SANFORD — The Seminole County sheriff's department has issued a Crime Alert bulletin to be distributed to all middle school and high school students in the county.

The bulletin recounts an incident that occurred this past Saturday when two teenagers overdosed on a combination of heroin, ecstasy, rohypnol and alcohol. A 17 year old girl and 19 year old man had ingested the substances at a "rave" party in downtown Orlando.

The girl suffered a near-fatal seizure near noon on Saturday. She was hospitalized for two days. The man was also hospitalized. He was subsequently arrested for possession of LLD and marijuana. The marijuana was found inside a notebook from the Center for Drug Free Living.

The sheriff's crime alert bulletin warns parents about the dangers of drug abuse and the often fatal consequences.

City code enforcement updated 4,000 cases heard a year

By MARK BROWMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Community Development Director Charles Rowe gave a report to the Sanford City Commission this past Monday afternoon on the operations of the city's code enforcement efforts. The report was given at the request of commissioner Kerry Lyons.

Rowe explained that code enforcement is presently processing approximately 4,000 cases a year. "Nearly 100 percent of the complaints were called in by citizens," he said, "with about

Steven S. and Sarah Moore, S, presented Rod Leyer with a check for $5,000 on behalf of Bunniland Corporation Thursday. The money is to be used for the Independence Day fireworks display at Fort Mellon Park in Sanford. This one donation raises the total received as of that time to over $7,300, with a final goal of $18,000. The fireworks will be held Wednesday evening.

These counterfeit bills, in the possession of CCIB agents, were made on a personal computer.

SANFORD — It looked like money. It crinkled like money. And it could, conceivably, be spent like money.

Mark Ament of Altamonte Springs had been using, apparently for some time, a complex computer system to duplicate $10 and $20 bills at his home. There is no evidence that he ever spent a penny of the money, however.

According to agents of the City-County Investigative Bureau (CCIB), Ament was taken into custody late Wednesday at his apartment at 541-G One Center Boulevard in Altamonte Springs.

The CCIB agents had gone to the 39-year-old's apartment with a search warrant expecting to find marijuana there.

Agents reported they found a small amount of illegal drugs in the apartment, but they also found a Packard Bell computer system which included a scan-

'I'm burnt out' Strickler says 'No' to school board

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Larry Strickler has served on the school board for four years and, he said, frankly, he is ready to pass the baton on to another player.

"I'm burnt out," he said Thursday afternoon. "I just don't have the passion and the fire I did when I started four years ago."

Strickler said he believes that Wes Pennington who announced his candidacy for the seat last week will be able to do a "credible job" on the board.

"I have no doubt that he has a good business head,"

Strickler said of Pennington, who he admits he "barely knows," and he believes Pennington shares his concerns for the educational community in Seminole County.

"We are both concerned about the poor graduation rate in this county and we both want to continue on the path to ensuring that all students get a good education that prepares them for the work world."

Strickler had said during his 1988 campaign that he would only serve one term. Wen no other candidates had announced this year, he had said he would be willing to serve another four years.

Two injured in collision

A two-vehicle collision occurred Thursday morning on E. 29th Street at Willow Avenue in Sanford. Sanford firemen had to use the jaws of life equipment to extricate one of the drivers, who reportedly had his knee stuck in the dashboard. Drivers were identified as Chad A. Kinnaird, 31, of Hartwell Avenue, Sanford, and Wanda Dee Santos, 54, of Orlando. Sanford police charged Kinnaird with careless driving, operating a motor vehicle with a cancelled/revoked/suspended license, and not wearing a seat belt. Both drivers were hospitalized for their injuries, which were not believed to be serious at press time today.

16 indicted in 26-year-old connection

DELTONA — Harry Earl Young, Jr., 47, of Deltona, was one of 16 men and women named yesterday in the unsealing of a 46-count indictment returned by a federal grand jury. The jury met in Orlando on June 20.

All 16 persons were connected to a case which has been under investigation as far back as 1980. The indictment charges them with various offenses including violations of the Racketeering Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), methamphetamine distribution, vehicle and property thefts, murder, witness intimidation, interstate transportation of stolen property and motor vehicles, theft from interstate shipments, operation of a chop shop, mail fraud and wire fraud.

The vehicle and property thefts are alleged to have taken place at various locations across the nation, while other criminal activities allegedly took place primarily in the vicinity of the north end of Orange County and south end of Lake County.

Approximately 50 vehicles were said to be involved, as well as goods ranging from loads of cooking oil and toys to truck tires, refrigeration units, lawn mowers and golf carts.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

FLORIDA BRIEF

Court orders new sentencing

TALLAHASSEE — A decade after a death row inmate fatally stabbed a man in Duval County, the state Supreme Court has ordered a third sentencing hearing for the killer.

James Campbell, 30, confessed to the December 1988 murder of Billy Saylor and was sentenced to death in May 1989 by a trial court that cited five aggravating circumstances to warrant capital punishment.

The state Supreme Court, however, overturned the original sentence, rejecting one of the aggravating factors and telling the trial court to take into account mitigating factors like Campbell's abusive childhood.

After the second hearing, a new set of jurors voted 10-3 to recommend death and a trial judge sentenced Campbell, 30, to death.

In Thursday's unexpected 5-3 decision, the high court said improper conduct by the prosecutor made a third sentencing hearing necessary.

The court said the prosecutor disclosed the defense psychologist by telling jurors he frequently testified for killers of police officers, something that was prejudicial and irrelevant.

The court also said the prosecutor was wrong when he told the jurors to send a message to the community, something which has not been allowed for more than a decade.

"It is entirely possible that several jurors voted for death not out of a reasoned sense of justice but out of a panicked sense of self-preservation," the court wrote.

Chief Justice Gerald Regan and Justice Ben Overton, Leander Shaw, Major Harding and Harry Anstead made up the majority. Justice Stephen Grimes and Charles Wells dissented, both arguing that the errors were harmless.

"Remanding this case for a third sentencing proceeding is not harmless," Wells wrote. "There is real harm ... in this case not reaching the final judgment stage in the 10 years since the murder."

U.N. upholds U.S. plane downing story

MONTREAL — Both Cuba and the United States claimed victory following a U.N. investigation of Cuba's downing of two U.S. civilian planes in February.

Their battle now moves to the U.N. Security Council, where the conclusions of the International Civil Aviation Organization investigation will be forwarded.

ICAO investigators found that the planes were shot down while in international air space, as the United States claimed. Cuba has insisted the aircraft were over its territorial waters.

Federico Pons, U.S. Secretary of Transportation, greeted the report as "a solid victory for all civilized people."

But Cuban officials said the fact that the ICAO did not blame Cuba directly showed the U.N. body could not be manipulated by the Americans.

The attack on the two unarmed Cessnas by Cuban MiGs killed four people. It heightened the hostility between the two countries and led to the United States tightening its economic embargo on its communist neighbor.

ICAO investigators also discovered significant differences between Cuban military radio communications provided by Cuba and by the United States, and between radar data provided by the two countries.

"They were unable to explain the differences. 'It's a mystery,'" said Col. Frostell, who headed the investigation. "Our tests didn't reveal any downing of the planes."

The report was accepted Thursday by ICAO's executive council, despite strong objections from Cuba, which argued in two days of debate that the investigation was incomplete and carried out hastily.

Fru ordered documents shredded

LOS ANGELES — Prudential Insurance Co. ordered managers in 14 states to destroy documents, anticipating a regulatory probe of its sales practices, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The memo, sent via the firm's internal message system, stated: "We just learned this morning that one state is looking into possible violations regarding our 'private pension' materials," said the Jan. 5, 1984, memo.

"You must destroy all private pension letters other than the approved versions I referred to in my earlier memo message today," said Sally Edwards, an executive in the company's Jacksonville, Fla., office, the newspaper reported.

It turned out that Prudential was not under investigation when the memo went out to the 14 regional offices over which Jacksonville had jurisdiction. But Prudential is now the subject of a multi-state investigation led by its home state, New Jersey.

Prudential spokesman Robert DeNinno confirmed the authenticity of the memo and said he did not know if any documents were destroyed.

He denied that the memo's purpose was to derail any investigations. He said the order to destroy piles of documents was increased nearly a month after managers first received it, the Times reported.

ValuJet investigators plan to stage an oxygen canister fire

By JOHN FARRIN Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — The investigation into the crash of ValuJet Flight 592 is entering a new stage as federal officials move back to Washington with key parts of the wreckage and plan to stage a fire with oxygen canisters that may show what caused the plane to go down in the Everglades.

The focus remains on the oxygen canisters the jetliner carried in its cargo hold because investigators say there's proof some "had gone off" and other started or fueled a fire that caused the crash on May 11, killing 110 people.

"(We've found) about 30 and some of them indicated that they were a very hot fire, there was a lot of smoke and we do have a possible source in the oxygen generators as an origin of the fire," said NTSB chief investigator Greg Fitch.

Investigators will store most of the plane wreckage in Miami, selecting a few pieces to take back with them to Washington.

Fitch said in the next month he will build another mockup of the cargo area in Atlantic City, N.J.

establish whether the canisters caused the fire or simply exacerbated it.

"What we do have here is sufficient evidence that there was a very hot fire, there was a lot of smoke and we do have a possible source in the oxygen generators as an origin of the fire," said NTSB chief investigator Greg Fitch.

Investigators will store most of the plane wreckage in Miami, selecting a few pieces to take back with them to Washington.

Fitch said in the next month he will build another mockup of the cargo area in Atlantic City, N.J.

"We actually will be building a fire in there in a box with the oxygen generators," Fitch said. "We will count them, identify them, catch them in a specific place and identify the cause of and see how they affect the rest of the aircraft."

The hauler at Ronald-Tampa Bay Airport was a large plane of thousands of empty seats — the largest so far — that contained about 75 percent of the aircraft.

Even hydraulic parts of the ValuJet plane, meant to take a tremendous amount of force, simply snapped off the DC-9.

Astronaut has Olympic torch while cycling

By The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL — At least one astronaut is going for the gold in space.

Shuttle Columbia crewman Charles Brady Jr. held an Olympic torch — minus the flame — as he pedaled as hard as he could on a stationary cycle Thursday. Researchers on the ground monitored his lungs.

"We understand he's the winner so far," NASA said. "The reply from space: 'Chuck is definitely a winner with all of us up here.'"

For safety reasons, gold-colored foil substituted for the flame.

Supreme Court throws out education funding lawsuit

By JACQUE MALLOP Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A lawsuit that accuses state lawmakers of shortchanging schools won't be heard in court.

In a 4-3 ruling Thursday, the state Supreme Court told a group of school districts, parents and students they hadn't made enough of a case in their lawsuit to warrant court interference in the legislative job of deciding how to spend money.

In 1984, 44 of Florida's 67 school districts sued Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Legislature, arguing education is a fundamental right that is violated when budgets are made-quate year after year. A trial judge dismissed the suit a year later. Thursday's decision affirmed that ruling.

"The Legislature has been vested with enormous discretion by the Florida Constitution to determine what provision to make for an adequate and uniform system of free public schools," the court wrote in its unsigned ruling.

But the high court stopped short of saying such a suit could never be brought.

At the heart of the case is a part of the state constitution, which requires that "adequate provision shall be made by law for a uniform system of free public schools."

Major Harding, Charles Wells and Ben Overton made up the majority.

In a concurring opinion, Overton said he thought the court could "recognize the basic need for the right to an adequate provision of educational opportunities without engaging in micro-management and without offending the separation-of-powers doctrine."

It might be difficult to define adequate. But a court could consider a suit against a school district that had a 50 percent illiteracy rate, Overton wrote.

Dissenting were Chief Justice Gerald Regan and Justices Harry Anstead and Leander Shaw.

Orange Co. calls for mortgages for schools

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — What do you do when parents don't want year-round schools but their kids' parents want to handle burgeoning student populations?

The Orange County School Board believes the answer is to mortgage its schools.

A financial plan announced Tuesday by Superintendent Donald Shaw is similar to a home mortgage.

The school district would get a loan of $110 million for the 1988-89 fiscal year to build four elementary schools and two middle schools. A bank or underwriter would hold a lease on the buildings while the district makes payments on them from future collections of county property taxes.

At the end of the lease period, the district takes ownership of the buildings.

Finding property taxes to pay a loan would give the district money upfront to hasten its current construction program. Unlike a bond referendum, which the school board has considered, this type of loan does not require voter approval.

"We are just borrowing against our own revenue sources," said Henry Bookhoff, associate superintendent for business services. "Just like you take out a second mortgage on a house."

"School finance people would tell you they prefer to have a bond issue or sales tax referendum because that produces revenue, but it probably wouldn't pass."

Since October 1985, the state's voters have approved only two of eight school tax referendums.

Some school officials wondered about the ramifications of such a plan.

"It's always good news for people when we don't raise their taxes," said School Board Chairwoman Linda Sutherland. "But it's unrealistic to think that we won't have to raise taxes some day because we'll have more and more needs."

Alphonsa Cosby, 25, of 2711 Washington St., Sanford, was arrested by Sanford police Wednesday. She is the mother of a 10-year-old child at Magnolia Avenue and Airport Boulevard in Sanford. Officers stopped the vehicle to serve a warrant on Cosby, who was wanted in Seminole County for purchase of cocaine.

The officer said after he transported Cosby to the John E. Felt Correctional Facility, he found four pieces of what proved to be crack cocaine, apparently placed in his glove compartment by Cosby. After Cosby was taken inside, an officer said he saw Cosby drop something in the entry port, which also proved to be cocaine.

In addition to the warrant, Cosby has now been charged with possession of a controlled substance and introduction of controlled to a detention facility.

Simpson bash draws controversy

By Linda Burstein
A Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — A two-sided O.J. Simpson welcomed about 500 guests to an anti-violence fund-raiser at his mansion Thursday night as TV helicopters buzzed overhead and protesters gathered outside.

Women's groups denounced the event as a cynical and shameless attempt to rebuild his image, especially since the party was staged in the same place where he beat his wife seven years ago.

Simpson told reporters he didn't understand the protests.

"Who can be against stopping violence? This is about saving lives," he said. "There have been 1,700 murders since Nicole and Ron and who cares about those people? This is about stopping it and helping these families."

Simpson said he never considered whether his holding the event would cause controversy. "It doesn't matter," he added. "Those people are going to complain no matter what I do."

The invitation-only event was organized by the Stop the Violence-Increase the Peace Foundation, a black group that works to curb gang violence and domestic abuse and is based in South Central Los Angeles.

The foundation last week said about 500 people were invited, and suggested donations ranged from $100 to $10,000. Among the estimated 300 guests were famed defense attorney F. Lee Bailey, Simpson friend Al "A.C." Corbridge, Simpson juror Brenda Moran, the Rev. Jesse Greer and dismissed Simpson juror Jeannette Harris.

Irv Rubin of the Jewish Defense League got into a shouting match with a group of black Simpson supporters on the street, and protesters carried signs reading "Hey O.J., Charity Begins At Home," and "Rent-A-Killer, Frank Show Tonight."

"No way did I anticipate the level of hatred and the willingness to put forth so much energy against this," said Muhammad Nasseardeen, a spokesman for the foundation. "The people who are with the lynch-mob mentality against Mr. Simpson seem to see us as the people standing in the way of the man."

Several other women of the National Council of Jewish Women headquarters, women's activists and anti-violence groups protested the fund-raiser. "There's blood on the floor at Reekingham," said Tammy Bruce, who along with Ms. Simpson's sister Denise Brown heads Women's Progress Alliance, a nonprofit organization dedicated to women and children's rights. "I find it unconscionable that anyone would feel comfortable walking into a house where she was in a torture chamber."

Simpson, acquitted last year of murdering his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman, pleaded no contest in 1989 to abusing his then-wife. He faces a September trial in a wrongful-death lawsuit that seeks to hold him responsible for the slayings.

A foundation board member, actress Paula Kelly, said she lost a film role because her name appeared on the invitation to the event. Her spokeswoman refused to say what role Kelly, who played attorney Lis Williams on TV's "Night Court," had been considering.

Other guests received calls telling them not to go, Nassear-deen said.

Women's groups and a representative for Ms. Simpson's family angrily denounced the event as a desperate attempt for positive publicity from a man trying to get back into the public's good graces.

A Lake Mary landmark, Gleason's Store, was razed Wednesday to make way for the expansion of First Presbyterian Church of Lake Mary, which is located on adjacent property. The two-story building, located on the northwest corner of Wilbur Avenue and Country Club Road, was built by Homer and Lana Gleason in the 1920s, but had been vacant for several years after the last business to occupy the building, The Left-Handed Irishman, closed. Another house on the property, currently known as the "Little Yellow House," will be moved to another site in the city and renovated as a private residence. Jake Wilby (upper photo) sprays the building with water to keep down the dust as Louie DiBartolomeo operates the back hoe. ### For Pete's sake, mow your lawn

For Pete's sake people, mow your lawns and trim your hedges. You'll be doing all of us a big favor. Visitors will see a much more attractive area during their drives through the various communities.

Neighbors who are proud of their homes and community would appreciate not having your eye-sore sticking out like a sore thumb.

For corner lots, you may greatly improve the safety of people who have to peek around your bushes or shrubs in order to see if there are any on-coming vehicles approaching.

You don't have to invest in expensive equipment which accomplish specialized work such as hedge trimmers or riding lawnmowers. It's surprising how much you can do with hand clippers and the average mower.

You also don't have to do it every three or four days as some may do. But at least do your outdoor improvements once a week. Some wait until fall or spring and take care of the exterior of their dwellings only then. Make one wonder whether they are also keeping the interior in the same unimproved fashion.

Just look at what gardening and/or lawn-care work can accomplish. It can give even the oldest homes (in need of paint and repair) in much better condition.

It's similar to washing your car. Unless you do the wheels, the car still looks dirty no matter what else you do.

Make outdoor care part of the normal routine of living here in Seminole County and Central Florida.

Let the summer of your children go to get out your swimming pool and neighbors to have a vacation if you that you may not deserve.

Pentagon spills story of weapon leak

WASHINGTON — Last week's surprise announcement by the Pentagon that U.S. soldiers in the Persian Gulf War may have been exposed to chemical weapons spread off a week of high-stakes maneuvering between Defense Department officials and a presidential commission investigating Gulf War Syndrome.

After five years of denying that any American soldiers were exposed to chemical weapons in the Gulf, the Pentagon called a sudden news conference late Friday afternoon to announce "new" information about possible chemical exposure. Pentagon spokesman Ron Bacon told a gathering of reporters and cameras that the Pentagon's Ammunition Storage Depot, which was bombed by coalition forces in the days immediately following the war, probably contained chemical weapons.

According to our sources, the timing of the announcement had more to do with the Pentagon's desire to save face than its desire to save the soldiers who are suffering the mysterious symptoms of Gulf War disease.

Two days before the announcement, a senior government official told us the Pentagon had known about the incident for some time. He added that the Pentagon had already received an ultimatum from members of the commission. The commission said if the Pentagon doesn't release the information, they would do it themselves on July 7 or 8, our official told us.

After we called Bacon on Thursday, however, the Pentagon later decided to move on its own. "The commission was a professional job," Bacon said. "We didn't want to go ahead and announce it on our own."

Defense Department officials were also worried that the information would leak out on its own. A congressional hearing scheduled for earlier this week by Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., "The Pentagon couldn't wait that long," the senior official noted. "The reason they can't wait that long is because this hearing is Tuesday. If they go over to this hearing and they're asked about it, then they've got to admit it, and if they admit it, then it's going to come out that they were covering up."

Members of the intra-agency commission, which was convened by executive order in March 1985, learned of the new evidence after one of its own investigators found documentation buried in the Pentagon's files. When we called Bacon on Thursday, however, he was still sticking to the official line, asserting there was no evidence that American soldiers were exposed to chemical weapons.

Yet this information is certainly not "new." Bacon admitted that a report of the incident had been available since October 1981. Only recently, however, did the commission confirm that the shells found in the bombed-out bunkers were lined with material often found in chemical weapons. A videotape of the bombing, which allegedly shows a large chemical cloud rising over the bunker, also recently became available.

Before Friday's announcement, the Pentagon had denied any and all reports that American soldiers could have been exposed to chemical weapons in the Gulf. Even in the wake of last week's revelation, Defense Department officials still say there is "no clinical evidence that U.S. troops were exposed to chemical weapons."

The commission... they would do it themselves

Is romance the place for religion?

The "lovelorn ads" in the classified sections of newspapers and magazines have added something new.

Appearing under the heading of "Spiritual Friends," these ads try to match people who have the same spiritual interests. Once you discover the key that unlocks the unromantic cyberspace language used in these ads, you may find a suitable hooking.

Here is one ad headlined "Living for Jesus":

DWCF (divorced, white, Christian, female), 61, 5'7", ISO (in search of) WCM (white, Christian, male), 50-55, who enjoys cooking, walks, gospel and country music.

A "Lady in Love With LHM" lists her specifications and those she is looking for in a partner: W W C P (W W stands for widowed), 55, 5'7", fit in body, soul and mind, ISO SWCM (S is for single), 40-60, tall, fit, to wed if God wills.

How much does religion have to do with a man's choice of a woman to marry? Or with a woman's choice of a man? The answer is, it means more to some partners in a romance than to others.

Take Mark and Amy. They go to college 100 miles apart and are discussing marriage in their letters to each other. In a recent letter Amy asked Mark what his religious beliefs are.

"What shall I tell her?" Mark wants to know. He doesn't have any well-defined beliefs but is afraid if he tells Amy that, he may jeopardize his chances with her.

I have told Mark that people who ask about their partner's religious beliefs are often "evangelicals" who believe in Jesus as their "personal Lord and Savior." They believe their chances for a happy marriage depend on finding a partner who shares their faith.

They may be right.

On the other hand, some of the best workers for the Christian faith have been people who joined the church because the person they married was a church member. These people may have been lost to the cause if someone had rejected them for marriage because their religious beliefs didn't measure up at the time they were courting.

I told Mark to try to work that idea into his reply to Amy. If it doesn't work out they may each try their hand at competing a lovelorn ad in the romance column.

A couple once told me, "The life of a country is perhaps best reflected in the Personal column of its newspapers." If this is true, what do the lovelorn ads tell us about ourselves?

The Personal in a recent issue of my college alumni magazine reveal that it isn't primarily about interests or adventure that women want in a mate. They aren't ISO Mr. Moneybags either. The qualities mentioned by women were more than any others so characteristic they are listed for in a mate were kind, caring, thoughtful, responsive, warm, gentle, considerate, steady and comfortable.

And what do these women have in offer in return? One has "a country home in central Pennsylvania," another "a beautiful home and a friendly dog," while another advertises that she is "healthy, wealthy and beautiful." One woman apparently thinks it is very easy to marry a woman who is wealthy.

It is hard to think of a man's choice of a woman being by the place for a man to go to see what the lovelorn ads tell us. I pulled up all my list-rip to look over these Personal.

It means more to some partners in a romance than to others

The GOP: opening the 'gates'

When you commence to lose track of your gates, you start thinking maybe you've been in this crazy business too long.

It started with Watergate -- that much I remember. And then what? Well, I seem to recall a Norwagate. And then, during the Carter period, we had Billygate and Lanogate and Venogate. The Reagan reign was infamous, of course, for Iran-Contra.

And then came the Clinton gates.

Bulgagate and Nanygate and Travelgate and Transpergate (aka, Bimbogate) and Whitewatergate and now Filegate.

Let's put this in perspective. From Nixon through Reagan, we had an average of one gate every four years.

Under Clinton, we are getting one gate every seven months.

Why so many gates?

Given the current White House gang is a bunch of ham-fisted geeks who lurch and stumble through gates willy-nilly. But that is only the half of it.

The other reason for so many gates is that the Republicans recognize a potential market when they see one. In a Clinton administration, gates are plentiful and sooner or later they might start selling, so every Republican in Washington is hawking gates or buying gates each at starting a gate franchise.

That's the problem with Republicans: They greed often exceeds the commonly accepted limits of decorum. They smell big profits and start to salivate and before long the gates is running down the frame of their pantyripe suits. They begin to get giddy and start acting irrationally and irresponsibly.

Recall how House Speaker Newt Gingrich hyperventilates when he accuses a Democratic comrade of some kind. According to a "senior law enforcement official," he said in 1994, up to "a quarter of the White House staff, when they first came in, had used drugs in the last four or five years." The McGovern charge has yet to be backed up by a credible source.

Or take Alhose "Slippery Al" D'Amato. Two years ago, the cheery New York senator took Hillary Clinton to the woods for making $100,000 in a single year on a series of commodity deals in the late 1970s. Then it turns out Slippery Al himself made $27,125 in a single day in 1988 on a stock transaction that the Securities and Exchange Commission has described as dubious.

No Republican more sharply symbolizes the Republic's loss for a vendible gate than D'Amato. For 18 months, he presided over a Watergate committee that took 10,728 pages of testimony from 50 witnesses and managed to come up with little more than speculation about an alleged library-bud conspiracy to conceal documents found in the office of the late Vince Foster. As proven go, were the Baltimore Sun, it was "a sorry spectacle."

Consider a couple of additional sorry spectacles:

On June 16, the chairman of the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee, Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., went on Fox News Sunday to discuss the scandal involving the resignation of FBI chief of hundreds of Bush and Reagan administration officials. And who did Clinger think was the villain behind "Phogate"? Well, he said, without a melonful of evidence, Hillary's extensive record of sinister activities had raised his "suspect class" about her.

A religiously right-wing pundit called the American Spectator quoted unidentified sources who allegedly said that two of the top Commerce Secretary Ron Brown's assistants had shredded documents and removed them from his office on the day of his death in an airplane crash. Newt Gingrich repeated the charge as if it were gospel -- again, without a shred of evidence.

Oh, all you crime-solving Republicans, I've got one for you. Source go there is a cross-dresser in the White House. It's none other than Pete Dink. Some sources suggest Dink has had a fling with Bill Clinton. They surmise his having conversations here and there about things that are and meeting in with large amounts of money may be too large.

Call it Reagan.

Slippery Al... he's got a vendible gate

50 percent of the complaints received within a year."

He added however that some of the 4,000 cases may be three or four years old, with new cases being added faster than old ones can be resolved.

He said that of 708 warnings issued since the start of the code enforcement program in the city, 680 of them had been issued by city code enforcement officials.

"In addition, we have the special code group consisting of police and various department heads which can also issue warnings for code violations," Rowe explained.

Since the program went into place in 1982, a total of 88 warnings have been issued: 19 by the police department, 44 by the fire department, five by the utility department, and 19 by the licensing department.

For the fire department, since the citation program began, 58 violation tickets have been issued with 50 of them paid, two dismissed, and judgements awaiting in 10 other cases for a 98 percent success rate.

Rowe indicated that Public Works and Planning and Engineering, also involved in the citation warning issuance program have not issued any to date.

Regarding the impact of code enforcement on the city's budget, Rowe explained that approximately $117,548 was spent in the code enforcement budget, for an average of approximately 850 per case.

At the present time, with some personnel working on non-fulltime positions, Rowe says there are actually 2.58 people in the actual code enforcement department. "Right now I'm trying to find another full time person," Rowe said. "It looks like I'll be getting a contract employee to take over this position," he added.

Rowe said to provide code enforcement activity to levels which would be considered "absolute and total" city coverage would be cost prohibitive. "It is my opinion that this type of programming would require two full time executives with four code enforcement inspectors, in addition to operational, legal and capital expenses, the total cost for such an operation is estimated at $250,000," he explained.

The report from Rowe was presented Monday for informational purposes and did not require any action on the part of the commission.

Underwater pilot to deep sea 500 times and counting

By GLENN BERTON
Associated Press Writer

WOODS HOLE, Mass. — As a child in the 1950s, Dudley Foster stared awe-struck at National Geographic photographs of underwater creatures: giant fish with huge teeth and gaping mouths, and monstrous tentacled beasts like those he's seen in sci-fi films.

A spin on Disneyland's "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" ride inspired H. Foster wanted to tear the ocean's depths himself.

Today, he plunges deep into oceans all over the world as a pilot of the "Alvin" scientific research submersible, traveling to such places as underwater volcanoes, the wreckage of the Titanic, and deep-sea craters of 15-foot chimneys and 8-foot-long tube worms never before seen by human eyes.

"I sometimes feel like the Chuck Yeager of the deep," said Foster, 48, an engineer and former Navy pilot.

Funded by the National Science Foundation, the Office of Naval Research and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Alvin takes scientists an underwater dives between 100 and 300 fathoms a year, at a cost of $60,000 to $100,000 a day.

With 200 dives already logged over the past 20 years, Foster is Alvin's veteran helmsman and has piloted the 36-ton sub-mersible out to depths of more than 15,000 feet.

By now, even the best pilots have some close calls. "Freaky situations are bound to occur when you're 'going to place man wasn't designed to go to,'" Foster said at his office at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution on Cape Cod.

Like the time last year when Alvin became entangled in wire and barely made it back to the surface as it dragged a 500-pound buoy behind it. Or the time the sub nearly became trapped in an underwater canyon.

On one trip off the Monterey coast, the vessel came dangerously close to hydrothermal vents that were spewing 500-degree black smokes, boiling Alvin's plastic thermometer.

But Foster always stays calm and collected, and scientists who have worked with him.

"He's never rattled by the worst situations," said Robert Ballard, who discovered the Titanic in 1985.

The research vessel Atlantis II carries Alvin — first launched in 1964 and named for Woods Hole scientist Alvin Vine — and a crew of up to 19 researchers to destinations ranging from the Hawaiian islands to the Chicago area. Typically, at least two or three of Alvin's best trained pilots will join each cruise.

The voyages usually last from two to four weeks. A typical Alvin dive will take six to 10 hours, although the vessel is built to survive up to three days underwater at some 6,000 pounds of pressure per square foot.

The first time Foster rode Alvin, "It was just like that kid at Disneyland when I was a kid."

And he discovered firsthand the size of the fish that looked so big and ferocious in photos all these years ago. They are really only about an inch long.

They said Ament admitted to them that he was using the equipment to print U.S. currency.

He told them, however, that he had not spent any of the money. A total of $50 in counterfeit currency was found in the apartment. Ament did not admit to having any other bills in his possession.

Ament, who listed his occupation as "investor" on the arrest report did not tell arresting officers for whom he made investments or by whom he was employed.

Ament was cooperative, agencies said.

Working in cooperation with the Secret Service, he directed agents through the software programs on his computer so they could find the counterfeiting programs.

Ament was arrested on one count of possessing instruments for forging bills. The charge is a felony which carries a maximum penalty of ten years in prison.

He was brought to the John E. Felt Correctional Facility where he was released after posting $1,000 bond.

At least 30 hurt at Harlem concert

By BETY HARRIS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — At least 30 people were injured in a stampede Thursday after shots were fired during an outdoor rap concert in Manhattan featuring the Wu-Tang Clan.

Many in the crowd of about 15,000 tried to scatter after hearing what sounded like five or six shots fired. The concert was intended to promote peace, unity and voter registration.

"Everybody was peaceful, it was great. Then shots were fired, about five or six. Everybody started running," said Jackie Vasquez, 37.

Initially, the Fire Department reported a 19-year-old girl had been shot in the leg but Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said late Thursday the report was false.

Twenty-one others apparently injured fleeing the show, were taken to area hospitals and were treated at the scene. Most suffered cuts and bruises. None of the injuries was life-threatening, Fire Department EMS Bureau Deputy Chief James Baile said.

A man with a gun was taken into custody near the concert scene, said Doran Tamari, a police department spokesman.

The mayor said the state had issued a concert permit to Refugee Project, which is headed by rap artist Sister Souljah, but the permit was for only 5,000 to 10,000 people.

The first sign of trouble was about 6 p.m. when several firecrackers went off, causing a small disturbance. About 45 minutes later, a gunshot went off causing a great deal of confusion, Baile said.

The concert outside a state office building began Thursday afternoon, featuring acts such as Biggie Smalls, Total, Junior Maki, KRS One, Doggie Fresh and the Pigeon. The show was fired during the performance by Wu-Tang Clan, the last act of the day.

Gag rule dropped from UW-Reebok contract

MADISON, Wis. — Current language that prohibited University of Wisconsin employees from criticizing Reebok was dropped Thursday from a $7.5 million deal to dress 22 Badger sports teams for five years.

The pact, approved by the UW Board of Regents this month, brought protests from teachers, students and a state legislator from degrading Reebok International. He chose or its advertising agency.

"We initiated this action to relieve anxiety and eliminate any misunderstanding about this aspect of the contract," Chancellor David Ward said in a written statement.

The language applied to "official university statements and, as stated, was never intended to abridge First Amendment rights," Ward said.

Reebok spokesman David Ferguson said the whole thing was a misunderstanding.

"We wanted to make sure things are done in a positive environment," he said. "It wasn't meant to put a strangle on anyone."

Last week, Rep. Martin Schneider, D-Wisconsin House, asked the state Justice Department to investigate the legality of the contract, which is still in effect.

The Justice Department is also looking into questions raised by the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel about the approval process involved in the deal.

Schneider's opposition played a part in the university's decision to remove the language, Ward said, prompting Schneider to note, "I guess one person can make a difference once in a while."

Strickler

"But I believe Mr. Pennington can do a good job and I don't think I need to seek another term."

While Strickler will not formally endorse Pennington, he said he has done some research and he believes the candidate can continue the course he has begun during his tenure.

"From what I have heard, I think he will be able to do a fine job," Strickler said.

He said he will now devote more of his time to his work at BallSouth where he is the legislative liaison.

"My job there is changing and I won't have the flexibility I now enjoy," he said. "I would only be able to serve on the board part time if I were re-elected."

Strickler still plans to volunteer his time with various educational committees, especially the school to work committee.

"I'll still have a hand in education in this county," he promised. "I just won't be up there on that board."

Kevorkian present at death of Ohio woman, lawyer says

By The Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Dr. Jack Kevorkian helped a 67-year-old Ohio woman with a painful neurological disease commit suicide Thursday night, his lawyer said. It was the 31st death he has assisted since 1980.

Geoffrey Fieger, Kevorkian's attorney, identified the victim as Betty Lou Hamilton of Columbus, Ohio. Her body was dropped off at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital by Jeanne Bogen, Hamilton's best friend, at 10:15 p.m. Thursday, Fieger said.

Fieger, who went to the hospital afterward, said Hamilton had a progressive neurological wasting disease called syringomyelia.

Hamilton had been consulting with Kevorkian for seven months, said Fieger, who wouldn't say how Kevorkian helped the death or give any details of her method of suicide.

Dr. Robert Aronson, head of the hospital's emergency room, said Fieger told him Hamilton had committed suicide. Fieger provided the hospital with Hamilton's name, age, address and medical condition.

Syromyelia is a rare disease that causes weakness and muscle atrophy, Aronson said.

Pontiac Police Lt. William Webster said the case was under investigation Thursday night and police had few details. The body has been turned over to the medical examiner's office.

The death is the third Kevorkian has attended since he was acquitted May 14 of assisted suicide charges for the third time.

Tuesday night, the body of 58-year-old nurse Lorna Jones of Chester, Va., was dropped off at North Oakland Medical Center in Pontiac by her husband. Jones suffered from a malignant brain tumor, Kevorkian's attorneys said.

There was no answer at Kevorkian's home Thursday night.

Fieger also said doctors other than Kevorkian were present at Hamilton's death. Fieger would not say where Hamilton died, other than to say she died in Michigan.

Hamilton's death marked the third straight time that a family or friend of the victim had brought the body to a hospital. Previously, bodies had been left in homes, Kevorkian's apartment, Kevorkian's van and other places.

"This is the way it should be," Fieger said of bringing the bodies to hospitals. "There should be a clinic, but they harass Kevorkian too much. He may not set up a clinic in a large mobile home so police won't harass him."

Fieger said that in the future, Kevorkian's patients will have the option to donate organs to make them available to transplant teams across the country. He refused to say how soon this will be attempted.

Fire destroys Tennessee church

By Associated Press

ENGLEWOOD, Tenn. — Fire destroyed a rural, predominantly white church on Thursday night, hours after Vice President Al Gore spoke in the state about church fires across the South.

The cause of the fire at the God's Chapel Church was not immediately clear. Firefighters had decided to let the blaze burn itself out after the church's walls caved in.

The nondenominational church, in this town about 55 miles northeast of Chattanooga, had close to 80 members. The building was less than a year old and was still under construction, officials said.

Earlier Thursday in Belle, Gore spoke to members of the New Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church, which is predominantly black. The church was destroyed by arson last year and has since been rebuilt.

Gore said the fires at predominantly black churches in the South — more than 40 since January 1995 — have brought people together, black and white, to defy racism and attacks on houses of worship.

"These fires have indeed awakened America's conscience and now each of us, in whatever way we can, must act. ... We cannot let the cries of the cowards drown out the songs of the soulful," he said. Federal agencies are investigating the blazes.

Plans for Primera reviewed at chamber of commerce fete

By SHANN BRIDEN
Herald Staff Writer

Is it or isn't? That is the question many area residents could be asking about the Primera property located adjacent to Home Depot.

Vacant for the past few years, recent new activity at Primera includes the building of Pizzeria Uno and updating of the sign and landscaping at the entrance to the development at Lake Emma Road and Lake Mary Boulevard. But what is in the future for this office park that has been off-again, on-again?

Sandy Acton, of Glenwood Properties, Inc., representative of the Primera property owner, the North Carolina state insurance commission, put all questions to rest at a recent North Carolina-style barbecue, co-sponsored by the Lake Mary/Heathrow Chamber of Commerce.

"I want to assure you that Primera will be developed well," Acton told the more than 200 chamber members and local officials who gathered to hear the news and to enjoy the barbecue.

Those attending were entertained by live music and while tents had been set up to accommodate tables for diners, the crowd spilled over onto the grass for an impromptu picnic. The usual afternoon thunderstorms held off and it was a chamber of commerce weather all the way, according to executive director Diane Parker.

Primera will be competing with business centers at Heathrow and North Pointe, on Lake Emma Road, south of Lake Mary Boulevard, for tenants. Bell Tel Federal Credit Union has already closed on property to build a new Lake Mary branch and two hotel sites are under contract.

A Hilton, with 124 units and a Homewood Inn, with 120 units, are proposed for land adjacent to Interstate-4. The other tenants would be comprised of office and commercial sites.

Acton's assurance of "no fast food" met with cheers from those in attendance. Acton said only full service restaurants would be pursued to fill the remaining restaurant sites.

Primera is 188 acres extending north of Lake Mary Boulevard and east of I-4. Acton said plans and designs are underway to extend the main roadway through the property to Rinehart Road by the summer of 1997. The development is dotted with lakes and should provide a unique natural setting if many of the towering pine trees are retained.

Prep-13 B's want two wins in Winter Haven

By GARY COATMAN
Herald Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Altamonte Springs Prep B All-Star team's mission this weekend in Winter Haven is very simple: win twice and advance to the state championship tournament July 11 in Sarasota.

Altamonte Springs will play either Ocala Marion or Winter Haven Saturday at 8 a.m. in the second round of the Prep B Regional tournament at Sereno Park in Winter Haven. If they win in their opening game of the tournament, Altamonte Springs could wrap up the regional championship with a win at 6 p.m. Saturday. A decisive third game would be played Sunday morning if necessary.

As long as Altamonte Springs wins two games, they earn a trip to Sarasota. Ocala Marion and Winter Haven are the only two teams that stand in the way, and one of these two will be eliminated today.

"If we played like we did last weekend in Sanford, we shouldn't have a problem," said Altamonte Springs coach Mike Tross. "There will be some strong competition down there, and it should make for some good baseball games."

Altamonte Springs defeated Longwood 4-3 last Friday at Sanford Memorial Stadium, then registered a 9-6 win Saturday as the same teams met again at the same site.

The Altamonte Springs Prep B All-Stars are Hans Hains, Bret Degallian, Jacob Theissen, Nick Graham, Chris Brummett, Ryan Tross, Devin Kahan, Jacob Kirsch, Matt Dalton, Bryan Atkins, Justin Moore and Kevin Hudson.

Major B's headed to Highland Park

By GARY COATMAN
Herald Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Altamonte Springs Major B team advanced in this weekend's Area B tournament in Highland Park by winning the District 7 tournament last weekend in Tavares. They defeated Flagler 6-3 last Friday to open the district tournament, then beat Longwood 7-3 on Saturday and 12-3 on Sunday to reach the area tournament.

Altamonte Springs will take on Winter Haven tonight at 6 p.m. in a first-round game. If they win tonight, they would play again on Saturday at 10 a.m. for the right to play in the championship game Sunday at 10 a.m. A victory in Sunday's game would send the Altamonte Springs team to Gainesville for the state championship tournament the weekend of July 8.

If Altamonte Springs loses on Friday, they would have to win twice on Saturday (noon and 4 p.m.) to reach Sunday's area championship game. Coach Mike Hains, Jr., Mike Hains, Sr. and John Strobridge will try to guide the Major B All-Star team to a trip to Gainesville.

The Altamonte Springs Major B All-Stars are Ben Allen, Brett Bradley, Drew Brodnax, Bryan Dandrea, Greg Jackson, Brent Mahan, Brian McElrath, Jason Merritt, Chris Meyer, Taylor Meier, Isiah Napoli, Russell Steinhorn and Johnny Strobridge.

Rain and the wet conditions continued to play havoc with the efforts of the Seminole County NABP and American Legion summer baseball teams Thursday night, forcing several cancellations. If the weather clears this weekend, Sanford Campbell-Losing Post 53 (both Lake Grantley and Seminole) and Goldenrod Post 112 (Oviedo) will send teams to the Ormond Beach American Legion Post 278 Tournament today through Sunday, while the Bucks (Lake Howell) will be at First Academy and the Longwood T.G. Lee-Bullets (Lyman) will be at Dr. Phillips today for games starting at 8:30 p.m.

score Davis. The champions tacked two more runs onto their total in the second inning. Arthur Barnes reached on an error, but was erased on a grounder by Greg Hardy. Keithan Roberts then doubled and Hardy and Roberts scored on a single by Ben Green.

The score stayed 4-0 until the fifth inning when Franklin Ball Bonds got its final two runs. Green singled and advanced to third when Smith reached on a two-base error. Steve Dennis and Craig Merberon then lifted back-to-back sacrifice flies to score the runs.

Franklin Ball Bonds had scored two more runs in the sixth inning on back-to-back triples by Peters and Hartefeld and a double by Robert Stevens but the game was stopped at that point with the game reverting to the end of the fifth inning.

Providing the offense for Franklin Ball Bonds were Hartefeld (triple, single, run, two RBI), Green (two singles, run, two RBI), Davis (triple, run, RBI), Peters (triple, run), Smith (double, two runs), Stevens (double, RBI), Roberts (double, run), Merberon (single, RBI), Hardy (run) and Dennis (RBI).

Magic get Evans and McCaskill in draft

By PHIL CORDELL, AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO — The Orlando Magic liked what they saw of Brian Evans and heard from Bobby Knight.

The Big Ten scoring champion impressed the NBA team at a pre-draft camp, while Indiana's coach gave his player an endorsement that helped seal the Magic on selecting the sharpshooting forward in the first round Wednesday night.

"He compares him to Chris Mullin who he coached on the Olympic team, and he thinks Evans can be that type player in the NBA," Orlando coach Brian Hill said.

Orlando had the most praiseworthy 3-point shooting tandem in the league last season in Dennis Scott and Nick Anderson, who thrive off the open court they get because opponents have to double team Shaquille O'Neal and Anderson Henderson.

The addition of Evans, who averaged just over 21 points per game on his way to becoming the Big Ten player of the year last winter, adds another perimeter threat.

"He's a tough kid — a great shooter who can get his own shot, unlike a lot of guys in the league," Hill said. "And, you know, he's got a great attitude. He's got that killer's O'Neal confidence in his eyes."

teams in the low post as they do."

Although Evans became the first Indiana player under Knight to lead the Big Ten in scoring last season, taking him with the 27th pick was a little bit of a surprise because adding another offensive weapon wasn't a high priority for Orlando.

The Magic went into the draft hoping to bolster the bench with a player capable of driving into a good defender and rebounder — a need they tried to address in the second round when Memphis's Amal McCaskill was the choice at No. 48 overall.

They opted for Evans in the first round after several prospects the Magic coveted, including Georgetown's Jerome Williams and Alabama's Ray Rogers, were selected by other teams.

"I couldn't be more excited than I am right now. I just feel like it's a great situation," said Evans, said of joining a team that's won 117 regular-season games over the past two seasons.

General manager John Gabriel said he tried to move up to get Williams, who was taken 26th by the Detroit Pistons. He picked Evans over another forward who was a big name in college, Oklahoma's Ryan Siso.

"I think he has a chance. If he goes in the first round, he's a steal," Gabriel said. "He's got the ability to be a great player. Evans, whose rebounding didn't panic him to come to Orlando for a workout before the draft, wasn't sure he'd be available for the Magic, who talked extensively with Knight earlier Wednesday.

"Hopefully he said some good things about me, and looks like he did," the 6-foot-8 forward said. "Obviously, I didn't get to come down and work out, so that disappointed me a little bit. But at the same time, things worked out."

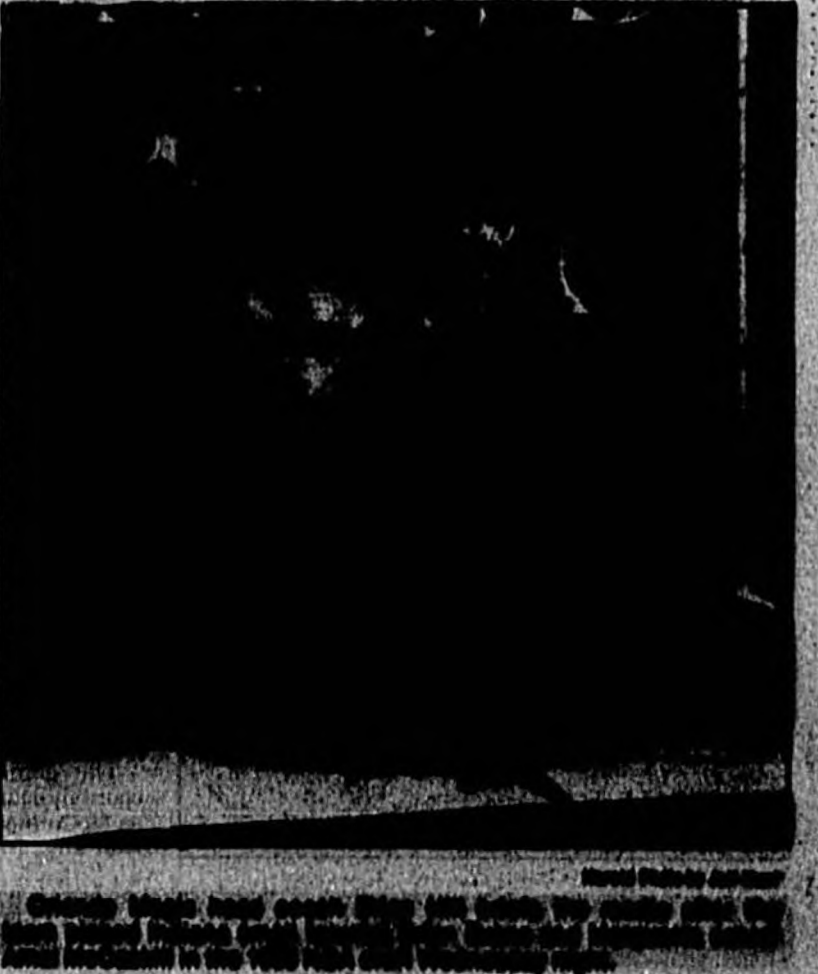

The Magic also liked point guard Jeff Malone of North Carolina, who was not available, and Arkansas-Little Rock's David Fisher, who was not.

"There may have been some players in the draft who would have filled more specific needs," said Hill. "But we're certainly not disappointed with Brian Evans."

McCaskill is a 6-11 center who Gabriel said got bigger and stronger each year at Memphis, where he averaged 10 points and nearly nine rebounds per game as a senior. He impressed Magic scouts at the camp camp in Chicago that helped Evans.

Orlando also considered Temple's Derrick Battle at No. 48.

"McCaskill had over 200 rebounds more over the last two years than Battle ... We just felt he was the best player available for us at that price," Gabriel said. "Having good depth around our star players is what we've wanted to go for a position."

The ABCs of grilling safely

The hot, busy days between Memorial Day and Labor Day mark the time to break out the backyard barbecue grill.

Safe food handling is always important, but during the warm summer months, peak grilling season, there is an increased need for overcaution of safe food handling practices. Cases of food-borne illness do rise during the summer. As air temperature increases, it becomes increasingly difficult to maintain a constant of food to the temperature "danger zone" (40-140 degrees F). Keep these suggestions in mind to have a safe barbecue or picnic.

Marinating. Marinate raw meat, fish or poultry in a glass dish in the refrigerator, not on the counter. If you plan to use some of the marinade as a dip or basting sauce later, set aside a portion before adding raw meat, poultry or fish. Don't reuse the marinade that you used to marinate raw meat unless you boil it for five minutes to destroy any bacteria from the marinade.

Pre-cooking. It's safe to cook meat on the grill by partially cooking meat or poultry ahead of time then finishing up on the grill, but only if the food goes on immediately from the microwave or range to the grill. It must be one continuous cooking process. Be sure to cook the meat thoroughly. Interrupted cooking is risky business. If you must cook ahead, cook the meat completely and then cook a final 15 minutes on the grill.

Grilling Thoroughly. For safety and quality, all meats should be very hot before cooking. It can take 20 minutes of longer before the charcoal is ready. They should show a light coating of gray ash for optimal heat. Meat and poultry should be thoroughly cooked. It's best to use a meat thermometer to check for safety and doneness. Large cuts of beef like roasts may be cooked to an internal temperature of 160 degrees F for medium. Whole poultry should reach 180 degrees F.

Don't eat raw or undercooked hamburger made from meat or ground poultry since harmful bacteria could be present. To be safe hamburger are thoroughly cooked until ground poultry to 160 degrees F.

It's a good idea to make an especially hot sauce for grilling, poultry, meat or fish to check for bacteria on the grill, when the outside looks done, but the inside is not. Juices should be clear and there should not be pink.

Grilling and Gravy. Gravy is a great accompaniment to grilling. As long as you're not cooking every breakfast, lunch and dinner on the grill, there shouldn't be a problem. The safest alternative.

The American Cancer Society suggests trimming visible fat that could make the fat flare up and char the food. Pre-cooking in the microwave and conventional oven also reduces grilling time and reduces flare. The Society also suggests reducing the cooking level of the grill as food is further from the heat, avoid charring or burning portions of food and clean the grill thoroughly after cooking.

Serving Grilled Food. Serve hot, grilled foods immediately. Fat cooked foods on clean plates that weren't used to hold the raw meat or poultry. Potentially flammable foods should be packaged within two hours, and kept if the outside temperature is above 90 degrees F.

Cleaning Up. Clean the grill after each use. Also, wash your hands thoroughly, avoid larger quantities like small, shallow containers.

Decision to donate organs should be a family affair

DEAR ABBY: There is a widespread public misconception that needs to be cleared up. Americans need to know that family consent, not a donor card, is required for organ donation to occur. Hospital personnel always require the consent of next-of-kin before procuring organs. Organ donor cards are effective only if they provide a stimulus for family discussions about the intention to become an organ donor, and the potential donor makes plain to his or her family the desire to make the donation.

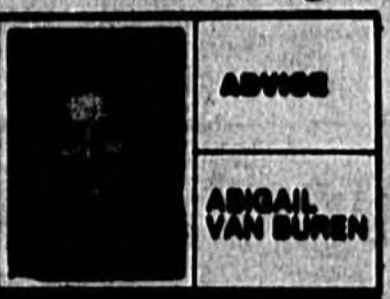

In 1986, a review of medical records of deceased patients revealed that there were approximately 18,000 to 19,000 potential organ donors. But only about 5,346 individuals actually donated, despite the fact that the American public overwhelmingly supports organ donation.

Thanks in advance for your help in clearing this unfortunate gap.

TANA SHERMAN,
PARTNERSHIP FOR ORGAN
DONATION, BOSTON

DEAR TANA: Thank you for an important letter. Encouraging one's desire to be an organ donor is a vital step in the organ donation process. When people sign donor cards, they make a commitment and express their wishes to be vital organ donors at the time of their death. But if family members are unaware of a potential donor's wishes, they can't act on it - react negatively when they are approached and refuse to give their consent. If families understood in advance, there could be an estimated additional 14,000 transplants each year.

I will continue to urge my readers to sign organ donor cards and to discuss their wishes with their families. I believe that most families will agree in respect to the wishes of their loved ones.

DEAR ABBY: I am in my early 20s and have been married for three years. My husband's first wife died eight years ago, but he keeps her memory alive. Her wheelchair is still in the corner of our bedroom, and he has everything she owned. My question is: When does she die? When should he get rid of her things? I feel like I'm competing with a dead woman; I feel haunted. You are the only person I can talk to. I have no other friends. I would like to have counseling but cannot afford it. I am an emotional wreck.

VERY CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Tell your husband what you have told me, and give him a month to get her things out of the house, with the understanding that if he doesn't, you will call a local charity that will accept them.

(It occurred to me that you could call the Home and use the money for counseling, but I have a hunch that that will be quicker and just as effective.)

DEAR READERS: I recently ran across these clever instructions for planting a special garden and couldn't resist sharing them.

First, plant five rows of green Preparation, Preparation, Preparation, Persistence and Prayer.

Next to them, plant three rows of speech: Speech, Speech, Speech. Criticism and Speech.

Then five rows of letters: Let Us Be Faithful, Let Us Be Faithful, Let Us Be Faithful, Let Us Be Faithful, Let Us Be Faithful.

And no garden is complete without turning up the church. Turn Up With a Smile, Turn Up With Determination.

Many things I'm really upset about a person, because my husband and me that he says is all in my head. Every time we go to a doctor visit, he says the only way out is to really make me feel better. Usually, he says that he's really upset about me.

Dear Good Public: I'm sure you know that you can't make him stop doing anything he doesn't want to do, but you can make it clear to him that you're not interested in the behavior or act, you'll believe what you see, not what he says.

If he says enough to you, he

What caused child's diabetes?

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm writing as a parent of an insulin-dependent child. My daughter was diagnosed at 18. The onset of the illness had nothing to do with obesity, lack of exercise and/or indulging a sweet tooth. I wish someone could tell us what to do or not to do to decrease the possibility of developing this chronic illness. What is the exact cause?

DEAR READER: Many experts believe that most forms of diabetes are caused by a poorly understood allergic reaction in the body, during which the immune system attacks and destroys pancreatic beta cells, where insulin is manufactured. Genes probably play a role, too.

No one has yet discovered precisely why people develop diabetes. Clearly, the situation is worsened by obesity, inactivity and the habit of eating too many sweets — but, as in your daughter's case, this certainly is not the whole story.

Perhaps within the next decade researchers will identify the cause of diabetes and develop preventive therapy. However, we are presently in the dark about this common and potentially dangerous disorder.

For now, your daughter should assiduously follow her physician's instructions with regard to diet, activity and medication. Several medical reports have proved that the many complications of diabetes — such as kidney and vascular disorders — can be significantly reduced if the blood sugar is maintained in a more-or-less normal range.

Stay tuned. I'll try to update my readers on new insights into diabetes.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Diabetes Mellitus." Other readers who would like a copy should send $3 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 3017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10154. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was recently diagnosed with blood in my urine. My gynecologist said it was a urethral infection commonly caused by intercourse. Can you explain how intercourse could infect the urine canal?

DEAR READER: The urethra (tube leading from the bladder) lies close to the vagina. During sexual activity the urethra can be irritated — or bacteria may be introduced into it (and the bladder), leading to urinary bleeding, pain and frequency.

In particular, this is a common cause of "honeymoon cystitis," sexually related bladder infection.

These conditions are diagnosed by urinalysis and urine cultures. When present, infection should be treated with antibiotics. Non-infectious urethral irritation needs no therapy.

Your gynecologist was correct. Your bleeding could have resulted from intercourse.

DEAR READER: If you have viral ulcers in your mouth (as proved by virus cultures), they can be treated with anti-viral drugs, such as Zovirax, Famvir and others. Unfortunately, such ulcers may recur — especially at times of stress — so you may need to take the prescription medicine repeatedly.

However, in my experience, if you use the medication, you will find that the ulcers are less severe and occur less frequently. Thus, although viral stomatitis is a life-long affliction, you should be able to control it satisfactorily.

Remember that earlier sores resemble viral ulcers and are differentiated from them by the virus culture that I mentioned. Anti-viral drugs are ineffective in curing earlier sores, the cause of which is a bacterium.

The portcullis is descending

By Phillip Alder

William Blake, perhaps drawing some inspiration from Shakespeare, wrote this verse:

*If you trap the moment before it's ripe,
The tears of repentance you'll certainly wipe;
But if once you let the ripe moment go
You can never wipe off the tears of woe.*

So true in bridge; if you miss a brilliancy, you'll regret it for the rest of your life.

In today's deal, South overlooked a nasty trap. How would you have played in six hearts after a spade lead?

An aggressive West would make a pre-emptive jump to three spades. With a strong raise, he would cue-bid three diamonds or three hearts. South was optimistic in pushing to a slam, but he expected his partner to have no wasted values in spades.

After winning with the spade ace, South tried the club finesse. However, East won with the king and returned a spade, which South ruled. Next came a club, which South ruled. Next came a diamond ruff and a club ruff. Now, though, declarer couldn't shut out West's heart nine. If he ruffed a diamond low, West would overruff. And if he ruffed high, West's nine would be promoted.

The club finesse is a lure. The winning play is to lead a club to dummy's ace at trick two and continue with the club queen. After ruffing East's spade return, South ruffs a club with dummy's heart 10, plays a trump to hand, ruffs another club with the heart ace, cashes the diamond ace, ruffs a diamond and draws West's last two trumps, claiming.
