India's Potentates

loved, at the cross-roads of their existences. They are on their way out, but the manner of their exit will be determined as India progresses, in self-government, Many of the minor rulers of tiny states can be disposed of summarily, but there are powerful sovereigns of, great states who can't be dismissed so lightly.

The so-called native states ruled by the princes comprise (wufifths of the territory of India and have a population of some 90,000,000, over one-fifth of the total population. The rest of the country is made up of the provinces of British India.

These two vast areas present entirely different problems. In British India we have the Hindu-Moslem feurl which has resulted in that part of the country being partitioned into two independent states - Hindustan (Hindu) and Pakistan (Moslem). But compli-cated as is the position in British India, it is ten-fold more so in the native states.

The British government has said that it will give every encouragement to the hundreds of princes to affiliate either with Hindustan or Pakistan. England aims at achieving, as united an India as possible, but will not deny the native states the right establish in independent status if they so desire.

However, the All-India Con-gress Party, which is dominant in Hindustan, has announced that it is against any native state de claring its independence of the two new dominions of Pakistan and Hindustan On the other hand, Mahomed Ali Jinnah, president of the Moslem League and prospec tive head of the state of Pakistan, says the princely states will be free to adopt any course they

There we have the makings of more strife, and it may be bloody. So there are plenty of pros-pects of further civil strife before the princely problem is settled. While the extent of that can't be foreseen, one thing is clear the whole set-up is such that the Indian potentates are headed for eventual extinction.

cause something stops it." Utiles declared adding: "that something will be either violent resistance, or a moral resistance so solld that to oppose it would be futils. Clearly, Americans must see to it that there is a peaceful stoppage."

Dulles said the United States was "in a wawward position to organize" such a movement, "badcause, at the moment, our motives are suspect. That suspicion is found even among such historic and understanding friends as the British and French."

The first phase of the United States' quest for peace must be to restore the nation's moral influence, Dulles mid. The United States, he added, must make it clear, beyond a doubt, "that it has no thought of using economic or military might to impose on others its particular way of life".
