Officials kept in suspense

SANFORD - Seminole County officials are still waiting for a decision by a five-man national soccer panel whether to locate the national World Cup soccer training facility at a Markham

"I told commissioners I'd wake them up Sunday night if I got an answer," said County Manager Ron Rabun this morning. "We didn't get a word last night."

Rabun said county tourism director Jack Wert told him the answer may come by Wednesday.

The county hopes to attract the United States World Cup '94 team to a proposed $1.5 million training facility west of Sanford. The proposal is for a two-story office and locker-room facility located on property next the Seminole Soccer Club fields near Sylvan Lake Park. The money would be paid by bonds which would be baccked by the county's two percent "bed tax" on hotel and other short-term accommodations.

Three tickets hit jackpot

TALLAHASSEE - Three tickets matched the six numbers drawn in the latest Florida Lotto game and will get equal shares of a jackpot worth an estimated $13 million. Lottery officials said Sunday.

The numbers drawn late Saturday were 8-11-13-17-40-47.

The tickets with all the numbers were sold in Daytona Beach, Westville in Holmes County and Opa-locka in Dade County.

Besides the big winners, 242 tickets had five of the numbers and are worth $4,405 each: 15,656 matched four and are worth $69.50 each, and 306,625 had three numbers and can be cashed in for $5 each.

This week's Lotto jackpot was estimated at $6 million, if paid to a single winner in 20 annual installments.

WAYNE, Neb. - When they chicken out in this town, it's time to party.

With a children's Olym-pecks, a national cluck-off and the all-male Chickendale dancers, this northeastern Nebraska town crowed Saturday over the lowly chicken at the annual Wayne Chicken Show

About 6,000 chicken enthusiasts flocked here from around the state and from as far as California and Sweden, more than doubling the normal size of the community of 5,200 people.

Not eggs-actly the usual summer fair, Roger Polt. an organizer of the event; said the idea was hatched 12 years ago to make Wayne a tourist draw. Surrounding communities had claimed other livestock such as cows and pigs. The chicken was up for grabs.

Wakefield, about 10 miles away, has an egg processing plant, so the chicken seemed a natural, Polt said.

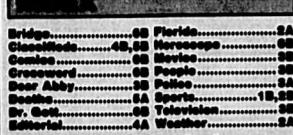

Bakers bid for Guinness record

RIPON, Wis. - A 3,400-pound mass of dough threatened to overturn a specially designed oven as bakers at a civic festival tried to make the Guinness Book of World Records with the world's largest cookie.

'We were concerned about the strain on the oven but we wanted the world's record," said baker James Pontius.

The oven tipped, then withstood the burden Saturday during the two-hour baking at a city festival. The warm, gooey creation measured 907 square feet and contained 2.5 million chocolate chips.

The Fourth Annual Central Florida Soan Box

The Fourth Annual Central Florida Soap Box Derby was eight hours of intense concentration under a blazing sun for racers ranging in age from 9 to 16 in three divisions.

About 700 family members and friends eered and hooted for their favorites along 17-92 between 13th and 20th streets.

SANFORD — City Manager Bill Simmons will officially ask the city to approve a millage rate of 6.8759 for fiscal year 1992/93. The request is on the agenda for Monday night's City Commission meeting.

The proposed rate, unchanged from the present year, is expected to bring in an estimated $4,774,359, which is $144,367 more in tax dollars than the present year. The new fiscal year will begin Oct. 1.

If the millage rate is accepted, the owner of a house appraised at $50,000 would pay $171.90 in taxes, with the $25,000 homestead exemption. With the same exemption, a home owner with a $75,000 house would pay $344.80, and

The city has the option of accepting the rolled-back millage rate of 6.8132, which would bring in the same amount of taxes received by the city during the present flacal year. Finance Director Carolyn Small observed, "Because of delinquent taxes, all of it isn't in yet. but I estimate it will be $4,730,893."

"This entire budget was prepared on the assumption that the millage I am recommending be approved," Simmons commented. "It is the same miliage rate we have had in Sanford since 1989.

Florida delegates worry Clinton

Associated Press Writer

🗆 See Police, Rage SA

NEW YORK — Command of issues and resiliency are Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton's strengths and a tamished personal image remains his greatest burden, many Florida convention delegates say.

"This 'Slick Willie' thing, every time he says something, hurts him," said Shirley Heller, a Clinton delegate from Pembroke Pines. "He's going to have to be very careful not to lose his temper. Maybe he should."

Most of the Florida Democratic National Convention delegates interviewed for an informal survey said they're worried that Clinton is still vulnerable to attack on personal values by President Bush and probable independent can-didate Ross Perot because of draft-dodging and extramarital affair allegations.

But they also said Clinton and his new running mate, Tennessee Sen. Al Gore, are able to simplify complex issues in a way that connects with voters.

"The serious voter will eventually dismiss the personal blemishes and take a look at what he's done," said Dick Batchelor, a Clinton delegate and former state legislator from Orlando. "His intelligence and ability makes him qualified to lead this nation."

Sam Dubbin, a Clinton delegate from Miami, said the Arkansas governor has developed thoughtful approaches to solving problems in the economy, cities, health care and crime. Dubbin also said Clinton appears willing to stand for a stronger national defense.

"That's been our biggest hangup in national elections. He's not afraid to stand up and say, sometimes we've got to defend our national interests," Dubbin said.

Kian targets gays

DAYTONA BEACH — During a Ku Klux Klan raily here, blacks and Jews were not the usual targets. Instead, about 50 Klanemen, skinheads and supporters proclaimed gays and lesbtans should receive the death penalty.

During the raily on Saturday, the KKK faced a counter-demonstration by a large group that included gays and lesbians, members of the National Organization for Women and members of a local church that serves the gay community.

There were no arrests and no violence, said Officer Al Tolley, public information officer for Daytona Beach police.

About 200 people attended the rally at about 3 p.m. held outside City Hall, and anti-Klan demonstrators outnumbered Klanemen by about three-to-one.

FORT MYERS — A man is spending a week in jail after repeatedly dialing 911 with what dispatchers said were graphic sexual requests.

Ron Vanname, 21, was sentenced Thursday after pleading no contest to a misdemeanor charge of making obscene and harassing telephone calls.

He made nine calls in 16 minutes but apparently didn't know the computer at the Charlotte County Sheriff's office kicked out the address of the caller.

He was arrested Wednesday at a phone booth in Port Charlotte. He hung up the telephone when he saw deputies pull up in patrol cars, according to an arrest report.

School district not responsible

HOLLYWOOD - The Broward County school district is not responsible for the actions of a school volunteer who gave a potbellied third-grader a pregnancy test without her parents' permission, an investigator has concluded.

But an attorney for the child's mother called the monthlong investigation a cover-up and said the family would take legal action against the Broward County School Board and the parent volunteer.

The child, a 10-year-old whose name is being withheld, was asked by a volunteer at Colbert Elementary School in May to urinate into a cup, said the parents' attorney, Lawrence S. Ben.

The pregnancy test was negative.

Ben said the test violated the girl's civil and privacy rights. The lawyer for Doreen Biggs, the volunteer alleged to have conducted the test, believed she had good reason to think the third-grader needed help.

Builders want issue delayed

County to act on impact fees for schools

By J. MARK BARFILD Herald Blaff Writer

SANFORD - The Home Builders Association of Mid-Florida will stage a show of force Tuesday night as Seminole County commissioners make their first formal review on the proposed $1,400 fee on new homes to help pay for new schools

"We have sent a flyer out to our membership asking for their support," said Paul Mashburn. HBA president. "The membership has been invited to attend. We want the county to know now is not a good time to do this."

Commissioners will hold a hearing on the proposed fee at 7 p.m. Tuesday night. A final adoption hearing will be held July 28. Both meetings will be held in the county commission chambers of the County Services Building on East First Street.

School officials have asked commissioners to adopt a fee on new residences throughout the county, both in and out of cities. The proposed fee of $1,384 on homes, 6639 per spartment or condominium, and $955 for each new mobile home would take affect Oct. 1.

School officials said they need the $44.5 million expected from the fee during the next five years to supplement the $123.4 million the school district will receive from the state and 2-mill school construction tax levied last year. About 26 percent of the construction program will be financed with the new fee.

The home builders will ask the county to delay their decision to adopt the fee until a review of the economic impact of the fee can be completed. Mashburn said the study should be completed by September.

A study performed for the HBA in 1988 by three economics professors at the University of Central Florida indicated the fees cause housing prices to climb, making the "American Dream" of home ownership less affordable for low- and middlecome residents. homes are sold, construction jobs are lost resulting in a loss of jobs unrelated to construction because of the loss of spending.

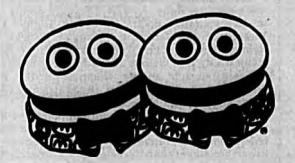

"Our school task force has consistently opposed school impact fees using this methodology," said Mashburn. "It results in lost jobs, lost revenue and decrease in the number of houses being built."

No free ride

Nothing is more irksome than to be charged extra so someone eine can get a free ride. Yet according to a new study by the Congressional Budget Office, that's the way much of the U.S. transportation system is financed. On the highways, in the air and on the waterways, major users pay less than their share, so ordinary taxpayers or other users have to pay more.

That's unfair. It's also inefficient. To get the most for the U.S. transportation dollar. user-fees should more accurately reflect the benefits that different classes of users get from the transportation system and the wear and tear they put on it.

The road-user taxes currently paid by heavy trucks, for example, do not cover the cost of the pavement damage they cause. The CBO suggests taxing all trucks on the basis of axle weight and distance traveled. That way, heavily loaded trucks would pay more while trucks lightly loaded or with weight spread over more axles would pay less. In the long run, as truckers adjusted their rigs to the new fee schedule, there should be less pavement damaged and lower highway repair and rebuilding costs for everyone.

A congestion tax might have a similar effect on car owners, encouraging them to switch to transit or otherwise make better use of existing roadways and thereby reduce the need for new construction.

Airlines pay their share of the costs of operating the air traffic control system, but general aviation doesn't. The CBO report cites the example of a corporate jet flying from Washington D.C., to Chicago. For such a trip. the jet now pays $43 in fuel taxes; if it were taxed in proportion to the air traffic-control costs generated by general aviation, it would pay $445.

On inland waterways, fuel taxes paid by barges and pleasure boats account for only 8 percent of revenues needed to support the system. That means the federal government's general fund provides a shocking 92 percent subsidy.

The CBO argues persuasively that users should pay a bigger share of the burden.

The report correctly cautions that such changes would have to be phased in over several years to avoid serious hardships for transporters that have purhased their equipment on the basis of the present tax and fee system. All the more reason, however, to get the process started quickly so that current inequities and inefficiencies don't drag on

How top court rules on non-persons

The not yet born, who have divided the nation for so long, can count on few friends at the Supreme Court. Justice Antonin Scalin is not a friend. As he again made clear in his dissent in Planned Parenthood v. Casey, "The states may, if they wish, permit abortion-on-demand, but the Constitution does not require them to do so." To him, these wars have to do with federalism, not the saving of human life in all jurisdictions. Nor is another dissenter, the Chief Justice, a rescuer of the fetus. As David Savage points out in his valuable book, "Turning Right: The Making of the Rehnquist Court" (Wiley), in Rehnquist's view, "The Constitution neither gave women a right to choose abortion nor guaranteed the fetus a right to life. Because neither was decided by the Constitution, the states and their elected officials could decide for themselves."

Byron White may be the only opponent of Roe v. Wade on the court who goes beyond federalism to a concern for the vast number of lives that have been formulated by Ros. In his lives that have been foreclosed by Roc. In his original 1973 dissent. Justice White said that Roe allowed abortion to "satisfy the convenience whim, or caprice of the putative mother." (Clarence Thomas has yet to disclose on precisely what grounds he is against Roe.)

On the other side, John Paul Stevens makes no pretence of being at all troubled by the fate of as some justices put it - "potential life." (A with potential.) In his concurring opinion in Planned Parenthood v. Casey, he emphasizes that to be a person guarded by the Constitution, one first has to be born. Accordingly, "an abortion is not 'the termination of life and entitled to 14th Amendment protection." At least, Stevens does indicate that a life is involved. He does not say whether it is human life. But it does not matter. Like Dred Scott, a non-person - as Justice Roger Taney said just before the Civil War when he ruled that blacks had no rights - cannot be a "constituent member of this sovereignty."

A felus, like

a non-person.

Potential life does matter, however, to the writers of the dominant opinion in the Pennsylvania case - Sandra Day O'Connor.

Anthony Kennedy and David Souter. "The state has legitimate interest from the outset of the pregnancy in protecting the health of the woman and the fetus that may become a child. These principles do not contradict one another; and we adhere to each."

The phrase, "that may become a child," offers a touch of warmth to the not yet born, but while the overall decision provides obstacles to their "termination," not many will be saved. The deciding three justices say that some people consider abortion to be "nothing short of an act of violence against innocent human life;" but "the liberty of the woman" to abort "is at stake in a sense unique to the human condition and so, unique to the law." Therefore, while one may "express profound respect for the life of the unborn" there must be no "undue burden" to a woman's right to an abortion. But, as O'Connor, Souter and Kennedy have profoundly disturbed the advocates for the not yet born, they have also greatly disappointed those fighting to protect abortion rights. By taking away the highest standard of review in these cases - strict scrutiny - the justices have ruled, despite their calming rhetoric, that abortion is actually no longer a fundamental constitutional right. The standard is now whether a restriction on a abortion is an "undue

When youngest child leaves

Our youngest child left the nest and, as it happens, the North American continent late last week. That is a more dramatic version of reality than the facts, since she has been out on her own ever since she graduated from college two years ago, but it captures her parents' mood. While I'm tempted to fuzz it up even further by saying that we cried as she flew off to her Peace Corps assignment in Africa, the truth is somewhat different. "We" didn't cry. I did.

Why? After all, there are seven adult children in our contemporary version of the extended family, including three of my wife's and four of my own. We're up to four grandchildren and counting. Representative of the new face of America in many ways, in none are we more typical than in the geographic dispersion of our offspring. Two are in New York City, one is in Los Angeles, one is here in Washington, D.C., one is in North Carolina and one in Mississippi, where all of them grew up. The seventh, the daughter who is now in Africa, was working in St. Paul. Minn., when she decided to contribute two-plus years to working with subsistence-level villagers on behalf of her nation.

In other words, we're not exactly in daily physical contact, or even weekly, with most of the children. Between us we fatten the revenues of at least four different long-distance telephone services, but convenient as it is to "reach out and touch" each other by long-line. it is a sorry substitute for the intimacy of face-to-face communication. Coming from rural states, where families tended to cluster near each other within communities or sections, coming most particularly from the South, where roots historically went deep and rootedness was a concrete as well as psychological thing, we have made an uneasy peace with the fact that today's neighborhood turns out to be continental in scope. That's the way it is in America of the late 20th century, and while we don't have to like it, we are resigned to it.

So why the high emotional drama when this one, the last of the offspring, cut herself far adrift from family and nation, if only temporarily? The obvious explanation is that Africa (or Asia or South America, if it had been one of them instead) is not Los Angeles or Jackson. Miss. In the country to which she has been assigned, even telephone service is a sometime thing. The mail, when it is actually delivered, can take over three weeks to get from the East Coast to her village.

But too much weight should not be assigned to this explanation. She is the second, not the first, of the family to fly off to Africa with the Peace Corps. For the parents, though not this child, long-distance separation is not a new thing. We missed her brother and worried about him while he was gone, but his departure was not freighted with the emotional weight I have piled upon his sister's. Before either of them made their way abroad, three other family members spent a full school year

No, the honest truth is that in saving goodbye to this daughter, we were also saying goodbye to a certain sense of ourselves.

Whatever else we are now, we are no longer the grown-ups upon whom the children are dependent. Close as our relations are with most of the kide most of the time, each of them now operates from an independent base, answering to the needs, demands and foibles of others far more often than to us. No longer in their youth, their maturity decisively closes a chapter in our lives as well as theirs. It cannot be reopened. The book marches more not exactly in daily physical contact. clearly and inexorably to its certain end. That is meant to be descriptive rather than maudiin. Our lives, as heavily invested in the children as they have been and always will be, have meaning and purpose outside the bonds of parenthood. We do not live through our sons and daughters, proud of them as we so often are, worried about each of them individually as we have periodically been since each was born and will be until we die. We do not want or

In other

It is difficult to say goodbye to the actual person, this baby turned woman, and even harder to say farewell to the past that encapsulated her and her siblings as children and us as adults. She is strong, independent and resilient, all the things the child could not be. Fully launched, she is a ship under full sail and we the fast-receding dock. Losing close contact with her, we also lose connection with a past that once defined our present and shaped our

JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - Behind the smiles and back-slapping of the Democratic convention this week, Jesse Jackson is still on slow burn with Bill Clinton over the now infamous Sister Souljah incident.

"If it's distance he (Clinton) wants, it's distance he'll get," one senior Jackson adviser warns.

What riles Jackson is the measure of premeditation Clinton showed when he turned an appearance before Jackson's National Rainbow Coalition last month into a platform to attack the black rapper Sister Souljah, whom Clinton condemned for condoming violence against whites.

Jackson believes Jackson that he was reduced lo a campaign prop to execute what some call a "distancing strategy." Clinton's advisers have indeed been trying to walk the high wire with Jackson - winning his votes without incurring the backlash that previous Democrats believe they experienced by being perceived as pandering.

he was reduced to a campaign

Jackson advisers see the situation through this lens: They rolled out the red carpet for Clinton. There was a choir singing "Rebuild America ... Keep Hope Alive." Jackson even enlisted his daughter, who has performed backup for Roberta Flack, to sing. Overall, a tent revival atmosphere filled the air: people were clapping enthusiastically by the time Clinton made his entrance as a conquering

Jackson's high command got tipped off some 45 minutes in advance that Clinton was going to pull what they viewed as a surprise attack, but they elected not to inform Jackson out of fear over his reaction.

"I knew in advance that Clinton was going to start some trouble," one Jackson adviser told our associate Ed Henry. "Clinton's people went to reporters and said that Clinton was going to do something to upset Jackson and the Rainbow Coalition. They said he was going to say some things that were displeasing.

"I went to Jackson and he was putting the finishing touches on his introductory remarks. Jackson was with Bill Lynch, the deputy mayor of New York City. I didn't want to bother Jackson because I didn't know how bad it was going to be."

This adviser said he told Lynch but not Jackson, whom he was trying to keep in "a totally positive frame of mind." Besides, this adviser couldn't figure out how to formulate the words. "What am I going to say, 'Jesse, I don't know the details but Clinton is going to knee you in the (groin)."

This adviser told Jackson afterward of the advance warning, and Jackson was apparently understanding. He realized he would have been distracted. "The thing is, we didn't anticipate (Clinton's denunciation) would be as bad as it was. We thought the hard stuff would just be some of the workfare and boot camp ideas he has that we don't agree with."

What are the chances of reconciliation between the two men? They are probably strong because each has his own agenda in seeing that the other succeeds.

Clinton can count votes. Jackson's bruised ego can be costly in November, when a large black turnout will be vital, but something only the electrifying Jackson can produce. Some strategists believe Clinton will need up to 80 percent of the black vote to win.

Since Clinton is the only presidential candidate who favors statehood for the District of Columbia, a President Clinton could help create a Sen. Jackson. Jackson's eye is on that prize.

ment of Law Enforcement relate to major crimes including rob-bery, murder, theft, and other offenses. In Banford, he reported the crime rate increased about 6 percent, from 3,620 in 1990 to 3,877 in 1991." He added, "I would estimate the present year is at approximately the same level because there haven't been any signs of a marked increase."

The budget proposed for this next year is $144,128 lower than 1991/92, at $4,360,955. Harriett was directly involved in the preparation of the requests. "Budget preparation was a unique opportunity this year," Harriett said. "The City Manager Harriett said. "The City Manager charged each of us department heads with devising a plan that would be as palatable as could Maintenance costs for the radio system is expected to be higher, with $13,000 being d, rather than 96,600 for this past year.

The Fire department budget is only $47,455 lower for this new fiscal year. Fire Chief Tom Hickson said, "We don't expect the leaser amount to present any problems, and we plan to con-tinue our level of service."

One of the major line items not needed for the new year is $18,000 used in re-roofing Fire Station "I last year. "This is something we hope we don't have to do again for a long time." Hickson said.

Among the other changes was a reduction in the Fire Pension fund. Pinance Director Carolyn Small had determined almost $27,500 less would be needed for the coming year. Increases in budgeted items were mostly on the cost of various types of insurance for personnel as well as structures and equipment.

"Fire calls have increased over last year by about six percent," Hickson said, "but this is probably due to the increase in population." He added, "The number of serious fires however, is definately lower. Most of the additional calls are for minor ituations such as brush fires, so I believe we'll be able to continue operating at or above our present level."

The line items in the police and fire department budgets were studied by the City Commission during a workshop meeting Monday afternoon. No objections were brough up, and the proposals are expected to pass as submitted by the City Manager during August City Commission public hearings.

coming year, at a lower cost," said Mike Kirby, who heads the departments, combined into one earlier this year following the resignation of Parks Director Jim Jernigan.

Most of the line item budget changes deal with the agreement reached with the Salvation Army for the use of its building for nummer recreation programs." Kirby explained.
"We had to add four part-time employees to work at the facility," he said. "But as in the Parks Department, we have lost a number of full time employees, and by replacing them with part timers or new employees, the salary levels are actually lower than they have been, even with the 2 percent cost of living raise proposed in the budget."

The amount budgeted for salaries in the Recreation Department for the present year is $18,145 while the projected level for the new year is $12,835.

Some of the budgeted tiems however, will increase due to the operation of the Salvation Army facility. The cost of operating the summer playground last year at Fort Melion Park was $8,575 while next year's projections are $16,432. "We completely stopped the Fort Melion Park activities," Kirby explained. "Now we will have indoor recreation areas at the Salvation Army facility, and be able to offer much better programs."

The total amount recommended for the next flscal year for the Recreation Department is $516,597.

The Parks Department's budget is to be lowered from $1,468,959 to $1,438,165.

Cemetery maintenance is expected to increase from $30,826 this year to approximately $37,500 next year. "This is a bid item." Kirby said. "We will be putting this out for bids. and based on what we have determined, that's probably what we'll end up paying."

"We project building repairs will also increase," Kirby said. The budget for repairs to the Civic Center. Senior Center. Westaide Boys/Girls Club, and other city-owned facilities is listed as increasing from $7,855 to $15,000 for this coming

Price cuts and fewer purcha of work tools, chemical supplies and other items will help bring the financial requirements of the Parks department lower, but the need to purchase a new front end loader attachment for a tractor will increase the needs by $4,000. The vehicle will be purchased on a five year plan. with the amount being only the first year's expenses.

Additional areas under Kirby's jurisdiction include Library and Museum facilities owned by the City. The budget projections remain practically unchanged from this previous year, at $70,000.

Kirby joined other department heads in praising the City Man-ager for the compilation of the 1992/93 flocal year budget. "We were allowed to get involved in the decisions, and all of our suggestions were given serious consideration," he said. "While I could have asked for more. I feel really comfortable with this and look toward a good year ahead."

"He can be very likable," she said. "He's a regular southern 'Bubba' kind of person. When he's handled, he's a little too much of a politician."

Eleanor Goldbloom, a retired

Fort Myers physician who's a delegate for former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Teongae, said Clinton's stock soared for her because he selected Gore.

"He fills a gap for people who were worried about Clinton's environmental record. I have a feeling about Gore that he wouldn't compromise," she said.

She also acknowledged that

Clinton has communications skills that Tsongas lacks.

One of the most important goals a family can set for this summer is to increase and enhance its reading skills. Here are some helpful tips:

Use the public library as a regular part of your summer activities and excursions. Inquire as to what programs and other activities are available for different ages. Encourage your children to make selections and show that you are proud and enthusiastic about the books they choose on their own. Set a good example by letting your children see you read often and that you enjoy doing so. Tell your children about what you read, what you learned, how much you enjoyed it and perhaps discuss something you feel would be interesting to your children.

Set aside a regular time for reading at home. Read together. Select reading material your child will enjoy. Try to use a wide selection, such as books, magazines, newspapers. brochures and such. Peruse the selection for any words that may not be familiar to your child and write it down. Pronounce the word and explain the meaning to your children.

If time permits, have your children read their selection silently first, then out loud. They will make fewer mistakes and comprehend it better. Share oral reading. You can alternate paragraphs, sentences or dia-

Ask questions while reading. Start with details, then ask for opinions and conclusions. Don't forget - practice makes perfect.

Latchkey Child Safety

With summer here, many children will be home in an empty house while parents are at work or running errands.

Following is a checklist of things all children should know. Review these with your children regardless of their age:

Full name, address and phone number with area code; how to use any type phone to reach the operator or any emergency number; how to carry a key no that it is secure, but out of sight; never go into the house if the door is slightly open or a window is broken; who to turn to if an emergency occurs, such as a neighbor and to check with said neighbor at regular assigned times; avoid walking or playing alone on the way to or from home; how to answer the telephone without letting the caller know that children are home alone; how to get out of the house safely in case of fire.

By discussing these items. more questions or ideas may occur. If your children know what to do they will feel more secure and so will you.

Another family reunion 'down the tubes' invariably turn into some sort athletic competition? Shouldn't we know better by now?

I only bring this up because this is the time of year where those emotional trials known as family reunions are planned and executed. And I know that many of us will return from these ordeals in some state of physical disrepair after having folded, spindled and/or otherwise mutilated our bodies in the name of family fun and frolic.

My wife, daughter and I have recently returned from New England and our annual visit with the various members of my family. And, as always, my brothers. brothers-in-law, Dad and myself found some way to keep ourselves entertained and challenged at the same time.

Some 10 days ago, we were all gathered at my youngest sisters' home in upstate New York, one of the few times all of us have been together in the last five years. Not being the types to miss an opportunity to bust each others chops. literally and figuratively, we quickly began devising plans for athletic competition.

Like all families, there have been some titanic struggles on the gaming fields since we've supposedly crossed over into adulthood (our mother, sisters and/or wives debate that alleged transition heatedly).

The competition has taken on several guises, most notably Wifsleball (a registered trademark. If I'm not mistaken, of a baseball-like game played with a thin plastic bat and a plastic ball with curve-inducing holes cut into it), pool hoops (basketball played in a 4-foot deep swimming pool). flag football and volley ball.

Even before we had all arrived.

plans were in place to continue our Wiffieball series and, if the weather cooperated, volleyball. But that would quickly grow to be redundant in the three days we would be together. We needed to come up with something different, something

This drive to compete took another twisted turn this summer when we tried our collective hand at tubing. For unitiated, tubing basically consists of being towed behind a motorboat on a large innertube-like aparatus at about 15 to 20 miles an hour.

Down in the pike, or sitting down. position, it's a fairly thrilling yet safe diversion, much like riding a rollercoast. But done in the prone. or face-down, position, it's more like builriding, battling gravity to stay on top of and ride something ill-suited to the task.

the state of the property of t personal, doomed challenge against the laws of physics? No, we turned it into a competition, arguing over what rules should be enforced as we sat huddled under a small canopy waiting for a sudden rainstorm to

Who won and lost is largely beside the point since, like atomic war, surviving is the ultimate goal in tubing. If there's less water in your lungs than in the lake, it has to be considered a good ride. I will tell you that I picked up 10 bonua seconds for my triple barrel roll dismount.

It only hurts when I breathe. Several words of caution before you head out to do some tubing: As in water skiing, make sure you wear a personal flotation device best suited for your size and weight. And make sure the area is clear of rocks. The day after we went out, there was a story in the local paper of a teenager who had been tubing on another lake and died after striking his head on rock.

Schwarzkopf stresses pride to Olympians reserved for amusement park tourists to down sausages, sauerkraut and beer. A total of $320,000 was raised through this and other

Tampa Bay area fund-raisers. For their money, guests got a chance to rub shoulders with about 50 athletes outfitted for the first time in the red, white and blue warmup suits that will be worn during the medal ceremonies at

Among Olympic gold medalists on hand were Al Oerter, who won four golds in the discus; Bob Beamon, whose 1968 long jump of 29-21/2 at Mexico City stood as a world record for over 20 years; and Mary Lou Retton, overall gymnastics winner in the 1984 games. "In 14 days, it's going to be winning time for the United States of America," said Retton. "In 14 days it's going to be the big time."

A delegation of 900 athletes, coaches and United States Olympic Committee personnel are expected to pass through Tampa to get uniforms and medical checkups before heading to Spain. The athletes began arriving in Florida last Monday and the last are due to leave on July 21.

Herbs have a rich history

Herbs have a rich history that is well documented and were used extensively until recently. Herbs fell from grace as more chemical methods were developed to replace them. History tells us that people used herbs to flavor foods, to repel insects, treat illness and as fragrance for home and person. Herbs are easy to grow and many are suited to our climate here in

Herbs are classified as either annual or perennial. Annuals complete their life cycle in one year while perennials persist from year to year. Her neuropathy is related to diabetes

74-year-old diabetic on 10 units of long-acting insulin. I've developed diabetic neuropathy, which my doctor says can be helped but not cured by exercise and diet. I'd welcome any additional advice you might give. DEAR READER: Diabetic neuropathy -- tingling, weakness and numbress of the extremities -- is a form of nerve damage resulting from the consequences of diabetes, a disease marked by high blood sugar.

To some degree, diabetic neuropathy is related to the success of diabetic control: Improperly treated diabetics appear to have a higher incidence of nerve malfunction.

In my opinion, you are taking an extraordinarily low dose of insulin. I believe that your doctor should approach this problem more aggressively: Ei-ther you don't need insulin at all (and can be treated with diet plus anti-diabetes pills) or your insulin dose is inadequate for your needs. Review this situation with your physician.

Although diabetic neuropathy can't be cured (and neither can diabetes), the affliction (and the diabetes) can be controlled by diet, exercise and the judicious use of appropriate medicine.

To give you more information. I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Diabetes Mellitus."

DEAR DR. GOTT: I would like your comments on the use of niacin as a dietary supplement. I suffer from phiebitis of the entire left leg and occasionally develop akin ulcers below my ankle. I take one 1/4 grain aspirin daily and wear support stockings. My druggist recommended the niacin, and while his original suggestion of strength caused nasal and oral dryness, a lesser amount achieved full healing of. the ulcer. Is this appropriate worked for you. Niacin, one of the B vitamina, is not a conven-tional treatment for skin ulcers, which are usually treated by careful cleansing and elastic support hose. Rather, niacin has been shown to help reduce serum cholesterol.

Are you ever at home wishing you could have a game of bridge? Perhaps you need fret no more. Matthew Clegg, a computer expert from La Jolla, Calif., has written a program called Okbridge, which permits four people who live anywhere in the world to play bridge together. All each needs is a computer with a modem and access to Internet, a network that mostly connects universities. Details are available from Clegg at 619-558-3408.

The play is a little slow, but you may fill the gaps by "talking" to the other players.

"held" the North cards of today's deal in New York. South was Conroy Lee in Boston. The defenders were Clegg, West, in San Diego and Richard Beigel in New Haven, Conn.

West led the spade queen. Declarer won with dummy's king and took an immediate heart finesse, losing to West's king. Back came the spade jack. East discarding a club. Things were looking grim. The club finesse was surely losing, and it might prove impossible to keep West off the lead.

Declarer won trick three with the spade ace, led a club to dummy's king, took a second heart finesse and cashed the heart ace. I imagined his sigh of relief when hearts split 3-3. On the 13th heart, West and dummy threw sp club.

South led a club and finessed dummy's jack, but East won with the queen and returned a diamond. South correctly went up with his ace, dropping the singleton king. (Even if East had underled the K-Q of diamonds. declarer would still have made the contract.) Declarer drove out the diamond queen and claimed 10 tricks.

You might enter into a reluctant partnership arrangement in the year ahead. Even though it won't be ideal, it could produce numerous collective benefits.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Strive to be cooperative, not individualistic, when dealing with others today. If you are self-serving, others will emulate your behavior and no one will benefit. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In conversations with friends today, be selective regarding your topics. If you endorse a political position that another opposes, a heated debate could ensue.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Getting along with people from various walks of life could be one of your better assets today. However, this admirable quality might not spill over when dealing with authority figures.

SCORPSO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Methods that work well for you might not be as equally effective for others today. Don't try to force your procedures on reluctant companions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec.

21) You have good earning potential today, but you might neur losses through mismanagement of your re-sources. Don't let what you acquire slip through your fingers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Being a take-charge individual will come naturally to you today. But you must be careful not to ruffle the feathers of companions who want to express their own individuality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Friends will help to a limited degree today, so don't ask them to take care of things you should be handling yourself. You might not like their response.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you build your hopes upon a realistic premise today, you won't be disappointed. However. if your expectations are predicated on a free ride, you could be sorely disappointed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions which have an influence on your finances and career are rather complex today; you could profit as well as be penalized. Therefore, handle your affairs with care.
