Georgetown Gets Financial Aid For Upgrading Homes

Georgetown residents are receiving financial incentives from Sanford to upgrade their homes.

Funds from the city's $650,000 community development block grant will be used to pay five percent of the 11 percent rate SunBank has set for Georgetown resident's home improvement loans.

There are already three takers for the loans, which were to start this week through joint-agreement between Sanford and SunBank, said

City Planning and Engineering Director Bill Simmons.

The $650,000 grant was received last year for 81 homes in a Georgetown area, bounded by Orange and Locust avenues and Seventh and 12th streets.

Work has already begun in the area through outright allocations of grant money to improve the living conditions of very low income residents.

In addition to outright allocations and the SunBank loans, Sanford will soon offer its own guaranteed loans to residents in the target area, Simmons said.

The three funding scenarios are designed to get the most yardage out of the grant money, he said. Applicant's income is yardstick to determine which manner of funding they'll be receiving.

The city's loan program will begin once a servicing agency has been contracted for bookkeeping purposes, Simmons said.

Sanford has an administrative task force set up at city hall to field residents questions and work out arrangements for receipt of grant assistance. Some of target zone's homes will be demolished, with their owners to receive new residences as well as relocation assistance during construction.

The three administrative staffers at city hall are paid with grant funds. They are headed by Richard Woods, who previously held a regional planning council position in Ocala.

Review Board To Be Named On Rocket Flop

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Grim engineers struggled today to learn what caused the destruction of an Atlas-Centaur rocket 51 seconds after launch and an instant after a lightning bolt was seen, stunning NASA with a $161 million failure.

An accident review board was to be named today to look into the failure Thursday. NASA's first rocket loss of 1987 after a string of five straight successes dating back to September that seemed to indicate the nation's space program was back on track.

"We've got to take some major stock in what the hell we're doing," said a bitter NASA official who asked not to be identified.

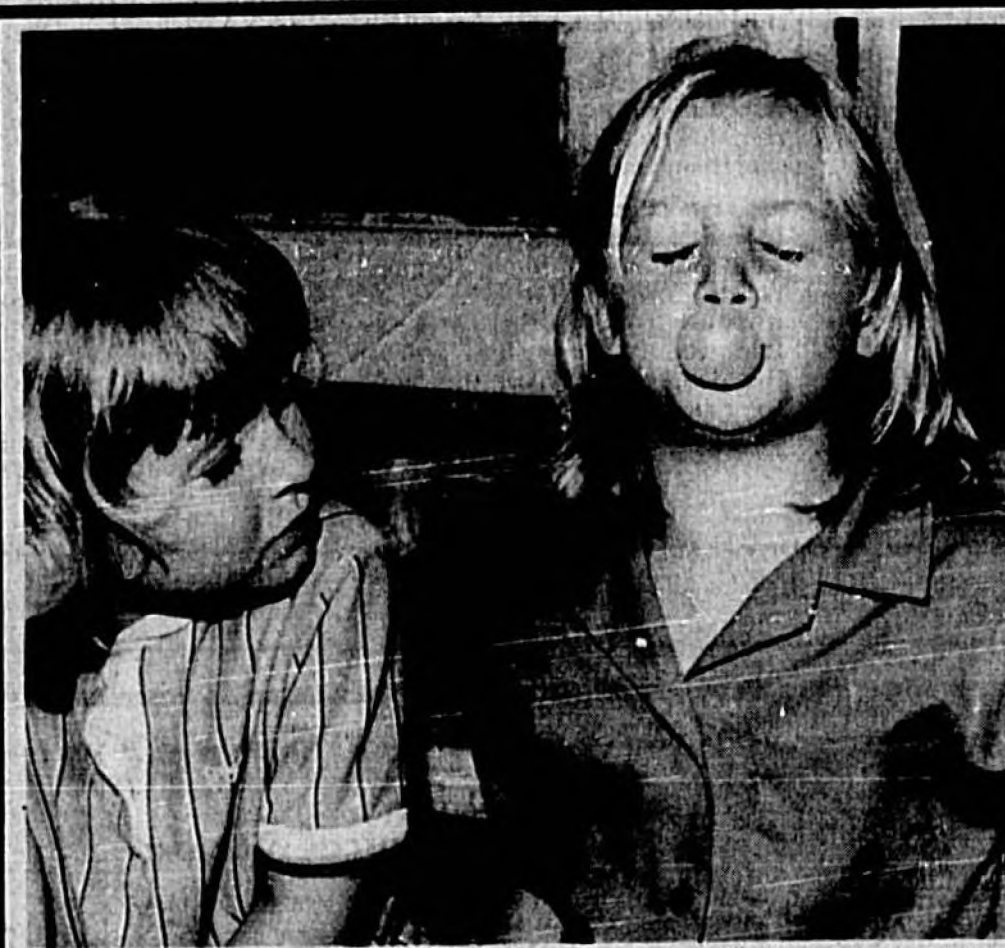

The 137-foot Atlas-Centaur, one of only two left in NASA's inventory, roared off the launch pad at 4:22 p.m. EST Thursday, despite heavy rain, low clouds and reports of lightning in the area, including one bolt seen on the ground near the pad an instant before the rocket was destroyed.

John Gibb, Atlas-Centaur project manager, said it was too early to speculate on what caused the failure 51 seconds after blastoff with the rocket invisible behind heavy cloud cover.

"We have restrictions that in case of allowed to launch," he said. "We were not in any of those conditions. At the time of launch we were in a solid 'go'

Board To Look At SHS Needs

By Genie Lindberg
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County School Board members plan to visit Seminole High School next week to look at needs that may have been overlooked by state Department of Education officials in a 1984 inspection that helped determine what additions and renovations would be made at the school.

Seminole High parents and administrators asked the board Wednesday to commit additional funds at their April 15 meeting for school needs such as air conditioning in the gym and cafeteria, new lockers and a parking lot.

Funds for capital improvements at 40 of the district's 42 schools are coming from the $120 million bond issue voters approved in Oct. 85. Seminole High is already slated to get the largest chunk of the money, but SHS parents, teachers and administrators say that's not enough.

If the board approves the additional money, as they have tentatively indicated they would, the building budget for Seminole High would increase from $8.2 million to about $11.5 million.

Board chairman Joe Williams, Jr. said that he will visit the high school to get "a bird's eye view" of the school's overlooked needs and to talk with principal Wayne Epps in an effort to determine how much money over the set budget would be needed to complete the school's expansion. Some board members have been to the school already, but Williams said he would not feel the full impact of the school's needs until his visit there. The board has a commitment to Seminole High, Williams said, because of its great need for renovation.

'I'm not asking for frills but for necessities that will be a tremendous asset not only to Seminole students but to the community of Sanford as well.'

—Wayne Epps
Seminole High Principal

Seminole is the oldest high school in the county, Epps said, and it was built in 1960 to accommodate 800 students. Enrollment is 1,900 and planned additions would allow room for 718 more students, he said.

The state survey team basically evaluated the amount of classroom space Seminole High had and then compared that with student capacity, Epps said. They then made recommendations based on projected enrollment as to the number of classroom spaces needed to bring the school up to its recommended capacity, he said.

When the present budget came from those recommendations, he said. However, since spaces such as the cafeteria and gym do not carry student loads, the survey team apparently did not consider the needs of those buildings but "these are very important" and are essential to the school's operation, Epps said.

"I'm not asking for frills but for necessities that will be a tremendous asset not only to Seminole students but to the community of Sanford as well."

Airport Grant To Enhance Safety

The Sanford Regional Airport Authority received a $573,000 check Thursday for a federal grant to enhance safety along two of its runways. The check was presented by Federal Aviation Authority official Dell Jernigan at a 2 p.m. meeting at the airport.

The grant will cover 80 percent of an anticipated $636,667 project. Airport Aviation Director J.S. "Red" Cleveland said this morning.

The balance will be split by the state Department of Transportation and the airport authority, Cleveland said.

The airport's north-south and east-west runways will benefit from the funds, said Cleveland.

He said engineering work has been completed and project bids received. Work will begin in about a six weeks and take between four to six months to finish. The airport applied for the grant late last year.

Safety zones just beyond each end of the north-south runway will be doubled to approximately 500 feet and an open drainage ditch will be replaced with a 250-foot culvert, Cleveland said.

Both ends of the north-south runway will also receive 200-foot by 200-foot "blast-pads" to prevent erosion from planes taking off, he said.

The east-west runway will be grooved to improve traction, especially when it's raining, Cleveland said. The grooves, placed about three to four inches apart, will keep water from standing on the pavement, he said.

The 1,795-acre airport has four runways and 500 acres designated for industrial development.

The airport assumed a "Regional" title last month as part of ongoing efforts to draw carriers and industry.

Talks Take New Twist For Raines

The Tim Raines free-agent negotiations took a new twist Thursday when a source said Raines and agent Tom Reich are attempting to put together a contract with a National League team which would enable Raines to become "financially secure" for life.

"Everything is hush-hush right now," the source, requesting anonymity, said this morning. "There is a lot of money at stake and it would make Raines very, very secure."

Raines is apparently still negotiating with San Diego, Atlanta, Houston and Los Angeles but the source would not reveal a fifth team now said to be involved in the talks.

In another development, Seattle Mariners' owner George Argyros said Thursday he plans to buy the San Diego Padres and sell the Mariners. Argyros said last week he would make Raines "an offer he couldn't refuse" to sign with the Mariners, but Raines said he did not want to play in Seattle.

The source said if Argyros did, indeed, purchase the Padres and the transaction was approved by baseball's owners, it "may have a big effect on the negotiations."

The source said the Montreal Expos, with whom Raines played for six years, may still be a factor but not a major one. Several newspapers reported today that Raines may not sign with another club and accept the Expos' three-year, $4.8 million offer. He would not be eligible to play for Montreal until May 1.

For Expressway

Lake Mary Backs Easterly Route

By Kathy Tyrity
Herald Staff Writer

While Lake Mary residents and city commissioners implored Expressway Authority members Thursday to consider a route more to the east than any previously considered, the expressway officials hinted the road will probably not bisect Lake Mary, despite several routes under consideration that do.

At an Expressway Authority meeting April 22, three of the most likely routes will be recommended by the expressway consultants.

About 65 Lake Mary residents and three commissioners met with the authority's Gerald Brinton and Tim Jackson, consultant.

"The further east you go, the better off for everyone," Lake Mary Commissioner Ken King told the men, to be echoed by Commissioner Charlie Webster and audience members who packed the meeting room at City Hall.

King suggested a route that would go even further east than those crossing Lake Jesup, but he was told such a route isn't being considered.

Mayor Dick Fess said the more easterly route could connect with the Sanford Airport, recently dubbed "regional." He said the airport was ripe for expansion because its runways are longer than Orlando International's.

"It certainly has the potential with 500 acres of industrial and commercial property sitting there ready for development," replied Brinton, Expressway Authority executive director.

Developer E. Everett Huskey and others have gotten behind a move to attract commercial flights to the airport and expand it considerably.

One person in the audience asked if the Lake Mary route proposals weren't "a mute point" now that so much consideration is being given to connect to the airport site.

"The airport has a lot of potential, but it's a while before it's developed," Brinton said.

But if the residents were looking for any assurance that the Lake Mary routes weren't serious options, they may have found it.

Brinton said of the westerly routes through Lake Mary that don't cross Lake Jesup: "This won't serve as much traffic as one of the routes that crosses Lake Jesup and gets to the greater population centers."

Brinton said the Seminole

Sanford Freezes Vacancies, Allows 5 New Jobs

A 4-1 Sanford commission vote has given City Manager Frank Faison the go ahead to freeze five vacant staff positions in order to create an equal number of new "priority" spots.

Commissioner A.A. McClanahan voted against the employee freeze, saying it allows Faison to ultimately go above the 345 staffers budgeted this year. Faison disagrees, saying the five spots are on hold at least until the new budget cycle begins in October.

City Commissioner John Mercer calls it "an argument over semantics," to which McClanahan responds, "Humor me."

"I'd rather see us eliminate, not freeze, five spots for the five (new ones)," McClanahan said at the commissions meeting Monday.

In addition to five new regular positions, the city will be hiring four handicapped employees to work as part time custodians at city hall.

Of the 10-12 now vacant spots in the city's staff ranks the frozen positions — three firemen and two public works staffers — can be put on hold with the least amount of impact, Faison said.

The city manager added he hopes attrition during the rest of the budget year will enable him to fill some of these spots while maintaining the agreed to five position trade-off for the newly created positions.

According to the approval Monday night, Faison will add $20,000 from the planning and engineering department budget to the $34,000 worth of fire and public works salaries to cover the $54,000 needed for the five new staffers. These new employees will fill "critical" spots, helping alleviate the work load of overworked city hall staffers and giving Sanford a computer system expertise it presently doesn't have, Faison said.

The positions are an account clerk for the finance department, at an $8,357 mid-year salary, to handle an increased accounts payable work load; a building department clerk typist, at a $7,399 mid-year salary, to help with additional code enforcement loads; two staffers for the administrative services department; a secretary, at a $9,209 mid year salary, to help with increased work loads and incoming phone calls, and a computer systems analyst, for data processing, at a $16,025 mid-year salary, and a part time data entry clerk for the personnel department, at a $6,239 mid-year salary, to "build" computerized files for city hall employees, Faison said.

McClanahan has previously said the city is overmanned and he wants a 10 percent reduction of the city's employees and $13 million budget.

Commissioners began discussing Faison's staff proposal in work session last week, with the city manager saying he preferred an outright $54,000 allocation to hire the new employees.

Salaries for the new staffers run through the end of the budget year. They will be advertised for this month and should be on board by May, said City Personnel Officer Fran Diedrich.

Post Office Wants Lake Mary Processing Site

By Kathy Tyrity
Herald Staff Writer

The U.S. Postal Service has submitted a Site Planning Report, Environmental Assessment, for Seminole County's review and comments about a proposed 300,000 square foot Mid-Florida Mail Processing Facility to be located in Lake Mary.

The Postal Service has selected four possible sites along Rinehart Road, three of them abutting Interstate-4.

The county must submit its comments by March 31 for review by the Regional Planning Council. The council will then coordinate all comments which will be forwarded to the Postal Service for consideration.

The facility is proposed to contain:

- Retail and post office box facilities;
- Vehicle maintenance facility; and
- 24-hour Express Mail acceptance.

The project is supposed to yield 5,490 trip ends per day, which concerns the county.

The Seminole County Commission Tuesday authorized submission of a letter from Commission Chairman Fred Streetman to Cliff Guillet, executive director of the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council.

"After a careful review and assessment of the information provided on the subject parcels, it is evident that the project will transportation facilities," the letter reads.

The county requested the following considerations:

- County review and comment on the site plans when they are submitted to the city of Lake Mary. The Postal Service is requested to submit site plans to the county simultaneous with their submittal to the city.

• That the Postal Service shall complete off-site improvements (i.e., tapers, turn lanes, signalization and drainage improvements) as a direct result of the project and as determined by the county engineer.

• That access to one of the sites be at least 200 feet from the main Timucuan access.

County Principal Planner Samuel Jones is handling requests and comments about the proposal. He may be reached at 321-1130, Ext. 371.

Classic, Antique Auto Displays Set For Saturday

Over 200 classic and antique cars are expected in downtown Sanford Saturday for the Rotary Blue Ribbon Auto Show.

The annual event is a fundraiser for the Sanford Rotary Breakfast Club. Show admission is $1, with children under 12 free. The show begins at 9 a.m., right on the lakefront by Sanford city hall.

The show's boundaries will be Park, Fulton, Seminole and Myrtle avenues.

Surplus Food Distribution Scheduled

The Salvation Army will be distributing Federal Surplus food at the following locations and times:

Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at The Salvation Army, 700 W. 24 St., Sanford.

Thursday from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Altamonte Springs Chapel, 825 Hwy 436, Altamonte Springs.

Friday from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. at Chuluota Community Hall, East & 7th St., Chuluota.

Recipients must be currently certified in order to receive commodities. No one will be certified at any of the distribution locations. Those with questions may call 322-2642.

Testing Needed To Combat AIDS

Federal health officials estimate that up to 2 million Americans are carrying the AIDS virus in their bodies. By 1991, the virus could infect as many as 5 million people in this country. Although medical experts believe that only 20 percent to 50 percent of these individuals ultimately will develop the fatal disease, everyone who carries the virus is potentially able to spread AIDS to others.

Because a person can carry the AIDS virus for longer than a decade without displaying any physical symptoms, perhaps hundreds of thousands of those currently infected are unwittingly passing the virus to others through sexual contact or in blood. The insidious nature of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome explains its exponential growth. And it dramatically demonstrates why expanded voluntary testing for AIDS antibodies would erect an important new barrier to help contain this worldwide scourge.

With these facts in mind, the federal Public Health Service is considering guidelines for individuals who received blood transfusions between 1978 and mid-1985 to undergo voluntarily the AIDS antibody test, which detects the presence of the virus. Approximately 2 percent of the 32,000 cases of AIDS reported during the last six years were transmitted by transfusions of infected blood. Since 1985, when a laboratory test was developed to screen donated blood for the AIDS virus, the risk of contracting the contagion through transfusions has been virtually eliminated.

But patients who received blood during the eight-year span before screening was started are at risk even though they may have experienced no outward signs of AIDS. Their danger is indeed remote when compared with other high-risk categories such as homosexual and bisexual men, intravenous drug users who have shared contaminated needles, or women who have had sexual contact with men in these groups.

Yet, those who have been exposed to the AIDS epidemic through blood transfusions are among the most unsuspecting carriers, meaning they are likelier to infect others unknowingly. Health officials estimate that as many as 12,000 persons may have been infected by the AIDS virus through transfusions before the antibody test became available. Accordingly, anyone who received donated blood during this period must weigh whether he or she should be tested voluntarily.

Factors to consider include how many units of blood were received, as well as where the transfusions occurred. Multiple transfusions in cities such as New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles, where AIDS is more common in the general population, would place a patient at greater risk than a single transfusion in a region of the country where the disease is rare. Once informed of the test results, recipients of infected blood can take precautions against transmitting the disease to others. For those who simply fear having been exposed to the virus by transfusions, negative test results would bring peace of mind.

Routine testing of pregnant women, hospital patients and those applying for marriage licenses would also help check the spread of AIDS. The number of people submitted to voluntary AIDS testing already is increasing rapidly. This is a sure sign of progress in bringing the hidden march of death out into the open where it can be fought more effectively.

'Comparable Worth' Rears Its Ugly Head

Never underestimate the staying power of a bad idea, especially one that serves a political cause.

Take "comparable worth" — or pay equity, as it is becoming known — the belief that jobs can be objectively judged for their value to society. The concept was the talk of feminists a few years ago, and for good reason. If courts and legislatures could be convinced of its logic, pay equity offered a shortcut to closing the income gap between men and women.

Government could simply decree that, say, certain secretaries and janitors be paid the same wage.

Nowadays, pay equity has slipped from the front pages. Don't be misled, though. Its supporters have opted for a strategy pioneered by other hardy intellectual heretics: Keep the faith and wait for your day to come.

The latest sign of life is a report by the National Committee on Pay Equity, whose board of directors includes the League of Women Voters, the American Library Association and the YWCA. Funded by the Ford Foundation, the report claims to confirm "what has long been suspected by pay equity advocates: that race, ethnicity and sex are all significant factors in setting pay."

Actually, the report proves no such thing. It merely documents in solemn detail a fact known by anyone alert to contemporary reality: Women and minorities tend to be concentrated in certain jobs, which tend to pay less than other jobs. The report's authors believe the strength of this pattern clinches the case for widespread discrimination. If such bias is so pervasive, they imply, what's the alternative to a wholesale readjustment of wage scales?

As it happens, the alternative is in place already. It's called the American economic system, and its enduring flexibility has just been confirmed by a Census Bureau study of income. Not only have the median earnings of working women been creeping up on those of men, but progress has been most dramatic among younger women. In 1984, for example, the median income of women 18 to 24 was 88 percent of their male counterparts. That figure rose 12 percent in just four years.

In short, the original trickle of women into high-paying occupations has turned into a flood. As women's experience grows in those jobs, so will their earnings.

Even the pay equity committee gingerly admits this. By its own calculations, education and experience account for well over half of the difference between the income of white men and everyone else.

That hardly means discrimination has been obliterated. Nor does it mean that income always relates to market demand for job skills. Still, as imperfect as the present system may be, it is far more responsive than the bureaucratic solution favored by the pay equity forces. It is also less presumptuous. After all, who is really worth more to society, a secretary or a custodian? The honest answer is that no one knows — hence employers should be able to set those salaries however they like.

Yet if a secretary is allowed to successfully sue her employer because she is paid less than a janitor, what's to stop the company attorney from suing because he receives less than a second-tier financial executive? Who, in fact, does not think he or she is underpaid in comparison with others?

Once society has established the fiction that a job has a fixed intrinsic worth, the legal momentum will grow to enforce the same value across the country. A dynamic economy could not survive in such a stifling environment. Pay equity was a bad idea when it was conceived, and it remains a bad idea today.

No Room In Boston For Poor

BOSTON (NEA) — If the United States now boasts of having 100 million housing units, why can't Hazel Word find a suitable, affordable apartment for herself and her three young children?

Because her family, like thousands of others throughout the country, relies upon the federal-state welfare system for its income — but the monthly checks are grossly inadequate compared with the cost of rental housing.

In recent years, an increasing proportion of the nation's poor — including many who work — have become homeless because the low-income housing they once relied upon has been demolished by real estate promoters with plans for more lucrative developments.

"Rooming houses are always first to be plucked off by developers. They've been decimated," says Katherine Mainzer, executive director of the Massachusetts Coalition for the Homeless. The number of rooming houses in Boston's South End has shriveled from 25,000 in 1950 to 250 today, she adds.

An unemployed single parent with two children in Massachusetts (where welfare benefits are more generous than in many other states) qualifies for $476 to $491 in monthly payments under Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the most popular public assistance program. The "working poor" earning the minimum wage receive $576 in gross pay per month — before taxes.

That income must cover not only housing but also food, clothing, carfare, heat, electricity, laundry, school supplies and other household expenses.

The average monthly rent for a two-bedroom apartment is $800 in the Boston metropolitan area and $700 elsewhere in the state — substantially more than either a monthly welfare payment or a low-wage salary check.

In a landmark decision early this year, Superior Court Judge Charles M. Grabau held that the state must comply with the 1913 law by establishing a new standard for welfare payments that will enable homeless people to afford shelter. (Similar lawsuits are pending in New York, California, Colorado, Wyoming and other states.)

Under a revised formula, families living in private housing would receive AFDC payments ranging from $864 to $928 per month, while families living in public housing would get $645 monthly.

Grabau's ruling is being appealed by the state — which continues to pay $1,940 per month for each of 500 homeless families "temporarily" housed in hotels and motels.

ROBERT WAGMAN

Yea Or Nay On Pay?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — By registering an essentially meaningless vote against proposed federal pay hikes after a 30-day limit had elapsed, House members were able to tell their constituents that they voted against the raises while at the same time allowing the increases to go through.

But how an "anti-raise" group has filed suit contending that the vote to block the raise actually came within the 30-day limit.

When President Reagan sent through his budget recommendations, he proposed increases amounting to $12,000 annually for members of Congress and slightly less for bureaucrats and judges.

But many members of Congress objected, arguing that, given the size of the deficit, it was incorrect to increase their salaries from $72,000 to $84,000.

Here's where the matter gets complicated: Under the pay law, when the president makes his recommendation to Congress, it automatically goes into effect if both the House and Senate do not formally object within 30 days.

The Senate filed its objection within the 30-day period.

On Feb. 4, 1987, the House followed suit. However, officially, this was 31 days after President Reagan sent in his recommendation.

Members of Congress could now go back to their constituents and say they voted against the increase. But it still went into effect because the vote did not come within the statutory 30 days.

It seemed that Congress had found a way to have its cake and eat it too.

However, a group of congressmen, consumer advocates — including Ralph Nader — and conservative organizations has filed suit contending that Congress is counting incorrectly. It claims that the vote to block the raise did come within the 30-day limit.

On Jan. 5, the day the salary recommendation went to the Hill, the House had not yet reconvened for the 100th Congress. That did not happen until Jan. 6, the next day. Thus, the salary opponents argue, since the House had not reconvened on Jan. 5, there was no Congress in existence to receive the recommendation. That did not happen until Jan. 6.

Because the "clock" on the salary recommendation did not start running until Jan. 6, the argument continues, the House vote to block the increase on Feb. 5 was actually on the 30th day, not the 31st, and thus was within the statutory period.

Congressional parliamentary experts say the suit raises an interesting question that has no simple answer.

The 20th Amendment to the Constitution says that "Congress shall assemble on the 3rd of January unless they shall appoint by law a different day." When the House adjourned last fall, it appointed Jan. 6 as the day to reconvene.

A spokesman for the legal counsel's office of the House declined to comment on the suit's merits, saying it is an issue the courts will have to decide.

Most agree, however, that the suit is far from frivolous.

The way the pay raise was handled this year has revived a 200-year-old debate over whether Congress should be able to increase its pay.

On Sept. 25, 1787, Congress approved a constitutional amendment, authored by James Madison, barring Congress from increasing its own salary.

The amendment says that a salary raise approved by Congress shall not take effect "until an election of representatives shall have intervened." This would mean that this year's increase would not be effective until after the 1988 elections.

The amendment was never ratified by enough states. But it was never rescinded either. In fact, last year the state of Utah became the 21st state to approve it. Approval by 38 of the 50 states is necessary for ratification.

Defects Caused By Acne Drug

By Gayle Young
UPI Science Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The telephone calls to the Centers for Disease Control from doctors concerned about the effect of retinoic acid anti-acne drugs on pregnant women came nine months after the first such drug was approved in July 1983.

"We had three case reports of multiple birth defects barely nine months after the drug came on the market," Edward J. Lammer, a former CDC investigator, said of the anti-acne drug Accutane.

Since then, the CDC and the drug's manufacturer, Roche Laboratories of Nutley, N.J., have launched several epidemiological and animal studies that link birth defects in humans to the mother's use of Accutane during pregnancy.

The studies have gone on to implicate massive supplemental doses of vitamin A — from which retinoic acids are derived — in birth defects as well.

"Accutane will cause birth defects if used during pregnancy," Roche spokesman Daniel McIntyre said in a telephone interview.

He said the company, which has several lawsuits on its hands, has issued numerous warnings to pharmacists and doctors advising that women using the potent retinoic acid also use contraceptives.

The drug's package labeling warns that the product should not be used by pregnant women.

The Roche and CDC studies have prompted concern among health officials, who say it is imperative to educate women about the risks of retinoic acids and vitamin A supplements in pregnancy, said Lammer, now a researcher at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

"We know of about 20 cases of babies with birth defects born to mothers who took massive amounts of vitamin A during their pregnancies," he said during a recent seminar.

McIntyre said both retinoic acids and vitamin A cause facial defects and defects of the brain and heart.

"We find almost identical birth defects in mothers who take repeated doses of vitamin A, which is where Accutane comes from," McIntyre said.

Alexandra Greeley, a spokeswoman for the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology, said the health organization is considering issuing a policy statement against vitamin A supplements during pregnancy, but it has not yet been approved.

NATION IN BRIEF

President Urged To Impose Trade Sanctions Against Japan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, urged by top administration officials to retaliate against Japan for failing to honor a trade agreement on computer chips, could decide today whether to impose new tariffs on some Japanese products.

Administration and congressional sources said the decision to impose tariffs against Japan, expected as early as today, would target selected Japanese products in retaliation for its continued dumping of computer chips at below-market prices and refusal to open its market to American semiconductors.

The White House's Economic Policy Council, including U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter, Labor Secretary William Brock, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and White House chief of staff Howard Baker, met for about an hour Thursday to finalize their recommendation and send it to Reagan.

The Cabinet members refused to comment on their decision, which is subject to presidential approval.

Conrail Shares Gobbled Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Investors bought $1.8 billion in Conrail shares as the government sent a resuscitated railroad back to the private sector in the biggest initial public stock offering in U.S. history.

More than 15.3 million Conrail shares changed hands Thursday, accounting for about 7.5 percent of the trading volume on the Big Board.

At its closing price of $30.75, the sale of the government's 85 percent stake in the railroad was worth about $1.8 billion before underwriting fees.

Until now, the biggest U.S. initial public offering was that of Duff & Phelps Selected Utilities, a mutual fund that raised $1.3 billion in January.

The Philadelphia-based Conrail operates the largest freight railroad system serving mostly industrial markets in the Northeast-Midwest region of the United States.

3 Killed In Charity Walk

OXFORD, Miss. (UPI) — A truck and car collided then smashed into a group of Ole Miss students trekking along a highway in a charity walk-a-thon, killing three sorority sisters and seriously injuring 13 others, officials said.

About 25 members of Chi Omega sorority were participating in the 20-mile walk-a-thon Thursday from Batesville to Oxford along the shoulder of four-lane Mississippi Highway 6 to raise money for the Kidney Foundation, said Jan Robertson, a University of Mississippi spokeswoman.

Mississippi Highway Patrol spokesman Donald O'Cain said there was a vehicle in front of the walkers and one behind them — both with their emergency lights flashing.

Highway Patrol spokesman Steve McClure said a pickup truck pulling a hay baler rammed one of the cars from behind about five miles west of Oxford. No charges have been filed against the driver, Robert Davis of Senatobia, pending an investigation.

6th Grader Asks Key Question

Reagan Explains Iran Initiatives

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — President Reagan traveled to the heartland Thursday on what was a triumphant journey away from the Iran-Contra scandal but with a single innocent question, an 11-year-old girl reminded him of the biggest crisis in his presidency.

On a four-hour stop to the Missouri college town, Reagan talked to students and teachers about improving education as part of his effort to beef up U.S. competitiveness.

But having avoided the Iran arms affair throughout the day, Reagan stumbled into a discussion of the scandal during a visit to Elaine Hassemer's sixth-grade class at Fairview Elementary School.

As he was leaving, Reagan paused to take one question from Heather Watson, 11. She first commiserated, saying the publicity the president must endure "would drive me out of my mind," and then mused, "I just wondered what it was that made it all worthwhile."

Apparently prepared to answer questions about the scandal, Reagan, without missing a beat, replied, "This is why I asked for a commission to be appointed to bring out all the facts."

He then offered a simplified explanation of the initiative with historical references to the roots of the revolution that deposed the shah — whom Reagan said he knew — and the influence Iran wields over Moslem extremists holding American hostages in Lebanon.

Reagan again said the overtures began as a bid for "a better relationship Iran" and weapons were introduced into the equation by the Iranians as a demonstration of good faith.

"This is what we started," he said, "and I'm afraid it wasn't carried out the way we thought it would be. It sort of settled down to just trading arms for hostages, and that's a little like paying ransom to a kidnapper."

"I have to say that I still think that the idea was right — to try to establish friendly relations, to try to bring about peace between the two countries that are war and try to get our people freed," he said. "But it kind of deteriorated into something else. And as I said the other night on television, I won't make that mistake again."

The Columbia stop marked another phase of what some administration aides have dubbed "Operation Rebound" — an effort for Reagan to tap some good will after the nearly five months of disclosures that have brought on the worst crisis of his presidency.

The visit was Reagan's first speaking stop outside Washington since Nov. 3, 1986, the day before the midterm election and the day after a Lebanese magazine first disclosed the scandal.

Children were freed from school to welcome Reagan to Columbia and when the president saw the hundreds of students at the city's airport, he joshed, "Anybody playing hooky?"

Accompanying Reagan and his new senior staff was a friend from the past: Joy Underdown, a third-grade teacher at Fairview who once taught his son, Ron, at the John Thomas Dye School in Bel-Air, Calif.

Four Drug Suspects Released On Bond

Four members of a quintet arrested and accused of running a sophisticated drug distribution ring have been released from the Seminole County jail on $150,000 worth of bonds. The reputed kingpin from Altamonte Springs is being held without bond in the Orange County jail.

Released Tuesday on $50,000 bond was Willie Slater, 22, of Orlando; Michael Jerome Bell, 40, and Veronica Flowers, 27, also of Orlando. They were released on $25,000 bond each. Ms. Flowers was released Tuesday, Bell, Monday. Also released Tuesday on a $50,000 bond was Annie Louise Clark, 27, of 863 Cynthianna Circle, Altamonte Springs.

Being held without bond in Orange County was Lorenzo "Leo" Jorin, 36, also 863 Cynthianna Circle. All five were arrested at different times last week. Police are still looking in south Florida and Georgia for 11 other people they say are connected to the alleged ring.

Lt. Richard Berry of the Altamonte Springs Police Department which assisted MBI, along with the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, said Jorin had two Lincoln automobiles and reportedly used car phones and beepers to keep in touch with sellers.

An MBI agent, who asked not to be identified, alleged the group was importing a kilo of cocaine a week and sales had been traced to Georgia.

Law enforcement officers got a break in the case when they arrested Jorin in January on cocaine charges after serving a search warrant at his home. Though he was later released on bond, "intelligence" obtained at his residence or confirmed by the raid, prompted an intensification of MBI's investigation of the alleged ring, thus, resulting in last week's arrests.

Falwell, PTL Board Hold Unity Meeting

FORT MILL, S.C. (UPI) — Evangelist Jerry Falwell closed ranks with his new PTL ministry board Thursday to "prevent the devil from having a field day" with the misfortunes of resigned PTL founder Jim Bakker.

"We had to be sure there would not be a gap, not a hiccup, in this ministry," Falwell said after a 2 1/2 hour meeting at the $172 million Heritage Village USA complex just outside Charlotte, N.C.

Falwell, the fundamentalist founder of the Moral Majority picked by Bakker to head the PTL when he resigned last week following disclosure of a sexual encounter with a church secretary seven years ago, said the board had approved his appointment of Richard Dortch as president of PTL.

He said he does not plan to "stamp Jerry Falwell" on the PTL ministry that reaches 39 million homes.

"We know who built this ministry, we are not stupid," Falwell said.

He praised the unity of his new board in facing the task of stabilizing the PTL, which stands for "Praise The Lord."

"The love and compassion and oneness of the board meeting this morning is indicative of the oneness across the kingdom of God," he said. "We are trying to close ranks here and prevent the devil from having a field day."

The new board includes former Interior Secretary James Watt; evangelist Rex Humbard; Ben Armstrong, executive director of the National Association of Religious Broadcasters; Jerry Nims, chief executive officer of Falwell Ministries; and Sam Moore, president of Thomas Nelson Publishers of Nashville, Tenn., the largest Bible publisher in the world.

"It's fun to see the family of God unite in crisis. I'm proud to be a part of this board with these men," Watt said.

Members of the audience at the PTL meeting seemed pleased with the unity of the board and expressed no objections to the handing over of the charismatic ministry to a fundamentalist Baptist.

Former President Arrives In Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Former President Jimmy Carter arrived in Israel Thursday on the eighth anniversary of the Camp David accords and called for a new phase of negotiations to bring peace to all the Middle East.

Carter, greeted by U.S. and Israeli dignitaries as he crossed the Allenby Bridge from neighboring Jordan, also expressed hope for the release of foreign hostages held in Lebanon.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, arrived just after 9 a.m. on the last leg of a private Middle East tour that has included talks with Arab leaders in Jordan, Syria, Egypt and Algeria.

Carter telephoned Menachem Begin, Israel's reclusive former prime minister and a partner with assassinated Egyptian leader Anwar Sadat in the 1979 Camp David peace accords that Carter engineered between Israel and Egypt.

A spokesman for Begin, who has differed sharply with Carter over Israel's responsibilities under the accords, described their brief conversation as "amiable."

He said Begin sent regards to Carter's wife, but he indicated a meeting between the two former leaders was unlikely. "I don't have a feeling that it's going to happen," said the spokesman, Yehiel Kadashi.

Carter, 62, had hoped to arrange a meeting with Begin through the U.S. Embassy before returning home after a five-day stay in Israel, but Begin is said to have flatly refused.

Carter plans to meet with Israeli leaders and receive an honorary degree at Haifa University before leaving Tuesday.

Speaking in a light drizzle to reporters at the Allenby Bridge, which links Jordan and the Israeli-occupied West Bank near the ancient city of Jericho, Carter called Thursday a "wonderful anniversary" of the peace accords signed on March 26, 1979.

"I think the results of Camp David and the result of the peace treaty have been extraordinarily beneficial to the people in Egypt and the people in Israel," Carter said.

"I think they also demonstrate how vividly the advantages are that can come with a new phase of negotiations," he said, urging that an international Middle East peace conference be convened as soon as possible.

"It's obvious that there's fairly consistent support for an international peace conference among the people with whom I have visited," Carter said.

Israel radio later quoted Carter as telling President Chaim Herzog during a luncheon that "in Syria, he felt some people were aware of the possibility of peace with Israel." Syria is one of Israel's fiercest Arab foes.

Most Arab states have called for an international Middle East peace conference that would include the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Soviet Union. The United States and Israel remain opposed to PLO or Soviet participation.

The former American president, greeted at the bridge by U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering, U.S. Consul-General Morris Draper and Israeli Cabinet Minister Ezer Weizman, said he hoped Syria's military move into Beirut will lead to freedom for the hostages.

"We're hoping with the increased Syrian presence, with their troops in parts of Beirut, that some of the hostages might be located and released," he said.

"But I don't have any basis for specific hope," said Carter, who was president when Iranian militants held 52 Americans hostage for 444 days at the U.S. Embassy compound in Tehran.

Carter, a Democrat whose criticism of the Republican Reagan administration's Middle East policy during his trip has irked U.S. officials, said he hopes to see "the peace process elevated to a matter of great importance" during Reagan's final two years in office.

Report: Soviet Changes Risky

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's bold program to modernize his nation is "inherently risky" and his reforms could solidify opposition in the government and party, U.S. intelligence analysts said Thursday.

However, the analysis concluded that despite some opposition, Gorbachev can gain politically from his program "over the next few years" and claim success if the Soviet economy shows some of the anticipated improvement.

"Over the long term, how Gorbachev fares politically is much more open to question," the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency said in an annual report to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

The report said that if the Soviet economy improves, even though short of goals, the military threat is reduced and uncontrollable factors such as the weather and oil prices are favorable. "Gorbachev could emerge at the end of the decade in a much stronger position politically."

Choose Right Grass For A Super Lawn

It's that time of the year again when our thoughts turn to getting our lawns in shape for the season. We all want the best looking lawn in the neighborhood — a super lawn! It's possible to come close if you choose the right grass for your particular landscape. If you're not satisfied with what you presently have or are about to install a new lawn, you do have a choice.

Most builder's homes have been sodded with Bahia grass. This grass produces a very durable sod which withstands heavy traffic, has few pest problems compared to other grasses, tolerates drought, and grows in full sun, even light shade. But, it's not fault free.

Bahia grass needs a fairly acid soil to perform well. The soil pH should be between 5.0 and 6.0 for best growth. If your soil pH is much higher, or you live in a moist area, Bahia grass may not be the best choice. At high pH's, the important minor nutrient elements become locked into compounds and are not available to the grass plants. Thus, a nutrient deficiency appears, such as yellowing of the grass blades. Most of the grove area now being developed have a higher pH than Bahia grass prefers.

There are several Bahia grass varieties available as seed, but only one — the variety "Argentine" is recommended for home lawns. It's dark green blades are long, narrow, and closely spaced. So it produces a dense sod with good color. Other Bahia grass varieties are pasture-types and shouldn't be used for home lawns in our area.

One of the good things about Bahia grass is that you can sod it, plug it, or grow it from seed. Of course, sodding takes longer, but it's a lot easier than sodding. If you seed, you'll need about ten pounds of seed per thousand square feet of lawn area. Be sure you use "scarified" seed, seed that has been treated to speed up germination. The best time to seed Bahia is from April through June. Be sure you get the seed at least one-half-inch deep in the soil, and don't allow the soil to dry out during the germination period. You're talking about 10 to 21 days, approximately.

The fact that Bahia grows from seed may be a disadvantage. During the summer season, the grass produces tall, ugly seed heads. They make it hard to mow the lawn. You'll need a heavy-duty rotary mower to cut this tough grass.

Of all the popular lawn grasses, Bahia tolerates insect and disease infestations best. Bahia grass is plagued by mole crickets, though. These burrowing insects damage roots and cause the grass to decline. Caterpillars sometimes cause problems, too; both are relatively easy to control with timely insecticide applications.

The most favored grass for home lawns is St. Augustine. Because of its versatility and adaptability, it is the most widely planted lawn grass in Florida. It grows well on just about all types of soil, grows in moderate shade to full sun, produces a dense sod that withstands wear well, and when properly maintained, has an attractive deep green color.

Alfred Bessosen
Urban Horticulturist

Ext. 101

The most popular varieties are Bitter Blue, Foratam, Raleigh and Seville. Bitter Blue has a dark green color and tolerates some shade. Foratam is a vigorous type with good color, prefers full sun, and is highly tolerant of Chinch bugs — the most serious pest of St. Augustine grasses. Raleigh is a variety released by North Carolina State University and has good cold tolerance up there. It is of coarse texture and is susceptible to Chinch bugs. Seville is a semi-dwarf St. Augustine grass with a dark green color and low growth habit. It is susceptible to Chinch bug and web worm invasions and is cold sensitive. But, it performs fairly well in shade and produces an excellent turf in full sun.

Seed is not available for St. Augustine grass, so you will have to use sod, plugs, or sprigs to plant your lawn. Sodding is the quickest, but the most expensive. A plugged or sprigged lawn should provide cover in one season, with proper care.

A newly planted St. Augustine lawn needs water every day for the first two or three weeks, and fertilizer every three to four months the first season. Once established, the lawn will need less care. Established lawns need twice-a-year fertilization.

If your particular soil type holds moisture or is moist, or has a high pH, you may want to consider St. Augustine grass as an alternative to Bahia. During times of continued drought, supplemental moisture may be needed, but be careful not to overdo the watering. Let your lawn tell you when to water. Then, water deeply — and less often.

Take your choice — Bahia or St. Augustine. These two are the best for our area. There are others, but they have so many problems that they are not worth growing. Remember, St. Augustine grasses for lush beauty and relatively high maintenance, or for a lower maintenance grass, Bahia may be just the choice for you.

Happy Gardening!

John H. Woodard is pastor and Mrs. Shirley Allen is chairman of the planning committee.

The focus of the occasion is to be upon the outstanding humanitarian leadership and efforts of Mayor Smith and her deep concern, dedication and active support in resolving community issues and increasing race relations will be recognized.

Happy Birthday to Ruthia Hester, Thelma T.J. Allen, Johnny Smith, Marion Mitchell and Lisa Mahamy.

Herpes Jokes Make This Sufferer Sore

DEAR ABBY: This letter is addressed to everyone who does not have genital herpes or any other transmittable disease:

I have had genital herpes for six years. No one knows except my mother, my husband and, of course, my doctor. It's not something I tell everyone. It's a neighbor, fellow church member, or even your brother or sister may have, but it's not discussed because it's so misunderstood.

An outbreak of herpes can be caused by stress, overexcitement and even extreme weather temperatures. For years, I've heard people make jokes in public or in personal conversation about the disease. "Don't sleep with him! You'll probably catch herpes or VDI!" Or, while several women are sharing a lipstick in the ladies' room, someone says, "I hope no one here has herpes!" (Giggle.)

People with herpes are neither "dirty" nor "bad." Not only would it be extremely painful to engage in sex during an outbreak of lesions, I wouldn't do that to my worst enemy.

So, please, folks, cool the jokes. They aren't funny, and could deeply hurt your co-worker, neighbor, or even a member of your family. Sign me

Dear Abby

Herpes jokes should be outlawed along with those tasteless Helen Keller, Stevie Wonder and AIDS jokes.

DEAR ABBY: How do I go about finding out the actual terms of my deceased aunt's will? She passed away four years ago in another part of the country. I was left a modest sum, but other family members came into a great deal more, and all have refused to divulge the amounts.

CURIOUS KIN
DEAR CURIOUS KIN: When a will is filed in court, it becomes public record, and anyone who wishes to read it may do so. Write to the registrar of wills, located in the city hall where it was filed. There may be a small fee. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply.

Taking Estrogen Has Both Pros And Cons

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — In all of the information about taking estrogen and progesterone after menopause, no one ever bothers to mention that the hormone will bring back menstrual periods. As far as I'm concerned, this is a debilitating, unwanted side effect.

technique involves the injection of a sclerosing solution into the swollen varicose vein. The material causes the vein to become inflamed, scar and close down. Some experts believe that this method of sclerosing veins ultimately may replace surgery.

since it is cheaper and safer. However, the practice is tricky and should be performed only by a specialist who is familiar with it.

DEAR READER — Women who take estrogen/progestin after menopause do experience recurring menstrual bleeding. This can be a nuisance, and many patients decide against hormone replacement for this reason. However, the advantages of drug therapy — such as a reduced degree of osteoporosis (bone brittleness) — often outweigh the annoyance of monthly bleeding. The decision about whether to take hormones is a personal one that can best be made in consultation with your doctor.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My daughter is 12 and has had vaginal warts. The first one was removed by radiation. The second one was treated with liquid nitrogen. The second treatment was three times as expensive, took twice as long and produced soreness. Did the second doctor just want my money, or was his reluctance to use radiation justified?

DEAR READER — I don't know why the doctors chose different techniques to remove your daughter's vaginal warts. I agree that children should not be given radiation treatment unless there is a compelling reason to use X-rays. Therefore, I share the second doctor's concern. Ask your daughter's doctor about this to determine if methods other than radiation and liquid nitrogen might be more appropriate treatment for her warts if they return.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've read that varicose veins can now be treated by means of injections combined with tight bandaging. How successful is this?
DEAR READER — It's quite successful in some patients. The

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
The heart ace was a friendly opening lead. (The diamond 10 would have been better defensively.) Can South profit from the defensive lapse? South decided to play East for the club ace, hoping to limit his spade losers to one. So he ruffed the heart ace, played to dummy's trump ace, shed two clubs on the good hearts and then led a club. Later, declarer had to play away from his spade king and went down two.

WIN AT BRIDGE

10. Now pitch two spades on the K-Q of hearts and exit with a spade to the king. West will take the ace and continue spades. Declarer ruffs high and plays his carefully retained diamond deuce to dummy's seven. Now he ruffs dummy's last spade and gets off lead with a club. West can win the jack and cash the ace, but now declarer's king is a winner. And if East overtakes the club jack to lead back the 10, declarer can cover or not. If he goes up with the king and loses to the ace, West has nothing to play except a major suit, allowing South to pitch dummy's club as he ruffs. Of course it's lucky that the diamond 10 was singleton and the club ace was doubleton with West, but those breaks do happen. The intrepid declarer takes advantage of them.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...
YOUR BIRTHDAY MARCH 28, 1987
Something for which you hoped in the past but were unable to bring into being could become a reality in the year ahead. However, you must manage events skillfully once the opportunity presents itself.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) In order to achieve your objectives today, a concerted, consistent effort will be required — not half measures. Don't let down when you think you have a shoo-in. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail #2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The course of action you'll determine for yourself today will be the proper one, but discussions with others could create self-doubts. Let time render the verdict.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be careful in your commercial affairs today so you don't make an arrangement with one who doesn't have the necessary authority but makes the commitment anyway.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone on whom you're depending to fulfill a promise might not be able to deliver today, yet he or she doesn't know how to tell you and still save face.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Duties that you hope to attend to at the last moment are apt to be neglected today. They could plague you with feelings of guilt that will be hard to dismiss.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The little green imp of jealousy might be hovering around you today, and cause you to be a trifle too possessive of your sweetheart or mate.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you and your mate are not in accord as to how to handle a delicate family issue today, each might do immature things to spite the other.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you might have a bit of juicy gossip to tell your companions about another friend. They'll devour everything you have to say, but won't respect you for revealing it.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your financial involvements with friends today, don't be a tightwad or Scrooge but, by the same token, don't let others take advantage of you.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A sensitive friend will have hurt feelings today if he or she is not included in your plans. Think how you would feel if the roles were reversed.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There are apt to be strings attached to a favor that an acquaintance is prepared to do for you today. Before accepting his or her offer, be certain it's worth the price.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A failure to recognize the worth of your ideas today could create a situation where they will later be profitably utilized by another, but gain nothing for you.

You Meet Animals

Susan Loden
Herald Feature Writer

Brandi Knight, a 6-year-old Wilson Elementary School kindergartner spent the second day of spring talking to the animals at Nancy and Jim Engebretsen's Rocking Bar E Farm just east of Sanford.

Brandi, the daughter of Angela and Bobby Knight of Paola, is a country girl, but had never seen pigs or goats. She got her first horseback ride and gathered fresh eggs to take home.

Brandi quickly catches on to the art of horsemanship. "If I scratch her she'll run," Brandi discovered.

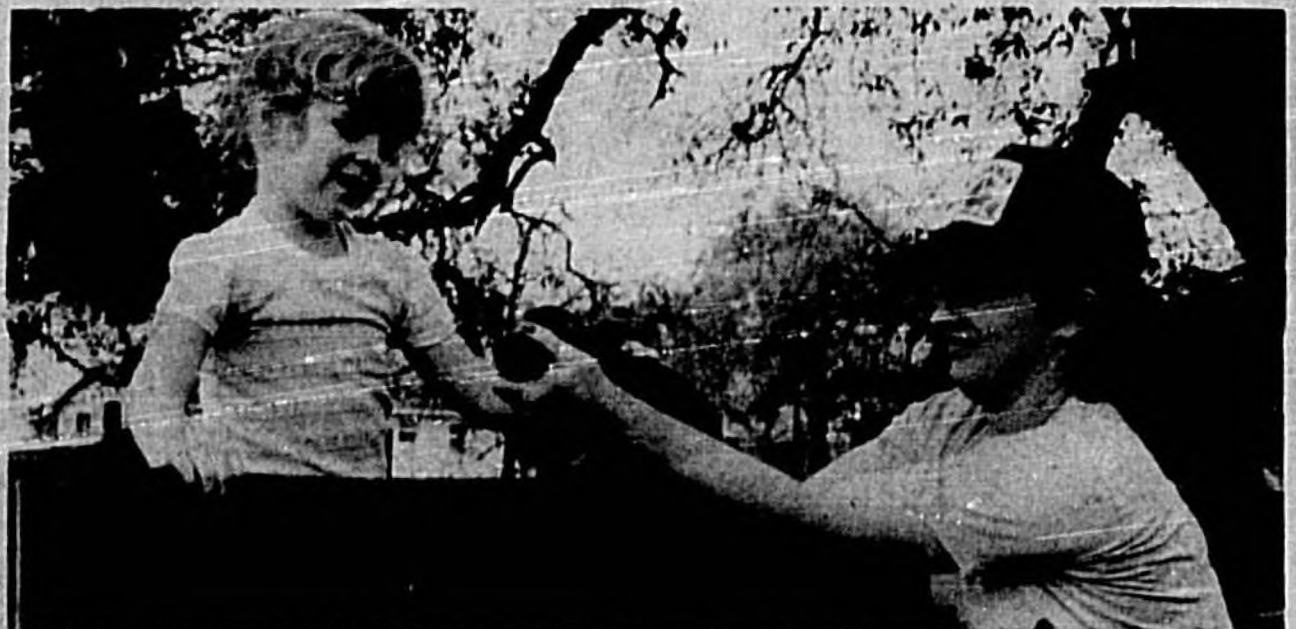

Below: A squeal delight. Brandi meets the runt of two litters of pigs that make up a 'dirty dozen.' "I didn't even know what a pig looks like. "I do know the babies are called piglets," said Brandi who is a Wilson Elementary School kindergartner. "They're not like 'Miss Piggy,' (of the Muppets.) She stands on two legs and can talk," she said.

The second day of spring was a fine time for 6-year-old Brandi Knight's first visit to a farm. Brandi stands back while Nancy Engebretson of the Rocking Bar E Farm east of Sanford, rounds up "Minky Bear" for Brandi's first bareback ride.

Cover Inset

After a visit to the chicken coop, Brandi is ready to go home to Paola with eggs wrapped in her shirttail for mom and dad, Angela and Bobby Knight. She also gathered a few feathers for her own cap.

Below: It's every piglet for himself on a run from the barn to meet Brandi.

Above: Brandi, who said "that horse adopted me," wouldn't want to take a pig home. "They were so gross...except that little red one, or the black one or those three little gray ones..." But no amount of pig washing by Farmer Nancy can polish up mama "Mindy" to make her neat enough for fence-sitter, Brandi.

Did I Miss Premiere Of Daryl's 'Bear'?

Dear Dick: I read somewhere that "The Clan of the Cave Bear" with Daryl Hannah, was to be shown on TV this past fall. Perhaps I missed it, but I have looked closely because I read the three books in the series by the same author. Did I miss it? — J.S., Kalamazoo, Mich.

Dear J.S.: No. The network premiere has yet to happen. But it has been shown on some cable channels. Incidentally, like you, I read and enjoyed all three of those books. I was on the set of "The Clan of the Cave Bear" when it was being filmed in Canada, so I had been looking forward to the movie. When it came out, the movie was panned unmercifully by the critics. But it is actually a pretty good film; and Daryl Hannah makes a dandy Ayla.

Dear Dick: There isn't a bet riding on this, but I think I read somewhere that either Dan Rather, Peter Jennings or Tom Brokaw was Canadian. Could you please verify this? — A.W., Houston.

Dear A.W.: Rather is from Wharton, Texas; and Brokaw from Webster, S.D. So, by the good old process of elimination, we can establish that Jennings is your Canadian. Actually, he's from Toronto.

Dear Dick: I was wondering, in the movie, "The Trouble With Angels," starring Hayley Mills, who was the actress who played the

Ask Dick Kleiner

Mother Superior? — M.A.T., Houston, Texas.

Dear M.A.T.: That was the unforgettable Rosalind Russell, who you forgot.

Dear Dick: Please help settle a dispute. I say that Wayne Rogers played as Trapper John in the early series of "M A S H" with Alan Alda as Hawkeye. He was later sent home and replaced by B.J. Honeycutt (Mike Farrell). My husband says there never was a Trapper John on "M A S H." For once I would like to be right. — C.M., LaFollette, Tenn.

Dear C.M.: For once, you're right and he is wrong. In fact, he should be given KP for a week. Rogers played Trapper John on that TV series for the first three years of its life.

Dear Dick: I was wondering who played the little girl on "Nanny and the Professor," and how old she would be today. — J.H., Hemlock, Mich.

Dear J.H.: That was Kim Richards, who was five or so then, so she would be approximately 21 today.

Dear Dick: I gave Jane Froman (a singer) a shoe box of shoulder patches (insignias) in Schwabach, Germany, in 1945. Is she still alive? — J.W., Knoxville, Tenn.

Dear J.W.: No, she is dead.

Dear Dick: Whose picture is on the coffee cup that Johnny Carson uses every night on the "Tonight" show? — D.E.B., Conroe, Texas.

Dear D.E.B.: That's Johnny himself on yonder cup, but quite a few years ago.

Dear Dick: Please tell me about Alex Trebek, my favorite game-show host. What is the extent of his formal education? — B.A.C., Portage, Mich.

Dear B.A.C.: The last time we talked, Alex mentioned that he had studied philosophy at a college in his native province of Ottawa, in Canada. So he is an educated man. He is, incidentally, the son of a Russian father and a French-Indian mother.

Dear Dick: Years ago I saw a movie on television, starring Jan-Michael Vincent, called "Sandcastles." It was great and I wonder if it is on video cassette. — L.L., Tuckahoe, N.Y.

Dear L.L.: No, it's not. It's greatness is debatable.

Five Nominated Directors Weigh Oscar

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Actors and actresses are the glamour figures at the Academy Awards every year, but the real stars of the industry are the directors who make the pictures — and make the stars look good.

This year's Oscar-nominated directors are mostly new faces, individualists whose work reflects the force and energy of their own vision. Each nominee's work is a distinct signature, reinforcing the tenet that a movie is the creation of its director.

David Lynch directed "Blue Velvet," an off-beat film of murder, lust and esoteric abstractions in an eerie atmosphere of suspended credibility.

The film was not nominated for best picture but Lynch has been recognized for his innovative daring to push directing beyond conventional standards.

Woody Allen is probably the most obvious stylist among contemporary directors. Nominated this year for "Hannah and Her Sisters," Allen deals with personal relationships and frustrations of life in the big city.

Audiences know what to expect from Allen, who was nominated three times previously for best director: he won the Oscar in 1977 for "Annie Hall" and was nominated in 1978 for "Interiors" and in 1984 for "Broadway Danny Rose."

Roland Joffe's direction of "The Mission" earned him his second nomination, and it is only his second movie. His first directing effort, "The Killing Fields," also won an Oscar nomination.

An Englishman with a driving passion for film, Joffe's two pictures reflect a predilection for visual scope, epic drama and sweeping vistas.

Oliver Stone directed this year's Oscar favorite, "Platoon." He has a flair for action, politics and films with a message. Stone also directed "Salvador" last year, another hard-hitting drama of political conflict.

James Ivory is the American director, ironically, of "A Room with a View," the quintessential film of Edwardian England. This is his first nomination.

His deft touch with the formality of gentility was established with such other films as "The Europeans" and "Autograph of a Princess."

Each man ranks high in his creative expertise and they appear to have inherited the mantle of Alfred Hitchcock, George Stevens, William Wyler, George Cukor, John Ford and John Huston.

They are not as personally flamboyant, nor have they amassed the vast body of work accumulated by directors in the studio system. But they enjoy more creative freedom with less interference from studio moguls.

Also, their creativity is arguably greater. Lynch, Allen and Stone, for example, have all been nominated for Oscars for best screenplay.

Even though this year's nominees are as dissimilar personally as their styles, they perhaps share the qualities of dedication and a generosity of spirit for the members of their film companies.

They also keep low profiles. Allen seldom is interviewed and will not attend the Academy Awards presentations out of the conviction that artists should not compete against one another.

Four of the five nominees for best director — Allen abstaining — spoke to United Press International on the eve of the Oscars about the competition.

The soft-spoken, intellectual Lynch said his films are not for everyone, nor does he intend them to be. He makes movies to express his own feelings although he often cannot explain precisely what he is attempting to convey on screen.

Some industry insiders consider him a genius. Woody Allen proclaimed "Blue Velvet" the best film of 1986. Others dismiss Lynch as a nut.

Lynch agreed that he and his fellow nominees are probably on the cutting edge of a new spirit among filmmakers.

"I think we represent five different genres of filmmaking and that's what makes it a real neat year," he said. "That they put 'Blue Velvet' in such company is very important. I don't know what it means, but it's a good thing for me and for other directors who don't make mainstream films. It looks as if there will be exciting times ahead."

"Independent projects like mine are important because they break new ground. They open up possibilities. I've never made a safe box-office picture. But my films are 'safe' to me because I love them."

"I've seen all the nominees for best picture this year and I think they're all good films. The directors are all really good."
