'Arbitration Not Enough' For Young Drug Offenders

When young drug offenders have a run-in with the law, they need a good scare — a warning of just how serious their crime really is — to help keep them off drugs in the future.

That's the opinion of a woman who has been involved with dozens of juvenile offenders for the last year and a half as a volunteer with the Seminole County Juvenile Arbitration program.

Michelle Miller, 28, of Lake Mary, says she agrees with Assistant State Attorney Kurt Erlenbach's decision to crack down harder on young drug users by prosecuting them in juvenile court instead of referring them to the arbitration program.

"People in the community are tired of not having these cases taken seriously. They want to see them prosecuted," Erlenbach said. "There's an epidemic out there. I feel something should be done," Mrs. Miller said.

"In most cases, sending them (juveniles) to arbitration is not enough, punishment to deter them. They need to be scared. They need to go before a judge in a courtroom. Let the judge talk to them and say 'Hey, we're going to do something about this. You're not going to get away with it,'" Mrs. Miller said.

In the past, most juveniles charged with first-time drug related misdemeanors were referred to the arbitration program where they were usually required to perform 30 to 40 hours of community service and then their records were erased.

"This is not working," Mrs. Miller said. "I'd say it honestly does scare some of them enough that they quit drugs," she said. "But I think the majority of them continue to use drugs."

Mrs. Miller said the young offenders need to have the seriousness of their crime impressed more dramatically on them and they need more professional counseling than is available to them through the arbitration program.

"Parents are unaware" of the extent of the problem, she said. "We've got kids 12, 13, and 14 coming in here smoking pot, taking Quaaludes and speed. It needs to be looked at more seriously."

Seminole Circuit Judge Dominick J. Salfi said he agrees that the arbitration program "hasn't shown a proficiency" in handling young drug users.

"There has been some success, but we haven't trained the arbitrators to deal effectively" with drug users, he said. Salfi said a plan is underway to train arbitrators better during the next year and "then hopefully we can persuade the state attorney's office to run some of these cases back through arbitration."

Salfi said that by placing drug offenders in the juvenile court system they can receive counseling, can be placed in juvenile detention if they fail to comply with court orders, can be required to attend out-patient drug treatment and can be placed in behavior modification programs such as a half-way house.

Letters To Santa

As a service to our young readers, the Herald is printing letters to Santa again this year. They may be dropped off at the Herald office at 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, or mailed to Santa in care of Evening Herald, P.O. Box 1657, Sanford, Fl., 32771.

Dear Santa,
I know that I already wrote to you, but I just want to make sure that I wrote everything I wanted.

A radio that you can carry around, batteries needed.

Districting

Sanford Accepts Blacks' Plan To Settle Voting Suit

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Special City Attorney Ned Julian Jr. was in Miami this morning informing the attorney in the federal voting act suit brought against the city of Sanford that city officials are ready to approve his plan splitting the community into four voting districts.

The city commission voted 4 to 1 at a special meeting Thursday to approve the plan submitted by Miami attorney, David Lipman, calling for four city commissioners to be elected from within districts with the mayor running at large.

However, the commission asked for an adjustment of district lines to reflect 1983 population estimates. The plan prepared by Lipman was drawn on the basis of the 1980 census. The city has grown by nearly 2,000 persons since then, according to estimates from the state recognized University of Florida's population center.

Also to be decided before City Attorney Bill Colbert and Lipman, representing the five black residents who filed the lawsuit, tell Federal Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich that the case is settled are the effective date of the districting and how often the district lines will be re-examined and redrawn to reflect new population.

The attorneys are to report back to Judge Kovachevich of their progress in settling the suit by Dec. 15.

It was especially noted at the meeting that the largest of the proposed districts, in terms of area, is in the south end of the city, and it is growing rapidly with most of the city's new housing.

More than 1,600 single family

and multi-family housing units have either recently completed construction, are under construction or are on the drawing boards there.

Only Commissioner Eddie Keith voted against the plan, saying, "I still don't like any part of it. I don't like running about districts. I believe any minority who wants to run can win a seat on the city commission."

Keith said after the vote was taken later in the meeting, "I'll work as hard to make it (districting) work as anybody."

Mayor Lee P. Moore said that voting by district is on all the commissioners' mind and he told Keith that his feelings about districting as a principle are not germane to the problem. "That is not what is at contest," he said. He added later that he hadn't meant to cut Keith off, but whether any of the commissioners like districting or not, federal law appears to be saying it must be done.

Keith continued that over the

... "I still don't like any part of it... (but) I'll work as hard to make it work as anybody."

United States minorities are winning in big and small cities without districting.

"What if three other commissioners are racially biased, it will dilute the power of the one black commissioner," Keith said. "Sanford is not so large that it needs to be districted."

Commissioner Milton Smith said he agonized over the problem and searched his conscience and feelings and came to the conclusion of what is right.

"I feel that minorities are asking to be segregated again. We have some qualified minorities in the city and if they would offer themselves for election, they would be elected without districting," Smith said.

"I don't particularly like the map as drawn. What will happen to the three commissioners in that one district?" Smith asked.

In the proposal where specific district lines are drawn, Commissioners Keith, Smith and Ned Yancey live in one district.

Moore said since Keith is up for election next year, if he decides to run and wins, he would fill that seat. "If we are going to buy this package, it means that Eddie is in the glory seat," Moore said.

Yancey is also up for election next year, but he has said that he will seek the mayor's office.

Colbert has said that among the items which must be solved before the suit is settled is what is to happen with commissioners whose terms extend beyond the December, 1984 elections. Farr and Smith will be in that position.

Farr, alone, among the commissioners, lives in a separate district and it appears he will not be effected. However, Smith could be.

Colbert said Thursday morning that agreement on Smith's position will have to be settled. "I don't think we can disenfranchise an incumbent commissioner during the term for which he is elected," he said. Smith was re-elected in 1982 and his term expires in January, 1987.

Moore said if the proposed settlement is accepted, only minor changes in the city charter will be necessary.

Smith continued that several minority friends have told him that as long as they have someone representing them on the commission, districting is not necessary. He added he would like to see the issue on the ballot again.

Farr said the issue is no longer a question of whether the commissioners like or don't like districting. He said that the commission sent Colbert to negotiate on districting, so that question was settled a couple weeks ago.

"We are wasting time beating our breasts," Farr said. "We offered settlement before going to trial. I don't have that big a problem with the districting presented."

Yancey said the first thing the commission ought to do is quit discussing minorities. "Let's forget minorities, we are all citizens of Sanford," he said.

Yancey's concern was that in a few years the southernmost

Midway To Host Unity Meet

The Midway-Canaan Neighborhood Economical Action Team (MCNEAT) will hold a unity breakfast for all unincorporated areas of Seminole County Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Midway Community Center.

Chairman Johnell Jackson said the breakfast will be one of many unity meetings planned in an effort to keep in touch with neighboring unincorporated areas.

Purpose of the meetings will be to keep the local governments and county commission from neglecting problems in these areas, Jackson said.

Seminole Working On Problem

Reagan Calls For Discipline In Schools

From Staff and Wire Service Reports
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is calling on the Justice Department to help restore discipline in America's schools, which he says should be "temples of learning, not drug dens."

Saying "teachers suffer verbal and physical abuse in some schools," Reagan drew sustained applause Thursday when he told an administration-sponsored education summit, "This must stop."

Said Reagan, "I've directed the Departments of Justice and Education to find ways we can help teachers and administrators enforce discipline."

Meanwhile in Seminole County, resources are already being organized to combat the drug problem. Although he concurs with Reagan that efforts must be made to control drugs in schools, Seminole High School Assistant Principal Jim Thompson said he does not think calling in the Justice Department would make that much difference in the effort now underway.

"I feel we have the personnel and resources within the school system and they are being fully utilized," Thompson said. "We have in-service training available to our teachers who are trying to combat drugs and we support this as we have been doing."

"This week at a countywide meeting drug resource teams have come together to prepare plans and compare what they have been doing," Thompson said. "A number of our teachers and administrators were fully involved."

Thompson said that drugs and discipline are a problem to some extent in every school, but the two are not necessarily interrelated.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the Justice Department "is looking for ways to improve community support for discipline in the schools."

The applause for Reagan's comment on discipline was the loudest he drew during his 20-minute speech in Indianapolis to 2,300 educators and state politicians attending the National Forum on Excellence in Education.

But many of the participants at the three-day conference, which ended with Reagan's address, were upset he again refused to propose more federal funds to upgrade public schools.

Reagan, who has sought to reduce federal funding of education the past three years, maintains that states and localities — not Washington — have the primary fiscal responsibility for schools.

Reagan was preceded to the podium at the Indianapolis Convention Center by Education Secretary Terrel Bell, who challenged schools to increase student literacy, stem high-school dropout rates, bolster curriculums and raise teachers' salaries.

"Now this is a big order for the nation's schools," Bell said. "We will have to solve many problems such as discipline, lack of parental commitment, adequate funding and a changed and reordered lifestyle for teenage America."

During the conference, educators and state politicians, including eight governors, 30 state school superintendents and 150 state legislators, exchanged ideas and plans to upgrade schools. Many also said they needed federal financial help.

Reagan said Thursday that schools need "fundamental reforms." He then offered a six-point program, much of it a reiteration of what he has promoted the past several months.

He called for "good, old-fashioned discipline," an end to drug and alcohol abuse, increased academic standards, a return to the basics, restoration of state and local control of schools and performance-based pay for teachers.

What was new is Reagan's decision to ask the Justice Department, in conjunction with the Education Department, "to find ways we can help teachers and administrators enforce discipline."

Reagan said, "Whatever it takes, we must make certain America's schools are temples of learning, not drug dens." A White House spokesman said the Justice Department's role would be to "identify ways for principals to work with local law officials and ways to communicate school law enforcement problems to the community."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, said he was pleased with Reagan's comments on the need to improve discipline, but was disappointed he offered no federal funds to improve schools.

"The time is now for President Reagan to do more than spill rhetoric on the laps on the American public," Shanker said.

Critical Blood Needs Forseen For Holidays

'Tis the season for giving and the Central Florida Blood Bank is hoping more donors will want to roll up their sleeves and give that others may live.

Although supplies are normal now, according to Joanne Hanley, director of communications, the Blood Bank traditionally faces a critical shortage of blood over the holiday season.

Many of the regular donors are busy with holiday activities or away on trips, while there is usually an increase in medical emergencies, she said.

"Volunteer blood donation designated for a family plan assures the head of the household and all tax dependents of all their blood needs for one year, without any replacement fees," said Ms. Hanley. "This offer is good in areas that are participants in the credit system."

The Central Florida Blood Bank has two branches in Seminole County where donors can go to give blood. The Seminole County Branch is located at 1302 E. Second St., Sanford. The hours are Monday and Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Tuesday and Thursday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. The telephone number to arrange an appointment is 322-0822. In Altamonte Springs, the branch is located at the Florida Hospital-Altamonte at 601 E. Altamonte Ave. (State Rte. 36) and the telephone number is 831-6373. Hours are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Monday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Donors are required to be at least 17 years of age and weigh at least 103 pounds. They should not have donated blood in the past eight weeks or have given plasma at a plasma center in the past six months. Receiving blood or plasma will defer a donor for six months, as will major surgery.

Further information may be obtained from the blood bank.

A person may donate blood as often as every 56 days. Many healthy men and women donate every 56 days and many have given as many as 10 or even 15 gallons over the years.

NATION

IN BRIEF

A Pregnant Woman 'Never Drinks Alone'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mayor Edward Koch signed the nation's first law requiring bars, liquor stores and restaurants to post signs warning pregnant women that liquor can cause birth defects.

"Just as we warn people that drinking and driving don't mix, this is an opportunity to call attention to the fact that when a woman is pregnant, she never drinks alone," said Dr. David Sencer, the city's Health Commissioner.

The measure signed Thursday take effect in three months and establishments that fail to post the sign could be fined up to $100.

Utah requires state liquor stores and private clubs that sell alcoholic beverages to post a general warning sign that says drinking alcohol "may be hazardous to your health and the safety of others."

Judge Indicted For Bribery

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Harry Claiborne, a flamboyant former defense attorney and frequent foe of the Justice Department, has been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of taking $85,000 in bribes from a brothel owner.

Claiborne, 66, appointed to the federal bench by former President Carter in 1978, is only the second sitting federal judge to be charged with alleged criminal acts performed in office. The chief witness against him was brothel owner Joe Conforte, who returned from two years of hiding in Brazil to testify, reportedly through a deal with the government.

The judge was indicted on seven counts, including one that alleges he solicited a $30,000 bribe from Conforte to quash two grand jury subpoenas in an FBI investigation of alleged voter fraud in Storey County, where Conforte's Mustang Ranch bordello is located.

The jury also indicted Claiborne on a charge of scheming to defraud Conforte by saying he could reverse his tax conviction at the appellate level in exchange for $100,000. The indictment said $55,000 of that amount was paid, with the other $45,000 to come later.

Going Home Was Fatal

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A mother and her boyfriend face murder charges in the beating death of her 2-year-old son who was taken from her custody a month ago but ordered returned by a juvenile judge.

Police said Dayshawn Bernard apparently had been beaten for days and was covered with bruises when his mother took him to Touro Infirmary early Thursday. The boy, who suffered internal injuries, was dead on arrival.

Nine days after the boy was taken from his home and placed in foster care, Orleans Parish Juvenile Judge Salvatore T. Mule ordered the child given back to his mother, police said.

Court records show the judge, who was not available for comment, ruled the mother was not a threat to the child and found no reason for protective custody.

Jenrette Sentenced To Two Years For Taking $50,000 Bribe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Rep. John Jenrette Jr., convicted two years ago in the FBI's Abscam investigation, was sentenced today to two years in prison and fined $20,000 for taking a $50,000 bribe from agents posing as Arab sheiks.

After his release, the former South Carolina Democrat also will be on probation for five years — contingent upon paying the fine. Jenrette's lawyers said they would appeal the sentence.

Jenrette could have been sentenced up to 35 years in prison and fined $50,000.

The 47-year-old South Carolina Democrat showed no emotion as Judge John Penn announced the verdict.

Penn made it clear he did not approve of the government's methods in the controversial case, but also said there was no way the jury that convicted Jenrette more than three years ago could ignore what he had done.

Four other congressmen convicted of Abscam offenses received three-year prison terms and were fined various amounts.

Jenrette, 47, one of seven congressmen indicted in the Abscam probe, has been living near Fort Lauderdale, since his October 1981 conviction, selling real estate and floor tile.

In all, one senator and six representatives were charged in the bribery investigation by FBI agents who posed as Arab sheiks seeking political favors in exchange for cash.

On Aug. 4, U.S. District Judge John Penn threw out Jenrette's request to overturn the jury's verdict or order a new trial. However, the judge said he felt the government's Abscam conduct "at least bordered on the outrageous."

Jenrette was videotaped telling an undercover agent, "I've got larceny in my blood."

Jenrette was convicted on charges that he arranged to have former Myrtle Beach businessman John Stowe receive a $50,000 bribe on his behalf in December 1979.

In exchange, Jenrette promised to introduce immigration legislation allowing certain Arab sheiks to enter the United States, the government said.

...Districting Plan Accepted For Sanford

district where all the development is occurring will be larger than the three other proposed districts combined.

Moore said there is no question that if the plan is adopted the city will have to be redistricted no too far in the future. "I don't think the plaintiff's attorney has any problem re-drawing the district lines using more current population information," he said.

Noting that he, City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles and Colbert met with Lipman in Colbert's law office Tuesday, Moore said he didn't get the feeling that Lipman is unreasonable.

"To him the 1983 law is a fact of life and he doesn't deviate from it," Moore said.

Farr suggested perhaps the commission could agree on a compromise whereby the city commission would be composed of seven members with four elected from districts and three including the mayor elected at large.

Moore said from the discussion with Lipman it was obvious that "you ain't tampering with those four districts and election by the people in those districts."

Knowles said he had hoped that the city commission would not get caught up with what they like and don't like.

"The lawyer's concern is what is legal, not what is right, not what is good government and not what is fair."

Knowles said, "The sole question is whether we want to fight a legal battle. It's immaterial whether we like districting or not."

"It's a sad day for America," Smith said.

The motion to approve the districting proposal subject to change of the boundaries to reflect the latest population figures was made by Farr with second from Yancey. The motion was approved 4-to-1.

Farr told his colleagues that they ought not to be so sure all the citizens won't be better served by districts.

Keith, in a few last words of opposition, said the citizens now know they can call on any commissioner they feel comfortable with to champion their cause.

"The commissioners all serve the city of Sanford. It makes no damn where they live," Moore said.

A half dozen black residents attended the meeting including Alfred DeLaatibaudiere, one of the plaintiffs in the lawsuit. He declined comment.

The suit says that black citizens of Sanford through the current at-large election system have been denied access to the political process, adding that not one single black has ever been elected to office in Sanford.

Couple Arrested In Undercover Cocaine Deal

A Winter Park woman and an Orlando man arrested by Seminole County undercover narcotics officers are free on bond after being arrested on cocaine charges.

According to a sheriff's report: Agents accompanied by an informant met the couple Thursday in a restaurant parking lot on U.S. Highway 17-92 in Fern Park.

The agents entered the suspects' car, and after negotiations bought a quarter ounce of cocaine for $500. The suspects then drove south on Highway 17-92 where they were stopped by the drug agents and uniformed deputies.

The agents reportedly recovered $500 in marked money from the couple and found an additional ounce of cocaine in the female suspect's purse, the report said. Cynthia Sue Gates, 21, of 2027 E. Hampton Circle, Winter Park, and Thomas T. Hewitt, 33, of 1233 Virginia St., Orlando, were arrested at 9:13 p.m. in Fern Park on charges of possession and sale of a controlled substance. Both posted $8,000 bond and were released from the Seminole County jail.

MOTORCYCLE STOLEN
Police are looking for a $2,000 racing motorcycle which was stolen from a Highlawn Avenue home earlier this week.

At 12:30 p.m. Tuesday, a blond man in his 20s went to the home of Douglas Taylor, 2511 Highlawn Ave., Sanford, and rode Taylor's racing-modified Yamaha cycle away, according to a neighbor's account. The neighbor, Cecil Butler of 2510 Highland Ave., said he thought the man was a friend of Taylor's. The motorcycle can be started without a key.

BOAT MOTOR THEFT
A 50-horsepower Evinrude outboard motor was taken from a boat trailer at 1711 West 14th St., Sanford, according to a police report.

James Price, of 1713 West 14th St., owner of the $1,050 motor, said the outboard was stolen between 8 a.m. Tuesday and 12:30 p.m. Thursday.

STEREO TAKEN
Thieves burglarized a Sanford home, taking a $1,300 stereo, according to a police report.

Information from the report states that between 4 and 5:30 p.m. Thursday, someone entered the home of William Leroy Tolbert, of 1002 W. 16th St., and took the stereo system. According to the report, there was no forced entry into the home. A color television set was not removed.

CONSTRUCTION THEFT
Building materials valued at $1,239 have been reported missing from a construction site at 9175 Mimosa Drive, Chuluota.

Francis A. Roberts Jr., a framer for All State Homes, discovered the loss and said the items disappeared between 4:15 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday, a report said.

North Koreans To Die For Rangoon Bomb Attack

MINGALADON, Burma (UPI) — Two North Korean military officers were found guilty and sentenced to death today for setting the Martyr's Mausoleum bomb that killed 21 people in an apparent attempt on the South Korean president's life.

The verdict, reached by three Burmese judges, was read before a hushed audience of diplomats, reporters, and security officers in the heavily guarded courtroom, 10 miles north of Rangoon. The two defendants, North Korean Maj. Zin Mo and Capt. Kang Min Chul, sat impassive in their seats.

The court found the two guilty of premeditated murder in the Oct. 9 bomb attack and sentenced them to the mandatory death penalty.

Four Burmese and 17 South Koreans, including four Cabinet members, were killed in the blast timed with a wreath-laying ceremony at the national monument. South Korean President Chun Doo Hwan, who was on a state visit to Burma, escaped because his car was delayed by traffic.

Pilot Lost In Fog

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The pilot of the jet that strayed into the path of a Boeing 727 radioed he had lost his way in fog moments before 93 people died in a fiery collision at the Madrid airport, it was reported today.

The Madrid newspaper El Pais said the Avlaco DC-9 pilot, Augusto Almoguera, was heard on radio frequency 121.7 moments before the crash saying, "Where are we?" indicating he had lost his way in the heavy fog.

The Spanish Association of Airline Pilots Thursday said an inadequate signaling system on the runway caused the pilot of the Avlaco DC-9 to mistakenly cross the path of an Iberia airliner Boeing 727 moments before takeoff.

Proposition 1 May Spark Legislative Tax Cutting

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Two key Senate leaders say they will be looking for ways to cut taxes this spring, and the revenue-limiting Amendment 1 looming on the horizon is the reason.

Senate President Curtis Peterson, a Lakeland Democrat, told the Tampa Tribune Thursday that he wanted the Legislature to roll back the $63 million increase in local property taxes it approved this year for education.

Appropriations Chairman Harry Johnston, D-West Palm Beach, said, lawmakers also would be looking at a proposal by Sen. Pat Neal, D-Bradenton, to raise the exemption on the intangibles tax on stocks and bonds from $20,000 to $50,000.

Amendment 1 — also known as Citizen's Choice and Proposition 1 — goes before the voters in November. If successful, it would roll back state revenues, beginning in 1985, to 1980-81 levels plus a partial adjustment for inflation.

Bodies Found In Oil Drums

VERO BEACH (UPI) — Investigators searched for clues into the deaths of two women whose bodies were found crammed in a pair of oil drums buried in an orange grove.

The 30-gallon barrels were unearthed Wednesday night at a site just east of Interstate 95 near the Vero Beach Airport. The discovery came a week after skeletal remains were found scattered at another site about three miles away.

Indian River County Sheriff's spokesman Rick Baker declined to identify the bodies. He said the drums could have been at the site for as long as two years.

Indian River County State Attorney Robert Stone said David Gore, once a caretaker at the grove, could be "directly or indirectly" linked to the bodies.

Gore is charged with the July 26 murder of 17-year-old Lynn Elliott, a Vero Beach High School student, and kidnapping and sexually assaulting her 14-year-old companion.

Marine Positions Come Under New Fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Moslem Druze militiamen attacked U.S. Marine positions at Beirut airport today with rocket-propelled grenades and small arms fire in the fourth attack on the peacekeepers this week, a Marine spokesman said.

Today's attack came after another night of Druze bombardment of Beirut's Christian eastern neighborhoods and the coastal highway north of the city.

Ambulances raced through Beirut with casualties and medical officials said at least three people were wounded and had been hospitalized.

"The shooting is continuing," said Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks. "We are getting rocket-propelled grenade and small-arms fire along our northeastern perimeter."

There was no immediate word on casualties. The attack was the second on Marines in two days and the fourth since Sunday, when gunners killed eight Marines and wounded two others hours after U.S. warplanes bombed Syrian-held positions in Lebanon.

The Marines had been on a maximum state of alert following a 90-minute battle Thursday in which they blasted Druze fighters until a white flag was raised.

Lebanese government officials met today with U.S. Presidential envoy Donald Rumsfeld to discuss security matters. Rumsfeld arrived in Beirut Thursday for the first time since the escalation of U.S. military involvement in Lebanon.

Military Brass Look For New Positions For Marines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pentagon sources say the Joint Chiefs of Staff is looking at a number of ways to find less vulnerable positions for the Marines in Beirut.

More active consideration to redeploying the Marines from their position they have held for 15 months is under way.

Pentagon officials said Thursday the Joint Chiefs, which act as the president's military advisers, has been considering a "wide range of options" to shift the Marines from their present positions, including pulling most of them back to their five amphibious ships offshore.

Cycle Gangs Termed 'New Mafia'

ORLANDO (UPI) — The Outlaws motorcycle gang has turned prostitution and drug rings into a well organized business that rivals the Mafia, law enforcement officials told the Governor's Council on Organized Crime.

The stereotype cyclist, bearded and wearing dirty denim, is slowly fading away, authorities noted as the council began two days of hearings on the problem of motorcycle gangs and drug trafficking.

Motorcycle terrorists are now clean-cut, live in expensive homes and drive high-priced cars. They also can afford expensive attorneys, often kept on retainer for gang business, Florida Department of Law Enforcement officials testified Thursday.

The agency's records indicate the Outlaws have been responsible for about 80 Florida murders in the past 10 years, witnesses reported. The gang, numbering about 100 members, has local chapters in Tampa, Orlando, Jacksonville and Fort Lauderdale. Brevard County authorities report another chapter forming there.

Experts on the Outlaws testified members virtually enslave young women, often minor runaways, to work in topless bars or in prostitution rings. The women, better known as a biker's "old lady," also are forced to sell drugs. An unidentified woman testified from behind a curtain through a voice disguiser she had been forced into prostitution at age 16.

All money generated had to be turned over to her "old man" or else she faced severe beatings, she said. She escaped the gang only through the federal witness protection program and still fears for her life.

Doris Herman "Fuzzy" Miller, reported leader of the Jacksonville Outlaws, was subpoenaed by the council. He appeared with an attorney and read a statement refusing to testify under Fifth Amendment protection against self incrimination.

Child, 5, Dies Trying TV Stunt

TITUSVILLE (UPI) — A 5-year-old girl who choked to death when she swallowed a partially inflated balloon may have been trying to imitate a stunt she had seen on the television show That's Incredible, relatives said.

Mary Berry of Mims, said Thursday that her niece, Margaret Berry, had watched the program with her family at the aunt's home.

A man on the program "swallowed all kinds of stuff, like fire, glass and fish. He would poke his stomach out like the fish were swimming around in it and then bring the things back," said the aunt.

Margaret was playing with her sister and several neighborhood children in a vacant lot near her home in Mims, north of Titusville, late Wednesday when she swallowed the balloon.

The aunt said one of the children told her Margaret was trying to imitate the TV program. "But it did not come back, it stuck in her throat."

Producers of That's Incredible, Alan Landsberg Productions in Los Angeles, were not available to comment. The show airs at 8 p.m. Mondays on ABC and closes with a warning that viewers should not to try the tricks seen on the program.

Mrs. Berry said a neighbor ran to the girl and tried unsuccessfully to dislodge the balloon by patting her back and "hugging" her sharply around the chest. The technique, known as the Heimlich maneuver, is commonly used to remove food lodged in the throat.

When that failed, neighbors and family members rushed the child by car to Jess Parrish Memorial Hospital 5 miles away.

The staff removed the partially inflated balloon with forceps and worked for almost an hour to get the unconscious child breathing, but could not, said emergency room supervisor Judy Caudill.

Israeli Gunboats Attack PLO Forces

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli gunboats attacked a waterfront Palestinian supply camp before dawn today, raising fears of a blockade to keep Yasser Arafat and his 4,000 fighters from leaving Lebanon.

The attack conducted by six Israeli warships and helicopters followed Israeli threats to avenge a bus bombing in Jerusalem that killed four people Tuesday and hints it might block Arafat's evacuation from Lebanon.

Rahman said one guerrilla was killed and three wounded in the bombardment. There were no Israeli casualties in today's fighting, the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said.

Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas who had planned to leave Lebanon as early as this weekend said their departure would be delayed by the naval shelling.

"The Israeli gunboats are still in the sea and I think this cuts the road between Tripoli and the world," said Arafat spokesman Ahmed Abdel Rahman.

Damage to the waterfront supply depot was confined to an empty warehouse, several concrete block buildings and two tents. At least one spent phosphorous shell was spotted on the ground.

Ahmed said guerrillas would ask the U.N. Security Council "for new measures to protect our troops (during evacuation)," he said.

The naval shelling came as Arafat's embattled army of 4,000 fighters waited to sail to Tunis and North Yemen following a monthlong siege by Syrian-backed rebels seeking to oust him as leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The Israelis had hinted this week they might try to block Arafat's departure.

Israeli warships remained off the Tripoli coast several hours after the bombardment, Abdel Rahman said. At the time of the attack, Arafat was believed to be away from the camp where his men were cornered, one half mile from Tripoli, which is 42 miles from Beirut.

Arafat's guerrillas planned to leave Lebanon on Greek ships under an Arab-mediated agreement, but Greek government sources said the ferry boats were waiting for "instructions and guarantees" of safe conduct from the United Nations and had not yet set sail.

The privately owned Greek ships had been expected to reach Tripoli either Friday or Saturday.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar agreed to allow PLO troops to fly the U.N. flag on their evacuation ships, despite Israeli protests that "terrorists" should not be given safe conduct.

But former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, now a minister without portfolio, said in a British Broadcasting Corporation radio interview in London that Arafat "should not leave Tripoli alive."

The Israeli attack came a day after Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir vowed to avenge the bus bombing, which killed four people. Both Arafat's main line Fatah and rebel PLO factions claimed responsibility for the blast.

Fall Cleanup Dec. 12-16 In Altamonte Springs

The city of Altamonte Springs has scheduled a fall cleanup program for the week of Dec. 12-16. During the week, residents may place at the curb for pick-up items that the refuse collectors do not usually accept.

This is an opportunity for residents to get rid of items such as old furniture, dishwashers, and washing machines. The general rule is that it should be household generated refuse as opposed to construction debris or the results of large landclearing operations.

Basically anything that can be loaded on a flat bed trailer by two men will be collected and disposed of at no charge.

With its new street sweeper, the city is making an effort to clean up sand and debris throughout the city and the Public Works Department is asking those who live in residential areas to aid in this process.

For further information, contact Fran at 869-0363, Public Works, Buildings and Grounds Division.

For the second year in a row the Florida Law Enforcement Association, Inc. made its December meeting special. They invited the secretaries who serve Seminole, Orange and Osceola area law enforcement officials to their Wednesday breakfast meeting. They also invited Dr. Marguerite Culp, assistant to the dean of student development at Seminole Community College to speak to the group.

About 30 secretaries joined about 50 bosses, from the FBI, the Florida Highway Patrol, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, the state attorney's office, city police and the three counties' sheriffs' departments, at the Skyport Lounge in Sanford.

Seminole County sheriff's spokesman John Spolski said Dr. Culp told the group how to avoid being "boxed in." In a job, by the action of a boss, in personal relationships, or by the time already invested in negative activity.

Spolski said the association members had been impressed by Dr. Culp's presentation last year on stress and how to cope.

He said the group hopes to make its December meeting an annual event which will include both Dr. Culp and the secretaries. The association holds a regular monthly meeting on the first Wednesday of each month.

This was also an election meeting for the association and Kissimmee police chief Frank Ross ended his term as president.

New officers elected were: President, Longwood police chief Greg Manning; vice president, Altamonte Springs police chief, William Liquori; secretary, Maitland police Lt. Edward "Butch" Doyle; and treasurer, Seminole County sheriff's spokesman John Spolski.

Here In The Mysterious West

President Reagan has sent word to Peking that the United States recognizes the People's Republic of China as the sole legitimate government of China. Having done so, Washington can assume that the exchange of visits next year by Mr. Reagan and Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang will come off as planned.

The Chinese communists seem to need such stroking periodically in order to accept the reality of the U.S. relationship with Taiwan, which has its own idea about the legitimacy of Chinese governments.

Mr. Reagan is threading his way through the narrow passage which permits our government to maintain diplomatic relations with Peking without renouncing its friendship and military alliance with the Republic of China on Taiwan. Neither of the Chinese governments is very pleased with the way our presidents straddle this fence, but neither is inclined to disturb the status quo.

Peking currently is upset because the U.S. Congress has passed an appropriations bill for the International Monetary Fund which includes a declaration that we will support the right of Taiwan to remain a member of the Asian Development Bank even if Peking becomes a member. Peking, naturally, wants to replace Taiwan. The communists also are complaining about a resolution adopted recently by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which supports Taiwan's right to self-determination, contrary to Peking's claim that the island is a province of a single China.

The White House has made clear that Mr. Reagan will not let complaints from Peking influence his decision on the IMF legislation. In fact, we are told that he will sign the measure even if he does not approve of exactly what it says. As for the Senate resolution, it remains on the Senate calendar for action after the first of the year.

There is no denying that U.S. policy toward China is ambiguous, but that is what makes it workable. The United States is faced with talking out of both sides of its mouth if it wants to stay on speaking terms with two Chinese governments.

The Chinese themselves may be puzzled about why the president of the United States says one thing, the U.S. Congress says another, and our policy seems based on contradictory points of view. Well, that's how things are here in the Mysterious West.

Cabbage Patch Craze

If you didn't think Christmas brought out the best and worst in people, just look at the "Cabbage Patch Kids" craze.

The homely little dolls with yarn hair and gimmicky adoption certificates have caused riots among Yuletide shoppers panicked over their limited supply and the prospect of disappointed kids.

Several people have been injured in shopper stampedes. Others have been arrested for such Scrooge-like activities as stealing the doll from a lucky purchaser. Scalpers also are selling the 18-inch creation of artist Xavier Roberts for more than double the suggested retail price of $20, and one New Jersey outlet reportedly has set up a clearinghouse to match people desperate for a doll with sellers.

Those wondering why this particular doll is the cause of so much chaos should think back to such past Christmas fads as the pet rock and last year's E.T., which some retailers reportedly can't get rid of now. At least the "Cabbage Patch Kids" are a throwback to bygone Christmases when a child was delighted with something that she or he could cuddle and dress. As anyone subjected to television commercials can attest, this was supposed to be the Christmas to buy one's family a home computer or video game equipment. So it is both refreshing and amusing to see an almost old-fashioned doll top Santa's gift list — even if the result has been a lot of immature adult behavior.

BERRY'S WORLD

JEFFREY HART Vote For Roberto D'Aubisson

We've been hearing a lot about the Salvadoran "death squads" lately, but if I were a Salvadoran my vote in the forthcoming March 25 elections would be solidly for Roberto D'Aubisson, leader of the right-wing National Republican Alliance, who emerged from the last election as the most popular politician in El Salvador.

Mr. D'Aubisson is in all likelihood connected with the "death squads," or at least connected with people who themselves are connected with them, but the "death squads" are a) successful, as past experience indicates, and b) very Latin American.

The communists in recent years have taken a terrible beating in the three most important Latin American countries south of Mexico, the so-called ABC countries, Argentina, Brazil, and Chile. The first two suffered from serious insurgencies and spreading subversion. All of this failed, because soldiers and policemen, in their off-hours and dressed in civilian clothes and using cars with the plates covered, did what had to be done. They killed communists. They no doubt killed some other people too — this kind of operation is inherently sloppy — but today communist influence is negligible in Argentina and Brazil. The disease was eradicated.

Recent Chilean history has been slightly different. There, the communists were not outside the government conducting guerrilla war. They were in the government, and in effect running it. When the military intervened at the 11th hour, however, the communists remained powerful throughout Chilean society. Chile, indeed, had the largest Communist party per capita in the hemisphere. The informal, but systematic, repressing of the communists commenced, often by off-duty police and military. Thousands of communists and leftist sympathizers also went into exile, from which, unfortunately, some are now being permitted to return.

Uruguay had a comparable experience, with its "Tupamaro" guerrillas. It killed them. Another such drama is opening in Peru. Last year, in Guatemala, then President Rios Mont completed a successful sweep of rural insurgents. The methods are not pretty, but they work, and they certainly work better in Latin America than fancy, academic U.S. schemes — linked to U.S. aid — for "reforming" the local society and enforcing "human rights."

In El Salvador, U.S. policy presently involves a cockamamie scheme to reform and rebuild the Salvadoran army by training junior officers and gradually using them to replace the older senior officers. At places like Fort Benning, Georgia, these younger men are being taught "cleaner" methods of fighting guerrillas and their allies, and also are being indoctrinated with nice political goals like land reform, road building and education.

The Salvadorans are being pressured into all of this by threats to cut off U.S. aid. Our ambassador in San Salvador, Mr. Thomas Pickering, makes speeches about human rights. The U.S. government actually intervened after the last elections to prevent Roberto D'Aubisson from taking over the presidency of the country. Again, the threat was aid cutoff.

Missile Subs Plagued By Problems

WASHINGTON — The way to prevent a nuclear holocaust, Pentagon strategists agree, is to keep America too formidable to attack. The Soviets will never unleash their missiles against the United States if they think it will bring devastation down upon their heads, say the strategists.

The grim sentinels, ever ready to strike back, are our awesome intercontinental ballistic missiles, elusive submarine-launched missiles and ponderous B-52 bombers.

There is always the danger that a lightning strike over the Arctic could wipe out our intercontinental missiles before they could be launched and destroy our bombers before they could get off the ground. But the Soviets aren't likely to attempt a first strike as long as they know our submarines are lurking beneath the ocean, missiles bristling, just waiting to retaliate.

At least that's what the military

WILLIAM RUSHER

A Little Catch-Up Ball

NEW YORK (NEA) — Having just spent most of the month of November in the Far East studying the ever-fascinating subject of Japan, I find that I have left unremarked a number of important developments elsewhere. Before they disappear from the front pages altogether, let's play a little catch-up ball.

Around the middle of October, The New York Times floated a story that, if correct, would have the effect of letting the Russians largely off the hook for shooting down that Korean airliner. According to the Times's usual "anonymous source," the U.S. intelligence community has just about concluded that the Soviet fighter plane was directly below and behind flight 007, and hence truly didn't recognize the distinctive profile of the big Boeing 747 and identify it as a civilian airliner.

People who are somewhat more sophisticated than necessary assumed that the CIA planted that story in the Times to prepare public opinion for a forthcoming backdown from this country's official position that the whole episode was a deliberate and callous outrage on the part of the Soviets. But no such backdown has followed, and a moment's reflection is sufficient to explode the whole "below and behind" theory.

According to transcripts of statements made by the Russian pilot and recorded by U.S. and Japanese listening posts at the time, the Soviet fighter plane was at various moments in front of the 747, abeam of it and to the right of it, as well as behind it:

"I'm already moving in front of the target."

"How can I chase it? I'm already abeam of the target."

"From me it is located at 70 degrees to the left."

"I'm dropping back. Now I will try rockets."

Forget the Russians' subsequent assertion that the fighter plane wagged its wings at the 747 to order it to land; presumably that was just another Soviet lie. But how does one reconcile the pilot's recorded statements with the "below and behind" theory?

Early in November, South Africa's white electorate approved a sweeping constitutional reform that enfranchises both Indian and "coloured" citizens (the latter being a large and thoroughly Westernized mulatto community), provides them with separate parliamentary chambers to manage their own affairs, and gives them a voice in such collective problems as defense. The whites remain dominant, entrenched behind provisions that guarantee that the other two blocs can never outvote them; but there is simply no denying that the new constitution is an impressive step forward for South Africa.

But since, according to liberal dogma, South Africa's white National government can do nothing right this step had to be denounced anyway. The favorite criticism is that it does nothing for South Africa's black majority — which is true, but slyly dishonest because no conceivable constitution could possibly solve all of South Africa's race problems in one fell swoop. Local self-government for South African blacks is already in the works with a larger voice in the general polity plainly in sight up the road.

IMMEDIATELY AFTER the Grenada invasion, the media in this country set up an awful howl about the decision of our commander, endorsed by the Reagan administration, not to tell them about the operation in advance or take reporters along to cover its initial stages. The response of the public has been so negative toward these protests, however, that the media have subsequently lapsed into a shocked and thoroughly uncharacteristic silence.

What's the matter, boys? Don't you want to come out and fight? Let's try again: The truth is that most Americans, having watched your sickening performance in Vietnam, thoroughly approved the decision of our military commander in Grenada not to try to occupy a communist-controlled island with a couple of hundred hostile reporters tagging along trying to take bites out of his leg. And that state of affairs is likely to recur in future combat situations until you make up your minds which side you're on. You think you're part of the solution, but you're not. You're just part — and a big part — of the problem.

ROBERT WALTERS Playing Down The Debt

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Reagan has finally revealed the dirty little secret of his 1980 campaign: It really isn't possible to simultaneously slash federal taxes, increase defense spending and balance the federal budget.

Throughout his successful campaign for the presidency, Reagan incessantly offered that tripartite commitment to the voters in return for their support.

He stubbornly defended the scheme when it was ridiculed by Republican rivals. John B. Anderson likened it to an optical illusion achieved with mirrors. Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., characterized it as a "riverboat gamble," and George Bush denigrated it as "voodoo economics."

In the ensuing years, Reagan has continued to rebuff detractors of his plan — until chief presidential spokesman Larry Speakes recently appeared before reporters at the White House and proclaimed that "the important part of our program is defense increase and tax reduction."

The notion of a balanced federal budget as a presidential priority, Speakes suggested acidly, exists only in the imagination of Martin S. Feldstein, the embattled chairman of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers.

Feldstein may not hold that title for long because he persists in not only calling attention to the huge federal deficit but also in blaming its size on two components of Reagan's 1980 campaign promise — reduced taxes and increased military spending.

The growth of the federal deficit is increasingly becoming a political rather than an economic issue, a phenomenon noted by former CEA Chairman Herbert Stein writing in a newsletter published by the American Enterprise Institute.

"Supporting or opposing deficits is now also a way of supporting or opposing Reagan," says Stein, "and now people are more attached to their views of Reagan than they are to their views of the deficit."

Although that observation is generally true, Feldstein's views about the danger inherent in the virtually unrestrained growth of federal deficits are shared by a substantial number of Reagan supporters.

Included in that category are conservative economists and business executives, Republican members of Congress and even senior government officials such as Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker and Office of Management and Budget Director David A. Stockman.

Many of those Reagan loyalists are disturbed, for example, by the fact that annual federal deficits now are showing startling growth not only in absolute terms but also as a proportion of the country's gross national product.

In 1970, the deficit was only 0.3 percent of GNP, and as recently as 1980 it was 2.3 percent of GNP. But last year it soared to 6.0 percent. This year it is expected to decline only slightly to 5.6 percent.

Outside the White House, there is virtual unanimity that high deficits endanger sustained economic growth because the federal government's voracious demand for money to fund its debt — now approaching $1.4 trillion and rising at a rate of approximately $200 billion yearly — will consume much of the capital necessary for non-government growth.

bottom to (charts) maintained in the navigational computer system."

And that's the rub. The demand for these charts, called PBNZCs for Precise Bathymetric Navigational Zone Charts, far exceeds supply. The Navy has less than a dozen ships to survey the ocean bottom, and just three of them have done most of the work since 1959.

But "changes in the global extent of U.S. strategic deterrent operations," the report says, "has created greater geographical demand for the (surveys)." It may require "over 5 trillion track miles of Ocean Survey Program effort extending into the year 2020 ... to more effectively deploy ballistic missile submarine forces," the report estimates.

The GAO report warns urgently that submarine operations "may not be able to meet changing U.S. nuclear weapons deployment policy needs because of lack of adequate data to operate in areas that were not surveyed."

In many seaways, the only sure way to reset the sensors is to surface. The oldest of our strategic subs, the Polaris, must surface "every eight to 15 hours of ship operations," according to the GAO report. The Poseidons "reset at intervals of 20 to 25 hours of operation." And though the new Trident subs won't have to surface as frequently, they will still have to come up at least every "100 hours" to reset.

All this popping up and down, of course, makes it easier for Soviet satellites to track them.

Resetting can only be done by determining the submarine's precise position with a navigational fix. The GAO report indicates that this is best done by obtaining "bottom contour fixes." The fix can be accomplished "covertly," the report says, "by remaining submerged and using a secure sonar signal to correlate the contour of the ocean experts say in their public testimony. But when the doors are shut and the public is excluded, they tell a different story. The truth is that our missile-carrying submarines are plagued with problems. They must surface frequently to communicate with the Pentagon and to reset their targeting devices. This makes them dangerously vulnerable. The sea-launched missiles also aren't as accurate as they could be.

These weaknesses are revealed in a General Accounting Office report that has been double-checked by my associates Dale Van Atta and Indy Badhwar. The report is classified "Secret" and is titled, significantly: "Need for Improving Mapping, Charting and Geodesy Support of the Strategic Ballistic Missile Submarine Force."

The report cites imperfections in the submarines' inertial navigation system sensors which "increase with the time the (sub) spends" at sea.

How To Shop For That Ideal Christmas Tree

Although artificial Christmas trees have gained considerable popularity in recent years, primarily because of their convenience and consistent appearance, many people still prefer a real tree. If you are a traditionalist and plan to visit a Christmas tree lot, you will find that the tree prices, like everything else have escalated. So, to be sure you get your money's worth, you should keep certain things in mind as you shop for that "ideal" tree.

It is important to choose a fresh Christmas tree and that is not easy in Florida where most trees are "imported" from distant states. A fresh tree has good color and holds its needles well. Florida's warm weather causes many Christmas trees to wilt quickly and drop their needles. How well a tree will survive depends on the type of tree and when it was cut. Scotch pines and Douglas fir hold their needles quite well. Spruces tend to lose needles more quickly.

Buying a fresh tree is probably the most important piece of advice I can give. There are a couple of reasons why a fresh tree is important. Obviously, a fresh tree will last and look better longer. Old, dried-out trees are unattractive and they are fire hazards as well. Since most of us include electric lights in our tree decorations, it is easy to see that a dried out tree becomes very dangerous.

There are several ways to determine a tree's freshness. Bend the needles. If the tree is fresh, the needles will be supple and springy.

If the tree is old, the needles will break off. The next suggestion could get you in trouble with the seller, but you can bounce the tree's stump on the ground to see how many needles fall. Its normal for even a fresh tree to shed a few needles but if the bounce produces a shower of needles, select another tree. Before buying, also feel the bottom of the stump. The sap of a fresh tree is sticky whereas on an old stump it is hard and caked. A fresh tree also should have a pleasant fragrance.

The tree you select should have a good green color, be full and bushy and have sturdy branches. Strength of branches is more a matter of tree type than its age or condition. White pine and red cedar trees are well suited to Florida climate but unfortunately they have fairly weak branches that won't hold decorations very well. Firs, spruces, and Scotch pines, on the other hand, usually have very firm branches.

Since firs, spruces and Scotch pines don't grow naturally in Florida, they have to import them from northern states and consequently usually cost a lot more than either white pines or cedars. In addition to lower price, Florida grown trees have another advantage. If you can get living trees balled and burlap, they can be added to the landscape after the Christmas season is over.

Start your Christmas tree shopping early, so you will have the best selection of the healthiest trees available in your area. Remember to look for a tree with good color, a sticky, sappy stump, and with sturdy branches that hold their needles well. Once you find the tree you want, it is important to care for it properly so that it will last throughout the holidays.

Anxious Bride-Elect Sings Wedding Blues

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and my fiance is 21. I'll call him "Leon." We've been engaged for two years, but we never set a wedding date because Leon wanted to pay off his motorcycle, van and boat first.

Well, in the two years we've been engaged, I've had two abortions, and I just found out I'm pregnant again. I honestly don't know how this keeps happening, Abby. I've been on the pill for two years and I hardly ever forget to take it. Leon never uses any protection because it's against his religion.

He wants me to get another abortion, but this time I think we'd better keep the baby and get married. I've always wanted a pretty church wedding. My parents promised me one, but I'm afraid if I tell them I'm pregnant, I won't get the wedding. Also, the kind of wedding I want will take four or five months to plan, and I'll be showing by then. Please tell me what to do.

IN LOVE IN TAMPA

DEAR IN LOVE: Tell your parents you are pregnant and want to be married as soon as possible. Forgo the kind of wedding that will take four or five months to plan. There's no reason why your wedding can't be both pretty and prompt. And if it's against Leon's religion to use birth control, tell him to use self-control.

DEAR ABBY: Please, settle this long-standing dispute between my daughter-in-law and me. I say that when we are out for dinner and I am the host and the bill comes to the table, the guests should engage in polite conversation and show no interest in the check.

My daughter-in-law not only insists on knowing how much the bill is, she offers her unsolicited opinion on how much the tip should be!

Please print your answer. I want to show it to her.

STORMY IN SUNLAND, CALIF.

DEAR STORMY: The amount of the bill and the size of the tip should be the exclusive concern of the host or hostess. Your daughter-in-law should contribute her opinion only if she is going to contribute to the bill.

DEAR ABBY: I just returned from picking up my 9-year-old son at school, and I am at the end of my rope.

This is the fourth time in as many days that "Johnny's" teacher called and asked me to pick up Johnny because he had wet his pants. Today she told me that unless something is done about this I will have to take him out of school.

Johnny stopped wetting his bed when he was 4, but he has not as yet achieved consistent daytime dryness. Sometimes he will be fine for weeks, then for no apparent reason he starts to wet his pants again. It doesn't matter if he's in school or on vacation, he still wets his pants.

I've had him to a pediatrician, then to a urologist, and neither doctor could find anything physically wrong, so I took him to a child psychologist. She said, "Ignore it and don't make an issue of it; in time the boy will outgrow it."

This is very hard to ignore, Abby. Now what?

END OF ROPE

DEAR END: Take the psychologist's advice, then ask her to write (or telephone) Johnny's teacher enlisting her patience and cooperation.

To expel the boy from school for this reason would only compound his problem. In the meantime, buy him some disposable, absorbent, diaper-type underpants with plastic linings. Your urologist can tell you where to get them.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HAVING PROBLEMS IN PALM BEACH: Sex therapy is in. Faking satisfaction is out.

DEAR ABBY: Don't change and don't apologize!

The 20th Convention of the National Association of Parliamentarians in San Francisco passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, parliamentary law has a language all of its own; and whereas, in olden times the one presiding was the only person provided with a chair, while others sat on benches, thence he was called the Chairman; and whereas, since time immemorial the term 'Mister Chairman' or 'Madam Chairman' has always been employed to differentiate between sexes; and whereas, further effort toward sex differentiation is redundant and contrived; now therefore be it resolved that organizations and parliamentarians of the National Association of Parliamentarians must use the term Chairman instead of 'Chairperson,' and be it resolved that all members of the National Association of Parliamentarians should habitually stress the principle that the word Chairman belongs to the title of the office the same as the title of President or secretary."

Abby, a person should not be more concerned with his or her sex than the position held. Besides, it sounds contrived and unprofessional.

Just thought you'd like to know.

MARLISSA BANNISTER, WESTERFIELD, OHIO

DEAR MARLISSA: I would indeed. The resolution gets my vote.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Free RSVP Shopping Spree

Nearly 600 children from five north Seminole County schools and four Head Start programs had a field day shopping for their families at the tenth annual Christmas Store provided by the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) of Seminole County.

Between 9 a.m. and noon the children had a field day at this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity held Monday through today at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce building.

According to Joan Madison, RSVP director, RSVP volunteers, all over 60, have been working all year making lovely hand-crafted items for this special occasion. The children had hundreds of gift items from which to make selections.

There were wooden toys and games, crocheted and knitted items, margarine bowls converted into little girls purses, coffee can banks, stuffed animals and countless other items.

The RSVP volunteers contributed 72,000 hours of service to Seminole County last year in various areas. But the Christmas store is always special. "Their resourcefulness is astounding," Mrs. Madison said.

Edna Christenson, a RSVP volunteer from Winter Springs, clowns around with a young shopper, Warren Hooks, 4, from the Midway Head Start. Mrs. Christenson joins other RSVP volunteers who gave 72,000 hours of service to Seminole County last year. These volunteers spent the entire year making items for the Christmas store.

Excessive Fouls Cost Lake Mary

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

Thou shalt not foul — in excess.
Lake Mary's Lady Rams not only broke, but shattered that basketball commandment Thursday night by committing 35 fouls and opening the door for Lake Howell's Lady Silver Hawks to claim a 66-60 victory in Five Star Conference play at Lake Howell High.

The Lady Hawks, 8-1 overall and 2-0 in the Five Star Conference, went to the free throw line 49 times Thursday and made 24 of them, including 7 of 9 in the final two minutes of the game to ice the victory. Lake Mary fell to 1-2 overall and 0-2 in the conference.

"We fouled our way out of the ballgame," Lake Mary coach Bill Moore said. "We didn't do a bad job defensively on them, but we just fouled too much."

Tammy Johnson poured in a game-high 21 points, including 11 of 14 from the charity stripe, and came up with 11 steals to lead the way for the Lady Hawks, who have now won seven in a row. Mary Johnson added 13 for Lake Howell. Janene Brown tossed in 10 points and grabbed 13 rebounds and Elizabeth Dietrich and Christy Scott added eight points apiece for the Lady Hawks.

"We did a good job on the boards against Lake Mary's height," Lake Howell coach Dennis Codrey said. "It was anybody's ballgame, but we were fortunate that the ball dropped for us."

Lake Mary was in foul trouble after the first four minutes of the first quarter as Lake Howell went into the penalty situation with 3:55 left in the quarter. Lake Howell built an early 12-6 lead, but Lake Mary tied the score at 14-14 by the end of the quarter.

The Lady Rams continued to pile up the fouls in the second quarter as starters Laura Glass and Michelle Swartz both picked up their third fouls and substitute Courtney Hall also picked up four fouls. Although Lake Mary was faced with foul trouble early in the first half, the Lady Rams' bench came through. Andrea Fenning, Patterson and Hall all filled in well and helped Lake Mary build a seven-point lead, 34-27, with 1:52 left until halftime.

Girls Basketball

In the last two minutes of the half though, Lake Mary picked up seven fouls, enabling Lake Howell to come back to tie the score at 34-34 at halftime.

It was free throws that kept Lake Howell close in the first half. The Lady Hawks made 14 of 31 free throws in the first half compared to 6 of 11 for the Lady Rams.

Lake Mary's first casualty of the night came in the third quarter as Swartz was whistled for her fifth foul. Swartz, usually depended on for outside shooting, did not score Thursday night. Still, the inside work of Laura Glass and the outside shooting of Kim Averill and Fenning enabled the Lady Rams to stay in the game and they went into the fourth quarter down by just three, 49-46.

The Rams' Lisa Gregory pumped in the first two baskets of the fourth quarter to give Lake Mary a 50-49 lead, the Lady Rams' last lead of the night.

Tammy Johnson and Brown both played exceptionally well in crucial situations in the fourth quarter. Johnson came up with her 10th steal of the night and waltzed in for a layup to put the Lady Hawks ahead for good, 51-50.

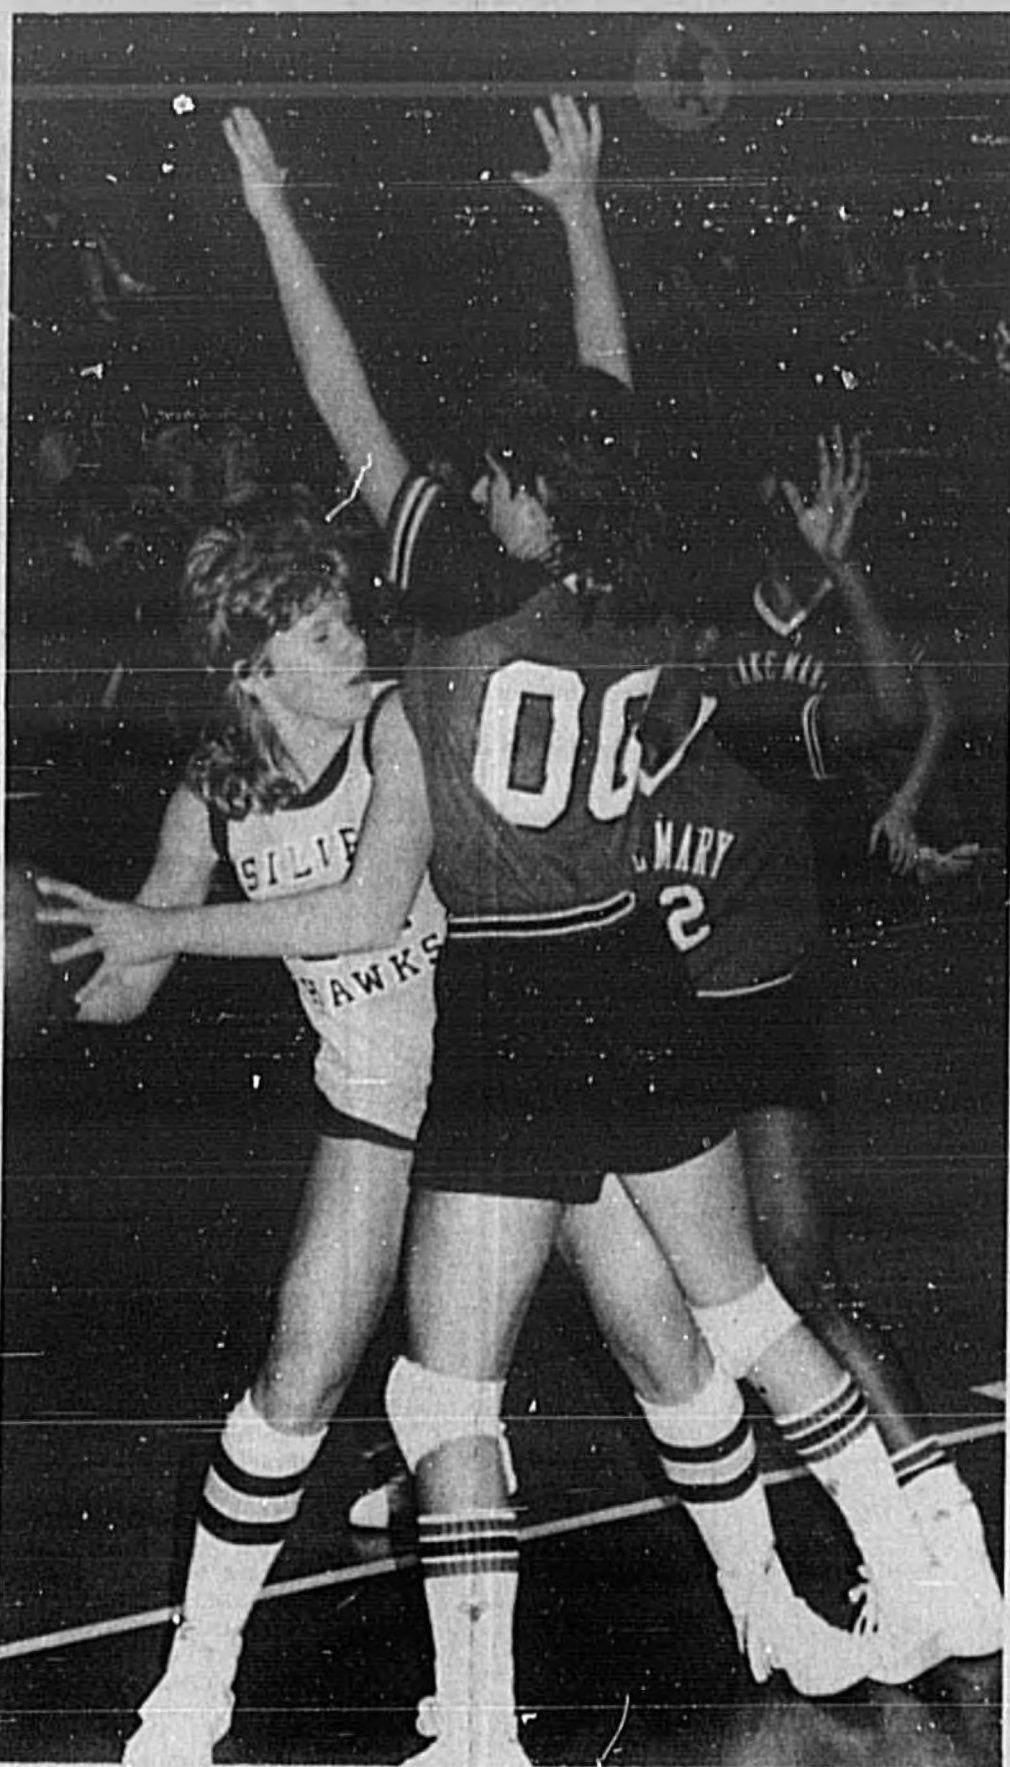

Brown then scored six straight points to increase the Lady Hawks' lead to 57-52 with 2:45 remaining. Lake Mary cut it back to three points, 61-58, with 50 seconds remaining and had a chance to pull within one but missed out on the opportunity.

Lake Howell then hit five of six free throws in the last 45 seconds to seal the victory.

Averill was the high scorer for the Lady Rams with 14 points followed by Peggy Glass and Fenning with 11 each and Gregory and Laura Glass tossed in eight each. Laura Glass and Courtney Hall had eight rebounds apiece for Lake Mary.

Lady Seminoles Mash Mainland

The way Seminole coach Ron Merthie sees it, when you have three players who can wear out the basket, one of them should be on every time you play. Thursday night, however, three became five.

Five Lady Seminoles scored in double figures as the Tribe throttled Daytona Beach Mainland, 73-53, in Five Star Conference basketball action at Seminole High School.

Deidre Hillery led the way with 16 points and 14 rebounds, the seventh straight time consistent 6-2 senior has been in double figures in scoring and rebounding. Guards Maxine Campbell and Mona Benton each threw in 14 points while Andell Smith and Genene Stallworth each added 10 apiece.

Hillery scored slowly, scoring just three points in the first half. "She wasn't running," said Merthie. "She wasn't pushing herself."

The push, though, came in the third quarter when Hillery went inside for five buckets as the Seminoles broke open a tight game with a 23-13 spurt to take a commanding 57-42 advantage into the final eight minutes.

"We started pulling away in the third quarter," said Merthie about his 'Noles who have won six games in seven outings. "We got untracked in the second half defensively, and that was the difference."

With Campbell and Benton applying the pressure, Seminole forced Mainland into several turnovers during the third quarter. Hillery and reserve forward Beatrice Smith (nine rebounds) swept the backboards and started the torrid Seminole fastbreak.

Seminole is 3-0 in the Five Star and plays Lyman at Milwee Middle School Tuesday night. The Tribe holds a half game lead over Lake Howell in the conference standings.

American League Names Brown New President

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Dr. Bobby Brown was named the sixth president of the American League Thursday, replacing Lee MacPhail and returning to a career in baseball that he left in 1954 after eight seasons with the Yankees.

One of the Southwest's leading cardiologists, Brown said he decided to leave his lucrative medical practice in Fort Worth, Texas, because of the increasing pressures of being a heart surgeon.

"The workload is heavy and the tension is heavy. You face the worst type of catastrophic casualties," said Brown. "I reached a point in life where I asked how long could I effectively do this."

It was also announced that Robert Fishel, who served under MacPhail, would become executive vice president of the league.

Brown will make his offices as American League president in New York, coming back to a city where he made his mark in baseball, primarily as a third baseman for the Yankees from 1946 to 1954.

Baseball

Brown, asked whether MacPhail had briefed him on how difficult a job it was satisfying all the American League owners at times, said, "I realize I'm not coming into a tension-free position."

The 59-year-old cardiologist said he plans to New York his home after his patients in Texas are properly referred. "I have to make sure my patients are taken care of before I settle into the job as league president," he said.

Nicknamed the "Golden Boy" during his Yankees career, Brown has endured a tug of war between sports and medicine his entire adult life.

While a Yankee player he used his spare time to complete his medical studies and finish an internship at Southern Pacific Hospital in San Francisco.

After leaving the Yankees, Brown became a resident physician at City and County Hospital in San Francisco. He established his practice in Fort Worth a few years later.

The president of the Texas Rangers from May 1, 1974, to Nov. 1, 1974, Brown resigned in order to give more time to his cardiology practice, although he stayed on as a member of the Rangers' Board of Directors through 1980.

Brown was first signed by the Yankees in 1946 and briefly farmed out to their Newark team. It was in the 1947 World Series, during his first full season with the Yankees, that Brown made his mark.

After a mediocre season, Brown was called in four times to pinch-hit during the series. He was walked once and hit two doubles and a single for a 1.000 average — establishing a World Series record for pinch-hitters and setting the stage for the Yankee victory.

At the time his performance was called "the most remarkable pinch-hitting job in the entire history of the post-season classic."

Brown continued his solid performances in the World Series. He averaged .500 in the 1949 classic and .333 and .357 in '50 and '51 respectively, and had a career batting average of .279.

He admitted Thursday that he was one of the people interviewed for the commissioner's job.

"I was interviewed twice," he said. "When they interviewed me to talk to the Search Committee about the commissioner's position, it finally evolved that they suggested this job to me."

Baseball Gets Doctor, Kuhn Gets Extension

Baseball

Despite reports to the contrary, Selig insisted that no candidates had been offered the job as commissioner, although he admitted that about a dozen had been interviewed.

"This job has been offered to no one, no one," said Selig. "Nobody has withdrawn, nobody has been offered the job and I can't believe or imagine where anybody got that kind of garbage. Now I mean that with every fiber of my body."

Peter Ueberroth, chairman of the Los Angeles Olympic Committee, and James Baker, White House Chief of Staff, were considered the leading candidates for the job but Ueberroth removed his name from consideration Thursday. The White House also maintains that Baker isn't going to take the job either.

On the trading front Thursday, the New York Yankees were the most active team. The Yankees acquired shortstop Tim Lincecum from the California Angels for pitcher Curt Kaufman then sent first baseman Steve Balboni and pitcher Roger Erickson to the Kansas City Royals for pitcher Mike Armstrong and minor league catcher Duane Dewey.

Of that group, Balboni, 26, bears close watching. He has excellent power and has had some impressive home run seasons in the minor leagues. However, he never really got a chance to prove himself with

Bowden Barks On Allen Against North Carolina

ATLANTA (UPI) — Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden says the Dec. 30 Peach Bowl will match his "ooh-ah" offense against the more deliberate, methodical attack of North Carolina, and he insists that could be trouble for his Seminoles.

"I don't like this but we depend upon the big play," Bowden told a news conference Thursday which he attended along with Tar Heel Coach Dick Crum. "We depend on somebody breaking something. That's kind of shaky. Dick's team is more methodical, more prescribed, and that's harder to stop."

"Ours is 'ooh-ah' football," he joked. "Ooh, that's pretty. Ah, that's too bad."

The coaches admitted a lot could hinge on how Florida State's 1,000-yard tailback can hold his own against a North Carolina duo who each gained over 1,000 yards.

All-America Greg Allen, a junior, ran for 1,134 yards and 13 touchdowns for the frequently air-minded Seminoles, while senior Tyrone Anthony (1,063) and junior Ethan Horton (1,107) teamed for 2,170 yards and 15 TDs for the Tar Heels.

"Greg got injured in about our third game and our miseries started about then, but he's healthy now," said Bowden.

The Seminoles also have played Allen some at fullback because of injuries at that position. "We are probably wearing him too thin," Bowden admitted.

Crum doesn't have that problem since he's blessed with a pair of talented runners in Anthony and Horton. His only problem is how best to utilize the pair.

"Toward the end of the season, we would start Anthony and bring Horton on later," said Crum. "Horton is 6-4 and 225 and in the late going when the weather would start to get tired, he could make a dent on you."

Both teams will be trying to bounce back from late-season disappointments. North Carolina was cruising along 7-0 before losing three games in a row to Maryland, Clemson and Virginia. The Tar Heels then beat Duke 34-27 in the season finale.

Florida State was 6-4 going into the final game last week with arch-rival Florida but was blown out 53-14.

"I've got to reseed my team some confidence," said Bowden. "It's shattered."

But he noted the Seminoles are "a whole lot better than our record. We lost by one point to Miami (17-16), one point to Pittsburgh (17-16), three to Auburn (27-24) and six to Tulane (34-28) in a game we should have won. I've never had a team that lost so many close games."

"I can explain those losses to the alumni. But when you get beat like we did last week, I can't explain those."

Crum will be trying to extend his perfect bowl record as a coach. His Miami of Ohio teams won two Tangerine Bowls and North Carolina will be looking for its fifth straight bowl victory under his leadership.

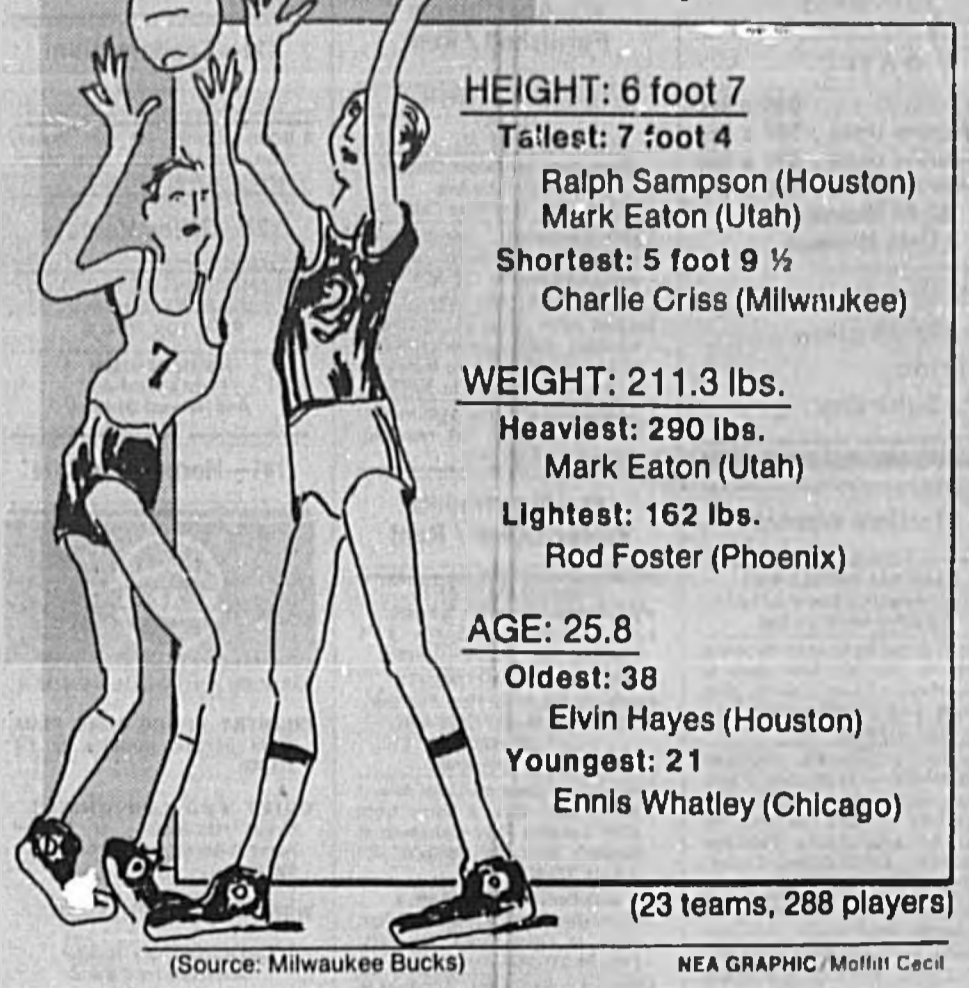

"We take the approach that bowls are a reward for a good season," said Crum. "The kids are going to work hard but we follow the philosophy that we are going to have a good time."

"I don't know the secret to getting them ready. We prepare like we always do. But we're not going to come to Atlanta and work them twice a day."

Both coaches are hoping their No. 1 quarterbacks will be healthy.

Reds Come Up Empty After Christmas Giveaway

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Christmas is coming.

Check that. It's already here. You don't believe that? Then check this:

The ballclubs are giving away players, and I mean top-flight ones, for practically nothing simply to avoid paying them some of the astronomically inflated salaries the owners agreed to in the first place.

Perfect examples to illustrate this almost ludicrous turn of events are Dusty Baker, Jim Sundberg, Ray Burris and Dave Parker, all of whom have been or still are involved in various transactions which have already changed or very likely will soon change their affiliations. Bill Buckner and Bruce Sutter, who haven't been traded yet but are being shopped around by their respective clubs, and Bill Caudill, who was dealt three weeks ago, fall into the same general category.

Baker, Sundberg and Burris all were traded by their teams to other ones Thursday while Parker signed a two-year contract with Cincinnati after playing out his contract with Pittsburgh and going through the re-entry draft.

Sports Parade

Let's take the case of Baker first. His contract with the Dodgers calls for better than $800,000 a year and still has two years to go but they sent him to the Oakland A's for two minor league prospects. The deal still has a few kinks to be ironed out before it becomes official but on the face of it I ask you, doesn't it sound like some kind of giveaway? Bear in mind, it was only two years ago that the right-handed hitting Dodgers left fielder drove in 97 runs and hit 15 home runs for them and although he tailed off to .260 this year, does it strike you that his value has suddenly depreciated to the point where he's not worth more

Magic-less Lakers Crush Kansas City

Even without Magic, the Los Angeles Lakers have no intentions of disappearing from the top of the NBA Pacific Division.

The Lakers proved how well they have compensated for guard Magic Johnson, out with a dislocated finger, by crushing the Kansas City Kings 129-106 Thursday night.

Jamaal Wilkes and Mike McGee each had 22 points and both scored eight points during a 33-13 third-quarter blitz that broke the game open.

"I'm glad Magic was not here. We would have been beaten by 60," Kings coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "They have adjusted."

"When you lose a top player, you have to rise to the occasion and we've done that," Lakers coach Pat Riley said.

The Lakers, who also got 20 points apiece from James Worthy and Bob McAdoo, continued their dominance over the Kings at the Los Angeles Forum. Kansas City last won a game in Los Angeles in November of 1974.

Wilkes did not play in the final period, nor did Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who finished with 16 points. Larry Drew led Kansas City with 22 points, but the Kings' leading scorer, Eddie Johnson, was limited to 10 points, his season low.

The victory followed a 21-point Los Angeles win over San Diego Sunday night. The Lakers are 2-0 since Johnson went on the injured list with a dislocated finger on his right hand.

"We got beat really good" Kansas City's Billy Knight said. "They're a spurting-type team. When they put those great spurts together, they're hard to stop."

Suns 120, Knicks 97

At Phoenix, Ariz., Walter Davis scored 27 points with nine assists and Maurice Lucas added 25 points and eight rebounds to lead Phoenix. Davis was returning after a two-game absence for the birth of his first child. Bernard King led the Knicks with 21, with 14 coming in the first quarter.

Warriors 130, Pistons 129

At Oakland, Calif., Lester Conner stole the ball from Isiah Thomas at half-court and drove for a basket with 20 seconds to go to lift Golden State. With the Warriors ahead 128-127. A last-second basket by Detroit's Cliff Levingston was not enough for the Pistons.

than merely two minor leaguers?

"It isn't that we don't like Baker," Al Campanis, the Dodgers' general manager, tried to rationalize the deal. "It's just that we're planning for the future. The old principle is that you trade a player a year too soon rather than a year too late. We've committed ourselves toward going with youth. But this whole thing still may fall through." Campanis added, referring to the already agreed-upon deal with the A's, "and we may yet get Baker back to play left field for us next year."

No matter how you slice that, it still comes out to the Dodgers practically giving up the 34-year-old Baker for very little.

Sundberg is next. His contract with the Texas Rangers could easily have been the most complicated one in baseball history. It escalated all the way up to the $800,000 range and even called for a $250,000 buyout if he was traded. It was so complicated, it even caused a deal for Sundberg between the Rangers and Dodgers to be canceled after it already had been agreed upon in Honolulu a year ago.

Sundberg went to the Milwaukee Brewers Thursday for catcher Ned Yost and left-handed pitcher Dan Scarpetta. If you never heard of Scarpetta before, that's because he was busy compiling a far-from-eye-opening 11-11 record with Pikeville, Ky., and Beloit, Wis., in the far-down minors the past two years.

Granted, Sundberg, a defensive marvel, didn't set any records on fire with his .201 batting average, his 28 RBI and his two homers for the Rangers this year.

It was left to the Reds, however, to make the biggest gift of all. They gave away Christmas. Catcher Steve Christmas, that is, to the White Sox for infielder Fran Mullins on the same day the Mariners sent Caudill to the A's. You wanna hear something else? After they got Mullins from the White Sox, the Reds placed Mullins on their Indianapolis roster, from which he was drafted by the Giants last Monday. So in the end, the Reds wound up with nothing for giving away Christmas and maybe that serves them right.

Fulce, Henderson Lead Tribe Frosh To 6th Straight

Sean Fulce and Rod Henderson each tossed in 14 points as the Seminole freshman basketball team won its sixth straight game with a 50-42 victory over Lyman Thursday night at Milwee Middle School.

Fulce, Henderson and Jerry Parker, who scored 13 points, helped the Tribe to a 20-14 halftime lead. Seminole then outscored Lyman, 32-26, in the second half to cement the victory.

Todd Kriebbe (5), Henry Grooms (4), James Dennard (4) and Antoine Cockerhan (1) closed out the scoring for Coach Bill Klein's cagers, who take on Oviedo Monday at Seminole High School.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY
DECEMBER 10, 1983

The coming year looks very promising for you, particularly if you do things in accord with your highest ideals. To be successful, maintain your standards.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Important points can be driven home today if you sprinkle your presentation with small touches of theatrics. Be a bit dramatic. Order now: The New Matchmaker wheel and booklet, which reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your material prospects look encouraging today and ways should be open to add to your resources, yet how things come about may be a trifle mysterious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You could be in for a pleasant surprise today when someone whom you felt didn't think too much of you goes out of his way to help you achieve your goal.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not be reluctant to let others help you today, especially if they are persons you've helped in the past. Recall the joy you had in doing.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Others can be swayed to your way of thinking today, not through hard argument but by using your charm and wit. Soften your presentation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is a likelihood you'll achieve something today that will give you a great deal of personal pride and satisfaction, yet it may remain secret.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Coworkers will rally to your support today, provided they understand your objectives. Spell out what you hope to accomplish—and why.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Two people with whom you'll have similar involvements today are likely to treat you advantageously, yet each will be unknown to the other.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In your recreational activities today, try to select those that require teammates instead of individual competition. You'll do better with partners.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may be in the mood to busy yourself around home today. However, for pleasing results, find tasks that are more like a hobby than work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your possibilities for personal gains will be considerably enhanced today if you don't take yourself or the relevant situations too seriously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Concerns you've had relating to a matter affecting your material security should be eradicated today. There's light at the end of the tunnel.

Man Must Exercise To Put On Weight

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am a 27-year-old man, 5-foot-9, and weigh 130 pounds. For the past year, I have been trying to gain weight. I "eat like a horse," but my weight never seems to increase more than five pounds.

I took a non-prescription drug to promote weight gain, but I find that the increased appetite lasts only a few days.

I took tests to see if anything was wrong with my system, but they were negative. My doctor says I am one of those people who will always be thin and he refuses to help in this situation (he is constantly dieting himself). I am becoming quite self-conscious about being thin and would like to put on 10 or 20 pounds. Is there anything you can suggest?

DEAR READER—A lot of young men of your height do not weigh a lot more than you do. If you gained weight simply by eating more calories, you would be fat, and that would not be good for your health.

You probably want to develop more muscle. The key to that is the right kind of exercise along with a proper diet.

The most common mistake is trying to do too much. To develop a muscle, it should be worked one day to stimulate it and rested the next day to permit growth. Recent studies show that muscle cannot synthesize new protein when it is being worked. So if you work your muscles a lot every day, they will not grow.

You need to concentrate on strength training rather than endurance exercises while you are trying to increase your muscle size. I used to recommend that you do strength exercises one day and endurance exercises the next, but in view of new studies, I think it is best to concentrate on strength exercises on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. After you have developed your muscles, you can add endurance exercises.

You also need to consume more calories than your body uses with your exercise program. About 100 grams of good-quality protein in your diet should be enough to support your muscle growth.

DEAR DR. LAMB—Can you tell me how many calories are needed by a 34-year-old man who runs three miles a day, is 5-foot-11 and weighs 150 pounds? He eats very little, misses meals, falls prey to virus infections and frequently has fevers of 102. He is a prime candidate for anorexia due to his misunderstanding of a runner's proper diet and calorie intake.

DEAR READER—There are some reports of runners at their peak of performance who were quite lean and died unexpectedly. The possibility is that an inadequate intake of calories for their needs as a runner may have led to fatal heart irregularities while resting. It is the same problem we see in starvation for any reason.

The man you speak of probably uses about 100 calories a mile more than he would if he were sitting still, or 300 calories a day. The range of calories required for a man of this age, height and weight is from 2,300 to 3,100 calories a day, so he probably needs around 3,000 calories a day.

But how many calories a person needs is judged on the basis of body fat, symptoms such as fatigue and indications of general good health, not just calories.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

WIN AT BRIDGE

West opens the four of spades. East plays the queen, and if South wins with his king, he is going to come up one short for his three no-trump. He will lose the diamond finesse and four spade tricks.

On the other hand, South has a nice safety play to insure success. He lets East's queen hold that first spade. East can do no better than to lead his other spade.

West takes his ace. He might never get it if he ducks, and for want of anything better to do West clears the spade suit.

Now South leads his queen of diamonds. East takes his king, but now South has nine winners and can afford to try the club finesse in an effort to come to 10.

A South player who chucked the hand by winning the first trick might explain that he was going after everything that was not nalled down. North might reply that game was nalled down if South hadn't gone tilting at windmills.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

Here is a teacher's hand for intermediate pupils, or maybe for beginners. South has a standard 16-point no-trump, and with a balanced 13 points North has an automatic raise to game.

Log Homes Are Coming Back In Style

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Living in a log home is a romantic fantasy for many Americans, but for Jeff Welker and his wife, Linda, their childhood dream has become a reality.

For Jeff and Linda, this Christmas will be a very special one. Six weeks ago, they moved into their dream home and now are looking forward to their first Christmas together in it and the arrival of their first baby in less than two months.

Jeff was his own general contractor and they did much of the actual work on their log home themselves.

This do-it-yourself attitude saved them about $15,000 on their $46,000 house. "We put several plans together and scaled it down to what we could afford," Jeff said. They hired someone to pour a concrete slab for the foundation and put up the treated cypress log walls, secured with 8-inch spikes and weather stripping, and rafters.

The Welkers did all the painting and staining and paneled the upper half of their living room with cedar boards which they sanded, gave a coat of polyurethane and put in place.

But for a while it began to look like they would never get finished. "We kept asking, 'When will we get in? We will be building it the rest of our lives and never be living in it!' they said. "We aren't sure we'd do it again if we had it to do over again."

They are still working on the finishing details, but they are finding living in a log home is all they had hoped, both in energy savings and esthetics.

They had the plans for their two-story log home even before Jeff and the former Linda Wheel, a University of Central Florida senior, were married in January.

"We never even considered building any other kind of a house," they said. Construction began nine months ago on property they obtained from Linda's mother on her rural estate off County Road 46-A west of Sanford. However, they said they had not planned on starting their family quite so soon. Completing the house became a race with the stork.

The lot is located on the shore of a small lake and the rustic structure is snuggled under tall pines and live oaks dripping with Spanish moss.

The 1,300-square-foot structure has two bedrooms, two baths, kitchen, combination dining-living room with cathedral ceiling and large wooden cross on the wall above the fireplace.

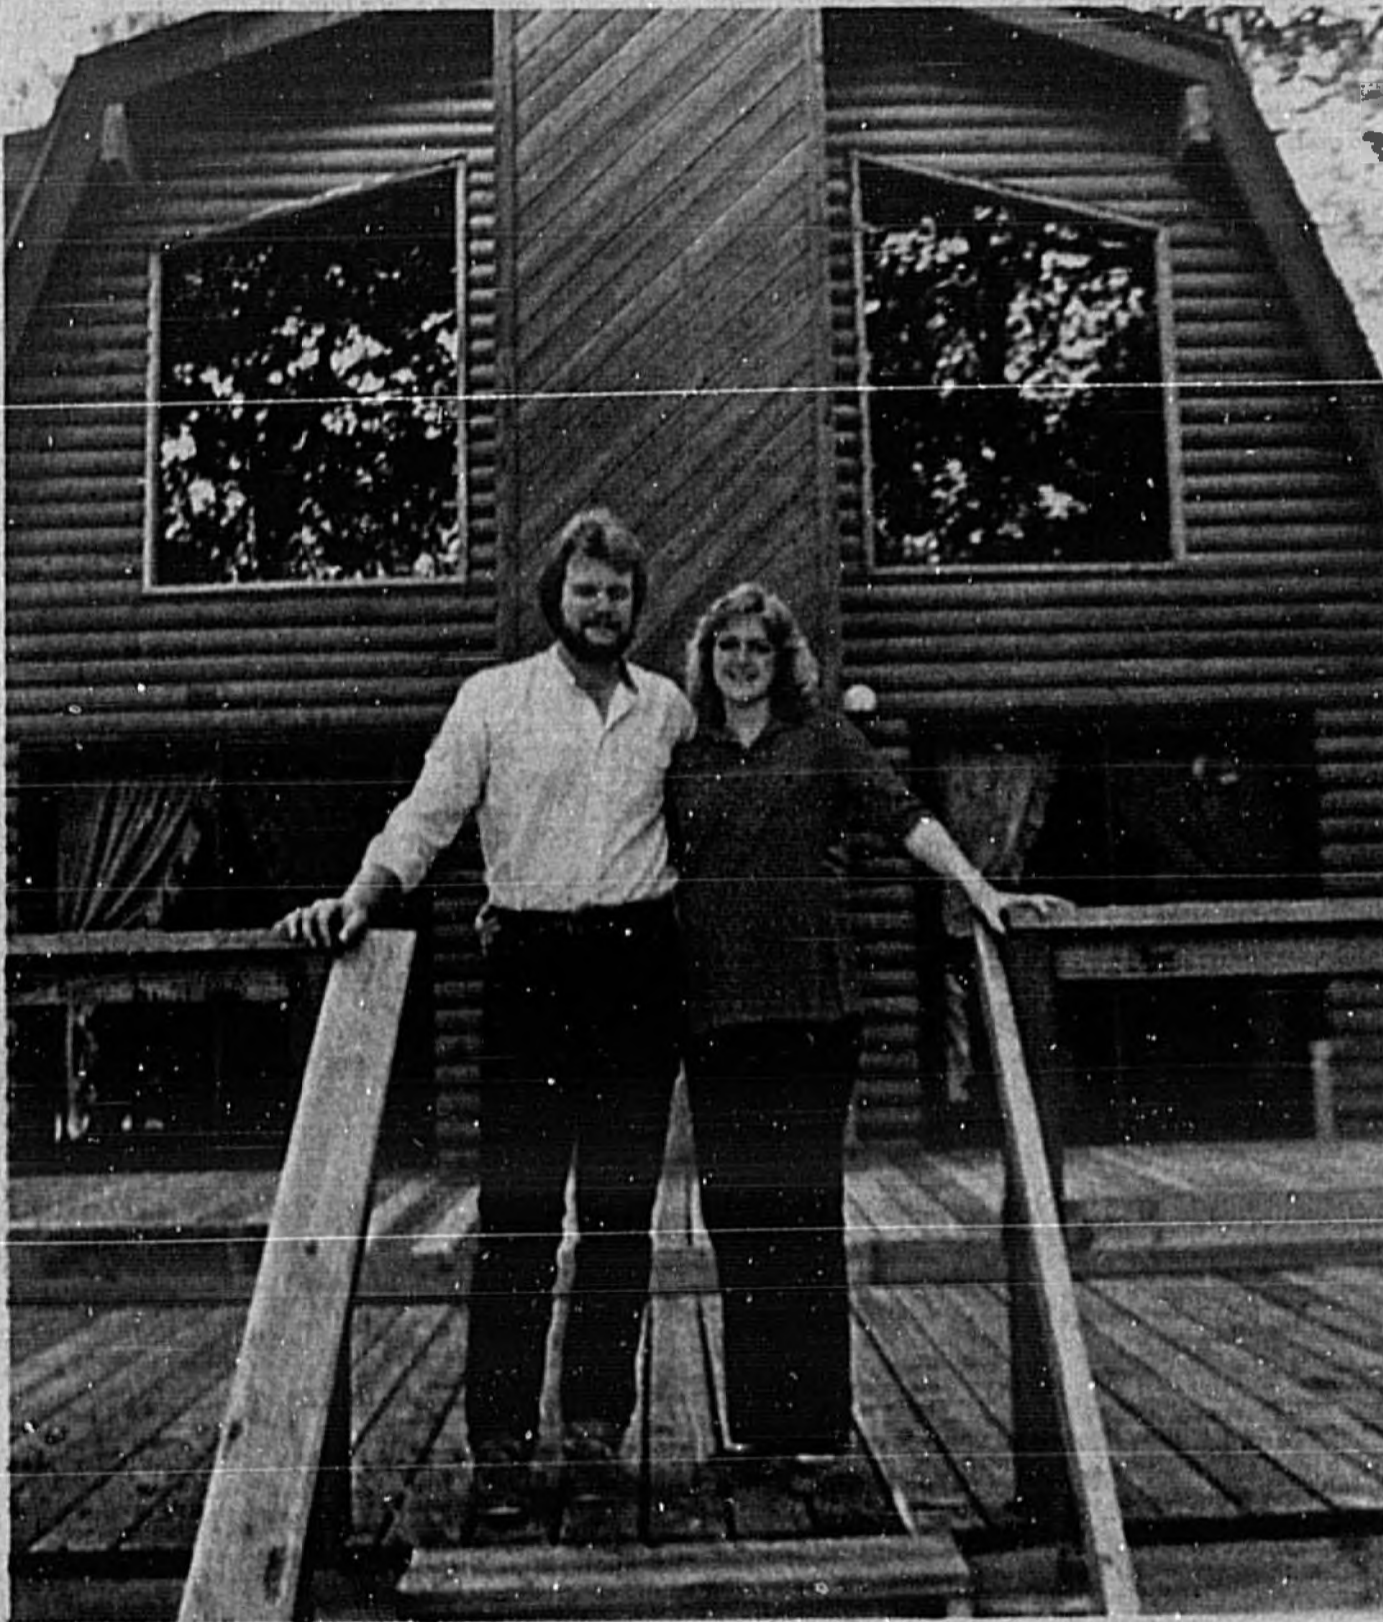

Jeff, youth director at the Apopka Assembly of God, formerly worked in the nursery business, but changed jobs in the midst of the building project. This meant working nights and what time they had on weekends.

He said he had painted a little, but had no experience in construction. It took a lot of determination and help from their church friends, including a former VA inspector and building contractor who came by to check things over.

They also got a lot of assistance from Jerry Brown of Log Structures of the South, whose company turns out materials for log homes at the Port of Sanford, said he will either assist the owner-builder or the contractor or do the building up to the point of turning over the key.

However, from the practical point of view, he doesn't encourage buyers to undertake doing all the building themselves. "Log homes are not a do-it-yourself project any more than a concrete block or brick home would be, even though there has been a lot of propaganda to that effect," Brown said.

In the building business for 25 years, Brown began specializing in log homes eight years ago.

Brown said there are about 150 of his log homes around Central Florida. That number will doubtless increase, he said, as log homes are becoming extremely popular.

What kind of people are building log homes? Brown said:

"They are generally financially secure, independent, and self-sufficient people of all ages. They range from the late 20s to the 60s. Most young folks can't afford the land to build on and end up living in an FHA house or in a zero lotline home. They don't want to be in a subdivision development, but would rather be out in the country. They are most interested in the warmth and beauty of solid wood and conserving power. Most log home owners are heating or cooling for 30 percent less than conventional housing."

Some act as their own general contractor and oversee the job, while others don't have the time to

Who Says Money Can't Buy Happiness?

By David Handler

Money buys happiness on Lottery. According to this ABC show, money is what life is all about. If you have it, you can be happy. If you don't have it, well, tough cookies, baby.

Lottery is Madison Avenue's own version of Fantasy Island. If you don't happen to agree with its philosophy of life, you'll probably find the show revolting. If you do happen to agree, then take it. It's yours.

The Intersweep Lottery is one of those deals where anybody can buy a ticket for a buck and cling to a one in a million shot at winning $3 million. "The American dream in living color" is how Patrick Sean Flaherty puts it.

Flaherty (Ben Murphy) is the cheery, dimpled man from Intersweep. He hands out the money. Each week he goes to a new city and lays millions on a few lucky winners, who scream and squeal and generally go berserk. We then follow what happens to them after they win.

"May this good fortune bring you everything you want," he says. And it does. The sugary little Lottery morality plays all have happy endings. Everybody gets what they deserve — good guys and bad guys, too. The show even has little American Graffiti-style "one year later" epilogues.

Flaherty doesn't travel alone. His companion from Minneapolis to New York City to Butte is Eric Rush (Marshall Colt) of the Internal Revenue Service. He is there to put the bite on the winners. "Part of that dream," he points out, "is paying the taxes on it."

Rush is also there to do cutesy Butch and Sundance patter with Flaherty. Their rapport is supposed to glue the vignettes together. It doesn't.

Colt is a tall, blond stiff. As for Murphy, I know this will come as a big blow to him, but he doesn't look or perform anything like Paul Newman. And what's with the Irish accent?

Like I said, money buys happiness on Lottery. Take the small grocer with the heart of gold, the immigrant who's about to see his dream shattered by a big chain that's going in across the street.

When he wins the lottery, he can afford to slash prices 15 percent below his competitor's and trigger a price war. He ends up forcing a confrontation with the head of the chain, who turns out to be from the same little Greek village. Good triumphs.

Often, there are complications over ownership of the prized winning ticket. One winner is in the process of betting it in a neighborhood poker game when Flaherty and Rush arrive.

Another has bought it with his ex-wife, whose signature is required before the funds can be released.

She flies into town to sign on the dotted line the same weekend her ex-husband is about to get married. Sure enough, sharing all of that money rekindles old passions and he leaves his fiancée on the altar to run off to Katmandu with his first wife and write the great American novel.

One year later, we're told, he publishes the novel, titled — now don't spit up — Painless Love.

The main thing is, everything works out right if you're a good person. The conniving heirs of an 80-year-old lottery winner go penniless when they decide to speed things up by bumping off the codger. Flaherty won't give them the money.

But the black choir director who keeps kids off the street and whose husband just lost his job — that's a different story. "One year later," we're told, "Mabel moves to Beverly Hills and buys when the spirit says buy."

Buy, buy, buy. That's the point of this show. Actually, Lottery isn't a show. It's a commercial for the commercials.

Auction Guts Hollywood Landmark

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Like many a Hollywood legend, Schwab's drugstore wound up as just an empty shell.

Schwab's had been a Sunset Boulevard landmark for more than 50 years, but two months ago Leon Schwab was forced to close and pay his creditors by auctioning off the contents of the place where starlets sat and waited for destiny to call. After a few hours there was nothing left.

"I don't have any hard feelings, I never have," Schwab said Wednesday. "Heck, there was never even a fight in this place."

Some of the bidders came to buy a piece of the Hollywood legend — a soda glass, an ashtray, a stool that may have "propped up a movie star. Others came to make a buck.

Dealers bought knives and forks at 20 cents apiece, booths, pots and pans for resale at a profit. Others, some old timers still clinging to dreams of stardom that faded years ago, bought knickknacks to remind them of better days.

Schultz Enjoys His Role On The Winning 'Team'

By Peter Meade

Although he's part of one of the most popular shows on television, NBC's "The A-Team," Dwight Schultz is not recognized all that often when he's not playing "Howling Mad" Murdock.

"I was standing in a video store in Los Angeles," says Schultz, "and 'The A-Team' was on. It was the first time I'd been in a public place where people were watching, so I stood there. Then the guy next to me said, 'Hey, ever watch this show?'"

If it looks like Schultz and his macho mates are having fun during their Tuesday night romps, it's not acting, because they are.

"The fun comes through, doesn't it?" says Schultz. "But we must have the hardest working crew on television. The stunts are a thrill to watch and the style is now copied a lot on TV."

The story of how Schultz got his "A-Team" role is almost as implausible as any of the series plots. He was playing Lord Byron in a production of "The Keeper" in Philadelphia when he got a request to fly out to California to read for the role of Murdock.

"I was so tired by the time I got out there," says Schultz, "and it was a three-hour audition. I did pretty bad and I felt awful. But they saw a tape I did for NBC two years ago and the casting director was pushing for me. So I got a second chance."

Second chances and second choices make up "The A-Team." James Coburn had turned down the role of Hannibal Smith that George Peppard accepted, the role of Murdock was originally written with James Whitmore Jr. in mind and Dirk Benedict replaced Tim Dunigan after the two-hour pilot. Only Mr. T was a first-choice candidate.

"T is confident and exuberant," says Schultz. "He created his character. The rest of us do what actors do. From an actor's standpoint it's wonderful because of the variety. I can be an Englishman or an Irishman, very serious or very bizarre."

But when fans of "The A-Team" talk — more and more seem to be coming forward each week — it's not Mr. T's golden garb or the acting they talk about.

"The stunts and action are responsible for a large part of the popularity," says Schultz. "Most people don't realize the mixture of the characters is as important as it is. When the four of us walk across the street they say, 'Who would've ever put them together?'"

...Log Homes

do the actual building, he said. Brown said his log structures range in price from $40,000 to $500,000 depending on size. Brown said some unscrupulous dealers have given the log home industry a bad name by taking excessive deposits and not delivering, causing delays or not sending the entire kit. He said one such dealer, who bilked some area residents, is now in prison. Fletcher Parsons, an executive with a Ripley, W.Va., construction company and president of the North American Log Builders Association, said more than one million log homes have been built in the United States in the past 10 years and about 10 percent of all single-family dwellings under construction are log homes.

Is A TV Series Harder Than 'Hamlet'?

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Sometimes there's a tendency to look down on TV. Maybe because it doesn't cost much of anything. It is enjoyable and does steal our evenings away, but generally it is assumed that TV is not in the same artistic class as the theater or even the better feature films.

To that, James Sloyan says, "Boosh."

Sloyan plays Charlie opposite Madeline Kahn on the new ABC series Oh, Madeline. He thinks most viewers don't give television actors enough credit.

"I've acted in features, on Broadway, in soap operas and in TV series," Sloyan says. "And I'm telling you actors on episodic TV shows are far superior to, say, the actors on the Old Vic company in London."

"Look at it logically. Take Richard Burton when he does Hamlet, or any other of the great British actors. To begin with, he's done it many times before. He has seen it performed perhaps a 100 times. He's rehearsed it and rehearsed it for weeks. He's had a chance to see it, to hone his performance, to polish, to perfect.

"Now, on the other hand, take an actor in an episodic TV series. When the actor sees the script for the first time, the ink is still wet. He has never seen it before and has no idea what it is supposed to be like. Then he has to go out and do a 22-minute show with a minimum of rehearsing and make it come to life.

"Now you tell me — which requires the greater skill?"

Sloyan says he has never worked with Miss Kahn before, but it's going well. However, he adds, even if the two of them didn't get along, it wouldn't matter.

"Even if we hated each other," he says, "we're both pros. We come in on time and we do our jobs. But, I must say, it is nice that we happen to like each other."

He thinks that in the first few weeks of the series Miss Kahn has probably spent more time in front of the camera than in her entire movie career.

"Don't forget," he says, "that her roles in Blazing Saddles, Young Frankenstein and even Paper Moon were good roles, but relatively short ones."

WHEN YOU'RE NOBODY, you want to be somebody. But that can work in reverse, sometimes the somebodies yearn to be just a plain nobody.

Cherry Boone O'Neill — one of Pat Boone's daughters — says while growing up her big dream was that someday she could have a listed telephone number. She wanted people to be able to find her name and number in the book.

She eventually got her wish. She and her husband, Dan O'Neill, live in Seattle where they had a listed phone number. But Cherry learned that nothing lives up to the dream. There were too many weird phone calls, so now she has an unlisted phone number, like all the other somebodies.

Beyond being famous for being one of Boone's daughters, Cherry is also known as the daughter who had anorexia. She tells her story in the book Starving for Attention. It is quite frank, and some people have suggested that Pat and Shirley Boone are not too happy with the book and its intimate revelations about the Boone family.

Where To Find Everything About Fan Clubs

DEAR DICK: I am interested in information about joining an official Richard Chamberlain fan club. I hope you can help me. — J.R., Decatur, Mich.

I would never dare to deny anybody named J.R. anything. For you — and for others asking about fan clubs — here is the place to find out: Mrs. Blanche Trinajstic is president of the National Association of Fan Clubs, so she knows which clubs are where. Write to her at 2730 Baltimore Ave., Pueblo, Colo. 81003

DEAR DICK: When my youngest son was in high school, he brought home a book from school about Hollywood stars, because I wouldn't believe him when he said Robert Redford was born in Santa Maria, Calif. I still couldn't believe it when I saw it in print. Is this true, and if so, what's his real name? — J., Santa Maria, Calif.

Don't believe all of it, even if you saw it in print. Redford comes from Santa Monica, Calif. not Santa Maria. For the record, Redford is his real name.

DEAR DICK: I nearly cried when I saw Yul

Ask Dick Kleiner

Bryner was beginning to show his age on a recent Tonight show. Could you print his birthdate? — L.S.M., Cabool, Mo.

Showing one's age is the inevitable product of growing older. Even stars suffer from it. He was born on July 11, 1920.

DEAR DICK: Why doesn't John Wayne's movie Hondo ever get shown on TV? It's the one where he has a big, bad dog that follows him that he calls Dawg. — V.C., Sterling Heights, Mich.

Hondo, big bad dog and all, has been on TV frequently.

DEAR DICK: Can you please tell me who sings the song The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face on the commercials for Oil of Olay. — I.M., Marlon Center, Pa.

It's Roberta Flack, who first made the song popular.

DEAR DICK: I was captivated with the movie, The Black Stallion. Was there more than one horse used to make the movie? — B.L., Gering, Neb.

As usual with a movie dealing with animals, there were several horses used. They always have spares around — look alikes who are specialists. One might run better, one is trained and responds to commands better, one looks better in close-ups. And extras are necessary in case one gets hurt.

IN RESPONSE To recent questions, I had reported not finding current information concerning Jimmy Wakely or Francine Larrimore. M.S. of Joplin, Mo., writes that Wakely died in 1982. D.E.K. of Kalamazoo, Mich., reports Miss Larrimore died in 1975 at the age of 77.

Variety And Price Make It Nice

Try Dining In Sanford: You'll Like It

Sanford is fortunate in having a variety of restaurants available, most of which offer substantial fare at moderate, if not downright, reasonable prices.

Anything from "down home country cookin'" to dishes with a touch of the international can be found in this community. Chicken and pizza are popular favorites, according to most restaurant owners interviewed, but so are steaks, seafood and other upscale dinners.

Breakfast seems to be a big deal at a small price here with many restaurants serving up platters of sausage gravy on biscuits or the more customary eggs, bacon and...

Restaurants which have been featured in this space during the past eight months exhibit a menu aimed at pleasing the local clientele. Keep it simple, as the expression goes, although simple does not mean without planning, care, thought and, of course, much hard work.

The results of the restaurant features in this space have been surprising to the dining place owners in many instances, bringing many new faces through their doors to try their tempting feasts.

A restaurant advertising on this page for 13 consecutive weeks is entitled to a feature article at least once during this period of the contract. No extra charge is made for this promotional story, which is usually handled through an interview with the owner or restaurant manager.

Multiply this by the average response to consistent advertising, and it is not difficult to understand the excellent reception to the whole program.

Cost of the program is minimal, based on a $4.45 per column inch rate for the weekly ad only. The feature appears Thursday in the Herald Advertiser and, again, on Friday in the Evening Herald's Leisure Magazine...in time for the weekend.

People everywhere enjoy going out and Sanford residents are no exception and, more than that, they like reading about their favorite restaurant, or one they have not visited in some time, or, perhaps, the "new eatery on the block."
