Wolfinger: revamp system

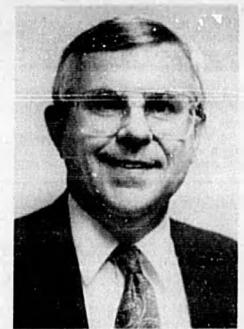

By SANDRA ELLIOTT Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - There is no "silver bullet" solution to the juvenile crime problem in Florida but the Seminole-Brevard State Attorney sees the need for an across the board, aggressive, pro-active approach to change the juvenile system.

"It is going to take a complete revamping, rethinking of the Juvenile system," state attorney Norm Wolfinger said.

Today's society is not dealing with the "Huckelberry Finn" type crime. Juvenile offenses of shoplifting or burglary of a friend's house. have given way to armed robberies and drive-by shootings.

"We have much more violent juvenile crimes. It's a different

Teen still faces trial for murder

By SANDRA ELLIOTT Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - The trial of a teen changed with murder and armed robbery may begin as scheduled Oct. 25 after a circuit court judge denied a defense motion to dismiss a grand jury indiciment.

Defense attorney Gary Andersen said Friday he was disappointed that Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. denied the motion filed on behalf of Terrance Jeffery Brooks. Brooks. 15, was indicted by a grand jury in February in the death of Mark Edward Marsh, who was shot on a Sanford street late last year. Celebrants join birthday bash

By VICKI DeSORMIER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - As with most birthday celebrations, there were hugs and kisses galore as well as squeals of excitement from those who had not seen one another for a long time. On Saturday, the guest of honor was Lakeview Middle School and the several hundred celebrants were students, staff members and teachers from yesterday and today.

"When we first came to this area, my boys came to school here," said Sandy Robinson, vice chairman of the Seminole County school board. "This is a wonderful school. I'm so proud to have been a part of it."

Lakeview Middle School opened a quarter of a century ago on a plot of land facing a lake thence the name) behind the new Seminole High School off of 25th Street in Sanford.

Children, and in a few cases, grandchildren of the original students have proudly waved the Mustang flag of Lakeview.

endanger this child or damage his payche because his name is released to the public."

"We are concerned with what we are doing with people (juveniles) who batter their parents and are released back into the home. We are concerned with juveniles with firearms. We're concerned about juvenile vio-lence in schools." he explained. "Those are the issues. As much as you want to be cuddly and soft with children, when they commit adult crimes, you've got to treat them as such.

Florida is the leading state in the nation in adult crime and that parallels juvenile crime, the attorney said. The crime rate of Florida juveniles is about 21/2 times that of the U.S. average.

"Our resources have to be allocated to the best services. But you can't do anything with the juvenile system until there is some accountability at the end." Wolfinger said, "and that's where we're dealing with the adults. Until you have criminals accepting that there is an expectation of meaningful punishment, you are not going to be able to control that and right now we have a juvenile and an adult system out of control."

Proposals to ban possession of firearms by teens have been advanced by some legislators in light of the recent shooting of a British tourist in northern Florida and other shootings around the state. A Colorado law governing teens and firearms possession is already being challenged in court, Wolfinger said.

"In some regards, we are very fortunate in both Brevard and Seminole counties. We have our problem kids," Wolfinger explained, "but we are not the magnitude of the bigger cities." Law enforcement programs. such as the Serious Habitual Offender Comprehensive Action Program, which track the activity of more serious juvenile offenders are not in place locally. More serious offenders are direct-filed into the adult system.

Earlier this month. Wolfinger attended a strategic planning conference in Colorado for juvenile justice issues.

states that have statutes where you can order parents into the courtroom. Just get more parental involvement, more parental responsibility over their children." he commented. "In Florida, that is sadly lacking. Obviously, you've got to have parental support or else we are going to continue to have a juvenile problem. That's the front line. You've got to have parents accepting the responsi-bility and accountability for their children."

In some states, parents are ordered into court and are ordered to make money payments for damages done by the juve-

The issue of confidentiality is another which Wolfinger said has to be addressed.

"I hear in one ear the cry of the liberals and some of the social establishment, we can't label children, but then we hear in the other the cry of the victims who could care less if it was a juvenile or an adult who stabbed them."

"These are young hoodlums, they deserve no more, no less than adults," Wolfinger said.

Wolfinger is co-chair of a committee from the Florida Prosecutors Association which is drafting legislation dealing with juvenile crime. One of the proposals lowers the age for direct filing cases against juveniles in adult court.

"Right now 16 and 17 year olds are direct flies, and we are looking at 14 or 15 year old direct files for violent offenses." the attorney said. "We have got to get away from, its sort of a paradigm shift, considering these (juveniles) as just soft. cuddly children, and when they commit violent acts, then they should be held fully accountable. We've got to focus more on public safety than on soft, cuddly children. Public safety should be first and foremost." the state attorney said.

Working with the school to cut truancy rates is another way to approach delinquency problems.

"I firmly believe that before you are a truant, and if we can identify these kids and get them, direct their lives at that point. that's the time to do it," Wolf-inger said. A grant has been applied for to work with the truancy problem.

Wolfinger has also established a program called the State At-for victims of juvenile crime :

"We believe very firmly that if we can make a dimerence, to in the juvenile section. That's where we can, perhaps, make a dent," Wolfinger concluded. "And that's what we are going to do in the next four years."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

HRS to OK interracial adoptions

MELBOURNE - Children should not go homeless because of their race, said Health and Rehabilitative Services Secretary Jim Towey in declaring an end to a state policy discouraging interracial adoptions.
His announcement came Friday, two days after a white Indialantic couple was barred from visiting a 13-year-old black boy they have been trying to adopt for a year.

"We've got almost 200 black children under 12 (up for adoption) in the state, and we're concerned that they will not be adopted," he said. "The (old) rules are saying no home is better than a home."

The state will change the adoption guidelines that are interpreted in some HRS districts as making race the most important criteria in matching children and parents. he said.

A revised HRS policy is being drafted and should be in place by the end of the year, he told Florida Today, and it should end the practice in some areas of automatically barring black-white adoptions.

Towey's decision followed another set-

HRS officials have barred the Boettchers from meeting with the boy for more than a year since they said they wanted to adopt him. The child once lived with the couple's 15-year-old adopted son, Raymond, in an Orlando group home. A judge upheld the HRS position Wednesday.

The Boettchers tracked down the boy to a foster home in Orlando and said that until recently, he had thought they abandoned

It is unclear how Towey's decision will affect the Boettcher case. Brevard County HRS officials have refused to comment on the case.

"Oh my God, that's wonderful" Rebecca Boettcher said Friday evening. "It's good news for hundreds of children. I don't know if it'll make any difference for us, but it'll make a lot of difference for other children looking for a home."

Her husband added, "Super, super, super,

I'm so happy. It's been a long time coming. It should never have been a policy in the first place. Boy. I'm glad it's gone. The couple's attorney, Jan Ridley, said she was pleased the policy will be changed but was cautious about how it would be implemented. "The policy ... does not remove the implicit racism in the system."

The Rev. James McClam, president of the North Brevard branch of the National Association of Colored People, said, "I'm very cautious about any news coming from one person at HRS, but if it is really happening, then it is really good news for a

Example of system gone wrong tries to get himself right

By DAN SEWELL Associated Press Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE - For the last six months, 13-year-old Percy has been attending church, playing sports, studying and mostly, staying out of trou-

"Just chillin'." he summarizes.

Truly chilling is listening to this smiling, 5-foot-1 boy re-count the life that carned him

the nickname "Crime Boy."

He was the symbol of a troubled system, an amoral, pint-sized predator carrying deadly steel as he prowled through crack-infested neighborhoods, stealing, vandalizing, and robbing. He laughed at his victims, the police who caught him and at a revolving-door juvenile justice

"We'd just do it. There was nothing else to do. Everybody was doing it," he recalls. "Ain't nobody cared. You could kill somebody, or somebody could kill you. If you die, you die."

At age 8, Percy knocked off a convenience store.

It meant the first of many trips to juvenile detention, where he watched TV, played cards and waited for release. He thought about reform during lengthy "rap sessions," but once he was out. "I would stay out of trouble for two or three days, maybe a week." He didn't use cocaine himself, but bought cocaine rocks to trade for weapons from addicts. Obtaining a 9mm revolver "was easy, like going to the store."

At age 12, he had a rap sheet with 57 charges, including armed robbery. That's when he was dubbed "Crime Boy." astonishing example of how kid criminals are becoming more numerous, more prolific and more dangerous than ever.

In Florida, juvenile crime has emerged as the No. 1 focus of concern in the state with the nation's highest overall crime

Gov. Lawton Chiles announced last week juvenile crime will be included in a November special legislative session, and there has been a series of hearing and seminars searching for answers on juvenile crime.

All four suspects in the Monticello, Fla., murder of a British visitor last month are juveniles. One is 13, and like Percy, he had more than 50 prior charges starting at age 8.

Meanwhile, Percy has quietly been the focus of an experimental effort that may once again make him an example. This time, of how a seemingly doomed life can be turned around.

Dennis Grant looked at the reports last spring on the 12-year-old career criminal and "saw a child in need. I saw an opportunity to relate our philosophy to the community.'

He's an elder at the Lauderdale Lakes Fellowship

Center Church, which emphasizes restoration of lives.

Grant and his pastor persuaded Judge Robert Collins to release Percy to his grandmother while the church promised to work with him. Collins said it was a risk, but worth trying since "he needs some Grant, 42, of Jamaica, is a longtime community activist. A ychology student who works for a credit agency, he says Percy was "a product of his environment." Percy doesn't know his father. His mother is in Georgia prison for providing the gun that her boylriend used to kill a deputy. He's got an uncle in prison. His grandmother, 41, did time on a bad-check charge. They lived in a drug-ridden, impoverished neighborhood. Grant found Percy and his grandmother a new home, miles away, after persuading the landlord to lower the rent and the federal government to subsidize it.

Grant, who has two sons, took Percy home for weekends, to church on Sundays, and youth activities on Friday nights.

"People say this kid is street-wise. But you can reprogram their minds. A kid like that has never been hugged, never known this attention."

For Percy, avoiding crime for six months is a milestone.

"We think we're on the right track. I'm confident that if everything continues, it's going to be a complete turnaround," says There are those who say Percy is fooling naive do-gooders to avoid punishment for his crimes.

"Crime Boy is an incorrigible sociopath who is beyond all saving. I say lock the little menace up for the maximum sentence ... then throw away the key," wrote Jonathan Neuman, of Hollywood, Fla., in one of many letters about him over the months.

Some police familiar with Percy have also expressed skep-

"I'm going to prove them all wrong," Percy replies.

Grant formed the Juvenile Restoration Council, expanding his concept to have other churches adopt a criminal child.

"The agencies and other organizations have been looking at a broad picture, with a thousand children. But that has not been working. We're taking it child by Five churches have taken on children under the program.

But Percy says he wants to be like Grant and work with juve-nile criminals, "tell them it's straight (good), that they can chill. You got to quit."

And, he has a new nickname: "Church Boy."

Pilot program first step in ending poverty

For three decades, the government has tried to winnow the ranks of America's poor, and still the war on poverty rages. American taxpayers have contributed $5.1 trillion to quell a tide that never subsided. Currently, over 30 million Americans live in poverty, a rate unchanged from President Lyndon Johnson's first call to arms, according to the Census Department.

The theory from the beginning has been one of government as the omnipotent provider of housing, food through food stamps, medical care through Medicaid, and cash through Aid to Dependent Children.

But it didn't work.

The government's welfare system leaves a glut of single mothers with too many children and not enough hope. It robs recipients of self-worth: both the mothers who languish under those conditions knowing that bearing more babies means receiving more money. and the fathers who are not encouraged to marry because their women earn more when the government is the providing father.

in a pilot program for which Health and Human Services has applied in Seminole County, the concept of offering a hand up instead of a handout could be a fledgling step toward independence for many people mired

In the system.

The three-year program, funded by a $6 million grant at no cost to the county, would include job training, child daycare, transportation and other incentives to get a job and off years to become self-supported. If they do not. their benenilts cease, although those of their dependents do not.

Poverty has remained intractable for two reasons: People caught in the cycle know only that cycle, passing it on to their children. And the breakdown of the American family, also fostered by a welfare system that actually penalizes a woman who marries her baby's father. This has caused an explosion of single-parent households headed by women, the most predominant and fastest-growing segment of poor folks today.

This pilot program is a tentative first step toward finally winning the war on poverty. The HHS board must also be sure jobs are available in the county at the end of a participants' three year commitment. The program must encourage parents to marry and raise their children together, one proven, winning maneuver in a 30-year war too long

Airport noise

Re: Sanford Herald article, Monday, Oct. 11, Noise Concerns Citizens': Noise and fatalities concern all tax paying cows and alligators near Neighborhoods in Heathrow, Timacuan, Heath-row Elementary and Hills of Lake Mary and others were all built knowing full well about the airport and the noise problem. However, the builders and financiers thought clout and money could move mountains, so ole' man time will tell the story regarding the outcome. We, the residents, around and very near Lake Jesup have historical homes and could write a book about noise etc. when the Naval air station was here. I for one can truthfully say it was a real nightinare. I have always wondered who had the governing factor in bringing it here. However, Sanford is the "friendly" city and we are the "scapegoats" for everything no one else wants. How refreshing it would be to have commissioners who cared for our welfare. It would be to Pat Blake's advantage to find out the truth about the Lake Jesup area before making any more comments about the cows and alligators. For her information most of the homes are historical and every taxpaying cow and alligator out here fear for their safety. The noise factor is a higger concern because we are so near the airport. The governmental agencies have all the facts on maps and perhaps she and all the people for responsible airport development should have their statistics right and think again before screaming for changes. It would be six of one and a half dozen of the other plus millions to make a change even if the wind is not a factor. Oriando got all the publicity and we got all the noise from the air show last year. Our driveways were blocked, our streets were blocked, what an inconvenience. An ambulance trying to make an emergency call out here was delayed because they couldn't get there, oh, I could go on and on.

Also, we longstanding taxpaying cows and alligators will try to hold our own and see what happens to our historical neighborhood and we will also find out if the governmental agencies have money to throw away due to the cry of come- lately residents that should have known better.

Teacher's contributions still special

If you ever attended or visited Seminole Community College between 1966 and 1993 you probably encountered Dorothy Morrison. Morrison taught English and Humanities.

Morrison moved to Sanford with her family in 1942. She had just completed junior high school (middle school) in Atlanta, Ga. She enrolled in Seminole High School. After graduating she returned to Agnes Scott College, Atlanta, She majored in English and history.

Morrison remained in Atlanta for 15 years and taught school. She then returned to Sanford to be with her parents. She secured a position at Seminole High School. During this period, Mason Wharton, chairman of the Seminole County School Board was interested in starting a junior college. Morrison was excited about this prospect and about teaching at the junior college.

She applied for and was hired as an English teacher at Seminole Community College in 1966. She taught English I, English II and British literature. She thoroughly enjoyed imparting knowledge to her students. British literature from Beowulf to Chaucer was one of her favorite subjects. When she began teaching Humanities I and II she and the students explored Egypt. Greece, Rome and Medieval Times. Humanities embraced issues from the evolution of Mohammedism to Eurocentric issues.

LURLENE SWEETING

Morrison recalls that she was always an avid reader; anyone who has an unquenchable thirst for knowledge usually likes reading. She is firmly committed to the belief that education and learning is a lifelong process.

While enrolled in graduate studies at Carnegie Mellon in Pittsburgh she did an in-depth analysis of Zora Neal Hurston, her biography and her works. To think that Laura Neal Hurston actually lived in Sanford at one time made her research more meaningful. She applauds the efforts of the organizers of the annual Zora Neal Hurston Festival in Eatonville. She has never missed a festival.

Morrison's father moved to Sanford in 1941. Through his employment with Ford Motor Company he met John Strickland in Cordele, Ga-

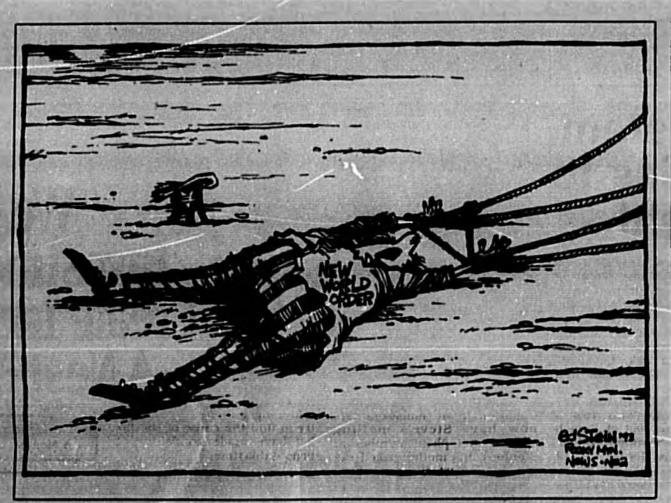

Strickland and his nephew had established a Ford dealership in downtown Sanford. The site occupied by the new post office was their first location. Strickland and Morrison became partners and moved to First Street occupying the area between the library and the Chamber of Commerce. Currently, this is a vacant lot.

All of the automobile dealers were moving to First Street. Morrison's father decided to move the dealership to 17-92 north of Lake Mary Boulevard, the site currently known as Seminole Ford. Morrison later sold the business.

Retirement was on the agenda for Morrison June 1993. However, retirement is not the ending of her career of service to this community, just a new chapter. At the urging of friends and because of her own interests, she decided to return to First Street. She has rented office space on the second floor of Knight's Shoe Store, 208 East First Street, Sanford.

She is at the contemplative and planning stage of what she will be doing. She anticipates that Sanford will more closely resemble its historical prominence. She also anticipates that retirement will afford her the opportunity to continue to serve this community. Her life has been invested here and she plans to honor her family tradition and work to improve the quality of life in

Gun control: Getting angry

BOSTON - There were murders over the weekend. Everyday, garden-variety murders. or should I say everyday, urban-variety

Most of them ended up buried, if you will excuse the expression, in the back of the paper. When there are 16,000 murders by firearms every year, every homicide isn't front page news. Hoys and young men are shot over turn, over drugs, over money, over nothing, all

Sometimes it takes a fresh angle, a new twist, something unusual to make a headline out of a mere murder. The victim has to be a tourist on a highway. Or a policeman. A 4-year-old caught in the cross-fire. Or an entire Shootings for that matter, mere woundings, are rarely noted at all, except on the police blotter or the hospital admission chart. Nor is there a place to record instances of fear, except in the minds of people who have seen their cities become shooting ranges and their neighbors become targets.

We have become nearly shock-proof. We have watched cynically as the political hot potato of violence is passed among policymakers who call for more police and stronger families, more jails and social programs.

But we are not immune to anger. The cumulative effect of murder - another day. another 40 deaths — has finally simmered into a heated insistence that we do something as well about those efficient tools of homicide: the

What was it Janet Reno said some months ago? "If only this nation would rise up and tell the NRA to get lost." Well, for the first time in memory, the gun lobby is on the defensive. For the first time, candidates who once feared the NRA are running against it. For the first time. gun control laws are not political suicide. They may be political salvation.

In New Jersey, the beleaguered Gov. Jim Florio resurrected his campaign with an attack ad that was literally about attack weapons. The ad asked: why would the NRA spend a million dollars to elect Christie Todd

In Virginia, Attorney General Mary Sue Terry has tagged her opponent in the gover-nor's race this way: George Allen, Reckless on Guns, Politics As Usual.

There has been a rash of modest gun control victories in the state legislatures as well. This year. Connecticut passed a ban on assault weapons. Virginia passed another limiting the purchase of guna to one a month.

In Colorado, after an infant was killed in a shoot-out at the zoo, Gov. Roy Romer called a special session of the legislature to ban juvenile possession of handguns. Now in Massachusetts, the gun-owning hunter, Republican Gov. William Weld, is supporting both a ban on assault weapons and on possession of handguns by anyone under 21.

Gun control advocates have also found allies too among doctors who speak of guns these days the way they speak of cigarettes: as a public health menace. They taily up the cost of gunshot wounds they way they taily the costs of lung cancer. They find that the risk of homicide is three times greater in a home with a gun than in a home without one.

Now Congress once a wholly owned subsidary of the NRA - is getting the message just as it is getting the Brady bill. Again.

"How many years has it been since Jim Brady got shot?" asked Clinton when he apoke of violence at his law school reunion last weekend. It's been 12 years. "And still we haven't passed the Brady

This modest bill requires a five-day waiting period and a background check before someone can buy a gun. Friends of the bill worry that it may disappoint a public already skeptical about the ability of such laws to reduce violence. But even enemies agree that it has become he national referendum on the future of gun control.

If Brady passes, the NRA spell is broken. What happens next? A national ban on assault weapons? A health-care tax on guns and bullets? A federal ban on minors possessing handguns? We begin the long haul toward saner policies and safer streets.

For now, turn to the back of the paper. Another day, another murder. Or two. Hillary Clinton said it best on CNN, "I cannot bear to pick up another newspaper and read about another baby shot."

There is one thing even worse. If babies with bullets in them stop being news.

Death of African leader poses some questions

WASHINGTON - If the Kremlin files have not already been destroyed, key information may soon be found that could indicate that hard-line Communists of the Gorbachev regime conspired to assassinate a charismatic African leader seven years ago.

This story of international Cold War intrigue comes from top aides to Boris Yeltsin, who have been poring over secret KOB and Central Committee documents trying to find discrediting information about the Gorbachev government.

Yeltsin's aides have told us that the more proof they find of Communist misdeeds, the more effectively Yeltsin can consolidate bis power by painting the former Soviet leaders as a corrupt and irresponsible alternative to his

This latest chapter in Yeltsin's battle to revise history involves the speculation that Soviet Moscow leaders may have murdered Mozambiquan President Samora Machel in October 1986 —

to Boris Yeltsin The downed plane, which killed 33 others besides Machel, has long been a mystery to international investigators. Some have looked at the facts and concluded it was an accident,

Machel became Mozambique's first president after it won independence from Portugal in 1975. A committed Marxist, Machel was the guerrilla leader of the liberation move-ment who quickly purged his government of all anti-Marxist elements, and threw thousands of Mozambiquans into "reeducation" camps to learn the new way. Thousands of Soviet bloc soldiers and advisers came in and virtually took over portions of the new government.

while others still believe darker forces were at

The Soviets believed - mistakenly, it turns out - that Machel was firmly in their sphere of influence. Machel gave plenty of warning that he wasn't about to turn his new nation into a Soviet puppet. U.S. Intelligence picked up these signals, which it noted in a classified State Department report from the late 1970s: This report noted an instance where Mozambique's then-foreign minister, Joaquim Chissano, privately warned a Soviet official that "bilateral relations are based on friendship, not dependence, and he warned the Soviets against meddling in the internal affairs of Mozam bique."

Machel echoed these sentiments himself on several occasions. Confidants say that he would sometimes shout to a Soviet official that "I did not fight the war of independence just to get a new master in Moscow."

The Soviets considered this prideful bluster until Machel began to thaw relations with the United States in 1982. Relations between this "Marxist" president and Ronald Reagan soon became surprisingly warm, with Reagan calling him "amigo" in one Oval Office meeting. Also in Machel's corner was Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter, who as a roving ambassador to Africa became convinced that Mozambique was ready to tilt to the West.

By the time his plane crashed, Machel was irretrievably headed toward full Western fellowship. The Soviets were increasingly alarmed by Machel's overtures to the West. and the peacemaking gestures he was making to the rebels who had been fighting his government. If Machel made peace with his domestic enemies, he might not need all the weaponry the Soviets had been supplying

During my conversations with him he went back to when the Celery City Grill was located about where the Celery City Printing Company and Sweeneys, are now altuated, on the eastside of Magnolia Avenue just north of Third Street. The grill was owned by a fellow named Kenneth Slack who also owned the typewriter.

It was an "Oliver," patented in 1898. It was not an "Olivetti." It was extremely heavy since it had a large cast fron base. This particular machine, Stapleton told me, was made in 1900. I was told that Slack was known by a George Dark who once owned property on French Avenue. Another old timer who knew Slack is barber A.L. Thomas, a former fireman, who owns his own shop in the 100 block of South Palmetto Avenue.

. If we can find out more about the vintage typewriter we'll let you know. Meanwhile, we extend out condolences to Stapleton's family. By the way, he was a retired salesman for the Eli Witt Company of Tampa and a veteran of World War II.

By the way, not long ago I ran into Rupert and Minnie Strickland in front of a local supermarket. I was told they had now lived in Sanford for 60 years. Rupert was the local Amoco bulk dealer for years. He and his wife raised two daughters. Sometimes I wonder how they did it because Rupert was so wrapped up in his Kiwanis Club work as well as his busi-

Then my Herald comes the other afternoon. I read where my 90-year-old friend, Rupert, also has passed away. I had his name on my list to write a column about him. I got word to his widow that I stil intended to do it. I was told she said it would be appreciated. Rupert was one of our real old timers. We got a call from Elaine Drake who said she had intended for sometime to call us and let us know we left out the name of one of the local store's veteran employees. Mrs. Doris Milam, now the widow of veteran Sanford dry cleaner Marvin Milam.

Doris is now residing with her daughter Becky Rouce, at 536 Jill Road, Middleburg, FL 32608. We hear Doris is not in the best of health. Some of you old timers who knew her might want to send her a card or a note as I did. I'll bet she would appreclate it. Many of you old timers will recall Dorts was an accomplished musician and for many years was organist for Sanford's First Baptist Church.

How I missed listing Doris among all those well known Penney employees I'll never understand. So, I apologize right here and now.

Not too long ago got a letter from my friend Jeno Paulucet. It

"Want you to know, Julian, I take great enjoyment in reading your columns. Not only are they well written but very nostalgic and bring back memories to me of days of old."

"My wife Lois and I first came here in 1944 and there's been a lot of history since then. Keep up the good work. It's marvelous to read your articles."

It's words like these keep me whacking out these columns on my old standard manual typewriter...not only for our well-to-do readers but for the po' folks, too, who write, call and stop me in the stores when I'm shopping.

The phone buzzed not long ago. It was old friend Ernie Baumeister. I'd always known Ernie as a painter. Ernie's retired but every now and then he lends a hand to his son who operates the Six Flags nursery and mulching business in Longwood. Ernie and his wife still reside at 114 Pinecrest Drive, a house they bought when they first came to Sanford.

How in this world June 6, 1944 can ever be overlooked I'll never understand. May God forbid that it'll ever be overlooked again.

If you're a college football fan you're bound to have seen some Stanford University games and noticed the Cardinal's quarterback is named Steve Stenstrom. Dozens of friends have inquired if Steve had any connection with the local Stenstrom clan or the one in Wauchula. I had a cousin from Zellwood who owned and operated an auto upholstery shop in downtown San Francisco. He raised a family out there and, of course, we wondered if Steve was one of my cousin's relatives.

My son. Richard of DeLeon Springs, let his curiosity get the better of him. He made some calls and found out Steve's parents live in Lake Forest, Calif. which is in Orange County (east of Los Angeles) and nowhere near Palo Alto where Stanford is situated. Steve's mother. Linda, allowed that she and her husband, Peter, went to California from Minnesota. We steve a mailing address and phone number at Stanford. His mother asked my son to contact Steve. Richard will, right after the football scason is over. Steve is a junior and is now in his third consecutive year as Stanford's number one quarterback.

"This is truly a community school," said Sanford mayor Bettye Smith. "I think that we can see that Lakeview Middle School is one of the best schools in the country.

Smith, other dignitaries, and those who have worked there, joined in praising the school that has educated about half of Sanford's students for 25 years.

Jean Bryant, who had been a school board member at the time the school opened, said she believed the school was "improving with time."

Indeed, those who made their way through the brick buildings commented on the physical im-provements that had been made on the buildings in the last year.

"It's so much brighter than I remember." Junita Singletary, who attended the school in the mid 1970s, said. "I enjoyed going to school here, but I don't remember it being so pretty."

Many talked about the educational improvements made at the school recently.

A TRIBUTE TO REV. DR. HARRY D RUCKER, SR. Pastor of the First Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church 700 ELM AVE. SANFORD, FLORIDA

Rev. Dr. Harry D. Rucker, Sr.

A Decade Growth and

Center in Atlanta, Georgia working towards his Master of Divinity Degree. His father in the ministry, the late Rev. Joseph F. Hargrett, informed Rev. Rucker of vacant church in Sanford and made provisions for him to preach at First Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church.

The church had heard several pastors, but a pulpit committee selected Rev. Rucker as the next pastor of the church. Upon graduating from Seminary, Rev. Rucker took on the pastorate of First Shiloh. Since that time, many accomplishments have been achieved. For example, when Pastor Rucker came to Sanford, First Shiloh was in a Building Fund project. They were planning to build an edifice on 11th and 12th Street and Holly Avenue.

our State Convention (The Progressive Missionary and Educational Baptist State Convention of Florida) to Sanford in March of 1989. There were many obstacles along the way. For 2,500 delegates from across the State of Florida would be gathering in our city Hotel accommodations were hard to come by, most hotels didn't believe that many people were really coming. We finally had to book rooms as far away as Altamonte Springs. Merchants would not patronize our effort by purchasing ads in our souvenir booklet for they felt they would not get much business. Basically, as a whole, Sanford shut down on us and we were on our own. However, in the end under Rev. Rucker's the merchants who would not patronize us then, were sending us letters asking us to bring the convention back because their business increased that week.

Then, of course, we had the beginning of what's been called "Rucker's Parade", the Annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Parade and Rally held each year in the observance of Dr. King's birthday celebration. After vigorously pushing for the 3rd Monday In January to become a paid holiday in the City of Sanford, Rev. Rucker noticed that no activities were planned during the day. People stayed home and barbequed, which was not the purpose of the holiday. The purpose was for us to reflect on the accomplishments of Dr. King and show the love and togetherness that he died for. Thus the Parade and Rally were born and it continues to grow larger and stronger each year.

From 1991 thru 1993, several national celebrities have been brought into the Sanford area under Pastor Rucker's leadership. This is indeed a great accomplishment, for Sanford is located between two major cities (Orlando and Daytona Beach) and is often overlooked for major events. However, Pastor Rucker was determined it could be done. In both 1991 and 1993, the world renowned Mississippi Mass Choir performed at the Sanford Civic Center. Also, in 1992, the Honorable Shirley Chisholm spoke for our Annual Church Banquet, just to name a few. Many other plans are under way for other national guests to come to Sanford. Finally, Vernon "Poppa" Jones and the up and coming Sanford Community Choir recently recorded a "live" album at First Shiloh.

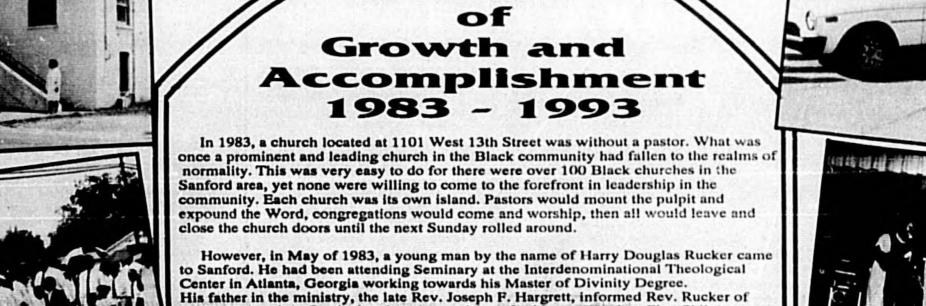

Several community meetings are held at First Shiloh on a monthly basis. So much so until Rev. Rucker recently had the N.A.A.C.P. Community Service Award bestowed him for his dedicated leadership ability at the church as well as in the community. And guess what, God is not through with him yet. For some plans for the future include, widening the edifice of First Shiloh for a larger seating capacity and opening up the First Shiloh Institute of Learning which will educate children from Pre-K to the 3rd Grade, adding a grade each year until it reaches the 12th Grade. Pastor Rucker has and it continuing to truly dedicate his life to God, First Shiloh and the community.

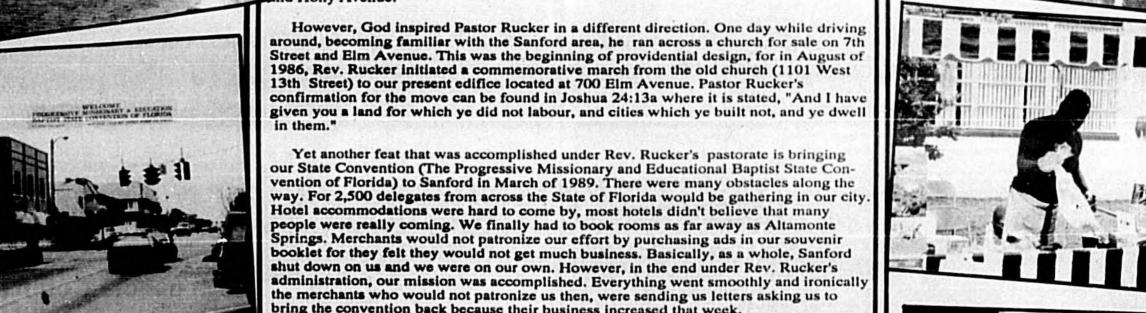

Finally, a personal goal which was achieved this year in May by Pastor Rucker was that of receiving his Doctorate Degree from the Reformed Theological Seminary in Maitland. Dr. Rucker became the first student as well as the first Black student to receive a Doctorate Degree from the Maitland Campus (the main campus is located in Jackson, Mississippi).

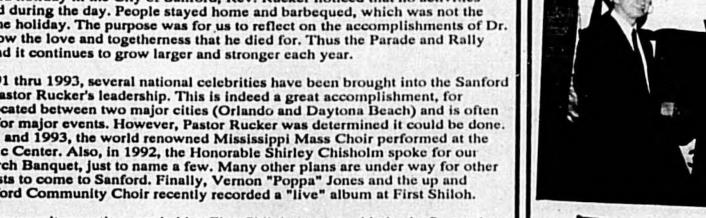

May God continue to continue to bless the Reverend Doctor Harry D. Rucker, Sr. as he strives to lead his church and community to a higher level of spiritual growth. HAPPY 10TH ANNIVERSARY

WE LOVE YOU PASTOR RUCKER!

The economic status of senior Americans has improved over the past 30 years. Yet 12.9 percent of the country's elderly still live in poverty, said Horace D. Deets, executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons.

The 2.6 percent increase will raise the average benefit for a widow or widower, living alone, from $615 to $631. For a disabled worker, benefits would go from $625 to $641, the Social Security Administration said.

A disabled worker with a family would get $28 more, for a $1,092 monthly benefit, and an aged couple would get $29 more a month, or $1,140.

SHS prepares for the future and celebrates a tradition

One of the most inevitable facts a junior or senior hoping to go to a college or university has to face is that of taking standardized tests. The SAT among them constitutes the majority of the attention and fear among the students, since this is the test looked upon so often by institutions searching for potential pupils. These tests are essentially used to weed out the bad from the good students. They are a tool in helping the colleges and universities have their pick of the litter. So, much emphasis is placed on standardized tests such as the SAT as well as the PSAT and the ACT.

Seniors, and some juniors, took the SAT on Saturday, Oct. 9 at either Lyman or Lake Brantley high schools.

Some had prepared for this moment for what seemed like all of their natural lives, but the few completions, reading com-who had no idea of what subects were even covered on the SAT were in for quite a surprise.

Although the tests only consists of math and English questions, the questions range from easy to extremely difficult. They covered analogies, sentence

English portion of the test. The math section covered basic math as well as algebra, geometry and trigonometry

The aim of students taking the three hour test is to achieve the highest possible score in order to impress the college or university they hope to attend.

The highest possible score, which is rarely achieved, is 1600.

Not only does the SAT boost academic morale among students, it also is used as a key to which students will receive scholarships.

In other words, the higher one's SAT scores, the better chance one has of being accepted into the institution of his choice and also of being awarded a scholarship.

National Mammography Day reminds women of annual exams, tests

By RICHARD S. HOLLIS, M.D. President, American College of Obstetricians, Gynecologists

Oct. 19 is National Mammography Day, a good time to review when you should have a mammogram.

A mammogram is an X-ray of the breast used by doctors to detect breast cancer early, before it has spread. Mammography can reveal the presence of small cancers up to two years before they can be felt by you or your physician. With early diagnosis and treatment, you have up to a 90 percent chance of surviving breast cancer. Since mammography is not 100 percent accurate, however, it is also very important to practice monthly breast self examination.

Since the risk of breast cancer ncreases with age, all women who have reached middle age should add mammograms to a health routine that includes monthly breast self-exams and annual physician breast exams. f you are age 50 or older, you should have a mammogram each year. If you are between the ages of 40 and 49, you are urged to have a mammogram every one to two years.

You may have heard about ome studies that question the need for regular mammograms or women in the 40 to 49 age group. These studies are under review by medical groups, but until there is more conclusive evidence, most physicians coninue to urge women in their 40s to have periodic mammograms. Most states now require insurance companies to cover or partially cover the cost of a mammogram, which is generally between $100 and $125. Ask you insurance carrier about your policy. The majority of states also provide some coverage under Medicaid, while Medicare

Cataract update

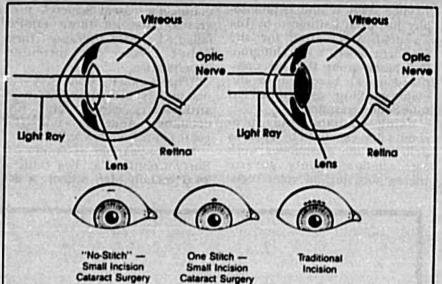

Advancing from traditional to 'no-stitch' small incision surgery

The ciarity of your vision often depends on the eye's ability to focus light rays onto the retina (the light sensitive lining of the eye). As light enters the eye, ideally the comea and lens will bend and focus the rays onto the retina. The retina then sends an impulse to the brain by way of the optic nerve. The brain interprets this impulse and forms and image. Any abnormality of this visual pathway, from the cornea to the brain, will result in either partial or total loss of

A cataract is a clouding of the normally crystal clear lens of the eye. As the "cloudiness" increases, fewer light rays are able to penetrate the lens. Hence, vision becomes increasingly dim. Cataracts are generally a part of the normal aging process. As you become older, you have reason to suspect the development of cataracts when a change in vision is noticed. Some people complain that there is a "film" or "fog" over their eye and notice glare in bright light. As the cloudiness increases, vision decreases. This condition cannot be totally corrected with medicine or glasses. If the cataract continues to grow, vision can be completely blocked, causing blindness. Also, when cataracts become dense or advanced, they may cause other eye conditions. such as inflammation or glaucoma (elevated fluid pressure in the eye).

Cataract surgery is recommended when you have difficulty performing your daily activities or doing things you enjoy. Advancements in left intact in the eye. lasers cannot remove cataracts. Several surgical techniques are used today in the treatment of cataracts. The most common procedure used during the last 10 years is called Extracapsular Cataract Extraction. This procedure usually involves a 10 mm incision and requires several stitches. Currently a new method called one stitch/small incision surgery of phacoemulaification, is being used by some surgeons. A small incision, one third the size of a traditional incision, is made under the upper lid. Through this incision, the doctor places an instrument called a phacoemulsifier, which uses sound waves to break up the cataract and remove the particles from the eye. The outer bag or "capsule" of the lens is made cataract surgery one of the ment lens must be provided. This capsule also produces a barrier between the Surgery also means that fewer stitches are needed. This technique not only decreases the time it takes for the eye to heal. but also reduces irregularities of the surface of the eye (astigmatism).

A relatively new innovation is the use of "no-stitch" cataract surgery. With this type of surgery, a small incision is used. but it is placed away from the iris (the colored part of the eye). A tunnel is created from the incision to the iris. The cataract is removed and the implant placed into the eye through this tunnel. The tunnel is self-sealing and therefore, does not require a stitch. Since stitches can cause astigmatism, "no-stitch" sur-gery decreases the risk of this unwanted problem. Additionally, patients may be more comfortable after surgery because there are no stitches to cause irritation.

Intraocular Lens Implants are the preferred method of lens replacement today. They cause little or no visual distortion and patients do not have the inconvenience of handling or cleaning the lens. The lens implant remains permanently inside the eye, in the same position as the natural lens. With intraocular lens implants. patients are not hindered by poor vision as they would be with the thick cataract glasses or or a hospital. Cataracts cannot complications. Small Incision when attempting to look for and insert a contact lens. Although normal thickness glasses may be required over the lens implant to provide the clearest distance and near vision, most patients simply open their eyes each morning and enjoy the benefits of clear vision.

Prior to surgery, the patient is scheduled for presurgical testing. A complete eye evaluation is performed, followed by specific diagnostic testing...this helps to insure the best possible surgical results. Although cataract surgery is a very delicate microsurgical operation for the surgeon, it is a relatively short and easy procedure for the patient.

Shortly after surgery is completed, the patient may go home and resume almost all routine activities immediately. It must be understood that complication may occur in all types of surgery. In cataract surgery, hemorrhage, infection and awelling are all possible, but very uncommon. The chance of any significant complication is less than 5 percent. Cataract surgery is among the safest and most successful procedures in the medical field. However, if a problem does arise, prompt treatment may resolve it.

Each year, approximately 10 percent of the patients who undergo extracapsular cataract surgery develop a haze of the outer bag or capsule of the lens surrounding the lens implant. Should this occur, a Yag Laser can clear the haziness. Yag Laser Surgery is an exciting advancement in medical treatment. The Yag Laser is used to create an opening in the clouded membrane, which significantly improves the patient's vision. It is the safest treatment used surgically in ophthalmology. NEW ORLEANS - A heart defect that killed college basketball star Hank Gathers during a game in 1990 can now be identified in many young athletes, allowing doctors to save them from a similar fate, researchers report.

The defect, known as cardiomyopathy, often runs in families, but until now it often became apparent only with an athlete's collapse, doctors said Wednesday.

Doctors who have identified mutations responsible for about 40 percent of cases of the inherited form of the disorder say they expect to be able to devise treatments to control it.

Meanwhile, new genetic tests warn affected children to stay sudden death.

out of competitive sports, said Dr. Christine Seidman of Harvard Medical School.

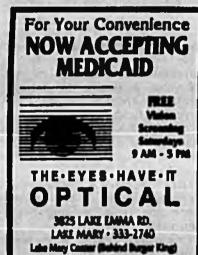

"The only thing worse than having the phone ring and someone tell you their 19-yearold son has died is hearing that a second child has died," she said. The disorder, known technically as familial hypertrophic cardiomyopathy. may occur in as many as one in 10,000 people, she said. In its later stages it leads to an abnormal thickening of the heart wall. Exactly how that triggers sudden death is not known.

In a report at the annual meeting of the American Society of Human Genetics, Seidman said she has found that certain mutations in the gene produce relatively mild cardiomyopathy. Other mutations produce a to diagnose it allow doctors to severe form with a high risk of

That is helping researchers decide which patients may need treatment and which are likely to do well without it, she said.

Doctors are beginning to devise treatments that could include a combination of heart drugs or pacemaker-like devices that can prevent heart rhythm disturbances.

Inner-city blacks don't wait for system to deliver

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES - South Central Los Angeles is known as a place where so many things die - where rioters destroyed buildings and dreams and human life. But the Hope L.A. Horticultural Corps wants to change all that.

The corps is teaching organic gardening to hard-core gang members in the hopes that instilling respect for plant life just might nurture self-esteem in young people who feel abandoned by society.

"We are the only ones who are going to transform South Central into an ecosystem that supports life. Right now, it kills life." corps director George Singleton tells a class of 20 teen-age gang members and mothers. their toddlers in tow.

Singleton and other black leaders across the country aren't waiting for the government to ride to the rescue. They're determined to improve their lives by developing grass-roots solutions.

Home-grown programs large and small are struggling to address the urban policy failures that followed the turbulent '60s, leaving cities with higher crime. lower employment and fewer government dollars to tackle these problems.

Self-help projects are trying to remedy matters in various ways: promoting gang peace, investing in black-owned banks, creating financing for black-owned businesses, building affordable housing - even establishing political in a building that straddles an unmarked boundary between rival Crips and Bloods gang territory, another approach one inspired by the riots - is under way.

Singleton, who has both waist-length dreadlocks and a biology degree, hands out cassette players and tapes with the Hope L.A. curriculum set to music. The classes stress organie gardening, nutrition, minority history, vocabulary and self-esteem.

Kids are encouraged to become "green thumbs" and act as a team while working the center's two-acre garden, an oasis of green in the concrete South Central landscape. The Model 's sold to restaurants or iven to the needy.

In exchange for their hours in the garden and classroom, the youths earn a small stipend. The program is partly funded by a federal grant.

"When a gang member comes up and wants to take you off the planet, you've got to know how to talk. And that's what we're about." Singleton told the class.

He hopes that when they're finished, corps members will consider a future in biology. landscape architecture, nutrition or related fields.

"We learn a lot here, about our history," said Pedro Garcia, 20. "About Egypt, where we came from and stuff."

Other minority organizations have sprung up in Los Angeles since the riots, helping South Central help itself.

Community Build, a nonprofit group supported by Democratic U.S. Rep. Maxine Waters, is an answer to the Rebuild L.A. riot recovery effort, which seeks to bring corporate investment to the inner city.

Community Build operates on the premise that the black community must organize if aid is to be effective, executive director Brenda Shockley said.

"There's been a reckoning in this process, about where we in the African-American community were located," Shockley said. "This isn't to say you don't have partnerships, but the communi-ty has the responsibility to define its own destiny."

Before an outside employer will build a store, for example, Community Build will find unemployed residents to work there, she said. A housing developer, working with the organiza-tion, will find child care workers no prospective tenants can leave home, work and pay the rent.

Since 1968, a similar philosophy has been embraced by the National Association for the Southern Poor, a Washington, D.C.-based group that has organized rural blacks into decision-making assemblies in nine Southern states.

Using parliamentary procedure first espoused by Thomas Jefferson, the assemblies work like shadow county governments, focusing on voter registration, fund raising, schools. housing and other needs.

"In order to have self-help for large numbers of people, you have to first organize them," said Don Anderson, the group's

As general counsel to a House poverty subcommittee in the 1960s, Anderson helped draft anti-poverty legislation for then-President Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" programs. Most of those efforts failed, he said, because they didn't involve the intended beneficiaries.

"That's exactly what they did not understand and what most anti-poverty efforts don't understand," Anderson said. "It's got to come from below."

The 24-year-old assembly in Surry County, Va., has built a $4.6 million high school, a $3 million elementary school and down their weapons, act as raised student reading test scores from among the poorest in the nation to close to the national median.

In some counties, though, Anderson has been forced to abandon efforts because of lack of foundation support.

But he also has been approached by activiata in Pasadena, Calif., about bringing the assembly concept to the predominantly black. Hispanic and poorer northwest section of that Los Angeles suburb.

Organizing also has preoccupied some rival Los Angeles black gang members who declared a truce during the riots and since have incorporated their efforts into Hands Across in Los Angeles, other groups are working in the riot aftermath to ensure that rebuilding is done by minority contractors and workers.

The United Minority Contractors Association pools the resources of black contractors to post bond on projects for which they couldn't afford to bid for individually.

Rams, rain ruin 'Hounds' night

LONGWOOD - Whatever your preconceived notions of what a high school homecomong football game should be, it's a safe bet that the homecoming suffered by the Lyman High School Greyhounds Friday night wasn't it.

For starters, the game didn't feature the most stellar of matchups, the Greyhounds and the Lake Mary Rains, their opponents for the evening, bringing a combined record of 1-9 into the contest.

And it rained, not all that hard, but long enough and steady enough to (you should excuse the pun) dampen the halftime festivities. Instead of being paraded around the field perched on the top of the cars' rear seats, the homecoming court waived from inside cars behind rolled-up win-

Things went from bad to catastrophic for Lyman as Kenny Lane, the Greyhounds' leading rusher, suffered a knee injury on the game's ninth play from scrimmage and was lost for the evening. The severity of the injury won't be known until later in the week.

Then there were the turnovers, the two teams combining for 14 in all. There was a sequence in the third quarter where the ball was turned over four times in the span of six plays.

Lake Mary took care of the rest, shutting out the Greyhounds 20-0 for its first win of the icason.

The Rams (1-5 overall, 1-4 in 5A-District 4, and 1.2 in the Seminole Athletic Conference) will celebrate their homecoming next Friday night with a 5A-District 4 contest against the Spruce

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - "When you come together as a family, you win as a family."

That sentiment overheard on the sideline late in the fourth quarter defined the moment as the Lake Brantley Patriots rallied for a very important 19-14 5A-District 4 win over the DeLand Bulldogs at soggy Tom Storey Field Friday night.

The victory by the Patriots (4-2 overall, 4-1 in the district] gives them a share of the district lead with Deltona (which beat Oviedo 14-9 Friday night), while the Bulldogs (4-2 overall, 4-2 district) fall a half-game

Lake Brantley travels to Daytona Beach Municiple Stadium for another district contest with Mainland next Friday, while DeLand will host Lyman at Spec Martin Stadium, Both games will start at 7:30 p.m.

The Patriots, who led 13-0 at halftime on a four-yard run by Ricky Hamilton, a Tim LeCroix extra point, and a 26-yard run by Jeff Butler, came out of the locker room flat while the Bulldogs and their faithful seemed to come alive game win streak for the Lions (4-3 overall, 3-2 in the district). Next week, Deltona will be at home against Lake Howell while Oviedo will take the week off. The Lions will return to action on Friday, Oct. 29, in a game at DeLand.

On Friday night, the Lions seemed to be in the driver's seat going into the fourth quarter. But after Oviedo made a couple of crucial mistakes, the tide turned.

The first Deltona scoring drive started on the Wolves 9-yard line and lasted nine plays. After being sacked on first down, Roccia connected with Matthew Taranto on a short pass which Taranto turned into a 70-yard ain before getting stopped at the Oviedo 30.

Oviedo's defense stiffened, forcing the Woives to advance in small increments and eventually forcing a fourth down and five situation. That's when the Lions made their first costly error as an Oviedo player jumped offaides, giving Deltona a first

The Wolves scored three plays later.

Oviedo's second critical setback occured with the Lions facing a fourth-and-nine situation on the Deltona 49. On the punt attempt, Oviedo punter Brian Hendrix slipped in the backfield and was called down on the Oviedo 39, allowing the Wolves to take over on downs.

Deltona needed only three plays to capitalize, Adrian and Roccia hooking up on a 38-yard touchdown pass play.

After the second Deltona touchdown, the Lions went on the offensive driving down to the Wolves 41-yard line. But the drive ended when when Ryan 'Hinshaw's pass on third-and-10

'was intercepted by the Wolves.
Deltona took possession with a little over a minute left, ending any hopes Oviedo had of pulling out a last second victory.

After playing almost two quarters of mudball, the Lions took the lead on a 22-yard field goal by Kallan Eslich with :34 left in the first half.

The Lions added to their lead on their first possession of the second half with a five-play drive ending with a 40-yard run by Shawn Sams. The holder on the extra point could not get the ball under control and was tackled giving the Lions a 9-0 lead with 8:18 left in the third quarter.

FISHING FORECAST Base fishing is slowly improv-ing with the cooler temperatures. The river from Pussie Lake south is really good because there is less boat traffic and pressure on the fish.

With dropping water levels, base are feeding on small minnows and will often turn down large lures. Action is still hot at Bebastian Inlet. Schools of migrating mullet are causing snook. tarpon, jack crevalle, bluefish, and sharks to go into a feeding frenzy. Naturally, lures that resemble finger mullet are favorites. Nighttime has been best for snook, but they will hit live batt in the day time.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports dirty water offshore. It may clean up any day now, and it would be prudent to make a phone call to the Port before planning an offshore trip. Last weekend was very slow even though the ocean was calm.

Inside the Port, sheepshead and flounder are rated as fair. Trout and redfish are hitting with regularity on the flats of the Banana and Indian rivers. Pence Inlet is a great place to bring the family for some fun fishing. Something is always biting on live or dead shrimp. and the bites come with astonishing regularity.

"Shaw showed that senior leadership and took us down the field when we needed to score," said Lake Brantley head coach Fred Almon. "And on a slippery field, it's good to have a 225pound fullback with good hands."

Butler got the winning drive started by breaking away from three would-be tacklers for an eight-yard gain. That seemed to get the Patriot bench and a small but suddenly bolsterous crowd

With the home stands rocking. Butler ran for three and seven yards, before Shaw faked a dive play and ran around left end for 20 yards, forcing DeLand to take Creek Hawks. Lyman (1.5 overall, 1.3 in the district, and 0-3 in the SAC) travels to DeLand next Friday.

'I'm really proud of the guys." said Lake Mary coach Doug Peters. "They've kept their heads up through five tough weeks. They never stopped believing that we were better than our record and that we would some ballgames.

"We really needed to win badly. I'm really proud of the team. They hung in there. When you go 0-5 at Lake Mary, you hear about it. And we heard about it. But they kept their heads up and kept working

Despite the weather. Lake Mary went to the air for its first touchdown, quarterback Tyson Hinshaw passing 44 yards to quarterback Derrel Jackson (who lined up as a flanker on the play). David Henkel's kick on the point-after made it 7-0 Lake Mary with 9:10 left in the first quarter.

The Lake Mary defense contributed the next seven points as Vernon James intercepted a Tommy Dixon pass and returned it 25 yards for a touchdown 31/2 minutes into the second quarter. Henkel converted the extra point for a 14-0 Lake Mary lead.

Ironically, the Greyhounds had the Rams right were they wanted them. So far this season, Lyman has shown an uncanny ability to come back strong in the second half while Lake Mary have let two halftime leads get away this scason.

It didn't work out that way. With Loki Travios intercepting a pass and recovering a fumble and James coming up with a second interception, the Ram defense allowed the Greyhounds past midfield just once, on a 31-yard pass from Dixon to a Ram fumble at the Lake Mary 40-yard line.

"I said at the beginning of the season that after about five games, we should start playing some good football," said Lake Mary defensive coordinator Boyd Rasmussen. "Our kids have grown. They've gotten better. I'm real pleased with the way we kept them (Lyman) out of the end zone." It was the first shutout for a Lake Mary defense since Nov. 10, 1988, when the Rams blanked Mainland 21-0, a span of 48 games. Despite the furious play of the Lake Mary defense, the frequent turnovers came the final result in doubt until Dexter Graham scored on a two-yard plunge with 9:02 left to play in the fourth quarter. Henkel's kick on the extra point was blocked. "Doug (Peters) had them very well prepared," said Lyman coach Larry Baker. "They executed extremely well and we didn't. That was the difference in the ball game.

Burdines limits sales

By Associated Press

MIAMI - Buy all you want in a Burdines store - except fragrances, cosmetics and Levi's

People might think stores and suppliers are interested in more sales no matter what. But some retailers and manufacturers fear the financial impact of gray market resales at home and abroad.

Levi Strauss & Co. asked several large retailers, including the 45-store Burdines chain in Florida, to limit sales after seeing store shelves cleared by bulk buyers "with a frequency that was alarming," said spokesman John Pachtner.

Calvin Klein Cosmetics Corp. noticed the same thing after introducing its Eternity line and now says the focus is on its newest Escape products.

While Burdines limits sales to five of any size fragrances or cosmetics, Calvin Klein has imposed a total 15-item limit.

"It's a stock problem. It's a service problem for the real customer," said Joanna Le, a Calvin filein retail sales specialist, "In the long run we'd all be losing."

The department store products end up as a lure offered by U.S. discounters and foreign "diverters" outside the standard distribution loop, manufacturers

"Normally what will happen is that when these products are diverted, which is to say they they're accumulated here and exported, they are sold at prices lower than what our products are being sold for through authorized distributors.' Pachtner said. "They can end up in flea markets. They can end up in street markets. You never know where they're going."

Le says an average of one customer a week wants to go over the limit in the three Miami area stores where she works.

Corey Watson, Burdines' senior vice president of marketing. had no estimate of the bulk buying frequency.

'It was happening in a few of the stores that get a more international kind of customer," he said. "It was happening often enough though that it was in our minds a problem."

Richard Echikson, chairman of Retail Consultants Inc. of Miliburn, N.J., considers the By NICK PFEIFAUF sales limit an unusual retailing approach.

"I have not heard of anything like this other than limiting sales when there is a legitimate small supply or a very special price that they have to offer for something in very limited quantities," he said. "I would love to be in a situation where the goods fly out the door so fast that I couldn't control it."

For Miami-based Burdines, the policy helps maintain a selection for regular customers, said Watson. Being in stock with Levi's can mean an inventory of 1,200 pairs per store, allowing for a selection of sizes and styles. Anyone who wants to buy more than the five fragrance and six Levi's limit can ask for a manager's permission.

You build a rhythm to the business in what sizes you sell by store and what colors you sell by store," he said. "When they're buying 40 or 50. I assume they're going to resell it. We have taken a tack to not let them take advantage of it."

Customers are warned of the limits with discrete counter signs that most everyday shoppera don't even notice.

One Miami shopper couldn't see why bulk purchases would be a concern for the store, saying, "At their prices, I don't think they'd be able to make a resale profit."

Big wheels He's king of the road on his antique bikes

Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY — He rides one 'big'' wheel for pleasure.

Brad Drexler of Lake Mary loves old-time bicycles. He finds old bikes that were made in the late 1800s or the early 1900s and rebuilds them back to mint condition. When he is not rebuilding them he rides them at many of the bicycle rallies and around the neighborhood.

Drexler's prize is a restored 1887 Victor. The big wheel bike was one of the first designs of a so-called bicycle and because its design is one of the first, for a bicycle and is called an "original."

Recently he rode this bicycle in a PBS documentary on antique bikes, which was shot in May and is scheduled for showing some time before the end of the year. Not too long ago he did a 100-mile ride in Kansas at a national jamborce.

He explained the drawbacks of the Victor. "It's a little trickier to ride. Also dangerous If you hit something because the front wheel stops and the legs are underneath the handlebars so the only place to go is over the front wheel and on your head.

The "original" is mounted in one of two rather unique ways. The first choice is to get the bike rolling and then to step up on a hinge mount just above the small back wheel and then throw your body up to the seat. Although it sounds difficult is is the best way to mount. The other way is to let the pedal on the side you are mounting come down to its lowest point. At that time you put your opposite foot on the pedal letting it push your leg up and when the pedal reaches its highest point you swing your leg over the bike and to the other side. Hopefully by the time you get up you can be in control and riding down the road.

Throughout his home the riding machines and pictures of the many years gone by are displayed. On the wall are pictures of bicycle clubs taken in Orlando sometime around the turn of the century. Inter-See Wheels, Page 7B

Clubwomen hear sheriff

Seminole County Shertff Don Eslinger was guest speaker at the October meeting of the Sanford Woman's Club. Introduced by President Jean Metts, the sheriff spoke of crime statistics in the state.

He informed the women that the United States has the highest crime rate of any imdustrialized nation in the world. And in the United States, Florida ranks as having the highest crime rate in the nation which boils down to the fact that Florida has the most violent crime of any place in the industrialized world.

The sheriff explored the crime wave from juvenile crime, which has doubled in the past 10 years to senior criminal activity. He said senior citizens are victimized more than any other segment of society, adding that the most significent demographic change in the nation during the past 93 years is that 27 years have been added to human life.

His theory is to prevent crime before it occurs, empower people to take responsibility, address all crime as high-liability issues, desensitize children to television violence, break the cycle of crimes and "put away habitual offenders for a long time."

Man quits pitching marriage to woman playing the field

picture taken of a gathering with around the head. Then it has a their bleyeles and the picture is. Viking man in the trademark dated in June. The picture is with the location of the manumystilying because every person in that picture is in coats and hats, as if it were a brisk autumn or spring morning.

He had a blown-up advertisement for a bicycle called the Rambler which was built in 1901. The advertisement which he found in an old magazine for the bike read, "For the college athlete who demands a staunch perfect running wheel in sports." Lo and behold, right in his front room, is the exact same bike restored to its original beauty. Everything exactly as it was sold 90 years ago.

A couple of other interesting restored wheels were called Vikings. The nameplate was interesting. Drexler said, "The nameplate is so ornate. It has a dragon with fire coming out its estingly, there is a mouth and then its tall wraps facturer, Dayton, Ohio. The bike has been restored back to tis original condition, including wood rims. Drexler's interest in rebuilding began after he read a couple of books. He explained, "I read a book on the history of American bicycle racing and visited a few museums. One was the Henry Ford Museum in Detroit, it had just a bunch of old bikes. When I saw them I just felt like I just had to have a few of my own. My desire got more intense when I saw people riding them. Actually to find a restorable bike is awfully tough."

"It seems like during the war many of the old bikes were thrown into the scrap for the war effort. There are not many of them out there that are complete. You have to really work to find the original parts. Sometimes you don't do too well."

He referred to the Schwin cycle truck that he has just recently finished. The fellow in Georgia who had advertised the unique cycle wrote that it was complete except for a rear fender. When he received the cycle he found out that nothing was right. Through a bulk purchase of Schwinn parts he finally found enough of the original parts to put the bike back together.

So next time you drive through Lake Mary and spot a young fella dressed in gay ninctles garb and riding a "Big Wheel" you haven't digressed back in time. You have found Drexler exploiting his favorite hobby of rebuilding and riding antique bicycles.

Florida resumes the ads suspended after slayings

TALLAHASSEE - Florida officials are starting new campaign to lure visitors with sunny lalons of beaches, boats and parks, a month after e slayings of German and English visitors put a sold on tourism promotion.

"One Florida. Many Faces" ads that started unning last week in travel industry trade publications don't mention the deaths or resultng security precautions such as armed guards at highway rest areas.

We're not even talking about that," state Division of Tourism Director Barry Kinney said

• "If I had $25 million I might do a full page ad on all the things Florida has done. I don't have that." said Kinney, who oversees a $6.7 million a year tourism advertising budget.

"The main things we have to sell are the sun, the blue skies and the great beaches, so that's what we're doing," he said.

GUIDELINES

1. Advertice what people want!
Children's clothing, dishes, collectblee, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.

acting machine.

4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask, "How much is this? Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for outcomers to start bergaining.

5. Get an early start. Say up displays the evening before, if possible.

6. Departmentation. Secrets the increase in its

B pecable.

6. Departmentation. Separate the inexpensive items from the more coatly areas. Group furniture, doubling, toys, term equipment and other terms with similar merchandise.

7. Separation. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $3". Hermember the youngsters, too. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.

8. Time year asia carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.

9. Combine year efforte! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.

10. Be specified When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list inclividual items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.
