Midgetman test goes awry

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — The Air Force said the maiden flight test of the controversial Midgetman missile was a partial success, even though the weapon went out of control and had to be blown up just two minutes after launch.

The 37,000-pound, 53-foot intercontinental ballistic missile tumbled out of control 70 seconds after being launched at 11 a.m. Thursday. The malfunction occurred after the second stage engines had been fired.

France conducts nuclear test

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — France detonated a nuclear device Friday at Mururoa atoll, marking a resumption of tests on the French Polynesian islands, New Zealand scientists said.

Franco-Wilde minister for disarmament said the test occurred at 4:15 a.m. some 3,500 miles northeast of Wellington in the south Pacific and had an estimated yield of 15 kilotons. One kiloton represents the explosive force of 1,000 tons of TNT.

SANFORD — "How about a little enthusiasm?" displeased city recreation task force member Sid Lloyd asked of recreation department Director Jim Jerigan yesterday.

"There's apathy in our recreation department. We sat here and listened to it today," member Bobby Lundquist said during the recreation task force's weekly meeting.

Lundquist said Jerigan has a "defeatist attitude" about improving the quality of city recreation programming.

The recreation department competes with police and fire departments for money from a small tax base, Jerigan told the task force. The recreation department offers the highest quality possible with its limited funding and manpower, he said.

The concern about staff enthusiasm came up at a task force meeting two weeks ago when the group released an informal survey of Sanford residents. In the survey, 50 percent of the 137 respondents ranked the recreation department staff enthusiasm as average or below.

Lundquist said the department isn't using volunteers and commercial sponsorship to better recreation programs.

City baseball leagues and other programs are coached and sponsored by volunteers.

"Utilize Tim Rames, utilize Wes Rinker, utilize the Seminole High School staff," Lundquist said. "If you keep making excuses for why the community won't support a better quality

County will consider CAB spending plan

$1.2 million CDBG grant may be spent on low-income areas

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Approval of a nearly $1.2 million Seminole County Spending package for low-income neighborhoods will be considered by county commissioners June 13.

The package, which includes $188,000 for the on-going drainage improvements in Midway, also includes a drinking water system for the residents of Johnson Hill in southeast Seminole County.

The $1.2 million is Seminole County's share of federal community development block grant (CDBG) dollars. Last year, the county received nearly $1.6 million, but Sanford and Winter Springs have since dropped out of the program, reducing the amount the county can receive.

The county CDBG Community Advisory Board (CAB) recommended the projects. The board is comprised of residents from each of the 11 low-income "target areas" in the county. County commissioners determine the final spending formula, however.

The $188,000 to improve a drainage ditch along Lincoln Avenue is part of a $6 million drainage system under design and construction in Midway. A total of $600,000 has been allocated to the project from CDBG funds during the last three years, although no actual construction has begun. Part of the problem has been a tangle in acquiring easement along Washington Avenue for a canal.

Completion of the Washington Avenue work is expected later this year.

Also recommended for funding is a $175,000 water system in Johnson Hill near Oviedo. Residents there have complained about the foul smelling water that stains their laundry and their bathroom fixtures, said Buddy Wallace, county CDBG senior planner.

Johnson Hill residents have already received about $180,000 during two previous years for paving and drainage improvements in the neighborhood.

Other projects under consideration, which are all for paving and drainage of streets, include:

- $135,000 to complete Alexander and McCarthy Avenues in Lochart's Subdivision near Sanford.
- $210,000 for Morse Avenue in Winwood near Altamonte Springs.
- $127,500 for Roseberry Lane in Roseland Park near Sanford.

SHS prom set for Daytona

SANFORD — Seminole High School juniors and seniors will be dressing in their finest clothing and heading out to Daytona Beach for the 1988 prom tomorrow evening.

"Make it last forever," is the theme of the event to be at the Daytona Beach Marriott. According to junior class sponsor Jane Cooper, the prom, a "gift" from the junior class to the senior class, will show the older students how much they will be missed and how important their friendship will be.

Despite the long distance students will travel, the school will not provide any transportation to the prom.

Sanford chamber facing $28,000 budget shortage

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The treasurer of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, this week reported the group is $28,000 short of the money budgeted for the remainder of the year due to a shrinking membership.

Treasurer Jim Young told the chamber board of directors Tuesday the annual membership drive in February failed to net enough membership dues to pay the bills for projects budgeted for the remaining months in 1988.

The chamber has 947 members, Young said, down from "typically over a thousand."

Days later, chamber executive director called the shortfall a growing pain.

Fair said yesterday he had joined chamber directors and members in their unanimous response to Young's report by beginning a maximum effort to get membership back up around 1,000.

Members of the group have been making phone calls and knocking on doors to solicit members since Tuesday morning, Fair said.

Fair acknowledged that a few directors had asked for his resignation after Young's announcement Tuesday. He has served as executive director for three years.

Senate OKs budget plan of $22.8 billion

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — The Senate, struggling to meet state and local needs within Gov. Bob Martinez' demand for a no-new-taxes budget, on Thursday approved a $22.8 billion spending plan after bagging over more than 200 amendments.

Approval of the proposed budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 paves the way for conference negotiations with the House, which approved a $22.7 billion budget last week.

The slew of amendments included a proposal to ban state agencies from spending tax money on products from Exxon or any of its subsidiaries, as punishment for the Exxon Valdez disaster.

The Senate was also expected to take up an $8-million amendment to begin a major restoration project for the Kissimmee River in central Florida.

Other amendments represented attempts by senators to fund local projects, including a list of arts and historic preservation efforts deleted by the Appropriations committee.

An amendment by Rules Chairman Jim Scott R-Orlando would have authorized a study of whether a 10th state university should be built in Broward County. Supporters said the county would well served by existing universities in nearby Dade and Palm Beach counties.

"Frankly, we're tired of being treated as step-children within the state university system," said Sen. Peter Weinstein D-Orlando Springs.

Opponents were reluctant to approve such a costly measure, but the amendment was approved by a 10-7 vote.

The Senate budget cuts $100 million in existing programs, but like the House plan, it leaves Martinez' plan to see it through state agencies by ignoring inflation and workload increases.

See Budget, Page 5A

BUDGET HIGHLIGHTS

• Senate approved a $22.8 billion budget. Last week, the House gave its stamp of approval to a $22.7 billion budget. The Senate approval paves the way for conference negotiations between the two legislative bodies to iron out a final budget for the fiscal year which begins July 1.

• The Senate budget cuts $100 million in existing programs.

• Both budgets would grant pay raises to state workers, despite Governor Martinez' call for such raises except in "critical" areas such as law enforcement and health care.

• The Senate budget assumes revenues will be available from a number of new fees, including a salt water fishing fee, a $25 registration fee for new resident motorists, a 15-percent tuition increase at state universities, and small license fee increases for professionals, beverage dealers and lottery dealers. None of those fee hikes are in the House budget, although House members are considering increased cigarette and beer taxes.

• Both chambers were reluctant to give Martinez authority to raise $500 million in transportation right-of-way bonds approved by the voters last November. House leaders left the money out of their budget because they opposed Martinez' plan to divert $87 million for construction. The plan in the Senate was to hold up the bond sale at least until later this year, when a special session on the Department of Transportation's financial problems could be held.

Three held hostage at VA office

ST. PETERSBURG — A 42-year-old veteran held three people hostage at knifepoint inside the downtown regional office of the Veterans' Administration for about 2 1/2 hours Thursday before he was taken into custody by police.

Police spokesman Ross Gordon said none of the hostages was injured. Joseph Rainey was hustled kicking and shouting out of the federal building and into a police car shortly before 11 a.m. and was taken to the Pinellas County jail.

Gordon said Rainey, who was described a "a client" of the VA, entered the first floor office about 8:20 a.m. and put a knife to the throat of an employee. Rainey made a series of demands, including one for a helicopter to fly him out of the country. "We don't know yet what his motive was," Gordon said.

Bomb rocks North Miami Beach school

NORTH MIAMI BEACH — A bomb destroyed the car of a computer teacher Thursday morning in the parking garage of a North Miami Beach trade school, an FBI official said.

The bomb exploded at about 9:45 a.m. under a 1988 red Nissan that belonged to Oscar Solorzano, 29, a computer teacher at the National School of Technology. North Miami Beach police had called the Metro-Dade County bomb squad when the bomb was discovered, but the bomb blew up before they arrived, a Metro official said. Police evacuated the building shortly after the explosion.

No one was injured. FBI spokesman Paul Miller said the car was "pretty well destroyed" and two other cars were damaged. Parking garage walls were scorched from the bomb fire at the school.

Solorzano, originally from El Salvador, has lived in the U.S. for about 10 years. He was described by fellow teachers and students as well-liked.

Citrus Mutual directors elected

LAKELAND, Fla. — Members of Florida Citrus Mutual, the state's largest cooperative of citrus growers, elected three new members to the board of directors Thursday, re-electing 18 others for the 1989-90 season.

The directors, elected at a series of area meetings around the citrus belt, will be seated for one-year terms at the annual meeting June 14.

Mutual Executive Vice President Bobby F. McKown identified the three new directors as W.A. "Bud" Boyer of Wetsdale, R.E. Battaglia of Winter Garden, and Charles E. Townsend of Immokalee.

Retiring from the board are R. Roland Farring of Wetsdale, Jerry Chicone Jr. of Orlando, and Wayne Jackson of LaBelle.

House debates changing session dates

TALLAHASSEE — House members on Thursday debated a proposal to have each year's legislative session begin in February, two months earlier than the current first Tuesday in April kick-off.

Critics of the move said it would not leave lawmakers enough time to prepare for election-year sessions. In election years, new House speakers and Senate presidents are not officially sworn in — and committee assignments are not made — until a late-November organizational session.

But backers of the bill, including two of the House's most influential members, said legislators could and should keep up with the proposed new schedule.

"We are the only state in the nation that meets this late," said House Minority Leader Dale Patchett, R-Vero Beach.

"If every other state can get itself together between a November election and a February session, why can't Florida? Are we totally incompetent?"

Patchett and Appropriations Committee chairman T.K. Wetherell, D-Daytona Beach, said the move would make it much easier for local governments, school boards and state agencies to set their annual budgets. Currently, those entities have to do much of their fiscal planning before they know exactly how much money they will have to spend.

Conservative wraps up speaker's race

TALLAHASSEE — A conservative Panhandle legislator teamed up with a Miami liberal Thursday to win the House speaker's office for the 1992-93 term.

The backing of Dade and Broward County House members was the key for Rep. Booley Johnson, D-Milton, in wrapping up the speakership. Johnson said he had pledges of "more than 60" House Democrats, but declined to reveal a complete tally.

Rep. Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, conceded defeat and threw his support to Johnson. Wallace said he had been hoping for some Southeast Florida support, but dropped his challenge when the Dade and Broward lawmakers committed to Johnson.

DOT cutbacks threaten 20,000 jobs

Layoffs could cost $422.7 million, affect 20,000 in related industries

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — The Department of Transportation's planned road construction cutbacks threaten the jobs of an estimated 20,000 construction workers and equal job losses in related industries, it was reported Thursday.

The Tampa Tribune, citing labor and economic experts, said the total loss to Florida's economy could total $815 million per year.

"The consensus among my members is that there is going to be a severe economic recession in the construction industry," said Carroll Lance, director of the state Asphalt Contractors Association.

Road contractors and industry spokesman estimated 20,000 construction workers earning an average annual salary of $21,137 face layoffs, for total lost wages of $422.7 million.

Economists estimated the layoffs will mean loss of jobs for another 20,000 workers in construction-related businesses, earning an average annual salary of $18,765, or $392.8 million.

At least two minority-run companies have gone out of business and a half-dozen are cutting staffs, said Paul Curtis, president of Florida's Black Contractor Alliance.

Private engineering firms already are being hard hit by the severe cash crunch at the DOT. For example, the DOT is spending $129 million this year on private engineers. Next year, the agency plans to spend only $10 million.

"It's just a bloodbath," said Dennis Barton, a lobbyist for the Florida Engineering Society. "We're the first domino."

Because of poor financial management detailed in an outside audit, DOT has shelved $700 million in road construction projects. Only $180 million of DOT's $1.7 billion budget for next year is earmarked for new roads.

"Only a year ago or so, we were told to build up to meet a $40 billion unmet need. We geared up," said Bob Martin, president of the Florida Transportation Builders Association. "Now, contractors are laying people off. This will be devastating."

State government economists said they expected the damage to Florida's economy would be limited, however.

"It wouldn't even be enough to raise our unemployment rate," said Becky Rust of the Department of Labor and Employment Security. "It sounds like an awful lot, but it isn't significant to the state as a whole ... (But) it will be a tragedy to those families."

Eighth-grader shot in school hallway

United Press International

MIAMI — A 14-year-old eighth-grader was grazed by a bullet Thursday during a fight in the hallway of a public school. More than 71 children have been caught with guns in Dade County's schools, officials said.

Gregory Hall was grazed in the forehead during the altercation at Madison Middle School. He was treated and released from Hialeah Hospital later in the day.

The shooting prompted some parents to come and take their children out of the school.

"Too much trouble here," said one parent, who declined to be identified.

Hall's assailant, another 14-year-old eighth-grader identified only as Flip, was still at large early Thursday night.

Principal Thelma Davis said the suspect transferred to Madison a few weeks ago from a school where troublemakers are sent for a last chance to reform or be expelled.

Davis said the student had caused problems at Madison before, but would not elaborate. She did not know whether he and Hall had a prior confrontation before they bumped into each other and exchanged words in a crowded hallway.

About 300 of the school's 963 students were between classes at the time. There were no other injuries, Davis said.

Assistant Principal Delio Diaz heard the shot and said he thought someone had lit a firecracker until he saw blood running down Hall's face.

The shooting was the first in five years of a student shooting another on school grounds during school hours in Dade County, said James Fleming, associate superintendent of the county's public schools.

Cabinet votes to lower park fees to increase attendance

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez and the Cabinet Thursday voted to reduce camping and other fees at Florida's state parks. In part because recent increases in those fees have reduced park attendance.

Martinez and the Cabinet increased park fees last July to bring them in line with fees charged at private campgrounds and similar facilities. The move resulted in more money for the Department of Natural Resources, which manages the parks, but also had some unwanted side effects.

"The fees did increase our revenue, quite substantially, but our visitation was down," said DNR spokesman Randy Lewis. "Certainly the higher prices may have been one reason the visitation was down."

Lewis said a warmer than usual winter may have contributed to the unusually low attendance at the parks. But park officials also were peppered with complaints about the new fees, many of them from skin and scuba divers who found themselves being charged $10 a day for diving in springs in state parks.

The rules adopted Thursday, which will take effect July 1, will lower the diving fee to $5 a day. Florida residents will be able to pay $15 for an annual diving permit.

The new rules also allow commercial diving schools to pay a $100 annual fee to cover all spring dives by an instructor and up to 10 students. Currently, those schools must pay the $10 per-person-per-day fee.

Strong economy attracting new small businesses

United Press International

PENSACOLA — Florida's economy is expected to outpace that of the nation this year and despite record bankruptcy filings, new small businesses continue to crop up and expand, according to Small Business Development Center officials.

The SBDC has major offices at eight Florida universities and 13 satellite offices around the state. It provides management counseling and training to people starting up a small business, classified as one with no more than 10 employees, and to those seeking to expand an existing small business.

"Florida's economy outpaced the nation's economy in 1988 and will continue to do so in 1989," the SBDC said in its annual report issued this month. "Fueled by strong population growth, an estimated 150,000 new businesses started in Florida in 1988."

John Jeffries, associate state coordinator of the program, said it is estimated more than 85 percent of the new businesses have fewer than 10 employees. Most are service-oriented and should continue to prosper as demand for quick and convenient service grows, he said.

The Florida SBDC program was the most productive in the nation last year with more than 45,000 individuals or firms receiving management counseling and training assistance. Half its funding comes from the federal Small Business Administration and half comes from the universities.

For the most part, the service is free, with only a minimal charge collected for off-campus seminars to cover costs. Services cover a wide range of subjects, including assistance in drafting business plans, working up loan applications and how to compete for, and obtain, government contracts.

Jeffries said the centers do not tell a person not to start a business, but instead tries to outline the possible conclusions.

Riot averted at immigration detention center, INS says

United Press International

MIAMI — Immigration authorities ordered a lockdown Thursday at the overcrowded Krome Avenue detention center, acting on tips that Haitian aliens were stockpiling matches, flammable materials and weapons in anticipation of a Sunday riot.

Sixty special immigration agents trained in riot control were called in, and another 30 were on the way from Texas and Louisiana Thursday evening, said Perry Rivkind, district director in Miami for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"The information we've been gathering for the last week indicates they were preparing to torch Krome. They were collecting flammable material, ripping little bits of cloth off their suits, collecting paper and matches. They were picking up rocks and metal objects from construction sites," Rivkind said.

"This was to be timed to a Sunday demonstration outside Krome. When they heard the noise from the outside, they were going to start a fire at the facility," Rivkind said.

The detention center, west of Miami on the edge of the Everglades, housed 740 illegal aliens Thursday, well over the emergency ceiling of 525, Rivkind said.

All are awaiting deportation hearings before immigration judges and, except for about 260 Haitians who arrived on a boat last month, nearly all had entered the United States with fraudulent documents, Rivkind said.

The population represents 20 countries, including Cuba and Nicaragua, but the vast majority — about 540 — are Haitians. "This is one of the largest Haitian populations we've had in a number of years. Any time you have a large population of any one group, it does start difficulties," Rivkind said.

POLICE BRIEFS

Woman allegedly abducted, battered

SANFORD — A 26-year-old Sanford man has been arrested after allegedly abducting a woman from her house, choking her and severely beating her.

Jeffrey Blain Drennan, 26, of 1905 W. Fourth St., was arrested by Sanford police on First Street at Persimmon Avenue at 11:48 p.m. Tuesday.

Margaret Ann Marsteller, 28, of 147 Sand Pine Circle, Sanford, had reported to police she had been forced from her house by Drennan at 11 p.m. She said he made her enter his vehicle and he drove to the intersection of Airport Boulevard and Live Oak Boulevard. There, Marsteller said, Drennan choked her, beat her severely and threatened to kill her. With the aid of two passerbys she escaped and ran home to call police.

When police caught up with Drennan, they charged him with aggravated battery and kidnapping. He was also arrested on a warrant.

Woman names rape suspect

FERN PARK — A 40-year-old Orlando woman who told Seminole County sheriff's deputies she was raped in Fern Park shortly after midnight Wednesday has named a suspect in the case.

The investigation continues with charges pending, deputies said. The woman said she was with the suspect and a group of others at a Winter Park bar when the group decided to go to Seminole County.

The woman said the suspect asked to ride in her car. When they were stopped in the area of U.S. Highway 17-92 at State Road 436, at about 12:30 a.m. the woman said the man attacked, ripped some of her clothing off and raped her. She said he fled in his own car.

Man charged with child abuse, battery

SANFORD — A man who allegedly hit his infant son in the head with a bottle, causing a 2-inch laceration, was arrested by Sanford police after a fight with police at his home, an arrest report said.

Delmos Milton Barnes, 38, of 1221 W. Second St., Sanford, is charged with child abuse and battery on a policeman.

Police said when they followed Barnes into his house at about 7 a.m. Wednesday, he was muttering about how bad his son was. Police said Barnes slapped the child, then picked the baby up and almost dropped him as police watched. They reported Barnes allegedly fought police when they tried to restrain him. Both Barnes and the baby were treated at Central Florida Regional Hospital, Sanford, before Barnes was jailed. Bond is $4,000.

Two linked to cocaine sale

SANFORD — Both a man who allegedly sold cocaine to an undercover Sanford policeman and his reputed supplier were arrested after the alleged sale on Fourth Street Wednesday.

Darren Eugene Holden, 18, of Winter Park, who allegedly delivered two pieces of cocaine to the agent in separate deals, is charged with two counts each of sale and delivery and possession of cocaine. He is also charged with resisting arrest without violence. He was caught and arrested in an alley on Seventh Street at about 10:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Charlie Smith, 21, of 510 S. Cypress Ave., Sanford, accused as the cocaine supplier, was arrested earlier at 5:37 p.m. on W. Third Street at S. Park Avenue. He is charged with sale and delivery and possession of cocaine. Bond is $5,000 each.

Deputies find cocaine, pot in car

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Timothy Edward Loughran, 31, of 180 Tollgate Road, Longwood, was charged with possession of cocaine and possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana after a Seminole County sheriff's deputy reportedly found contraband during a search of Loughran's car on North Street, rural Altamonte Springs.

Loughran was arrested Wednesday. Bond is $5,000.

Wife's complaint brings arrest

LONGWOOD — A woman's complaint to Longwood police that her husband was allegedly taking items from their home and selling them, and that he might have marijuana in his car, led to the husband's arrest.

Police said they found marijuana in the car of Anthony Pappa Jr., 28, of 1511 Sparrow St. They charged Pappa with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana at home Wednesday. Bond is $500.

State, federal pay bills advance

Florida's moves to enact its first minimum wage; U.S.-bill veto seen

From wire reports

A Legislative committee in the Florida House approved the state's first minimum-wage bill Thursday, voting to match proposed increases also approved yesterday in the pending federal wage law.

The state bill (HB 851) by Rep. Doug Jamerson, D-St. Petersburg, would set an hourly minimum Oct. 1 of $3.85 that would rise to $4.25 on Jan. 1 and $4.55 a year later. The House panel voted 8-3 for the proposal, which now goes to the Appropriations Committee for evaluation of its $800,000 enforcement cost.

Florida is one of eight states with no state law on wages. The federal minimum wage is $3.35, but a bill moving through the U.S. Congress would phase in the same increases proposed by the state bill, although not until October of each year.

The U.S. House, ignoring the almost certain prospect of a veto by President Bush, voted to raise the minimum wage from the current $3.35 per hour to $4.55 over three years.

The Democrat-sponsored bill was approved Thursday on a near party-line vote of 247-172 and sent to the Senate where approval is expected next week.

The two Congressional chambers had voted previously for similar bills boosting the wage. A conference committee worked out minor differences and sent the bill back for final approval.

Bush has pledged to veto any bill that raises the minimum wage beyond $4.25 an hour and is not coupled with a lower training wage that could be paid to new hires for their first six months on the job. The training wage would be 85 percent of the current minimum wage.

Democrats tried to win the president's support by adding a 60-day training wage, but the administration refused to accept the plan.

Both sides acknowledged that backers of the bill do not have the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto, and it is expected a new bill will be drafted after the veto. The fall-back position may propose raising the minimum to $4.25 over two years rather than three.

In the Florida legislature, Jamerson said state legislation was needed in case the federal bill fails.

"We want to make work pay," Jamerson told the House Employee and Management Relations Committee. "A lot of single heads of households would understand there's an incentive to work, with a livable minimum wage."

At $3.35 an hour, Jamerson said, a minimum-wage worker currently grosses about $580 a month and takes home $524 after taxes. He said, though, a working parent can get $523 a month in welfare and foodstamp benefits.

But Dick Davis, general counsel of Associated Industries of Florida, warned that the bill "only serves to take people out of jobs, not out of poverty."

Miller named to expressway board

SANFORD — CALNO, the council of local governments, recommended Casselberry councilman Mary Lou Miller to replace Lake Mary commissioner Paul Tremel on the Seminole County Expressway Authority Wednesday.

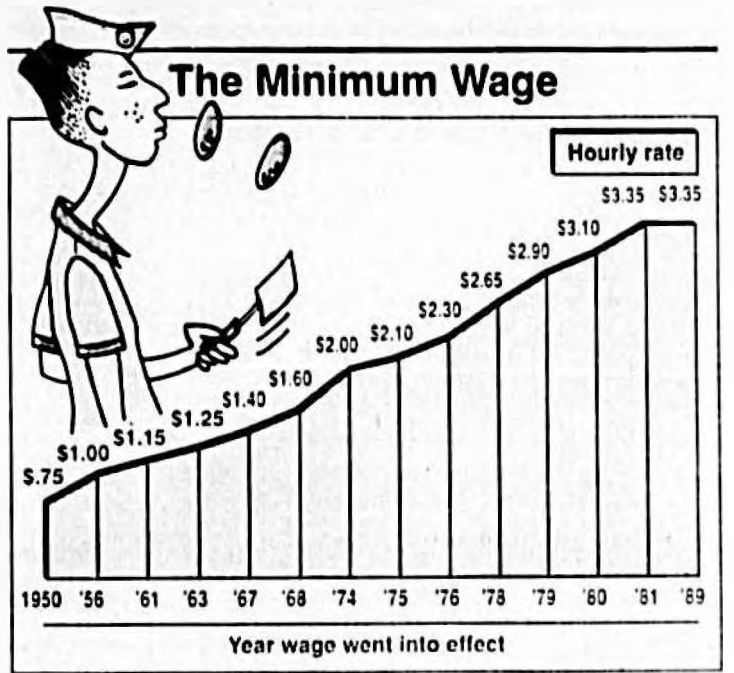

Tremel resigned from the authority last month, citing a busy professional and personal schedule.

Although Casselberry does not lie along the expressway route, CALNO members decided to rotate their appointments to the authority among the cities, said county commissioner Jennifer Kelly, the county's CALNO representative.

CALNO appoints two members to the seven-member authority. Sanford Mayor Betty Smith fills the second CALNO position. The five county commissioners fill the remaining five seats.

Each city must approve Miller's appointment for it to be final.

COMBINED PUBLIC NOTICE AND PROPOSED STATEMENT OF COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT OBJECTIVES AND PROJECTED USE OF FUNDS SEMINOLE COUNTY, FLORIDA COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM

A public hearing will be held in the County Services Building located at 1101 E. 1st Street in Sanford in Room W-120 in order to obtain public comment and answer questions on the Proposed Statement of Community Development Objectives and Projected Use of Funds as presented below. The staff of the Community Development Section of the Seminole County Planning Office is holding this public hearing at 7:00 p.m. on Monday, May 22, 1989.

To All Interested Agencies, Groups and Persons

Seminole County is eligible, for the fourth consecutive year, to receive Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funding on an "entitlement" basis.

This statement of objectives and projected use of funds is to advise the citizens of Seminole County, and to advise the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), of the general objectives the County will pursue with CDBG funds, and of the specific projects which the County intends to undertake with those funds. The County has been advised that its 1989-90 grant amount is $1,170,000.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT OBJECTIVES

- To use Community Development Block Grant funds in a manner which benefits low and moderate income persons and low and moderate income neighborhoods. To alternatively use CDBG funds for the elimination or alleviation of slums or blight, or for an urgent community need.
- To improve the quality of life in Seminole County by providing infrastructure improvements, public facilities, parks and recreation improvements, housing assistance and other activities which are related to neighborhood/community improvement.
- To concentrate the use of funds in identified low and moderate income "target areas" in order to stabilize and improve those neighborhoods.
- To provide for long range community improvement by assessing current conditions and planning long-range improvement programs.

PROJECTED USE OF 1989-90 FUNDS

SEMINOLE COUNTY COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM
Midway Drainage Improvements Lincoln Ave. channel improvements	188,000
Johnson Hill Potable Water Improvements	175,000
Lockhart's Subdivision Paving/Drainage Alexander & McCarthy (from 20th to 22nd Sts.)	138,000
Winwood Paving/Drainage Morse Ave.	210,000
Roseland Park Paving/Drainage Roseberry Lane	127,500
Bookertown Paving/Drainage Douglas St.	118,750
Lordland Paving/Drainage Bailey, Ross & Knudsen Sts. (Engineering only — phase 1)	40,000
Contingency	36,745
General Administration and Planning	136,005
TOTAL	1,170,000

If funds totaling at least $22,200 remain after the completion of each of the above activities, then that amount will be allocated to the paving/drainage of the proposed section of Carlisle Drive in the Lake Drive area of Casselberry.

The Final Statement of Community Development Objectives and Projected Use of Funds is scheduled for approval by the Board of County Commissioners on June 13, 1989 and will be filed with HUD prior to September 1, 1989. If you have any questions or comments regarding this proposed statement, or if you would like to review the plans identified above, please contact Buddy Balagia or Matt Kane, Seminole County Planning Office, County Services Building, 1101 East First Street, Sanford, Florida 32771 (telephone: (407) 321-1130, extension 384).

Celebrate with caution

This is a time for sober thought as well as revelry for area high school students. The Seminole High School prom is Saturday evening and it is in Daytona Beach, and area high school graduations are coming up on June 8, 9 and 10.

The news of wild celebrations leading to disasters on the roads is sad but all too familiar.

It is good, therefore, that the Florida Highway Patrol and area schools have organized programs to acquaint students with the dangers of drinking and driving and that the schools in this area, once again this year, have organized activities to promote safe graduation celebrations.

It is equally good that the Students Against Drunk Driving group at SHS has been putting up posters and reminding the juniors and seniors to not drink and drive.

We urge all students to heed the advice. It could, of course, save their lives and the lives of others. And, it will help ease the concern of their parents.

For, as an editorial published recently in the Charlotte Observer newspaper pointed out, although this is a season of student joy — of proms, graduation and celebration — it also is a season of anguish and tension for parents.

No matter how well they raised their offspring, parents fear the shattering news a late-night call can bring. They can't sleep until their own are safely home. They really can't rest until the morning newspaper has come with no headlines about the death or maiming of other teens they know and care about.

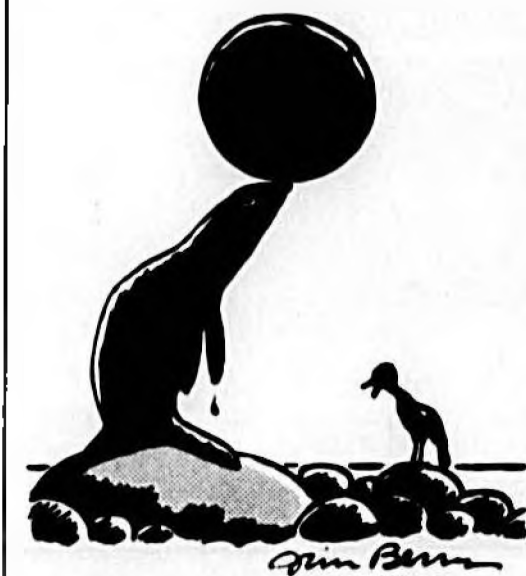

So much is beyond parents' control. They can train their young drivers well. They can preach the dangers of speed and alcohol. They can strive to give their own children the confidence to refuse the ride with the drinking friend. They can pledge to be reachable, to come without question or reproach when the situation turns difficult. They can do everything in their power to safeguard the children they love so much.

Still they fear the night and the midnight hour. They know, from their own lives, that judgment matures more slowly than bodies. The danger is not just alcohol, but fatigue, the other cars on the road and the reckless exhilaration of the early morning hours. No matter how carefully parents work to screen and structure the events their children attend, so much remains beyond their control.

But if parents have only the most imperfect control over where youths drive, and how, they have a larger say over them. Parents can't control the clock, perhaps, but they can set the curfew. They can band together to say no to early morning joyriding and into-the-morning celebrations. They can work to keep their children out of the setting that so often brings tragedy.

That won't prevent all the deadly crashes; nothing will. But parents who maintain effective curfews, especially on nights of high spirits and exuberance, can at least be sure that it will not be their children who are killed or maimed, or whose driving kills or maims others, at 3 o'clock some springtime Saturday morning.

College students earn high marks

While the secretary of education was handing out a C minus average to the nation's schools, I was giving the University of Delaware students in my course on censorship all A's and B's.

Secretary of Education Lauro F. Cavazos recently lamented that "we aren't doing well," and cited the decline in national high school graduations and college entrance exam scores.

I told my students that they were doing very well indeed and cited their analyses of the mini-controversy over the appointment of a Catholic priest to head the nation's second largest library.

Two distinguished writers, Gay Talese and Joseph Heller, protested in published letters the job shift of the Rev. Timothy J. Healy from president of Georgetown University to president of the New York Public Library.

"I would welcome clarification on obedience," wrote Talese, referring to the Healy's priestly vows. "Obedience to whom? To his church? Or to those who disagree with him?" Heller sought similar assurance.

An equally distinguished writer, Garry Wills, defended Healy's appointment.

This was the class assignment: Read the three letters to The New York Times, then answer this question in a memo: "Is a Catholic priest as head of the nation's second largest library a potential threat to the fullest clash of ideas, as advocated by Aristotle, John Locke, John Stuart Mill, Justices Oliver Wendell Holmes and William O. Douglas, or are Healy's critics guilty of pre-emptive censorship?"

Not only had students read those authors, they had also read George Orwell, John Milton, 16 Supreme Court cases on the First Amendment and newspaper articles about the chief advocates of censorship such as:

• The well-to-do Michigan mother who single-handedly intimidated advertisers into withdrawing from a television show.

• A Mississippi fire-and-brimstone preacher who terrorized Pepsi into withdrawing a Madonna commercial that resembled Prayer" video.

• The Ayatollah Khomeini, whose death threats forced an author into hiding.

• The ethnic, religious, gender, professional and civic groups who seek to censor ideas or television programs that they judge offensive.

The score from the memos? Healy 22, Talese and Heller 2.

I can't speak for every college kid, but these 24 students make a liar out of Allan Bloom. The American mind is not closing.

Enjoy some of their comments:

"I Talese and Heller wish to question the integrity of Father Healy's secularity, allow me to remind them that basketball is far from a divine preoccupation. Yet the library's new president has provided his institution with a fine, secular basketball program for years." (Mark)

"In the words of Alexander Pope, 'What mighty contests arise from trivial things.'" (Tara)

"Do not condemn the man before he begins the job. Mr. Heller. Would you like readers to ban your books before you begin writing them?" (Rob)

These few comments hardly do justice to the spaciousness of their ideas. But they reflect the best of democracy in the marketplace of ideas.

The American mind is not closing.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Turning the Bible on its head

BOSTON — A parent was arrested in Los Angeles last week. It happens every day, but not quite like this. Gloria Williams, you see, was arrested for being a parent.

More precisely, the 37-year-old mother of three became the very first person accused under a new California law that holds parents responsible when their kids go bad. She is charged with "failing to exercise reasonable care, supervision, protection and control" of a child.

The child in question is 17 years old and an alleged member of street gang called the Crips. This son is accused of being among those who raped a 12-year-old girl.

Mind you, if the police are right, Mrs. Williams is no candidate for the Mother's Day Hall of Fame. When they entered her apartment to talk about her son, they found walls covered with gang graffiti instead of rock posters. The photo albums showed members of the family pointing guns. The birthday cake for the 8-year-old was decorated with the gang name.

To this day the mother, who works for an electronics firm not far from home, insists that her son is no gang member. Perhaps she is blind or blindly loyal or chooses to believe that the Crips are a local Boy Scout troop and the guns are merit badges on the way to becoming an Eagle Scout. Perhaps she does rindone her son's gang membership, as the city attorney charges.

But the crime she is accused of is a lack of parental control. Let me put it this way: It's ten o'clock at night. Do you know where your 17-year-old son is? Sure about that?

The California law was created and passed in the current desperate mood about street gangs and youth, about violence and drugs. In the sociological search for a cause of all these woes, Americans buy one generic label these days. We blame it all on "the breakdown of the family."

If the cause is the breakdown of family, then surely the cure is the repair of the family. Our search for a fix has taken us to many different family mechanisms. The favorites these days are the ones who believe that the breakdown is caused by a loss of parental authority. Their special low-cost repair would put parents back in the driver's seat. Those who won't take the wheel must be forced into it.

This is the fix-it behind the law that threatens California parents of kids involved in criminal activities with a year in jail and a $2,500 fine. It's the thinking as well behind a Wisconsin law that makes parents financially responsible for the offspring of their teen-age children. And it is, in part as well, the support for laws that require parental consent for abortion.

We are now seeing various attempts to put parents in charge, to shore up authority, to foster at least the image and maybe the reality of a traditional family unit. They are, mostly, efforts to control the behaviors that worry society the most: Teen-age violence and teen-age sex, the yin and yang, the male and female of dangers.

I find this a notable pattern. After all, parents have always been held responsible for the care of their children. They've been held liable for child neglect, for child abuse, for child support. We have always drawn connections between behavior and background. Where did they, we, go wrong?

But this current society that knows little about how to restore relationships, that has done less to help parents trying to raise their children in safety and health, has now turned to punishing the failures.

More and more responsibility is passed to parents, even as we worry about their willingness to exercise it. We allow violence on the screen and tell parents to control the dial. We allow drugs on the streets and tell parents to monitor usage. We offer few alternatives to street life and expect parents to keep their kids indoors. We remove communal supports and tell parents to make up the difference.

I don't know about Mrs. Williams' culpability, although if they arrested the mother for her "failure to exercise supervision," why not the absent father? But for every Fagan figure of a parent, there is another who hasn't given up but, rather, has lost control of a teen-ager. For everyone who is truly irresponsible, there is another who is overwhelmed, a third who is afraid for her child, a fourth who is afraid OF her child. Is that parent now a criminal?

They say that California is the leading edge, the social trend-setter. Now the Golden State has turned the Bible on its head. They've decided that the sins of the sons shall be visited upon their parents.

Teen-age violence and teen-age sex, the yin and yang, the male and female of dangers.

Another Bush nominee cozy to big business

WASHINGTON — It's getting harder to tell whether George Bush or big business is picking the president's nominees for federal office.

The next corporate puppet headed for a Senate confirmation hearing is James Cason, one of the people who played ell to Ronald Reagan's Santa Claus when gifts were handed out to industry.

Cason spent the last seven years overseeing land and minerals management in the Interior Department. In the final months of the Reagan administration, he was acting assistant interior secretary and helped carry on the department's pro-industry agenda that began with James Watt.

Now Bush wants to make Cason assistant secretary of agriculture. In that position he would be the steward over natural resources and national forests. In a recent interview, Cason explained his warped view of the forests: "We try to squeeze into each acre all the compatible uses we can."

It sounds like Cason is planning a resort, not managing a national treasure.

Candidate George Bush boasted that his regime would set the world agenda for environmental protection. Tapping Cason casts a pall on that agenda.

In December 1988, as the clock was running down on the Reagan years, the Interior Department revived a blatant giveaway policy for oil shale lands. The policy allows the department to sell federal land in Utah and Colorado to energy companies and speculators for $2.50 an acre. Congress put a moratorium on such generosity in 1987, but when that expired last year Cason wanted no time. He wrote Capitol Hill leaders: "Congress has adjourned without enacting oil shale legislation and the department feels compelled to carry out its duties."

The maneuver stunned the House subcommittee on mining and natural resources. A committee staffer told us it wasn't the first time Cason had butted heads with Congress over environmental issues. The staffer told our associate Jim Lynch that Cason is a "100 percent corporation man," and "an ideologue of the extreme right."

Cason would not speak to us. He is not granting any interviews until after his confirmation hearing. Our sources say he will not slide through his hearing unscathed. The Senate Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee is building an unflattering file on Cason. The committee is looking at Cason's involvement in oil shale issues dating back to 1986 when the Interior Department essentially gave away taxpayers' rights to oil shale royalties worth at least $34 billion.

More recently, Cason was cornered by a congressional committee that questioned him about a trip he took to Colorado in March 1988 to encourage energy companies and speculators to apply for claims on the cheap federal land.

Earlier this year, Cason helped ram through a controversial regulation that reduced the royalties coal companies must pay for mining on federal lands.

He made more enemies when he injected himself into the Fish and Wildlife Service debate over whether the Spotted Owl should be protected under the Endangered Species Act. Not surprisingly, Cason was adamantly opposed to any status for the owl that would slow timber harvesting in the Northwest.

Max Peterson was the chief of the Forest Service for seven years under Reagan. He told us he worked for five different assistant secretaries of agriculture, and all of them were more conservation-minded than Cason would be in that job.

Tapping Cason casts a pall on that agenda.

Stocks jump sharply

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened sharply higher today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues after the release of a favorable report on inflation.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which rose 8.43 Thursday, was up 44.17 to 2427.05 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 963-115 among the 1,375 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Early turnover amounted to about 13,125,000 shares.

Before the market opened, the government said the April producer price index rose a modest 0.4 percent, which was below expectations of a 0.7 percent rise.

The jump matches a similarly moderate 0.4 rise in the index in March after sharp increases of 1 percent in both January and February.

Analysts said it may be the result of the Federal Reserve's efforts to control inflation by slowing economic growth with higher interest rates.

Dollar lower on PPI news

United Press International

The dollar was broadly lower in New York Friday in active trading against key foreign currencies following the release a key report on U.S. economy.

The Labor Department reported the nation's producer price index rose 0.4 percent in April, following an unrevised 0.4 percent rise in March.

Because of the big price jumps early in the year, the producer price index, which is often a harbinger of future consumer inflation, rose at an annual rate of 9 percent during the first four months of 1989.

Analysts noted the market had been expecting the PPI to show an 0.7 percent increase.

Before the report was announced, the dollar was higher on major foreign currency markets overseas. Gold also moved higher.

In Frankfurt, the dollar opened at 1.918 West German marks, up from Thursday's close of 1.912.

The dollar began the day in Milan, at 1,395.75 Italian lire, up from 1,394.60, and in Paris, at 6,479.5 French francs, up from 6,462.5.

The dollar opened in Zurich at 1.71 Swiss francs, up from 1.705, and opened in Brussels at 40.27 Belgian francs, up from 40.20.

In London, the British pound opened lower, at $1.6835, down from $1.6855 on Thursday.

In Tokyo, the dollar soared against the Japanese yen in active trading, closing at 135.80 yen, up 1.25 yen from 134.55 yen Thursday.

Currency traders said institutional investors and importers moved to purchase dollars in line with overseas markets where the dollar jumped on the news of President Bush's decision to dispatch nearly 2,000 troops to Panama.

player for standing her upon from night.

Tomontra Mangrum and her mother, Valerie Mangrum, are seeking $49,531 from Marlon Shadd to cover the cost of Tomontra's new shoes, flowers and her hairdo. Tomontra was able to return her $280 prom dress for a refund.

Shadd, 17, said he told the girl five days before the April 7 dance that he had fractured his ankle and would not be able to go.

"I can't believe this," said Shadd, who has accepted a basketball scholarship at Kansas State University. "She said she didn't believe me when I told her I fractured my ankle."

"I talked to him on April 2, and he said he already had his tax and the tickets," insisted Tomontra, a freshman at Berean Christian School.

County Judge Howard Berman held a hearing Wednesday and scheduled a trial for July.

"The issue is, was there a valid contract? We had an offer and we had an acceptance," Berman said. "Could she have gotten another date to the prom?"

The short-lived romance began in February during a trip to Orlando for a regional basketball tournament. Shadd said a note was passed to him one night.

"She said in a note it would make her year if I would ask her to the prom," he said. "So I asked her."

But after he failed to appear on prom night Valerie Mangrum said she called Shadd's mother, Joan Bryant.

"I called and called and called until I got his mother," she said. "She was very upset about this."

Bryant said she didn't speak to Mangrum until April 9, when Mangrum knocked on her door at 7:30 a.m.

"I'm sure he wouldn't have let her down like that," Bryant said. "I don't think he owes any money. He told her he fractured his ankle. Why couldn't she accept that?"

The cost of filing the claim was $31.75. But if the Mangrums win the case Shadd might have to pay that too.

"I don't think it's funny," Bryant said. "Evidently she's got the money and time. I don't."

Budget

Both plans contain pay raises for state workers, despite Martinez' call for a ban on pay raises except in "critical" areas such as law enforcement and healthcare.

The Senate spending levels assume revenues will be available from a number of new fees, including a salt water fishing fee supported by the governor, a $25 registration fee for motorists adding new vehicles to the state's overcrowded highways, a 15-percent tuition increase at state universities, and small license fee increases for professionals, beverage dealers and lottery dealers.

None of the fee hikes are in the House budget, although House members are considering increased cigarette and beer taxes.

The Senate does not contain a House budget item that would allow local school districts to raise property taxes for school construction.

Both chambers were reluctant to give Martinez authority to raise $500 million in transportation right-of-way bonds approved by the voters last November. House leaders left the money out of their budget because they opposed Martinez' plan to divert $47 million for construction. The plan in the Senate was to hold up the bond sale at least until later this year, when a special session on the Department of Transportation's financial problems could be held.

own," said assistant principal Carmo Norman.

The Daytona Beach site was chosen over a site in Seminole County because one of the two places in the county large enough to accommodate the expected 500 students was too expensive and the other would only let them book a date only 30 days in advance.

"We'd like to be in Seminole County," Cooper said, "but in the 15 years I've been doing the prom, we've always had them in either Orlando or Daytona Beach."

To help ward off any alcohol or drug problems, "our Students Against Drunk Driving group here at the school has been putting up posters and reminding the juniors and seniors to not drink and drive," Cooper said.

This year's prom will feature three disc jockeys and a video screen. On the screen they will show not only popular music videos, but also on-the-spot videos of the students as they dance.

Lake Mary High School had their prom last month.

Chamber

Coleman, who headed the membership drive, said, "We're probably looking at membership (drives) being a year-round thing now."

Coleman said many of the chamber directors were not able to contribute the necessary energy to the drive because the dates conflicted with their schedules.

The chamber reported Feb. 2 they had a membership of about 619 businesses and individuals. At that time, Coleman had set a goal of 500 new members. Farr said 112 members renewed and 104 new members joined during the drive, contributing $11,635 in dues.

The chamber is operating on a $125,000 budget this year, Farr said.

John Carl of the chamber board said he suggested the finance committee meet to decide how to curtail spending for the last half of 1989.

Carl said that when a member asked if the chamber had considered consolidating with the county chamber, that member got a resounding "no." Sanford needs to promote its own business community, he said.

Chamber President Jim Tesar was not available for comment.

●$118,750 for Douglas Street in Hookertown west of Sanford; and ●$40,000 for engineering for Bailey, Ross and Knudson Streets.

The remaining $172,750 in CDHG funds will allow for administration of the program and allow for $36,745 in unexpected expenses.

CAB members also recommended if at least $22,200 remains after the other projects are completed, Carlisle Drive in Casselberry be drained and paved.

All of the projects recommended by the CAB are in unincorporated Seminole County. Among the city projects not recommended for funding is parking and landscaping for the Casselberry Senior Center. Last year, at the urging of former county commissioner Barbara Christensen, the center received $100,000 in CDHG money to expand the building.

Also last year, seniors for a Better Community pledged to raise the additional money needed for parking and landscaping.

program it's not going to make your program any better."

"I have made no excuses," Jernigan said.

Task force Chairman Steve Richards asked why Sanford youth spend $67 more to play in Five Points baseball leagues instead of participating here.

Richards said his two daughters play baseball in a Five Points league. "They want to play at Five Points. I can't make them play in Sanford."

Registration for youth baseball at Five Points is $75, registration at Sanford is $88.

About 75 percent of children participating in Sanford leagues are low-income, Jernigan said. "If I charged $70 a kid, I could have fancy, pin-striped uniforms, too. I don't want to put it out of reach for any kid."

In nine years the city has built eight new parks, Jernigan said. But since 1977, the parks maintenance staff has shrunk from 15 to 12 employees.

Jernigan balked at task force members' suggestion to pay for new recreation facilities with a bond issue. "I don't think anybody's going to vote themselves a new tax."

Jernigan said the department isn't in a rut, but is working to catch up with growth in Sanford over the past 15 years. Twenty years ago the city's population was centered between Lake Monroe and 25th Street, he said. Now a community center proposed for the Pinecrest area would only be a step to catch up, not to meet needs of new growth, he said.

The recreation task force will meet with the city commission and the systems development committee Monday at 4 p.m. to discuss recreation impact fees. The fee committee is considering an increase in recreation impact fees from $150 to between $100 and $800.

Secord indicted on Iran-Contra charges

WASHINGTON — Retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord was accused in a new indictment of lying by telling congressional committees that he did not stand to profit by covertly running arms in the Iran-Contra scandal.

The nine-count indictment Thursday, promptly denounced by Secord's lawyers as "vindictive" and unfair, marked the first prosecution for alleged false testimony during televised, summer-long hearings in 1987 by the congressional Iran-Contra panels.

Secord already faces six felony charges. The indictment accuses Secord, who testified without immunity as the lead witness, of concealing from the House and Senate panels "the true facts" about profits he stood to reap from an "enterprise" he established to funnel arms shipments to Iran and the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Secord acknowledged at the time that the private network was created, at the direction of former White House aide Oliver North, to circumvent a congressional ban on official U.S. military assistance to the rebels.

But he painted himself as a patriot merely trying to serve his country and said he "fore swore" any personal profit in assisting North's covert activities.

Business predicts economic growth

HOT SPRINGS, Va. — The American economy can sail in 1991 toward an unprecedented ninth year of peacetime expansion, but only if the Federal Reserve Board can endure an inflation rate above 4.5 percent, the chiefs of the nation's leading corporations said today.

The economy's advance is expected to taper off to a pace of 1.5 percent over the next several quarters, but will accelerate to a 3 percent annual rate by late 1990, said a report by the Business Council, an organization formed by the chairmen of the major U.S. companies.

Despite a slowdown caused by higher interest rates, not only a recession can be avoided, but "the economy could be headed in 1991 toward an unprecedented ninth year of peacetime cyclical expansion," the council said.

The report was presented by Chemical Banking Corp. Chairman Walter V. Shipley at a news conference in this Virginia resort, where the council began a three-day meeting to analyze the economy, the government's budget policy and the dilemmas of corporate restructuring and leveraged buyouts.

Oil spill cleanup stalled

VALDEZ, Alaska — Cleanup work on the nation's worst oil spill has come to a virtual halt in the Gulf of Alaska and on the shores of the Kenai Peninsula, and state officials blamed a lack of space to put oil-fouled debris and other waste.

The lack of space to store oily wastes slowed the cleanup and threatened to shut it down completely in some areas as early as Friday, said Lester Leatherberry of the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Groovy oil, oil-water mixtures and oil-soaked clothes and absorbent pads have filled nearly every available barge, dumpster and container in Homer, from where the western part of the spill is being attacked, Leatherberry said Thursday.

Leatherberry, whose agency is monitoring the Exxon cleanup of the 10.9 million gallons of oil that gushed out of one of its supertankers March 24, said he spent eight hours flying over the area Wednesday and "there didn't seem to be anybody working anywhere" in the Gulf of Alaska and Kenai Peninsula.

Leatherberry said the lack of storage space was the major reason for the slowdown, but one crew got sick, reportedly from petroleum fumes, and 14 people were hospitalized and later released. Another crew was evacuated because of the danger of bears.

"Exxon has commented that their oil recovery effort (in the western area) could be shut down as early as today in the absence of adequate storage-containment," a state Emergency Operations Center report said.

Chemical train derails

CHUNKY, Miss. — Eight to 10 railroad cars, some containing dangerous chemicals, derailed Thursday night in a sparsely populated area, forcing the evacuation of about 200 residents within a one-mile radius of the wreck.

No injuries were reported in the east-central Mississippi accident. The cause of the accident was not known.

The evacuated included residents of the Pine Forest Rest Home, a retirement home, Deputy David Taylor of the Lauderdale County sheriff's department in Meridian, 8 miles northeast of Chunky, said most were taken to an evacuation center in Meridian.

"Any who needed medical observation were taken to local hospitals," he said.

Jim Maher, director of the Mississippi Emergency Management Agency, said the cars and four engines of the train derailed shortly before 8:30 p.m. CDT on the Mid-South rail line.

Several of the derailed cars were carrying vinyl chloride, alcohol and caustic soda, Maher said, and at least one car was leaking chemicals into the Chunky River.

TB cases rising in jails, prisons

ATLANTA — The number of tuberculosis cases is increasing in jails and prisons across the United States, underscoring the need for regular TB testing of both inmates and guards, federal health officials said.

The Centers for Disease Control said Thursday a survey conducted in 1984 and 1985 by 29 state health departments showed the incidence of TB among inmates of jails and prisons was more than three times higher than that for non-incarcerated adults between the ages of 15 and 64.

Since 1985, 11 known TB outbreaks have been recorded in prisons in eight states. The CDC said the problem is especially acute in larger prisons.

The bacterium that causes TB is generally transmitted by breathing or eating contaminated food. TB infection generally affects the lungs and is characterized by fever, night sweats, weight loss and, in advanced cases, spitting up blood.

"Among inmates of the New York penal system, TB incidence increased from an annual average of 15.4 per 100,000 population during 1976-78 to 105.5 per 100,000 in 1986," the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Small winter wheat crop predicted

WASHINGTON — The government's first estimate of the weather-scarred winter wheat crop projected a harvest of 1.43 billion bushels, the smallest crop since 1978.

The report issued Thursday is likely to increase pressure on Capitol Hill to pass a disaster relief bill for American wheat farmers. The impact on food prices was not as clear immediately but was expected to be small.

Wheat accounts for only a few pennies in the price of a loaf of bread, and wheat prices would have to double to cause even a 7 percent rise in bread costs. The Agriculture Department has forecast a food price increase of between 3 percent and 5 percent this year, about the same as last year.

Still, the winter wheat estimate was slightly smaller than expected. A crop of 1.43 billion bushels, or 38.9 million metric tons, would be some 8 percent smaller than the 1988 harvest.

U.S. troops leave for Panama

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Nearly 2,000 troops began heading for Panama today to protect U.S. citizens and to be part of a concerted effort by President Bush to pressure Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to surrender power.

At the same time, the ambassadors of the Organization of American States called a meeting in Washington to consider an emergency session of foreign ministers next week on the Panamanian crisis.

In the boldest move yet of his administration, Bush Thursday ordered in the troops, recalled the U.S. ambassador and called for worldwide condemnation of Noriega, whose forces Wednesday beat up opposition leaders.

Some of the 1,881 soldiers and Marines ordered to Panama were to start leaving today with the directive to protect American lives and property. The first units were to be flown by C-141 military cargo planes and deployed on U.S. military installations in Panama by late today, said Pentagon spokesman Dan Houma.

The 1,881 soldiers and Marines will join 10,300 military personnel already on the 10 U.S. installations in Panama. Of those servicemen already there, 4,700 are listed as combat forces. There are also 13,997 military dependants in Panama, 3,081 of those live off-base.

One of the first units leaving first was a battalion — 890 soldiers carrying light arms and mortars — from the Army's Light Infantry Division at Fort Ord, Calif. Another 100 soldiers from Fort Ord's brigade headquarters will also go.

Also being flown out by the weekend will be 165 Marines from the 2nd Marine Expeditionary Force at Camp Lejeune, N.C. and 18 light armored vehicles. Taking longer will be the final unit, 726 soldiers along with 59 armored personnel carriers, six mortar carriers and 106 support vehicles from the Army's 5th Infantry Division at Fort Polk, La.

Bush took the action in response to the political violence and to the nullification of Sunday's Panamanian election. The United States maintains the anti-Noriega opposition party won that contest by a 3-to-1 ratio.

"I will do what is necessary to protect the lives of American citizens," Bush told reporters at the White House after conferring with top advisers and congressional leaders. "And we will not be intimidated by the bullying tactics, brutal as they may be, of the dictator Noriega."

Bush said, "All nations in the democratic community have a responsibility to make it clear through our actions and our

Bush's orders on Panama

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush announced Thursday seven points the administration is taking in response to the crisis in Panama. They are:

- The United States will move a "brigade-size force to Panama," consisting of more than 1,800 troops to bolster existing American military units.
- The U.S. ambassador to Panama, Arthur Davis, was recalled. The embassy staff will be reduced to a skeleton crew.
- U.S. government employees and their families will be moved out of Panama or onto "secure U.S. housing areas within Panama."

• The State Department will encourage American business executives to move their dependants out of Panama.

• The U.S. will continue economic sanctions against Panama. They originally were imposed by former President Ronald Reagan.

• The United States will enforce its treaty rights under the Panama Canal treaties.

• The United States will "address this crisis" by "regional diplomacy," action in the Organization of American States "and through other means."

words that efforts to overturn constitutional regimes or steal elections are unacceptable."

The president's action won swift support from congressional leaders of both parties.

There was no immediate reaction from the Panamanian government.

At the United Nations, representatives of several Latin American nations, including Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela expressed "deep consternation" at Panama's decision to void its election.

About 51,000 U.S. citizens live in Panama. They include about 10,300 military personnel stationed at U.S. facilities; about 20,700 military dependants, and about 20,000 businessmen and military retirees.

In a related development on safety, the State Department late Thursday issued a travel advisory warning U.S. citizens against going to Panama.

"U.S. citizens are advised not to travel to Panama until further notice. Private sector and other U.S. citizens are advised to arrange for their dependants in Panama to depart until conditions are normalized," read the State Department statement.

Bush said the additional troops, numbering 1,881, were being sent to protect American lives, interests and the Panama Canal. They were to begin arriving Friday. Bush's decision to increase the U.S. military presence was the key element of his response to the situation in Panama.

In a joint statement, congressional leaders praised Bush for the "measured and deliberate steps to assist the Panamanian people in restoring democracy to their country."

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, however, openly wondered what would happen next.

"What happens if we send ... troops and nothing happens? Then what is the next step? Is there a next step?" Dole asked, adding he believed Bush had additional plans ready.

The president said his actions were directed against Noriega and not the Panamanian people.

Noriega runs Panama has head of its armed forces. More than 15 months ago, he was indicted by grand juries in Florida on charges of drug trafficking.

Bush, when questioned about what additional steps might be taken to induce Noriega to give up power, ruled out any offer to drop the drug charges "because that has profound implications for our fight against narcotics."

Earlier this week, the White House said it was considering using military force against Noriega. But it has apparently dropped the idea.

Bush offers to drop Soviet trade barriers

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush, embarking today on a weekend of speech-making, was ready to announce that stringent trade barriers against the Soviet Union will be dropped if the Kremlin allows free and open immigration for Soviet Jews, a top administration official said.

Bush's three-day journey will take him to Texas and Mississippi for commencement addresses and to Kentucky for a fund-raiser for Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky. Bush will return to Washington on Sunday.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said Bush would have "two surprises" and "hold out an open hand" to the Soviets in a commencement address today.

One of the new initiatives Bush plans to unveil is a decision to ease up on trade restrictions under the Jackson-Vanik Amendment in exchange for lifting restrictions on immigration to the West.

Measle shots touted

United Press International

ATLANTA — Federal health officials, seeking to combat a resurgence of measles in the United States, recommended all children be given two measles shots before entering grade school.

An advisory committee to the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday the shots should be given at 15 months and upon entry to kindergarten. Children would not be allowed to attend school without the shots.

"It's a major step," said Dr. Walter Orenstein, CDC director of immunization programs. "Now we've got to find the resources to pay for it."

Under current state laws, all children must have one measles shot before entering school. But health officials said about 2 percent of all vaccinated children lose their immunity and may develop measles. A second shot, they said, would be the best way to prevent recurring outbreaks of measles among susceptible children.

Agent Orange claims will be reviewed

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward Derwinski says the government will review 34,000 Vietnam veterans' Agent Orange health claims that originally were denied.

Derwinski said Thursday the department expected to begin in June revising rules for deciding health effects caused by exposure to the herbicide used in Vietnam to defoliate trees and remove cover for the enemy. He said a final draft of rules should be published by October.

Derwinski said the department would not appeal a ruling earlier this week in San Francisco by U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson that voided the VA's action denying benefits to veterans who claimed their health had been damaged by exposure to 12 million gallons of Agent Orange used in Vietnam.

Afghan government steps up attacks

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The pro-Soviet Afghan government has captured strategic rebel positions in stepped-up attacks against U.S.-backed guerrillas besieging the eastern city of Jalalabad, Afghan resistance sources said.

"Kabul regime forces around Jalalabad have escalated their attacks against the Mujahideen," one rebel source said Thursday.

The sources said the government Wednesday took rebel-held positions in the Khush Ghunbad area, about half a mile east of Jalalabad's airport on the road to the strategic rebel-held garrison at Samarkhel.

Viet refugees leave Hong Kong for Hanoi

HONG KONG — A second group of Vietnamese boat people returned to Hanoi Friday as part of a voluntary repatriation program designed to reduce the refugee population in Hong Kong camps.

The government said 64 Vietnamese boarded a chartered jetliner for Hanoi rather than face the likelihood of years of detention in crowded refugee camps in the British colony.

More than 31,000 Vietnamese already are held in Hong Kong camps and new arrivals this year have been running at record levels of up to 2,000 a week. The influx has filled refugee camps and the government has begun using abandoned ferries to house new arrivals.

A group of 75 Vietnamese were included in the first voluntary repatriation flight March 2.

Gorbachev offers missile removal

United Press International

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's decision to unilaterally cut the number of short-range nuclear missiles in Europe is seen by aides to Secretary of State James Baker as an effort to pressure NATO into considering further arms reductions.

Gorbachev told Baker of the Soviet's intention to remove 500 short-range nuclear warheads from Europe during their 2 1/2-hour meeting Thursday at the Kremlin.

Baker's schedule today includes briefing NATO foreign ministers or their representatives on his talks in Moscow and he was expected to hold a bilateral session with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

U.S. officials traveling with Baker believe the Soviet decision to make the 5 percent cut was intended to put political pressure on NATO to negotiate further reductions in short-range nuclear missiles.

The question of modernizing short-range weapons and possible negotiations on a reduction in the missiles has split the Western alliance, with West Germany favoring immediate negotiations, a position the United States and Great Britain have adamantly opposed.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, speaking to reporters in Moscow as Baker headed to Brussels to brief NATO allies, said the Soviet Union would officially announce its proposal on nuclear weapons reduction Friday.

"A most important initiative about reductions in Soviet tactical nuclear munitions in Europe and a comprehensive resolution of this question was presented," Shevardnadze said. "Our known proposal for separate talks without delay ... indeed still holds good."

Baker told reporters traveling with him the Soviet decision to reduce the number of short-range warheads was "a small step, a good step" and noted the United States has junked 2,400 warheads since 1979.

A U.S. official with Baker said the Soviet decision is a timely answer to a Western challenge for specific numbers of warheads to be reduced and will be a difficult challenge for NATO.

No clear leader to succeed Takeshita

United Press International

TOKYO — Masayoshi Ito, a reform-minded politician who was widely expected to become Japan's next prime minister, formally turned down the job today, leaving Japan with no clear political leader.

Ito, who had been intensely courted for two weeks, finally decided not to accept the position because of his failing health and the unwillingness of his party to make the political reforms he sought, a spokesman said.

The refusal by Ito, 75, a former foreign minister, leaves Japan without a likely successor to outgoing Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and seriously damages the image of the majority Liberal Democratic Party.

The Liberal Democrats, who support strong ties with the United States, have held power in Japan since the party was founded in 1955.

But a scandal in which party leaders accepted huge donations from a company accused of bribery has seriously eroded the party's popular support.

"The party is now facing its biggest crisis since it was formed," said Keiwa Okuda, a member of parliament from the LDP.

Opposition parties, including the Socialist Party, which campaigned against the U.S.-Japan security treaty, responded to Ito's move by calling for new elections to let the public decide on the fate of the LDP.

Takeshita, the president of the LDP, watched his public support fall to less than 4 percent last month as the scandal unfolded and announced on April 25 he will resign.

Party leaders turned to Ito in the hope that his image as a clean politician would help shore up the party's crumbling popularity before a scheduled election in July.

Ito, who has diabetes, said he turned down the job because of his health and because he wants the party to resolve the scandal first, said Ryutarō Hashimoto, the LDP deputy secretary-general at a news conference.

Lebanese cease-fire holding

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A new cease-fire arranged by Arab League mediators between Lebanon's warring Christian and Moslem forces appeared to be holding today, and the Arab diplomats resumed efforts to forge a more lasting peace, officials said.

Police said the guns of Christian army units and Syrian-backed Moslem militiamen were silent in the divided capital and surrounding hills where two months of sometimes savage violence has left at least 382 people dead and more than 1,660 others wounded.

Meanwhile, Arab League envoys who brokered the cease-fire met with the pro-Syrian leader of a Moslem militia, Shihab Nabih Berri, and will hold similar talks with Druze warlord Walid Jumblatt and the head of the Moslem cabinet, Sunni Selim Hoss.

The diplomats were scheduled to cross to the other half of the capital and meet with leaders of the Christian camp, officials said.

They said the envoys would focus on finding a way to implement the Arab League peace plan announced last month to end the violence.

Soon after the cease-fire announcement Thursday by Arab League Under Secretary Lakhdar Al Ibrahim, artillery and rocket fire stopped across the divided capital and at the presidential palace in the Christian suburb of Baabda, southeast of Beirut, officials said.

But six hours later, Moslem militiamen fired about 40 rockets into the Christian-held port city of Jounieh, 12 miles north of Beirut, killing a woman and a 4-year-old child and wounding 11, all members of the same family.

The envoy said talks would continue to end Christian and Moslem blockades that sparked the fighting and that the goal of the 21-member Arab League "was to reach a comprehensive solution to the Lebanese crisis."

But Islamic Jihad, a pro-fundamentalist group holding two American hostages, warned in a statement late Thursday against deploying an Arab League truce observer force, saying it viewed it as biased in favor of the Christians.

Moslem and Christian radio stations earlier announced the two sides would honor the Arab League cease-fire, initially agreed to April 28, but repeatedly violated with fierce bombardment of the capital and surrounding areas.

Hours before the agreement, at least four people were killed and 10 wounded, including a man struck by shrapnel when a shell crashed into the street near the west Beirut office of United Press International.

At least 382 people have been killed and more than 1,660 wounded since the latest round of fighting erupted March 13 in response to a Christian blockade of Moslem-run parts.

Two diplomats and two Arab League officers met with the Christian leader, army commander Gen. Michel Aoun, in the basement bunker of the shell-pocked presidential palace.

NHL PLAYOFFS

Canadiens earn Cup berth

PHILADELPHIA — The stage is finally set for the long-awaited showdown between the Montreal Canadiens and Calgary Flames.

The Canadiens disposed of the last obstacle in the way of their cross-Canada rivalry by finishing off a frosty underdog, the Philadelphia Flyers, with a consummate display of playoff hockey.

Bobby Smith and Chris Cleburn scored power play goals in the second period Thursday night to lead Montreal into the Stanley Cup final with a 4-2 victory over Philadelphia.

The Canadiens used disciplined, carefully balanced play to outscore the Flyers in Game 6 of a surprisingly competitive series.

Montreal, which won the seven-game series 4-2, will play in the Stanley Cup final against the Flames beginning Sunday night at Calgary. The Flames gained the final Wednesday night by eliminating the Chicago Blackhawks.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Ryan continues Royal mastery

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Nolan Ryan renewed his domination of the Kansas City Royals on Thursday night after a 10-year absence from Royals Stadium, one of his favorite places to throw his legendary fastball.

Ryan, making his first appearance against Kansas City since Sept. 24, 1979, pitched a five-hitter and struck out 11 batters, leading the Texas Rangers to a 6-3 victory over the Royals.

The 42-year-old right hander, who has more victories over the Royals than any other major league team, improved his lifetime record against Kansas City to 21-11, including 24 complete games.

"I've always liked this stadium — I enjoy playing here as much as anywhere," said Ryan, who held the heart of the Royals' order 0 for 15.

Ryan 4-2 retired the final 13 batters for his second complete game and reclaimed the major-league lead in strikeouts with 63 after seven starts.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Smith leads Braves to .500

PHILADELPHIA — Lonnie Smith continued his torrid play Thursday night, banging out three hits, stealing two bases and scoring three runs to help the Atlanta Braves defeat the Philadelphia Phillies 8-3 for their seventh straight win.

Smith has been on base 19 times in 23 plate appearances over the past five games to spark the Braves, who reached the 500 mark.

"Lonnie's having a Most Valuable Player year," Atlanta Manager Russ Nixon said.

Over the past five games, Smith has been 6 for 11 with 12 walks and was hit with a pitch.

Smith — who hit his fifth homer, doubled and singled — had plenty of offensive help this time as the Braves knocked out 18 hits to make it easy for left-hander Tom Glavine to raise his record to 5-0.

Knicks win as Jordan runs afoul

The New York Knicks hit upon a sure-fire way of containing Michael Jordan Thursday night. Get him into foul trouble.

Jordan sat out for a nine-minute stretch of the third quarter with four fouls to help the New York Knicks run away with a 114-97 triumph over the Chicago Bulls.

The victory evened the best of seven Eastern Conference semifinal at 1-1 with Games 3 and 4 scheduled for Saturday and Sunday in Chicago.

While the Knicks can't count on Jordan getting into foul trouble as a regular matter of course, they might be able to rely upon a smothering defense.

In a Western Conference semifinal, Phoenix topped Golden State 113-104 to take a 2-1 lead in their series. Tom Chambers scored 12 of his team-high 31 points in the opening five minutes of the fourth quarter to lift Phoenix.

Tribe girls chasing after another state track title

By MARK BLYTHE
 Herald sports writer

Seminole High School will take the track tonight at Showalter Field in Winter Park with high hopes of bringing home a fourth consecutive girls' state title while the boys will attempt to finish in the top five for the fourth straight year.

The Lady Tribe is looking stronger than ever as they had a tremendous showing in the 4A Region 2 meet last week in Gainesville. Coach Emory Blake feels that if health lets can come up with an effort equal to that in the regionals, the school will win its fourth consecutive title.

"We have to keep doing what we've been doing all along and that's go out and do what we do well," Blake said. "We don't need to

State meets at Showalter

By MARK BLYTHE
 Herald sports writer

Both the Class 4A and 4A state track meets will be run this weekend at Showalter Field in Winter Park and both events promise to have interesting battles for all four team titles.

In each meet, the running preliminaries will start at 4:30 p.m. with the field events set for a 4:30 p.m. start. The pole vault will begin at 9:30 p.m. with the running finals slated for 7:30 p.m.

The 4A girls meet should feature a duel between Seminole High School, the defending state champion, and Jacksonville Gaines in the 4A boys, it should be Quincy Shanks and Jacksonville Gaines going after the title.

In the boys 4A it will be a battle between Vero Beach, Longwood, Lyman and Winter Garden West Orange. In the girls 4A division, it should be Palm Beach Lakes out front with Lake Mary, Orlando Oak Ridge, Lake Worth, John I. Leonard and Lake Brantley battling for the runner-up slot.

There will be a number of local athletes participating in with many local schools having a shot to finish very highly in the team races.

Seminole County has a total of 41 athletes in the event and all are capable of playing in the meet. Seminole High School's girls will be going for its fourth consecutive state title while the boys will look to finish in the top five.

Lake Mary's girls are looking for its best ever finish with Lake Brantley having a chance to score very well.

Lyman's boys will be after a state title in the boys meet and they have the numbers and the talent to pull it off.

Lady Patriots ousted in semifinals

By TONY DeSORMIER

ALLAMONTE SPINNINGS — It was over almost as soon as it began.

Lake Brantley High School's hopes of a state championship in girls' slow pitch softball were dashed Thursday night when the Lady Patriots fell to Palm Beach Gardens 2-0 in the Class 4A semifinals at Merrill Park.

Palm Beach Gardens will play Gonzalez Late 12-0 winners over Santaland on Thursday night for the Class 4A state championship tonight at 8:30 p.m. at Merrill Park. Admission is $4.

For the Lady Patriots, the loss came suddenly and unexpectedly. Despite outpitching Palm Beach Gardens 5-3 and committing just one error to their five, Lake Brantley found itself on the short end of the score in a game that took less than an hour to play.

"They (Palm Beach Gardens) are a good team," said Lake Brantley coach Betty Betris. "They played well defensively for the most part. We just had everything going for us, our record (24-1) coming into the final. It just didn't work out."

"I'm so proud of these kids. With a record like ours, you'd think that's easy to say, but if you saw us at all during the season, you know why I can say that."

In the end, lack of the big hit did in the Lady Patriots. Against Palm Beach Gardens, Lake Brantley left nine runners on base, three in scoring position.

The turning point in the game came in the fifth inning, when the Lady Patriots loaded the bases with one out on three consecutive Palm Beach Gardens' errors. But Michelle Davis and Tracy Brandenburg, the Nos. 2 and 3 hitters in the Lake Brantley lineup, couldn't push a cross-run.

"This was the first time we were shutout all season," said Betris. "We didn't score less than two runs in any game all year. And we allowed an average of 1.8 runs a game."

"That (with the bases loaded on errors) was the time to take advantage. One big hit and we break the game open. And I'd take those same kids and do it again. They didn't get the big hit then, but they've been doing it for us all year long. I guess the percentages just caught up with us."

Conversely, Palm Beach Gardens left just one runner on base and came up with the game's only big hit.

After Stephanie Carroll singled up the middle with one out in the bottom of the third inning, designated hitter Alisa Alvarez ripped a shot between Lake Brantley outfielders Chris Rabaja and Mary Weston. When Rabaja and Weston collided, the ball rolled almost all the way to the rightfield fence. Alvarez circling the bases for a two-run inside-the-park home run.

The one big play in Lake Brantley's loss Thursday was when Mary Weston (No. 40) and Chris Rabaja collided in the outfield, allowing a hit to roll for an inside-the-park home run.

Railroaders, SPBA post baseball wins

SANFORD — Jason Rozell fired a two-hitter and Anthony Morales had three hits as the Railroaders held on to first place in the National Division of the Sanford Little Major Baseball League with a 2-1 victory over Sunland Corporation at Lee P. Moore Park.

In a game played at the Westside Recreation Center, the Sanford Police Benevolence Association picked up its second victory of the year with a come-from-behind 10-12 victory over First Federal Savings and Loan on Thursday afternoon.

The Railroaders started slowly in their victory over Sunland, scoring just three runs in the first inning. But then they scored five, seven, and six before the game was called by the mercy rule. Rozell had a no-hitter going until two out in the third when Joe Santiago doubled and Marcus Johnson reached on an infield single. Catcher Robert Dickerson had an outstanding defensive game for the Railroaders, throwing out several runners attempting to steal a base or score on wild pitches.

Morales led the offense with five hits, including

Anti-obesity efforts get no insurance aid

DEAR ABBY: During the last 10 years I have tried dozens of diets, all of which were worth less. (One cost me nearly $1,000.)

I finally decided to try a medical program to help me lose the 130 pounds I so desperately need to lose. So what did I learn? My insurance carrier won't pay one cent of this $3,000 medically supervised weight-loss program. (Yes, I have tried Weight Watchers, Overeaters Anonymous, TOPS, Nutrisystem, Cambridge, Slimfast, starvation, etc. I have even looked into stomach stapling, which insurance would cover, but my doctor advised against it.)

Abby, a person can be an alcoholic—no problem, insurance will pay for the recovery treatment. Drug addiction, same thing. Ditto for a mental breakdown. So why won't insurance companies acknowledge that there are people like me for whom obesity is a health problem? I am not a skinny little thing who is frantic to lose five or 10 pounds. I am 130 pounds overweight! I'm as addicted to food as an alcoholic is to alcohol. Please print this if you agree.

SPEAKING FOR MANY

DEAR ABBY: Indeed I do agree. Morbid obesity is a life-threatening condition, and I am amazed that it is not recognized as such by insurance companies. I think it should be.

DEAR ABBY: I heard you on my car radio this morning, and I have a bone to pick with you. You were giving some tips on how to plan a wedding, and please correct me if I am wrong, but I believe you said a woman should not feel insulted if her fiancé asks her to sign a prenuptial agreement.

Abby, I am an unmarried 20-year-old woman, and if my fiancé asked me to sign a prenuptial agreement, I would feel very much insulted. To me it would mean that he didn't trust me and wanted to make sure I didn't take him to the cleaners. Please tell me how you arrived at that cockamamie conclusion.

ADVICE

SYLVIA IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR SYLVIA: A prenuptial agreement benefits both parties and is especially important if one of the couple has been previously married and has considerable assets. If there are children from a previous marriage, it seems only fair that they should inherit their parent's estate. Unless this is provided for in a prenuptial agreement, in a community property state (and yours is one), the assets of the couple will be divided equally in the event of death or divorce.

I also recommend that each party retain his/her own attorney. And no one should sign anything without consulting a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I each have our own car. They are about the same in value, equally safe, and both in good condition—so that is not an issue. My question: When we go out on a date, who drives? Maybe I should tell you that I have driven road to coast and am as good a driver as he is.

SHERRI

DEAR SHERRI: If you're using your car, you drive. If you'd rather have him drive your car, offer him the option because some men may feel a tad less than masculine if they're not in the driver's seat.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 60440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90060. All correspondence is confidential.)

The skies over DeLand will be fully utilized as a number of activities take place in this weekend's Fred Bondesen Central Florida Balloon Classic at the DeLand Municipal Airport.

Hot air balloons will decorate the skies today through Sunday, featuring 11 national racing champions, several from throughout the United States. Tethered balloon rides will be given—weather permitting—at 1 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday.

Loftrest Piper's new airplane, SwiftFury, will be on display at the festival. The plane sports a military-style bubble canopy and control sticks rather than control wheels. Costing $95,000, the plane is expected to cruise at 210 mph on a Lycoming IO-360 200HP engine.

A display of military and private static aircraft also will be on display.

An aerobatic air show is to be given by the Florida Aero Club at 2 p.m. on Saturday and by the armed forces at 2 p.m. on Sunday.

Skateboarders will fly through the air during two skateboard demonstrations sponsored by Stone Edge Skateboard Park in South Daytona. Students will go "aerial," a maneuver where the skater leaves the ground, momentarily holding the board on his feet. The demonstrations are scheduled for Saturday at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Continuous helicopter rides, hourly skydiving and radio-controlled airplanes also will make use of the ethereal expanse above the DeLand airport.

Radio waves will fill DeLand's skies as WOCL, Cool 105.9 Radio, broadcasts live from the balloon races Saturday.

What Do Mothers Teach?

The most important teachers that children have are their mothers. Most of what a child learns before the age of five is taught them by their mothers. All of the skills most important for success in life are introduced first by mothers. The most important thing a mother teaches is love. Because their mothers first loved them, children learn to put their faith and trust in others. Honor your mother on Mother's Day. She taught you the most important lesson of all—

Pope to refugees: 'Do not lose hope'

Pontiff stressed family, traditional values, touched on apartheid, AIDS

United Press International

LILONGWE, Malawi — Pope John Paul II pleaded with authorities to help African refugees and encouraged the continent's approximately 4 million people who have had to flee famine and war to "not lose hope" at an outdoor mass that ended the pontiff's four-nation tour.

The pontiff later boarded his Alitalia Boeing 747 and flew to Africa since he became pope in October 1978, carried him to the Indian Ocean islands of Madagascar and Reunion and to the southern African nations of Zambia and Malawi.

At every stop he drew crowds of up to half a million people who lined streets and packed stadiums in their rainbow-hued traditional costumes — singing, dancing to African drums and pressing forward eagerly for a sight of the holy father.

Bishop Chromole of Lilongwe, the pontiff's host during the half-day stop in the city, told the pope, "It seems like a dream to see you. People will say for years, I have seen the pope. It is a never-to-be-forgotten day."

The pope replied, "The beautiful ceremonies and the wonderful spirit of celebration that accompanied them are special memories for me. I will treasure them."

During the outdoor mass Saturday in Lilongwe attended by 120,000 people, including many refugees, John Paul noted, "In recent years Africa has seen an alarming increase in the number of people who have had to flee their homeland due to war or hunger."

United Nations officials count more than 4 million refugees across the continent, most fleeing famine and civil wars in their homelands. There are more than 650,000 refugees in Malawi alone, victims of the civil war that has ravaged neighboring Mozambique.

"Every effort by the public authorities, the churches and international organizations to help these brothers and sisters must be encouraged and supported," he said. "To you who have had to cross the border, I say: Do not lose hope. Christ himself was once a refugee."

Long lines of swaying women clad in bright yellow wraps and headgear accompanied the pope to the podium before the start of the mass, followed by a procession of 500 boys and girls dressed in white cassocks and 200 priests who had traveled from outlying missions.

The pope blessed a group of disabled people, mostly victims of polio which is widespread in the impoverished nation. Crowds of men reached out, climbing on chairs in an effort to touch the holy father.

Bishop Chromole also told John Paul the Church in Malawi had many concerns, especially widespread unemployment and AIDS.

"The scourge of God has come down upon us," he said.

The pope extended his sympathies to the unemployed and to AIDS victims, repeating his instruction that AIDS sufferers should be treated as one would treat Christ himself.

Repeating a theme he has stressed throughout the nine-day trip, the pope left the worshippers with a reminder of the importance of family life.

"Before I leave Africa, I wish to appeal to you and to all people of good will to realize the importance and sacredness of family life," he said. "A nation cannot long survive in justice and social harmony without a healthy family life."

The pope was formally seen off from the country hours earlier in Blantyre, the commercial capital, by 90-year-old President-for-life Kamuzu Banda and other dignitaries.

The pope's fifth trip to Africa reflected his satisfaction with the rapid expansion of the Catholic Church in the continent, where Vatican sources say they have acquired 2.5 million new followers in the last year alone.

But John Paul voiced concerns on the trip about conflicts with Islamic expansion in some countries and confusion created by the mingling of Christian teaching with traditional practices based on animism — the worship of spirits.

He also denounced the apartheid system of South Africa, saying on his arrival Tuesday in Zambia, "Racism stands condemned. But it is not enough to condemn." Conditions must be fostered which allow fear to be banished and reconciliation to be achieved.

"Discrimination must be overcome, not through violence, but through reconciliation," he said.

The pope also paid special attention to the young people, talking with them, asking them to sing for him and holding rallies. He told them they held the continent's future hopes in their hands and repeatedly emphasized the importance of fidelity and marriage while denouncing drugs and alcohol.

Even religious men tend to shun church

Getting men to go to church has always been a problem. It isn't that men are not interested in the work of the church. They may even be deeply religious.

But men have often looked upon going to church as unnecessary and church on Sunday morning, they often would listen respectfully when a circuit-riding parson would come to town and drop into the neighborhood bar or pool hall seeking to win souls.

One Saturday afternoon a sign went up in front of a saloon in Gillette, Wyo.: "Pat rugged exterior. Szasz tells the story of Silver Jack, a rough-and-ready cowboy on the Great Plains. Jack wasn't the churchgoing, praying kind, and his life hadn't always been exemplary.

But when he heard another cowpoke named Bob maligning the faith of his mother, a fight broke out. The story is preserved in a cowboy ballad whose last verses go:

At last Jack got him under / And slugged him once or twice / And Bob straightway acknowledged / the divinity of Christ. / But Jack kept reasoning with him / Till the poor cuss gave a yell / And allowed he'd been mistaken / In his views concerning hell.

While the men of the old frontier were seldom seen occupying a pew in church on Sunday morning, they often would listen respectfully when a circuit-riding parson would come to town and drop into the neighborhood bar or pool hall seeking to win souls.

One Saturday afternoon a sign went up in front of a saloon in Gillette, Wyo.: "Preaching to-night at 7:30, followed by big Poker Game." Now you offer a man a deal like that and he doesn't mind getting a little religion.

A preacher who could hold his own with the miners and ranch hands of the Old West soon got a reputation for being "all right." Such a clergyman was Episcopal Bishop Daniel S. Tuttle.

During the great Helena, Mont., fire of 1869, every able-bodied man in town enlisted as a firefighter. When morning came, only three men remained at their posts: Butterroot Bill, a desperado, Gentleman Joe, a gambler, and Tuttle.

Later a Helena miner paid the bishop the supreme compliment: "He's the best bishop that ever wore a black gown. Whenever he chooses to go on a brimstone raid among the sinners in this gulch, he can do it and I'll back him with my pile."

As it was in the days of the Old West, so is it today. Men make up only a third or less of the congregation at most churches on a Sunday morning. So it may seem ironic that the church has acquired the reputation of being male-dominated, especially among feminists.

"Certainly in public leadership roles that is true," says Professor Lyman Lundeen of the Philadelphia Lutheran Seminary. "But it would help to remember that in some ways people have experienced the church as primarily an organization for women."

Well, if a male-dominated church leadership has attracted a largely female clientele in the pews, will the increase of women in the ministry bring the men in?

Women clergy in the U.S. now total 21,000, almost double the number 10 years ago. Still that represents less than 8 percent of the clergy.

Are they drawing more men on Sunday morning? Theologian Richard John Neuhaus says in his monthly newsletter, Lutheran Forum: "The empirical evidence is to the contrary, suggesting that women in leadership roles only accentuates the impression that the church is for women."

Urinary tract infections best left to specialists

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been married for 34 years and have had urinary tract infections every three months to two years. I started on Nitrofurantoin 100 milligrams and a specialist recently prescribed Macroclantin 50 milligrams. I seem to get well after the antibiotics, but then the problem occurs again. I have tried cranberry juice, wash the area with soap every night and drink plenty of water. Now I seem to be allergic to sulfa and penicillin. Will I always have the allergy, and is there anything you might suggest for this terrible problem?

DEAR READER: Recurring urinary tract infections can be a real problem to cure because the cause is often difficult to identify. You are correct to be under the care of a specialist, who probably has investigated your urinary tract with urine cultures, an intravenous pyelogram (IVP), a kidney X-ray and cystoscopy (a method of examining the bladder and lower urinary tract). You should follow his or her advice; untreated urinary infections can progress to serious complications, such as pyelitis (kidney inflammation). You can be desensitized to overcome your allergy to sulfa and penicillin. Under the supervision of an allergist, small quantities of antibiotics in increasing dosages can be used to neutralize your allergies. Should you require these antibiotics, they can be used at a later date. Because many urinary infections start in the bladder, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "The Bladder."

diseases, too, such as anemia and hyperthyroidism. You need a diagnosis because the term "sinus tachycardia" is descriptive only; it tells what is going on but not why. See your doctor. You probably have a correctible condition causing the tachycardia (rapid pulse). Once the underlying abnormality is corrected, your heart should return to its normal rate.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
Don't ask me why East did not bid five hearts, which would have made easily. If I knew why people make mistakes, I'd be writing a column on human behavior instead of on bridge. But as bad as the bidding was, East made up for it with a brilliant defensive play. Declarer ruffed the opening lead, drew two rounds of trumps ending in his hand, and led a club to the jack. East had already figured out that South must hold four or more clubs, probably headed by the 10, and he made the unusual play of winning with the club ace. Back came a heart, ruffed by declarer. Confident that West must hold the club queen, South played a club to dummy's eight. East won the queen and played another heart. South could ruff and play to the king of clubs in dummy, but there was no way for him to return to his hand to score up the remaining clubs to make his contract.

Of course there's no real excuse for declarer failing to make the contract, since playing to the king of clubs and back guarantees making 10 tricks. Some of the people I played with years ago might well have won the club jack with the ace rather than the queen just because they pulled a wrong card. But that's probably another area for the human behaviorists to ponder.
