Kills Woman On SR-46

A nine-vehicle accident on fog-shrouded SR-46 between I-4 and the Wekiva River west of Sanford this morning killed one driver and caused more than $100,000 in property damage. The name of the victim was withheld pending notification of her next of kin. She died in Seminole Memorial Hospital where she and a Ft. Lauderdale driver of one of the trucks were taken after the 7:30 a.m. smashup in a fog pocket on SR-46 at Lake Markham Road. State Trooper P. C. Wright and other officers remained at the scene until about 11 a.m. trying to

SR-46 was closed to traffic for three hours as firemen and emergency workers freed two pinned drivers and the wreckage of three tractor-trailers, two pickup trucks and an auto was cleared.

U.S., Vietnam Talks

Will Focus On Economics

WASHINGTON (AP) - New talks between the United States and Vietnam will focus at first on establishing an economic relationship probably starting with an end to the American trade embargo. State Department officials

President Carter announced Wednesday that a U.S. delegation will resume talks with Vietnamese officials in Paris in an effort to establish friendly and normal relations between the two nations.

In making the anouncement, Carter cited success by the commission sent to Vietnam to look into Americans still listed as missing in action. He said the talks also were being resumed at Hanoi's request

"There are no preconditions requested and there will certainly be no preconditions on our part," the President said of the new talks.

Knowles Hits County On Annexation Protest

Sanford City Manager W. E. Knowles today described the Seminole County Commissioners' opposition to the city's plan to annex two acres of property on Lake Mary Blvd. near Lake Minnie as a situation where "they're protesting something without letting anybody know what they're protesting."

The county decided to protest the annexation without ever contacting city officials to duscuss the situation, Knowles said. Second reading of the annexation ordinance will take place at Monday night's Sanford City Commission meeting, which will be attended by County Attorney Joe H. Mount to discuss the issue. Knowles said Paul Smith, who lives on the property, petitioned the city for annexation in February. "He wants city water service, city protection and city amenities," Knowles said.

Knowles disagreed with the county's position that state law prohibits the annexation because it is not contiguous to city limits. The property abuts Lake Minnie, which does not abut city limits, Knowles said, and state law allows annexation of property "across a body of water that touches city limits." Knowles said he discussed the annexation question Wednesday with Herb Hardin, the county's land development ad-

County Public Works Director Jack Schuder said by the end of the five-year period, the state of the art of solid waste disposal with resource recovery may be to the point where a direction to go in resource recovery is evident. He said he doesn't think government, state and federal, will allow landfills as known today to operate beyond five years. Lake Mary City Councilman Cliff Nelson urged that the county

Mrs. Ward asked the board to initiate the program beginning with the 1977-78 school year, at a cost of $104,340. next to excessive government regulations, is the tremendous amount of paperwork required to comply with those regulations. The paperwork burden on business, the public and the government itself is currently estimated at $40 billion a year.

In October, 1975, Congress established the Commission on Federal Paperwork to study the problems and make recommendations, giving it a life of two years. Inevitably, the commission began generating new paperwork of its own, but it has also scored some notable achievements in stemming the paperwork tide. According to a status report by the United States, the commission has taken more than 300

antipaperwork actions, including: Elimination of approximately 50 million separate forms confirming government contractor adherence to equal employment regulations;

- Assisting the Department of Health Education and Welfare in developing a single application form for 41 federal and state welfare and income security programs, with a potential savings of $6 billion yearly.

One of the commission's legislative recommendations, which Congress has enacted, requires detailed wage reporting annually instead of quarterly for Social Security purposes, saving employers more than $250 million a year. The commission has also set up an ombudsman's office to receive complaints from the public. In one case, a small mushroom grower in California was frustrated by duplicative information requests from the International Trade Commission and the Department of Labor. He estimated that compliance with these requests would cost him at least 90 hours of an accountant's

The ombudsman contacted the two agencies, examined the forms and recommended that only one agency collect the information and share it

When he was in the White House, President Ford also gave a firm push to paperwork reform. A 12.5 per cent reduction in the number of executive branch forms was achieved by July 1976, with an additional five per cent reduction ordered by September 1977 and a further 15 per cent by Sep-

The Internal Revenue Service has cut but 724 forms, a reduction of 31 per cent. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms cut 25 per cent of its report forms and the Civil Aeronautics Board eliminated 26 per cent of its forms.

Unfortunately, while all this progress was being made, inore was added to the federal paperwork flood by recent legislation.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development Uniform Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) and the Department of Labor Employe Retirement Income Security act (ERISA) alone have added over 6.4 million hours to the paper work reporting chore.

Jackson had sued for breach of contract, claiming he was promised two things by a recruiter: he would get mechanic's raining; he would not be assigned to dangerous duty. The Army says there was no such promise, at least not in writing. And even if there had been, the recruiter had no authority to make it and therefore it's not binding. In May 1974, four months after he enlisted, Jackson took part in maneuvers at Ft. Riley, Kan. A tank ran over him. The lower half of his body, navel on down, had to be amputated. Jackson's lawyers could not sue for negligence; the Supreme

HILL REACTION,

Veiled Yemeni Women Find New Lifestyles

TAIZ, North Yemen (AP) — Although a few women have for-saken the veil, many Yemeni women are happy wearing it and being at the bottom of the totem pole. In fact, most girls can't wait until they're old enough to cover up like their mothers and become, in public at least, faceless, nameless, black-draped phantoms ignored by everyone. There are exceptions, but most women still adhere to the Islamic tradition which commands them to be completely covered before all men except their fathers, husbands and

In Yemen this covering consists of a mask hiding the mouth and chin, a scarf over the hair, and two black faceveils that drop down over the eyes. A black cloak over the upper body, and a black skirt and black trousers underneath complete the concealment. Despite the drudgery of their cloistered life, many women are happy and have a keen sense of humor. Their get-togethers consist of squatting on rugs around the living room wall and chewing qat, a green leaf that is a mild amphetamine.

Yemini men are among the most friendly and gregarious in the world. But the Islam-based culture in this Arab land, encrusted with centuries of tradition, is to Western eyes as alien as Mars. When it comes to women and what goes on in the home, it is impenetrable to outsiders.

But a number of American girls, volunteers in the Peace Corps. have gotten a rare inside view of the daily chores, recreation and discrimination against the average woman here. Two of the volunteers, who speak Arabic, have lived with Yemeni families or have developed friendships deep enough to get through the cultural barrier, winning them a privileged look inside the Yemeni home, which is the perimeter of a woman's life. Sue Jones, of Kansas City, Kan., is a 27-year-old university graduate who spent a year teaching English in Ibb, a market town 30 miles north of here. "Some of the women complain about the veil, to me at least, and say they want to go to America," Miss Jones said. "But a lot of them are happy with it and don't want to stop having one baby after another. They are content with their place in life at the bottom of the totem pole.

"Most kids can't wait until they're old enough to wear veils all the time like their mothers," she added. "Usually, by the time they are 12 or 14, they put them on and think it's a great thing. But one woman I know who remembers how thrilled she was when seh became old enough to cover up said that later on in life it wasn't such a great thing after all."

A woman's day is devoted to going to market, taking care of the kids and, when there is time, visiting friends. In rural areas, where most of Yemen's 2.5 million girls and women live, they work in the fields as well.

The government is tentatively encouraging some girls to work in civil service jobs, or as teachers. This is still a new proposition and it leads to some ambivalent situations.

At the Ministry of Information, for instance, the tionists at the door are girls. They wear veils, and sometimes throw back the layers so that their eyes show. But they crouch on the floor out of sight behind a partition and don't speak unless directly addressed. In that case, they push the veil back down
