You've seen those forlorn dogs foraging for food after they've been discarded by unwanting adults. You've probably had a tinge of conscience about them, too. Now, Sanfordites plan to do something about it. They'll meet Saturday morning at 10 at Rose and Wilks Restaurant to map the initial step in forming a humane society. Top officials of the Florida Federation of Humane Societies will be on hand to give a hand. All interested in this venture are asked to drop in for a minute or two so the group can begin the project.

GOP Sets Quota System In All 50 States

WARRINGTON (UPI) Republicas campaign strategists in the 50 states began a grass roots search today for voters to meet quotes set under a novel program designed to put Sen. Barry M. Goldweter in the White House.

State GOP chairmen were gives their state quotes and a county-by-county breakdown at a meeting here Saturday. Precinct quotes are now in preparation and about onethird complete.

Treasury Chief Testifies On Demo Platform

WASHINGTON (UPI) Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon, a Republican, told Democratic platform writers today that Johnson administration politices have generated record peacetime prosperity and hold the promise of future tax cuts.

Dillon, a top State Department official in the Eisenhower administration, was the second Johnson cabinet member of GOP persussion to endorse Democratic policies and hit at the philosophy of Republican presidential nomince Barry M. Goldwater.

At the opening platform hearing Monday, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, a onetime registered Republican, said the Democrats should disavow Goldwater's suggestion that the President's control over use of tactical nuclear weapons should he turned over to the NATO subreme commander.

Persistent Man Triumphs

Estes Kefauver, the gangling, coonskin-cap-affecting senator from Tennessee, died a little over a year

As a form of memorial to him, a book called "The Real Voice" has been published, telling of Kefauver's fight for S. 1552, the Senate bill that eventually became the Drug Amendment Act of 1962.

It was one of the longest, costliest and fiercest legislative battles in recent history.

The title of the book is taken from a statement by Woodrow Wilson: "Things get very lonely in Washington sometimes. The real voice of the great people of America some-times sounds faint and distant in that strange city."

The book, written by Richard Harris, contains two other quotations worth repeating. One is by political scientist Daniel M. Berman:

"The procedures follow the introduction of a bill and its reference to committee are so formidable that they might well have been devised by men who hated the thought that legislation would ever be enacted." Seldom has this been better exemplified than in the investigations of the pricing, manufacturing, testing, selling, advertising and licensing methods of the drug industry and, in Kefauver's words, "the ins and outs, the ups and downs and the dirty dealings" involved in getting a bill through Congress.

The significant thing, however, is not that legislators are less honest. less dedicated, more self-seeking than ordinary men. They are not, It is that they can occasionally rise above the enormous pressures that beat upon them from every side (there are 10 lobbyists in Washington for every congressman) and actually serve the public welfare.

In the end, it was the thalidomide tragedy-which the United States escaped because of the stubbornness of Dr. Frances O. Kelsey of the Food and Drug Administration in refusing to O.K. the drug—that aroused "the real voice" and provided the impetus to push the bill into law.

History does repeat itself. It had taken another drug tragedy in 1937, in which 107 people died, to inspire the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act of 1988. Before that, the government had no control at all over drug safe-

Although the public today is better protected against experimental drugs, Kefauver failed in his primary aim - to institute freeenterprise measures that would have resulted in lowered drug prices, some of which he asserted were inflated 1,-000 per cent or more above cost. It was the sacrifice that had to be made to get any sort of bill passed.

The drug manufacturers' explanation-then and now-for their prices is that profits must be sufficient to finance necessary research. An executive of a small drug company testified at the Kefauver hearings, however, that the government spends almost as much as the drug industry on such research and that private foundations, universities, charitable organizations and individuals contribute more to drug and medical research than either the drug industry or the government.

The Salk polio vaccine, for in, stance, was paid for largely by publie donations (though only five drug companies shared the profits of its manufacture).

The other quotation from 'The Real Voice" is a statement made on the floor of the Senate by Thomas Dodd of Connecticut, after the final roll call and after everyone-including many who had opposed the bill all along-had made their little speeches of self-congratulation. Said

"I have an idea that the senator from Tennessee will be remembered long after all of us in this chamber at this hour are gone."

Dear By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A very advanced 12-year-old neighbor girl has been telling my 8year-old son about the birds and the bees. I don't know quite how to handle this because the girl's mother and I are very good friends. It has been handy to ask this girl to look after my son for a few hours after school, or on Saturday afternoons, but lately every time she has been with him he seems to have learned something new on the sublect. Our boy never had any curiosity at all about things like that until this girl put those ideas in his head, lathere a tactful way to put a stop to it?

DEAR UPSET: How, and from whom, a child learns about the birds and bees has a significant bearing on his later sex attitudes, so don't treat this lightly, Have the girl's mother tell her daughter that the "facts of life" are for "older" children (say about 12) and since younger boys and girls (say around 8) might not understand, their questions should be referred to their parents.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who has been on a diet for as long as I have are dining out, she won't think of ordering anything fattening; but just let someone else order it and, the moment it comes, she'll plunge her fork into his food, or sink her spoon into his dessert.

The spokesman said 10 gevernment Skyraiders, four piloted by U. S. Air Force officers, left the Viet Cong installation "in blazing ruins." The raid was directed against the reputed headquarters of the Viet Cong's infamous Mekong River battalion, It is located 77 miles south of Salgon near the mouth of Co Chien River.

Vietnamese military sources said the raid "devastated" a guerrilla supply depot. The base was said to be the headquarters for all Viet Cong activity in the populous Vinh Binh and Kein Hoa provinces.

Reports of the successful government raid followed a three-slay battle around Hon My in which, according to U. S. military advisors, an estimated 280 guerrillas were killed by government troops.
