BRIEFS

Murder suspect turns self in

SANFORD — A suspect in a six-year-old murder case turned himself in at the Seminole County jail this morning, said sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough. Michael Edward Shelton, 33, was taken into custody on a first-degree murder charge. McDonough said Shelton was wanted for the May 24, 1988 shooting death of 16-year-old Quentin Brown at the corner of Salina Drive and North Street near Altamonte Springs. McDonough said the shooting death appeared to be a drug deal which had gone bad. McDonough said investigators tracked Shelton to Dallas, Texas when he apparently decided to turn himself in on learning of the warrant for his arrest.

Wekiva River Awareness Day

SANFORD — The Friends of the Wekiva River will hold its 14th annual "Wekiva River Awareness Day" with a canoe tour of the river this Saturday. Participants will spend four to five hours touring the Little Wekiva and Wekiva Rivers to acquaint them with one of the few rivers in the state to bear the title "Outstanding Florida Water."

Participants should meet at Katie's Landing at 8:30 a.m. and are encouraged to bring a covered dish or salad for the picnic to follow. Katie's is located north of State Road 46 on the Seminole County side of the Wekiva River.

Following the tour, paddlers will have the opportunity to participate in the picnic and hear Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish biologist Jayde Roof speak on the Florida black bear. Refreshments will be provided. The cost is $10 per adult and children 12 or older and $5 for children under 12. Call 628-1482 or "fax" 322-6766 for reservations, which are required.

Midway water shut-off

SANFORD — The Seminole County Community Development office has announced that water services for Midway residents will be turned off this Saturday, Nov. 12, from 9 a.m. until 12 noon. The shut down will affect all residents of the Midway community.

The shut-off is in order to complete drainage work being done in Midway, by Stormwater and Underground Inc.

Senior Planner Anthony Pelt of the county's Community Development Block Grant program, says the county is sorry for the inconvenience, but the temporary shut-off is necessary.

Barring any unforeseen problems, the water is expected to be turned on by noon.

Correction

LONGWOOD — There is no special meeting of the Longwood City Commission tonight to select a new mayor. The meeting reported in Thursday's Sanford Herald was due to a reporter's error. Although a special meeting was discussed, all five commissioners could not attend. The new mayor may be chosen at the regular commission meeting November 21. Mayor Steve Miller was defeated for re-election Tuesday as district 3 commissioner. The mayor is selected from the five city commissioners.

Scam cheats elderly

19-state swindle based in Sanford reaps $5 million

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Sanford-based scheme may have defrauded about 3,000 elderly people in 19 states out of $5 million, federal authorities say.

Believing they were winners in the Publishers' Clearing House Sweepstakes, the victims were asked to send money so the contest organizers could pay the taxes and insurance on the winnings.

Victims were given phone numbers to verify the pitches about their "winnings." Answering machines said they had reached the Publishers' Clearing House Company or the "U.S. Bureau of Taxation."

Callers were then instructed to send money by Western Union to a specific person.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Randy Gold used the scheme, which claimed victims in states as far-reaching as Texas, California, Ohio and Massachusetts probably has been shut down with the arrest of five central Floridians including one Sanford man.

Four other suspects, all of whom most recently called Sanford home, are being sought in central Florida.

While they have not yet been taken into custody, Gold said they are expected to be arrested soon.

Gold said victims have sent a total of about $50,000 to stores and financial offices in

Seminole High School Homecoming 1994

Parade draws cheers

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — If the seniors looked a little forlorn at the Seminole High School Homecoming parade on Thursday afternoon, they had good reason.

The float they had worked so hard to build lay strewn across the yard of one of the residents of the downtown historic district. The trailer carrying it stood broken at the side of the road. And they were left to march along First Street with shreds of paper and tattered flags.

Still, they joined the others who came out to help prepare the Seminole football team for their battle with the Lake Mary Rams on Friday night.

A steady drizzle didn't deter many from lining the streets to cheer on the team and the school's supporters.

IRS critic jailed

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Grant McEwan, Seminole County critic and tax protester, was in the Seminole County jail this morning on federal charges.

The arrest in Orange County last night followed McEwan's filing of a lien against the Internal Revenue Service last month, seeking $1.1 million in what he says are unpaid commissions owed for collecting taxes from his employees for the IRS and maintaining records for the agency's benefit. McEwan said earlier this week he planned to seize the IRS office in Longwood and sell its contents to recoup the debt.

McEwan, 57, of Heathrow, said in interviews with the Sanford Herald Tuesday the IRS owes him the money for collecting withholding and social security taxes from his employees. McEwan is president of Loss Recovery Services, a bad check collection service for many large state groceries and department stores.

SANFORD — They danced. They sang. They were funny. They entertained with gusto and a zest for life although they have entered their "golden years."

About two dozen acts performed at the Talent Show of the Golden Age Games Thursday night at the Sanford Civic Center. Their talents ranged from a tub drum, kazoo and washboards band to a 63-year old who delighted the crowd with acrobatic feats that most teenagers could not perform.

Veterans remembered

Carey Reeves, the Chapter Service officer for Disabled American Veterans (DAV) Chapter 30 in Sanford, was among those who turned out on Friday morning to remember those fallen comrades who served their country throughout the years. Though the gray misty weather matched the somber mood of those who gathered to remember, there was a strong bond between those who had survived and those who turned out to honor them. The Sanford parade was small but emotion-filled. There will be full parade coverage in the Sunday edition of the Sanford Herald.

Mack eyes money for environment

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The new GOP majority in Congress will not change his close relationship with Democratic Sen. Bob Graham, says Republican Sen. Connie Mack.

And that will benefit Florida. Mack said in a telephone interview Thursday, two days after winning re-election to a second term.

But it will be a reversal of roles for the two Florida senators. Mack noted. When Mack was first elected six years ago, Republicans held the presidency and Democrats controlled Congress. Now it will be just the opposite.

It is too early to tell what the full impact of Tuesday's election, which gave the GOP control of both houses in Congress, would be on him and the state, Mack said.

"Frankly, people are just beginning to come down from the clouds," he said.

Mack on Tuesday easily beat Democratic challenger Hugh Rodham, brother of first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, to retain his seat. Mack was considered one of the strongest incumbents in the United States.

Mack is in line for the chairmanship of an Appropriations subcommittee or the Joint Economic Committee, although the latter may be abolished as part of a Republican push to reduce the number of standing committees.

The senator from Cape Coral also serves on the Banking Committee, where a subcommittee chairmanship is another possibility. He said he may instead seek a switch to the Labor and Health and Human Services Committee because of his interest in the National Cancer Institute but probably would not have a chance to head a subcommittee there.

One of his big interests on the Appropriations Committee is see that the restoration of the Everglades and Florida Bay, already authorized by Congress, receive money needed to carry them out.

Although Republicans campaigned on a platform of spending cuts, Mack was confident federal dollars would still be forthcoming for the Florida projects because they are top national priorities. But he acknowledged funding is not assured.

Another focus for Mack will be to obtain money to reimburse Florida for school, law enforcement and other expenses attributed to immigration, but he said that may be a tougher battle.

Seniors spin, dip, twirl, swirl...dance

By NICK PREPAUP
 Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — They came, they participated, and they danced. They danced and danced and danced at the Golden Age Games dance competition event Wednesday afternoon.

The parking lot to the south of the Sanford Civic Center was filled to overflowing during the event. Cars of participants were crowded the streets as many as four blocks away. It may well have been the best turnout for the dance competition ever seen in the Golden Age Games.

The dancers, people traveled far to attend and the games was apparent. Cars in the parking lot bore license plates from such locations as Missouri, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ontario, Indiana, five from Ohio and four from New York.

Attendance by Floridians was apparent as well, with over two dozen different counties indicated on license plates. One had an added plate on the front which read, "I've Got Dancin' Fever."

As in the past, the competition was grouped into individual dance rhythms. Dancers competed in the waltz, rumba, cha cha, jitterbug, alley cat, tango, and fox trot.

Between each competitive number, music was played for open dancing, which generally packed the floor of the Sanford Civic Center. Some were rehearsing for the upcoming Golden Age Games, while most just took to the floor to enjoy dancing.

Participants were dressed from casual to luxurious. One couple was dressed in matching black and white, with the man having a red stripe on his trousers accented by a red sash. His partner was adorned with matching red stripes and a red collar.

Contrary to other Golden Age Games events, the dance competition is not conducted with age groupings. The best three couples identified by a group of judges for each dance are declared winners, regardless of their age.

During the band's break at the middle of the event, snacks and coffee were provided at the rear of the civic center.

Wednesday's dance competition was hosted by the Over 50 Club.

Al Zappala and Elena Boess, from Edgewater, Fla., never skipped a beat.

Seniors in the swim of things

By BHARI BRODIE
 Herald Staff Writer

OVIEDO — Harwell Moseley is back in the pool after a two-year leave of absence.

The 76-year-old Winter Park native has been participating in the Golden Age Games for 12 years, except for the last two. For the past two years, he has been recovering from a stroke, under the loving care of his wife, Helynn.

"He loves the water and this has been the best thing in the world for him," Helynn said Thursday as she watched some of her husband's former competitors swim in the 100-yard backstroke.

As many of the other seniors who are competing in the swimming event of the Golden Age Games do, Moseley swam in the Masters, sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Union, for swimmers over the age of 55. He was practicing for a Masters event when he had his stroke. But the minute the doctor said he could go back in the water, Moseley was back in and won the gold medal in his first event back, last weekend.

Jean Beers, of Port Orange, has been swimming in Masters competition for 10 years, as well as seniors' events such as the Golden Age Games. This year he planned to compete in the 50-yard backstroke and the 50-yard fly. Thursday morning he was cheering on his friends of six years, John Haake, of Palm Harbor, and Frank Tibbott, of St. Petersburg. Helynn said the three have had quite a competition going for many years. "This year is going to change all that," Moseley said, but he could not tell what he was just glad to be back doing what he enjoys, swimming.

Jean Beers, of Port Orange, took the gold in women's 100-yard breaststroke.

More than 222 swimmers competed in 13 men's and women's events.

Ready, aim...

Don Ritenour, Bellevue, Fla. and Carla Convery, from Alexandria, Va., participated in their respective classes during the basketball event at the Golden Age Games this week. Athletes rebounded, dribbled, aimed and shot baskets on the basketball court at the Salvation Army gymnasium in Sanford.

When you're down and out

In an era when violence is escalating and frightened citizens often think the worst of someone arrested, we are impressed by a recent outpouring of support by some Lake Mary residents for a neighbor they love.

Jamie Swinehart sits in the Volusia County jail, on suicide watch, charged with one count of aggravated child abuse in connection with the death of his girlfriend's seven-month old son. He and his girlfriend, Angela Broomfield, were house-sitting in DeBary Sunday when Jose Trinidad was found unresponsive with bruises at 4:30 a.m. by deputies responding to a 9-1-1 call from neighbors who heard the infant crying. Swinehart reportedly said he was changing the fussing baby's diaper when the deputy knocked. "I let him (the deputy) come in, and when I went over to pick up the baby ... he was limp," Swinehart said, denying he had ever hurt the child, who later died.

Friends and neighbors have spoken out in support of him, choosing to believe what they have observed over the years is a more faithful barometer of human nature than what is heard but not observed.

And Swinehart's distraught and shocked father, Kirby, finds his solace from these friends and neighbors.

Humans sometimes shun the uncomfortable, the strife, other people face. There is an old adage "When you're down and out, you find out who your friends are."

Jamie Swinehart and his family have found out. Holy Cross Lutheran Church members have established a fund to help pay for Jamie's legal defense. His bond alone is $500,000. Neighbors have been donating money and taking food to the house every night.

But we were most impressed by the words. Words that don't cast guilt or innocence before all the facts are known.

Words of encouragement for the family. Words that speak only of what neighbors said they experienced about Jamie - "Responsible," "Kind," "Trusted," - not what they don't know and didn't see in the middle of that fateful night.

Light the way

As a resident of Lake Mary since 1947 I would like to make a suggestion on the widening of the rest of Lake Mary Blvd. Please consider calling our Seminole County road officials and ask for street lights. They could have been installed with underground wires either in the median or on alternate sides. This was not done on the section already paved and the city is left with a very dark street which is dangerous for night driving and reading street signs. It's not too late to at least do the right thing for the unpaved section. Cut down on some of the trees!

Can Clinton be new 'New Democrat'?

Faced with a conservative-dominated 104th Congress, the Clinton administration is planning to unveil a new "New Democrat" agenda after the election.

But there's reason to doubt whether the president can be radical enough a reformer to attract the disaffected voters he needs to win re-election in 1996.

An early sign of the new Clinton tilt in the center is first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton's replacement as the administration's top strategist on health care reform. In addition, a task force under Deputy Chief of Staff Mark Gearan is studying a battery of reform proposals designed to revive the anti-insider image Clinton tried to project in 1992.

The White House still is projecting midterm election losses small enough to keep Democrats in control of both houses of Congress, but the agenda is being planned with the certainty in mind that Republicans will be more powerful than they are now and will push a militantly anti-government agenda topped by constitutional amendments for a balanced budget and term limits.

The dangers Clinton faces in the next two years are (1) his proposals may seem bland when stacked against GOP radicalism and (2) to the extent that he tries to be a centrist, he will offend big government "old Democrat" who dominate the Democratic caucuses in the House and Senate and may attract a liberal Democratic challenger in 1996.

Clinton, however, seems to have little choice but to head rightward if he hopes to get any programs through Congress and attract disaffected Ross Perot voters.

In December, the Democratic Leadership Council, the defining group for "New Democrats," will come out with proposals for "radical reform" of the government and "progressive alternatives" to term limits and balanced budget amendments. It seems unlikely that the president can go as far as the D.L.C. thinks he must.

But there's reason to doubt whether the president can be radical enough a reformer to attract the disaffected voters he needs.

The D.L.C. agenda includes deep cuts in subsidies and tax breaks for business as a means of funding new investments in education and science; replacement of federal housing and other social programs with vouchers to go directly to individuals; and dismantling some federal departments.

Aides say Clinton will propose a slimmed-down health care plan, reintroduce his 1993 welfare reform proposal, continue his deficit-cutting economic program - and come up with major proposals to hand over more responsibility for managing domestic programs to the states and localities and cut the federal bureaucracy even more aggressively than Vice President Al Gore's "reinventing government" envisions.

Clinton also will push campaign finance and lobbying reform legislation, plus undefined measures to "redefine relations with the Congress, rather than please it" - presumably including the line-item veto.

The Gearan task force also has been thinking about ways to address what's perceived as a "moral crisis" in the nation, partly by emphasizing abstinence as the preferred means of controlling teen pregnancy under welfare reform and partly by stressing Clinton's dedication to religious freedom.

When do you feel safe?

A question from my son has me musing about safety.

So does a recent Saturday. That's when a man whom a witness described as having a face so blank that "he didn't even look like he was there" pointed an assault rifle at the White House and sprayed it with 20 to 30 bullets.

That the man, Francisco Duran, is here - alive, unhurt and able to be questioned by law enforcement officers - is amazing. How many tourists have peered through the White House's iron fence, certain they were being watched by armed Secret Service agents ready to spring at a suspicious move?

Certainly, pulling a rifle from beneath one's coat and firing for two minutes is suspicious. Yet Duran - who himself apparently expected to be killed instantly - is alive and able to ponder the lunch menu at the D.C. jail.

I don't know about Bill and Hillary, but the event - weeks after a kamikaze pilot crashed his plane on the White House lawn - would put a crimp in my confidence.

And as a parent, I wondered: What did the First Parents say to Chelsea? What do you tell a 14-year-old - who's presumably already dealing with all of the scary emotional issues of adolescence? Something like, "Yes, a few sick people seem to want us dead. But see how well our security works? Nobody was hurt. You are safe."

You'd hope that she believes it, and that it's true. But you'd have to wonder.

I did. If one of the most protected men on the planet can have his weekend football-watching disturbed by a stream of bullets, what does that say about the rest of us?

And I thought about Chelsea, who happened not to be home during the attack.

Like most parents, I constantly search for safety for my children, for honest assurances of its existence.

It came up at Halloween. While discussing which parent would trick-or-treat with him, my sons 9, asked, "Who went with you, your mom or dad?" I paused before saying, "Neither. My brothers and I went out alone." I didn't want to remind him, yet again, that his world is more dangerous. My job is to make him feel secure.

But what, beside the usual, frightening admonitions, can I tell my children about safety? What can be said that's comforting - and true?

I could say that safety is like romance - the more we chase it, the more it eludes us. We invest in a multitude of safe-making stuff: elaborate security systems for our cars and homes; hand-held alarms for ourselves; endless medical and fitness appointments we hope will safeguard us from old age. Even our omnipresent smoke detectors are insufficient - we now need carbon monoxide-sniffing gadgets to ensure we awaken. And we still feel less safety in our everyday lives than our parents did.

We lock up our hearts too. In a world where a simple trip to the mall can seem like a test. There are the teenagers with multicolored hair and earrings in unexpected places; the occasional loud profanity; the families on the escalator whose animated conversations are in unrecognizable languages. So many people seem so - different.

What we want are solutions. But how can I prescribe feeling safe in a world where so many children - including the most prominent kid in the land - may be exposed to hearing gunfire? I'll tell you what I'd tell Chelsea, my son - and myself.

That everything before you is an opportunity. It may come dressed as a problem, but it's like Halloween - a scary mask can hide a wonderful chance.

That as a journalist, I've been forced to connect with people and situations that at first seemed frightening. Most times, I've come away less fearful. Behind the horrors we report are more unselfish acts, more courageous stances, more everyday overcoming than you'd imagine. They aren't "news," but are real nonetheless.

And I'd ask, "When do you feel safest?" - fully knowing the answer.

It's when you're surrounded by family or friends, laughing over who knows what. When you catch a stranger's smile or witness some vagrant act of affection. When you're floored by nature's artistry - as I was by a recent morning fog, a silvery swirl outside my window that clung to leaves fading from gold, orange and yellow to brown.

I'd say we find safety in love. Which means the goal should be getting, and giving, much more of it - which is tough to do from within a locked-up heart. Love's the best, the only safety you'll find in this world.

Most times, I'd say, it's enough.

Babbitt besieged on Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON - In the waning hours of his 18-year Senate career, retiring Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., got Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt kicked off the Senate floor. It was the latest skirmish in what might be called the "war for the West."

The pugnaously partisan Wallop, who once accused Babbitt of advocating "socialistic and communist" environmental reforms, spotted this nemesis on the Senate floor as the GOP was filibustering a bill to protect the California desert. Wallop wasted little time speaking up. "There is someone on the floor who is not authorized."

Babbitt, who had dropped in to watch the debate on the bill, left the chamber unceremoniously, even though Senate rules grant floor privileges to all cabinet members. After being reminded of his privilege by the sergeant-at-arms, Babbitt returned to the chamber a few minutes later.

Though the desert bill eventually passed, Wallop's comment helps illustrate just how personal and nasty the battle has become between Babbitt and conservatives on Capitol Hill.

So far, the right-wing is winning most of the battles. In two years at Interior, Babbitt has forged sensible compromises over once-intractable issues such as restoration of the Florida Everglades and the owls-vs.-jobs dilemma in the Pacific Northwest. Yet Wallop and other Western lawmakers have managed to paint Babbitt as a "green" version of former Interior Secretary James Watt. A wild-eyed environmentalist who is trying to shut down commerce in the 11 Western states by turning them into a big national park. This caricature has passed for campaign dialogue in many political races.

Although Babbitt has a scientist's grasp of complex ecological systems, it's taken him considerable time to master the Washington food chain. He has confessed to administration officials that he underestimated the decentralized nature of congressional decision-making. He's confided to friends that he arrived at his job thinking congressional leaders could deliver majorities for legislation, only to be told by the leadership that he was on his own. These days, Babbitt arms himself with a "vote sheet" for every big issue, and recently pitched to staffers, "I'm just like a corporate lobbyist but don't have a lot more standing in terms of the ability to get things done."

Grazing and mining reform are two things the Clinton administration has failed to get done. Both deal as much with equity as with ecology. Babbitt was forced to scale back a plan to raise grazing fees paid by ranchers who run livestock over 280 million acres of federal land. Westerners filibustered the plan to death during the early weeks of the Clinton administration.

Federal grazing fees are about one-fifth of those charged grazers on private land. The beneficiaries are not the mythical individualists who came west to tame the frontier. They are mostly agribusiness and multinational corporations that enjoy a subsidy that costs taxpayers an estimated $50 million annually. The corporate permit holders for federal grazing land include Getty, Texaco, Metropolitan Life, and Zenichku Land and Livestock of Japan.

Mining reform was once a keystone of the Clinton environmental agenda, but it too died after repeated attacks by Republicans. Under an 1872 law that's still on the books, mining companies can strip billions of dollars of ore from public lands while paying taxpayers a pittance and leaving behind polluted rivers.

So far, the right-wing is winning most of the battles.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Doctors may hasten death

PORTLAND, Ore. — As soon as Oregon voters passed a law allowing doctor-assisted suicide, AIDS patient Tim Shuck started planning to take advantage of it.

On Thursday, official tallies showed the ballot proposal had passed 52 percent to 48 percent. Shuck, who learned in April that the HIV virus is invading his brain, had talked to his doctor about suicide a day earlier.

"It allows me to have some control over my life," said Shuck, 35. "My decision was based on what my needs are going to be. Once my brain is gone, I see no purpose for me to be around."

When the measure on Tuesday's ballot takes effect Dec. 8, Oregon will become the only place in the nation that lets doctors hasten death for the terminally ill.

A patient with six months or less to live will be able to ask a doctor to prescribe a lethal dose of drugs. At least two doctors must first agree that the patient's condition is terminal, and the patient must ask three times, the last time in writing. Doctors must wait 15 days before filling the final request for a lethal prescription.

Clinton reaches out

WASHINGTON — Hoping to increase prosperity at home, President Clinton is reaching out to the "young, vigorous" economies of Asia to expand trade ties that he says offer untapped potential for growth.

Still getting over jet lag from his last round of travel, Clinton departs today for the Philippines and Indonesia, where he will attend the second annual Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit with 17 world leaders.

Clinton, taking note of his party's devastating losses on Election Day, acknowledged Thursday that many Americans are insecure about their economic future and wary of expanding global trade.

"For too many of our people, trade still appears to be a gale force wind, just another threat ready to blow away the prospects of a stable job at a good wage, just another problem adding to the already unstable, uncertain condition of their lives," he told an audience at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service.

Child pornography case

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is dropping its attempt to overturn a child pornography conviction in what a conservative group hailed as a prudent response to Republican election victories this week.

Reversing position, the Justice Department urged the Supreme Court on Thursday to reject an appeal from a man convicted of buying mail-order videos showing girls' clothed genital areas.

"If they had not backed down, it would have been an act of political stupidity on their part," said John McMickle, litigation coordinator for National Law Center for Children and Families, a conservative group that filed several court briefs in the last year supporting the conviction.

"We strongly feel that the Justice Department's latest position is a result of over a year's worth of effort and the Clinton administration's defeat in the Tuesday elections," McMickle said. "This is the first indication we have from the Clinton administration of how they are going to react in a more conservative Republican world."

In an unusual move, the administration's new court brief was signed by Attorney General Janet Reno and not by Solicitor General Drew Days, who had filed the earlier brief arguing the conviction should be overturned.

Texas governor will be missed

AUSTIN, Texas — Ann Richards made the governor's mansion a haven for grandchildren and motorcycles, and turned the Statehouse into a stage for her acidic one-liners.

As the silver-haired Democrat who matched wits with David Letterman and Jay Leno prepares to leave public office, even Republicans admit they'll miss her dynamic personality.

"She used humor as well as any governor this state has ever had and probably as well as any national political figure," said Republican political consultant Mark Sanders. "It gave people in other states a new impression of Texas."

"Too many people think there are cowboys and Indians still running around here and she was an articulate person who gave people an intelligent impression of what's going on here," he said.

Elected in 1990 after serving two terms as state treasurer, Richards' ability to rub elbows with the stars and punctuate any idea with a cutting barb made her a national celebrity.

Sears returns to its roots

By CLIFF EDWARDS
AP Business Writer

CHICAGO — Sears, Roebuck and Co. has ended an era of rapid expansion by returning to what it does best: selling things.

Sears announced Thursday that it intends to sell its 80 percent stake in Allstate Corp. to its shareholders, signaling the end of the 108-year-old retailer's attempt to turn itself into a financial supermarket.

Sears' financial companies, which also have included Dean Witter Reynolds and Coldwell Banker, did well. But the company's flagship retailing business flourished through much of the 1980s.

"The corporation has kind of reverted to what we were originally, and that's a very, very strong retail competitor," chairman Edward A. Brennan said.

Brennan, 60, also announced plans to retire following the $8.7 billion spinoff, expected to be completed in mid-1995.

Wall Street welcomed the news, bidding up the retailer's stock by $2.75 a share to close at $51.62 1/2. Northbrook, Ill.-based Allstate stock fell 75 cents a share to $24.12 1/2.

The spinoff announcement comes just six months after the company's board and shareholders rejected an investor's call for Sears to rid itself of Allstate, founded by Sears in 1931.

Sears sold 20 percent of Allstate to the public in 1993, and has also divested itself of all its real estate and financial services divisions.

Sears officials said the distribution of the 360 million Allstate shares would be one of the largest spinoffs in U.S. business history. Sears has assets of $90.8 billion. By comparison, AT&T spun off 22 companies worth $80 billion with assets of $153 billion in 1984.

Sears common shareholders would receive 0.95 share of Allstate stock for each Sears share. The total value of the stock they will receive will be $8.7 billion.

In addition to shareholder approval, which is expected, Sears officials said the spinoff also is contingent on approval of its tax-free nature, market conditions and regulatory approval.

After the Allstate spinoff, Sears will have about 800 U.S. retail stores, credit card operations, about 1,200 specialty stores, including Western Auto Supply Co., and various free-standing stores for furniture, paint, hardware and appliance sales.

The retailer currently is remodeling stores to increase floor space, an important move in trying to increase sales and improve its bottom line.

Brennan recommended that Sears' board of directors elect Arthur C. Martinez, 55, as his successor.

Martinez, chairman and chief executive of Sears Merchandise Group, is widely credited with turning around the retailer's declining fortunes by cutting unprofitable operations.

WORLD BRIEFS

Bread prices increase four-fold

KIEV, Ukraine — The price of bread quadrupled Thursday as President Leonid Kuchma announced he'd begun "surgery" on Ukraine's ailing economy.

"The patient is now on the operating table," he said. Free-market prices are a key element of Kuchma's plan to reduce the budget deficit by spending less on government subsidies.

A loaf of bread in Ukraine now costs about 10 cents. Kuchma has also cut government subsidies to the transport and energy sectors, sending prices soaring five- to ten-fold.

Several hundred outraged teachers staged a brief walkout Thursday, gathering outside government headquarters and warning that Ukraine could suffer wide-spread strikes if wages don't keep up with spiraling prices.

Smuggling ring smashed

HONG KONG — In a joint operation with U.S. officials, immigration officers arrested 13 people involved with a syndicate that has been smuggling Chinese into the United States.

A government statement Thursday said the detainees include three Hong Kong members of the syndicate and 10 Chinese nationals who arrived in the colony as visitors.

It said 14 more people were arrested in New York in simultaneous raids by officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The syndicate arranged for Chinese residents to use false travel documents to enter the United States via Hong Kong, it said.

17 killed in shootings in Karachi

KARACHI, Pakistan — The latest wave of sniper shootings in Pakistan's troubled business capital has killed 17 people, including a prominent politician, police said today.

Likely GOP chairmen ready agendas

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Overhauling the income tax, snuffing out a congressional probe of the tobacco industry, slashing foreign aid — Republicans are busily setting their goals for a new, more conservative Congress.

GOP lawmakers likely to chair committees in the Congress that convenes in January say their Election Day landslide was a popular call to rein in a government that has become too big, too costly and too unresponsive. And for the first time in 40 years, their control of House and Senate panels will give them a huge advantage in moving legislation that does exactly that.

"Clearly, the public doesn't want so much government," Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., returning to his old job as chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said in an interview Thursday. "We have to go out and get rid of some of government."

Without offering specifics, Domenici said his committee would look for programs "that aren't really working to see what we can get rid of." He also said it would move quickly to strengthen the president's ability to erase individual items in spending bills and to endorse a constitutional amendment that would require a balanced budget.

Behind the scenes, the GOP Senate staff is considering a plan that would trim federal spending by $500 billion to $700 billion through the year 2002, said one Republican aide who spoke on condition of anonymity. The plan is aimed at achieving a balanced budget by then and paying for $100 billion worth of tax cuts for the middle class, the aide said.

Domenici said he would seek support for a plan he has advanced with Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., dramatically reshaping the income tax. People would deduct their savings and investments from their incomes and pay tax only on the difference, which he said would encourage Americans to save money.

The man who will probably chair the House Ways and Means Committee said Thursday that one of his long-range goals is to eliminate the income tax altogether, replacing it with perhaps a national sales tax.

More immediately, Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, said the tax-writing panel would move quickly on several tax cut plans, including reductions in the levies paid by some better-off Social Security recipients, people who save money for future medical use and families with children.

Also on his agenda is a cut in the capital gains tax rate. That levy is paid on profits of sales of stocks and other property, and reducing the tax has been a long-range goal of Republicans. Democrats say such a move would chiefly benefit the rich and cost the government money.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who will head the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he would try to slash foreign aid, which he has criticized for years. He also said he would seek reductions in U.S. contributions to the United Nations, which he called "that nestle of millions of Americans."

The new chairman of the House Health and Environment subcommittee, who hails from Virginia's tobacco country, said he would end Congress' probe of the cigarette industry.

"I don't think we need any more legislation regulating tobacco," said Rep. Thomas Bliley, R-Va., in whose district Philip Morris USA is the biggest private employer.

Other probable committee chairmen also laid out their plans, including — Rep. Pat

Roberts, R-Kan., likely chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. He said he wants to hold hearings on "the fraud, waste and abuse and the organized crime entrance in the food stamp program."

— Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., in line to become chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Talent

The audience got a hint of what was to come early in the program when Ken Thomas made his entrance for a recitation performance by running through the auditorium and bounding up the stairs to reach the stage rather than simply appearing as the curtain opened.

"I know they say I'm 63," the trim, well-muscled, white-haired, balding man told the crowd, "but I think I'm only 39."

He spoke about youth, not in terms of years, but as a state of mind. "Youth is imagination and dreams, courage and persistence," he told them.

A few minutes later, Thomas returned to the stage with his wife, Mickey. The couple gives seminars, billing themselves as the 113-year-old acrobatic team, on fitness and how to think and feel younger.

Just a few weeks shy of her 50th birthday, Mickey could not qualify as a participant in the Golden Age Games, so emcee Dave Farr, director of the Sanford Chamber of Commerce, joked she had been classified as a prop for the act.

Thomas amazed the audience by doing a one-handed, hand stand for several minutes while holding his body parallel to the floor as he built a tower out of stackable blocks. Thomas switched hands as he climbed the tower never leaving his aerial position. The couple then performed acrobatics.

In the more traditional talent contest vein, the Forest Havenite Band of Mr. Dora opened the show with a Roaring '20s review playing several songs on kazoes and washboards. A number of Havenite residents performed other singing and dancing acts.

Singers performed popular songs from the 1940s, 50s and 60s with a variety of styles from Orlando toxicologist Dr. Ralph Sacarello's "A Portrait of My Love" to the torch song rendition of "Cry Me a River" by Forest Havenite Jean Sykes.

Some of the presenters performed more than once, singing then dancing or giving a recitation and then a puppet joke fest. Two of the oldest performers appearing in the talent show were 87 years young Retired teacher James Bildebeck, who now lives in Lake Mary, transported the listeners back in time with an "Early Radio Days" performance, recreating the voices of Bing Crosby, Lowell

Thomas, and even singer Nat King Cole.

The Golden Age Games conclude Saturday.

Take-out holiday dinners

Use special care handling prepared foods

Complete holiday dinners are available from restaurants, caterers and supermarkets. It seems to be the increasingly modern thing to do. It is the way families of today are trying to have the traditional meal without the usual shopping and preparation.

As with home prepared turkey dinners, however, a safe take-out holiday meal depends on proper consumer handling of foods after the safely cooked dinner is picked up or delivered.

As a result of these concerns, food safety experts talked with food scientists in government and academia as well as allied health personnel, consumer advisors, consumer groups, grocery retailers, restaurant representative and trade groups to develop some advice for keeping the take-out holiday meal safe.

These are some of the take-out food safety tips for handling of ready prepared holiday turkey dinners that were most important.

Hot from the Oven: Pick up the food HOT and keep it HOT. Keeping foods warm is not enough. Harmful bacteria multiply fastest between 40 degrees and 140 degrees F. To keep turkey hot, set oven temperature at 200 degrees F or higher—enough to maintain an internal temperature of 140 degrees F or above when measured with a meat thermometer. Stuffing and side dishes must also stay HOT.

Handle Turkey Dinners Safely: It's not a good idea to try and keep the foods hot longer than two hours. If eating much later, turkey and trimmings will be safer and taste better if you remove all stuffing from the turkey cavity immediately and refrigerate. Cut turkey off the bone; slice breast meat; legs and wings may be left whole. Refrigerate turkey meat, potatoes, gravy and vegetables in small, shallow containers.

Keep Cold Foods COLD: Some turkey dinners are cold when you pick them up or when they're delivered. For turkey and trimmings which the establishment has refrigerated after cooking, refrigerate as soon as you get home (always within 2 hours of pickup). Do not reheat the turkey whole. If you plan to reheat the cold turkey, carve and refrigerate it as above.

Cooked Frozen Turkeys with USDA Inspection Seal: These turkeys have been processed under controlled conditions. Follow package directions for thawing, reheating and storing.

Stuffed Turkeys: Buying a refrigerated, fully cooked, stuffed turkey is NOT recommended.

Storing Leftovers: Perishable foods such as turkey and side dishes should not be out of the refrigerator for more than two hours. Store leftover cooked turkey and side dishes in the refrigerator at 40 degrees F or below for three to four days; stuffing and gravy, one to two days.

Reheating Cooked Dinners and Leftovers: Always reheat leftovers thoroughly to 165 degrees F or until hot and steaming. Bring gravy to a rolling boil. In the microwave oven, cover food and rotate dish so it heats evenly.

The decision to take out is yours. It can be an ideal way to spend the holiday with proper thought given to the meal.

Woman's club arts, crafts winners

The Arts Department of the Woman's Club of Sanford Inc. held its annual arts and crafts festival at the November meeting when members competed in numerous categories. Blue ribbon winners in this contest will advance to district competition in February followed by these blue ribbon winners going on to state competition in June at the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs annual convention. Among the club's first place winners in crafts are (top photo, from left): Rose Jacobson, knitted afghan and vest; Libby Prevatt, Christmas ornaments; Jean Melts, basket weaving; and Tawana Melts, wallpaper angels. Lower photo shows arts winners (from left) Irene Brown and Tina Joseph while Pat Hardin, arts department chairman, shows her blue-ribbon winners, a denim vest and knitted Christmas stocking.

Woman claims a little 'weed' is not addictive

Dear Mary:
I'm really sick of all the hype and scare tactics used by people like you about smoking a little "weed" now and then. I've been doing it for about 10 years, and I've never had any desire to go on to the hard stuff. It makes me relax and mellow out and I don't feel hung over after the high wears off.

I also don't have any particular craving when I don't smoke it. I just like the way it makes me feel. I'm no different from anyone else. I know who enjoys it, so where does that leave all of the talk about it leading to the hard stuff and turning you into a junkie?

Enjoys it

Dear Enjoys,
I'm happy to hear that using marijuana has not led you into hard drugs, but statistically, young people who start using alcohol, tobacco or marijuana at an early age are at much higher risk for progressing to hard drugs than those who remain drug-free. However, the fact that you haven't progressed to hard drugs does not mean that smoking marijuana has had no effect on you.

Because the potency of marijuana has increased dramatically over the past 10 years, one reefer may contain as many carcinogens as an entire pack of tobacco cigarettes. The THC collects in brain cells and re-productive organs and can require several weeks to filter out the amount found in just one joint. Continued, long-term use tends to cause brain damage similar to the changes in brain function that occur due to aging. These changes can lead to inability to develop and carry out long-term plans, problems in concentration, and a decline in physical and sexual performance.

It's your body and your choice whether to risk the legal and physical consequences of using marijuana, but for Heaven's sake, don't kid yourself that your body and mind are somehow going to escape the laws of physical science when you abuse yourself.

Coach tired of student's religious advances

DEAR ABBY: I have read and enjoyed your column for years, but have never seen my problem addressed. I am a tennis coach (male), in my mid-30s, and live in Florida.

I coach a woman I'll call Susan. She is intelligent and very sensitive. She and her husband are in their early 50s and are quite well-to-do. I have worked with them twice a week for nearly eight years.

Four years ago, Susan was "born again." From being not particularly religious, she has gone to attending church every Sunday, Bible study three times a week, and holds prayer groups in her home several times a month. If the church needs money for anything, the people there ring up Susan -- who immediately responds with a generous check. Her husband has stopped tearing his hair out and has resigned himself.

About six months ago, Susan began inviting me to church and telling me it was time I settled down and had a family, and church is a great place to meet single women. I am not interested in her suggestion, and I'm running out of excuses. I don't want to risk losing my best client.

Abby, how can I get her off my back without hurting her feelings?

TRAPPED IN RIGHT COURT

DEAR TRAPPED: Your well-intentioned client is probably unaware that her persistence is making you uncomfortable. Try this approach: "Susan, I really appreciate your concern, but I must come to this in my own time and in my own way." If she persists, repeat it. The ball's in your court! Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently passed away after a long illness, and many friends and relatives were very supportive during that time. His funeral was attended by such a large number of people, there weren't enough seats in the chapel to seat everyone.

"George"—one of my sons—was a pallbearer. A neighbor who attended the funeral had the nerve to ask me a few days later, "Has George cried yet?" What a terrible question! Even though George didn't cry at the funeral, I know his heart was heavy.

It's too bad we all can't cry when people expect us to. Besides, God gives us extra strength when we need it.

Abby, please put this in your column. Some folks are better at controlling their emotions than others.

STILL GRIEVING

DEAR STILL: Shame on that insensitive neighbor. Tears are healing, and some people prefer to shed their tears in private.

Those Who Returned...

Flags fly as bands resound on this November morning. Veterans from World War I till the present gather to honor the country they love as life itself. The ceremony is a mixture of sobriety and celebration... emotions both stalwart and tender, a tribute to the veterans of every battle ever fought for our nation's freedom. Nearby stands a man of slight build and ragged appearance. However, as the National Anthem rings, his patriotism belies his countenance when he salutes with a trembling hand. A Vietnam veteran? Possibly... An elderly man leans thoughtfully upon his cane. What does he ponder as a World War II medley plays? Does he remember an erect soldier who has yet to learn of malice? A couple bows their heads during prayer. The woman stands and the man sits... in a wheelchair... her hand resting tenderly upon his shoulder. (For a severed limb cannot sever love. On Veterans Day, may we praise God for those men and women who returned... and pray for the souls of those who did not.

Yard sale scheduled

SANFORD — The Good Shepherd Lutheran Church has scheduled a yard sale Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. A large selection of items will be available and reasonably priced.

Memorial chimes dedicated

SANFORD — The Rev. Leo F. King Memorial Chimes, given in loving memory by his wife, Ruby F. King, son Richard King and friends, will be dedicated to the glory of God Sunday at First United Methodist Church, Park Ave.

The Rev. King was senior pastor at the church for 10 years, 1973-1983, and is remembered as the kind and caring shepherd who showed, by example, Christ's love. The memorial chimes are a 25 note set of polished brass chimes, custom-designed for the Chancel area by Deegan Chimes, Inc. The memorial chimes are playable from the console and will be featured in the service of dedication.

Documentary film to air

SANFORD — "Scars That Heal" is a brand new documentary-style film with dramatic reenactments from World Wide Pictures, the motion picture ministry of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association. The production shares an unforgettable story of a young soldier in Vietnam, Dave Koeber. While on the outside, he remains scarred from the grenade, he shares his testimony of physical, emotional and spiritual healing.

The First Baptist Church, 519 Park Ave., will begin this show Sunday at 7 p.m. Admission is free. Call the church office at 322-6041 for further details.

Mayor's souper supper to be held

Proceeds will be divided equally between the Sanford Christian Sharing Center, Inc. and Rescue Outreach Mission. Thanksgiving turkey will taste sweeter for having helped someone less fortunate.

Hardin's TV program focuses on single adults, the needy and Israel. Personal ministry will be available for all who desire, following the meeting. For further details call Rita Curtis at 339-6488.

Single Christians United to gather

Saved from darkness to light

LONGWOOD — Jeff Fenholt has a background that is bombarded with rock and roll, violence, child abuse, drugs and wealth. He is remembered by some as the original Jesus in the production "Jesus Christ Superstar" (which was the most successful rock opera in history). The play was taken to Broadway with crowds exceeding 135,000.

His music background also includes work with the Rolling Stones, Led Zeppelin, Bad Company, Pink Floyd, and Eric Clapton. His last involvement within the secular music arena was as a lead singer in 1985 with Black Sabbath.

Since becoming a Christian he has performed on five continents. The pair have 6 children and live in the Los Angeles area.

His book "From Darkness to Light" has been a big hit among many Christian young people, Fenholt said. "This book has been written with the hope of reaching the lost."

Sharing his views of what he would like to say to Central Florida, he said, "I'd like to tell everyone thank you for opening up to me and more important for opening up to the Lord. I hear that there is so much crime and trouble here but from what I can see and hear there is a lot of believe with all my heart that people with loving hearts, I the Spirit of the Lord is moving in this area. I praise God for the Orlando area."

He further continued by saying, "I've been in Florida now since last Friday. We went to the Omni Arena in Boca Raton. We were in Jacksonville, with Benny Hinn and now Wekiva Assembly. We plan to go from here to Jefferson High School in Miami. We're expecting to see a lot of young people that are lost and hurting. In this area people and pastors have embraced us and more important those that have come out of darkness."

Fenholt's love and concern for people was very evident. Through his testimony, he has reached many in prisons and inner-city areas.

Persecution Night, early Christianity reenacted

By MARY ROWELL
Herald Columnist

SANFORD — The early centuries of Christianity was a time of Roman rule. People who admitted to being Christians were routinely persecuted and executed. Worship services were often held in secret in the catacombs. Sunday, November 6, Persecution Night was held at Sanford Christian Church. Persecution Night gave youth groups from Sanford Christian and Grace Christian Churches an idea of what it was like to be a Christian during those times.

This is the second time Sanford Christian Church has presented a Persecution Night. This idea, adopted from a Christian Camp, was chosen as a Halloween alternative for the youth. Originally scheduled for October 30, the event had to be postponed due to a tornado watch.

The youth divided into groups of 2, 3, and 4. Each group was given an item to smuggle to the catacombs, just as early Christians had to. Some carried a Bible, some candles and others carried the supplies for communion.

A guide led the groups along a treacherous trail where they might meet a Roman guard or a robber. The group also had to pass through the persecution station, an area where the Roman guards held their Christian prisoners in jail. They had to have a convincing story about why they were traveling and not reveal their Christianity to the Romans.

Methodist retreats a success

Men of the First United Methodist Church in Sanford have attended retreats every year for the past 45 years. Among those in attendance at a recent retreat were L. to R., Jim Estep, Roger Howard, Eldred Jennison, Dennis Butler, Stephen Peterson, Ashby Jones, and Mike Hill. Those also present at the retreat but not pictured were Bruce Danilla, Dennis and Shawn Jenks, the Rev. Cliff Melvin and Herman Schroeder.

Words of Wisdom

Corrie ten Boom, famous author and devout Christian, once said, "Focus on yourself, you'll be depressed. Focus on others and you'll be distressed. Focus on God and you'll be at rest."

You can't change another person, you can only change your reaction to them.

Romans 8:28 And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose.

Proverbs 3:5-6 Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.

Philippians 4:13 I can do all things through Christ which strengthens me.

Ways to conquer claustrophobia

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband suffers from claustrophobia and it seems to be getting worse. Do you have any suggestions that might help?

DEAR READER: Like other phobias (irrational fears), claustrophobia is a fear of closed spaces) can severely handicap an otherwise normal person, preventing him or her from entering elevators, being in a small room or even walking into a building. In most cases, the cause of the phobia lies deep in the unconscious mind. Victims may not be aware of why they are so apprehensive or panicky.

This is the reason counseling is often effective. Your husband should seek out a psychiatrist, psychologist or other mental health professional. These resources will usually enable a claustrophobic person to understand his irrational fears and deal with them in a more open and effective manner.

Moreover, behavioral modification is frequently used in conjunction with this therapy. For example, once the claustrophobic learns to trust his therapist, the professional can accompany the patient into closed spaces — large rooms to begin with, then smaller and smaller — until the phobic person learns to conquer his fear.

Your husband should ask his doctor for a referral to the appropriate professional. By and large, phobias cannot be overcome without help from therapists who are experienced in treating this disorder.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been told I have Reiter's arthritis in my shoulders, hips, elbows and wrists. Since I've never heard of this condition before, I'd like some information.

DEAR READER: Reiter's syndrome is, in some cases, a bacterial infection spread by sexual contact or fecal contamination. In other cases, a genetic disposition appears to play a dominant role. The syndrome is marked by arthritis, inflammation of the reproductive tract (in both sexes), conjunctivitis (eye irritation), and superficial ulcers in the mouth or on the genitals.

The diagnosis is made by a blood test called the "HLA-B27 tissue antigen." People with this genetic marker are at much higher risk of contracting the disease than are individuals without the marker.

Antibiotics are the recommended therapy.

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

If left untreated, Reiter's syndrome may result in a host of unpleasant complications that include chronic arthritis, joint deformity and heart disease.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Although it feels as if summers run and winters crawl, time moves at a steady pace. However, maybe you agree with Eugene Ionesco: "We haven't the time to take our time."

At the bridge table, though, we must take our time. When the dummy appears, all three active players should pause to plan the campaign. And sometimes we must judge the right time to win a particular trick.

Today's deal was declared by Frenchman Roger Trezel, who died in 1986. How did he time the play in five spades after West had led the diamond king?

West's bidding isn't recommended. First, why preempt when you might be able to make three no-trump? A two-diamond overall is normal. Secondly, having jumped to four diamonds, West shouldn't have bid five. If he was willing to go to five diamonds, he should have bid it the first time.

Despite West's sacrifice, Trezel wasn't willing to assume that East had the club ace. And to try to establish the heart suit without risking East's gaining the lead, Trezel ducked the opening lead.

When West continued with a diamond to dummy's ace, declarer discarded a low heart. South drew trumps, cashed the heart ace, played a heart to dummy's king and ruffed a heart. Back to dummy with a trump. Trezel discarded two club losers on dummy's heart winners. Nicely done.

At another table, South won the first trick with dummy's diamond ace. But after drawing trumps ending in the dummy, he called for the diamond two. When East failed to put in the 10, South discarded a low heart and recovered from his earlier error.
