At The Capitol

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Apr. 6.—This column will not begin after the manner of Will Rogers with the declaration that "All I know is what I read in the papers," since that would not hold true as a condition of the Florida Legislature. All we know is what we hear on the street and in the Capitol and other State Buildings. Most of the time we do not know that—just think we do, as some rumor is very much in evidence.

There are senators and representatives arriving on every train, and practically the entire membership will be in Tallahassee by noon today. Many are coming in their own automobiles, and some even by air—guess we'll all be "up in the air" before the session is over.

Elks Are Planning Their Activities In State Convention

An elaborate float will be entered by the local lodge, according to present plans, and together with the band at least 75 Sanford Elks are expected to be in line. The Fort Harrison Hotel, convention headquarters, will be the scene of the three-day convention, which culminates with a grand ball honoring the new association "president" on Tuesday night.

WALKER BACK IN GOTHAM TO DEFEND SELF

States "We're Going To Give Them All We've Got" Upon His Arrival In New York

NEW YORK, Apr. 6.—(AP)—Mayor Walker returned yesterday to fight for his official life. "We're going to give them all we've got," was the way he described the answer he will make to charges filed in coterminous proceedings against him.

The mayor's return was regarded as the signal for a general tightening of the defenses of all departments of his administration against the forthcoming legislative investigation of New York city affairs.

Sanborn by his California vacation, Walker said he was back with renewed health and vigor. On his arrival yesterday morning he posed for innumerable photographs and gave close attention to the comfort of Chauncey and Molly O., two Irish setter pups from a western friend.

No demonstration was arranged for the mayor's return, and a few hand claps from early risers in Grand Central terminal was the only public greeting.

He waved his acknowledgments to a "Hello, Jimmie" from a youngster near St. Agnes Catholic church and after attending a A. M. mass there with relatives and a close friend retired to his home.

WASHINGTON, Apr. 6.—(AP)—The proposal of Senator Bingham for a blanket increase in income levies and a lowering of existing exemptions to curb extravagant federal spending was given a frigid reception yesterday by leaders of all factions in congress.

The Connecticut Republican, a member of both the Finance and appropriations committees, means while pointed out that hardly more than 2,500,000 persons pay income taxes now. He insisted the thousands now uncharged should have it brought home to them that they should bear a share of the increased cost of government.

Commenting on the New Englander's sweeping tax program, Senator Wood of Indiana, the majority floor leader, said: "I am opposed to any further taxation because I don't think it is necessary under existing conditions."

LEMLEY TALKS AT LUNCHEON OF TRADEBODY

Head Of Engineering Firm Says Return Of Prosperity Is As Certain As Death, Taxes

"Business in America is off and will stay off for the next few months" was admitted by B. W. Lemley, president of the New York and Chicago appraisal engineering firm of Coats and Burchard, who, speaking at the Sanford Chamber of Commerce luncheon today on the subject of "Future Prosperity," emphasized, however, that "All signs point to a noticeable improvement in conditions in the nation by at least September," and that "prosperity in America may be dimmed, but it will never be obliterated if it has been, and always will be the greatest of any nation on earth."

Mr. Lemley's talk was brief and was based upon facts and information he has gained during the past several months from a close business association with many of the larger industrial firms of the country. Most of those houses report that conditions are extremely low at the present time, he said, but that there were clear signs that in every branch of business, a marked change for the better would take place in the Fall.

He began his remarks by comparing business conditions at present to a dog who had run into the woods. Asking the question "How far can a dog run into the woods?" Mr. Lemley answered it at the same time by saying that "As soon as the dog is a little more than half-way into the woods, he is on the way out." Business was pictured in (Continued On Page Four)

WITH SEEN CROSS MAN

Community Op- inion Arises as Result of Calamity

WASHINGTON, April 4.—(AP)—A study of a month that afflicted the entire United States, James M. Fieser, Red Cross vice chairman, yesterday gave a new community citizenship rating.

Thousands of people have been killed by circumstances to be called "tragedies," he said. "Out of this team-work will come a new understanding that will carry on for years to come."

In charge of domestic operations, Fieser had just completed a 5,000-mile inspection of Texas, Oklahoma, the Mississippi delta country, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Everywhere, he said, he met a "moral, remarkable and in some ways a spiritual" in the land on his previous visit in February.

Recent rains had given promise of crops to come, Red Cross men already had grown turnips, beans and radishes, for Mississippi and Texas, and half the families whose entire subsistence was coming from the Red Cross on April 1 had re-established credit through the farm loans, the Intermediate Corporation or normal channels.

After combating 200 miles of blizzard, Fieser arrived in Washington in the midst of a "down-pour" and jubilant. He announced the drought would be "out of sight" by the end of April except on remote mountain farms where each family raised its own subsistence and no credit system was in operation.

Down in Texas, he said, the Red Cross gardens had been frozen. But, rejoicing over any form of precipitation, Fieser promised a Texas release of seeds.

No swift disaster of his experience, Fieser said, had brought out a spirit of citizenship like the "grind of the drought."

Thirty-five thousand volunteers have devoted almost their entire time throughout the winter to meeting this emergency, and many of them are still at it, he said.

Managua by airplane, trucks and trains, as the railroad is not all the way to the capital. Trucks will meet the trains with supplies at the end of the several miles from the city.

The medical corps, which served aid for a while, is working on its work efficiently through doctors and their assistants are exhausted from long hours of nerve-racking work.

Leading the work of the medical departments, Lieutenant Commander W. B. Hatfield of West Virginia, has shown unflinching energy throughout the disaster. His leadership has been an important feature of the rescue work.

The iron hand of martial law to prevent looting in the devastated city resulted last night in the shooting of four plunders by the National Guard.

It is unofficially reported to have made a total of 20 looters shot, although marine officers have not confirmed this.

One of the commodities of food needed is milk for the babies. Although Marines had a few cans of condensed milk in the city, it was insufficient for the needs.

That the first emergency committee is now in the process of organizing and directing some of the relief work of the quake, Fieser complained that the Red Cross was unable to get material from a cooking store from families increased in the quake.

These families are in the heart of Managua and are in a state of panic. The Red Cross is now in the process of organizing a relief committee to meet the needs of these families.

LARGE SUMS ARE FOUND INVOLVED IN RACKETEERING

By steps can be taken intelligently.

Best known of the laws recommended by the commission is the famous fourth offender law, which makes it mandatory for the courts to impose life imprisonment for a person convicted for the fourth time of the commission of a felony.

The commission recommended additional study of the causes and prevention of crime, criminal procedure, the correction law, police administration, and prison punishment.

Development of crime among youth was laid in large measure, in the report, to juvenile delinquency.

According to the report, a violation of a traffic ordinance theoretically makes the offender a criminal. In order to eliminate this condition, the commission proposed that there be a broad study of the whole question of crime, punishment, and classification of crime.

Whirlwind Comedy Is Scheduled At Milane

"Fifty Million Frenchmen," Warner Bros. natural color screen version of the whirlwind comedy which lately took Broadway by storm, comes to The Milane Theatre Sunday.

The scenes of "Fifty Million Frenchmen" are all laid in gay Paris—they are a glorious mélange of dancing sweeties, wisecracking kidders, skidding taxis, sleight-of-hand performers, puny-footing detectives, gorgeously gowned girls and speeding race horses—a perfect setting for the astonishing love story of a young American millionaire who wagers fifty thousand dollars that, without a cent in his pocket, he can in two weeks woo and marry the stunning girl he has seen, but never met.

The girl in question is played by Claudia Dell, William Gaxton is the adventurous lover, John Halliday and Lester Crawford are the two friends of the hero (one of them his rival) who challenge him. Olsen and Johnson, the crassest team in talkies, are cast as fake detectives, who impersonate many other odd people before the play runs its riotous course. Helen Broderick plays a song-minded tourist, Carmelita Geraghty does a flighty French girl and Charles Judels again excels as a comical boulevardier. Nat Carr and Vera Gordon do a delightful bit as Jewish tourists in Paris.

"Fifty Million Frenchmen" is based on the Herbert Fields play. The up-to-the-minute adaptation was done by Joseph Jackson, A. Rosenberg and Eddie Welch. "Fifty Million Frenchmen" is filmed entirely in Technicolor. Lloyd Bacon directed.

Though "Fifty Million Frenchmen" was a musical play, there are no choruses in the picture—which is, when all is said, just the last word in peppy, love stories with a comedy angle. It is interesting to note that William Gaxton was for a time on the screen as the typical villain; that he returned to the Broadway stage as the hero in "Fifty Million Frenchmen" and that he is now seen in the screen version as an ingratiating happy-go-lucky youth. Helen Broderick was also in the Broadway production.

GETS 10 YEARS IN LINGLE CASE

guilty of the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, and was "fix his punishment at 10 years imprisonment," instructed the clerk.

There were a few gasps in the courtroom. Brothers, leaning on the witness stand, paled a trifle and then said to a bailiff, "let's duck." The first big gang murder case to reach a Chicago jury was over.

The killing of Lingle, as he struggled through the pedestrian tunnel under busy Michigan boulevard last June 9, was one of the most spectacular the city ever had known, and it aroused a public clamor that still is heard in the drive against Chicago's "public enemies."

A single shot, fired into the back of the reporter's head, killed him instantly. The slayer and those who are believed to have accompanied him, escaped in the confusion of the crowded subway.

The trial itself was unusual more for its omissions than for its revelations. The expected evidence of the inner workings of Chicago gangdom did not materialize.

The state did not try to prove a motive, or to prove that Brothers had any connection with gangdom in this or any other city. Brothers did not take the stand and he did not attempt to prove an alibi.

The case consisted of eight witnesses for the state and seven for the defense who said they were in or near the tunnel when Lingle was killed. The state witnesses, one of whom said he saw the slayer drop the pistol, identified Brothers. The defense witnesses, two of whom said they saw the actual shooting, testified Brothers was not the man.

Judge Joseph Sabath instructed the jury that the state need not prove motive and that the defendant's not taking the stand should create no implication of guilt.

Brothers, 22-year-old charged that the case was a "frameup" and his attorneys implied that a sinister influence was back of the prosecution.

C. Wayland Brooks, assistant state's attorney, had qualified the jury for the death penalty but
