

ODD JOBS KEEP MONEY TURNING IN SOUTHLAND

Strange Occupations Are Prospering Despite Hard Times

By ROBERT BUNNELLE
ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Odd jobs—really odd—are helping to keep money jingling in the South's pockets, and unique enterprises are fooling times more difficult for commoner industries.

A Canal Street shop in New Orleans makes souvenir cotton bales and Mrs. Conception Vargas Alfonso makes quaint wax figures of negro mummies, peddlers and chimney sweeps in the same city. In Louisiana also, a group of Vermilion parish families grow and gin cotton and weave cloth; a factory makes composition board from sugar cane, gerique tobacco is grown, hot sauce is produced and Margalia perfume is made.

Fort Smith, Ark., has an amusement ticket plant and a scissors factory. Arkansas River produces mussel shells for buttons and Everton, Ark., has a corncob manufacturing plant.

A Panama, Fla., man makes wooden-soled shoes with joints for beach wear. Buttons are made from oyster shells at Apalachicola, Fla., and Tarpon Springs, Fla., is the center of a sponge fishing industry. A mill at Allendale, S. C., makes bottoms only for produce hampers, and a Smithfield, N. C., man raises quail for stocking purposes.

Ashville, N. C., has a thriving woolen hosiery industry where cloth is made by old-time methods which was started as a philanthropic enterprise to give work to mountain boys and girls. Jugtown, N. C., produces unique hand-made pottery. Hand-woven work for the world economic conference to be held next year, and that some of them should be associated with the arms conference. Some also, he said, should be members of Congress.

It was indicated the personnel of the commission will be submitted to the President-elect for his approval.

The Chief Executive used these words in speaking of his successor-elect: "Discussions in respect to both debt questions and the world economic conference cannot be concluded during my administration, yet the economic situation in the world necessitates the preliminary work essential to its conduct. The undertaking of these preliminary questions should not be delayed until after March 4."

"I propose, therefore, to seek the cooperation of President-elect Roosevelt in the organization of a commission to study the problem of consideration of these problems," Hoover indicated he had small hopes of congressional authorization of a debt commission.

Chairman Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee, an opponent of the President on many questions, spoke approval of the suggested debt review and proposed a world conference on armaments and money as well as war debts.

"We have a most menacing economic world situation," Borah said. "Let us assume that debt is an item bearing upon that situation. But it is only an item. Unless there is a full program dealing with reparation, the money question, armaments and such could not stand in the way of the world's recovery, we will get nowhere by the consideration of a single item. If a reasonable program, including all these problems, could be proposed or agreed upon, I would gladly support it."

One conflicting note was heard by Senator Glass, of Virginia, one of Roosevelt's intimate advisers and a possible selection as secretary of the treasury, who said he was "far from sure the President-elect should be drawn into the controversy."

Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, ranking Democrat on the finance committee, declared the message was "in very good terms" and is one of the best state papers Hoover has sent down here.

Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, characterized the communication as "an admirable presentation of the difficulties that confront us," adding he was glad that the President "proposes to present a united front by taking action after consultation with Governor Roosevelt."

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, said he concurred as to the economic outline presented by Hoover but added:

Supreme Court Refuses Review In Luke Lea Case

The elder Lea, a former United States senator from Tennessee, had transactions with the Central bank involving millions.

The prosecution claimed that the relation was part of a business expansion arrangement in which Davis and Rogers Caldwell, Nashville capitalist, were to handle commercial and investment banking, and Lea the direction of a number of southern newspapers acquired in the "boom" area.

Both the Caldwell and Lea interests crashed and the Central bank failed.

RALEIGH, N. C., Dec. 20.—(AP)—North Carolina courts today awaited word from the supreme court of the United States before machinery of the law is put into operation to imprison Luke Lea, Tennessee publisher and former United States senator.

When the case was taken to the nation's highest tribunal, the state supreme court granted a stay of execution by withholding certification of its opinion denying a new trial to the clerk of the Buncombe superior court, in which it was tried.

It is probable the opinion will be certified down to the lower court as soon as this state's highest tribunal is officially notified of the action by the supreme court of the United States, as the state supreme court is now in session.

Upon receipt of the papers by the clerk of the Buncombe superior court, commitment papers would be issued and steps taken to imprison the publisher.

The elder Lea faces a prison sentence of six to 10 years, and his son, Luke Lea, Jr., convicted with his father and who also appealed and lost, faces one to three years imprisonment or payment of a $25,000 fine.

Trade Body Group To Study Bank System

The voice of Sanford's business and professional men tonight will be raised in the important problem of what to do with the American banking system when a special committee will make a study of Referendum 63, prepared by the United States Chamber of Commerce and sent to all its affiliated trade bodies.

Linton E. Allen is chairman of this committee, which is scheduled to meet at the Chamber of Commerce tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Other members of the committee are: Gordon Barnett, of Fern Park; Randall Chase, of Hawking Connelly; W. L. Cooper, R. L. Dean, Counts Johnson, H. C. DuBose, P. J. Feitner, of Ocala; R. F. Haines, of Altamonte Springs; J. C. Hatchison, C. S. Lee, of Oviedo; H. J. Lehman, H. M. Papworth, W. M. Scott, S. O. Shindler, W. H. Tunncliffe, J. A. Logan, of Geneva; R. E. Hoffman, of Altamonte Springs; J. C. Bills, Jr., of Geneva; and S. G. Gray.

The "gun battle" with the Legislature took place and that Simpson was slain by a posse when he was found barricaded in a house, James, he said, escaped, apparently badly wounded.

Sheriff Stearns also reported a negro child was wounded during the gun battle and that he had sent it to Notsulga for treatment.

A posse surrounded the James house late yesterday but most of the negroes had fled, Sheriff Stearns said. He said "People all over the country were looking for the negroes."

Plans Indicate Farm Show Will Be Bigger, Better

That the fourth annual Seminole County Better Farms Show to be held in the City Hall on Jan. 5, 6, and 7 will be bigger and better than ever before is indicated in an announcement made today by Alex R. Johnson, general superintendent of the Show, that special exhibits have been promised from the Century of Progress Commission, the State Game and Fish Department, and the State Forestry Department.

The show, intended to set forth the agricultural advantages and possibilities, plus the progress of farming in this county during the past year, will bring together elaborate displays of poultry, eggs, and corn, home preserves, and canned foods and truck crops. Admission to all the exhibits this year will be free, and every convenience for the comfort of all visitors will be arranged. Free motion pictures and lectures on farm topics will be among the daily features, while men prominent in the agricultural development of Florida as it is practiced at the Experimental Station of the University of Florida and by the State Marketing Bureau will be among the speakers.

The entire show is under the supervision of Mr. Johnson, with C. R. Dawson, of Oviedo, as assistant, and the following as committeemen: Peter Thurston, Max Stewart, Randall Chase, W. B. Zachary, David Van Ness, S. O. Shindler, C. E. Adams, Karl Lehmann, J. E. Wathen and Boston Steele, of Sanford; L. E. Jordan and L. P. Mills, of Oviedo; E. T. Haines, of Altamonte Springs; James Wilson, of Chulavita; and J. A. Bistline, of Longwood.

Citrus Inspection Will End Tonight

WINTER HAVEN, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Inspection of Florida citrus design'd to prevent marketing of immature fruit ends at midnight tonight. The regular inspection period originally set from Sept. 1 to Dec. 1 recently was extended 20 days at the request of Governor Nathan Mayo, commissioner of agriculture, said the extension undoubtedly saved the growers thousands of dollars.

Three Negroes Killed In Fray With Possemen

Wetumpka, Sheriff Golden said he had brought one of the negroes there but did not know where the other two had been taken. He said they might have been released.

Sheriff Golden said feeling was high in Tallapoosa county last night and that at least 50 cars of armed possemen were scouring the countryside for the negroes that opened fire on the deputies. He said he had the names of 13 negroes in a group of about 25 that were said to have done the shooting. He refused to reveal their names, however.

"The situation is pretty raw," Sheriff Golden said, adding he would return in the morning to aid in rounding up the negroes. The negro he brought to Wetumpka he said was Andrew Cobb. He confirmed reports that two of the negroes killed were John McMullen and Judson Simpson but said he did not know if others were slain.

He said that McMullen was killed at the farmhouse where he had been hiding.

He said "with respect to an economic conference I do not see how it can succeed unless France and other nations admittedly able to pay should first meet their (debt) obligations of Dec. 15."

Not all the comment was so favorable, however, as Senator Johnson, Republican, California, declared that "wrapped in a mass of words in an academic discussion of economics of doubtful meaning the message looks two ways and, whatever its words, may be read exactly as either side or nation may desire."

ELECTRICITY YOUR CHEAPEST SERVANT

It's the South who read about the heavy snowfall in other parts of the country having a feeling of compensation for those who have to live in a climate where the fall of zero weather is unknown. The recent blizzards which covered our big cities with white mantles are not entirely without compensation, however, for those who have to live in New York City alone 17,000 needy were given jobs clearing the streets for the first job they had in a long time. A half million dollars were turned loose in the work thus adding to the money in circulation.

In other cities many other jobs were put to work and many more dollars were spent in the necessary clean-up task. Many a family which hadn't known the feel of a greenback or a silver coin for a month of Sundays was provided this experience as a result of nature's snow bath. On the other side of the picture those who are better off have had a hilarious time enjoying the sport which is good snowfall affords. Many societics got out their sleighs and high-topped horses and went for drives along the snow covered roads. Skiers and skaters filled the parks and had a big time skimming through the air and taking tumbles on the ice and in the snow.

At a country home high up in the Wheatley Hills near Glen Cove, New York the debutante daughter of a prominent family became the bride of a youthful attorney in a picturesque Christmas-card setting in which horse-drawn sleighs with tinkling bells added to the loveliness of the scene.

That the compensations are not matched by the discomforts is a conclusion which is unnecessary to argue. The only proof needed to watch the thousands of tourists heading southward at the first sign of winter and then the realization becomes apparent that most people, at least those who can afford to do what they want to do, rather get their fun in snow vicariously in the lines of some poem or story book and not in the snow itself.

Opportunities to "self-liquidating" currency is suggested by Pamela Graham, lecturer on finance at Columbia University. The proposals for such a currency were outlined by Paul Sullivan in Albany, New York, Herald Tribune of Dec. 7. Mr. Sullivan's analysis of the scheme has resulted in respectful endorsement. He has expressed a favorable view of the project, but advised against its adoption until the present year. He suggested that the government should issue a $1,000,000,000 of a new kind of paper currency, to be known as "self-liquidating" currency. This currency would be issued in the form of stamps, which would be turned over to the government for the construction of new public works. When the stamps were used to purchase materials or pay wages, the stamps would be cancelled. The stamps would be issued in denominations of $1, $5, and $10.

This is the age of thrills, whether you know it or not, all of them are confined to the line of aviation. No more, for instance, the eighteen year old girl clerk in a New York bank who after an exciting experience with a group of hot up men, automatic machine guns, tear gas bombs and other modern improvements, finally decided to get a job in a bank characteristic of the times. "Boy, what a thrill!" And then there were the two old dowagers returning quietly from an evening at the theater who suddenly became the go-between in an exchange of shots by machine guns. "Cracking on the floor of the car, they waited breathlessly as the taxi crept through the busy streets and the gunmen blazed away over their heads and the bullets from the policemen's guns spattered about. All the hazards and thrills of the Argonne transplanted to the heart of the city."

All this, says the New York Herald Tribune, "reminds one of the rather similar episode a year ago, when, after a reckless chase through the whole north section of the city, the police pulled a rifle from a taxicab, the dead bodies not only of the two bandits whom they were pursuing but of the apparently innocent driver whom the bandits had forced into their service. In the course of the chase several automobiles were wrecked and three motorists were seriously wounded and several bystanders were hit. The total casualties were eight killed and eleven wounded."

Neither of the photographs of the taxicab's occupants that neither of the bandits' two passengers on Tuesday night was hit; while the grotesque fact remains that the experience was something that might happen to anyone, on whatever lawful occasion they might be in the city. The bank robbery, by introducing the modern touch with tear gas, got away with shooting; but if the police had been able to pick up their car the upper West Side would have been treated to another dangerous episode. Only the night before a courier was shot down in 143rd Street, just off Broadway in a gun battle which, however, happily spared the bystanders. It is a little startling to be thus reminded how much we are dependent not only upon the splendid efficiency of the police, but upon the accuracy of their aim; and, in the end, to wonder whether there may not be some way of reducing the hazards of indiscriminate small-arm fire in the streets.

Commissioner Mulrooney's reply is, in effect, "Shoot first!" and certainly the police, while they are diligent in pursuit of armed thugs ready to fire at sight of a uniform. By arming the police radio cars, however, could not they be converted into means for riding down, rather than stopping and firing, the fugitives? If something of the sort were possible, it would have the great advantage of preserving the policeman's life, as well as that of the citizen."
