Election Day: 4 More Years—Or New Course?

By Laurence McGullian
UPI Political Reporter

As many as 95 million voters decide today whether Ronald Reagan deserves another four years as president or if they should turn the nation's affairs over to Walter Mondale — a decision pollsters say may produce a Reagan landslide that could sweep other Republicans into office.

GOP officials are saying Reagan could take every state for a stunning mandate to go ahead with his "second American revolution," but Democrats contend that Mondale is on the brink of "the greatest upset" in the annals of American politics.

On the last day before the election, Mondale and Reagan stuck close to the themes of their campaigns. Mondale implored voters Monday not to give the administration "a mandate to turn their backs on suffering" while Reagan closed the final race of his career by asking for a second term because, "Our work is not finished."

No matter which ticket wins, it is a historic contest. Democrat Geraldine Ferraro is the first woman to seek the vice presidency on a major party ticket — and Reagan, at 73, hopes again to be the oldest person elected president, a record he set four years ago.

Recent polls showed Mondale trailing by anywhere from 12 to 25 points. Two polls showed Mondale closing the gap but only slightly. It takes 270 of the 538 electoral votes apportioned among the states to nail down the presidency in the election, which experts say is likely to attract up to 95 million voters — or 53.3 percent of the voting age population. Voters faced the typical mix of fall weather today, from snow in the Northwest to fair skies in the plains, clouds and rain in the East. No major storms — a dampener on voter turnout — were forecast.

In Dixville Notch, N.H., 30 voters in an isolated White Mountain hamlet cast the nation's first ballots today and voted almost unanimously to re-elect President Reagan.

Exaggerating a trend polls have predicted for the rest of the country, the voters with only 13 different last names favored Reagan on a 29-1 vote.

Leaning into the second turn of a one-lap race, Kay Thompson, 61, of Lake Mary shows a determination that won her second place in the quarter-mile bike race Monday during the Golden Age Games. The contestants raced by age groups in men's and women's divisions. Ms. Thompson finished with a time of 47:70 seconds.

Games Last Minute Entrant Wins Mini-Marathon

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

A 55-year-old man impressed spectators and contestants Monday during a 10,000-meter run by completing course in 38 minutes and one second.

"It feels good to win a race," said Geoffrey Etherington, 55, of New Haven, Conn., who entered the 10 a.m. race at the last minute. The "mini-marathon" is part of the Golden Age Games triathlon.

The 38-minute time was, however, one of his slowest for the just over 6-mile run, he said. He usually runs the distance in 35 to 36 minutes. He said the heat of the unseasonably warm day, which he was unaccustomed to, slowed him down. While race officials set his time at 38:01, the pace clock recorded a time of 37:50 when he crossed the finish line. Officials could not be contacted to explain the discrepancy.

Other first-place finishers who wended their way with a police escort through several miles of Sanford streets were Cecil Shear Hurst, 64, of Ft. Worth, Tex., first in the 60 to 64 age group with a time of 52:34, and Max Quackenbos, 67, of Stuart, Fla., who took first place in the 65 to 70 age group with a time of 47:22. Etherington has been entered in the 55-59 age group.

The triathlon which includes a half-mile swim at 10 a.m. today and will conclude with a 5-mile bike race, 3:30 p.m. Friday at Seminole High School.

Etherington, owner of Cobia Boats in Sanford, races several times a year and competes in marathons.

He said he arrived in Sanford Sunday on a business trip and was out running Monday morning when he saw a sign advertising a marathon at 10 a.m.

He said he decided to cut his run short and enter the race.

While Etherington said it felt great to lead the entire field.

"It's the first time since high school. It feels as good as it did in high school," he said. He said he was athletically active in college where he played tennis but did not participate in running.

He said he enjoys running in races because it is a sport that can be continued as one ages with competition sectioned into age brackets.

Etherington, England born, and raised in Milwaukee, was the youngest runner in the race of 12 people.

Kay Bartholomew, spokesman for Central Florida Regional Hospital which sponsored the race for the Golden Age Games, said that the race organizers were pleased with the turnout because it was the first time a 10,000 meter race was offered in the games. Once people know it will be part of the games the number of participants should increase each year, she said.

Next year the organizers will try to have the race later in the week and earlier in the morning before it gets warm, she said.

Second place in the 55 to 59 age bracket went to Marshall Davenport, 59, of Naples, Fla. Nicholas Poppl, of Parma, Ohio, won second place in the 50 to 64 age group. There were no third place finishers in those age groups. Reg Rollason, 68, won second in the 65 to 70 age group, and two men tied for third, Ira Rowell, 66, of Sanford and David Field, 67, of Vero Beach, Fla.

Joyce Elder, 58, from Boca Raton, was the winner in her 55 to 59 age group and the only woman to finish the race.

'Fantastic'

Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce President Jack Horner said today the opening of the 10th annual Golden Age Games has been "fantastic."

"It's the smoothest and most joyous yet," he said. "It's a real birthday party and it is good to see so many old friends back. It's like a reunion and there is a very good feeling among the contestants."

Entries for the events, which will run through Saturday, are still flooding the chamber office, Horner said. The Games for those 55 years and older are attracting senior citizens from all over the country to compete.

A highlight of the opening day was the exhibition water ballet and nightshirt relay which provided laughs along with the beauty of the synchronized swimming. The show was held Monday night at the Sanford Landing Apartments pool.

The second day of the Games got underway bright and early this morning as golfers teeing off at 7:30 a.m. at the Mayfair Country Club shivered in the 15 mph breeze and 60 degree temperatures.

Although the sudden dip in temperature was not welcomed by 17 swimmers in the half-mile marathon at Sanford Landing or the synchronized events at Lyman High School pool this morning, it felt good to the competitors in the tennis tournament which continued today at Seminole Community College and race walkers competing at 2 p.m. at the Seminole High School stadium.

Judging is scheduled for Wednesday for the entries in the Hobby Show and Photography contest being held at the Sanford City Hall. The show will open to the public at 2 p.m.

Also among Wednesday's events will be the first part of the Decathlon competition at 1:30 p.m. at Seminole High School.

Voting Gets Smooth Start Locally

Voting was running smoothly at the 72 polling places in Seminole County this morning as Supervisor of Elections Sandy Goard's 82 percent turnout got a good start.

At most of the polling places election officials were met with crowds of voters when the doors opened at 7 a.m.

Mrs. Goard said she expects heavier crowds as working people go to the polls later today and she said that all those in line at 7 p.m. when the polls close will be allowed to vote.

"There have been no real problems reported," Mrs. Goard said. "only a few burned out light bulbs at voting machines. But we can correct those things easily."

She again advised voters to study their sample ballots before going into the polling places and to have their identification cards — either their voter's registration card, driver's license or some other official card that includes their signature — in hand. Not taking two to three minutes to search for identification will save some time, she said.

"We want the voters to do as much as they can to keep from having to stand in line," she said.

Some 10,000 citizens added their names to the Seminole voter rolls between August and Oct. 6, the date registration closed for today's election. If an 82 percent turnout is seen, it will be the third highest in the county's 71 year history.

Under state law voters have only 3 minutes to make their choices at the voting machines.

Nearly 80,000 voters are expected at Seminole County's polls today to pick their choices on a variety of candidates in races ranging from the presidency to the Legislature to county commissioners and school board members. There are also eight state constitutional amendments on the ballot and a referendum question on whether an additional 1-cent sales tax should be levied for one year to provide money for expanding the county jail and renovating the courthouse.

Each voter is given three punch card ballots and contests are listed on both sides of each.

County Staffers Playing Musical Jobs

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

A rash of resignations has Seminole County staff members playing musical jobs.

The search is on for replacements for four county commission-appointed officials — county administrator, assistant administrator, director of central services and director of public works.

Also on the list is County Engineer Bill Bush, who has served Seminole for more than 22 years, who is looking toward an August, 1985 retirement when he will be 65 years old.

Even when all the jobs are filled, the exact responsibilities of all county department heads could be changed when a management study team hired by the commission is concluded some time early next year.

County Administrator T. Duncan Rose III, 38, will be leaving the county's employ on Nov. 18. Before assuming his new job with the Orlando engineering and land surveying firm of Dyer, Riddle, Mills and Precourt on Dec. 3, he and his wife will be taking a cruise to the Bahamas, he said.

Rose has been employed by the county for slightly less than two years.

The county commission has named Environmental Services Director Kenneth Hooper, 36, acting county administrator until a permanent replacement is found for Rose. Hooper has been with the county for 10½ years. He will be performing the duties of both offices until that time.

Rose's salary is $49,025.

Hooper's salary is $44,045.

At the same time, Management and Budget Director Eleanor Anderson, 44, is fulfilling her normal duties as well as those of acting

NATION IN BRIEF

Guru's Sect Abandons Voter Registration Effort

RAJNEESHUPURAM, Ore. (UPI) — Fears than an Indian guru's followers might try to take over a rural county faded with the sect's decision not to attempt to register more than 3,000 street people it brought in from urban ghettos.

Ma Anand Sheela, the guru's outspoken personal secretary, had called Wasco County, located in north-central Oregon, so "bigoted" that it deserved to be taken over and threatened to run two write-in candidates for the three-member county court, the local governing board.

But, after bringing in 3,500 homeless persons from around the country, guru followers boycotted voter-eligibility hearings called by state officials to prevent possible election fraud by the sect or its opponents.

As of Monday, only 900 of the commune's residents were registered to vote in the county, which has 22,000 residents.

In recent days, the commune backed off its takeover threats. The two write-in candidates dropped out of the race, saying they were disgusted with the hearings process. Sheela said her threats of a takeover were just a "joke."

Gun Seller Not Responsible

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — A jury has refused to make an adult legally responsible for the murder-suicide of two teenagers just because he sold one of them the gun used in the killings.

John Corable, found innocent of involuntary manslaughter, still could be charged with the misdemeanor offense of selling a gun to a minor.

Corable said he sold a .38-caliber pistol to 17-year-old Todd Dunahoo for $150 because he was concerned about the danger the weapon posed if his 3-year-old son should find it.

Days later, Dunahoo used the weapon to kill Valerie Rockafellow, 16, and himself in a hallway at Polk High School May 17, evidently because she had refused to date him.

Baby Fae's Story Up For Bids

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (UPI) — The parents of Baby Fae are accepting bids from publications willing to pay for the story of the world's longest living recipient of an animal heart transplant.

Loma Linda Medical Center spokesman Dick Schaefer said Monday the family has authorized submission of written bids to be forwarded to the family.

Schaefer said the hospital does not want to get involved in any monetary negotiations and urged the family to hire a lawyer. The family, which has so far kept its anonymity, is reportedly low-income but costs of the historic operation are being donated by the hospital and physicians.

Baby Fae, meantime, was still improving and was reported eating normally Monday, grasping at objects and wailing in "a lusty cry."

Kidnapper Sought Revenge Against Women, Victim Says

TAMPA (UPI) — A man who abducted a 17-year-old girl and held her at gunpoint for 26 hours told his victim he wanted revenge against women because of a recent broken romance, the teenager reported.

"He said women were always walking all over him" said Lisa Marie Rhodes. "He told me this was his revenge. He said he'd done this with other girls."

Rhodes disappeared about 3 a.m. Saturday as she was riding her bicycle home from her job at a donut shop. She was released unharmed by her assailant early Sunday.

No arrest has been made and police say they have no suspects in the case.

Bar: No Leniency For Furman

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The Florida Bar told the Florida Supreme Court Monday it opposes reducing the 30-day jail sentence given Rosemary Furman on a contempt conviction stemming from her unlicensed practice of law.

Furman, 57, has asked the court to waive her jail term in return for her dropping her legal forms business, which the high court had concluded amounted to an unlawful practice of law.

After the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review her case last week, the Florida court gave Furman a stay until Nov. 15. She subsequently closed her controversial legal business in Jacksonville and placed her office up for sale.

Bar President Gerald F. Richman of Miami told a news conference that his organization took that position because Furman had twice violated court orders to cease dispensing legal advice and because the jail term would serve as a deterrent.

Annual Boat Parade Scheduled For Dec. 8

The 21st annual DeLand Christmas Pageant will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, at Lake Beresford in DeLand.

Residents of DeLand and the surrounding areas of Sanford, Orlando, Orange City and Daytona Beach will decorate their boats ranging in length from 5 to 62 feet with bright, colorful Christmas lights and decorations. The parade will form near the Lake Beresford Yacht Club in DeLand and travel down the St. Johns River past the Whitehair Bridge and Crow's Bluff Marina.

Whitehair Bridge at state Road 44 in DeLand is the best place to view the parade, although the procession can be seen from anywhere along the Hontoon Peninsula to Whitehair Bridge and Crow's Bluff Marina. The parade will last about two hours and will have as many as 40 boats participating.

At the close of the parade, awards will be presented at the Lake Beresford Yacht Club. Entrants are judged in four different classes, depending on the size of the boat. There is also a commercial class. Entry fee is $10 and entry forms are available at local marinas or may be obtained by calling Marianne Anderson at (904) 734-7428.

It's Reagan In Landslide

DIXVILLE NOTCH, N.H. (UPI) — The first returns of the 1984 presidential election were tallied minutes after midnight today as 30 voters in an isolated White Mountain hamlet voted almost unanimously to re-elect President Reagan.

"Someone has to be first, why not us?" said Warren Pearson, 42, manager of the rambling Balsams Hotel where the town's registered voters cast their ballots.

Exaggerating a trend polls have predicted for the rest of the country, the voters with only 13 different last names favored Reagan over Democratic candidate Walter Mondale, 29-1.

The 21 Republicans, five Democrats and four independents — each in their own plywood voting booth — cast their paper ballots at the stroke of midnight according to town tradition.

The Dixville vote, however, has been a bellwether in only two of five presidential elections.

Winded

The elements didn't cooperate Monday on the opening day of the Golden Age Games, at least not in the sailboat race. There was so little breeze that contestants had to be towed to the starting line, and even the fastest sailors posted unusually slow times.

Draft Case Before Court Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A lawyer for a vocal opponent of draft registration goes before the Supreme Court today to argue the government's prosecution of those who actively refuse to sign up is an unconstitutional violation of free speech rights.

But in oral arguments today before the high court, Justice Department lawyers will insist that the government was simply enforcing the law as well as it could without having a full-fledged compliance system in place.

David Wayne of Pasadena, Calif., was indicted in July 1982 for failure to register after he mounted a campaign of active dissent, writing letters to President Jimmy Carter and the Selective Service System.

He claims he was targeted for prosecution because he was exercising free speech rights protected by the First Amendment of the Constitution.

Since the court agreed to hear the Wayne case, the government has dropped its "passive enforcement" system, where it waited for third parties to turn in names of non-registrants or for young men to fail to heed written warnings to register.

Now it actively seeks out those evading registration by matching lists of young men over 18 with names and birthdates from state drivers license records and Social Security numbers.

Since the government has switched enforcement policies, the draft case now before the justices centers on a principle — the limits of a prosecutor's discretion in bringing cases.

The government will argue that to go beyond race and religion — which the Supreme Court has ruled may not be used as the basis for prosecution — would hamstring law enforcement.

Wayne's lawyer will respond that the government's stand allows it to enforce any law — not just draft registration — by selecting for investigation and prosecution only those who speak out against it.

Wayne was indicted after writing the president and the Selective Service twice, saying he would not register and would be "traveling the nation ... encouraging resistance."

In November 1982, a federal district judge dismissed his indictment on grounds Wayne, then 22 years old, was illegally singled out for prosecution because of his registration protests.

At the time, more than 500,000 eligible men had failed to register but only 12 others besides Wayne — all vocal resisters — had been prosecuted, the judge noted.

But the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco reinstated the indictment, saying that selective prosecution is not, in itself, illegal.

Its decision conflicted with that of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, which ruled that a local man was unfairly singled out for prosecution because he actively opposed the draft.

This will be the third time since 1980 that the Supreme Court has considered questions related to the draft. In 1981, the court ruled that women could be excluded from the draft, and, in July, ruled that men may be required to sign up for conscription if they want federal college aid.

In other action Monday, the court: — Agreed to decide whether police officers, who have taken control of a parked and locked car, must obtain a search warrant before opening luggage or containers inside the vehicle that they suspect contain illegal drugs.

— Over three justices' dissent, let stand a ruling preventing four Illinois news organizations from reporting the names of two girls accused of sexually abusing three young children.

— Agreed to decide in a case from Virginia if challenges to the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 must be filed in federal court in Washington, D.C., or in federal court in the state bringing the challenge.

Shuttle Challenger Grounded

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The countdown for the shuttle Discovery's launch slips into high gear today but the space program's launch-a-month pace was shot down with the decision to ground the shuttle Challenger for extensive insulation repairs.

Discovery is being readied to take off at 8:18 a.m. Wednesday on an unprecedented eight-day mission to launch two communications satellites and rescue two others stranded in useless orbits.

Commander Frederick Hauck, pilot David Walker and crew members Anna Fisher, Dale Gardner and Joseph Allen planned to spend today fine tuning their flight plans and relaxing before going to bed early on the eve of launch.

Trouble with Challenger's heat-shield tiles forced space agency planners to schedule meetings this week to determine what impact the problem will have on the shuttle schedule.

Challenger had been scheduled to blast off Dec. 8 with a secret Air Force satellite on board. But NASA spokesman Charles Redmond said the billion-dollar spaceship would not be ready to fly until three to six weeks later.

Redmond said Monday workers will have to remove up to 2,800 tiles from Challenger's belly because a layer of bounding material the tiles are glued to has softened.

The tile system protects the shuttle from the high temperatures encountered during re-entry into Earth's dense atmosphere.

Discovery is scheduled to fly again Jan. 17 but NASA did not rule out the possibility it could be pressed into service early for the military flight. However, Redmond said engineers expected to finish repairing Challenger before Discovery could be processed for another launch.

Discovery's countdown began Monday at 2 a.m. A computer memory device aboard the ship failed to operate properly but engineers decided the problem would not affect the countdown or launch phase of the flight.

The astronauts plan to launch a communications satellite owned by Telesat Canada on Thursday followed on Friday by the deployment of a radio relay station leased by the Navy.

Allen and Gardner hope to stage two six-hour spacewalks later in the mission to rescue two communications satellites sent into useless orbits in February when their solid rocket boosters misfired.

The identical $35 million satellites, originally owned by Indonesia and Western Union, are now owned by insurance underwriters who want the relay stations returned to Earth for repairs and relaunch.

Trial Ordered In Movie Deaths

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — All five moviemakers originally charged with manslaughter in the deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two child actors must stand trial, says a judge, who called the case a "classic."

Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer on Monday refused to dismiss involuntary manslaughter charges against director John Landis, helicopter pilot Dorsey Wingo and special effects coordinator Paul Stewart.

Ringer also reinstated similar charges which had been dismissed earlier against associate producer George Foley Jr., and unit production manager Danny Allingham, and ordered them to appear today for arraignment.

"This is a classic case where the defendants, all five of them, should go to trial," Ringer said.

"This isn't Nickelodeon time anymore ... but I would have thought that after 75 years, somebody might have thought it inappropriate to put Lillian Gish on an ice flow and send her into the middle of Niagara Falls to make a movie," referring to a classic but dangerous scene shot in the early days of Hollywood.

Landis, Wingo and Stewart were ordered last April to stand trial on three counts each of manslaughter on grounds their negligence caused the July 1982 deaths of Morrow and two Vietnamese children hired to play a war scene in the segment of the movie "Twilight Zone" directed by Landis.

IN BRIEF

Police Kill Six Blacks In Renewed Racial Strife

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Six more blacks were reported killed by police today in the worst rioting of two months of protest as violence flared in the second day of a civil rights strike.

With the latest deaths, the toll from two days of disturbances jumped to 18.

Three of the latest victims were fatally wounded by police using birdshot against mobs who attacked a white councillor's home in Katlehong and a beer hall in Tembisa, police Lt. Tom Jefferson said.

On Monday, the first day of the strike called to highlight black grievances, young blacks set fire to houses, beer halls, cars and trucks and a train, and clashed with police and armed white officials. Ten people died in the violence that swept through Soweto, Tembisa, Katlehong, Sharpeville and Sebokeng, all black townships within a 40-mile radius of Johannesburg.

Mourners Grieve For Gandhi

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Thousands of mourners thronged railway stations and airports today to view the ashes of slain Prime Minister Indira Gandhi as India slowly recovered from sectarian strife that has killed more than 1,100 people.

Officials said the rioting that erupted after Gandhi's assassination by two Sikh bodyguards Wednesday had largely subsided, although Army troops exchanged gunfire Monday with looters in central New Delhi, leaving three people dead.

Urns containing the ashes of the slain prime minister, cremated Saturday in an ancient Hindu ritual, were dispatched across the country to allow the nation's 720 million people a chance to bid farewell to the woman who dominated Indian politics for nearly 20 years.

Tens of thousands of people jammed airports and train stations from Bombay to Kashmir today to get a glimpse of the ashes, which will be scattered by aircraft over the snowy Himalayas Sunday.

Key Cabinet Minister Resigns

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — A key Cabinet minister who had hoped to liberalize President Augusto Pinochet's military government has resigned because of renewed terrorist activity and protests against the regime.

Interior Minister Sergio Onofre Jarpa submitted his resignation Monday, setting off a Cabinet crisis with all 15 ministers handing in their resignations to give Pinochet a free hand in reorganizing his government.

As the new interior minister, Jarpa, a conservative politician and landowner, quickly established talks with opposition leaders and promised to speed Chile's return to democracy through the election of a congress. Such an election is not currently scheduled until 1990.

Opposition leaders dismissed Jarpa's reasons for resigning and cited Pinochet's refusal to speed up a transition to democracy as the real factor.

Sandinistas Have Strong Lead

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Sandinista presidential candidate Daniel Ortega proclaimed himself and his party a "great winner" in elections Monday, winning 83 percent of the vote, but two other parties won a fifth of the ballots and could form a legitimate opposition bloc.

The Supreme Electoral Council, after a long delay, issued an updated vote tally late Monday giving the Sandinistas 240,874 of the 383,283 votes counted.

Ortega and his vice presidential candidate, Sergio Ramirez, were almost assured of their victory with the returns from 38 percent of the country's nearly 4,000 polling stations counted.

Foiled Plot Celebrated

LONDON (UPI) — Three-hundred and seventy-nine years ago, Guy Fawkes tried to assassinate King James I at the opening of Parliament.

Fawkes was the man designated to light a ton of gunpowder secreted in a vault under the House of Lords. Instead, he was caught red-handed, tortured, dragged from the Tower of London to Parliament and beheaded.

To commemorate the event, effigies known as "guys" were paraded, then burned on bonfires at fireworks displays and backyard parties.

Terror Group Threatens Reagan, Lebanese Cabinet

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The group that claimed responsibility for the suicide bombings of U.S. facilities in Lebanon has threatened the life of President Reagan and warned the Lebanese Cabinet against holding talks with Israel on a troop pullout.

"Let it be known, you Reagan, that if we are unable to prevent your re-election, we will for certain prevent you from continuing your second term in office," a spokesman for the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad, or holy war, said in statements carried by Beirut media on Monday.

The shadowy Islamic Jihad has claimed responsibility for three attacks on U.S. facilities in Lebanon that left 260 Americans dead, including the Oct. 23, 1983 suicide truck bombing of the Marine barracks at the Beirut airport and the U.S. Embassy annex this September.

The Jihad spokesman also warned the Lebanese government against holding planned military-level talks with Israel on a pullout from southern Lebanon of an estimated 10,000 Israeli troops who invaded in 1982 to crush Palestine Liberation Organization bases.

"The names of all these people (Lebanese officials) will be placed on the Jihad's blacklist," said the spokesman, who claimed to represent the "Beirut command of Islamic Jihad."

"You will all die."

He did not specify what actions those on the blacklist might face and there was no reaction from the government.

In a related development, the pro-Iranian fundamentalist Hezbollah — "Party of God" — organization labeled the troop withdrawal talks with Israel "sacrilege" in a statement published in the An Nahar newspaper.

The group called for a "holy struggle until the eradication of the Jewish state."

Some reports have speculated that the Islamic Jihad is a cover name used by Hezbollah.

The threats Monday coincided with an announcement by the government that the negotiations with Israel would begin Thursday in Naqura, a Lebanese coastal town about 5 miles north of the Israeli border.

The talks, to be held under U.N. supervision, had been expected to start Monday, but Lebanon called for a postponement after the Cabinet failed to meet last weekend to select a delegation and outline its final position.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami announced the Cabinet will meet Wednesday in a session at which it was expected to make a decision on the composition of its delegation.

Equally important to the presidential race, in terms of the country's direction, are the 33 Senate seats and 435 House seats to be decided.

If there is a Republican rout, Democrats could find their control of the House undercut — particularly if GOP gains reach as high as two dozen seats. The GOP is likely to hold on to a slim majority in the Senate.

Reagan votes today in California, Vice President George Bush in Texas, Mondale in Minnesota and Ferraro in New York. The candidates have elected not to make victory or concession speeches until voting ends on the West Coast at 11 p.m. EST.

Reagan ended his campaigning with a sentimental tour of California, where he began his political career and twice served as governor. Speaking at the state capitol in Sacramento, Reagan proudly said he has redirected the nation's course.

"The voters are going to decide if we keep that dream alive," he said.

When asked later about his priorities second term, Reagan replied: "No. 1 is peace, disarmament and the reduction of world nuclear weapons" — a central concern Mondale raised in his challenge.

His final appearance was a rally at a San Diego shopping center, where he ended his campaign four years ago. Reagan also made a 25-minute paid televised address to the nation in which he invoked the names of actor John Wayne and Democratic Presidents Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman and John Kennedy.

"The vision we out in 1980 does not come to an end simply because four years have passed," Reagan declared. "Our work is not finished."

Mondale, his voice hoarse and filled with passion in closing out his 20-month quest for the Whitece, pleaded with voters to begin a "long, decent march into America's future" and reject "a president who insults our intelligence every day."

"Do you really want to give them a mandate to turn their backs on the suffering in America?" he asked 20,000 in Los Angeles.

"The choice is clear. If you let them make history, they'll turn your vote into a future you never wanted. Don't let them do it," said Mondale, pushing for "the biggest upset ever."

A Washington Post-ABC News poll published today showed Reagan leading by 14 points, down from 18 points in the previous Post-ABC poll.

A National Public Radio-Louis Harris poll broadcast Monday showed Mondale has closed to within 11 points of Reagan — a gap that stood at 19 points in the poll last week. It showed Mondale gaining strength in the East, particularly.

Most polls gave Reagan a wider lead. His biggest lead, 25 points, came in a USA Today poll published Monday that gave Reagan 60 percent and Mondale 35 percent.

"We can carry all 50 states," said Reagan campaign pollster Richard Wirthlin. "However, we can lose six states and the District of Columbia."

Ferraro, choosing to end her historic crusade at her alma mater, gave a stirring tribute to her running mate and her family.

"For two centuries, candidates have run for president. Not one from a major party asked a woman to be his running mate — until Walter Mondale," she said in New York. "History will honor him for that brave act, and so should we."

Bush confidently campaigned in Texas, shouting "four more years," and making a last-ditch effort to help Republican congressional candidates.

"America is going to shout loud and clear for all America to hear, 'Four more years,'" Bush said in Denton, Texas.

She has been employed by the county for nearly 20 years and her salary is $39,728. Mrs. Anderson is among the county employees who have applied for the assistant county administrator job.

The assistant county administrator office has been vacant since March 30 when James Easton, 42, resigned to accept a job in the private sector after nearly three years with the county.

Easton's salary was $42,138 at the time he resigned.

In the meantime, Public Works Director Jack Schuder, 62, after slightly more than eight years with the county, left the county's employ last Wednesday to go into retirement for health reasons.

Twenty men have applied for Schuder's former job including assistant county engineer Larry Sellers. Sellers, 35, has been with the county 14 months and his annual pay is $29,973.

Sellers is among three county employees who will be taking turns filling in for Schuder until the position is permanently filled.

Bush's salary as county engineer is $43,616.

The third man who will take turns substituting for Schuder is Garry Lester, the county's traffic engineer. Lester, 40, employed by the county for the past four years, is paid $36,258 annually.

Meanwhile, the county's Central Services Director David Hootary, 39, with the county for eight years, has resigned to accept the job of risk manager with the county public school administration.

Success In Salvador

The historic peace talks in El Salvador on Oct. 15 provided some instructive lessons for American voters trying to decide whether President Reagan or Walter Mondale holds the truer view of the world and, accordingly, advocates the better foreign policy.

The meeting between Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte and representatives of the Marxist guerilla groups trying to overthrow his government did not end El Salvador's war or even yield any evidence that negotiations can succeed.

But both sides did agree to keep talking and to create a joint peace commission as a forum for negotiations scheduled to begin this month.

Behind the smiles and the handshakes in the Salvadoran town of La Palma were these realities:

Both sides are war-weary, but the Salvadoran government unquestionably holds the stronger position.

The Duarte government is growing stronger politically and militarily, while popular support for the guerillas declines and their military situation worsens as well.

Why else would a Castroite guerilla coalition, whose objective is to impose a Marxist-Leninist dictatorship, agree so readily to discuss political compromise and a possible cease-fire?

As for the Salvadoran government, its increasing strength and confidence are fruits of a Reagan policy that produced three successive free elections — hence, a popular, democratically elected government — and enough arms and training to transform the Salvadoran army into an effective counterinsurgency force.

Consequently, the guerillas face a likely choice between a political compromise that would preserve El Salvador's fledgling democracy or a losing fight to the finish against a Salvadoran army now receiving dramatically larger amounts of U.S. aid.

Contrast these relatively optimistic prospects with El Salvador's likely fate had the Carter-Mondale administration been re-elected, or the policies Walter Mondale favors being implemented. Many in Mr. Mondale's party oppose any military aid to El Salvador, a position that would have led directly to a guerilla victory and a communist dictatorship in that country.

Mr. Mondale's own position, he says, would be to allow some military aid but much less than the Reagan administration finally persuaded Congress this year to approve.

And even token military assistance would likely be tied to a requirement that the Salvadoran government negotiate a settlement with the guerillas. Thus, dealing under duress and with only a weak military in any case, the Salvadoran government would have little choice but to accept whatever terms it could obtain from guerillas amply supported by Cuba and Nicaragua.

We think most Americans, to say nothing of Salvadorans, would prefer the tougher, more realistic Reagan approach because it offers the best prospect of bringing El Salvador peace and freedom.

Three teachers were named Social Studies Teachers of the Year at the Florida Council for the Social Studies convention in Sarasota recently. The teachers are Susan Altenberg, of Wekiva Elementary, Richard Johnson, of Sanford Middle School, and Martha Hall, of Lake Howell High School.

James Elliot, coordinator of the social studies programs for Seminole County schools, received the Skretting Outstanding Leadership Award for his involvement in FCSS.

A senior at Lake Mary High School has been chosen to represent the school at the Century III leadership awards competition in Tallahassee. Robert Greenstein, the son of Allen and Donna Greenstein, of 1307 Sweetwater Club Blvd., Longwood, will compete with other state finalists for a $1,500 scholarship and an all-expenses-paid trip to the Century III national conference in Williamsburg, Va.

The Century III Leaders program, sponsored by the Shell Oil Co. Foundation and the National Association of Secondary School Principals, recognizes student leaders who show strong interest in the future of America. Finalists are selected based upon their leadership skills and involvement in community affairs.

According to Lake Mary school officials, Robert showed exemplary leadership skills at school, at his synagogue and in other community groups.

A report released last week by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services says schools in Florida are virtually airtight against childhood diseases. HRS officials scanned immunization records and found that 90 percent of the children in Florida's 67 school districts have all their shots.

State law requires students in kindergarten through 12th grade to have proof of immunization before they can attend a public school.

However, there is room for improvement. After sampling 400 records from five schools in each county, HRS officials found only 164 students with exemptions and 624 who had no proof of immunization.

About 15 percent of the students had no valid record of measles shots. The report's recommendation: those who received measles vaccines before 1968 or before their first birthday should be reimmunized.

VIEWPOINT

Institute Of Illusion

By Natalie Robinson Birkin

Americans sometimes treat complex problems of foreign policy as if they can be solved by passing new laws. The proposal approved in late September by a House-Senate conference committee to establish a United States Institute of Peace is a recent example.

The Institute will finance universities or groups of scholars or others to study or do research in conflict-resolution and international diplomacy.

If the grantees are legitimate, they are now doing that anyway. There are now 79 institutions that study and teach those subjects. Some, like the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University, have been doing so for years. The Foreign Service Institute trains State Department people in the "war and peace" field.

Originally, the proposal was for a separate "peace academy." Deans of a number of foreign policy institutions testified that such a peace academy would be superfluous. But the House-Senate conference committee has presumably mollified the deans by converting the peace academy into a peace institute which will parcel out the funds to the deans' institutions and no doubt to less respectable grantees.

If the proposed Institute of Peace has a purpose, it must be to change the climate of opinion about foreign policy. It will try to do for adults what Choices, the curriculum guide of the National Education Association and Union of Concerned Scientists, would like to do for children: instill the belief that preserving peace is merely a matter of making reasonable concessions. The children learn how to resolve conflicts by games in which they trade away candy bars. The adults can learn by trading away Central America, the Middle East, and the American defense capability.

One would not think it necessary to urge negotiation upon a country so eager to negotiate that it starts to announce concessions even before negotiations begin, just to get the Soviet Union to the bargaining table. But as there still remains reluctance to give the whole store away, some mind-bending exercises are needed. The function of the Institute of Peace will be to encourage those exercises.

If an Institute of Peace has any popular appeal, it arises from the illusion of the pretense that all people and all governments are the same in their desire for reasonable agreement. Eventually we must learn that children cannot buy off muggers with candy bars and governments cannot buy off aggressors with appeasement.

Role Reversal

During this last phase of the campaign the issue of whether Reagan has a right to claim identification with past Democratic presidents has become a hot issue.

Walter Mondale has been going around the country denouncing Reagan as a "grave robber" for invoking such Democratic heroes as Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy. He has produced a letter from Reagan to Nixon in 1960 which compares John Kennedy to Marx and Hitler with respect to statism, obviously a piece of election-year enthusiasm. And Senator Edward Kennedy has been roaring to the same effect that "Ronald Wilson Reagan has no right to the legacy of John Fitzgerald Kennedy."

About this there are a number of things to be said, and the first is tactical. Reagan has been attempting to attract swing Democratic voters, and part of his appeal to them has been his invocation of past Democratic presidents. Reagan's Republican base is rock-solid, he is carrying the formerly Democratic South and the states of the Inland West by 2-to-1 margins, and he is now carrying the fight to Mondale's own political base in the Rust Belt states. He even made a Midwestern tour on Harry Truman's old 1948 campaign train.

But are Mondale and Kennedy correct in accusing Reagan of being a "grave robber" in appealing to those Democratic heroes of the past? Historically considered, does Reagan have a right to invoke Roosevelt, Truman, and John Kennedy?

The truth of the matter is that on core issues, the two parties have changed sides. It was Franklin Roosevelt, not Reagan, who coined the phrase "arsenal of democracy." The entire thrust of Roosevelt's policy was a strong forward defense of freedom, with England as our "first line of defense" in 1940. Mondale and Teddy have voted against virtually every recent weapons system, are for a freeze, and oppose Reagan on Central America. They would certainly not have deployed the Pershing II in Europe, thus conceding Soviet theater superiority. FDR must be revivifying in his grave.

President Harry Truman dropped the bombs on Japan, a decision for which he never apologized, though he presided over a humane occupation of the Japanese islands. When Europe was threatened, Truman organized the Marshall Plan and later the Berlin airlift. When England no longer had the wherewithal to counter Soviet moves against Greece, Truman stepped in with the Truman Doctrine. When the North Koreans invaded the South, Truman acted promptly. Moscow knew that it could not fool around with Harry Truman.

In 1960, John F. Kennedy ran on a platform of economic expansion and on the theme that Fidel Castro was "90 miles off our shores." In his inaugural, he promised to do everything necessary to protect freedom around the world. Once in office, he did move against Castro, however ineptly. When he went to the Berlin Wall, he proclaimed "Ich bin ein Berliner." John Kennedy launched the Green Berets and the Apollo Moon project. In 1961, he sharply cut taxes in order to stimulate economic growth.

Political scientists and this columnist will have much to say about why the Democratic Party has deserted the American mainstream, and why the parties have reversed their historic roles, but Minnesota wood and Massachusetts Fats have lost this particular argument.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Envy, Backlash, Abroad

The prosperity the United States is enjoying under the Reagan administration is producing confidence at home and dismay and anger abroad.

According to the Wall Street Journal, "the economic resurgence in the U.S. is increasingly a source of irritation, envy and even backlash abroad."

Envy of the United States is nothing new, of course. Even as the United States lavished assistance on underdeveloped countries in the 1950s and 1960s, recipient nations made constant reference to "the Ugly American."

The stronger the American economy, the sharper the criticism. Americans should steel themselves for fresh antagonism in the year ahead.

The Wall Street Journal, reporting on the latest outbreak of envy, says that the United States, with 5 percent of the world's population produces and consumes a third of its wealth, up from a quarter nine years ago.

When one reads the statistics cited by the Journal, it is well to remember that the ancestors of present-day Americans were poor European peasants. They came here without any store of wealth. They underwent many years of adversity. The nation they built was built on hard work, not inherited privilege.

Other nations had opportunities to do as well as the United States. They squandered their opportunities. They neglected to develop sound constitutional and legal systems. They opted for dictatorship instead of democracy. They chose socialism over free enterprise.

Nations, like individuals, should be held accountable for their behavior. The American people should not feel guilty about their comparative wealth. This wealth isn't the result of a system of global exploitation. The United States declined to take the imperial path when it the opportunity to do so. It has given much more than it has received. Indeed it has given again and again. Hundreds of billions of dollars have been sent abroad since the end of World War II.

Despite generosity unprecedented in history, envy exists and flourishes. There are demands from many quarters that American's wealth be redistributed. Justice doesn't require this. On the contrary, justice requires that the U.S. government be mindful of the fact that the needs of the American people be addressed before the needs of any other country or combination of countries.

JACK ANDERSON

Pretoria Helped Clark's Defeat

WASHINGTON — A recent book published only in South Africa sheds new light on the South African government's meddling in a U.S. Senate race six years ago. The target of the South Africans' illegal campaign effort was then-Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa.

The beneficiary, who may not have known of the South Africans' interest, was Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, now fighting desperately to keep his seat. A spokesman for Jepsen said the senator has no knowledge of the allegations contained in the book, "The Real Information Scandal."

The author, Eschel M. Roodie, was the top civilian official in South Africa's Information Department, since disbanded because of a scandal indirectly related to the Iowa election caper.

Roodie tells how the late Sydney Stuart Baron, an American public relations man, visited South Africa in early 1978 for a series of talks with President John Vorster and other officials. Baron was hired to represent the South African government in the United States.

"Baron ... assured them that they would set their sights on Sen. Dick Clark of Iowa, the powerful anti-South African senator who was chairman of the Senate subcommittee on Africa, and who was going to come up for election later that year," Roodie writes. "Again Baron assured Mr. Vorster ... that if Clark was not defeated the government could cancel his contract."

Roodie attended a conference that took up some of the Information Department's secret dealings — including the effort to prevent Clark's re-election. At the conference, Roodie writes, both Baron and a government official who was working with him "confirmed that Baron had channeled the $250,000 into his personal account and used this money to make sure Clark was defeated."

But Roodie also writes somewhat mysteriously that "while Baron may have contributed money privately to Clark's opponent (Jepsen), he would have had to break up the contributions in so many small amounts they would have become totally ineffective."

The Justice Department began an investigation of the charges when they first surfaced five years ago. Curiously, though nothing has come of the investigation, it is still classified "open." Sources close to the investigation told my associate Donald Goldberg they suspect the "open" status is simply to prevent release of the Justice Department's findings.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., recently asked Attorney General William French Smith why the investigation has not been resolved one way or the other. "Specifically," he wrote, "I am interested in ascertaining: 1) the status of the investigation; 2) if the investigation is closed, the date of termination and the outcome of the investigation; and 3) whether any indictment resulted from the investigation."

Edwards has not received a reply as of this writing.

Interestingly, the U.S. attorney in Iowa who pursued the investigation of South Africa's interference in the Jepsen-Clark race, Jim Reynolds, was fired by the White House in 1982. His replacement, Evan Hultman, a friend of Jepsen, was himself the subject of an unrelated investigation by a Judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

Jepsen and a colleague tried to get Hatch to scuttle the investigation on the grounds that he had been misled by his staff. Hatch refused.

The White House announced the appointment of Jepsen's old friend the week after the senator, in a surprising about-face, voted to support the Reagan administration's controversial sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

Second Man Arrested In The Red Purse Cocaine Case

A 25-year-old Longwood man has been arrested on drug charges over two weeks after he became suspicious during a cocaine transaction and walked out of the deal.

Ivan Sylvan, of 302 Coble Drive, was being held in the Seminole County jail today in lieu of $10,000 bond on charges of trafficking in cocaine and conspiracy to traffic in cocaine.

Sylvan was arrested Monday by Altamonte Springs police in connection with his involvement in an Oct. 20 drug deal.

According to a police report, Sylvan met a Metropolitan Bureau of Investigation (MBI) agent in the parking lot of the Handy Way convenience store, 250 Wymore Road, Altamonte Springs, about 7:24 p.m. on Oct. 20 and discussed the sale of a kilo of cocaine for $40,000.

Forty minutes later, the agent met with Sylvan and a second man, Anthony Bravo, at the nearby La Casa Motor Lodge, 150 S. Westmonte Ave., Altamonte Springs, the report said.

Bravo left, then came back, saying there were two people in the parking lot who looked like policemen. Sylvan got suspicious and left, but Bravo went ahead with the sale, offering the drugs to the agent in a red purse, the report said.

Bravo, 22, of Key Biscayne, was charged with trafficking in cocaine and released on $10,000 bond.

Gunter Wants 'Wellness Incentives' In Insurance

TALIAHASSEE (UPI) — People who try to keep themselves healthy are saving their insurance companies money and should share some of the savings, says Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter.

Gunter says there should be "wellness incentives" in hospitalization insurance policies for non-smokers who keep their weight and blood pressure down — just as safe drivers pay lower automobile insurance rates.

"There are some companies that offer the wellness incentive for the better-risk policyholders," said Gunter.

He told reporters he might ask the 1985 legislative session to give him legal authority to force insurance companies to lower their rates for "low risk" customers. Gunter said existing law does not give him that power, although his department encourages "wellness incentives" in health insurance rates.

"I could not prevent a rate increase if a company failed to pass along this kind of wellness incentive," said Gunter. "What we can do, though, is do a lot of hard talking and use the leverage of the department to promote this idea."

He said studies have shown that a person who does not smoke, keeps weight and blood pressure within medically acceptable limits, and avoids stress pays about 18 percent less in lifetime doctor bills.

Gunter, a non-smoker himself, said he was not sure how much hospitalization insurance rates could be reduced for healthful lifestyles. He said, however, "I'd hang my hat on that 18 percent figure" as an estimate.

He said insurance analysts and medical studies indicate a white-collar business employing 1,000 workers could save $468,000 in lifetime health care costs "by promoting good health and reducing disease factors" among employees. He said those figures include cost of stress, poor nutrition and other lifestyle factors — in addition to cigars, alcohol and obesity.

"It's the idea that we already have in automobile insurance — if you're a safe and careful driver, you pay less for your insurance," he said. "If you have a healthful lifestyle, why shouldn't you pay less for health insurance?"

Gunter told an advisory committee to the Hospital Cost Containment Board that people who practice healthful lifestyles spend 18 percent less on lifetime health care. He said 60 to 70 percent of all hospitalization insurance claims are for "lifestyle-related illnesses" — with smoking alone accounting for $13 billion of the nationwide tab.

But Not Americans

Nicaraguans Dislike U.S. Government

By Dianne Klein
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaraguans who have seen their country overrun by U.S. Marines at various times this century often denounce the "imperialist" U.S. government — but say they like the American people.

A mural on a wall in the northern city of Esteli shows a peasant beheading Uncle Sam with a machete. Such "revolutionary art" is typical of the vehement anti-U.S. rhetoric of the leftist Sandinista government.

However, like their Cuban counterparts, Nicaraguans often apologize to American visitors that it is the "imperialist" U.S. government, not the American people, they find offensive.

Nearly everyone seems to have a friend or relative in the United States, American movies are still broadcast on state-run television and pop songs by Michael Jackson and Cyndi Lauper are the rage.

In the poor Managua neighborhood of Barrio Mexico, an official memorial to U.S. Journalist Bill Stewart still stands. Stewart, an ABC television correspondent, was shot at point-blank range by national guardsmen of former dictator Anastasio Somoza in 1979.

His death, filmed and shown on American television, outraged the U.S. public and Somoza was ousted by the rebels of the Sandinista National Liberation Front shortly after.

"You have to separate the Reagan administration from America," said Conny Mayorga, who after being jailed under Somoza took to the mountains with the Sandinista guerrillas to fight the regime.

Such anti-American art as this wall mural in Managua showing a Grim Reaper-like Ronald Reagan threatening noble Nicaraguan revolutionaries is a matter of political symbolism, not personal or cultural animosity.

"When the government talks about Yankees, it means the Reagan administration, not the people," she said during an interview in her one-room house in the barrio where Stewart was killed. "I love all the American songs, the clothes, the way of life there."

But Mayorga, now a 23-year-old government secretary, says she would again take up arms if the Marines should launch another invasion of Nicaragua.

One of the favorite chants of pro-Sandinista mobs is, "Here and there the Yankee will die everywhere!"

"I would prefer to die in combat than to be massacred by the Marines," Mayorga said. The history of U.S. intervention in Nicaragua, beginning with the installation of mercenary William Walker as president in 1855, has given the

Typhoon Kills 199 In Philippines

ROXAS, Philippines (UPI) — Typhoon Agnes, packing 128 mph winds, left at least 199 people dead and thousands homeless in a sweep across the central Philippines before swirling out into the South China Sea today, officials said.

Col. Victor Pagulayan, chief of the military Office of Civil Defense, toured the devastated provinces and told reporters 161 Filipinos died from the second typhoon to hit the Philippines

Sandinistas ample material for their anti-American crusade. The Marines landed in 1912, and stayed off and on until 1933.

The ruling Sandinistas take their name from Augusto Cesar Sandino, a guerrilla leader fighting U.S. troops from 1927 until 1933. Sandino was assassinated in 1934 on orders from Somoza's father, Anastasio Somoza Garcia.

"For me it is justice," said housewife Maria Farina Correa of the Sandinistas' anti-U.S. stand. "It is the fault of the Reagan administration."

However, Edgardo Barrera, 20, sees things differently. "The Sandinista Front is fomenting hate, rancor and division," he said. "We should care about all our brothers. The United States is the country that has helped Nicaragua more than any other."

Barrera, whose brother was killed in the fight against Somoza, said the Sandinistas have deceived the Nicaraguan people.

"We need another insurrection to be free again," he said.

Updates 53-Year-Old Law

Amendment 8 Won't Affect Taxes; Needed To Fund School Facilities

Q. Why is Amendment 8 being discussed so much by our local school officials? How does it affect taxes?

A. The amendment is needed to clarify the state's ability to continue funding Public Education Capital Outlay bonds for school buildings. It does not increase any tax or decrease any tax. It leaves the tax exactly where it is.

In 1931 a law was passed which levied a 1.5 percent gross receipts tax on utilities and use of the telephone. Money brought in under that tax was used during the 1960's to expand facilities at colleges and universities. In 1974, the capital outlay program was broadened to include all public education buildings, from kindergarten through university. The money brought in over the years by this tax has been used for school building bonds throughout Florida. It has been a success in providing adequate educational facilities for Florida's growing population.

But, as you know, the communications industry has changed greatly since 1931. In 1931 no one thought about satellite systems, no one envisioned a telephone company that didn't own telephones. The 1931 law didn't charge gross receipt taxes on calls that went outside the state, yet calls from Florida to other states use some facilities here and some in other states. The court-ordered divestiture of AT&T also had impact on the gross receipts tax.

So in 1984 the legislature updated the original 1931 law to modernize it and make it applicable to the modern day telecommunications business.

Amendment 8 will redefine which part of the gross receipts tax is bondable. With passage of this amendment all gross receipts taxes being collected will be bondable. Without this amendment, only services taxable under the 1931 law could be used in bonding for construction of education facilities.

While the 1984 legislature updated the law, modernizing it to allow for collecting gross receipts taxes, the people of Florida now must vote on Amendment 8, which will complete this updating process, allowing for bonding on all revenues collected.

This comes at a time when many of our older buildings need repair and renovation. Growth in population is also making itself felt in an increasing need for new classrooms in Florida. The annual birth rate, 99,000 six or seven years ago, has risen dramatically with 142,000 births anticipated next year. There is just no question that we are going to be confronted with a large demand for expansion.

Without the funds available there will be significant pressure on other funding sources to meet this challenge. Passage of the 1984 School Building Amendment will free funds for construction. Its approval will provide a means for school children, young people and adults with varying educational backgrounds and needs to prepare themselves for personal success and increased community service.

Mitchell, Miller Reunite Cage Careers At Daytona

Since when did Daytona Beach become a suburb of Sanford? Ray Ridenour, Daytona Beach Community College's hyperactive cage coach, has been accused of having a loud mouth but never a Seminole County arm.

He's usually content to load up with a few Volusia County talents, then bring in a few ringers from parts unknown or placements from Stetson University to give his squad its usual standing among the state's elite.

This year, however, Torchy Clark's former assistant has a distinct local aroma to his Fighting Scots' basketball team.

Local as in Willie Mitchell and Fred Miller. Both live in Sanford but Willie started three years for Seminole High School and coach Chris Marlette while Fred started the same duration for Lake Mary High School and coach Willie Richardson. Both played together at Crooms High School.

Now, they're reunited as freshmen at Daytona Beach. "We're happy to have both of them," said Ridenour. "They're working hard and doing well with their school work. I just wish I had some 6-7 sophomores instead of 6-3 freshmen."

Ridenour, who doesn't have an optimistic bone in his body, learned his lessons well from Torchy. He rants and raves and generally puts on a good show for players and fans alike.

He noted that Willie and Fred have been receptive to his antics, much like the nuts took to Jack Nicholson in One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest. "Oh, we're having a great time. I just wish were better," continued Ridenour. "I just don't know if we can play with the rest of the state. We just don't have the players to keep up with teams like Seminole."

When informed that coach Bill Payne's Raiders have just been a .500 club during their preseason battles, Ridenour immediately ripened to the task at hand. "Oh yeah, who did they play?" he demanded. Implying that SCC's schedule maker may have NBA ties, "The Knicks and the Celtics."

"Don't believe any of that. Seminole will be right up there. Payne's loaded this year and he knows it."

But why doesn't the load contain Mitchell, who played for Payne as a sophomore, and Miller? "Maybe I don't yell enough," laughed the third year SCC coach. "Seriously, I don't think Willie wanted to go to school here, he wanted to get away. We were overloaded with guards, so we didn't recruit Fred real hard. I was hoping he would go out of state to school. They're both fine players who will help Ray."

Both will help right away, but in different roles than Ridenour expected. Mitchell, a 6-3 forward, will be in the starting lineup Wednesday night when DBCC opens at home against Flagler's junior varsity. Tipoff is 7:30 p.m.

"I thought Fred could come in and start for us," said Ridenour. "But he's been consistently inconsistent. His ballhandling has to get better. And he shoots from too far out."

Ridenour then related one preseason episode. "We were playing Brunswick, Ga. and I sent Fred into the game," Ridenour said. "As soon as he gets in there, he guns up two from the corner. I never got a guy out of a game so fast in my life."

Ridenour later re-emphasized his dismay with the shot chart, but he doesn't know if the lesson has taken hold. "Fred has gotta make a heckuva move for us to be competitive," he said. "I expect a lot more of him than he does of himself."

Mitchell, Ridenour said, has improved. "Willie is still making a million freshman mistakes, but his shooting has really improved since last summer. He's worked hard at it."

As for the rest of the cast, 6-2 Anthony Anderson, from Fort Myers, will team with Mitchell at forward while 6-2 Santa Fe transfer Gary Hamm and 6-3 returnee Charles Stevenson man the guards. Jim Gable, a 6-6 sophomore, opens at center.

"We just want to win a few games," cried Ridenour. "That's all we're interested in."

"All these other schools have two full-time assistants. Me, I'm checking over grades with each teacher when I should be out selling ads. Some guy named (assistant coach Dean) Smith from Seminole sends me a letter telling me how many towel they want on the bench.

"Towels? They got a guy writing a letter about towels? That's all he has to do? I'm not worried about towels. I don't even know if I have enough basketballs.

Sob, sob, sob..."

Area fans can get a their first look at Payne's Raiders Saturday night in the annual SCC-Alumni game. Former Raider greets like Greg Robinson (cage coach at Lake Howell), Simon Harper, Kenny Brown, Chip Crawford, Ricky Sutton and Reggie Butler will be on hand. Tipoff is 7:30 p.m....

The Winter Park Rotary Club will sponsor the "Hoop-De-Doo Girls' High School and Women's College Basketball Tournaments" beginning Wednesday, Nov. 21 at the University of Central Florida.

In the prep openers, Seminole faces Lake Brantley at 4 p.m. and Lake Howell plays Edgewater at 5:30 p.m. Oviedo battles Winter Park at 7 p.m. while Colonial plays Cocoa Beach at 8:30 p.m. Four more games follow on Friday and Saturday.

On Friday, Nov. 23, UCF's Lady Knights host West Georgia at 7 p.m. and Florida International takes on Eastern Illinois at 9 p.m. The finals will be Saturday.

Tickets are $2 per session...

Renegades Make Corso Their Coach

ORLANDO (UPI) — Lee Corso, a former quarterback and assistant coach at Florida State University, said he took the job as coach of the new U.S. Football League Orlando Renegades to fulfill a promise he made to his wife years ago.

"I promised my wife 27 years ago when I left Florida State that I'd bring her back to Florida," Corso said Monday after being introduced as the team's coach. "I'm a little late, but better late than never."

Corso, 49, left his post as head coach at Northern Illinois, where he was in his first season, to take the Renegades job.

Corso, known for his wide-open offense and promotional stunts, said he hated leaving Northern Illinois, but the Orlando job offered his first shot at the professional game.

He told a gathering of season-ticket holders that the club will "run everything first-class, major league. That's my goal."

"We're here to win," Corso said.

Corso reportedly received a three-year contract worth $150,000 in annual salary, plus incentive bonuses based on attendance and the team's record.

In 15 years as a college head coach, Corso compiled a record of 73-83-6.

Corso was 4-4-1 at Northern Illinois, including an 8-7 upset victory over Central Michigan last Saturday.

After stints as an assistant at Florida State, Maryland and Navy, Corso began his head coaching career at Louisville in 1969.

He compiled a 28-11-3 record at Louisville and lifted the school's football program to respectability and the Missouri Valley Conference title in 1972.

Corso was hired at Indiana in 1973 and gradually rejuvenated that program, leading the Hoosiers to their first bowl game in a dozen years in 1979. However, he was fired at Indiana after a 6-6 season in 1982.

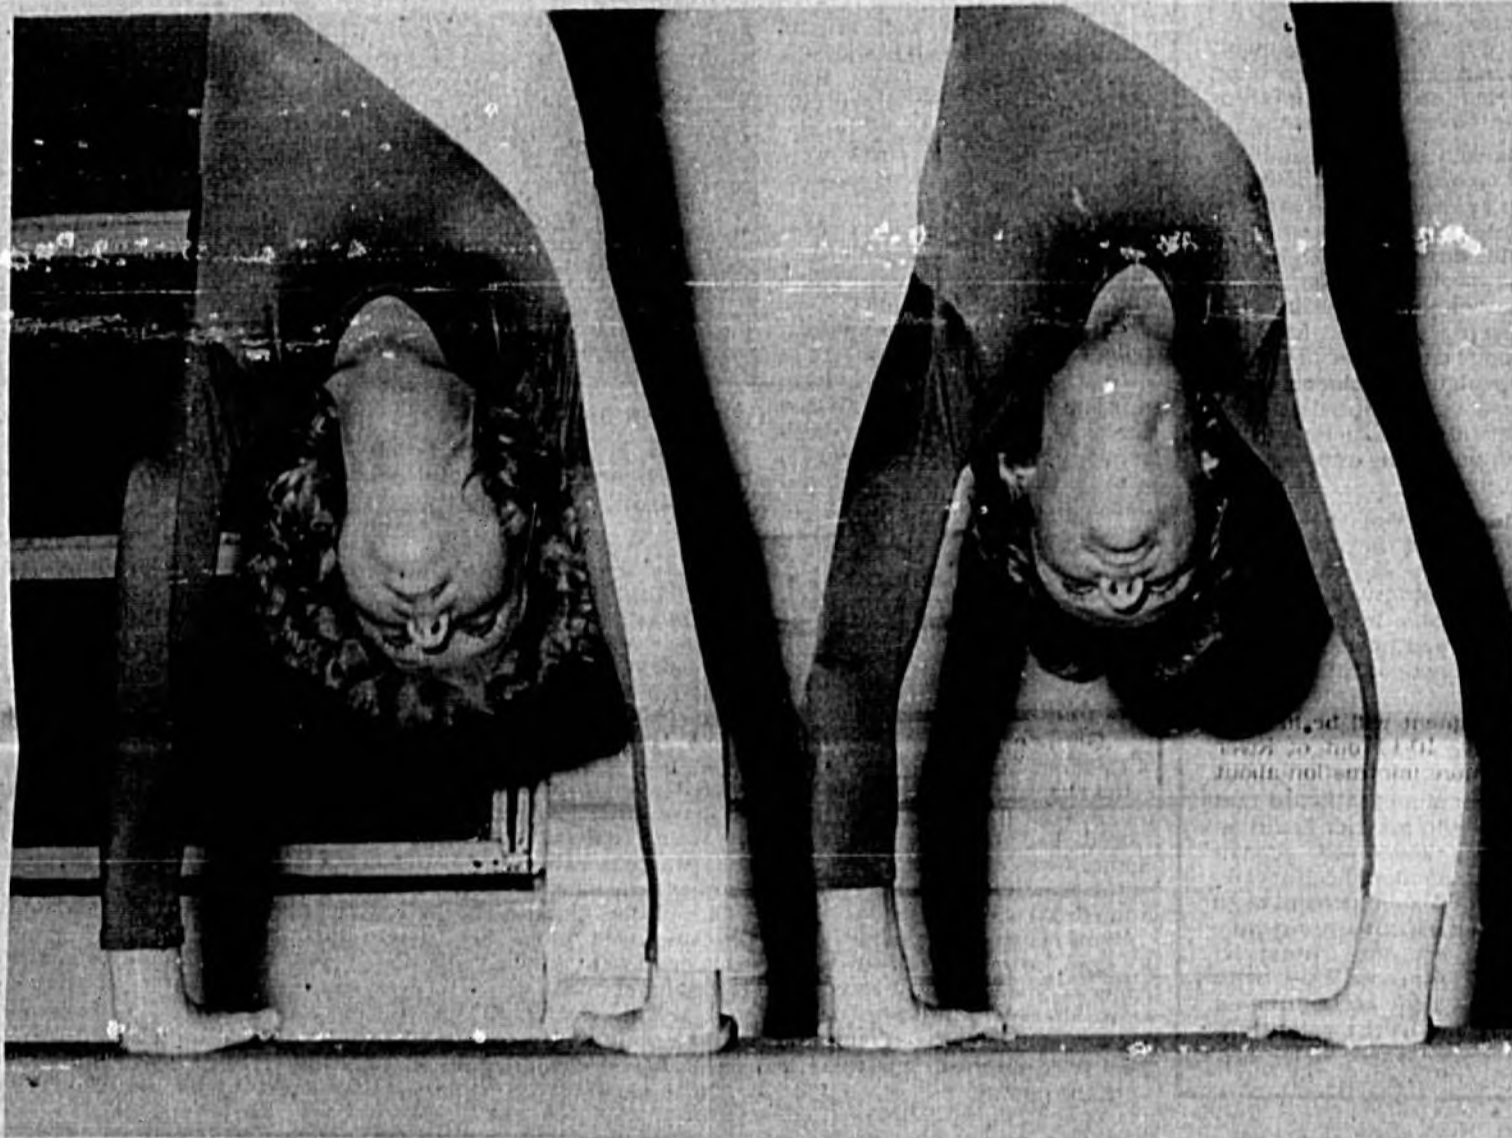

Corso worked as a television commentator during the 1983 USFL season before being hired by Northern Illinois in January with the understanding that he would be free to leave if approached by a professional team or major-college power.

"It was an unusual and unique set of circumstances," said Northern Illinois athletic director Robert Brigham said. "Lee Corso had aspirations to be a professional football coach. The Orlando job was lucrative and significant enough for Coach Corso to be granted an early release from his contract here."

Brigham said assistant Ted Huber would be an interim replacement for Corso.

The Renegades, formerly the Washington Federals, moved to Orlando last month after club chairman Donald Disney struck a deal with Federals owners. The Renegades will play in Orlando Stadium, beginning next February.

In another announcement Monday, Disney said the uniform colors would be blue and gray with a tomahawk with a drop of blood as its logo. Susan Dunbar, 29, director of communications for Disney's United Medical Corporation, designed the logo.

Sanford Gymnastics Wins Sectional

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

Sanford Gymnastics put itself on the map this past weekend when its Class III team came away with first place honors in the Eastern Sectional Division meet at Jacksonville.

Eight of Sanford's girls have qualified for the state meet which is scheduled for Dec. 1-2 at Orlando. Sanford competitors also came away with first, second and third place in the all around competition of the 12-14 age group and first place in the 9-11 age group.

In the 12-14 age group, Sanford's Kimatha Kelly won the all around competition with first places on the uneven parallel bars and the balance beam and a second place in floor exercise.

Karen Grainger took second in the overall competition led by a third place on the beam and a fifth in floor exercise. Shari Siegrist took third place overall with a fourth place on the beam and sixth in floor exercise.

Also competing in the 12-14 age division was Shannon Wilcoxson who took third place in the vault, and Heather Cooper.

Glenda Carter came away with first place in the all around competition in the 9-11 age group. Carter took first place in the vault, second on the beam and fifth on the bars and floor exercise. Also competing in the 9-11 age group for Sanford were Jennifer Kopp and Tracey Kaleel.

Behind a pair of first places, Cheri Van Camp took second place in the all around competition in the 15 and over age group. Van Camp came in first on the bars and the beam, took second in the vault and third in floor exercise. Lisa Milligan finished third in the all around competition in the 15 and over age group with third places in the vault, bars and beam.

The six girls that comprised the team that took first place in the meet, 14 teams participated, included Kelly, Siegrist, Grainger, Van Camp, Milligan and Carter.

"A big contributor to the success of the Sanford program is coach Eugene Petty who is one of the hardest-working coaches around," said Jeannette Stiffey, president of Sanford Gymnastics.

While it put itself on the map competition wise, Sanford Gymnastics is still without a permanent place on the City of Sanford map.

Sanford Gymnastics Association (SGA) has been working out of temporary facilities for seven years. In the last year alone, it has been in three different locations. SGA is a non-profit organization and charges minimum fees.

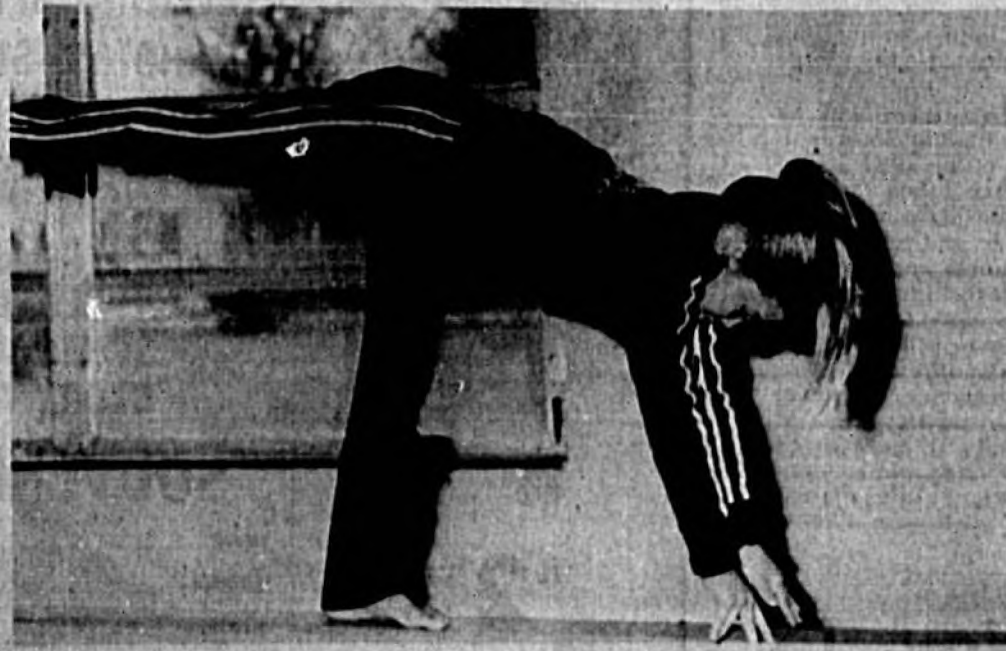

The gymnastics club was working out in the Salvation Army building but had to leave in May so they could use their building for community activities.

Sanford Gymnastics then moved to the Crooms High gymnasium, but had to move from there so the Seminole High basketball team could practice. The club now works out in the Crooms High cafeteria and its vault room is in one of the outside corridors.

Sunrise Kiwanis Club, through the City of Sanford, has donated a piece of property for Sanford Gymnastics to erect a permanent building. Since it is a non-profit organization, the building must be built through donations and fundraisers.

The SGA needs $80,000 to build its permanent home and asks that donations be made either directly to First Federal of Seminole or to any Sanford Gymnastics Association Board Member.

For further information, contact Stiffey at 322-8234 or vice president Margaret Siegrist at 699-9751. Other board members include Kathy Kopp (secretary), Pam Wilde (treasurer), coach Petty, Dale Wilcoxson, Jeannette Wright, Chris Griggs and other coaches are Lisa Milligan and Tom Stiffey.

Gators Receive Reprieve

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — The University of Florida reported Monday the NCAA has extended the deadline for the school to decide whether to appeal a three-year probation leveled against its football program.

Florida originally had to make a decision by Wednesday.

"We don't know how long we'll have and we won't know until we get a letter from the NCAA later this week," said university spokesman Al Absolt.

The NCAA committee on infractions recommended two weeks ago that the Florida football program be placed on a three-year probation, including a ban on bowl games and live television appearances. In addition, Florida would lose 20 scholarships over a two-year period.

The recommendation stipulated that the probation period can be reduced to two years based on corrective measures taken by the university in the football department.

The committee cited 59 rules violations in recommending the strict penalties.

If Florida files an appeal, the probation will not go into effect until at least next year. If no appeal is filed, the probation will begin immediately.

The NCAA conducted a 21-month investigation of the Gator football program. The probe and its findings resulted in the dismissal of head Coach Charley Pell. Offensive coordinator Galen Hall was named as an interim replacement after the third game of the season.

The Gators, seeking their first-ever Southeastern Conference title, are 6-1-1 overall and 3-0-1 in league play.

The SEC also is considering penalties against the Florida football program.

ANDERSON TOPS OFFENSE

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — The Auburn-Florida game last year does not hold fond memories for Gator running back Neal Anderson.

However, last Saturday's Tiger-Gator matchup most certainly will be a favorite when Anderson looks back on his college career.

Last season, Anderson fumbled into the Auburn end zone to help Florida lose the game, 28-21, and a shot at the Southeastern Conference title.

But Anderson redeemed himself Saturday. He reached the Auburn end zone twice — both times with the ball tucked securely under his arm — and led the Gators to an impressive 24-3 victory over the Tigers. The victory kept Florida in the hunt for its first-ever SEC title.

For his efforts, Anderson was named Monday Southeast Offense Player of the Week by United Press International.

Anderson, a junior, rushed for 108 yards on 15 carries and scored on runs of 36 and 15 yards in the second half. His first touchdown broke a 3-3 tie and his second score put the game out of the reach.

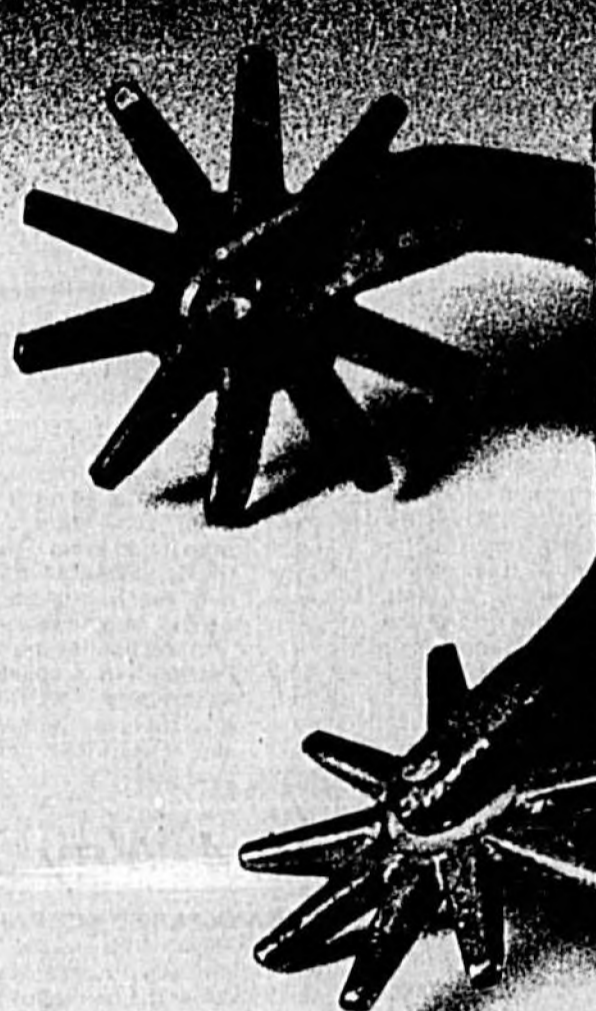

Florida is 6-1-1 overall and 3-0-1 in the SEC, heading into Saturday's meeting in Jacksonville with Georgia, which is 7-1 overall and 4-0 in league play.

Law Ignores Senior Swindlers

DEAR ABBY: I recently became a victim of a con game I think the public should be made aware of. A couple who appeared to be their mid-60s came to our door saying they were soliciting funds for the American Diabetes Foundation. They showed us a plastic enclosed sheet of credentials and wore diabetes-alert necklaces. They said they were selling ballpoint pens to pay for their insulin shots and assured us that they were registered with the local police department.

I was suspicious of them, so I bought some pens (for evidence) and wrote down the license number of their car (out of state). As soon as they left, I called the police chief and asked if these people had been issued a permit to collect in our neighborhood. He said they had not, but he would check into it.

Later that evening I called the chief back (this is a small town) and asked if he had caught up with that couple yet.

He said, "Oh yes, they're on their way back to a neighboring state. We picked them up about the same time last year for collecting money in this area." When I questioned him further about what action would be taken, he said, "Just consider it a donation to the poor."

Abby, these people drove a late model car and looked anything but poor. Our law enforcement officials seem to think it was OK as long as those running the scam were old enough to be on Social Security and collected only a few dollars from each call. It just doesn't seem right to me to let these people use the name of the American Diabetes Foundation to collect money under false pretenses.

Abby, please tell your readers not to buy anything or make any donations without checking first to see of the solicitation is on the up-and-up.

WARY IN THE MIDWEST
DEAR WARY: Your letter is a valuable public service, and I thank you for it. But why did you withhold the name of your town, after telling me your law enforcement officials looked out the window while these cheats canvassed your neighborhood?

It's OK to conceal your own identity, but failure to disclose the name of your town in effect protects law enforcement officials who are shirking their duties or are possibly crooked.

DEAR ABBY: I enjoy soup, but whenever I have soup, my girlfriend corrects me when I tilt the spoon toward me. She says I should tilt the spoon away from me.

Will you please tell us who is correct, and why?

S.P., BEDFORD, MASS.
DEAR S.P.: Your girlfriend is correct. Why? Because when you dip "away" you reduce the chances of dripping on your lap. Personally, I wouldn't care which way a person dipped his spoon while sipping his soup as long as it was done quietly.

DEAR ABBY: I keep getting books in the mail from a book club in Iowa. I do not belong to it or any other book club.

Some of their books are very heavy, and I live too far from the post office to walk there and carry those books. Abby, I have no car and I am 84 years old.

I keep getting bills for these books, some of which are $14 and up. Isn't this some kind of mail fraud?

Modifying Habits Can Control Hiatal Hernia

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — For the last three years I have been bothered with a continual burning in my chest. My doctor suggested an upper barium test, which proved that I had a hiatal hernia. He advised a bland diet, which did no good. Is surgery necessary for this condition?

DEAR READER — About half of the population over 40 has a hiatal hernia, also called a diaphragmatic hernia. In this condition, a small portion of the stomach tends to slide through an enlarged opening in the diaphragm. You can have such a hernia and not have symptoms. And you can have the symptoms you mention and not have a hiatal hernia.

The constant burning is probably from a leakage of stomach contents into the lower esophagus. This area is not protected with the same thick mucus covering that is inside the stomach and it is easily irritated by the stomach's acid contents. This symptom is often referred to as heartburn.

Antacids and measures to prevent stomach acid do help relieve the symptoms. Occasionally the burning is caused by bile that flows backward into the stomach and then leaks into the lower esophagus. Not all antacids help this problem.

You can do a lot to control such symptoms by modifying your lifestyle. Don't lie down until your stomach has had time to empty; sleep with the head of your bed elevated, and don't wear anything tight around your waist. Avoid anything that increases pressure inside your abdomen. That definitely includes large meals. Alcohol, even one cocktail or a glass of wine with dinner, makes the symptoms worse.

I have discussed the various things you can do to help yourself with this problem in The Health Letter Special Report 18, Hiatal Hernia and Heartburn.

Most hiatal hernias do not require surgery, but a new operation has been devised for which some claim great success. It involves literally putting a collar around the esophagus (food tube) or at the top of the stomach. The collar is fitted just below the diaphragm and is intended to prevent the sliding hernia, but, more important, it seems to improve closure of the lower esophagus and prevent the leak in the lower esophagus that causes the burning pain.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What foods are loaded with tyramine or tyrosine? When I eat some of these foods, my blood pressure becomes extremely high. I can't seem to find a list of what I should not eat.

DEAR READER — Tyramine is a derivative of tyrosine, which is an amino acid found in most proteins. Tyramine is a natural artery constrictor that causes sharp rises in blood pressure. It is normally destroyed by monamine oxidase enzyme. Some people take monamine oxidase inhibitors to combat depression.

Tyramine is found in ripened or decaying protein. Cheese, red wines, herring, chicken livers, canned figs, broad beans (fava beans), large amounts of chocolate, beer, brewer's yeast, aged meats, meat extracts and non-pasteurized yogurt, raisins, bananas, avocados (particularly if overripe).

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Bridge is a game of vicissitudes. Sometimes, for example, the contract with the best chance of making will fall, while the inferior contract comes rolling in. So it was with today's deal, but it did not become unstuck without some astute declarer play.

Most aggressive North-South players reached a good six-spade contract. That ship sank when the spades divided badly. In the given auction, South opted for six no-trump — a foolish choice in my estimation, but differences of opinion are part of what makes the game interesting. The opening diamond lead was covered by the queen, king and ace. Declarer immediately played a low club to the jack, won by the queen. Although a spade back would now wreck declarer's transportation, East made the more obvious play of the diamond 10. South now played four rounds of hearts, discarding two spades from his hand.

On the second heart, West threw a diamond. On the third heart, West sluffed a spade. And on the fourth heart, West threw in the towel. If he let a club go, declarer's last little club would be a winner. If he shed another spade, the last little spade in dummy would make the contract.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY NOVEMBER 7, 1964

Someone who has been lucky for you in the past will be even more so in the year ahead. Keep in close touch with this valuable ally.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll be easy to get along with today, provided everyone does things your way. You won't respond congenially to those who oppose you. Major changes are in store for Scorpios in the coming year. Send for your predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Possibilities for personal gain look good today, but be prepared to work hard for what you hope to get. Don't look for handouts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even though people you are not fond of may be present, don't turn down an invitation to a social gathering today. It will work out OK.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be hopeful today regarding the outcome of events, even if it appears Lady Luck is totally ignoring you at the starting line.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't waste your breath today arguing with an acquaintance who has a closed mind. There will be others eager to accept your ideas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not ignore financial situations that cry for attention at this time. Lady Luck will assist you if you take diligent and prudent measures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may be quite fortunate today in situations where you function independently. Joint ventures could hold you back if your associates are pessimistic.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of asking others to handle important assignments for you today, do them yourself. You're apt to experience breaks that will be denied them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to pal around today with friends with whom you have much in common. Steer clear of pesty little cliques that caused you trouble previously.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Career advantages can be achieved today, provided you don't exert too much pressure. Assert yourself, but know when to stop pushing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try to treat whatever occurs today philosophically. Keep a cool head and don't let yourself blow small mishaps out of proportion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In commercial situations today, others will try to treat you fairly unless they think you are aiming to get the edge on them. Be reasonable.

Verlin M. "Vic" Arnett, personal financial planner with IDS/American Express

Financial And Estate Seminars Offered

Do you find financial investments and estate planning confusing? Whether your assets are large or small you can benefit from financial and estate planning for a secure future.
 Verlin M. "Vic" Arnett, personal financial planner representing IDS American Express in Sanford, is offering seminars for small groups of six to 10 persons — free and without obligation several times a week to better acquaint those interested in ways these services can be of benefit to them.
 Separate sessions are held at convenient times for working people, retired persons, and "ladies only" at his office at 705 S. French Ave. to acquaint them the need for such planning and the services available. He will also be glad to meet privately with you by appointment.
 The seminars consist of a slide presentation and question and answer session. If you are interested in attending one of these sessions call 321-5210 and Vic will be glad to invite you to the next appropriate seminar.
 Vic has lived in Sanford since 1967 when he retired from the U.S. Navy. After working for First Federal of Seminole for 13 years, he went to work for IDS two years ago at the division office in Orlando and the district office in Altamonte Springs. For the convenience of Sanford area residents, he opened his office in Sanford in September.

 IDS is an old reliable company having been in business for 90 years and while banks were failing during the depression IDS continued to grow. Over the years it has grown to one of the largest financial services in the country with $20 billion in assets. In January IDS became a subsidiary of American Express, one of the world's largest financial services companies.
 "We have over 50 services and products with which to implement a financial plan," Vic explained. "IDS/American Express offers a unique personal approach to your financial concerns."
 He can also help set up group health insurance and retirement plans.
 Vic's wife, Loretta, is the office manager. The office hours are 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., but Vic will be glad to meet with clients evenings or weekends by appointment.

Customs Cracks Down On Export Fraud

MIAMI (UPI) — U.S. Customs officials are seizing more and more empty boxes and boxes of sand or telephone books at Miami International Airport.

The boxes are supposed to contain in-transit goods that have been shipped into the United States and are being exported to other countries. But in many cases, the goods never make it out of the country and are sold here, thereby avoiding import duties.

Customs agents poking through a box labeled Rolex watches and jewelry recently found nothing but three telephone books. The $83,000 shipment had come to Miami from Italy and was supposedly in transit to the Netherlands Antilles.

In another case, a Miami company imported about 300 large bottles of French perfume. When agents inspected the boxes looking for 50-ounce bottles of perfume, they discovered baby shampoo and sand. The company had hoped to avoid a 6-percent entry duty on shampoo and sell the perfume here, Customs officials said.

Another import-export firm brought in expensive clothing duty-free in New York, telling Customs the goods would be trucked to Miami and promptly exported. The truck left New York filled with imports. When it arrived in Miami, it carried a load of used clothing and rags.

The Miami Customs District has set up a permanent, six-person team to inspect illegal imports. Louis A. Bondi, assistant director of the Customs District office in Miami, said Monday.

He said such cases are more difficult to detect than illegal drug shipments because there's no such thing as examining a cargo and establishing that there is an illegal diversion of goods. We have to actually prove that the merchandise is being diverted to the U.S. market."

The new inspectors sometimes trucks as they leave free zones or Customs-bonded warehouses where importers house duty-free merchandise before exporting it.

"We recently inspected a Customs-bonded warehouse which had $100,000 in imported T-shirts that were to be exported," said Barbara C. Goodman, head of the new inspection team.

"When we found out that they were loading the shirts into a truck, we followed the truck. Instead of going to the airport, it went to a Hialeah shop where the shirts were to be distributed for sale."

Agents seized the T-shirts. In most cases, Customs files civil or criminal charges against the importer, Goodman said. The government has levied about $4 million in fines this year.

In another case, two passengers arrived at Miami International Airport carrying identical suitcases. One was filled with Rolex watches.

When a Customs inspector asked the first passenger, who was carrying the suitcase full of watches, to open his bag for inspection, he said there was a mistake, that he was carrying the wrong suitcase. He asked for permission to pick up his real suitcase from the baggage pickup.

He came back with the clean suitcase and cleared Customs. Moments later the second passenger arrived carrying the other suitcase and declared he was bringing in a shipment of Rolex watches.

"The watches were imported for re-export. A week later, the same people tried to smuggle them into the United States," Goodman said.

Auto Profits In 1984 To Net $9.1 billion

NEW YORK (UPI) — Domestic automakers are expected to roll up a record $9.1 billion in profits this year, while prospects for 1985 look even brighter, a Standard & Poor's survey reported Monday.

The Industry Surveys report said this year's profit picture — which excludes more than $1 billion in extraordinary tax credits for Chrysler — is a 60 percent jump from 1983's earnings of $5.65 billion.

Donald Baker, an industry analyst for the business information and rating service, attributed much of the boom to increased operating efficiencies.

He pointed to the fact that while car and truck production is almost 5 percent below 1979 levels, industry profits should more than triple the 1979 figure of $3 billion.

This year domestic auto production is expected to amount to almost 7.8 million units, up 15 percent from 6.8 million last year, and 55 percent higher than 1982's 25-year low of 5.1 million vehicles, the survey indicated.

Baker is optimistic about the long term outlook for the auto industry because according to U.S. Census Bureau projections the population bracket aged between 35 and 44 — the group most likely to purchase new cars — will be the fastest growing segment by 1990.

He added that the nation's population is growing most rapidly in suburban areas where cars are heavily relied on in lieu of inadequate mass transit systems.

However, Baker stressed that yearly fluctuations in profits must be expected because of import competition and the increasing tendency of motorists to keep their cars longer, now an average of almost 7 1/2 years.

Army To Purchase Combat Helicopters

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The Army said Monday it will spend more than $832 million over three years to buy 288 Black Hawk combat helicopters, manufactured by Sikorsky Aircraft.

Deliveries are to begin in March, the Army said. The Army's Aviation Systems Command, which negotiated the contract, said the multi-year agreement will save the Army a total of $130 million.

"In addition to very sizable cost savings, multi-year contracts provide increased motivation for industry to make capital investments to sustain a military industrial base," said Col. Ralph H. Lauder, manager of the Black Hawk project.

Sikorsky is a division of United Technologies Corp. of Stratford, Conn. About 3,000 sub-contractors are involved in the Black Hawk project, the Army said.

Democrats Will Hold Most Governors' Seats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican governors will remain in the minority even if — as Republicans hope — President Reagan's coattails turn out to be long enough to pull in some stumbling GOP candidates in today's elections.

With only 13 governorships at stake in this year's elections, Republican governors will find themselves badly outnumbered even in the unlikely event they win them all.

The current lineup is 35 Democrats and 15 Republicans — and of the 13 governors' mansions open to possible new occupants, seven are occupied by Republicans and six by Democrats.

Even a clean sweep by the GOP would still leave a 29-21 margin in favor of the Democrats. And chances of such a Republican sweep look slim.

Two Democratic governors — Bill Clinton of Arkansas and Ted Schwinden of Montana — appear to be shoo-ins for re-election.

On the other hand, Republican Gov. John Spellman of Washington appears to be in danger of being ousted from office.

Spellman, struggling for political survival after boosting taxes, was outspent in the race by Democrat Booth Gardner, heir to the Weyerhaeuser timber fortune.

But on the other side of the country, Republican chances look good for taking over the governor's mansion in West Virginia — where Democratic Gov. Jay Rockefeller seeks to succeed retiring Sen. Jennings Randolph in the Senate.

Former Republican Gov. Arch Moore, despite scandals that marred his terms in office, was on the comeback trail and was running ahead of his Democratic opponent, Speaker Clyde See of the West Virginia House of Delegates.

Democratic governors in North Carolina, Utah and Rhode Island also are leaving office, giving Republicans a chance to move in.

In North Carolina, in a race overshadowed by a bitter battle between incumbent Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and Democratic Gov. James Hunt for Helms' Senate seat, Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten found the going tough in his fight to succeed Hunt.

Running against Edmisten is Republican Rep.

James Martin, who gave up his seat in Congress to seek the governorship. While early polls gave Edmisten the edge, the advantage went to Martin in late polling.

In Utah, Republican House Speaker Norman Bangerter appeared to be ahead in his fight to become the state's first GOP governor in 20 years in a race with Wayne Owens, a former Democratic congressman. The winner will succeed Democratic Gov. Scott Matheson, who chose not to run again.

In Rhode Island, Cranston Mayor Edward DiPrete hoped to become the state's first GOP governor in 16 years in a fight against state Treasurer Anthony Solomon. DiPrete's chances were improved by allegations of corruption in the administration of retiring Democratic Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy.

Republican governors are leaving office in Delaware, Missouri and Vermont, with Republicans confident they will turn back Democrats seeking their seats.

Republican Lt. Gov. Michael Castle appeared to have the inside track in Delaware to replace GOP

Gov. Pierre du Pont IV, who was barred from seeking a third term. Castle's Democratic opponent is former Delaware Supreme Court Justice William Quillen, who resigned from the bench to run for governor.

In Missouri, Democratic Lt. Gov. Kenneth Rothman was in a tight race with Republican Attorney General John Ashcroft to succeed GOP Gov. Christopher Bond.

In Vermont, former Lt. Gov. Madeline Kunin, a Democrat, was fighting to become the nation's seventh female governor in history over the opposition of Republican Attorney General John Easton. The winner will succeed GOP Gov. Richard Snelling, who is retiring after serving four terms.

Incumbent Republican Gov. Robert Orr appeared likely to win re-election in Indiana, despite the hopes of Democratic state Sen. Wayne Townsend for an upset because of tax increases under Orr.

Another GOP incumbent, Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire, was favored to win over House Democratic leader Chris Spirou.

Independent Political Spending Is On The Rise; Draws Criticism

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A California real estate developer angered at Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., has dumped nearly $1 million of his own money into anti-Percy advertising this fall in an attempt to unseat him.

"It's a travesty on the law," Percy campaign manager Carter Hendren complained of the independent spending by Michael Goland, who moved to Chicago for the campaign.

The Percy case is an example of independent expenditures, which allow freedom from campaign donation limits that restrict private contributions to $1,000 each in the primary and general election.

An independent can spend as much as it wants for or against a candidate, as long as it does not cooperate with the opponent.

The Federal Election Commission said independent expenditures totaled $7 million between January 1983 and this June and were expected to balloon.

"That apparently is just the tip of the iceberg," FEC spokesman Fred Eiland said.

The Fund for a Conservative Majority, with $6.8 million budgeted for the election, has put in $1 million to help Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in his tough re-election battle against Gov. James Hunt. It is using $2.5 million to support President Reagan's re-election.

In Minnesota, an aide to Democratic Rep. Gerry Sikorski said, "We've been targeted by everybody in the world who is making an independent campaign expenditure."

Another target is Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., powerful chairman of the Budget Committee, who has built his own $1.3 million campaign war chest to parry an independent spending blitz by conservatives.

Eiland predicted independent spending would far exceed the $16 million spent in the 1980 presidential year, and said independent expenditures in the presidential race alone topped that figure.

Conservative groups, particularly the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC), say such expenditures are an expression of free speech and have the backing of a Supreme Court decision.

Campaign targets, however, are critical. The citizen's lobby Common Cause also has questioned the expenditures.

The spending has resulted in a spate of lawsuits. NCPAC last week filed a complaint with the FEC alleging 11 liberal groups were conducting a "secret multimillion-dollar" campaign to aid Democratic candidate Walter Mondale.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee filed suit in U.S. District Court in Washington against the National Republican Congressional Committee and the Republican National Committee, charging both violated election laws in ads advocating election of GOP House members.

Randy Huwa, director of the Campaign Finance Monitoring Project for Common Cause, said the expenditures put into question "the validity of contribution limits and accountability."

"If I am a candidate, I have to answer to the voters for charges I make in a campaign, but those others do not have to do that," Huwa said.

He said there is a case pending before the Supreme Court whether independent expenditures are legal when the campaign is already publicly financed, such as the presidential race.

In Illinois, Percy spokesman Hendren said that through last Friday, Goland had spent $936,000 in an independent effort to unseat Percy. He said Goland was expected to shell out $50,000 to $150,000 more in the last hours of the third-term senator's close race against Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Hendren said Goland's ads, which include billboards portraying Percy as a chameleon, are full of "lies and distortions."

"I think this clearly misrepresents the intent of the federal election law," Hendren charged. "We have no legal remedies available to us, but all of this will be investigated."

Hendren said he believed Goland, who apparently once had polio, was angered because Percy voted against handicapped legislation. Hendren also said Goland is very pro-Israel and apparently sees Percy as a hindrance to Israel.

Hendren said he believes Simon and Goland cooperate to enhance each other's ad campaigns, an allegation Simon spokesman Bruce Fisher denied. Fisher said Simon once asked Goland to stay out of the campaign.

Goland could not be reached for comment.

Ahhhh! The Ancillary Joys Of Voting

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — When voters go to the polls at one posh Pacific Heights district they will be treated to valet parking and tasty food and they will cast their ballot in a room with crystal chandeliers and rare antiques.

"Why should the citizens vote in smelly garages?" asks Bob Pritikin, owner of the Mansion Hotel and Restaurant that has served as a polling place for three years in San Francisco's upscale Pacific Heights neighborhood.

"Voting should be fun and inspirational," he said.

Voters will get valet parking and food prepared by the hotel's master chef, David Coyle, formerly with the Duke and Duchess of Bedford.

"I'll do red, white and blue chocolate truffles and my special vention and juniperberry pate," Coyle said.

Will there be a charge? "Of course not," said Pritikin. "That would be a poll tax."

Voters will cast ballots under crystal chandeliers in a setting of rare antiques, oriental rugs and collection of fine art.

One hundred U.S. flags will fly in the formal gardens and staff members will dress as Betty Ross and George Washington.
