Air Force helicopter crashes

DAVIS-MONTHAN AIR FORCE BASE, Ariz. — One of two Air Force helicopters on a training mission over the Arizona desert crashed Sunday night, but the condition of those aboard was not immediately known, authorities said.

Reports that the two CH-3 Jolly Green Giant helicopters had collided in flight were not confirmed, Air Force Capt. Mark Besch said, adding that one of the choppers returned safely to Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Tucson.

The other crashed about 7:45 p.m. in the desert between Avra Valley and Marana, about 30 miles north of Tucson and another 30 miles away from their night-training mission destination of Gila Bend.

Besch said the CH-3 helicopter normally carries four crewmembers on such training missions, but the craft can hold as many as 18 people. The condition or number aboard the downed chopper was not known.

Fake IBM computers found

BEIJING — Five computer manufacturers in southern China have been fined nearly $180,000 for importing fake International Business Machines Corp. computers, news reports in China said Sunday.

The companies, located in the Shenzhen Special Economic Zone, were declared guilty of importing fake IBM personal computers from Hong Kong for resale in China, the official China Daily newspaper said.

"False and imitated trademarks have become a serious economic problem in China," said Gan Guoping, deputy director general of the State Administration of Industry and Commerce.

MIAMI — Strikebound Eastern Airlines, its fate now resting in a federal bankruptcy court, expanded operations Sunday on 12 routes to Latin America but delayed resumption of 14 flights in the Northeast.

Eastern also offered popular $12 one-way fares on its New York-Washington-Boston shuttle Sunday for the last day. The fares, which were inaugurated Friday, went up to $49 today, still $50 under normal.

The first new flight to South America was due to leave at 3:54 p.m. today for Quito, Ecuador, followed by flights to Guyana, Ecuador, and Bogota, Colombia, among others.

Kite flies over Bay Hill

ORLANDO — Becoming the first player to win two titles in the 11-year history of what is now The Nestle Invitational didn't exactly come to pass the way Tom Kite planned it.

On his way to capturing this championship Sunday over good friend Davis Love III, Kite survived a meltdown, a splashdown and a letdown before prevailing just before sundown on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff.

Yes, one of golf's most consistent players this decade came undone on the back nine. Just when T.K. appeared ready to deliver a KO with a four-under 32 on the front nine of the sun-splashed Bay Hill Club, Kite began missing greens.

Discovery roars into space

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — The crew of the shuttle Discovery waited out dense fog and rocketed toward space Monday to launch a $100 million communications satellite that will put astronauts in near-constant touch with Earth.

Carrying four deliberately injured rats and a series of experiments, Discovery blasted away with a thundering roar at 9:57 a.m. EST, one hour and 50 minutes behind schedule because of heavy fog at the Kennedy Space Center earlier in the day and reduced visibility.

The 4.5 million-pound space freighter majestically climbed away from launch pad 39B, trailing 800-foot tongues of incandescent flame and thrilling thousands of spectators jammed along Florida's "space coast" as it arced east over the Atlantic Ocean and streaked toward space.

At the controls were commander Michael Coats, 43, and John Blaha, 46. Also on board were astronauts James Baglan, 37, Robert Springer, 46, and James Buchli, 43. All five were decked out in bulky, bright-orange spacesuits that are part of a new post-Challenger emergency bail-out system.

Launch of the 28th shuttle mission, the third since the 1986 Challenger disaster and the first of seven planned for 1989, came more than three weeks behind schedule because of a series of technical problems, including the replacement of all three of the ship's high-pressure liquid oxygen turbopumps.

Shuttle watchers gathered on the shores of Lake Monroe to watch the liftoff.

But it appeared to be clear sailing Monday once the fog burned off and managers decided that upper-altitude winds, which were a concern earlier, were acceptable.

About two minutes and five seconds after liftoff, the ship's two solid-rocket boosters, redesigned after the O-ring joint failure that doomed Challenger in 1986, burned out and were smoothly jettisoned.

Looking like a brilliant morning star in the cloudless sky, Discovery continued its 8 1/2-minute climb to orbit under the power of its three main engines, slowly disappearing from view as it raced toward the horizon.

Seminole County deputy Tom Wise adjusts camera in patrol cars.

Smile, you're on COP-TV

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — You probably won't be smiling if you're caught on the candid camera that is standard equipment on some Seminole County sheriff's and Altamonte Springs police cars.

For about one year, four patrol cars assigned to traffic enforcement officers of the sheriff's department have been equipped with mini-video cameras mounted on the upper inside of their windshields.

Altamonte Springs police, who pioneered the program in Seminole County, have had one car equipped with a video camera since 1986. Five more cameras are on order for that department, Sgt. Jim Perry said.

The video cameras are about the size of a standard 35-millimeter still camera. Tom Harris, of Longwood, who developed the systems used by these two departments, said that initially his idea was to provide police officers who make traffic stops a way to record events, just in case a suspect killed or injured an officer. In such cases, although the officer might be slain, at least police with the video record would have solid leads to the killer, Harris said.

The safety factor is what convinced Sheriff John Polk to purchase instead of lease four units at the cost of about $3,300 each, deputies said.

But the units have applications beyond safety. Anytime the officers assigned these camera-equipped cars decide to make a traffic stop or chase a suspect they activate the camera and record the action. The recording unit is housed in the trunk of the patrol car and the system is powered by the car's battery. A flip of a switch on the control box, mounted on the dashboard, activates the camera.

The officers wear a remote microphone hidden at their shirt collars and make a video and audio recording that may end up as evidence in court. However, Altamonte Springs police Sgt. Jim Perry said, in many cases when defense attorneys preview such tapes, the defendant has plead guilty. So far, such tapes haven't been shown to a local jury, but in at least one case, Perry said, a judge advised a defendant not to say anything more after a video tape failed to support his story of his arrest.

Sheriff's Sgt. John Negri, said deputies don't usually tell subjects that they are being video taped. Because the recordings are made on public roadways, Negri said there is no invasion of privacy.

Only some suspects who become abusive or combative are told their actions are being photographed. Deputy Tom Wise said this often causes the suspect to calm down.

The officers, who know their actions are being recorded, are cautious in their dealings with the public, so their level of professionalism is upgraded, Harris said.

Wise said the tapes are helpful, too, when a citizen, who doesn't realize his encounter with police was recorded, files a complaint against the officer based on the officer's alleged conduct. The truth, Wise said, no longer comes down to the officer's word against that of the citizen. The tape reveals what occurred and if the officer or the citizen was out of line.

In a high-speed pursuit, the video camera, which is automatically focused and operated, captures the action across four lanes of

Stenstrom kids enjoying life in new school

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

OVIEDO — Douglas Stenstrom Elementary school with its bright, orange-tiled roof stands out in an area of the county that is growing rapidly. Many of the students' families have only recently moved to Central Florida.

"I asked a group of about 40 of our students how many had moved to this area because their parents had been transferred from some place else," said media specialist and unofficial school tour guide Cheryl Jessup, "and about 25 of them raised their hands."

While a place like that often produces a breed of people who, afraid of being moved away from friends by another transfer, never seem to develop any close-knit ties, the faculty, staff and students at the new school have established an positive and creative environment for learning.

"The staff loves this school," said Jessup. "The teachers really drive the kids and each other, but there is a good cooperative spirit here."

Cooperation and patience are indispensable characteristics for these in the Stenstrom Elementary environment.

For the first half of this academic year, classes were held in "portables" (temporary classrooms) at Lawton Elementary School. The 900 Stenstrom students and their teachers had to share not only space but also resources with the 800-plus Lawton children. Those who were there claim there wasn't a single mishap in that time.

Immediately following the Christmas holiday, the school moved into their new facilities on Alafaya Woods Blvd. It's a newly developing area. Land all around the school is being cleared for houses, roads are still being paved.

And in the school, equipment is still arriving daily. Boxes are still being unpacked. Some items arrive and must be sent back. And new resource materials are being ordered regularly.

"The teachers have to work without things, but

Marina fees topic of public hearing tonight at city hall

SANFORD — The city commission will hold a second public hearing on the elimination of marina fees tonight at 7 p.m. in city hall.

At its Feb. 27 meeting, the commission approved on first reading an ordinance to eliminate the $5 launching fee and to prohibit boat trailer parking on the marina. The public will have an opportunity to speak for or against the ordinance tonight before its second reading.

The commission will hear second reading of an ordinance requiring commission approval of game room and arcade licenses, and second reading of an ordinance establishing one-stop permitting for filmmakers' use of city streets.

A public hearing will be held tonight for the rezoning of property between Sanford and Palmetto Avenues between 25th and 26th Streets from multi-family residential to restricted commercial use.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Lotto jackpot swells to $19 million

TALLAHASSEE — No one picked all six winning LOTTO numbers from Saturday night's lottery drawing so Florida's jackpot swelled to an estimated record $20 million for next week, Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said Sunday.

"This is the highest second-week jackpot estimate since Florida's LOTTO game began," Paul said.

Although Saturday night's LOTTO drawing produced more than 316,000 winners of more than $5 million in cash prizes, no ticket sold matched all six of the winning numbers. In the five-of-six category, however, 220 players won $8,005.50 each.

Last Monday, March 6, Gloria Mitchem, 25, a nursing assistant from Bronson, turned in a winning LOTTO ticket to claim a $37.4 million jackpot.

This week the Lottery will also celebrate St. Patrick's Day with a grand prize drawing for the Instant Games. Seven lucky finalists will meet at Church Street Station in Orlando at noon Friday. One will win a lump sum cash prize of $1 million and the other six will win cash prizes ranging from $50,000 to $10,000.

The finalists are from the counties of Hillsborough, Pinellas, Broward, Monroe, Columbia, Orange and Polk.

The winning LOTTO numbers for Saturday, March 11, are: 10-23-28-34-48-49.

Here are the number of winners and the prize payouts for the three-, four- and five-of-six winning categories:

- 220 five-of-six winners receive $8,005.50
- 14,422 four-of-six winners receive $134
- 303,021 three-of-six winners receive $8

Saturday night's estimated LOTTO jackpot was $9 million.

The grand prize jackpot is estimated each Sunday, based on LOTTO sales projections for the next seven-day period, funds from rollovers and projected long term interest rates.

Museum showcases whimsical banks

MIAMI — Among the dozens of mechanical toy banks in a whimsical exhibit that opens Monday is a fitting symbol of the taxing weeks ahead — an enameled Uncle Sam that snatches away pennies, then laughs.

"You put the coin in Uncle Sam's hand and pull the lever. He drops it into his carpet bag. Then his mouth opens and he laughs. He's kind of chuckling. 'Ha ha ha, I got your taxes,'" said Mario Ferrante, assistant curator at the Miami Museum of Science and Space Transit Planetarium.

Uncle Sam, circa 1886, is one of 75 rare mechanical banks on display at the museum until April 27. The collection belongs to the Goldome bank company in Buffalo, N.Y. and will travel this fall to Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Most of the cast iron banks are over 100 years old. These fiscal relics were a peacetime diversion for the iron foundries of the northeast. When the Civil War ended, the demand for armaments dropped off and they turned to toy production to keep their machines busy.

The banks were designed to promote thrift among youngsters by rewarding them with funny actions whenever a penny was saved. They use ingenious combinations of levers, springs and wheels, often set in motion by the weight of the coin.

In one, William Tell shoots a penny and knocks an apple off his son's head. In another, the coin is placed in a mother eagle's mouth and she leans over and feeds it to her eaglets.

All depend on a series of carefully balanced and precisely filed metal parts. Foundries competed to see who could design the most elaborate banks, and more than 300 patents for mechanical bank designs were issued between 1889 and the 1920s.

"The techniques, the mechanisms are just incredible. We think we are so advanced today. There are no microchips in here. It's very difficult to make something like this," Ferrante said.

Although visitors are not permitted to handle the banks, most of them still work.

"The hardest thing in collecting them is to find them in working order," said museum curator Linda Pearson. "They were toys and children wear toys out."

Most of the banks were acquired by Goldome Chairman Ross Kenzie, an avid antique collector. Some are caricature famous people of the times, noted Janet Swartzlander, Goldome's curator for the collection.

A portly Tammany Hall Boss Tweed grabs a penny and stuffs it into his vest pocket. Teddy Roosevelt fires a coin into a tree and a bear pops out the top.

The banks also reflect the racial prejudices of the times. In one, a black child pops out from behind a bush, startling a donkey pulling a cart. The donkey bucks, upsetting the cart where a black man is perched eating watermelon.

In another, a dentist yanks out a black man's tooth, causing the chair to tip over backward, spilling the patient onto the floor.

"All the slapstick is directed at the blacks. Unfortunately, this does reflect part of our history," Pearson said.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Eastern resumes some flights

United Press International

MIAMI — Strikebound Eastern Airlines, its fate now resting in a federal bankruptcy court, expanded operations Sunday on 12 routes to Latin America but delayed resumption of 14 flights in the Northeast.

Eastern also offered popular $12 one-way fares on its New York-Washington-Boston shuttle Sunday for the last day. The fares, which were inaugurated Friday, went up to $49 today, still $50 under normal.

The first new flight to South America was due to leave at 3:54 p.m. today for Quito, Ecuador, followed by flights to Guayaquil, Ecuador; and Bogota, Colombia, among others.

Eastern had cut back its flights drastically to cover only the Northeast shuttle corridor and three Latin American routes after it was hit by a strike March 4 by the International Association of Machinists. Members of the Airline Pilots Association and the flight attendants union refused to cross the ground workers' picket lines, forcing it into bankruptcy court Thursday.

Eastern spokesman Robin Mattel said the resumption of the 12 additional routes to South America Sunday was "really the start-up of a smaller, restructured Eastern Airlines, an economically viable one."

"We're going to continue to expand operations in a conservative and prudent manner, but hopefully in substantial increments," he said.

Eastern had planned to resume 14 flights between Boston and Washington today. Mattel said that move was delayed until Thursday, but he did not know why.

The Air Line Pilots Association has contended that the 200 pilots that Eastern says it has available will soon run up against Federal Aviation Administration flight hour instructions.

"They just don't have the personnel. They keep reporting they have all those pilots crossing the picket lines, but that's blatantly untrue. They have the same little core they had when they first started," said J.B. Stokes, a spokesman for the pilots. "One thing they are bumping up against is federal (flight hour) regulations."

But Mattel said that was not a problem.

"No, not at all. Everything we do is going to be in complete conformity with FAA regulations," Mattel said.

He said that in addition to the dozen additional flights Sunday, there would be 75 shuttle flights. Eastern plans to add round trips from Miami to San Juan, P.R., Monday, along with a round-trip between New York's Laganard Airport and Montreal.

Chief returns home after being shot

United Press International

COCONUT CREEK — Coconut Creek Police Chief John Whalen, who was back home Sunday after his release from a Tampa hospital, says he would have at least been on equal footing with a robber who shot him last week except for a state law that kept him from carrying a gun.

Instead, Whalen, who was in Tampa for a convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, found himself facing a violent criminal with only his fists to protect himself.

"I know I could have taken them on with a weapon. I think it's a law we need to look at," he said after his release from the hospital Saturday.

The 58-year-old police chief ended his two-night stay in St. Joseph's Hospital on Saturday, after taking a bullet in his back at about 7:45 p.m. Thursday outside his hotel. One of the two gunmen who accosted him outside the Embassy Suites Hotel, 4400 W. Cypress Ave., carried an Uzi, an automatic weapon, and the other brandished a pistol, Whalen said.

Whalen, who refused to give them the money they demanded, punched one of robbers in the face, then turned and ran, police said.

One of the gunmen fired as Whalen retreated. A .25-caliber bullet pierced his back and lodged in his upper right arm, said Micki Gerry, a St. Joseph's Hospital spokeswoman.

"I was lucky," the police chief said, before leaving the hospital with his wife, Charlotte, and their 27-year-old daughter, Julianne, to return to his Broward County home.

"What happened to me could have happened to anyone. I was a victim," Whalen said. "Of course, I did resist instead of submitting to them. Maybe it's because of my experience."

"Maybe it's because I feel police chiefs shouldn't be robbed."

If the same thing had happened in Coconut Creek, the police chief said he could have pulled out his service revolver and probably would have been more successful in stopping the attack.

But a statute prohibiting law enforcement officers from carrying and using their weapons as officers outside their jurisdictions prompted him to leave his gun behind, Whalen said.

The chief said he realizes lifting such a law could result in "turf wars" among law enforcement officers especially for county sheriff's agencies.

Cosby, Cher top awards

BURBANK, Calif. — Bill Cosby and Cher were named America's favorite all-around stars, and Rosanne Barr and her TV husband, John Goodman, were picked favorite performers in a new television series at the 15th annual People's Choice Awards Sunday night.

"Rosanne," starring Barr as a round, acid-tongued housewife, was named favorite new television comedy series,

Law may be tested in Florida

United Press International

NEW PORT RICHEY — The new federal law which went into effect Sunday barring housing discrimination and its ultimate impact on children living in adult communities could be decided in Florida.

The Arborwood Homeowners Association says it will ask a judge to throw 22-month-old Johnny Malloy out of the Bayonet Point community. The Fair Housing Amendments Act is intended to bar all types of housing discrimination, including discrimination against families with children.

Congress realized some communities, especially in the Sun Belt, were intended for retirees. The law contains provisions to exclude those communities, said Kathlene Coughlin, a Department of Housing and urban Development attorney.

There are two ways all-adult communities may qualify as exempt from the law. Communities consisting entirely of persons 62 and older are exempt automatically. Communities in which 80 percent of the households contain one person 55 or older can become exempt if they provide significant services and facilities catering to older people and if they rewrite deed restrictions to reflect the 55 and older requirement.

The Malloy case and the case of 14-year-old Stacy Lynn Elmer of Zephyrhills "will probably be the first that are tested," said Coughlin, who interprets and enforces the new law throughout the southeast.

The Elmer case drew national attention when a judge ordered her to move out from her Zephyrhills home until her 15th birthday in April. The deed restriction in the mobile home subdivision prohibited children younger than 15 from living there.

The Elmers have a hearing in circuit court March 22 to argue whether the new law will entitle her to go home prior to her birthday.

Vincent Malloy, Johnny's father, said he will fight the homeowner's association as a matter of principle even though he plans to move from the home eventually. He bought the house for his now deceased father.

"Somebody has to stand, and I might as well be the one. Better me than someone with four kids," Malloy said.

POLICE BRIEFS

Suspected cocaine supplier arrested

WINTER SPRINGS — Sanford Police Chief Steven Harriett said a Winter Springs man arrested Saturday night after a search of his house turned up 240 grams of cocaine and $35,000, is suspected as a major supplier of cocaine in Sanford.

Sanford police, after reportedly linking Sean Dewitt Wearen, 22, of 159 Cloister Cove, Winter Springs, to cocaine deals in Sanford, executed a search warrant at his house at about 9:50 p.m. Saturday.

Wearen and Tangila Rebecca Gilbert, 21, are both charged with trafficking in more than 200 grams of cocaine and possession of cocaine. They are held without bond.

Suspected burglar found hiding

CASSELBERRY — Casselberry police who confronted a suspected burglar outside 1401 Tipton Road at about 6:20 a.m. Sunday chased the man, but lost him. Within minutes a woman reported the suspect might be under her house trailer. However, another victim reported finding the suspect under a desk inside that house trailer at 1679 Holiday Drive.

That was the end of the flight of John Clyde Graham, 22, of Orlando, who is charged with grand theft auto, burglary to an occupied dwelling, carrying a concealed weapon, and possession of cocaine and drug paraphernalia.

Police said they found a stolen car that Graham had reportedly been driving. It was parked outside the house where he was first spotted. Police said Graham was armed with a knife and also had a bag of cocaine and drug paraphernalia.

Pot found when man ordered from car

SANFORD — Sanford police investigating a reported trespassing at Wareco, 110 N. French Ave., at about 10:30 p.m. Saturday ordered a man out of his car.

He appeared to try to hide a bag of marijuana and a smoking pipe in his hand, police said.

Phillip R. Coffell, 38, of 500 Oak Ave. #4, Sanford, was charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana, resisting without violence and carrying a concealed knife. Bond is $500.

Man charged with car theft

OVIDO — Seminole County sheriff's deputies report spotting and stopping a car that had been reported stolen. The stop was made in Oviedo at about 2:20 a.m. today.

Stuart Wayne Fox, 30, of 2025 First Ave., Chuluota, was charged with grand theft auto in the case. Bond is $1,000.

Man reports attack, robbery

SANFORD — Harold Robert Hannah, 39, of 101 W. Ninth St., Sanford, told Sanford police he was pushed, kicked, threatened with a razor blade and robbed by from three to five men in a house at 702 Cypress Ave.

The incident occurred at about 10 p.m. Sunday and police said witnesses reported seeing the attack. Hannah lost $101 to the robbers, whom he said threatened to cut him and to break his bones, police reported.

Convenience store robbed

SANFORD — Seminole County sheriff's deputies are investigating a robbery of the Circle K, 4150 County Road 427, rural Sanford, at about 1:55 a.m. today.

The store manager said the robber, who was armed with a rifle, demanded and got an undetermined amount of cash. He ordered the manager to the floor before fleeing.

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Police here want to question a 26-year-old man seen leaving the scene of a late Saturday night slaying at Palm Springs Apartments.

Police aren't saying how George F. Aprilligano, 26, died. Officers who responded to a report of a disturbance at Aprilligano's house at 899-L Sabal Palm Circle, at 11:13 p.m. Saturday, noticed blood on the door handle of his pickup truck, police spokesman Jeff Hawkins said.

Police entered the apartment and found Aprilligano's body.

Witnesses reported seeing Yusuf Abdoul Furgan, 24, in the area at the time of the disturbance. He is being sought for questioning, Hawkins said. Furgan is black. He is 5 feet, 3 inches tall, with short hair. He weighs about 125 pounds. Police don't know where Furgan lives, but have been told that at one time he stayed with someone in the area of the killing.

Hawkins would not say how Aprilligano was killed.

Shooting ruled a suicide

SANFORD — Seminole County sheriff's investigators concluded that Cecile T. Ballias, 38, who was shot to death early March 8 at her home, committed suicide, after wounding her husband five times.

Daniel R. Balais, 41, of 5521 Garden Grove Circle, survived five bullet wounds, to go to a neighbor's house for help after his wife turned the gun on herself, sheriff's Capt. Roy Hughey said.

"It's not usual that's for sure," Hughey said, of Mrs. Ballias apparently having shot herself three times in the torso after wounding her husband during an argument. But he said that is what investigators concluded happened between 1 and 2 a.m. March 8.

Balais underwent surgery at Orlando Regional Medical Center on March 8.

Although there were initial reports from sheriff's deputies who said Mrs. Ballias had apparently committed suicide and attempted to murder her husband, investigators refused to comment on what happened until after an autopsy and the investigation was completed late last week.

WINTER SPRINGS — On a day custom made for baseball, Chuck Suggs must have been smiling down on the Seminole County Pony League fields where he'd spent much of his fifteen years. On Saturday, many of the kids who played ball with the late Lakeview Middle School student, and some who were too young to really remember, took time out from their games to honor him.

A memorial hewn from granite was unveiled by some of the youngsters who had been Suggs' friends.

Chuck, died October 9 at the age of 15, two months after a heart-lung transplant in London. Chuck responded well to the surgery in August, but two months later his body began to reject the new organs and he died following an infection which paralyzed his lungs.

"Chuck was a good ball player, a hard worker and an all-around nice kid," said Debbie Black, wife of the Pony League's president, Mike Black. Friends from the Seminole County Pony League helped the Suggs family raise thousands of dollars in the community for Chuck's medical expenses.

The family still owes nearly $20,000 to the London hospital where Chuck had his surgery. More fundraisers, including the second annual Chuck Suggs Road Rally, are currently being planned. Donations are also being accepted at any SunBank branch in Central Florida.

Chuck's father, Ed Suggs, had been president of the league prior to taking his son to England for the surgery. These days he coaches one of the Bronco teams which played on the field next to where his son's memorial was dedicated.

The memorial, which cost $750, was inscribed with a pair of crossed baseball bats and the words "Suggs Memorial/In Memory of Chuck Suggs/Dec. 8, 1972-Oct. 9, 1988/Through his courage, he inspired others."

Black said that is a sentiment shared by all who knew Suggs.

"He was always active with the league even when his health was so bad. He was always striving for excellence," she said.

U.S. downplaying harassment in Panama

United Press International

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials are deliberately downplaying the level of harassment and violence against U.S. military personnel and their families in Panama to avoid a new confrontation with Gen. Manuel Noriega, an independent military publication charged.

Citing a Feb. 28 Defense Department memo, the Army Times reported Sunday that there have been more than 1,000 incidents of harassment by Noriega's Panama Defense Forces in the past 13 months and the incidents are increasing rapidly.

The memo said that last month alone there were 42 separate cases in which U.S. servicemen were detained without charge and 36 incidents in which their freedom of movement was denied, the weekly newspaper reported. The incidents included cases where they were struck, kicked and punched, it said.

Elliott Abrams, former assistant secretary of state for Inter-American Affairs in the Reagan administration, told the publication there has been "a real effort" to downplay the incidents and keep information about them from being circulated widely in Washington.

Abrams charged that the Bush administration's failure to speak out has resulted in continued beatings of U.S. servicemen. "I would describe the U.S. reaction as pusillanimous," the newspaper quoted Abrams as saying.

Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is trying to "bury the incidents to achieve a business-as-usual relationship with Noriega," Abrams told the publication.

The Army Times reported that the House Foreign Affairs Committee is considering investigating the situation based on complaints from soldiers and other military personnel based in Panama.

There are 1,600 U.S. servicemen and 940 of their family members in Panama.

Noriega has been indicted in Florida on drug charges.

The Army Times report described several incidents in detail, including the abduction in November of Navy Petty Officer First Class Mike Nieves by Panama's transit police for parking his van in an airport no-parking zone.

Nieves was placed in a police vehicle and driven to a remote location where Panamanian officials tried to rob him, the paper said.

When Nieves resisted, he was beaten, kicked and threatened by police who put a pistol to his head and forced him to beg for his life, it said.

"Just before the agent pulled the trigger, a second agent pushed the pistol to the side and it went off," the Army Times reported, quoting a letter of protest to Panamanian police and Nieves own account. "Nieves passed out and the agents abandoned him."

The publication said the Defense Department memo also reported that Panamanian security forces stopped 21 Department of Defense school buses recently, frightening hundreds of school children on board.

It said agents of Panama's

Criminal Investigation Division were involved in this incident.

Illegal immigrants arrested in LA

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Immigration agents, continuing their efforts to quash the smuggling of illegal aliens across the country on commercial airlines, arrested 37 more immigrants at Southern California airports, agents said Sunday.

The arrests raised the total to more than 600 illegal immigrants who have been taken into custody at airports across the United States since Feb. 27. Most of the arrests have been in Southern California.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's latest raids late Saturday and early Sunday netted 33 immigrants at Los Angeles International Airport, said Los Angeles District Director Ernest Gustafson, who heads the operation.

Those arrested included 23 Mexican males, including two 18-year-olds, five people from El Salvador, four Dominican Republicans and one Guatemalan, Gustafson said.

"Twenty-nine of those had tickets to depart Los Angeles for various cities in the East," he said. "The rest were coming to buy tickets."

During a simultaneous operation at the suburban Ontario International Airport, four others were detained, including three men and one 18-year-old boy, all from Mexico, Gustafson said.

Despite the high-profile, well-publicized airport operation, immigrants continue to take their chances on catching flights out of Southern California to destinations on the East Coast without detection from INS agents.

"It's astounding that we keep arresting people. I can't understand it," said one INS special agent who works at the Los Angeles airport. "The operation has been going on for three weeks and there still seems to be an average of 40 a night."

He said agents working the airports are not plainclothes, but are near walking billboards in their government-issue blue jackets with huge yellow letters reading "Immigration Office" on the back and ball caps with their special agent badge on the front.

Many immigrants have paid smugglers, or "coyotes," between $500 and $6,000 in advance, usually in their hometowns in Central America or at Mexican border areas, with the promise of transportation to Los Angeles and other U.S. cities where jobs or relatives await.

Gustafson has said the focus of the airport raids is to smash the smuggling rings by apprehending the coyotes, who generally have a network of contacts across the United States.

Here's living proof the frontier is alive

The notion of The Frontier has profoundly affected the American psyche.

Historian Frederick Jackson Turner, who in his day revolutionized the study of American history, wrote that it was because of the frontier that a distinct American spirit evolved, one imbued with pioneering and individualism.

But by 1890, Jackson wrote, the real frontier no longer existed in the American west.

Yet, even to this day, dreams of heeding the exhortation, "Go west, young man," of pulling up stakes and heading out — highly romanticized though the notion may be — serves as an escape valve to release the sometimes awful pressure of a hum-drum life.

Every once in a while, someone comes into our lives to demonstrate how powerful the allure of the frontier continues to be.

Earlier this week, it was Hank Chalfoux, 40, who rode his mule-drawn wagon through Seminole County, en route back to Missouri, where he had started out on a sojourn to visit friends. Five years ago, he said, he gave up modern conveniences for a slower, simpler life, a cowboy's life.

The good old days never really were quite so good as we might imagine, but there's something admirable about a character who shucks convention, and in his own quiet way, does darn well what he pleases.

Hank Chalfoux is proof that even if the frontier is dead, its distinct spirit is alive in America.

Justifiable wrath

Many panic-stricken members of Congress who voted down a 51-percent raise now seem to think they no longer are obliged to ban the acceptance of hefty speaking fees paid to them by lobbying organizations. They are dead wrong, from an ethical as well as political standpoint.

One of the reasons for the huge proposed pay increase was to make it more palatable for lawmakers to stop padding their individual salaries with tens of thousands of dollars supplied by interest groups in the form of speaking fees. Such payments — totaling more than $10 million a year — are an insidious form of legalized bribery, and congressional leaders acknowledged as much when they initiated steps to abolish speaking fees in exchange for the raise.

Now that the pay increase has been aborted, however, the reform effort has ground to a halt as far as the Democratic leadership is concerned. House Speaker Jim Wright, who was badly burned over his inept handling of the pay debacle, no longer cares to hear about a ban on speaking fees.

Having acknowledged that personal payments from special interests are improper, lawmakers are going to have a tough time explaining to their constituents that they are now acceptable in light of the rejected raise. The foul message this sends is that taking bribes is OK unless lawmakers are paid six-figure salaries that make bribery unnecessary.

This message simply won't sell, particularly now that the brouhaha over congressional salaries has made voters more keenly aware than ever of the nefarious role of special-interest cash on Capitol Hill. The chairman of President Bush's new Commission on Federal Ethics Law Reform, retired federal judge Malcolm R. Wilkey, reflects the unsparing view of most voters: "The practice (of speaking fees) is evil."

White House never saw trouble coming

WASHINGTON — For weeks, there was an intense debate within the Bush administration over John Tower's fitness for the Pentagon's top job. Yet the personal character factors that eventually became central to his confirmation debate in the Senate were never seriously considered, according to a White House aide who took part in the discussions.

White House aides generally say that more time was spent in debating the choice of Tower than all other cabinet nominations combined. They now realize the debate centered on the wrong issues.

In order to understand the Tower nomination process one must understand the depth of the friendship between John Tower and George Bush. They go back almost 30 years together. The two were among a handful of men who founded the modern Republican Party in Texas.

Bush owes Tower for many of the top positions he won early in his career. Tower helped convince Ronald Reagan that Bush would make a good vice president. Tower worked long and hard for Bush's election this past year.

So, George Bush owes John Tower about as much as any politician can owe another. And the only thing Tower wants, and something he has wanted for two decades, is to be the top man at the Pentagon.

Tower, first elected to the Senate in 1961, soon found a home on the armed services committee. The committee and the Pentagon became his passion, and he probably would have left the Senate had either Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford or Ronald Reagan offered him the top job at Defense.

Well before election day, George Bush reportedly had his mind made up about two appointments: Jim Baker at State, and Tower at Defense. The Baker appointment was made immediately, but many of Bush's top advisers had serious reservations about Tower. Weeks of very sharp debate followed.

Top aides now realize the debate was on the wrong issue.

But that debate centered entirely on whether Tower could enact the reforms and budget cuts that the Bush administration wants.

Bush's top advisers all believed that Ronald Reagan's defense secretary, Casper Weinberger had let the Pentagon get out of control. They feared — in the words of one high-level White House aide — that Tower would become "Cap Jr." Their debate centered on whether Tower's record of ardent military support coupled with his defense consulting business indicated that he was too close to contractors to be a tough defense secretary.

Reportedly, Baker was very concerned about whether Tower had the management ability to run the Pentagon's vast bureaucracy; and only Secretary of Treasury Nicholas Brady raised questions about Tower's personal life.

It was decided that those issues would be left entirely to White House Counsel C. Boyden Gray, who would work with the FBI investigators. To protect Tower's privacy, he would report his findings only to Bush.

In the end, Tower won the group over by bringing in a plan detailing how he would reform the Pentagon, and by agreeing to accept a strong deputy to manage the bureaucracy on a day-to-day basis.

Bush urged to convert old bases to prisons

WASHINGTON — Last year, when George Bush only dreamed of being president, he suggested converting surplus military bases into federal prisons. Now that Bush's dream has come true, the federal prison system is like a pinch bringing him back to reality.

It is one of many pinches that will make Bush black and blue as he continues to settle into office. The budget deficit, the drug war, education and other policy problems are all easier to solve in the reverie of campaign promises.

Converting military bases to prisons is one promise that Bush should keep, if the job can be done for the same amount or less than it would cost to build new facilities. It would save jobs and businesses in cities that are dependent on bases targeted for the scrap heap. And a good place to start would be using the bases as federal detention centers.

Federal courts are located in 280 cities. The accused drug dealers, forgers, racketeers, tax dodgers and kidnapers who can't make bail must be kept in jails that are close to the courts. In big cities, the federal government operates its own detention centers, but in smaller cities and rural areas, federal prisoners are kept in local jails and the taxpayers foot the bill.

The National Drug Policy Board compiled a report on the shortcomings of federal pre-trial detention facilities and then kept that report under wraps. It predicts that by 1992, the U.S. Marshals Service will have to worry about finding beds for 15,306 people in custody daily. And without an ambitious construction plan, the federal government will fall approximately 8,626 beds short.

By 1992, an estimated 72 cities will be in what the U.S. Marshals Service calls "emergency status." That means there is no jail space available in those cities within one hour of a federal courthouse.

So what if a federal prisoner doesn't have the equivalent of a room at the Ritz within walking distance of the courthouse? Judges, and the American Civil Liberties Union, do not look kindly on anything that gets in the way of due process — including being too far away from one's lawyer and the judge, not to mention having to sleep on the floor because the detention center runs out of beds.

Several states have laws that prohibit them from overcrowding their jails. If local police don't have room for their own prisoners, they are not likely to welcome an influx of federal prisoners. "In this environment, it is very difficult for the Marshals Service to find local officials who are receptive to housing federal detainees," the confidential report warned. In other words, when law enforcement officials from the lowest to the highest levels promise to crack down on crime, it's every warden for himself in the fight for jail space.

In Albuquerque, N.M., city and county officials decided their jail space was at a premium and bumped the rental rates they charge for federal prisoners from $62.50 to $90 a day. The Marshals Service refused to pay, and moved its prisoners to a remote facility. Four people promptly escaped. The Marshals Service and the city finally compromised at $68 a day and the federal prisoners went back to the city jail.

On the average, it costs the Marshals Service $80 a day to rent space for its prisoners in city jails. The cost of maintaining a prisoner in a detention center owned by the federal government is $50 a day. It is clearly cheaper to own than to rent.

But Bush has not shown a willingness to budget the up-front costs of new detention facilities. In spite of his tough-on-crime rhetoric, his budget for the Bureau of Prisons is no more ambitious than the budget of his predecessor.

The federal government will fall approximately 8,626 beds short.

Eastern, Tower issues tell about Bush

WASHINGTON — The handling of the John Tower confirmation fight and the Eastern Airlines strike is showing signs of fundamental confusion in the fledgling Bush administration. In both instances, the disarray is contributing to the very result George Bush sought to avoid — a weakening of the authority of the President.

Bush had a clear right under existing law to order a 60-day cooling-off period in the dispute between Eastern and its machinists' union. That's what government mediators requested, in order to avoid a strike which threatens the survival of the company, the jobs of the workers and the travel plans of thousands. Instead of using his executive power, Bush let the strike begin and then said that if it spread, he would toss the ball to Congress with a request that it repeal old legislation that allows the union to disrupt operations at other carriers.

In the showdown over Tower's appointment as secretary of defense, where the Constitution and political reality clearly dictated that he could not act unilaterally, Bush failed to acknowledge the constraints that the Senate's role placed on his freedom of action, and thereby precipitated an unnecessary crisis.

Bush came to office believing that Congress has encroached on presidential prerogatives in many areas, a view which many scholars and disinterested observers believe warranted. But by shunting responsibility to Congress in the Eastern case and refusing to acknowledge the Senate's role in the Tower confirmation, he may have weakened the case for reclaiming authority that is rightly his.

In the Tower case, Bush feels aggrieved because the Democratic senators opposing Tower have failed to demonstrate Tower's unfitness for the Pentagon post. Their reply is that the proof lies in the FBI reports, which Bush properly refuses to make public. But that leaves the public in the unhappy position of being unable to determine whether Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.) and Co. read the evidence properly, or whether Bush and the Republican senators supporting Tower have the better case.

An outsider, not privy to the secret files, cannot judge that question. But anyone can understand that when the voters mandated a continuation of divided government last November, they created a situation requiring that Bush and Nunn BOTH have confidence in the secretary of defense.

A defense secretary is not like a federal judge. The latter, once confirmed by the Senate, never has to go back there again. But a defense secretary has to come back to the Senate Armed Services Committee again and again and again in order to do his job. And as chairman of the committee, Nunn dominates defense policy on Capitol Hill, both intellectually and politically, to an extent rarely seen in the postwar period.

Given that reality, the White House had only two options: Either be sure that Sam Nunn stayed on board, or find someone else. It did neither, and now it is paying the price.

Initially, Nunn accepted the President's choice, but the continuing accumulation of evidence about Tower's personal habits caused the Georgian to change his mind. At that point, the nomination was kaput.

The reason, very simply, is that a secretary of defense operating under the handicap of a no-confidence vote from Sam Nunn would be as crippled in doing his daily work as one operating without the support of George Bush.

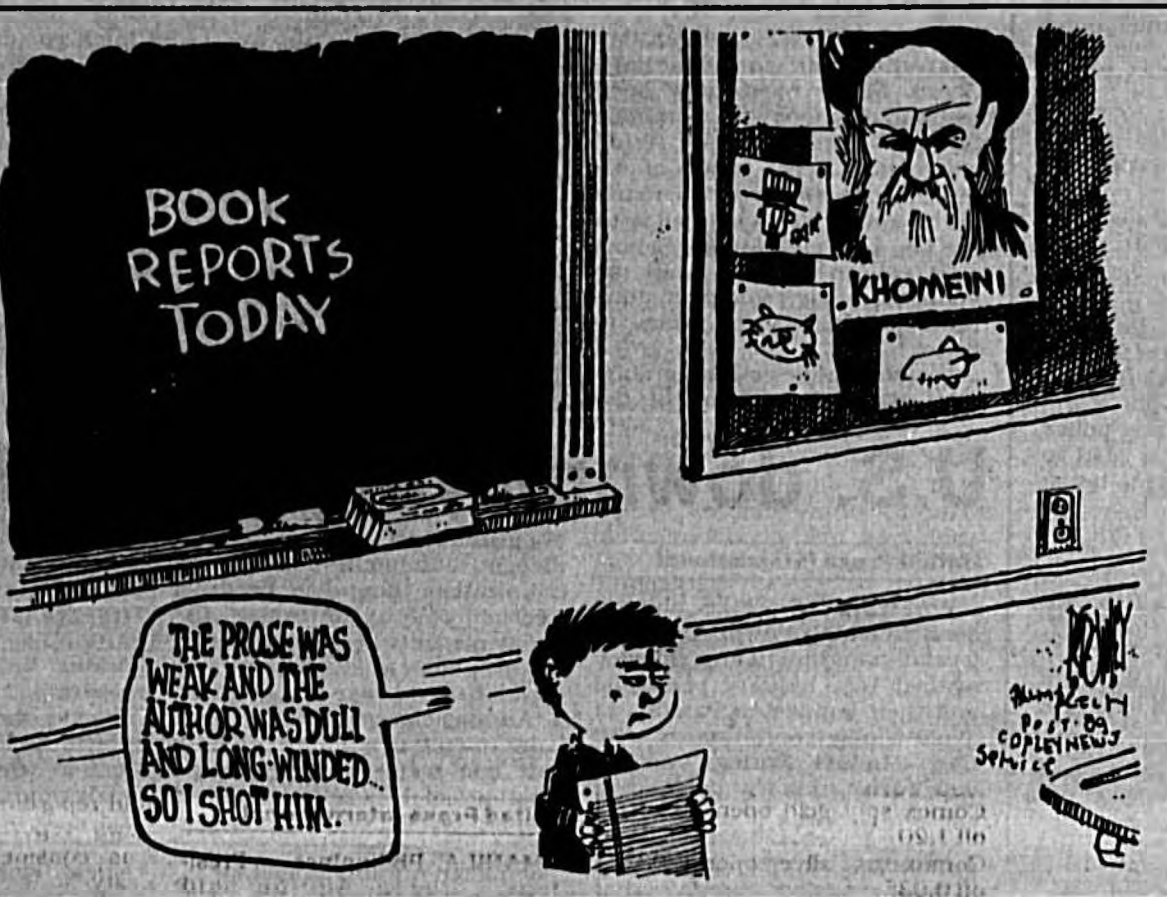

In the Eastern case, the power realities were different, but the President has muddled the picture. If his goal were to prevent the strike/shutdown and put the burden for resolving the dispute equally on the shoulders of the company and the union, he could have given the mediators 60 days more to work for a solution. By sidestepping that action, Bush has made it appear that he has another agenda. He seems intent on putting pressure on the workers to accept the concessions that Eastern boss Frank Lorenzo has failed to extract in the free collective-bargain process. And he seems eager to pressure the Democratic Congress to give him a change in labor law if refused to pass in the past.

Bush can make a plausible case on the merits that the law should be changed and the wage concessions granted. But his tactic again fails to recognize the political realities. The leaders of other unions are far more committed to the machinists' battle with Lorenzo than they were to the air controllers' strike in 1981, which Ronald Reagan used to justify busting that union. The Democrats in Congress are anything but eager to hand Bush a public-relations victory at the expense of their allies in organized labor.

Because Bush in effect invited this crisis by declining to exercise powers Congress has given the President, his justification seems strained. The ultimate damage is to the very presidential authority Bush set out to protect.

He may have weakened the case for reclaiming authority that is rightfully his.

NEW YORK — Prices opened higher Monday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues, boosted by bargain hunting in the wake of the previous session's decline. The Dow Jones Industrial average, which fell 9.28 Friday, was up 6.07 to 2288.21 shortly after the market opened. Advances led declines 492-258 among the 1,209 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Early turnover amounted to about 7,838,000 shares. The stock market closed lower Friday in moderate trading after the February report on U.S. employment led to another case of jitters about the outlook for inflation and interest rates.

Analysts said the decline was caused by investors' disappointment over the February employment data, which showed that the jobless rate dropped to 5.1 percent in February, the lowest level since May 1974.

Wall Street observers also cited futures-related selling and weakness in bond prices as factors behind the retreat, although late-afternoon buying helped the market recoup some of its earlier losses.

Job-creation figures in recent months have become one of the most accurate signs of economic health.

Dollar higher; gold down

United Press International

The dollar moved slightly higher Monday in light trading on major foreign currency markets. Gold moved lower. In Tokyo, the dollar closed higher against the Japanese yen at 129.57 yen, up 0.89 from 128.88 yen Friday. It was the highest closing rate since Feb. 8.

Dealers said the improvement in the U.S. employment rate prompted Japanese banks to buy dollars.

The dollar closed lower in Singapore, at 1.9385 Singapore dollars, down from 1.941 on Friday.

In Europe, the dollar began the week in Frankfurt at 1.864 West German marks, up from 1.862 marks on Friday. The dollar began the day in Zurich at 1.593 Swiss francs, up from 1.5925. In Paris, the dollar opened at 6.3225 French francs, up from 6.3035.

The dollar opened in Brussels at 39.22 Belgian francs, up from 38.915, and began the week in Italy at 1,367.50 Italian lire, up from 1,363.95 lire.

In London, the British pound began the day at $1.717 compared with $1.7155 on Friday.

In early New York trading, the dollar was slightly higher against key foreign currencies in thin trading as analysts said the dollar's mildly bullish undertone is likely to continue.

Friday, the dollar rose against key currencies as dealers digested a strong government report on February employment.

Hyatt buys St. Louis hotel

United Press International

ST. LOUIS — Hyatt Hotels Corp. has been chosen to take over the 542-room luxury hotel at St. Louis Union Station, owners of the retail and entertainment complex said Sunday.

The hotel, which has been operated as the Omni International Hotel since Union Station reopened four years ago, will be renamed the Hyatt Regency St. Louis, said Steven Miller, senior vice president of St. Louis Station Associates, an affiliate of Oppenheimer Properties Inc. of New York, the partnership that owns the 95-year-old renovated railroad station. The new name will be effective by April 30, when the Hyatt Corp. begins operating the hotel, Miller said. The hotel has been managed by Omni International Hotels since its opening in 1985.

The hotel is part of Union Station, a National Historic Landmark, once a hub for the nation's rail system that served as many as 100,000 passengers a day from the 1920s through the 1950s.

Bush to meet Israeli leader

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush meets today with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens in an effort to promote the potential for movement in the Middle East peace process and in U.S. foreign policy.

"Exploratory" is the word the Israeli news media has attached to the talks Arens will conduct with Bush, Secretary of State James Baker and other U.S. officials. Neither side comes armed with a new peace plan or bold new ideas about direct talks between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

However, in the wake of a highly visible Soviet diplomatic offensive in the Middle East, American officials are expected to suggest immediate steps Israel can take to defuse tensions in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to create an atmosphere more conducive to formal peace talks.

In advance of the Arens mission, designed to lay the groundwork for an April visit by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Israeli officials said the United States was interested in "confidence-building measures" that could improve the political climate for negotiations.

Proposals are expected to include at least a partial Israeli release of Palestinians arrested during the 15-month-old uprising in the occupied territories and a relaxation of restrictions imposed on Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza in the course of Israel's crackdown.

The call for concessions by Israel would be balanced by renewed U.S. pressure on the Palestine Liberation Organization to curb violence in the territories and to end military raids into Israel from southern Lebanon.

Bush's administration is scheduled to have its first official meeting with the PLO this week in Tunisia, where U.S. Ambassador Robert Pelletreau is the single designated point of contact for a dialogue authorized in December by President Reagan after PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat publicly renounced terrorism and appeared to accept Israel's right to exist.

U.S. officials have said for some time that Arafat should be tested on those commitments before the PLO is awarded any role, direct or otherwise, in the peace process.

Arens, a leader of the right-wing Likud Party headed by Shamir, intends to promote in Washington the idea of "an interim agreement" that would serve as a starting point for the peace process. However, Shamir has ruled out talks with the PLO and has been bolstered to a degree by the cool attitude Bush has taken toward the kind of international conference proposed by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze during his recent trip to the Middle East.

Last week, Shamir reacted with harsh criticism to the conclusion of an Israeli research center that real progress toward peace would be impossible without a dialogue between Israel and the PLO. The report by the Jaffe Center for Strategic Studies further recommended a 10- to 15-year period of broad autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza.

Laos pledges help in search for MIAs

United Press International

BANGKOK, Thailand — Laos says it will continue to cooperate in the search for American MIAs despite a cutoff of U.S. aid following charges by Washington that Laotian officials are involved in narcotics trafficking.

But a transcript of a broadcast by state-run Laotian radio received in Bangkok Monday made no mention of the Laotian government's refusal last week to permit a U.S. technical team to travel to Laos for a planned joint search for remains of some of the more than 500 Americans missing in action in the Southeast Asian nation.

"The Laotian government and people have always shown sympathy for the American people who lost husbands and sons fighting in the U.S. war of aggression against Laos," the radio said in a Laotian language broadcast Friday.

"That is why the Laotian government and people have provided — and will continue to provide — cooperation with the U.S. government in searching for the remains of the U.S. MIAs in Laos," it said.

The radio, however, said that in return the Laotian people "also seek sympathy and justice from the American government and people."

A 14-man team set to take part March 4 in a joint search in southeastern Laos waited nearly one week for government permission to enter the country as agreed. When no permission was given the team returned to the United States.

In Bangkok, U.S. Embassy spokesman Ross Petzing said he was unaware of any change in the situation following the broadcast.

The U.S. government, in a report dated March 1, said Laos produced about 300 tons of opium last year.

"There continues to be information that the extensive involvement of (Laotian) military and civilian government officials in the narcotics trade suggests this is a matter of de facto government policy," the administration report said.

Official Laotian radio denied the charges.

"The Laotian government has not only enacted laws to carry out such suppression operations, but has also encouraged (opium-growing) hill tribe people to move to lowlands to grow rice," the broadcast said.

"At the same time it has also meted out heavy punishment against any persons found engaging in drug production and trafficking," it said.

Aquino considering amnesty for rebels

United Press International

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino said Monday she is considering an amnesty offer for leftist and rightist rebels, while the military announced at least 77 people were killed last week in the country's communist insurgency.

"We have been discussing that and I will be signing an executive order which will outline what (rebels) can do," Aquino told reporters when asked about news reports the government was considering granting amnesty to communist guerrillas and renegade soldiers.

"It has come to our attention that some (rebels) would like to take advantage of this," Aquino said. "But of course this needs the concurrence of Congress."

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos said in a visit to a military camp in the central city of Iloilo Saturday that under guidelines being drawn up rebels should take responsibility for crimes committed.

Sen. Ernesto Maceda, chairman of the Senate defense committee, said there has been no discussion so far on an amnesty proposal.

"It's not clear yet whether there is any policy along this line. My impression, up to this point, is that the president is not sympathetic to giving amnesty to military rebels," said Maceda.

Discovery

The primary goal of the five-day mission was the deployment of a giant $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite — TDRS — six hours and 12 minutes after blastoff. The satellite, working with another such relay station already in orbit, will allow NASA to stay in near-constant contact with future shuttle crews.

With the satellite safely on its way, the astronauts planned to devote the rest of the mission to a series of experiments, including one involving four rats with deliberately broken leg bones that are part of a student experiment to find out how weightlessness affects bone healing.

The rats will be killed after the flight so the bones can be studied by Brown University medical student Andrew Fraas in a project that could shed light on how astronauts might be able to cope with broken bones during long-duration space flights.

Other experiments aboard the orbiter include a device to grow near-perfect protein crystals in a bid to develop new cancer drugs, an experiment to study how plants grow in weightlessness and another student project involving 32 chicken eggs to find out how zero gravity affects embryo development.

If all goes well, Coats and Blaha will guide Discovery to a landing Saturday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The 4,668-pound TDRS satellite, built by TRW Space & Technology Group of Redondo Beach, Calif., and identical to one destroyed in the Challenger disaster, ultimately will be maneuvered to a point above the equator off the east coast of Brazil.

Blaha planned to film the satellite's departure from the shuttle with a large-format IMAX camera on board for a movie about Earth's environment titled "The Fragile Earth."

The big relay station was bolted to a $45 million "inertial upper-stage" rocket built by Boeing of Seattle that was required to raise the satellite's altitude from the shuttle's 184-mile-high orbit to 22,300 miles above the equator.

At that altitude, the satellite's orbital speed will be synchronized with the rotation of the Earth and the spacecraft will appear to hang stationary in the sky, allowing uninterrupted service.

A TDRS satellite launched from the shuttle Challenger in 1983 currently is stationed over the Atlantic with one launched from Discovery Sept. 29 stationed over the Pacific.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Dole Judges Tower flap 'a wash'

WASHINGTON — Senate Republican leader Robert Dole judged the political impact of the John Tower affair to be "sort of a wash," but he warned Democrats their decision to deal President Bush a historic defeat will not be forgotten soon.

"George Bush, in my view, has got a pretty good memory," Dole said Sunday, three days after Tower's rejection for the post of defense secretary. "He's not going to do anything bad, but he remembers who helps and who hurts in the process."

With the Senate Armed Services Committee now preparing hearings for Bush's second choice for the Cabinet job, Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., Dole voiced confidence that the political sting of the Tower defeat will pass.

The Kansas senator's attempt to put the bitter episode behind Bush, however, did little to hide the wounds the new administration sustained from a lengthy fight that distracted attention from other priorities and reinforced doubts about political decision-making in the White House.

"This is a battle Bush did not have to lose," a veteran Republican strategist said during the weekend. "It was a critical early test and they just blew it."

Reagan tried to weaken standards

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan's administration tried to weaken federal cleanup standards for toxic waste dumps last year, backing off only when EPA officials warned the move would ignite "a firestorm" of public criticism, documents showed.

The internal Environmental Protection Agency documents were released Sunday by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, who warned President Bush against continuing the type of "interference" with EPA policy-making shown by the administration in which he previously served.

The documents revealed that, under Reagan, the White House Office of Management and Budget sought to water down requirements concerning the degree to which cancer risk should be reduced when cleaning up a toxic waste site.

No answers yet in bombing of Rogers van

LA JOLLA, Calif. — Investigators asked the public to provide clues Monday to help find out who bombed a van driven by the wife of Navy Capt. Will Rogers, and refused to speculate the explosion was a terrorist reprisal for the U.S. downing of an Iranian jetliner.

After some 30 federal agents meticulously combed the area of the explosion and carefully pored over the fire-gutted vehicle, the intersection was reopened early Sunday, FBI spokesman Gene Riehl said. The van was towed from the area late Saturday and three drums filled with bomb fragments and other debris have been sent to Washington for analysis.

"We decided that we're really into an intensive investigative effort and we can't talk about anything," Riehl said.

Monday's launch of Discovery is the first of what will be seven shuttle launches in 1989.

Malone first woman to be 'voice of NASA'

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — The first woman in NASA's 30-year history to count down a manned space flight is excited about being the Sally Ride of launch commentators for Monday's scheduled flight of the shuttle Discovery.

Lisa Malone, 27, a native of Mobile, Ala., sits in the firing room at the launch control center. At her console are a variety of audio channels between the astronauts and rocket engineers, a TV monitor and reference manuals.

"I remember watching the first space shuttle launch. I was in college. They showed a shot of the firing room. I saw all those people sitting there at their consoles and I thought 'Golly that would be neat! That must be something else!'"

Malone first went to work for NASA as a student in 1982 and took a fulltime post in 1984 after graduation from the University of Alabama. She is well-versed in the nuts and bolts of the orbiter, its powerful main engines and its solid-fuel rocket boosters.

"They've always had a man doing the launch commentaries for a manned launch and there's really not been a woman in this office in a position to be doing commentary until now," she said.

"I like a lot going on at once. I like a lot of activity — and that's exactly what's going on in the firing room. There's all kinds of conversations going on simultaneously. You can dial into any channel that you need to listen to."

Malone has already provided pre-countdown commentary on other shuttle missions, including the first two post-Challenger accident flights.

She also provided the launch commentary for the ill-fated flight of a Delta rocket on May 3, 1986, that failed shortly after launch, as well as the full dress rehearsal of the latest mission, on Feb. 7.

Still, Malone has been working with veteran countdown caller and public affairs officer Hugh Harris, to prepare for launch day.

"I have done quite a few early morning commentaries before the (Challenger) accident," she said. "It's been three years since the accident. But during the accident downtime there was no time to practice. No opportunity at all to train."

"There was a period of practicing and sitting over in the firing room and all and I was really ready. And then we had three years where we didn't do anything."

"I guess this is just like any job. You're pretty much on your own."

A closer look at the crew of Discovery...

United Press International

JAMES P. BAGIAN

James Bagian, an engineer, surgeon and pilot who somehow found time to become a full-time NASA astronaut, bubbles over with enthusiasm when asked about his role aboard the shuttle Discovery in the third post-Challenger flight.

"The reason I'm doing this is because I enjoy it," he said before blastoff Monday on the 28th shuttle mission. "The fun part to being an astronaut ... the fun part is the challenge of working on technical problems."

Bagian's role aboard Discovery is fitting for a man with his background: he will operate several experiments devoted to life sciences and biology, including one he helped design that could pay off in preventing space sickness.

In another experiment, plant seeds will be studied to help scientists learn more about future life support systems for long-duration space flights, such as a mission to Mars.

"It's looking at how the plant grows, how the chromosomes partition and divide, how the cells actually grow, all that, to understand whether plants can grow well in orbit," he said.

"Why do we care about that? For closed life-support systems, many use plants because they cannot only provide nutrients but also can scrub the atmosphere of carbon dioxide and put oxygen in, so we don't have to worry about having sophisticated equipment."

Bagian, a 37-year-old outdoorsman and a private pilot, was born in Philadelphia and was graduated first in his class at the Drexel Institute of Technology in 1973 with a degree in mechanical engineering.

After graduation, he worked for 3M Co. in Bristol, Penn., and later as a mechanical engineer at the U.S. Naval Air Test Center in Patuxent River, Md. While at Patuxent, he pursued a medical degree, graduating from Thomas Jefferson University in 1977.

Bagian completed one year of general surgery at the Geisinger Medical Center in Danville, Penn., and then went to work as a flight surgeon and medical officer at the Johnson Space Center in Houston where he met his future wife, the former Tandi Benson of Seattle. The couple has one child, Krista Rose, 3.

Asked how his wife, a NASA engineer, viewed his flight aboard Discovery, Bagian laughed and said, "Nothing that's happened has been a surprise."

"My wife has been around the program longer than I have," he said, and has served in a variety of engineering roles at the Johnson Space Center. "She understands all that goes on."

"But yeah, she'll be glad when I'm back safe and sound. We both have some concern. I think everybody on the crew has some concern. But we're confident and we think the risk is down to the level we're willing to accept. But that doesn't say we think there's no risk. She'll be glad when the risk has passed successfully."

JAMES F. BUCHLI

Astronaut James Buchli, a Marine Corps colonel with two shuttle missions to his credit, plans to take advantage of his flight aboard the shuttle Discovery this week to look for possible changes in Earth's atmosphere.

An infantry platoon commander during the Vietnam War, Buchli last flew in space in 1985. He was scheduled to blast off on his third space flight Monday aboard the shuttle Discovery on the third post-Challenger shuttle mission.

"What I'm really looking forward to, now that it's been three years, is to look and see what the atmosphere looks like, see whether there's any global changes that have taken place," Buchli said in an interview.

He also looked forward to the thrill of launch. When asked what aspect of lift-off is the most impressive, he immediately said: "The power of the solid rocket boosters once they kick in."

"You really notice that," he said. "It's a real eye opener. It's not thrilling in the sense that you go 'wow, what a ride.' It's thrilling in the sense that there's a lot of power there."

"And really, you're too busy to be worried too much about what's happening to you from a personal safety or well-being standpoint."

Still, the memory of the Challenger disaster lingers in the minds of NASA's astronauts — including Buchli.

"I think we're pursuing a very vigorous and doable schedule and I think regardless of how long we go away from (Challenger), the memories of that and its impact on the program are always going to be there," he said.

"It's going to heighten our resolve to be as professional as we possibly can and to do as good a job as we can with the realization that anytime you fly in space there's always an element of risk."

Buchli first blasted off aboard Discovery on Jan. 24, 1985. It was the first fully-classified American manned space flight and because of the unprecedented security surrounding the mission, Buchli's role was never divulged.

He went on to serve as a "mission specialist" aboard the shuttle Challenger when it took off Oct. 30, 1985, on a German-financed Spacelab science mission.

JOHN E. BLAHA

Astronaut John Blaha, a crack Air Force test pilot who has rocketed to the edge of space at the controls of a souped-up research plane, eagerly anticipates his first real space voyage aboard the shuttle Discovery.

Even so, Blaha, 46, will be all business once he straps into the co-pilot's seat on the shuttle's flight deck for blastoff Monday on a five-day mission.

"I have a routine that I do, things that I keep checking and monitoring and I will for certain do that," he said. "I may not see much of the ascent out the window. What I am certain I will do ... is say hey, it's time to go to work. You've got to sort of put yourself on that level to be ready and not be distracted."

Despite his central role in the success of the 28th shuttle mission, the third since the Challenger disaster and the first of seven planned for 1989, Blaha sees himself merely as one member of a large team.

"I really believe that this program here is a big team program. I've worked and seen these people for years and I just think I'm on a different little piece of that pie."

"I'm sure that when I fly I will see something that I've never seen before and that will be the change for me," he said. "As far as the real potatoes of what really goes on here in this space program, I think I'm just a little bitty part of that. We're just another element in that big system."

MICHAEL L. COATS

For veteran astronaut Michael Coats, commander of the shuttle Discovery and an expert on emergency abort procedures, the specter of the Challenger disaster is never far from mind, especially when he visits the Kennedy Space Center.

"I have a difficult time when I stay in the crew quarters at the Kennedy Space Center because I was there right after the accident for so long," Coats said in an interview. "That was a nightmare."

"Every day we'd go out and pick through the wreckage trying to find remains and that was very difficult for us to do. Those were our friends. It was traumatic for all of us down there."

Coats, 43, and four crewmates were scheduled to blast off aboard the shuttle Discovery Monday for a five-day mission to launch a $100 million NASA communications satellite.

While time has healed many of the wounds of the Jan. 28, 1986, Challenger disaster, Coats, a Navy commander, said the accident was particularly traumatic for his wife and children. While his two children, Laura, 15, and Paul, 10, looked forward to watching their father's second launch, his wife Diane "is frankly kind of dreading it."

"It's been a tough time," Coats said. "If she had her (preference), I probably would not fly ever again. But she also realizes it's important to me."

"She knows I want to fly and it's important to me but it's also very, very hard on her. We've got a very close-knit family and she saw what it did to the Challenger families and it's not a nice thing."

Coats' flight marked a sort of homecoming for the self-professed "football fanatic" and history buff because he first flew in space as co-pilot aboard Discovery during the orbiter's maiden launch Aug. 30, 1984. One of his crewmates on that flight was Judith Resnik, who was killed in the Challenger disaster.

"As a test pilot, it's always exciting when you're flying the first flight of a vehicle," Coats said before his first mission. "It's an honor, in a way, to get to fly it the first time."

In the two years between the loss of Challenger and his assignment in March 1988 as commander of the third post-Challenger flight, Coats helped re-evaluate emergency abort procedures in a concentrated effort to improve the odds in the event of problems during launch.

ROBERT C. SPRINGER

Astronaut Robert Springer is responsible for launching a $100 million satellite from the shuttle Discovery this week in his first space flight. His second priority is returning to Earth and sharing the wonder of space.

"That's always a limitation to scientists and engineers and test pilots, you tend to come back and not talk about it," he said. "I don't want to be one of those. I want to be somebody who can come back and share the whole experience with the people who are interested in it."

Scheduled to blast off Monday aboard Discovery along with four crewmates, Springer, a Marine colonel and veteran aviator, waited patiently for his first ride into orbit. While the wait has been frustrating at times, especially in the wake of the Challenger disaster, the long years of training have been worth it.

"Part of the real thrill of this for me is not only getting to experience it myself, but getting a chance to share this with the many people who have supported me over the past eight years," he said.

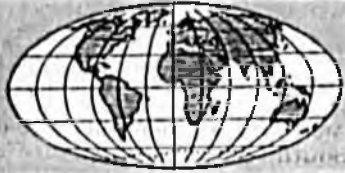

The goal of the flight is the launch of a $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite scheduled to be deployed by Springer six hours and 13 minutes after blastoff.

The satellite will join two others already in space to complete an orbital communications network designed to keep shuttle crews and other satellites in contact with the ground for at least 85 percent of each orbit.

While the satellite is clearly important to NASA, as are the experiments aboard Discovery, Springer described the flight as a "bread and butter" mission. More important, he said, was the context of this flight and those that follow.

Springer, a 6-handicap golfer and an avid windsurfer, was born in St. Louis but considers Ashland, Ohio his hometown.

WORLD BRIEFS

Battle for Jalalabad enters second week

PESHAWAR, Pakistan — A bloody assault by Afghan guerrillas on the eastern city of Jalalabad entered its second week Monday as hundreds of captured troops, some as young as 12, were detained in a rebel border camp.

Rebel sources in the Pakistani border city of Peshawar said thousands of U.S.-backed guerrillas attacked Jalalabad from the north Sunday as part of the operation that began March 6.

The sources said seven guerrillas were killed and five wounded in the latest assault on the city, 70 miles east of the Afghan capital of Kabul. They gave no indication of Afghan casualties but said the rebels shot down a jet fighter.

Official Kabul Radio said Sunday the rebels fired 3,000 rockets at Jalalabad over a 24-hour period and claimed Afghan troops killed 386 guerrillas and wounded 150. It put the rebel death toll from six days of fighting at 3,100.

Iran seeks leadership role at conference

Foreign ministers from Islamic nations gathered Monday in the Saudi Arabian capital of Riyadh for a four-day meeting that Iran says should focus on forging a unified stand against the Western publication of "The Satanic Verses."

But analysts believe Saudi Arabia and Egypt will block any Iranian attempts to make political gains from "The Satanic Verses" affair that has led to a break in diplomatic relations between Tehran and Britain and strained ties with other Western nations.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said the Iranian delegation flew Sunday to Riyadh for the meeting of the 46-nation Islamic Conference Organization beginning Monday.

The news agency said the ICO meeting "is taking place at a crucial period when relations between the West and the Islamic world are in deep crisis over the blasphemous book 'The Satanic Verses.'"

Israeli troops kill Moslem infiltrators

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Israeli troops clashed with Moslem guerrillas trying to sneak into Israel's self-declared security zone in southern Lebanon, killing two people, security sources said.

In Beirut, air traffic was interrupted Sunday when the Christian military government closed the airport for security reasons.

A spokesman for Israel's surrogate forces, the South Lebanon Army, was quoted on the militia-run Voice of the South radio as saying that Israeli troops patrolling near Hasbaya, 10 miles north of Israel, clashed with a guerrilla squad shortly after midnight Sunday, killing two of the infiltrators.

The Israeli soldiers opened tank fire at the infiltrators who shot back with automatic rifles, the spokesman said, adding that "the bodies of two guerrillas and Soviet-made Kalashnikov rifles and hand grenades" were found in the area Sunday morning.

The SLA later delivered the bodies to the Lebanese Red Cross.

Botha intends to stay in power

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — President Pieter Botha defended his decision to return to office after recovering from stroke and denied he is "an old man clinging to power."

In an interview Sunday with the state-run South African Broadcasting Corp., the 73-year-old Botha said his continued reign is constitutional, accused unnamed "forces" of "seeking to exploit an unfortunate situation" and ruled out an election this year.

"Stay calm," he said. "We're living in dangerous times, in difficult times. My party and colleagues have never abandoned me or given me cause to doubt them."

Most of the interview was conducted in Afrikaans, a form of Dutch, but in response to one question in English about his ability to remain in power, Botha responded, "I'm not an old man clinging to power. I'm clinging to good order and I'm clinging to the idea of good discipline."

IN BRIEF

BASKETBALL

Laimbeer, Jones reach 10,000

Bill Laimbeer was the focal point Sunday night in a game in which he scored his 10,000th career NBA point. Meanwhile, Caldwell Jones was barely noticed as he also reached the milestone.

Laimbeer scored 24 points, including a 19-foot jumper with 48 seconds remaining to reach 10,000 points, leading the Detroit Pistons to a 110-104 victory over the Washington Bullets.

Meanwhile, Jones scored just one basket in Portland's 123-110 loss to Cleveland, but also put him at the 10,000 mark.

Jones reached the milestone in 1,207 games, the most it has taken any player to score 10,000 points.

In other NBA games Sunday, Boston topped Denver 121-115, Sacramento clipped Charlotte 114-105 and the Los Angeles Lakers thumped Golden State 126-115.

TENNIS

Lendl efficiently beats Edberg

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Ivan Lendl needed just 57 minutes Sunday to beat Sweden's Stefan Edberg, 6-2, 6-3, in the final of the $415,000 Eagle Tennis Classic.

Lendl, the top-ranked men's player in the world, got in 88 percent of his first serves and ignored 90 degree heat to down Edberg on the outdoor hard courts at the Princess Hotel.

The victory was worth $59,500 for Lendl and was his 75th career singles title, second only to Jimmy Connors' 107.

Edberg, 23, who is the reigning Wimbledon champion and has 18 singles titles, received $29,750 as runner-up.

Lendl is 8-4 against Edberg with victories in five of their last six meetings.

COLLEGE HOOPS

Invitations sent for NIT party

For some college basketball coaches, a bid to the National Invitation Tournament was a welcome surprise for those who believed their season was over. For others, it provides a chance to show the NCAA Tournament selection committee it was wrong in passing their teams over.

The NIT Committee announced its field for the 32-team tournament Sunday night, inviting the top teams not selected for the 64-team NCAA field. The NIT begins with eight first-round games Wednesday night and will continue through to the championship March 29 at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Connecticut, which won the tournament last season, will be back to defend its title. The Huskies, 16-12, visit North Carolina-Charlotte in a first-round game Wednesday night.

Also returning to the tournament is New Mexico, which has been a marginal team rejected by the NCAA in each of the past six years. The Lobos, 20-10, host Santa Clara in a first-round game Thursday night.

HOCKEY

Kings working for second place

The Los Angeles Kings are using intensity and solid defense to make a run for second place in the Smythe Division.

The Kings exhibited both Sunday night in posting a 6-3 triumph over the Edmonton Oilers, moving into a second-place tie with the Oilers with 78 points. Los Angeles has two games in hand.

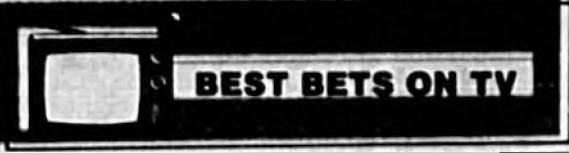

"We don't make any bones about it — we want to finish second," said the Kings' Wayne Gretzky, who set up the winning goal and scored another. "We definitely want home-ice advantage."

"We finished our checks well tonight," Los Angeles Coach Robby Florek said. "The Oilers didn't check as well as they usually do, but I don't know how much of a barometer this was for the playoff."

In other games, Buffalo beat Boston 3-2, Pittsburgh clipped Chicago 6-5, Philadelphia and Hartford tied 3-3, Winnipeg topped Toronto 9-7 and Minnesota defeated St. Louis 5-3.

Kite skies at Bay Hill

BY JIM RICKENBACKER
 Herald Correspondent

ORLANDO — Becoming the first player to win two titles in the 11-year history of what is now The Neale Invitational didn't exactly come to pass the way Tom Kite planned it.

On his way to capturing this championship Sunday over good friend Davis Love III, Kite survived a meltdown, a splashdown and a letdown before prevailing just before sundown on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff.

Yes, one of golf's most consistent players this decade came undone on the back nine. Just when T.K. appeared ready to deliver a KO with a four-under 32 on the front nine of the sun-splashed Bay Hill Club, Kite began missing greens. His nightmarish nine culminated with a splashdown on his second shot at the treacherous 486-yard 18th.

Slumping over his 4-iron that he'd selected to safely clear the water that seemingly engulfs the pencil-wide green, Kite thought he had handed

Love the tournament when his ball found the hazard.

"I was in between a 4 and 5-iron, so I figured I'd hit a smooth 4-iron and take the water out of play," said Kite, surrounded by twin sons David and Paul and daughter Stephanie in the press tent. "I was more afraid of hitting it into the back bunker than the water."

"But I was very surprised that Davis made (double-bogey) six after I hit it in the water. As soon as his second shot flew the green, I started talking to myself. I thought I could get it up and down for bogey. I was surprised he didn't get his third shot on the green and was surprised he missed a four-footer for bogey."

Kite, the PGA Tour's scoring leader and fourth on the money list after pocketing $144,000 here, was shocked at the way his game went south on the final nine.

On No. 16 green where he wrapped up the win with a two-putt par, the No. 3 money winner in PGA Tour history attempted to recount his back-nine experience that ended at four-over 39.

"It was like a whole different guy stepped inside my body," said Kite, in the twilight's last gleaming. "I played as good as I could over the first nine holes. Then I made the turn."

Kite missed hitting the first three greens in regulation on the final nine but saved par on each hole with either brilliant shots around the green or with a bulls-eye putt. On No. 13, his wedge approach bounced into the bunker and resulted in a bogey.

He chipped long at No. 14 — where he lost last year's tournament to Paul Azinger — and finished with a bogey.

Despite missing 10-foot birdie opportunities at Nos. 12 and 13, Love tied Kite with a two-putt par on No. 14 but bogeyed No. 15 to trail by a shot.

One of the Tour's longest hitters, Love nailed his second shot 3 1/4 feet from the cup on the 446-yard 18th en route to a birdie that caught Kite once again. Both routinely pured the 223-yard, par-3 17th before disaster found both. See Neale's, Page 2B

Lady Rams, Hawks shine at Winter Park relays

From Staff Reports

Lake Mary and Lake Howell's girls track teams both participated in the Winter Park Relays this past Friday night and each school gave strong performances.

Both teams wanted a chance to run all of their athletes and have an opportunity to qualify relay teams for the Florida Gator Relays later this month.

"It was a very competitive meet," Lake Mary coach Mike Gibson said. "We wanted a chance to run our entire team and we wanted to qualify some teams for the Florida Relays. We went and did exactly what we wanted to do and I'm real pleased with the results."

The Lady Rams, who placed fourth overall with 43 points, were paced by their two-mile relay which finished second and qualified for the Lady Gators. Allison Snell, Bekah Boothe, Meredith Olive and Melisa Abbasinejad form the quartet and all four put forth quality efforts, finishing the race with a time of 10:21.7.

The sprint medley squad also placed second as Heidi Rohlehr, Tonya McCrae, Tabitha Newsome and Snell combined to See Relays, Page 5B

Louisville derails Seminoles in Metro

United Press International

COLUMBIA, S.C. — On a proud day for the Metro Conference, the Louisville Cardinals were left crowing from a familiar perch.

Pervis Ellison scored 18 of his 22 points in the second half Sunday, including a momentum-stopping 3-point play that keyed No. 15 Louisville to an 87-80 victory against 18th-ranked Florida State in the championship game of the Metro Conference Tournament.

In winning their seventh Metro Tournament title, the Cardinals improved to 22-8 heading into Thursday's NCAA Tournament matchup against Arkansas-Little Rock at Indianapolis. Florida State, still seeking its first tournament championship, is 22-7 entering its NCAA Tournament game against Middle Tennessee State in Nashville, Tenn.

Two other Metro teams, Memphis State and South Carolina, also earned NCAA Tournament berths. The Tigers, who dropped a 71-70 decision to Louisville in Saturday's semifinal, face DePaul Thursday and the Gamecocks meet North Carolina State Friday.

Ellison, who has led the Cardinals into the Metro Tournament's title game in each of his four seasons, was named the tournament's outstanding player for the second time. The 6-foot-9 center shot 9 for 12 from the floor and added 7 rebounds and 2 blocked shots.

"I couldn't be prouder of this team," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "I think we'll take 10,000-15,000 to Indianapolis and I commend the NCAA for not letting teams play on their home floor. I think that's a great step in the right direction. Obviously, all the regions are tough."

Florida State guard George McCloud, the league's Player of the Year, suffered through an anguishing first half as the Cardinals took a 38-32 advantage. McCloud, who finished with 22 points, shot just 1 for 7 before intermission. See 'Noles, Page 2B

Alabama rolls over Gators for SEC title

United Press International

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Keith Askins gave Alabama a tremendous two-minute offense Sunday and brought the Crimson Tide the Southeastern Conference Tournament championship.

Askins fired in 4 3-pointers within 1:59 early in the second half, propelling Alabama to the title and past Florida 72-60.

"It gave us momentum," Askins said of his barrage. "I wasn't shooting too well in the tournament, but I was all around the rim and they finally started to drop."

Askins was fouled on the last two of his 3-pointers and made both free throws, giving him 14 points in less than 2 minutes and turning a tightly contested game into one Alabama easily controlled the last 13 1/2 minutes.

"Keith's plays were a tremendous shot in the arm to us when we needed it," said Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson. "We felt we'd wear them down at the end, and that's basically what we did."

Alabama, 23-7, got its second SEC Tournament title in three years and third of the decade. The Crimson Tide was picked for the second division in the preseason polls but finished only one game back of Florida and beat the Gators 83-63 a week ago in the regular-season finale.

"I think only those who are parents know the feeling I have right now," Sanderson said. "To see this team grow up and mature and go in the right direction, it's a thrill only parents can know."

Florida, 21-12, has never won the SEC Tournament.

Askins finished with 23 points. Michael Ansley scored 14 and Alvin Lee added 11.

Livingston Chatman led Florida with 20 points, scored 70 in three tournament games and was voted most valuable player. Dwayne Schintzius had 16 points, 13 re- See Gators, Page 2B

Pantelias' prophecy coming true at SCC

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald correspondent

Coach Jack Pantelias of the Seminole Community College Raider baseball team must be some kind of prophet.

When his team picked up its first win (after losing 14 straight), he said he knew the team would suffer until March, when he felt they would start playing well.

Since then, the Raiders are 2-1, picking up a pair of victories over out-of-state teams, an 11-4 decision over Montgomery County Community College of Alabama on Friday and Saturday's 13-4 whipping of Ursinus Community College of Pennsylvania.

The wins advance SCC, which has won three out of its last four, to 3-15 on the season. Seminole now returns to Mid-Florida Conference, hosting the Stars of Florida Community College of Jacksonville on Tuesday in a game starting at 3 p.m. at Raider Field on the SCC campus.

In the win over Montgomery County, the Raiders showed no ill signs of a six day-layoff caused by the weather, pounding out 10 hits. Freshman Bret Rutzebeck from Leesburg led the way with three hits in five trips, three runs batted in and three stolen bases.

Sophomore Byron Overstreet, a graduate of Lyman High School, was 2-for-5 with a grand slam and a double.

SCC went with ace pitcher Jim Waring from Lake Brantley on the mound and he also showed no signs of rust from the inactivity, scattering five hits over seven innings and striking out nine while walking only three. Steve Clemente from DeLand finished up in relief.

Leading 4-1, the Raiders broke the game open when they put a six-spot on the board.

The inning started with walks to Mike Turner and Mike Pizzuti. After two outs, Turner scored on a wild pitch and Pizzuti scored on an infield hit by Rutzebeck. Kevin Monahan and Bret White drew walks to load the bases before Overstreet launched his long blast over the left field fence.

SCC continued its hot hitting into Saturday's game as they came up with nine hits, five of which were for extra bases. Dale Stevens of Lyman led the way with two home runs, one of which was a grand slam, and five runs batted in.

Overstreet doubled in a pair of runs and Pizzuti and Steve Roberts also doubled.

A quartet of pitchers — Charlie Bynum,

Richard Hargraves, Scot Copeland, and Stevens — combined to throw a seven-hitter for Seminole. Hargraves struck out five in his three innings of work and Stevens struck out two of the four men he faced.

SCC trailed 3-1 entering the bottom of the third inning but went ahead with a three run rally, then put the game away with five runs in the fourth.

In the third, Rutzebeck and Stevens walked before Overstreet brought them in with a double to center. After stealing, third Overstreet scored on a ground out by David Eaddy.

In the fourth, David Fenick was hit by a pitch and Bret Wood reached on an error before Rutzebeck scored pinch runner David Leungers (on for Fenick) with a single to left. Monahan beat out a bunt to load the bases before Stevens hit his grand slam beyond the left field fence.

SCC has three important conference games this week as it tries to get back into the race and make a run at a state tournament berth.

After FCC-J, the Raiders travel to Ocala to take on Central Florida Community College on Thursday. Friday, the Raiders return home to take on non-conference foe Dundalk Community College of Maryland before going back on the road to take on Lake City Community College.

run a time of 1:56.8. The mile relay squad of Boothe, Rohlehr, Gleason and Snell also took second with a time of 4:10.5.

Amy Kuvach added a second place finish in the shot put with an effort of 34.3 and a third place finish in the discus with a throw of 108.7.

The 440 shuttle hurdle relay came up with some excellent performances and placed fourth. Newsome, Frauenhoffer, Rohlehr and Gleason combined for Lake Mary to post a time of 1:14.3.

Also, in the freshman-sophomore events, Lake Mary's mile medley relay foursome placed fifth at 4:43.4 and the four-mile relay finished sixth with a time of 27:33.1.

Evans won the meet with 58 points. Astronaut took second with 57 followed by Dr. Phillips with 53, Lake Mary and Oak Ridge with 40. Lake Howell, the only other Seminole County team in the event, took eighth with a total of 36 points.

"We have 55 members on our team and we wanted a chance to run as many of them as possible," Lake Howell coach Tom Hammontray said. "We tried to get everyone in the meet, but when you have 55 members it's hard to fit everybody in."

Lake Howell was led by a second-place finish in the four-mile relay as Monica Compton, Trisha Frost, Miki Palumbo and Sheryl Palumbo combined for a 23:58 clocking.

The two-mile relay team of Sheryl Palumbo, Compton, Jessica Cardarelli and Stacy Johnson took third at 10:33.6. The freshman-sophomore teams then took over and did a real nice job for the Lady Silver Hawks.

The 440 relay team of Laura Grant, Beth Gergick, Qulya Hawkins and Danielle Smith put together a quality effort and placed second with a time of 54.0. The mile medley squad of Hawkins, Laurie Pollock, Cardarelli and Compton placed second at 4:44.7 with the distance medley relay team of Corri Crosby, Tori Dempsey, Brandi Kinzer and Kristen Stuart placing sixth.

The next meet for most of the Seminole County schools will be the Lake Mary Invitational to be held this Friday night at Lake Mary. Seminole and Lyman will send a split squad to the Lake Mary Invite with the other athletes participating in the Bob Hayes Invitational in Jacksonville.

Lake Mary, Lyman J.V. teams win

From staff reports

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Junior varsity or not, Saturday's baseball game between Lake Mary and Lake Brantley was a classic.

It took eight innings and a suicide squeeze by Chris Haney before the Lake Mary Junior varsity turned away the Lake Brantley Patriots 2-1. Chris Jackson was the winning pitcher, going the distance while striking out four, walking three and allowing five hits.

By comparison, the Rams managed just one hit, an rbi single by Dana Dearth to drive in T.J. Gluffrida in the first inning that gave Lake Mary the early 1-0 lead. Lake Brantley countered quickly as Tom Penny scored on an rbi single by Joe Delong.

The scored stayed knotted at 1-1 until the top of the eighth, when Lake Mary Haney squeezed home Chris Barfield with the winning run.

Lake Mary, now 3-0, will play again on Thursday at Lyman. Lake Brantley, which suffered its first loss of the season to go 8-1, will play at home against Orlando-Boone today at 7 p.m.

Lyman 4, Colonial 3

Mike Elliott hit a triple to tie the game, then scored the game-winning run on an rbi single Doug Porter to lead the Lyman Greyhounds past Orlando-Colonial 4-3 last Thursday in junior varsity baseball action. Jason White, who came on in relief of starting pitcher Gene Abramowitz, allowed just one hit over three innings to pick up the win as Lyman improved its record to 4-3.

Colonial is now 2-5.

Nakia Roberts scored on a passed ball in the fourth inning to open the scoring for Lyman. Later that inning, Kirk Quivers (who was 2-for-2 and had reached base with a walk before Elliott's game-tying triple), singled home Brent Mytiska.

Lyman next plays on Tuesday at home against Oviedo.

Cardinals lose Cox for the year due to upcoming elbow surgery

United Press International

St. Louis Cardinals right-hander Danny Cox will miss the 1989 season after undergoing scheduled surgery to repair serious ligament damage to his right elbow.

He was examined Sunday in Vero Beach, Fla., by Dr. Frank Jobe, who determined Cox had serious damage to his medial collateral ligament and that surgery was required.

The surgery, which will be performed at the end of the month, is similar to that which Jobe has performed on several pitchers, including Ken Dayley of the Cardinals and Tommy John of the New York Yankees.

In the Grapefruit League in Florida, Boston nipped Minnesota 4-3, the New York Yankees split squads defeated Baltimore 6-3 and blanked a Chicago White Sox split squad 4-0. Kansas City edged Montreal 3-2 in 11 innings, the New York Mets tripped Atlanta 3-2, Houston's split squads lost 9-7 to Cincinnati and 7-8 in 11 innings to Los Angeles, Detroit topped Texas 9-7, St. Louis trounced a Chicago White Sox split squad 8-2, and Philadelphia's split squads lost 8-1 to Toronto and 8-5 to Pittsburgh.

In the Cactus League in Arizona, San Diego beat the Chicago Cubs 5-3, California outlasted Seattle 10-8, Oakland blasted San Francisco 20-7 and Cleveland's split squads swept Milwaukee's 10-9 and 9-8.

At Winter Haven, Fla., Danny Heep scored the winning run for Boston on a walk with the bases loaded in the ninth inning. Dan Gladden had three of Minnesota's five hits, while Carlos Quintana homered for the Red Sox.

At Miami, Bob Brower stroked a double and two singles and drove in two runs to lead the Yankees past Baltimore. Mike Pagliarulo added a two-run triple for New York.

At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Rickey Henderson drove in two runs and scored one and Wayne Tolleason had three hits to lead the Yankees past the White Sox.

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Ray Pallesio scored the winning run for Kansas City in the 11th on a walk, wild pitch and two Montreal errors.

At Port St. Lucie, Fla., Phil Lombardi's two-out single scored Lee Mazzilli to cap a three-run rally in the seventh inning and lead the Mets past Atlanta.

At Kissimmee, Fla., Jeff Treadway tied the game in the eighth inning with a sacrifice fly and added a two-run double in the 10th to lift Cincinnati past Houston.

At Vero Beach, Fla., Dave Hansen singled home Mike White with one out in the 11th to lift the Dodgers past Houston.

At Lakeland, Fla., Luis Salazar had two hits, including a two-run homer, to lead the Tigers over Texas.

At Sarasota, Fla., Joe Magrane blanked the White Sox on four hits over four innings to lead the Cardinals.

At Clearwater, Fla., George Bell went 3-for-3 and hit a three-run homer to lead Toronto past the Phillies.

At Bradenton, Fla., Bernie Tatis scored from third base on R.J. Reynolds' infield grounder with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to lift the Pirates over Philadelphia.

TWO LETTERS CAN SAVE YOUR CHILD'S LIFE

When confronted with drugs, the two most important letters in the alphabet for your children to know are "NO." Children learn the alphabet at an early age, but they are also exposed to drugs early in life.

Statistics indicate that 17% of today's youth use alcohol or drugs on a daily basis. Teach your children to know their alphabet when it comes to drugs.

Headaches, sneezing not normal for elderly

DEAR DR. GOTT: My nose runs a steady stream all the time and the sneezing is really bad. I also have headaches and dizziness. My doctor doesn't seem that concerned. Is this normal for an 89-year-old woman?

DEAR READER: No, it isn't. I think that you are experiencing allergic rhinitis, a reaction in your nose and throat from something in your environment that you are allergic to. For example, dust, smoke and animal dander can cause these symptoms in susceptible individuals. Tell your unconcerned doctor that, at 89, you shouldn't have to put up with this; ask for a referral to an allergist, a specialist who should be able to identify the cause of your problem and suggest treatment.

For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Choosing a Physician." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My toes are so itchy, I feel just miserable. I have tried so many remedies for my athletes' foot. What can you suggest?

DEAR READER: If your foot problem has not responded to over-the-counter remedies, you may not have athlete's foot. Various types of dermatitis (skin inflammation) can cause symptoms identical to the fungus of athletes' foot. Perhaps you should see a dermatologist to establish the cause of your difficulty. In treating athletes' foot (skin infection from the fungus T. mentagrophytes), I use a step-wise approach in my practice.

First, Tinactin — an odorless, colorless, non-prescription liquid — is usually effective when applied twice a day and rubbed in well.

If this doesn't work, a prescribed topical imidazole — such as clotrimazole or ciclopirox alamine — applied as directed, usually does the trick.

The third step, for recalcitrant cases, is messy but cheap. Potassium permanganate tablets are dissolved in water and the patient soaks his feet two or three times a day. The chemical kills the fungus and is non-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Even seasoned veterans find it difficult to analyze complex end positions. Don't worry. Play as well as you can, but remember this important rule: When an opponent is slow to play, his next discard is probably going to help you. If you can remember his remaining cards, you should be able to figure out a way to take advantage of his problem.

After East's two-heart overall, South bid his spades and was promptly raised to game. South won the opening lead with the heart ace, drew trumps ending in dummy (East shedding a heart) and led a club back to his king. West won the ace and played the nine of diamonds. Declarer won the diamond ace and played another club, West winning the queen. East discarded another heart. West led another diamond, and declarer won dummy's king. Declarer now discarded his remaining diamond on the jack of clubs, and East began to squirm. Finally East, down to K-Q-J of hearts and the Q-10 of diamonds, let go a heart. Declarer could now play a heart, putting East on play. East was forced to lead away from the Q-10 of diamonds or to play another heart, which would be ruffed in dummy, setting up South's last small heart as a winner. Of course an oblivious declarer might try to ruff a diamond, hoping the queen would fall, but at the table South should smell out the end position from East's hesitation and play accordingly.

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 14, 1989

New friends, as well as old friends, will play important roles in your affairs in the year ahead both socially and where your business interests are concerned. Be nice to everyone you know.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) An acquaintance you barely know might cause you anxious moments today by trying to impose on something you reserve just for your "in" group. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Several near misses are likely today, because just when you have your guns loaded and the trigger cocked, you might be inclined to suddenly switch targets. Strive to be single minded.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may find yourself in an awkward position today where you'll feel inclined to defend an idea or premise in which you do not truly believe. You'll be better off being honest with yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) An obligation that you thought you had more time to fulfill might demand immediate attention today. Be prepared to come up with a quick solution.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be prepared to operate independently of others today, because someone you're banking on rather heavily could suddenly withdraw support.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Let sleeping dogs lie today. A nudge from the toe of your boot could arouse an angry response from a person with whom you've had a disagreement that you thought was resolved and forgotten.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be your own person and have the courage of your convictions today. Don't let your peers entice you into doing something that contradicts your better judgment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you're pretty good at screening your basic emotions.

Today, however, your innate, negative feelings could be quite obvious even to those who know you slightly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today, you might be in a rather talkative mood. This is well and good, provided you don't discuss things with people who could distort what you say and later use it against you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's best to let someone else manage something for you today where you will be held financially accountable. There is a possibility the person you delegate the work to might do a bad job.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Associates will lose respect for you today if you are nice only to those you feel can help you to advance your self-interests in some specific manner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Stubborn tendencies today to leave tasks until the last minute. If you're neglectful, there's a good chance you'll run out of time and wind up with a nasty logjam on your hands.

Watering has no hard, fast rules

One of the best-kept secrets to successful gardening is knowing how to water!

Most maintenance techniques have easy-to-learn rules to follow, such as how to fertilize, when to spray for insects or what to prune. But watering technique has no specific rules to follow because when to water and how much to water depends on the kinds of plants, the type of soil, the time of year and the weather conditions. So, if you didn't think there is a difference in your watering problems and those of your neighbors, then you need to read on.

A few guidelines can help you increase your watering efficiency in the garden. Closely study your lawn or garden so you are familiar with how quickly the water is used. Acquire a coring device or use a hand trowel to remove the soil to examine for moisture. You need to find out the depth of penetration of the water after irrigating. If the soil is moist at a depth of 6 to 12 inches, then you do not need to water.

Next, check the amount of water supplied by your watering system, whether it's sprinkler or irrigation. Place several coffee cans, plastic containers or a rain gauge at intervals around your lawn and water. When your sprinkler has run for half an hour, check with a ruler and measure the amount of water in your container. If you have collected 1/2 to 1 inch of water, then you have irrigated 6-12 inches of soil. You now know that it takes your irrigation system one half hour to put out 1/2 inch of water. Most lawns and ornamental plants around your landscape require 1 inch of water per week. So by watering for 1/2 hour twice per week, you will give your landscape the water it needs.

And remember, rainfall counts in that total, so if it rains for a 1/2 hour or so, turn off your sprinklers and save money! City of Sanford Grounds Maintenance crews adjust their sprinklers seasonally and with the weather conditions.

In addition, newly installed landscapes receive more water until they grow lots of new roots and can go longer without extra water. This usually takes approximately three months.

To provide the proper distribution and avoid wasting water, apply only as fast as your soil can absorb it. Runoff water is not absorbed by the soil and does not help your plants with the water they need. And, more importantly, it wastes money.

Lastly, check several areas in your landscape to determine how long it takes for the plants to use the water you applied. Plants can reach the wilting point and not suffer when watered. This can be the preferred practice: Let plants "almost" wilt and then give them a thorough drink. With a little practice, you will quickly discover how often you need to water, how much to water and how long you should wait before you water again.

Chorus of readers urges cheater to face the music and confess

DEAR READERS: I received a letter from a woman signed "Feeling Rotten," who was beside herself with guilt because while visiting her best friend in another city, her friend's live-in lover came to her bedroom in the middle of the night and she "let him" make love to her. She admitted that she responded positively, adding she "hopes" she's not pregnant because they used no protection. "Feeling Rotten" asked me if she should tell her friend what took place. I aired the pros and cons, then asked my readers how they would vote.

So far, it's a dead heat—and the letters are still coming in: Some responses from readers who say "Tell!"

DEAR ABBY: "Feeling Rotten" should feel rotten, because she is rotten to the core. She must have given her best friend's live-in lover some kind of encouragement—flirting, body language, eye signals to let him know she could be had—or he never would have had the chutzpah to come to her bed in the middle of the night. Yes, she should tell her friend what kind of bum she's living with. It will probably be the end of their friendship, but if she keeps quiet and her friend marries this heel, it could be the worst mistake of her life.

BEEN THERE IN WILMINGTON, DEL.

DEAR ABBY: "Feeling Rotten" should tell her friend immediately. Also, both she and her friend should be tested for AIDS. If they test negative, they should be tested again in six months. And it goes without saying that the sleepwalking boyfriend should also be tested. AN M.D. IN THE BRONX.

ADVICE

DEAR ABBY: "Feeling Rotten" should tell! How I wish someone had told me what a louse my husband was. He was in his last year of medical training and it was accepted that his hours were erratic and his schedule flexible. Finding out from a phone bill with a list of 15 of the same numbers from a different city was the most agonizing revelation I had to face. He swore he'd never do it again. But he did. If only a friend had told me. I later learned that everyone knew it but me. We are still married and are reasonably happy, but I'll never be able to trust him. We have two fine children, which is the cement that has held us together.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: Here's what I would tell Miss Feeling Rotten: Tell your friend everything—exactly the way it happened—then accept the consequences of your friend's reaction. If your friend is so hurt she no longer wants you for a friend, then so be it. I hope you realize that your friend is feeling twice the pain from having been betrayed by both her best friend and her lover.

PAUL IN PHOENIX

DEAR ABBY: I went through exactly the same thing "Feeling Rotten" experienced, only I cheated with my best friend's husband. When I finally couldn't stand the deceit anymore, I confessed. Do you know what she told me? "What took you so long? It's been all over town for months!"

FORMERLY EASY IN PHILLY

DEAR ABBY: This happened to me. Only I was married at the time. My wife had a younger sister who spent the night with us. One night my wife went to bed early. Sister and I stayed up to watch television. She said her back ached, so I rubbed her back. One thing led to another, and we ended up in bed. We both felt so guilty, we went to my wife together and told her what had happened, and promised it would never happen again. She was hurt, but she forgave us, and we all put it behind us. Everything is better out in the open. Today, I have no desire for the sister—nor she for me. (She's married now.) Confessing took the "romance" out of it.

NO MORE GUILT IN VERMONT

DEAR ABBY: Why are you surveying your readers about something that has only one answer? Of course "Feeling Rotten" should tell her friend that the man she's living with is sleeping around. Women should stick together. Why keep quiet and protect a cheater? Since it takes two to cheat, they are equally guilty. Those two unprincipled dimwits deserve each other.

CHICAGO SCHOOLTEACHER

TOMORROW: Letter from readers who say, "Don't tell!"

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter about smoking, and how difficult it is to quit? They say that "cold turkey" is the hardest way, but I did it, and there was nothing to it.

On March 20, I had my first date with a very young 75-year-old woman. (I was 15 months older.) We met for lunch, and from the tone of her voice when she asked if we could be seated in the no-smoking area, I knew how the lady felt about smokers. Well, I quit cold turkey at that very moment!

Was it worth it? You bet it was. We were married on Nov. 19, and we're still honeymooning. Sign us...
