Airport meeting

SANFORD — The Sanford Airport Authority met this morning. One of the featured items on the agenda was the proposed merger of that authority with the Seminole County Port Authority. To make the presentation, County Commissioner Daryl McLain was on hand. McLain serves as the county's liaison with both authorities.

County Commission Chairman Randy Morris, who has also pressed for consideration of the merger was not on hand. "It wouldn't be proper," he said, "and it would be a violation of the government in the Sunshine Law if we would have both attended."

Morris told the Sanford Herald that the drive had now reached a unanimous vote by the entire Board of County Commissioners. "It is only to explore the possibilities of such a merger at this time," he explained.

Fatal wreck

FOREST CITY — A three car collision was reported Monday afternoon shortly before 6 p.m. on Bear Lake Road and Gleaves Court. The Florida Highway Patrol said a 1988 Ford was attempting a left turn from Gleaves onto Bear Lake, when it was apparently struck by a 1987 Ford and a 1987 Hyundai. Beth Shumway, 33, of Apopka, driver of the Hyundai received minor injuries. A 5-year old passenger in the car was not injured.

Driver of the 1987 Ford, John Spadaora, 39, of Winter Springs, received minor injuries. Jane Meyhew, 74, of Apopka, driver of the 1988 Ford was said to have been killed in the collision.

The FHP said charges expected to be filed in the case remain to be determined.

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

SANFORD — Two armed men who robbed a Sanford restaurant and three customers of an undetermined amount of cash Monday night remain at large today while three suspects in a second armed robbery at a discount bakery outlet were captured by Sanford Police.

Two black men wearing blue ski masks entered Lee's Famous Recipe Chicken restaurant, 1905 S. French Ave. about 9:22 p.m. through the south side doors. Cmdr. Dennis Whitmore said.

One suspect armed with a small chrome handgun accosted three customers and demanded their money while the second suspect jumped over the food service counter, taking cash from the register and from another cash drawer in the manager's office.

A Sanford man and a couple visiting him from Virginia were forced to surrender their wallets to the masked gunman.

Still madam mayor in Longwood

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — It is still madam mayor. By a 3-2 vote by city commissioners Monday night, Iris Benson will remain mayor after criticism was aired about the way she conducts meetings and deals with the public and city staff.

After the public discussion of perceived shortcomings, the commission agreed to pay $300 for a 2 1/2 hour course on parliamentary procedure for the five commissioners, city administrator, city clerk and city attorney.

Commissioner Annamarie Vacca cited several reasons she had lost confidence in Benson to chair the city commission. She was supported by commissioner Ron Sargent.

Vacca noted instances when the public was denied the right to speak on various issues, including the flooding problems in Wildfire subdivision and the timing of some, but not others, during public participation.

Vacca characterized some of Benson's actions as "rude" in harsh criticism she launched at City Administrator W. Shelton Smith for calling department heads to a 20-year plan meeting,

I apologize if I caused you undue stress. My intention was not to be mean-spirited but the issue had to be brought up.

—Commissioner Annamarie Vacca to Mayor Iris Benson telling the police chief to sit down and not recognizing the city engineer when he raise his hand to offer information on an item being discussed.

Vacca said former Mayor Paul Lovestrand had contacted her urging her to drop the matter as he had done on an earlier occasion when Benson had been mayor only a short time. Benson was chosen mayor in November with the backing of new commissioners Bill Winston and Jim Carrico but a short time later, an undercurrent of unrest surfaced concerning how meetings were conducted. Vacca deferred raising the issue because Benson was adjusting to the mayor's role.

"He (Lovestrand) asked for the opportunity to train her (Benson) in the proper way," Vacca recalled, noting Lovestrand and Lynette Dennis would work with the mayor on procedures. There was little change, prompting Vacca to raise the issue calling for a special meeting. When she failed to get the backing of two other commissioners, Vacca had the item placed on the regular meeting agenda.

Lovestrand and Dennis sat together in the back of the commission chambers during the meeting. Benson had a number of friends at the meeting as well as an attorney and court reporter recording the proceedings.

During the meeting, Lovestrand nodded approval or was seen grimacing and shifting in his chair when commission members wrestled with amending motions or the mayor called for a vote when there was no motion on the floor.

"I do not take the situation lightly," Vacca continued. She said her call to remove Benson was not politically motivated, a payback or a personality conflict. In some instances, Vacca said, the mayor's tone, manner and statements do not foster the image of a public-friendly government.

Person dead, 4 injured in I-4 wreck

By NICK PFENAUPE
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — A four vehicle accident Monday on Interstate-4 left one person dead and four others seriously injured while tying up westbound traffic for several hours.

The accident occurred between the S.R. 434 and S.R. 438 interchanges.

According to the Florida Highway Patrol, a 1987 freight truck and trailer was traveling east on I-4, when the driver reportedly lost control and the vehicle careened across the center median into the path of several oncoming vehicles.

The FHP said a 1988 Oldsmobile, being driven by Gholami Shanami, 68, of 785 Greenwood Drive, Lake Mary, was apparently the first to strike the freight truck.

The second vehicle which hit the freighter was a 1991 Ford truck and trailer, owned by Pyramid Masonry Contractors of Orlando. The impact from the collision reportedly sent the masonry truck into the path of still another vehicle, a 1987 Chevrolet, driven by Eliahu Amiga, 63, of Orlando. He and his wife, Phyllis Amiga, 56, were hospitalized in serious condition.

The driver of the masonry truck, Kenneth Knowles was also listed in

Titusville to lose missile plant

TITUSVILLE — The loss of a $1 billion missile contract will cost 1,000 workers their jobs and force the closing of the McDonnell Douglas production plant in Titusville.

The employees will be laid off in stages as production of the Tomahawk cruise missile for the U.S. Navy is phased down until it ends in August, company officials said.

McDonnell lost the Tomahawk missile contract late last year to Hughes Missile Systems.

The plant closings take place "against the backdrop of continuing deep cuts in military procurement and softness in the commercial aircraft market," the company announcement said.

The plant closing was not unexpected, but Brevard County officials had hoped to cushion the economic blow. Titusville community leaders have been studying ways to convert the plant to other uses.

The Space Coast Development Commission estimated last year that the multiplier effect of losing the high-paying McDonnell Douglas jobs would mean the loss of another 2,000 jobs in such sectors as retail, restaurant and services.

The shutdown comes at a time when Harris Corp. in Melbourne is cutting hundreds of jobs. NASA and its contractors also plan reductions in employment.

The county's Private Industry Council plans to provide retraining services to those employees who do not retire or leave the area.

Minister must hire attorney

SEBRING — A minister must hire his own attorney to defend him on charges of murdering an elderly couple whom he had married, befriended like a son and buried, a judge said.

Circuit Judge Olin Shinholser denied the Rev. John Nelson Canning's request for a court-appointed lawyer during a brief appearance Monday.

The judge ruled Canning ineligible after the minister admitted having equity in a house and a car, $15,000 in a retirement account and furnishings, including a Baby Grand piano.

An April 5 arraignment was set for Canning, who was charged Friday with two counts of first-degree murder in the Jan. 2 strangling deaths of Leo and Hazel Gleese, both 90.

Police said Canning, who officiated at their wedding in 1988, called them Mom and Dad and held power of attorney for them as they grew sickly, diverted tens of thousands of dollars from them into his personal account.

When Mrs. Gleese confronted him about the missing money, police believe Canning strangled them. He had injuries on his hands and arms when he reported finding the bodies to Sebring police on Jan. 3, a day after their deaths.

Copter crashes covering investigation

MIAMI — Police were investigating the deaths of two women who were found floating in Biscayne Bay.

A WTVJ-TV helicopter with three people aboard lost power and crashed into the water while filming the scene. No one was hurt.

Police didn't immediately release details of how the woman died or the length of time their bodies may have been in the water. The bodies were taken to the Dade County Medical Examiner's Office for autopsies.

"We thought at first they were bathing because obviously it is not something you see everyday," said Bruce Reia, who was aboard one of the sailboats.

Sentencing postponed in neglect death

MOORE HAVEN — Sentencing has been postponed for a woman convicted of abuse and neglect in the death of her millionaire, paraplegic husband.

Circuit Judge Thomas Reese continued the sentencing hearing until April 3 after Cheryl Mickler announced she had a new defense attorney, her fourth in the case.

Mrs. Mickler faces up to 15 years in prison in the September 1990 death of Scott Mickler. Paramedics found the 31-year-old man at the couple's home, covered in festering sores and rotting flesh a day before he died.

Paralyzed from the neck down in a 1978 car crash, Mickler received $2.2 million of a $3.5 million record settlement from Ford Motor Co. The rest went to lawyers handling the case. Mickler then moved for a time to Franklin, N.C., where he hired a series of nurses and nursing assistants, one of whom — Cheryl Crawford — he married in 1985.

Mrs. Mickler now is being represented by West Palm Beach attorney Douglas Duncan. He replaced attorney Michael Shalloway.

As of last month, when a Glades County jury convicted her, Mrs. Mickler had paid Shalloway $500,000 for probate work in securing for her Mickler's estate and another $25,000 for representing her during the trial.

Chiles limits session agenda Governor faces growing GOP presence

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles was bound to hear some applause when he kicked off the 97th regular legislative session with his annual State of the State message.

With the largest Republican presence at the Capitol in 120 years, the Democratic governor will make it as easy as possible for lawmakers who begin their 60-day session today. Chiles wants to spend more money to lock up criminals, start eliminating excessive rules and regulations and for the second straight year, plans no tax increase. Republicans enjoy a 22-18 majority in the Senate and closed to within four seats of winning control in the House, where Democrats have a 63-57 advantage.

"I've always been flexible, and I continue to be flexible," said Chiles. "There are a lot of things out there that I might not like, but I don't gain a lot by drawing lines in the sand at this time."

The governor has proposed a modest 2.8 percent increase in Florida's almost $40 billion budget. He also wants to cut half of the state's estimated 28,000 rules and regulations.

Looking for agreement with lawmakers on slowing a runaway bureaucracy, Chiles has already sent lawmakers copies of Philip Howard's book "The Death of Common Sense," which blames excessive rulemaking for stifling efficiency.

Chiles will have support of Senate President Jim Scott, R-Fort Lauderdale, who has long sought to reduce interference by the government.

However, more than 1,300 bills have been proposed already, including one resolution to honor fathers.

Many of the other issues are the same Chiles confronted in his first year. The fights will come as the Legislature debates how much money to spend on education and social services, expanding the prison system and fighting crime.

Plans for museum sinking fast

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE — A $1 million to $1.5 million fundraising shortfall may have torpedoed a plan to turn the USS Saratoga into a floating museum and entertainment center here.

"We have voted to inform the Navy ... we are short of our goal and cannot accept the Saratoga today," Charles Sawyer, co-chairman of the Saratoga Museum Foundation, said Monday.

"I don't know that I have been more disappointed than this," he said. "This is a sad day for Jacksonville."

Although the downtown project is sinking fast, Sawyer held out some hope that the project aboard the historic vessel could still come to fruition with more time for fundraising.

"If the Navy decides it wants us to have it and gives us a little more time and the citizens in the mean time are letting us they continue to want it and fundraising continues, then we will use that additional time," he said.

But he warned: "The Navy may absolutely tell us tomorrow it is gone."

Backers predicted they would need $2.5 million in gifts and loans, plus $4.5 million in bank financing that the city agreed to back last year.

Sawyer said the foundation was able to raise about $2 million, including $1.5 million in private donations and pledges and $500,000 in a commitment from a local bank to fund a theater in the carrier.

Bob Powell, who served on the ship from 1959 to 1983, said he was disappointed in the outcome.

"I am surprised somebody couldn't come forward with the money," said Powell, a member of the USS Saratoga Association.

The foundation wanted to outfit the retired aircraft carrier with attractions including a three-story movie theater and flight simulator.

Conference prepares for 1998 state constitution rewrite

By BILL BERNSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A rewrite panel proposing changes in Florida's constitution might consider making it tougher for citizens to amend the document since many of their initiatives don't belong there, some constitutional experts say.

"This is one thing that in a sense may be undermining representative government," former Gov. Reubin Askew told more than 100 people Monday at a conference previewing a 1997-98 review of the document.

"I think Florida is on the verge of getting into the position where you are going to have on the ballot, every two years, four or five initiative petitions which are writing mechanics of government into the constitution which I think would be better left to the Legislature," said another speaker, 3rd District Court of Appeal Judge Thomas Barkdull.

The governor, lawmakers and the state Supreme Court chief justice will name a Constitutional Revision Commission in 1997 that will present proposed changes to voters in the November 1998 election. The constitution was last revised in 1968.

Askew headed Monday's conference exploring possible issues for the rewrite panel. It was organized by the Collins Center for Public Policy at Florida State University.

"Certainly one is initiatives. The initiative procedure is working in a way that frankly wasn't anticipated," he said.

Florida lawmakers are following a national trend toward avoiding voters' ire by deferring tough decisions to the voters — via ballot initiatives. A record 73 such measures passed nationally last year.

Government by initiative can have complications. California's tax-limiting Proposition 13 has brought dozens of lawsuits in the 16 years since it passed, and voters have tried to fix it 16 times with clarifying ballot measures.

Signatures by 8 percent of Florida's voters can put proposals on the ballot. Measures written into the constitution in recent years include a state revenue cap, a net fishing ban, a limit on property tax assessment growth and establishment of English as the official language.

"It's being abused because the constitution is supposed to be a basic document, not a special interest document," said state Supreme Court Justice Parker Lee McDonald, in the conference audience.

But ballot initiatives can let lawmakers avoid responsibility for unpopular decisions, Florida State University President Sandy D'Alemberte told the group.

"It's extraordinary to me how often the Legislature checks itself in anticipation that something is going to get on the ballot," said D'Alemberte, a former American Bar Association president who chaired a 1977-78 Florida Constitutional Revision Commission. "What's happening now is the Legislature is eager to push power away."

POLICE BRIEFS

Caught in court

Seminole County deputy sheriffs assigned to the Judicial Security Section at the Seminole County Courthouse, arrested Varner Woodward, 36, of Florida Avenue, Sanford, shortly after 10 a.m. Monday.

Woodward was reportedly at a court hearing on drug related charges. Deputies said they had learned he was wanted on outstanding warrants for traffic charges.

When Deputy Stu Walther tried to apprehend Woodward in the courthouse lobby, Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said Woodward pushed the deputy out of the way and ran out of the courthouse door.

McDonough said Lt. Matt Stewart, commander of the Judicial Security, and Walther got into a vehicle and subsequently located Woodward near the corner of Sixth Street and Park Avenue in Sanford.

He was placed under arrest on charges of battery on a law enforcement officer and resisting arrest without violence. He was placed in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility under $1,000 bond.

Inmates scorned as baby killers Women find solace in jailhouse refuge

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

WEST PALM BEACH — In the unforgiving caste system of the jailhouse, four women charged with killing their children find they are a new class of untouchables — scorned by murderers and thieves as "baby killers."

The crime is nothing new, but child advocates say the incidence of such cases is increasing.

And the timing of the charges against these four women held in isolation from other inmates at the Palm Beach County Jail couldn't have been worse.

In late October, South Carolina mother Susan Smith claimed her two young sons were kidnapped, and Florida mother Pauline Zile said her 7-year-old daughter disappeared at a Fort Lauderdale flea market.

Neither story was true. The resulting murder cases drew intense media coverage and heightened outrage against any woman charged with killing their children.

But Zile, Clover Boykin, Joanne Mejia and Paulette Cone, whose cases are unrelated, have found solace in their common jailhouse refuge in West Palm Beach.

The spare cream and blue dayroom set aside for them in the women's mental health unit has a television high on the wall and is furnished with two tables and four chairs.

Zile, 24, and Boykin, 20, share one nearby cell, while Mejia, 18, and Cone, 45, share another. They are not allowed to be interviewed while they await trial.

They work jigsaw puzzles, read novels, socialize with each other and watch television fare like the soaps, daytime talk and Rescue 911. Jack Goldberger, Cone's attorney, referred to the group as "kind of like a little coffee klatch."

"These are all very lonely women charged with the horrible crime of killing their own children," he said. "I see them as an emotional support group for each other."

Zile's case drew the most publicity because she tried to hide her daughter's beating death by first telling police the girl had been abducted. Zile's attorney contends the mother was a battered spouse unable to protect the girl from her husband, who also has been charged with murder.

Boykin told police she killed her 5-month-old son after having a dream she was being sexually abused by her father. Boykin also confessed to killing a 9-month-old girl in November 1993, when she was baby-sitting. She faces two charges of first-degree murder.

Mejia is accused of killing her baby in a case of "shaken baby syndrome." Mejia, who has two other children, is charged with murder and aggravated child abuse, but contends she is innocent.

Mrs. Cone and her husband became foster parents in October 1990 and took care of 65 children placed in their home intermittently by the state department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. Her 2-year-old adopted daughter died when the wooden top of her makeshift protective crib dropped on her neck. Mrs. Cone is charged with first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse.

Goldberger said Cone, the oldest of the four women, is "like a mother figure" to the group.

"The other three women charged are very young — they are children who are mothers," he said.

Some inmates have complained the four women are getting special treatment, but jail officials insist they had no choice. The women were taunted in their cells, passed notes calling them "baby killer" and targeted by unspecified threats phoned to the voice mail of prison administrators.

When Boykin and Zile first arrived four months ago, jail officials quickly found they were not safe in the general population. The two women requested to be roommates to cope with being isolated in their cells. The group grew as Cone arrived in December and Mejia showed up in January.

"There is a hierarchy or pecking order for classes of crimes, with sex offenders at the bottom rung for male offenders," said Lt. Chris Kneisley, who handles prisoner placement at the jail. "The female who has killed her own child is on the low end of the women's pecking order."

"The group has helped Zile cope with incarceration, said her attorney, Ellis Rubin.

"None of them discuss anything about why they're in jail," Rubin said. "They small talk, they have their little projects. It's not good being locked up all by

Details of the cases against four mothers held together in isolation at the Palm Beach County Jail on charges of killing their small children:

PAULINE ZILE: The 24-year-old mother of three accused of involvement in the beating death with husband John Zile of her 7-year-old daughter Christina. She first told police her daughter disappeared from a Fort Lauderdale flea market. The girl was later found in a makeshift grave behind a mail. Her attorney claims she was a battered spouse unable to protect her daughter from John Zile. Pauline Zile is charged with first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse.

CLOVER BOYKIN: A 20-year-old mother who told police she killed her 5-month-old son after having a dream she was being sexually abused by her father. Boykin also confessed to killing a 9-month-old girl in November 1993, when she was baby-sitting. Boykin told police she did it to get attention because everyone would feel sympathy that a baby had died in her care. She faces two charges of first-degree murder.

JOANNE MEJIA: An 18-year-old mother and wife of a mechanic who is accused of killing her baby in a case of "shaken baby syndrome." She has denied the claim. She has two other children. She is charged with murder and aggravated child abuse.

PAULETTE CONE: The eldest of the women at age 45, Mrs. Cone and her husband became foster parents in October 1990 and took care of 65 children placed in the home intermittently by the state department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. Her 2-year-old adopted daughter died when the wooden top of her makeshift protective crib dropped on her neck. Mrs. Cone is charged with first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse.

yourself, and they're innocent until proven guilty."

But Gary Israel, Mejia's attorney, says the women face the danger of being lumped together as "a group of baby killers."

"The only similarity with these women is that they are charged with cases involving children," Israel said. "The case against my client comes down to one man's opinion, a preliminary opinion from the medical examiner that this child had 'shaken baby' syndrome."

The eyes and ears

When people are robbed or their homes burglarized, most everyone will call for police or a deputy sheriff. When others are criminally violated, however, there may be a tendency to, "not want to get involved."

We are seeing a very slow, but definite improvement in this in our local area. People are starting to call the law when problems are seen. As a result more arrests are being made, and more criminal activity is being stopped.

People are telling police about suspected drug activities, loud noises, wreckless driving, screaming from a neighbor's home, and locations of wanted persons.

This is possibly one of the greatest things the average citizen can do to help reduce crime. By informing police of suspicious activities, the people are adding eyes and ears to the fight against crime. They are proving to others that they are sick and tired of such things as robberies, muggings, purse snatching, thefts, and other crimes.

Unfortunately, some people want the city, county, police or sheriff's deputies to do everything. Individuals appear at meetings or make phone calls demanding that something be done. Generally, that's where it has stopped. They want others to do it.

Now we see where more and more people are not only urging increased law enforcement, but taking it upon themselves to lend a hand and summon officers whenever problems are noted.

Yes, we are fully aware of complaints that some people call the law and receive no satisfaction, but those cases are rare.

This is like wanting to win the lottery. We never will if we don't buy a ticket. We also want to fight crime. We never will until we all start working together.

LETTER

Let parents care for kids

You hit the nail square on the head when you said: "Yes, we know. There is no such thing as a free lunch. We, the taxpayers pay for them, whether administered nationwide or state-by-state."

You and Ellen Goodman and Robert Greene need to "get real," as the kids say. I was born in 1930. I survived the so-called "Great Depression." The social programs in place today, if in place then, would have made us think we had died and gone to heaven.

I did not pack a lunch most of the time in those days gone by. When I did, it was a cold biscuit with bacon or maybe an apple, if money was available. Times were hard then but I did not starve to death without a school lunch program. If you fear that I was brain-starved because I did not have a free lunch, consider this letter. It is written by one who graduated in the upper third of his class from Manatee County High in 1948 and cum laude from Florida Technological University in 1974.

It is time to let parents take care of their kids instead of demanding that government do it for them.

Wedge issue, cheap and emotional

It's time for the W-word, again, but with a Clintonesque twist.

In Canada last week President Clinton (according to The New York Times) "acknowledged... that he had ordered a review of (his) administration's support for affirmative action programs." Indeed, said the president, "we shouldn't be defending things we can't defend. So it's time to review it, discuss it, and be straightforward about it." But, said President Straightforward, he was determined to prevent the debate over affirmative action "from becoming another cheap, political, emotional wedge issue."

Goodness. A wedge issue, cheap and emotional. It's a statement in search of deconstruction.

We? Just who is the "we" that Clinton refers to when he says, "We shouldn't be defending things we can't defend"? It's not me, I'll tell you that. In the realm of affirmative action, are we then to understand that Clinton himself has been defending things that can't be defended?

Like choosing his administration by quota - by race, gender and ethnicity - so that it would "look like America"? Like supporting congressional redistricting based on race?

Like appointing and hiring an all-star team of quocrats to fill the civil rights slots in this administration, hailing from the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, the ACLU, the National Center for Lesbian Rights, the National Women's Law Center, the Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Education Fund and the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund? Like appointing Mary Frances Berry as chairperson of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, she who has written that "civil rights laws were not passed to give civil rights to all Americans... (but only) to disfavored groups (such as) blacks, Hispanics and women"?

Like the 50 percent women/minority quota promulgated by his appointees on the Federal Communications Commission, for 1,000 new licenses, at 60 percent below-market value? Like his health care plan which pushed forward minority doctors to train for medical specialties while other doctors would be disproportionately tracked into general practice? Like his administration's support of retroactive enforcement of the 1991 Civil Rights Act (rejected by the Supreme Court, 8-1)? Like his Justice Department's demand that banks approve loans for minorities at below-market rates, with grants to cover down payments (which has the effect of raising interest rates on non-minorities)?

Moreover, why is taking up the issue of affirmative action/set-asides/preference/proportionalism/quotas - "another cheap, political, emotional wedge issue"? Does this mean that the quocrat assault on merit over the past quarter of a century is not important? That opposing it is unclear? That it hasn't helped spawn some of the most bizarre and corrosive forms of politically correct multiculturalism?

And, anyway, how come the president chose to order a review of affirmative action right now? Hasn't he been in office for two years?

GOP attacks Fourth Amendment

WASHINGTON - Republicans fought the Clinton health care plan last year by manning the ramparts for the cause of "personal freedom." Can these be the same conservatives who now want to bulldoze the Bill of Rights?

Fresh evidence of that reality will be provided this week when the Senate Judiciary Committee holds a hearing with a title only George Orwell could love: "The Jury and the search for truth:"

The case against excluding relevant evidence at trial. In fact, conservatives would undermine the Fourth Amendment, which guarantees the "right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures..."

This constitutional touchstone was rejected as a "technicality" by the House last month when it passed legislation under the "Contract With America" that weakened the exclusionary rule. Because it requires that evidence seized illegally by the police in violation of the Fourth Amendment be excluded at trial, the exclusionary rule is the enforcement mechanism keeping cops honest and citizens safe in their own homes.

Republicans championed these rights when it came to defeating President Clinton's health care reform plan last year. As they rewrite the Clinton crime bill, however, much of the civil libertarian rhetoric has yielded to rank hypocrisy.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, once referred to fraud-fighting units proposed by Clinton as a "medical Gestapo. That means they'll be knocking on your grandparents' door and your parents' door." This is the same Craig who spent last week decrying scare tactics by the Democrats who opposed the balanced budget amendment.

Other Republicans referred to the Clinton health care plan as "medical fascism" and intoned darkly of doctors being hauled off to jail. House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas, who guided the GOP crime bill to passage, promised last summer that under Republican rule "Big Brother will no longer be looking over your shoulder or putting his hands into your pockets."

When it comes to protecting corporate rights, some Republicans have been even more active than their rhetoric on personal rights. Many Republicans have had their hands in the pockets of pharmaceutical giants, which is probably why House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., is gunning for the Food and Drug Administration. The FDA, which enforces standards for food and drug products, is one tough cop conservatives despise. Gingrich has branded FDA Commissioner David Kessler "a bully and a thug."

There is other evidence of the influence of special interests in the legislation already passed by House Republicans. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms - which has long been the nemesis of the National Rifle Association - would be prohibited from using evidence obtained in a warrantless search. Likewise the Internal Revenue Service. As one source on the Senate Judiciary Committee quipped: "The House is proposing we do away with the exclusionary rule unless you are Michael Milken or David Koch. That kind of reveals it as a game and that people are using this for political points."

The current assault on the exclusionary rule is mandated more by pollsters than prosecutors. The GOP is trying to capitalize on public opinion polls showing crime eclipsing the economy as the biggest perceived problem facing the country.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Hum this: Sex and consequences

BOSTON - When Kathleen Sylvester began researching welfare reform for the Progressive Policy Institute, she asked a Baltimore school principal the one thing she'd do to reduce the number of teen-age pregnancies.

The principal had an immediate two-word answer for her: "Shoot Madonna."

This was not a serious attempt on this educator's part to cure sex with violence. The principal was not a character assassin. She was probably thinking of the Madonna of the 1980s, the one who wrote the classic paean to teen-age motherhood: "Papa Don't Preach." The Madonna of the '90s has a line in "Bedtime Stories" that sounds more like paean to Joycelyn Elders: "Happiness lies in your own hand."

But the principal was speaking in a familiar vocabulary. It's a language shared by parents, teachers, policymakers, the whole range of frustrated adults whose voices of reason are drowned out by a culture that sells kid sex as successfully as it sells them sneakers. Just Do It.

The messages that kids actually listen to ought to be piped into the hearing rooms where Congress is busy concocting a new welfare policy. The plan the House Ways and Means Committee is contemplating for teenage mothers is called euphemistically "tough love." But our culture offers something else. Sex without consequences.

"How many times do kids see sex on TV," says Sylvester, "in which no one gets pregnant, no one gets AIDS and no one has to get up in the middle of the night to feed a baby?"

In the face of the onslaught, the true counterculture in America is not the "McGovernik elite" or, for heaven's sakes, PBS. It's parents and reasonable adults who are left to literally counter the culture, to do combat with the incessant messages of mainstream films, music, television - the conglomerate known as Hollywood - as best we can.

Hollywood may not cause teen pregnancy. But Sylvester and others are convinced that any national campaign that goes to the heart and hard-core of the problem is going to have to engage these cultural message makers.

We're going to have to do more than label them as villains. We need them as allies. It will take all their creativity to make a successful pitch against irresponsible sex and teen pregnancy. "Just say no" won't do it. Teen-agers are the most risk-taking part of the population. They're still being seduced by cigarette ads.

It will be harder to fashion a stand against sex than against smoking. After all, smoking is always bad for you, sex isn't. And hormones are even more powerful than nicotine addiction.

It will also be harder to campaign against unwed parenthood than against drunk driving. The campaign against drunk driving was successful in curbing dangerous behavior by creating a new social role: the designated driver. But a baby is a different sort of accident than a head-on collision.

If we can't preach, however much papa (and mama) may want to, we can say unequivocally in rhythm, rap or reel what Sylvester says in plain words: "It's wrong to bring a child into the world that you can't take care of." It's not cool, it's not manly, it's not womanly, it's wrong.

This goes beyond using Madonna for target practice. It even goes beyond lowering the sexual thermostat of the culture.

Entertainment executives like to say, on the one hand, that they are just reflecting reality and, on the other hand, that they're in the business of fantasy. With both hands, they wave furious charges of censorship at any critic.

But how about more reality? In an ad campaign, in soap operas, movies, music. Not long ago, an outraged producer complained to Jay Winston, the public health guru who created the designated driver campaign: "Can you imagine that people are lobbying to have Tom Cruise use a condom? Tom Cruise? Why is that so hard to imagine?"

At Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, a nervous Barbara Streisand recently offered a spirited defense of the artist as citizen. But the problem isn't that this "cultural elite" is too political. It's that it isn't political enough. As Winston says, "they ought to be powerful players in this process. They need to come to the table."

Let's begin with some sexual truth-in-advertising: one part passion to two parts diapers. Sex and consequences. Try humming a few bars.

Some advisers urge Clinton to lift cash, travel restrictions

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is debating whether to revoke a pair of relatively mild economic sanctions imposed on Cuba last August, when thousands of Cuban boat emigrants were seeking entry into the United States.

A White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity today, said some Clinton advisers are pushing to lift a ban on Cuban exiles sending cash to relatives on the island and ease restrictions on travel by U.S. citizens to Cuba.

But aides said a recommendation has not gone to President Clinton, whose advisers are debating a wide and conflicting range of options on Cuba.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said today Clinton remains firmly in support of a broad economic embargo against Cuba, despite resistance from other Western Hemisphere nations.

"There is no review or change in our view that the embargo of Cuba is an effective tool," McCurry said.

Clinton imposed the mild sanctions last August to appease members of the Cuban-American community angered by his decision then to deny some 30,000 Cuban boat emigrants entry to the United States.

Cuba later agreed to stop the mass exodus after the United States guaranteed 20,000 visas would be issued annually to Cubans to settle in the United States.

The Washington Post, which first reported the discussions, said the proponents of easing the sanctions believe they should now be removed because their original purpose — persuading Cuba to curb the exodus — had been accomplished.

Buy a State Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity today, said he believes that argument is flawed because the United States is still dealing with the consequences of Cuba's decision to permit the exodus.

He pointed out that six months after the exodus ended, 24,000 Cuban migrants remain at the Guantanamo Naval Base, at a heavy cost to the U.S. government.

Shelters must be operating on April 1 to qualify for the funds.

For the first month or so, shelter referrals are expected from law enforcement agencies investigating domestic violence complaints. A shelter Hotline will give callers immediate access to help. Denton plans to get the word out to the community through the media, hospitals, doctors, churches and the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services a local shelter is available for battered women.

To keep the location of the shelter as confidential as possible, arrangements will be made for volunteers or staff members to meet the victims in a safe, public place, then be transported to the shelter.

As a volunteer victim advocate with the Seminole County Sheriff's office, Denton said she sometimes had to tell battered women their names would be placed on a waiting list until space became available in out-of-county shelters. The wait could be from two days to two weeks or longer.

Safehouse will accommodate from 36 to 40 individuals with preference given to county residents.

"We are attempting to recruit corporations, civic groups, churches or individuals who will donate money to furnish the bedrooms," Denton explained. It costs about $1,000 for each bedroom.

Consideration is being given to making one of the bedrooms into a children's play area, but a final decision has not been made, Denton said.

GOP plan would add to seniors' Medicare expenses, AARP says

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The American Association of Retired Persons maintains that Republican plans for Medicare savings would cost the typical senior citizen an average of $400 a year over the next five years.

The organization said Monday that the savings GOP leaders are talking about are three times larger than any Congress has ever imposed on the health insurance program for the aged and disabled workers, which now costs $157 billion a year and has been growing by double-digit percentages each year.

Tricia Smith, top AARP lobbyist, acknowledged Medicare would still grow by 8 percent a year, even if Congress trims $150 billion over a five-year period.

And Beau Boulter, a lobbyist for United Seniors Association, a rival conservative group, said: "Until we know what (the savings) are, I think it's unfair to say it's going to cost seniors two thousand bucks more. That's just another scare tactic."

Boulter, a former GOP congressman from Texas, said Congress is trying to "protect Medicare. Something has got to be done or the program is going down the tubes, and senior health care with it."

AARP, which claims 33 million members, offered this scenario of how much more the elderly would pay if Congress achieves program savings of the magnitude being discussed:

—The Medicare Part B premium would cover 30 percent of costs instead of 25 percent and cost $67 a month by 2000. It is now $46.10 but rises annually.

—Part B premiums would be tripled for seniors with incomes above $50,000 for individuals and $100,000 for couples.

—The $100 Medicare Part B annual deductible of $100 would be doubled and increased each year; seniors would pay $275 by 2000.

—Seniors would be charged 20 percent coinsurance for home health services they now get for nothing. The average person needing home health care would pay $1,200 in 2000.

—Simultaneous cuts in Medicaid could undermine a program that pays Medicare premiums and deductibles for seniors in poverty.

The person killed in the accident was Molouk Shanani, 55, of Lake Mary, a passenger in the 1988 Oldsmobile.

Initial reports issued by the FHP show no indication of alcohol having been involved, and all persons were believed to have been wearing seatbelts at the time of the collision.

The accident reportedly occurred shortly before 4 p.m. at the beginning of the rush hour. Traffic in the westbound lane of I-4 was tied up for several hours, while eastbound traffic slowed because of persons looking at the scene.

Knowles was taken to Orlando Regional Medical Center. As of this morning, he was still in critical condition in the intensive care unit.

Eliahu and Phyllis Amiga were taken to South Seminole Community Hospital in Longwood. A spokesman this morning said Eliahu had been discharged while Phyllis was transferred to ORMC, although the hospital said they had only records for Knowles.

No charges have been filed in connection with the accident pending a completion of an investigation.

Jenkins was captured near the railroad tracks near 5th Street and Laurel Avenue while the other suspects were arrested in a yard at 312 Oak Avenue. Schuler was also arrested on an outstanding warrant for grand theft and violation of probation on a burglary charge.

Sanford police also arrested Eric Purnell Curtis, 23, 148 Academy Ave. Monday for animal cruelty and fighting/baiting animals which are third degree felonies. Curtis was seen by two policemen encouraging his pit bull to attack a raccoon which had been smeared with blood and its hind legs broken.

The police ordered Curtis to remove the dog, the raccoon suffered about 10 minutes before it died, Whitmire said.

An animal control officer took the dog into custody and the blood and a stick was taken into custody as evidence.

End of prisoner student aid lamented, cheered

By SALLY STREFF BUZZER
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON — For the last five years, Jason Nicholas has been prisoner 91-A-6991 at the Collins Correctional Facility in upstate New York, serving six to 19 years for killing a man.

For the last two of those years, Nicholas also has been a student at Medaille College, studying in a prison classroom each night for a bachelor's degree funded by the federal government.

Last year, Congress prohibited prisoners like Nicholas from continuing to obtain federally funded Pell grants for post-secondary education. And last month, a federal judge threw out a lawsuit the inmate had filed. Sometime in mid-May, Nicholas' school funding — and classes — end for good.

"That's the way it should be," said Rep. Bart Gordon, D-Tenn., who helped get the change through Congress. "Every time a prisoner gets a Pell grant, it simply means a traditional student, someone who didn't commit a crime, is getting less."

But many of the officials who run the nation's state and federal prisons are mourning what they call a valuable program that became a political football. For a small amount of money, Pell grants to prisoners made a big difference, they argue.

Before the program was killed, some 28,000 prisoners received $36 million in Pell grants each year. Overall, Pell grants totaling $6.3 billion are awarded to about 4 million students annually.

Pell grants for prisoners are "a tough sell," acknowledged former Federal Bureau of Prisons Director J. Michael Quinlan. Only the "rare, rare" prisoner is ever rehabilitated, he said, but even turning around a handful is worth the program's cost.

"What we have to remember is that 99 percent of these people are coming out some day. It's not that they deserve it, or that the government has a responsibility," Quinlan said. "It's really for our own, for society's sake."

Utah's corrections officials felt so strongly about the benefits of education, they found enough state money to make up for the last Pell grants.

In one program sponsored by Salt Lake City auto dealers, inmates learned to repair cars. Frequently, they got jobs from those dealers when they got out of prison.

"The more employable they are, the less likely they are to show up here again," said prison spokesman Jack Ford.

And the grants had another benefit. "We work very hard to keep a lot of bored, frustrated prisoners busy," said Ford. "That way they are less likely to become violent toward guards."

New York, facing its own budget problems, felt differently. Soon, its 3,500 inmates in college programs will go back to washing floors, fixing plumbing or mowing lawns. The state will still offer literacy and basic education classes.

But that won't be enough for the small, motivated group of prisoners able to turn their lives around with some help, said Eileen Bull, who directs Marist College's in-prison programs.

One of her former students got a computer programming job when he left prison. Two others are counselors. Several women work as paralegals, supporting children.

"What you see is a change in the way they think," Bull said. "They're not as narrow-minded. Some of them get a real thirst for knowledge."

But other prison officials believe any inmate motivated enough to study will do fine once released.

And even the program's staunchest supporters acknowledge it had severe problems.

In one infamous case, a for-profit trade school — called a proprietary school — collected Pell grant money on behalf of prisoners it supposedly taught a trade. Actually, the prisoners just peeled potatoes in a prison kitchen.

"There were some real horror stories," Rep. Gordon said.

He also heard from parents upset that their children couldn't get Pell grants because the parents made too much money, while prisoners with no income got the grants. The Justice Department already has an education budget of $60 million, and that money can be switched to make up for the Pell grants, Gordon contended.

"I'm not against the idea of trying to rehabilitate prisoners," he said. "But it's a matter of setting priorities. Let's face it, we have limited student aid money. It should go to struggling families."

Muscling in on welfare debate

WASHINGTON — Hoping to muscle into the welfare debate, President Clinton is accusing Republicans of backing reforms that are "cruel to kids" and not harsh enough on deadbeat parents.

"They are wrong," Clinton said in a draft of a speech he was delivering to county executives today.

Clinton's latest attempt to control the reform movement comes as Republicans aim to trim the costly food stamp program and limit cash benefits to families. Despite some sharp language, aides say Clinton hopes to rise above partisan sniping and stir Republicans and Democrats alike to cooperate on a bill that promotes responsibility, work and compassion.

"These aren't Republican or Democratic values. They are American values — and no child in America should grow up without them," Clinton said.

Accuser becomes accused MEXICO CITY — The accuser has become the accused in Mexico's most spectacular murder case.

Mario Ruiz Massieu, who as a federal prosecutor claimed a high-level coverup in his brother's murder, was charged Monday with trying to divert attention from the true mastermind: the brother of then-President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

And the Attorney General's Office said it has learned from U.S. Customs officials that $6.9 million was deposited in a Houston bank under Ruiz Massieu's name.

The money supposedly arrived between March and November 1994 — a period when Mario Ruiz Massieu headed anti-narcotics prosecutions in Mexico as well as the probe of the September murder of his brother, the second-highest official in Mexico's governing party.

These were the latest shocking twists to a case that has shaken Mexico's political establishment, already battered by the country's economic crisis.

Ruiz Massieu appeared in a Newark, N.J., federal court on Monday to answer charges of failing to declare more than $43,000 in cash to customs officials. U.S. officials also asked he be held for extradition to Mexico. A bail hearing was scheduled today in Newark.

Rush to judgment?

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's defense kept pressing its "rush to judgment" theory, suggesting that drugs and a banana could have led a more vigilant police force to the real killer or killers.

Resuming cross-examination of Detective Tom Lange on Monday after a 10-day hiatus, defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr. suggested two murder scenarios that would exclude Simpson:

— A drug hit possibly related to Faye Resnik, a friend of Nicole Brown Simpson's who admits past drug problems.

— Or something to do with Ronald Goldman, a young man with two lists: one of women's names and numbers, including Ms. Simpson's; and a grocery list that included bananas, which often carry a kind of sticker found at the crime scene.

Lange, who was to return to the stand today for more cross-examination, rejected both of Cochran's theories. The detective said he never came across any clues suggesting the possibility that someone other than Simpson was the culprit.

Limiting frivolous lawsuits

WASHINGTON — Buffeted by competing lobbying campaigns from business, consumer and legal groups, House lawmakers are plunging into complex Republican legislation that backers say is aimed at limiting frivolous lawsuits.

Three bills before the House this week would make it easier to defend product-liability and securities-fraud cases. They would pre-empt state laws by creating a federal limit on punitive damages in most lawsuits. The far-reaching measures to overhaul the civil legal system are part of the Republicans' "Contract With America" agenda.

One bill would establish a "loser pays" system requiring parties in many federal lawsuits to pay the other side's legal fees if they refused a settlement offer and wound up getting less through a trial.

The House was expected to vote today on the bill, amid a high-priced lobbying campaign on both sides and robust opposition by the Clinton administration.

Lake Howell wins sixth game of early season

By DEAN SMITH

CASSELBERRY — It may be a little premature to be picking which teams will be the Irontrunners for conference and district titles in baseball this year, but if the early season is any indication, the Lake Howell Silver Hawks will be one of the elite clubs in the county.

Monday night at the impressive Lake Howell Baseball Complex, the Silver Hawks got a strong hitting performance and good pitching to pound the visiting Osceola High School Kowboys from Kissimmee 11-5.

The win raised Lake Howell's record to 6-2, but it also broke a mini-losing streak of two games.

"We stressed to the kids that it was important to win the early games and get off to a good start," said Lake Howell head coach Birto Benjamin. "And they responded by winning their first five games. But then I think they lost their focus and relaxed a little bit and we lost a couple of games in the tournament at Apopka."

"Still, we hung in there for the first six innings with Boone, only trailing 3-1 heading to the seventh before losing 7-1. A lot of people think Boone has one of the strongest teams in Central Florida, so I think we are doing pretty well."

Ricky Padilla (2-0) was the beneficiary of an 11-hit Silver Hawks attack that saw 10 different players either get a hit, score a run or drive in a run. The senior righthander went the first five innings, giving up three runs, all in the first three innings, on six hits, while striking out five and walking three.

WBL folds, USWBL rises from ashes

By VICKI DESORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

DeBARY — The commissioner says it is back better than ever.

After one season, the Women's Baseball League folded, leaving the Sanford Ice without a league to call their own.

Commissioner Sal Algeri, during a telephone conference call Monday afternoon, said he has dealt with the "numerous problems" that brought about the original league's demise and has reorganized to form the United States Women's Baseball League, Inc.

"I'm a fighter," he said to those who said the WBL was done for. "I would never give up."

To improve the financial viability of the USWBL, Algeri has entered into a business arrangement with investor David Sackler and former San Francisco Giant great Bobby Bonds.

Sackler, 30, will be the owner of the Sanford Ice as well as serving on the league's board of directors.

Bonds was the commissioner of both the Winter and Women's baseball leagues.

Along with the Sanford entry, teams will be fielded in Daytona Beach (the Daytona Beach Sand Sharks) and in Cocoa (the Brevard Diamonds).

In the WBL's maiden and only season, the Algeri-operated Diamonds played out of Apopka and won the league championship, defeating the Ice three games to one in the best-of-five series.

Negotiations are scheduled in Tavares — home of the Florida Tornadoes last season — next week to finalize the details of continuing to field a team there.

If an agreement can not be reached in Tavares, he noted, there are interested parties hoping for a team in Tampa, Coral Springs or Palatka.

Algeri said the players will get more money than last year. While salaries will remain the same, Algeri said the visiting team will receive a percentage of the gate sales with a guaranteed minimum to be determined at a later date.

The home team will continue to get 50 percent of the gate and profits from concessions.

"This league is a players league," Algeri said. "We will not have greedy owners in this league."

He promised that next year, the league would expand beyond its Florida borders, possibly to Georgia and Texas.

And, he said, there would be "a true World Series" in 1996.

Algeri said talks are underway with the "Mediterranean League of the Silver Bullets" to have the champion of their league play the USWBL winner for a world championship.

Negotiations also are underway for a television and radio contract for the league, he said.

The 1995 season is scheduled to start on Aug. 5 with the four teams playing a 32-game schedule.

Smiling through the rain drops

Even a little rain could not dampen the spirits at Lake Mary High School last Tuesday as the new softball field was dedicated. On hand for the ribbon cutting were (from left) head coach Jenne Fisher booster club vice president Mike McWeeney, booster club president Donna Schumaker, Jeff Longstaff from 1st Mercantile Bank, Lake Mary principal Raymond Games, and Mike Good from Bjar Construction.

Volunteer of the Week

He coordinates Grace 'N' Grits program

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Robert "Bob" Sonnenberg has been a very devoted member of Holy Cross Episcopal Church for some 25 years. He and his wife of 38 years, Bettie, have raised their children David and Lynn with the church in mind. A bicycle accident last year took one of their sons to be with the Lord. In his memory the couple have planned a biking trip across Ireland.

Sonnenberg is the coordinator of a team involved with Grace 'N' Grits. This is an outreach ministry of the church which feeds the hungry of the community on Wednesday evenings.

Although Sonnenberg is involved with the church daily, he credits the success of his endeavors to his wife. "Most of the time we work side by side," he said. "I've got the best lady in the world. Everyone else got second-hand."

His devotion to his church led him to say, "Holy Cross is filled with warm, loving Christian people. In our work here it's known that everyone is always welcome at the Lord's table."

Hard work has been second nature for Sonnenberg. "I'm at the church 385 days a year," he said. "I work doing maintenance, repairs, and I used to do the lawn work. If the ladies' class needs help I assist them too."

Kitchen coordinator has been the main job title for Sonnenberg. He not only coordinates his team for the Grace 'N' Grits program, but coordinates all activity in the Holy Cross Episcopal kitchen. "I feed church members breakfast on Sunday mornings," he said. "Saturday mornings and Wednesday evening I feed the street people. I work in the kitchen for special activities and when we have supper. My wife does 90 percent with me."

Sonnenberg admitted his real love is working with the homeless people. He is not only involved in feeding these people but aids with clothing and has at least 50 to 60 games stored for the children for Christmas or special occasions. "I get a great feeling when I see these people eating here," he said. "Sometimes the people think I'm the priest because I'm here so much. We used to have a break-in every two weeks. Now that we've been feeding the people, they respect us. They have a warmth in their heart and they don't want any harm to come on the church because we've helped them. They're just as human as I am."

Concluding, Sonnenberg said, "Dollars and cents mean nothing to me now. The warmth of a smile and hug is important. That means more to me and more to the homeless people."

Using psychic powers for spying?

DEAR JERRY: Recently, I was watching the television show known as "Sequester DSV." The episode dealt with the use of "psychic powers" for the use of spying or knowing things about other people that one would have no way of knowing about, especially if they had not known or inquired about that person and quite specifically at that.

What do you think about this, did you see the program, and has the government sought to use your abilities? I must say that I am intrigued by your rhetoric and your articles and have no doubt that you are what you claim to be.

DONALD, ORLANDO
DEAR DON: Thank you for your letter and your unknown confidence in me as a psychic. Yes, I did see that particular program and while many who watched it might be "science fiction buffs," that particular episode dealt more with the reality of not only what I can do, but what almost anyone is capable of, if they learn how to use their mind. No, you don't have to meditate, put bowls of flowers around you, or even wear robes and shave your head. I wish I had the column also to properly answer your inquiry, but it would involve, virtually, a series based on

'Especially'
JERRY STEWART

"parapsychology" and its influences on the homo sapien in our society. Feelings, hunches, gut reaction, speculation, hope, fear, and suffering all play into the realm of the psychic experience and each must be investigated, researched, found out, and studied before you can authenticate anything for practical purposes. As for the ability being used for the government, I can only answer "Classified."

DEAR JERRY: I went to one of these "fortune tellers" and was told that there was evil all around me and that in order to get rid of my problem, I would have to provide $5,000 and that the fortune teller would take the money to a cemetery, pray over it, then bury the money, and the evil that is supposedly all around me would go away. Unfortunately, I don't have that kind of money and I'm pretty sure that I was being scammed, but I still am beset by these problems and don't know what to do.

ANNE SANFORD

DEAR ANNE: It's a good thing you didn't fall for that scam, as it's one of the oldest in the book and you should consider yourself lucky that you didn't have that kind of money around; and no, nothing would have been done with that money except to line somebody's pocket with your hard-earned dollar. As for your problems, why don't you try to talk to a friend, a counselor, or write to me again about what is troubling you and maybe I can help.

Many of you have chosen to call the listed number at the end of this column. It comes directly to me and does not go through the Sanford Herald. While I appreciate your calls, the line is for those who wish to make appointments or schedule me for a speaking engagement. There are many instances when I would be more than glad to come to your group, in some cases, without a fee. I would appreciate it, although I realize your calls are important, if you are wanting an answer through this column, you send me a letter directly through the Herald so that each one can be documented for my records properly.

For those of you who have not seen your letter answered, please be patient and, in time, you'll get a response either through this column or by mail perhaps.

(Write to Jerry Stewart, C/O Sanford Herald, 200 N. French Ave., Sanford, FL 32771. Stewart's phone for information and speaking engagements: 1-407-328-6222.)

Get along with daughter-in-law

DEAR ABBY: About four or five years ago, you had a column titled "How to Get Along With Your Daughter-in-Law." I thought it was great, so I cut it out and carried it in my wallet. Well, my purse was snatched in a crowded mall. It was found later in a trash can, but my wallet was missing. I had only $4 or $5 in it — but what I really would like to have is your tips on how to get along with your daughter-in-law.

Could you please run it again?
HELEN G., PROVO, UTAH
DEAR HELEN: With pleasure, here it is:

1. When you telephone your son at his home and his wife answers the phone, do not say, "Is John there?" Spend a few minutes asking how she is — and what's new. And if they live out of town, when you write a letter, always address it to both your son and his wife.

If your son was previously married, don't bring up his past marriage. And if he's had girlfriends in the past, don't mention them either. If your daughter-in-law has been previously married and has children by that marriage, accept these grandchildren as your own. Don't play favorites.

3. Never offer advice unless it's asked for. Never criticize your daughter-in-law's cooking, housekeeping, children, friends or new hairdo. And don't try to rearrange her furniture.

4. Do display pictures that include her and her children. Every time she looks at them, it will make her feel wonderful.

5. Never say, "John looks this" or "pale" or "tired." His wife will take it as a personal insult.

ADVICE

6. If your daughter-in-law has given you a gift, be sure to display it or wear it (at least once) regardless of how much you dislike it.

7. Never repeat family gossip. And try not to listen to any.

8. Never allow your son — or his wife — in the heat of anger to tell you something unkind about the other. They will eventually kiss and make up, and you will be left holding the dirty laundry.

9. If they are childless, don't harp on how much you'd like to have grandchildren. Some couples are not ready; some couples may have been trying for a long time without success; and some couples do not want children — which is strictly their business.

10. One cardinal rule: Regardless of how close you live to each other, never drop in without calling first. (A telephone call from the corner drugstore is all it takes.)

11. If perchance she has said something to hurt your feelings, don't let it fester; take it up with her — don't complain to your son.

12. Do not monopolize the holidays. Remember, your daughter-in-law has parents, siblings and friends she may want to spend time with on holidays. Some couples may prefer spending an occasional holiday by themselves.

13. Let your son go. Recognize him for the adult he is; stop calling him Sonny, Junior, Skinny, or any other juvenile nickname he has long outgrown.

14. If you have other daughters-in-law — or daughters of your own — treat them equally.

Tomorrow, in the interest of fair play, I will publish some tips on how to get along with your mother-in-law.

DEAR ABBY: What? I must need glasses! I swear I must have been hallucinating when I read the letter from "Single in Long Beach."

Well, I, too, am single — in Florida — and this man must be a saint! I've never heard any man say, "I'll come early and polish silverware, stay late until all the cleanup is done ..."

Abby, how about having him come to my house and help me throw away the plastic "silverware" and paper plates? He won't have to worry about the pots and pans, because everyone will be too busy raving about the delicious dessert he brought.

I have two daughters who would look at this man with stars in their eyes and wonder how a man like this came out of extinction.

Railroad blues

Commuters lament Amtrak cuts

By Associated Press

There are commuters on Amtrak's trains. There are sightseers, and people going to visit relatives. And then there are the Mothers Gone Bad.

This boisterous group of women from Grand Rapids, Mich., leave their husbands and children behind each year for a weekend trip to Chicago. The train is an important part of their ritual, now in its seventh year.

They board Friday morning in Grand Rapids and take over one end of a car, turning seats around so they can sit face to face (a difficult procedure that Amtrak frowns on; it involves prying an unmarked lever and wrestling the heavy two-seat assembly around on its axle), and spreading a huge buffet of muffins, pastries, juice and other delicacies across an empty seat.

"We prefer the train," says Mary Oleniczak, a part-time nurse.

"We can visit," chimes in Bridget Chulski, a bank worker.

"And we don't have to drive in the weather," adds Mary Jones, a teacher.

"We love the train part of it," Chulski repeats.

"We would hate to drive," says Barb Gengle, another nurse.

Next year, they may have to: the Chicago-Grand Rapids line is also on Amtrak's hit list.

"After you ride with us today, you will not want to cancel the Grand Rapids-to-Chicago train," Chulski tells conductor Michael Bennett.

He replies: "Afraid not. It's gone."

The trip takes nearly four hours, slower than driving the 177 miles. The women — all friends from church — drove to Chicago for their first joint trip eight years ago, then realized how much more fun it would be to train it.

If the route is canceled, the women say they probably would drive the 50 miles from Grand Rapids to Kalamazoo, the nearest place that will still have train service.

That's not an option for all passengers. A woman with multiple sclerosis who gave her name only as Mary says the train's April 1 end could cut off her only contact with her daughter and infant grandchildren in Chicago.

"MS keeps me from driving," Mary says. "Money problems keep me from flying."

In the past, when Amtrak cut trains from its system, it sometimes replaced them with buses. Now, even the buses are being cut.

One is a bus linking St. Louis and Carbondale, Ill., destined for elimination April 1. Amtrak once ran a train along this 100-mile route, allowing passengers an uninterrupted ride between New Orleans, St. Louis and Kansas City.

Now, you get off the train they call the City of New Orleans — the one about which Arlo Guthrie once sang, "This train's got the disappearing railroad blues" — at 3:10 a.m. in Carbondale to catch the bus.

Despite the early hour, seven people are riding the bus, for the same reasons people take Amtrak in general: fear of flying, cheaper fares, the desire to smoke en route. But if ever an Amtrak service seemed unnecessary, this is it.

"You only have about 10 passengers a night each way," says the bus driver, who identified himself only as Woody.

Lawrence Low and Maura Bonnarens, returning to St. Louis from a vacation in New Orleans, say the through ticket on the bus cost only $2 more than the rail fare from Carbondale to New Orleans.

But if the bus didn't exist, Amtrak might not have earned any money from them. "If there was a cheap airfare and no bus, we'd probably have flown," Low says.

Low, a graduate student at Washington University who takes long train rides for the uninterrupted studying time, talked Bonnarens into joining him for her first long-distance train ride.

Her reaction: "I'd like to do more. I think it's a great way to unwind, relax and not be rushed."

Many first-time passengers have similar thoughts about the train. They love it. And they wonder why it isn't advertised more widely.

"A lot of people don't know we exist," says Perez, the conductor in Missouri. "The only advertising we've got is a couple of billboards on I-70 that say, 'Take the train.' But they don't say when it goes or how much it costs."

Amtrak officials don't argue with that. "They're absolutely right. We should advertise more," says Sue Martin, senior director of public affairs at the railroad's headquarters in Washington. She says the small advertising budget is yet another symptom of Amtrak's money woes.

The cuts themselves have led to more publicity about the trains and efforts to save them.

A special Missouri Legislature committee is holding hearings, and towns in western Michigan have formed a task force and launched a letter-writing campaign.

Martin says Amtrak is interested in talking to states. She cited an agreement with Wisconsin to keep some Chicago-Milwaukee trains running that involves higher fares, more state funding and advice from the state on when best to schedule them. Vermont also recently agreed to pay Amtrak $581,000 to keep its daily train service, and Alabama Gov. Fob James has offered to release $1.3 million in state funds, though what service is retained beyond April 1, and for how long, remains to be negotiated.

But sitting in the half-empty station in St. Louis — a small prefabricated building hidden underneath a highway overpass — former railroad worker Glenn G. Brown of Kansas City says he is none too hopeful that his three-yearly rail expeditions could continue.

"If they don't have the passenger load, they can't keep losing money on it," Brown says. "That's the sad part. People just don't ride the train."

Budget cuts will leave 5,500 Amtrak workers without jobs

By Associated Press

MOBILE, Ala. — Amtrak's budget cuts will leave 5,500 Amtrak workers without jobs. Thousands of others will also feel the pain.

Having enough seniority to keep your job doesn't mean much when the nearest office is suddenly hundreds of miles away.

"We're just hoping we won't be sent back to Siberia," said Sheryl Thompson, one of four ticket agents at the Mobile station. If the Gulf Breeze is discontinued April 1, only two slots will remain there.

Thompson and her colleague Glendolyn Mudd said that may mean transferring back to Chicago, after 2 1/2 years in the warm South.

"She doesn't want to go back to Chicago. She doesn't want to go back to the cold," Thompson said as Mudd grimaced. "If we have to, we'll go back to Chicago, but we don't want to leave."

Many conductors hired from freight railroads have a different choice: drive for hours to stay with Amtrak or return to freight trains.

Amtrak changes

CHANGES EFFECTIVE APRIL 1:

ALL SERVICE ON THESE ROUTES ELIMINATED:

— Birmingham-Mobile, Ala. (the Gulf Breeze; Amtrak and the state are negotiating over a possible extension of this route using state money).

— Chicago-Grand Rapids, Mich. (the Pere Marquette).

— St. Albans, Vt.-Montreal (Amtrak originally planned to cut the entire Montreal route from New York to Montreal via Vermont, but agreed to retain service from Vermont south in return for more money from the state. Amtrak will still serve Montreal via Albany, N.Y.)

— Atlantic City, N.J.-Philadelphia (three daily round trips, plus additional weekend service, some operating beyond Philadelphia to other Eastern points; portions of some routes beyond Philadelphia will continue.)

— Detroit-Pontiac, Mich. and Detroit-Toledo, Ohio (service formerly provided as extensions of daily Chicago-Detroit trains; Chicago-Detroit service will remain).

FREQUENCY REDUCTIONS:

— Chicago-Milwaukee: From eight daily round trips to five.

— St. Louis-Kansas City, Mo.: From two daily round trips to one; Amtrak originally planned to cut both, but reached a deal with Missouri to retain one at least through June.

— Roseville-Sacramento-San Jose, Calif.: From five daily round trips to two.

— Philadelphia-Harrisburg, Pa.: From eight weekday round trips to three.

— Washington-Boston: Minor service reductions, details not yet announced.

— New York-Albany-Niagara Falls, N.Y.: Three round trips a week between Albany and Niagara Falls eliminated, leaving two round trips a day plus an additional weekend train; also one daily New York-Albany round trip eliminated.

BUSES ELIMINATED:

— St. Louis-Carbondale, Ill., connecting between Kansas City-St. Louis and Carbondale-New Orleans trains (replaced former rail service along this route).

— Fort Wayne-Garrett-Waterloo, Ind., connecting with Chicago-New York and Chicago-Washington trains (bus run created when freight railroad abandonments forced Amtrak to move out of Fort Wayne).

Is brain aneurysm a risk to family?

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My sister had a ruptured brain aneurysm recently. Is it likely she could have another one, or that I'm at risk as a family member?

DEAR READER: Aneurysms (weakened portions of arterial walls) can occur anywhere in the body, most commonly in the abdomen and the brain. As time passes, an aneurysm usually enlarges. Eventually, blood may leak through the thinned wall of the blood vessel -- or the aneurysm may rupture. When this occurs in the brain, it causes a hemorrhagic stroke that may be serious and lead to profound disability, even death.

No one knows why some people develop aneurysms and others do not. The tendency is not inherited. However, uncontrolled high blood pressure is often associated with aneurysms. If a hypertensive patient suffers a hemorrhagic stroke, doctors must aggressively treat the hypertension with drugs to avoid a similar episode in the future.

Also, some people appear to have a tendency to form aneurysms; this places them at added risk.

Once a cerebral aneurysm has ruptured, doctors frequently perform certain tests -- such as MRA scanning -- to see if other aneurysms are present. If your sister had such testing, she would know if she is at risk for another stroke. Otherwise, a repeat hemorrhage is impossible to predict.

I do not believe that you and other family members are necessarily at risk.

The important consideration is that your sister have physical therapy (to help return her to normal) and treatment for any predisposing condition, such as the hypertension I mentioned.

DEAR DR. GOTT: As a child, I developed pityriasis rosea and now, in my 30s, have been diagnosed with it again. My doctor offers no treatment and tells me it will just pass -- even though I've had it for many years. Please describe this disorder and tell me why nothing can help aside from moisturizing lotion to relieve the itching.

DEAR READER: Pityriasis rosea is a harmless, common and mild skin disorder, marked by the appearance of scaly blotches that may itch. The condition needs no treatment and ordinarily vanishes within two months. The cause is unknown and recurrences are rare. A chronic skin disorder, such as the one you describe, may not be pityriasis. Other treatable skin diseases (notably tinea and psoriasis) must be considered. Therefore, I suggest that you request a referral to a dermatologist, who can diagnose your problem after an examination and blood tests. A biopsy may be necessary.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
In several bridge books the author has imitated the style of another, more famous, writer, like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. However, in an excellent new book, Englishmen Phillip and Robert King copy the styles both of bridge writers, like Terence Reese, and of famous authors, like Raymond Chandler. "The Kings' Tales," published by Bantam, may be purchased for $19.50 from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124.

I turned immediately to the chapter entitled Grand Master Jeeves. The style of P.G. Wodehouse is reproduced almost perfectly. (I am a stern critic.) And the deal used in this chapter is especially instructive. West led a low heart against three no-trump. Here, the first step -- missed by Bertie Wooster of course -- is to rise with dummy's heart king. When it wins, the natural reaction is to cash dummy's diamond ace, planning to play a diamond to the jack. However, as Jeeves points out, if West holds a singleton diamond queen, East must win a diamond trick, and the fatal heart return through South's unprotected queen inexorably follows.

A small piece of insurance must be purchased. At trick two, declarer crosses to hand in a black suit. Then he leads a low diamond toward the dummy. If West plays a low diamond, the plan of increasing the diamond jack is put into effect. But when West plays the diamond queen, he is permitted to win the trick. The heart queen is safe from attack and at least 10 tricks are won.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Ouel
YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 6, 1995

Your chart indicates that you might resurrect an old enterprise in the year ahead. Although it was never developed to its full potential before, this time you'll have the know-how to bring it to fruition.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Gage situations realistically today so that the objectives you set for yourself are doable. Conditions might not be as amenable as they initially appear. Places, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4485, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you need help in a career matter today, go to an old standby instead of to a contact you recently met. New people might make hollow promises.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Conduct your financial transactions prudently today. Do not loan money to anyone without getting some collateral, even if you know the person quite well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Let your past experiences guide you today instead of following the advice of someone who never had a similar problem. The solutions could be in your memory bank.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you hope to be productive today, it is essential to get a running start. You mustn't waste valuable time chit-chatting over a third cup of coffee.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In group involvements today, be one of the crowd instead of trying to run the show. You will provoke a negative response if you attempt to force your will on others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Failing to focus all your efforts on an ambitious objective today could lead to only partial success. Do not toy with half measures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

Treating a situation that your friend takes very seriously with indifference could cause your pal to question your sincerity. Avoid making cute comments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Remain watchful in a joint venture with someone who has similar interests. The financial burdens, as well as the rewards, should be distributed equally.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Think carefully before dispensing unsolicited advice today. Although your intention may be good, your suggestions could do more harm than good.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Major achievements are possible today, provided you do things methodically. Complete each move before advancing to the next.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) To deal effectively with others today, get to the point quickly and be specific about your intentions. Avoid small talk.
