mainly on the American experience. He gave us poor marks. "After each perceived security crisis ended," he said, the "United States has remorsefully realized that the abrogation of civil liberties was unnecessary. But it has proven unable to prevent itself from repeating the error when the next crisis came along."

Whether we repeat the error after the horrors in Oklahoma City depends, of course, on those who make the recommendations and the decisions. According to Harold Ickes, the deputy chief of staff at the White House, we need have no worries about the president's devotion to the Bill of Rights.

"This president," said Ickes, "is well familiar with the Constitution. He has taught constitutional law and he is very concerned that whatever is submitted conform to the Constitution."

This president has brought to Congress his Omnibus Counterterrorism Act of 1995. It allows aliens accused of supporting terrorist organizations to be deported on the basis of evidence they and their lawyers cannot see. Nor, in those cases, are they entitled to know the identities of their accusers.

While teaching the Constitution at the University of Arkansas, professor Clinton presumably devoted a lecture or two to due process. Yet, as a scholar of the Constitution, he seems not to have learned that in a series of decisions, the Supreme Court has consistently ruled — as in Kwong Hai Chew v. Colding — that "once an alien lawfully enters and resides in this country, he becomes invested with the rights guaranteed by the Constitution to all people within our borders."

For instance, freedom of association and due process, both of which are ignored in the president's anti-terrorism bill.

But, according to Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., we can take heart because there are protectors of civil liberties right in the Congress. After a bipartisan meeting with the president, Dole said cheerfully, "We've got some constitutional experts here — Joe Biden and Orrin Hatch."

Well, the expert Sen. Biden, D-Del., is co-sponsor in the Senate of the Omnibus Counterterrorism Act. As for the contribution of Sen. Hatch, R-Utah, to a jurisprudence of civil liberties, he has proposed a deal. As reported in The Washington Post, "Republicans would not act on plans to seek repeal of the new ban on assault weapons in exchange for approval of curbs on appeals by condemned prisoners."

To try to prevent a recurrence of the killings in Oklahoma City, Sen. Hatch proposes that we speed the killings of people on death row — and of habeas corpus. I assume the logic of this proposition is that future terrorists will scrap their plans for fear of being executed swiftly if they are caught.

Brennan focused mainly on the American experience. He gave us poor marks.

Butcher budget's sacred

It's tempting to forget why government at all levels is in budgetary trouble. The problem is not lack of money. It is lack of discipline. The richest man in the world would go bust if he consistently spent more than he had.

That's obvious enough. The problem for us Americans is that we think hard choices are for the other guy. That's true for Republicans and Democrats in Washington, the place everyone likes to kick around. It's no less true in state capitols and city halls.

A recent edition of the Cincinnati Enquirer vividly illustrates the point. The Enquirer's front page is dominated by an account of a school board hearing on proposals to close the schools' $31.4 million budget gap. Much of the public testimony is summarized by one board member as follows:

"Unfortunately, the general tenor is 'don't cut this, don't cut that.' And they're shutting out the reality that we don't have the money."

But that was only one aspect of the Cincinnati story. On the Metro section's front page that same day, a councilman is beating the drums for a new $300 million stadium to keep the Bengals professional football team from leaving town. "Losing the Bengals would be like losing a body part," he said. "I'm committed to doing everything in my power to keep them here."

Earlier expressions of similar sentiments had promoted a public-school parent to comment sourly at the school board meeting. "When you read in the papers about business owners who say we will dig deep to keep the Bengals, we understand where our priorities are."

But there are other priorities in Cincinnati as well. Yet another Enquirer account details the planned $773 million expansion of the city's airport. That's 50 percent more costly than the expansion completed just last year. The money will come largely from a federal trust and the project will be phased over 20 years, but the timing of the decision is the point. Whether in Cincinnati or Washington, we have yet to understand fully that we can't continue to do it all simultaneously — and that our ox will have to be gored along with everyone else's.

Nor can we make decisions willy-nilly. In California, without most people noticing it, the legislature has altered the state's fundamental priorities, almost entirely on a reactive basis. Fifteen years ago, the state spent four times more on higher education than it did on prisons. This year, Gov. Pete Wilson's budget allocates more money to prisons than to the university system for the first time in California history. Equally telling, the total amount for both (about $4 billion each) is over three times higher than in 1980. Education spending has doubled. Spending on prisons has soared eight-fold.

But come back to Washington. When you strip away the camouflage, you discover that the programs offered by the new Republican majority in Congress are as centered on the free lunch as anything the Democrats envision. The chief difference is in the identity of the recipients.

Unfortunately for the GOP, the time of smoke and mirrors is over. The first 100 days and their "Contract With America" were based squarely on the proposition that the undeserving poor should be weaned from the federal trough while everyone else continued to pig out. Comfort the comfortable and afflict the afflicted was the rallying cry.

Thus there was the pretense that the budget could be balanced by the year 2002 even while taxes on upper income Americans were cut, the Social Security system preserved intact, defense spending was stabilized near current levels and farm and veterans benefits protected.

But the day when the numbers have to add up is at hand, which is why Bob Dole and Newt Gingrich have rediscovered the virtues of "bipartisanship." It is not possible to keep Social Security, Medicare, defense and farm subsidies off the budget-cutting table and control the deficit at the same time. It is not possible to give tax cuts to people making up to $200,000 a year and produce fiscal stability. A similar message applies to the president. It was fun to offer a budget which ducked all the tough issues. Making the Republicans squirm on the horns of their own contradictions, while staying above the fray, made short-term political sense. But the speaker's inflated sense of his own destiny notwithstanding, this is a government that can't function effectively if the chief executive doesn't lead.

The president should join Congress in doing the unpalatable. Entitlements must be brought under control. Sacred cows must be butchered. Sacrifices should be apportioned on the basis of moral and economic logic, not overnight trafficking polls. You don't take food stamps away from poor children. You don't give tax breaks to the rich.

Mostly, however, you don't continue to pretend that tinkering and feel-good contracts can stem the deficit flood. The time for joint action is now, before 1996 election year politics paralyzes the government. The fact is that we got into this together — successive presidents, Congress and we, the self-indulgent people. We can only get out of it together.

The problem is not lack of money. It is lack of discipline.

McNamara's book can't atone sins

It is ironic that in the midst of the Newtsonian revolution and the current mood of antipathy toward government that a book would be published by a man whose very existence screams the warning that it is stupid to blindly trust those who govern us.

You want a clue as to why we have devolved into a nation of Doubting Thomases? Read "In Retrospect," by Robert McNamara.

"Why, after all these years of silence am I convinced I should speak?" writes the man who was defense secretary for both John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson and who was the primary architect of the Vietnam War. The reasons are many, he says, but "the main one is that I have grown sick at heart witnessing the cynicism and even contempt with which so many people view our political institutions and leaders."

I pray for the strength to say this as graciously as I can: The hypocrisy in that statement is so utterly abject that it disorients and staggers any sensible person who lived through those horrible years. Any list of the 10 people of the 20th century who are most responsible for the tide of cynicism that has washed over this once cordial country would have to include Robert McNamara. I'm sorry, but the man makes me nauseous.

McNamara begins his account with a plea for understanding: "I do not believe ... that America's political leaders have been incompetent or insensitive. ... They have made mistakes, but mostly honest mistakes."

Two thoughts flash through my mind. One is the image of the late gadfly I.F. Stone uttering the immortal words, "Every government is run by liars." The other is the notion that McNamara is right, terribly right. The tragedy is that he is 30 years too late in telling about it.

Oh, he told about it, he says. He told his president that Vietnam was a bottomless pit and the war could not be won. Then he went back to the office and planned another bombing raid.

Why did he not speak out THEN, when our sons and daughters and brothers and sisters were dying in a rancid jungle on the other side of the world? Why did he not speak out when those who protested the absurdity of the war were being beaten and thrown in jail? He might have saved thousands of lives and soothed the nation's broken spirit, but he chose to remain silent.

"I never thought about doing it," he told ABC's Diane Sawyer, "because it was just totally wrong to use ... the power that you had accumulated as an official of the government to subvert the policies of the president."

Please ponder that. His first loyalty was to his president. Not to his country. Not to the thousands of Americans, and certainly not to the millions of Asians who were dying in his damn war. TO HIS PRESIDENT. As political animals as ever strode the earth.

Lyndon Johnson pursued the war, he used to tell us, for many reasons, the primary of which was that Asia was a bunch of dominoes. If Vietnam fell, it might topple Thailand and Indonesia and maybe Hawaii and California and Harlingen, Texas.

What he was really saying was that he was not going to "lose" Vietnam. Well, that would mean loss of power. Republicans might win and Democrats might lose.

Put another way, the 58,000 Americans whose names are carved into a slab of black granite on the Washington Mall died in a domestic political war. Robert McNamara could spend every day of the rest of his life in penance for being a party to that, and he would not begin to repair the damage.

I'm sorry, but the man makes me nauseous.

Comair

has been spent attempting to correct problems cited by the company's managers, including sealing Comair's ramp, cleaning building ducts, making minor repairs and painting.

Airport officials offered a plan which would have cut Comair's rent over $88,000 but the company wants a further cut to bring the reduction to $50,000. Comair pays over $187,000 in rent now for its airport facilities.

A proposal is now on the table for Comair to move some of its classes to another airport building, thus vacating one building and reducing their rent.

The aviation academy rents 430,000 square feet at the airport, of which, 275,000 square feet is the apron/ramp space and the remainder is in buildings including hangar, classroom and office space, Comair Director of Finance and Administration Lynda Wensel said.

"The problem out here is we have a lot of wasted space," she explained. "In our existing hangar, we've got probably 18,000 square feet, 8,000 of which we cannot use because it is in a very, very rundown condition. It is termite infested. It is not in very good shape."

The hangar is one building designated to be torn down but the estimated $60,000 price for the demolition may prove too expensive, she added.

Although a new hangar has been proposed, Wensel explained Comair wants a 12,000 square foot hangar while some of the airport officials want a larger one which could accommodate jets. Comair was projecting a new hangar would cost between $900,000 to $950,000. "We've (Comair) wants to build one that will cost $600,000," she said.

"We don't need that and basically, we're going to have to pay the debt service on this building which would totally wipe out any savings we had (on reduced rent)," Wensel added. "We don't mind paying more for a brand new building but we don't feel like we should have to pay the entire debt service on it because it is something we don't really need. If it were existing and already there, we probably wouldn't move into something like that."

Cooke said the proposed hangar would feature increased tail height allowing larger planes to use the space should the aviation academy leave at some point in the future.

"If we build it like that, we would have an asset to use. You don't build hangars that accommodate only 183 Cessnas or Cherokees," he added referring to small planes often used as trainers.

At a previous airport authority meeting, some officials appeared ready to focus their attention on attracting commercial and charter business rather than keeping the school, she added.

Cooke noted the local airport can serve all facets of the aviation industry including cargo, charters, and general aviation.

The direct impact of the academy is $17,487,859, indirect impact estimated at $6,745,980 and induced impact, $38,288,441 with an total economic impact of $64,522,280, according to Comair officials.

In a letter to Cooke, Comair managing director Gary D. Greene noted along with playing a major role in the local economy and the $150,000 in annual rent the company is willing to pay, the company's presence at the airport would help attract additional aviation related tenants. He challenged Cooke's statement to the board at the last meeting that Comair represented only 50% of the total operations at the airport... "when in fact it represents over 80%."

Air traffic activity is divided into four specific areas and no separate statistics were kept on the number of Comair operations. Cooke estimates Comair's operations are between 80-85% of the total.

Before the FAA took over tower operations, Cooke said the airport staff tracked the specific number of operations completed by Comair. With more Comair planes in service than now, Cooke said the school accounted for about 85 percent of total operations.

Rents offered by the airports trying to attract the pilot training school are about $100,000 less than the academy currently pays and have reinforced Comair officials' request for a $80,000 reduction as an incentive to remain in Sanford.

City Commissioner Kerry Lyons wants to keep the school operating in Sanford and is expected to discuss the matter at tonight's city commission meeting.

The Sanford Airport Authority will meet May 9, 8:30 a.m. at the A. Kay Showmaker International Terminal conference room level II.

Marina Hotel, Inc. of Phoenix, Arizona. Sanford City Manager Bill Simmons said the agreement deals only with the physical building and would not have any connection with the terms of a Holiday Inn franchise. "The new lease would have to get into a re-franchise agreement with the Holiday Inn International," he said, "and that would be entirely up to them. There's nothing to do with what will be discussed at this point."

A representative of the company is expected to be on hand to discuss the proposal during the next session. Simmons is recommending that the lease be approved.

Approved, the lease agreement would be in effect for the 1995-1996 season.

The deal is the result of a default of the previous lease, approved on April 14, 1993. The lease was subsequently turned over to Marina Hotel, Inc. and the Holiday Inn International eventually dropped its connection with the hotel. The name was changed to Marina Hotel late last year. The City of Sanford owns the land on which the facility is located.

According to the wording of the lease agreement to be discussed, if approved as written Terra Marketing will agree to pay the city $30,000 rent (for the land) for the first through tenth year retroactive to May 1 of this year. For the remainder of the lease agreement, the amount would be adjusted for an increase or decrease in rent based on the valuation determined by the Seminole County Tax Assessor every ten years.

Maximum rental amounts have already been established for up to 75 years. The work session meeting is scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. this afternoon. The meeting will be closed to the public and will be held in an executive session to discuss collective bargaining with the Fraternal Order of Police.

The regular commission meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

not be provided. The projected budget indicates the program will fall approximately $2,047 short being self supporting.

Most of the expense would be covered through the fees charged for children participating in the program. Thursday night, City Manager John Litton submitted a request to the city commission to allow the expenditure of the $2,047 for the program. While the commission gave a unanimous vote of approval, several stipulations were suggested.

"I'll go along with this," said Commissioner Gary Bender. "but I would suggest that beginning next year, the summer recreation program be more self supporting. While it should be the city's duty to supply facilities and staffing, the city government should not be in the child care business."

Commissioner Sheila Sawyer agreed with the approach that the program become self-supporting by the 1996 summer program. Parks and Recreation Director John Holland assured the commissioners, "This will certainly be done for next year."

The two 3-week sessions will begin June 6 and July 14. They will run Monday through Friday except July 4, and possibly July 5.

Programs will be conducted from 8 a.m. until noon, and/or noon until 5 p.m.

When ADP increased by a penny this year, anti-tax groups paraded a 13-foot-high Trojan horse around the state to protest the tax.

"I feel good we finally won something. It may be small initially but the impact is millions at the end product," said Ernest Bach, head of the Action Coalition of We The People, which lobbied against ADP.

Under current law, ADP is scheduled to be repealed Oct. 1, 1995. Some lawmakers said they intended to extend the tax until Oct. 1, 1997, when they revamped the ADP law in 1993.

But the Legislature rejected a bill this session to extend the tax. It will die quietly, a marked contrast to the legislative wrangling it took to impose the tax.

As the year draws to a close, the program sponsored a trip to Sea World.

This morning, 38 parents and 40 children joined teachers and assistants on a bus and headed for one of the best places to study ocean life outside of the ocean.

Sheppard said parents whose children are involved in the Head Start program are always encouraged to stay involved with their children's education.

It is hoped that once they get involved, they will stay involved and help their children be successful in school, thus breaking the cycle of poverty.

"We have always had strong parental involvement," she said, "but this year we've had more parents involved this year than ever."

Ceremonies today mark end of war

PARIS — In his last starring role on the world stage, President Francois Mitterrand hosted the leaders of nearly 80 nations today at ceremonies marking the end of a war that tore France in two.

Mitterrand, who served in the collaborationist Vichy government before joining the French Resistance in World War II, was accompanied by President-elect Jacques Chirac at the commemorations of the 50th anniversary of the Nazis' surrender.

Chirac, a conservative heir to the legacy of war hero Gen. Charles de Gaulle, won Sunday's runoff against Mitterrand's fellow Socialist, Lionel Jospin.

They were joined by leaders of the war's victorious and defeated nations at the Arc de Triomphe, where Nazi soldiers goose-stepped daily during their occupation of Paris that ended in August 1944.

Chirac fights high unemployment

PARIS — Supporters of conservative president-elect Jacques Chirac celebrated by splashing in the fountains of Paris today, while Chirac himself admitted the tough job he now faces — fighting high unemployment.

Defeated Socialists vowed a quick comeback, and union leaders promised more strikes without quick action by Chirac to cut the 13.3 percent jobless rate.

Chirac, who three months ago appeared headed toward a third presidential defeat, beat Socialist Lionel Jospin 52 percent to 47 percent in a run-off Sunday.

The race ended the 14-year hold on the presidency by the left and its elder statesman, Francois Mitterrand.

Already holding 80 percent of Parliament, the conservative coalition consolidated its grip with Chirac's win, and has three years before the next legislative elections.

Sunday attack the worst

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Serbs shelled the capital, killing at least eight people and threatening the main tunnel into Sarajevo. They also blew up two Roman Catholic churches in northern Bosnia, and torched a third.

Five shells exploded Sunday in Butmir, a western suburb, killing eight people and wounding up to 40. The Serb mortar attack struck near the entrance to a tunnel under the airport that is a vital resupply route for soldiers and civilians in the city.

Sunday's attack was the worst in Sarajevo since 68 people died in a marketplace shelling on Feb. 5, 1994.

Medicare: Center of budget debate

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Republican-led Congress enters its second phase this week with debate moving to GOP plans to balance the budget by 2002. One of the most divisive questions will be what to do about Medicare.

The House Budget Committee is proposing that Medicare spending be reduced some $200 billion below projected levels as part of more than $1 trillion in cuts over the seven years between now and 2002.

Democrats are balking, saying the health program for the elderly should not be sacrificed to pay for Republican tax cuts they say would benefit mainly the wealthy.

"We want to focus on Medicare as Medicare. Forget the budget pressure," House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said on NBC's "Meet the Press" Sunday, stressing that the system is heading toward bankruptcy without major structural changes.

Gingrich accused President Clinton of playing politics, of "using the senior citizens of America as hostages" in his effort to legislate a national health care system.

Clinton has said that the Medicare crisis can't be taken up without considering the entire issue of health care reform.

Republicans insisted there was no health care crisis last year when they successfully opposed health care reform. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

"All of a sudden, there's this epiphany that occurs, and we discover this great crisis," he said.

Dodd said the crisis could be avoided, at least in the short term, if Republicans backed off their proposals to cut taxes.

Sen. James Easton of Nebraska, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, said Friday that tax cuts, Medicare and cuts in agriculture programs will be the three big issues when the committee meets this week to debate GOP plans to balance the budget.

The committee chairman, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said his plan will not include tax cuts. A House-passed bill would cut taxes by $160 billion over five years and an estimated $700 billion over 10 years.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said on CBS' "Face the Nation" that tax cuts were "not going to go down the drain" in the struggle to balance the budget, but that the Senate version, focusing on capital gains rates and child care credits, would "not cost nearly as much as the House bill."

But with the end of the first phase of the congressional session, the House GOP's 100-day "Contract With America," the focus was squarely on how to balance the budget without hurting Medicare recipients.

"It's been very disappointing to watch the president stay irrelevant on this," Gingrich said. "But he apparently is absolutely determined to run — to be a candidate and never actually serve in the office in between elections."

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta, commenting later on CNN's "Late Edition," said the Republicans only discovered the Medicare crisis after promising to balance the budget while giving a big tax cut to the wealthy.

"It's a little bit like White House saying frankly that we ought to deal with security on bonds. They don't have a hell of a lot of credibility on this issue," Panetta said.

Sen. Alan Sanguano, R-Wyo., stressed on ABC that Republicans are only trying to reduce the rate of Medicare growth, currently 10 percent or more a year, down to 7 or 8 percent. This will be described by Democrats and the American Association of Retired Persons, the lobbying group for the elderly, "as a savage cut in Medicare," he said on the news program.

Gingrich is proposing that the elderly be given six or seven options, including joining managed care programs or staying in the current Medicare system.

Medicare users should receive 10 percent of any waste in the system they report, he said. "If you go to Walmart and you can buy something cheaper than you can buy it at the most expensive boutique in your city and it's the same thing, you know, that's called savings," he said.

GOP adds tension to Clinton-Yeltsin summit

By TOM POWERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Complicating White House summit preparations, Republican leaders are threatening "catastrophic consequences" for U.S. aid to Russia if President Boris Yeltsin sells nuclear goods to Iran.

The warning, issued on the eve of President Clinton's trip to Moscow, added political tension to a summit already marked by disputes over the nuclear deal, Chechnya and NATO — differences President Clinton is trying hard to overcome.

"When we have similar goals, we'll cooperate. When we disagree ... we must manage those differences openly, constructively and resolutely," Clinton said Sunday in an address that set the scene for his four-day trip.

In an otherwise conciliatory address, Clinton denounced "the tragic war" in Chechnya and Moscow's plans to sell nuclear technology and material to Iran, a nation he called the "principal sponsor of global terrorism."

But the president said neither issue should divide Washington and Moscow.

"The interests of our people are clearly best supported by supporting the transition in Russia toward a more free and open society," Clinton said.

Adding urgency to the rift over Iran, GOP congressional leaders said Clinton cannot come back empty-handed after personally meeting with Yeltsin.

"If he can't get it done, then we've got a real problem," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., told CBS' "Face the Nation." "I think it's going to cool relations with Yeltsin."

Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., suggested that U.S. aid to Russia could be cut if Moscow goes through with the sale.

"I think it would have catastrophic consequences in Congress," Gingrich said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Hours later, Clinton told the American Israel Public Affairs Committee that the United States invests in Russia to nurture the seeds of peace, democracy and prosperity. "We can make all the differences in the world, but we cannot do it for free," he said.

He said "back-door isolationism on the left and the right" want to cut foreign aid programs, a trend he said is especially unwelcome in Russia's case.

"We did not win the Cold War to walk away and blow the peace on foolish, penny-wise, pound-foolish budgeting," the president said.

But the Republican threat to cut foreign aid for Russia, might actually help Clinton in Moscow. Yeltsin is now hearing the U.S. plea in harsher terms than Clinton himself could have used.

Clinton, who was leaving for Russia today, will begin his trip to Moscow and the Ukraine at ceremonies commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Allies' victory over Nazi Germany. On Sunday, he plans to meet with Yeltsin at the Kremlin.

Besides the nuclear sale and Chechnya, the United States and Russia differ on NATO expansion eastward. Yeltsin sees it as a threat; Clinton did not address that subject Sunday.

The White House said Clinton plans to strike a delicate balance in talks with Yeltsin: Stand firm on his differences with the Russian president but don't harm the overall relationship. Clinton argues that close ties with Moscow lessen the nuclear threat, open markets to U.S. goods and nurture a partner in the war on terrorism.

"We have to engage, and not withdraw," he said.

But the president pledged to press Yeltsin hard on the nuclear deal, arguing that Iran's oil surplus and other evidence show that the country has no need for civilian-use nuclear technology. Officials expect Clinton to share with Yeltsin classified information about Iran's nuclear program.

"If this sale does go forward, Russian national security can only be weakened in the long run," Clinton said.

"We cannot in any way tolerate the sale of technology that would give Iran a nuclear capability," White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said on CNN's "Late Edition."

Addressing the pro-Israeli lobby just before Clinton, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Middle East peace is threatened by "extremist Islamic radicalism." Rabin said the sale of nuclear technology to Iran would be a disaster.

Gingrich and Dole said the nuclear sale ought to be Clinton's top summit priority, even at the risk of upsetting Yeltsin.

"The president may need to worry as much about the American side of this equation as the Russian side," said Gingrich.

Gingrich said he also is troubled by reports that Russia is turning to its nuclear arsenal as the keystone of its defense. "A lot of the indicators you are getting out of Russia are frankly worrisome," he said.

Gingrich: Constitutional amendment banning abortions could backfire

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

Constitutional amendments banning abortion, House Speaker Newt Gingrich says.

Gingrich, R-Ga., a staunch opponent of abortion, told NBC's "Meet the Press" on Sunday that banning abortion, without doing lengthy groundwork first, could backfire.

"If all we did tomorrow morning was pass an amendment, you would have millions of women going into back alleys having abortions," he said.

Republican leaders have so far shied away from the issue, preferring to concentrate on economic reforms.

"I feel very compelled to fight to minimize the number of abortions in America in the most effective way I know how," Gingrich said. "But I think this is a topic where, frankly, we have to win the argument in the country."

He noted that "as a society, we are pro-choice but anti-abortion" and said that "in the case of life of the mother, rape and incest, there are legitimate grounds for establishing the right to have an abortion."

Gingrich said his personal view is that life begins at conception and that "abortion is morally the same as infanticide."

In the interview, Gingrich also said that Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., was "clearly the front-runner" in the race for the Republican presidential nomination next year and "has a very real likelihood of being the nominee."

But he left open the possibility of considering a bid himself. "I refuse to rule it out, but I, in fact, expect fully to be a speaker and to run for re-election to be speaker of the House."

Dole says he'll meet Foster before deciding on surgeon general vote

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole softened his stance on the nomination of Henry Foster to be surgeon general, promising to talk to the Tennessee physician before deciding whether to block a vote on the Senate floor.

Dole's statement on CBS' "Face the Nation" Sunday came as members of his own party, including Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee Chairwoman Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said Foster deserves at least a vote on his nomination.

Kassebaum's committee is to vote in the next few weeks on whether to approve the nomination, which has become a major point of political confrontation between the two parties because of Foster's record of performing abortions.

Republicans have claimed that Foster lacks credibility because of conflicting statements he and members of the administration made over the number of abortions he had done in the past.

Foster was a strong witness in his confirmation hearings last week, and at least one Republican on the committee, Sen. James Jeffords of Vermont, has indicated he will vote for him. One more Republican is needed for approval in the committee, where Republicans held a 9-7 advantage, but Dole could refuse to take the nomination to a vote on the Senate floor even if the committee approves Foster.

"I think he did a pretty good job before the committee," Dole, R-Kan., said.

"I want to sit down before anything happens and visit with Dr. Foster," he said. "He's entitled to that."

"I'm encouraged by Senator Dole's comments," White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said on CNN's "Late Edition" Sunday. "It sounds like he is at least in trying to give Dr. Foster, I think, the fair shake that he deserves after that hearing."

Dole said he still has some serious questions about the nomination, which he said was "very sloppily handled." He said President Clinton "used it to divide America on abortion. It's a question of abortion. It's a question of credibility."

At the same time, he played down the importance of the surgeon general's functions, saying the position is basically a public relations job with a staff of six and a budget of about $850,000.

"It's not some key critical job that has to be filled," he said. The surgeon general's main task is to represent the administration's views on health issues.

Royals maintain LM lead

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — While their closest competitors won in romps, the American Division-leading Disabled American Veteran Royals had to scramble for their win in Sanford Recreation Little Major Baseball League action Saturday at Fort Mellon Park.

Trailing 15-14 after 4 1/2 innings, the Royals (10-2) scored a run in the bottom of the fifth and one in the sixth to rally for a 16-15 win over the First Union A's (4-9) in the first game at Roy Hollar Field.

Lions Club holds on in Girls' Softball

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Bob Dance Dodge came close three times in its quest for its first win in the Sanford Recreation Senior Girls Softball League Saturday at Pinehurst Park.

But each time, the Sanford Lions Club managed to scramble back and tie the score, eventually winning the nail-biter 10-9 when Shayla Hooks singled home Kalesha Hayes in the bottom of the 13th inning.

In Junior League games, the Rotary Breakfast Club (3-0) stayed undefeated while handing Sanford First Baptist (2-1) its first loss with a 12-0 decision; the Real Estate Professionals topped the Kiwanis Club, 6-2; and the Sanford Optimist Club (2-1) knocked off the Real Estate Professionals, 13-4.

Bob Dance Dodge (0-4) led 6-2 going into the bottom of the sixth, 8-6 heading into the bottom of the eighth, and 9-8 entering the home half of the 10th. The Lions Club came back each time, tying the score and extending the game.

Melissa Holden led the Lions Club (3-0) with a home run and a double. Tabitha Lovett tripled and singled. Shannon Jackson hit two doubles. Octavia Redd added a double and a single while Keasha Bradley singled twice.

Keep in mind that accidents, injuries will happen

How do you respond to an injury, not one that you suffer, but one that happens to somebody else?

You watch enough athletic events, you'll see someone get hurt. On a national scale, perhaps the most memorable was Washington Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann going down underneath Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants during an ABC Monday Night Game of the Week telecast.

Last Tuesday night in a district tournament baseball game, Lyman High School senior Kiley Calapa suffered a broken leg when Spruce Creek's John Yuzollin slid into him during a force play at second base.

Not surprisingly, the reactions from the two factions present (not counting the few of us who had no vested interest in the outcome) were very different.

The Lyman crowd, focusing on Calapa as he tried to stand up, then fall to the ground in obvious pain, fell silent.

Spruce Creek's fans, focusing on Yuzollin and the fact that he helped the Hawks avoid a double play, thereby keeping alive the first rally of a scoreless game, were buzzing with excitement.

A couple of Spruce Creek players, afflicted with a testosterone imbalance common in teenage males, hotly expressed their appreciation of any bodily contact that didn't involve them.

That appreciation was swallowed in painful embarrassment when Calapa didn't get up.

Despite another writer's evaluation, it wasn't a "routine" play, but an accident that almost couldn't have been avoided.

With runners on first and second, the Spruce Creek batter hit a ball that took forever to get to shortstop Mike Hensch. And before it did, the Spruce Creek runner did a little shuffle and clutch, the way baserunners are taught, in an attempt to distract Hensch.

While it failed in that aspect, the dance forced Hensch to wait on the ball while Yuzollin, a 6-foot, 200-plus pound catcher, was rumbling towards second. Hensch got the ball and flipped to Calapa ... just as Yuzollin got there.

"That's baseball," said Lyman coach Bob McCullough, who's never been shy about protecting his players when he thinks things are getting out of hand. "Most modern ballplayers don't know how to slide properly. And when a play is slow developing like that, you have to know to get off the bag in a hurry."

It was an accident, pure and simple, involving two players, each one of the best on his respective teams, each with considerable youth and high school baseball experience.

How do you respond?

If it happens to an opponent, show some sensitivity and keep your mouth shut. Any celebration over the positive outcome of the play — a run scoring, for example — is going to be misconstrued and will be impossible to explain away.

And if it happens to one of your players, don't immediately believe that it was done with malicious intent. That's a tall order, but little will be gained by directing venom at the opposition. Concentrate instead on helping the player and supporting his or her family.

With the youth baseball all-star season a month away, there are going to be a lot of kids running into one another. The games mean more, the play's more intense, the players are a little quicker and more aggressive ... add in the fact that they're kids and you get the ideal conditions for collisions.

All you can do is be ready and be aware ... make sure everyone's OK before starting the celebration.

Add contrast to landscape

Ground covers enhance beauty of grounds

Increasing contrast in texture and color may be brought into your landscape by the use of ground covers. Not only are these plants an asset to the beauty of your grounds but they can reduce maintenance expenses.

Ground covers may be divided into two categories. Living materials would include such items as Vinca, and other plants with large, bright, colorful flowers and interesting textures. Non-living materials usually are types of gravel or pebbles although in a broader sense we include such materials as leaves and pine needles.

Ground covers are an asset to any maintenance program we often use them in areas which are difficult to maintain in lawn or other planting areas. Such areas may be large or small, between sidewalks and driveways or walk ways, along streets with curbs and areas of dense shade where grass will not grow. Ground covers may be chosen with great care to reduce maintenance to a minimum.

The different types of ground cover culture is the best way to choose the one that will be most appropriate. One of the best will be to choose a ground cover which has become established only occasionally.

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Some of the most adaptable ground covers are native Florida plants — Artillery plant, Carolina yellow jasmine, Coonss or Samia, Dielsodia, several ferns, Selaginella and Wedelia.

Many ground covers are excellent for shaded areas — Artillery plant, English ivy, Coonss, Fern, Ivy, Lili-turf, Lippia, Peppercorn, Selaginella, Wandering Jew, and Wedelia. Several ground covers can be used as effectively in flowering grounds for spring, summer and fall colors and they have the advantage that most are perennials. For spring and summer flowering consider English ivy, Calceola, Yellow Jasmine, Daylilies, Camellias, Lantana, Fertilis, Purple Echinacea and Wedelia. Cuphea, Lantana, Lippia and Wedelia provide fall and winter color.

South Florida is especially rich in exotic ground covers. Some of the most popular are Wedelia, Zebrina, Blood leaf, Rivesia, Fern, Haleschous, Brunfelsia, Aloe, Agave and other varieties of Cereus. Subtropical plants like Citrus, Spider lilies, Amaranthus and Daylilies are also popular.

Some of the exotic ground covers can be damaged or killed by low temperatures and thus are not permanent in Central or North Florida.

Make your landscape more attractive by using ground covers effectively and enjoy your lawn of reduced maintenance.

Names suited to occupations

DEAR BEARDED: Yesterday I shared some of the many letters I received when readers sent me names of people whose occupations (or professions) suited their names. I regret that I cannot print more, but here are some I couldn't resist:

DEAR ABE: A little more than two years ago, I broke my leg while visiting friends out of town. While awaiting surgery, I heard an orthopedic surgeon being paid. His name was Dr. Charles H. Hadden. In any, I was relieved to hear that my surgeon was going to be Dr. Hadden!

STEVE HENRY: I have fun to add Judge William Wayne Justice is a federal district court judge in Texas, and Judge John Mace Wisdom is a federal judge on the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals.

AMY BOWEN: RICHARDSON, TEXAS DEAR ABE: I'll bet you can't top this one: a gynecologist named Dr. Peck!

JERRY WOOD PACE DEAR ABE: My husband works for UPS and his name is Downs.

CELIA COOPER, MISS DEAR ABE: I'm not sure if you can print this, but there's a urologist in Newport, Ky. named

ADVICE
ASHBAH VAN BUREN

EDWARD HENNINGSEN, CHICAGO, ILL. DEAR ABE: Your request for names that correlated to occupations prompted me to recall a book by John T. Sorenson, "Remarkable Names of Real People" (Clarkson N. Potter). It offers (with formal documentation) the following coincidences:
— A. Moran (commissioner of education, Virgin Islands)
— Cardinal Sin (archbishop of Manila, Philippines)
— D. Schumuk (U.S.S.R. political activist, a real loser who spent most of his life in jail)
— Lewins and Lynch (attorneys, Jamaica, N.Y.)
— Plummer and Lead (plumbers, Norfolk, England)
— Mr. Vice — who was arrested 600 times and convicted 481 times.

J.E. STOCES, NEW OR. DEAR ABE: How about Dr. Robert Thomas, Ph.D., who was director emeritus of the Santa

Ann (Call.) Brown, Georgia
WILLIAM S. HUGHES, WESTPORT, CALIF. DEAR ABE: Capt. Kepp has been an officer in the Louisville police department for many years, and Sgt. Keuburn is a military police officer attached to the MP unit at Fort Knox, Ky.
JANISAVEL FARRIS, PALM BEACH, CALIF. DEAR ABE: There was much joking in Hammond, Ind., about the name of a local physician — Dr. Murray Shank.
KENNETH LAVERNE, PALM BEACH, CALIF. DEAR ABE: You are my favorite — all names people: Gary Payer, the professional gambler; Billy Reid, the attorney; and Larry Rowland, former presidential press secretary.

BOB BROWN, MISSISSAUGA, ONT. DEAR ABE: My husband, Danny Hall, is a general contractor specializing in roofing and new home construction, and my daughter, Amy Hall, is a manicurist.

BETTY HALL, MISSISSAUGA, ONT.

Is cola drinking a bad habit?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My family likes to drink a lot of cola. I understand that caffeine depletes vitamins and calcium in the body, but what about the phosphorus in the soda? A friend indicated the phosphoric acid in cola upsets the phosphorus-calcium balance in the body, but she didn't know exactly what happens.

DEAR READER: First of all, you must realize that colas are "junk foods" that have no nutritional value and, as such, should only be consumed in moderation.

Although the phosphorus in soda is not harmful (unless a person cannot excrete excess quantities because of kidney disease), the caffeine can cause problems: insomnia, jitteriness, rapid pulse, and excessive urination, to mention a few. In persons who consume a regular, balanced diet, the caffeine in coffee and cola will not cause vitamin deficiencies.

The general medical consensus is that the average adult should not consume more than two or three cans of cola (or other caffeine-containing beverages) a day. Additional fluid requirements can be met by consuming water, juice and other beverages.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently saw a neurosurgeon who feels I have the piriformis syndrome. He doesn't know of anyone who has experience with this condition or the surgery involved. I'm in a lot of pain and am very anxious to get some relief so I can return to work. Can you assist?

DEAR READER: The piriformis syndrome is a type of chronic back pain caused by trapping of the sciatic nerve in the buttock by the piriformis muscle. It is diagnosed by a simple maneuver.

In a sitting or lying position, the patient flexes the knee on the painful side and pulls the knee across the body. As the hip rotates, the tight piriformis muscle is stretched, increasing the discomfort.

Treatment consists of an easy set of exercises that can be taught by a chiropractor or orthopedic surgeon.

While your neurosurgeon is correct that not all doctors are familiar with this syndrome, it is real and can easily be treated by the practitioners I mentioned. Ask for a referral.

By Philip Alder
This week's deals are taken from the February issue of New Dealer Magazine. The magazine is aimed at both good players and the less experienced. A six-issue annual subscription may be ordered from The Bridge World, 26 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124 for $22 annual or $69 airmail.

The magazine isn't perfect. One writer recanted his title how he and his wife won an event. And there was this deal. (The awful bit comes at the end.) One rebids in a five-card suit only as a last resort, but it is clearly right with that North hand.

In six no-trump, there are 11 top tricks and two logical ways to go for number 12. You can cash the spade ace, planning to duck a spade next. This wins if the spades break 3-3, or someone holds the doubleton queen-jack, or West has a singleton honor; or if the diamond finesse works. Alternatively, you can take two diamond finesses through East.

Mathematically, the double-diamond-finesse line is better. Also, the spade-duck line suffers from the potential drawback that if East wins the second spade and switches to a diamond, you don't know whether to finesse. So, you win the opening lead with dummy's king and play a diamond to your nine. When the king appears, you claim.

The author ended with one of the worst jokes I had read in a long time.

A man goes into a bar with a cabbage under his arm. "What do you think of my new dog?" he asks the barman. "Dog? That's a cabbage."

mate!"
"What! I thought it was a cauli!"

YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 8, 1988

In the year ahead you can put lessons learned from past experiences to excellent use. This new dimension of wisdom will significantly enhance your possibilities for success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Basically you are a modest, unassuming individual and you only rarely exaggerate your accomplishments. Today, however, you might be tempted to boast. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $9.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4488, New York, NY 10188.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your resolve will probably start out as strong today, but unfortunately, it might dissipate before too long. Strive to be consistent and persistent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) Try to keep the old adage "neither a borrower nor a lender be" in mind today when dealing with friends. If finances backfire, it could hurt the friendship.

CANCER (June 21-July 23) Face challenging developments optimistically today, but not unrealistically. The line of demarcation between these two factors could be a bit blurred.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 23) If you are careless or reckless in the management of your resources today, you might have to pay a stiff penalty. Treat your money as a conservative banker would.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 23) Before doing something demanding today, you may feel tempted to consult everyone for an opinion or suggestion only to later ignore what each has told you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Give credence to your intuition today, but don't let it overcome your logic. If you have to choose between the two, select the later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may be disappointed today if you hope that others will do things for you that you really should do for yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep in mind today that although you are entitled to your opinion, trying to impose it on others will be about as welcome as fire ants are to a picnic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Guard against the inclination to make small tasks difficult and intimidating today. Try to prevent having to do things over.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Generosity is one of your nobler traits, but don't carry it to extremes today. You might feel tempted to give away something you'll later wish you'd kept.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Evaluate things carefully today. Even though you could have a fair grasp of the big picture, you might totally overlook pertinent details.
