

CHARACTER SHOWS IN BACKS

Straight and Upright Carriage Means You Are Determined, Energetic and Reliable.

If your back is straight and upright you are correspondingly straight in your conduct. You will hold your head up, for you are not afraid to look the world in the face.

Even when you're sitting you keep your back straight. There is an air of real strength about you—both physical and mental. In short, you have plenty of backbone. You are determined, energetic and to be relied upon.

If your back is stooping and rounded you are a creature as weak as you look, you are prone to lolling about and too lazy or too feeble to take a front rank in the battle of life. The tramp is an excellent example.

If you are a criminal, your back is stooped or round, but the scholarly stoop of the bookworm must not be confounded with the foregoing. There is a difference which is difficult to describe, but it is readily recognized by the close observer.

If you are mean and covetous your back is narrow and rounded and your shoulders are high. You are always sly. You generally have the appearance of drawing yourself up into as small a compass as possible. You are always yourself, so to speak, and people should give you the cold shoulder.

Are you too straight backed? That is, do you hold your head so high that there is a preposterous fall in the small of your back? Then you are so puffed up with self-esteem that you carry your chest out so far it's absurd.

Costly Picture in Lumber Room. A picture estimated to be worth $25,000, which for so many years was hidden away in a lumber room at St. Mary's hall, Coventry, has just been restored and put in a place of honor in St. Mary's hall.

Owing to damp and an accumulation of dust and dirt, the picture had become so defaced that the corporation of Coventry had decided to sell it if they could get $375 for it. But Messrs. Todd & Co., a London firm of picture restorers were at work upon the picture in St. Mary's hall, and one of their experts recognized it as a masterpiece.

It was found to be one of the finest examples extant of the work of Jacob Jordaens, a pupil and fellow worker of Rubens. Jordaens was born in Antwerp, and the picture was probably painted about 1640. It represents Haecchus springing from his car upon seeing Ariadne. The canvas is about thirty feet by ten feet high. Presented to Coventry by Edward Ellice, M.P., in 1855, little value was attached to it, and it was subsequently consigned to the lumber room.

A Most Generous Nature. They had been married but a short time, and their happiness was idyllic. Her slightest wish was law, his merest whim was gratified. "And all this on $7.00 a week!" "Today," his wee wife murmured, as they sat together after their evening meal, "I saw the loveliest lace curtains." And she sighed. "But I knew you wished to economize, so I didn't get them."

And again she sighed. "Dearest," he murmured fondly, "everything you want shall be yours! Anything which adds to your happiness, and brings gladness to your dear eyes; anything that lightens your domestic cares, my darling, and glides the lowering clouds, anything which borders the thorny path of duty with sweet, fragrant flowers, and appeals to your noble, aesthetic nature, you shall have, my loved one; you must have it, if"—and his voice broke a little with the stress of emotion—"if it doesn't cost more than eighteen pence!"—London Tit-Bits.

Paper Plates for Animal Pets. Using paper plates for animal pets will be found to be a good plan. Some people do not take the care to wash plates kept for dogs and cats, although they should be kept scrupulously clean and be used for no other purpose. Paper plates, which may be bought by the hundred for but little money, may be burned after they have been used. It is also a good idea to have a piece of zinc put on the back porch, where the pets are likely to be fed, and place the dishes on this for them. The zinc is easily cleaned.

Her Natural Occupation. Now and then the childish comment goes right to the heart of a difficult problem or situation. A little boy who longed to stand on the seat of a car and look out of the window was sternly reproved by his mother. "What a 'frail-cat mammal' exclaimed another youngster, seated near. "Yes, I suppose she is nervous," was the adult reply, "but then, you see, she has to take care of her little boy and it keeps her busy." "Well, isn't that what she's for?" was the innocent, pertinent question.

POTATOES MOVING NOW

Sanford Growers In The Game Early This Season

3 CARLOADS LAST SATURDAY

Bringing Five Dollars Per Barrel at Sanford, and Culls Three Dollars

You can grow anything at Sanford! This statement has been made many times by the people of this section who have been wise enough to diversify their crops. The old idea of making celery king has been banished, and the grower who gets away from the celery idea long enough to plant "sure things," will make money every season.

The greatest talking point in favor of Sanford is the fact that the grower here can usually get into the stretch ahead of competing places, which insures a good price.

Irish Potatoes this season ought to be a money crop on account of the scarcity of tubers throughout the United States, and the Sanford growers who are shipping now are receiving five dollars per barrel for the No. 1 spuds, and even the culls, put up in crates, are selling at one dollar or three per barrel.

Last Saturday the first potatoes to move in car lots left Cameron City, and probably have the distinction of being the first to leave the state.

Michaels & Co., of New York; Bender Steinberg Co., of Cincinnati, and the M. O. Coggins Co. were purchasers.

Dr. Minnick Ward & Dutton and Howard & Peckard helped to fill three cars.

The potatoes averaged fifty barrels to the acre, and on the same ground are corn and tomatoes growing from which a good crop can be expected,—and, just what these growers will realize from an acre of land is left to the pessimists—who claim that you "can't grow anything in Florida at a profit."

Clara Barton Dead

Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross Society, died at her home in Glen Echo, Md., Saturday morning.

The cause of her death was chronic pneumonia, with which she was stricken about a year ago. Her brother, Stephen Barton, of Boston, was with her when she died.

She had been confined to her home "Red Cross," at Glen Echo, since last fall when she returned from a visit to New England. It was thought her trip was beneficial, but soon afterward she was taken severely ill.

Miss Barton was born at Oxford, Mass. in 1821.

She celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary December 25, when she received many messages of congratulation from all parts of the world.

Clara Barton might properly be called the Florence Nightingale of America. Like her British prototype, her works of mercy were not confined to her native land, but were carried even into the eastern hemisphere. She will be written down in history as the founder of the Red Cross in America, but her powerful personality also made an indelible impression upon the International organization itself through her active participation in the periodical conferences at Geneva, Rome, Vienna and St. Petersburg.

Lovely Wedding

A social event of much interest to a host of friends both in Sanford and Jacksonville, occurred at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Carrie Blaine Yelzer, Monday morning, April 15th; when Miss Vivian Blaine Yelzer was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Eugene Larramore, of Jacksonville.

The happy girlhood of the lovely young bride was spent in Jacksonville and Sanford. Her charming personality endeared her to everyone with whom she came in touch. Mr. Larramore is of an excellent Georgia family, and is a prosperous young business man in Jacksonville.

The details of this April bridal occasion, were characterized by exquisite taste and simplicity. The guests were chiefly the young girl friends of Miss Yelzer.

The rooms were decorated in pink and white—a color motif that was beautifully carried out in every way. Mr. Clarence Mahoney accompanied Mr. Witherington on the violin, in a number of selections, before the Bridal Chorus gave the signal for the event of the day. Miss Sadie Williams, in white and pink, came first, scattering rose petals, and was followed

TITANIC SINKS; 1234 LIVES LOST

New Atlantic Liner Titanic Sinks Before Rescuers Can Save All On Board

One of the Worst Catastrophies in History Takes Place at Sea and 1234 Souls Go to Watery Graves

One of the worst marine disasters of modern history if not the worst that ever happened in the world's history is that of the sinking of the fine new White Star liner Titanic off the banks of New Foundland Sunday when she crashed into a gigantic iceberg and crushed the steel prow like an egg shell.

The "C. Q. D." signal sent out from the doomed ship was caught by the Virginian of the Allen line, 175 miles away and afterward by the Cunarder Carpathian, both vessels immediately steaming for the ill-fated Titanic and the Carpathian taking off the women and children. Earlier reports claimed that all would be saved but the very latest reports say that the ship sank before the rescuers could save the crew. The ship was making her maiden trip from England to America and was supposed to be one of the finest vessels afloat.

The Herald in order to give the readers the real news telegraphed New York and received the following messages at noon:

New York, N. Y., April 16, 2 p. m. "A Wireless message sent by Captain Rostron of the Carpathia to the Cunard Line here from Latitude 41.45 north and longitude 50.20 west reads as follows:

"Am proceeding New York unless otherwise ordered with about eight hundred. After having consulted Mr. Ismay and considering the circumstances with so much ice about, considered New York best. Large ice bergs and twenty miles field ice with bergs amongst."

"Another message from Captain Rostron to the Cunard Line said: "Titanic struck iceberg, sank Monday 3 a. m. 41.16 north latitude, 50.14 west longitude. One thousand two hundred thirty-four souls are lost when big ocean liner sinks."

New York, April 16, 9 a. m. "A significant line in the Cape Race Dispatch was the announcement that the number saved by the Carpathia was large, nearly all being women and children. The same facts would likewise spell the doom of practically the entire crew of eight hundred. Notable passengers on the Titanic whose fate is in doubt were Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Major Archibald Buft, Aide to President Taft; Charles M. Hays, President of the Grand Trunk R.R.; His wife and daughter; Benjamin Guggenheim, J. G. Widener, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus; J. B. Thayer, Vice-President of the Pennsylvania R.R.; Washington Roebling, builder of the Brooklyn Bridge.

The Titanic cost ten million dollars and was a total wreck. Fourteen hundred passengers were on board.

The Olympic's Dispatch Follows.

New York, April 16, 12:30 p. m. "Carpathia reached the Titanic position at day-break found boats and wreckage only. Titanic sank about 2:20 a. m. in 41.16 north 50.14 west. All her boats accounted for containing about 675 souls saved, crew and passengers included. Nearly all saved were women and children. Leyland liner Californian remained and searching exact position of disaster. Loss likely total 1,800 souls."

The Captain goes down with his ship. Greatest vessel afloat. Was her maiden trip.

Little Folks Recital

The recital given by the little folks at the studio of Mrs. Fannie S. Munson, Saturday afternoon, who are the youngest members of Mrs. Munson's class was a perfect success and a delightful entertainment.

The effort made by each little pupil, to do her best, and reflect credit upon her kind, patient teacher, resulted in the splendid rendering of each selection. The fine audience that greeted the little folks, were delighted with their proficiency, and entertained by their performance of the program, that was published in Tuesday's paper. The little folks were assisted by Miss Mabel Bowler, who sang two solos, accompanied by Miss Florence Frank. Miss Clara Morrow, gave several very fine readings. In every respect, the recital by the little folks, was as meritorious and enjoyable as any that have been given by Mrs. Munson's pupils.

Ladies' Meeting

The fine audience of ladies, who attended the mass meeting for ladies, in the Methodist church, Sunday afternoon, had the pleasure of hearing a very fine address by Mr. Frank F. Fitch, who is an interesting, entertaining and fluent speaker.

While so much interest and attention is being centered in the men, whom it is primarily desired to benefit, by this great movement that is being carried on, Mr. Fitch reminded the ladies that they must not overlook the fact that they, too, have a very important part to play in this movement, to insure its success. He explained the origin of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, whose gigantic proportions owe their conception to the mind of a young man, whose noble efforts, in trying to work out his idea, for the uplift of his brother man, nearly cost him his life. Mr. Fitch paid a tribute to the influence of women in the home, in society, and her influence and power in the church—dwelling strongly on the power of prayer, to help in the accomplishment of this great purpose, that has been launched, and in all other efforts and desires of the heart. The address was very helpful.

Hon. W. H. Milton, candidate for Governor was in the city Saturday and expected to make an address but on account of rain was unable to do so. He met many of the people of this section and made a most favorable impression.

CULLED FROM THE STATE PRESS

An Epitome of the Week's Most Important Happenings in the State's Domain.

Titusville was hit on Thursday by a small tornado. The damage done is estimated at between $900 and $1,000. No one was hurt, although two had narrow escapes.

The ice and cold storage plant which is in course of construction at Hawthorn is being rapidly rushed to completion.

A number of new buildings are in the course of construction at Bushnell. This little town is rapidly coming to the front since it became the county seat.

Pinellas county will vote on the proposition of issuing $370,000 in bonds—$300,000 for hard roads and $70,000 for a new court house.

The 25th annual session of the Florida State Horticultural Society will be held in Miami, May 14. The meeting promises to be interesting and offers fruit growers an opportunity to see the East Coast as well as to visit Key West. The Florida East Coast railroad has made round trip at the rate of one fare plus 25c. Other railroads have not as yet made any concessions in the way of rates, although the members of this organization furnish thousands of cars of fruit every season to both the A. C. L. and the S. A. L. Few societies have accomplished the good work that the Florida society has.

Clover Club

The Clover Club, composed of the young ladies of the Congregational church, held their regular meeting at the home of Miss Walker Saturday afternoon where they were delightfully entertained. The rooms were attractively bright by the gorgeous beauty of the nasturtiums, with which they were decorated. White and yellow was the lovely color scheme.

At the March meeting of the club each member was given a dime, with which to begin her career as a financier. Each member told in rhyme at the meeting Saturday afternoon, the amount of money she had made, and how she had achieved the desired result. Fifteen dollars was put in the treasury of the club, by the members, made by the multiplication many times over of a certain number of dimes.

The "Napoleons of finance" will have to look to their laurels, now that the Clover Club have entered the field; for the cultivation and multiplication of dimes. The amount earned will be used to furnish the parish room of the parsonage. The members of the club have taken another dime with which to make the money this month to furnish the parsonage. With such efforts back of the determination to succeed, there can be no doubt, but what the parsonage will be painted.

The club were invited into the dining room where a large embankment of nasturtiums made a rich and effective centerpiece, for the lovely white of the table. Each place card supported a clothes pin doll, dressed in white, with dainty yellow ribbons. On the back of the cards, conundrums were written, each question, relating to some part of a lady's dress.

A delicious fruit salad, with dainty New England buns, were served. The meeting was very interesting, profitable and entertaining.

State Congregational Conference.

Sanford gets another proof of its advantages as a convention city this week. The Congregational churches of Florida are coming here today for their annual conference. This conference has incorporated the Wednesday program of the Men and Religion Forward Movement as part of its program, and has added other features of its own.

The first business session of the Conference will be at the Congregational church on Wednesday morning, opening at nine o'clock. All day Thursday is given over to the Conference with a business session in the morning and a general program in the afternoon and evening.

The work of women for missions is the subject of Thursday afternoon and unique features are being planned. On Thursday night there will be several speakers who are directly concerned with the missionary activities of the Congregationalists and these men will tell the stories of their work.

Rev. Lawrence Phelps, D.D., a professor at Atlanta Theological Seminary will preach at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning. The public are most cordially invited to all sessions of the Conference.

CURBSTONE GLEANINGS

A Budget of Opinion "Just Between You and Me"

EVEN THE GATE POST NOT IN IT

A Chiel Is Among Ye Taking Notes and Faith, He'll Prent 'Em"—So Says Saunterer.

¶ The Key West Citizen has been drawing a few dividing lines among the people of its city, and it has come to the conclusion that the people of every community may be correctly placed in three classes—those who help, those who remain indifferent and those who hinder.

The Citizen in discussing the three classes remarks:

"While there may often be honest differences of opinion as to what interests of the city, there is usually very little difficulty in placing each individual in the class to which he belongs, according to the above specifications.

The man who helps in every public movement is often accused of self-seeking by the indifferent and those who hinder. The latter knocks every proposition that does not conform to his particular views. The indifferent fellow may sincerely desire to see progress, but is too selfish, or too lazy to put his shoulder to the wheel.

We have noticed, however, that when any honors are to be given out that the knocker is very frequently in the front rank, with the indifferent fellow close behind."

¶ I once heard a man say his wealth was in his children, and I know he was a poor man. I smiled one of those skeptical smiles so common to men, for I was younger then and blind to some things I can see more clearly now. The children were all small and their future was before them, how they have honored themselves and given sterling value to their father's words. He never wanted for food or raiment and had nothing to leave them—but his good name, however, his country has seven good citizens better off for his having lived, and perhaps that meant more to the community than a bequest of $100,000. We can see the value in a herd of cattle or a flock of turkeys or a drove of hogs, but when it comes to that little bunch of children in a poor tenement, we pity and blame until they become skidmen, merchants, financiers, society dames or titled ladies, and then we wonder how it happened. Then do we realize that they represent the wealth of their parents whose name they honor, or take account of what a force for good they are in the world.

¶ Do I hear a sound like hammers on the new tourist hotel or is it just the same old sound of hammers knocking against "improvements?"

¶ Some time ago I explained the idea of the initiative and referendum and recall, but some of my good friends seem to have such peculiar opinions regarding these questions that I again give them to you. Paste this in your hat, for in the next few years you will be called upon to express your opinion regarding all three:

The object of the reform presented by these three planks in the progressive political platform is to make the government more responsive to the wishes and needs of the masses of the people.

The initiative permits the people to propose laws which the legislative body must frame and submit to the popular vote for enactment.

The referendum requires that all acts of legislation before actually becoming laws shall be accepted by a majority of people before voting upon them.

The Recall gives to the constituents of any officials elected by them the power to remove or recall him whenever he fails to represent them or to do their bidding, without reference to the term for which he was chosen.

Several of our western states have adopted these measures which seem to accomplish the purposes intended.

Progress must be evolutionary, not revolutionary. For instance, popular form of government is still in the experimental stage. If certain agitators were allowed to dictate the policy of this government, a revolution would result. Moses patiently remained with the children of Israel for forty years before they were fitted to enter the promised land.

¶ Not long ago a short story was published in one of the papers in which it was stated that a number of boys called to another boy asking him to join them for an afternoon of play. The boy's reply was that he would enjoy playing with the boys but he was going to take a walk with his father, and that he wouldn't miss it for anything.

What a scroon there is, in this little story. Think how that father must have treated that boy for him to turn down the companionship of boys of his own age and the games they so much enjoy in order to take that walk. This is about the highest compliment a son could give his father. It shows that the father has the son's welfare at heart and that he is looking after it in such a way as to make it a pleasure to him.

Are you a father? If so, how often do you go for a walk with your son? Do you take him for an airing explaining the many things he wants to know, doing so with that patience and love that will cause that son to turn aside from big boy companions and an afternoon of sport with them in order to be with you?

Or is it seldom or not at all that you are seen walking about the street or along the country road in company with the one who is to come after you, bearing your name, taking up your work when you have been gathered to your fathers?

Too often, far too often, fathers, when they have spare moments for rest and recreation, prefer to be with other men, and to discuss the politics or other issues of the day. They do not forget son perhaps, but they think within themselves that they will go for a walk with him another day; that they are tired; that they would like to have that recreation that comes from an interchange of ideas with men of their own age and standing in the community.

Or, it may be, that they would rather go to their own home and fireside and spend the time reading a book or a newspaper, or talking with the companion of their bosom. They do not altogether forget or overlook the son, but in a measure they neglect him.

The result is that the son goes into the streets, into the highway, seeking congenial companionship. He may find those with whom you are glad for him to associate with and he may not. It is a chance, as chances go. Certainly you are not attempting to smooth the way for him to get into your heart as he should, or, perhaps we should say you are not paving the way for yourself into his tender, responsive and affectionate heart.

Many fathers, no doubt, could make vast improvement in this respect.

¶ That Thorn in the flesh of the "Big Business" on the East Coast that writes for the Palm Beach County and wears whiskers under the ground gets off the following this week.

Speaking of poultry, when I was up at Jacksonville Heights a couple of years ago I was out looking for eggs to fire up a 320-egg incubator. I met a young woman carrying a hamper of eggs to a nearby store, and, anxious to save the middleman's profit, asked the price. The answer being satisfactory and anxious to make sure I was not getting a lemon I asked, "Are they fertile?" She thought a moment and hesitatingly replied, "Why, I don't think we have any of that kind, ours are mostly Plymouth Rocks!" After that, what could I do but buy those blamed eggs?

Book Circle

The Book Circle was entertained at its regular meeting by Mrs. B. F. Whitner, Jr., Friday afternoon. Panades and nasturtiums were the beautiful decorations of the rooms. The members of the circle had the interesting pleasure of choosing their new books for the year's reading. The ladies were pleased to have with them Mrs. Whitner's sister, Mrs. E. M. McCullough of Orlando and little daughter. Mrs. McCullough has a great many friends in Sanford, her former home, who are always glad to see her.

Mrs. F. J. Gonzales was also a very welcome afternoon guest of Mrs. Whitner. After the pleasant business of deciding on their books by the members, from the fine list and criticisms furnished by Mrs. J. W. Dickins, secretary of the club, delicious strawberry sherbet and cake were served. On each plate were dainty little blue "Kaiser Blumins," better known as the Kaiser of Germany's flower.

To the regret of the circle four of their members were unavoidably absent. Those present were Mesdames Cruise Barnes, S. O. Chase, Geo. A. Spear, J. W. Dickins, S. Puleston, Robt. Newman, M. H. Bowler.

Fancy Work Circle

The Fancy Work Circle were entertained by Mrs. Roberts Wednesday afternoon. The members of the circle enjoyed their fancy work and a pleasant social afternoon together. Delicious ice cream and cake were served. Mrs. Roberts' guests were Mrs. J. J. Purdon, Mrs. W. H. Miller, Mrs. W. T. Johns, Mrs. T. S. Davis, Mrs. Easterby, Mrs. H. H. Hill, Mrs. Taylor.

RELIGIOUS MOVEMENT

Men's Forward Movement Gains Additional Impetus

LARGE GATHERING LAST SUNDAY

Noted Workers in The Field Assist in The Great Revival Now Being Held Here

Not in many years has there been such a representative audience as gathered in the newly opened Star Theatre last Sunday night to hear the visiting "Team" give the "Kick-off" of the four days' campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement of Sanford. Long before the building was opened the people began to gather and when the doors were swung back they crowded in and soon filled that large and fine auditorium.

"At the Cross" was the opening hymn of the evening, sung most heartily by the great congregation under the leadership of Mr. C. L. Polk.

Mr. C. R. Walker, chairman of the Central Committee, called the meeting together with a few well chosen words in which he emphasized the wonderful possibilities of the movement for Sanford and put the question to the people, "Do we really want the blessings for our city that may come from the message of these four men here with us?"

Prayer was offered by Mr. L. R. Philips. Then after the singing by the audience of "Nearer my God to Thee," the chairman introduced as leader of the "Team" Mr. George E. Moody of Jacksonville, who is the general secretary of the movement for the state of Florida and in charge of the Sanford campaign.

"This is the greatest age in the history of the world," declared Mr. Moody. Twelve of the greatest inventions of the world have been brought to pass in the last century. There are mighty questions of economics now before the nation but the mightiest of all is how to bring this people into line under the leadership of Jesus Christ. He told how this movement started in the brain and heart of Harry Arnold, a worker among college men, and how it is spreading from city to city throughout the country.

Mr. Friend E. Hoyt, director of boys work of the Y. M. C. A., Jacksonville, was the next speaker, and the key to his brief talk was in his first sentence: "What would it profit the city of Sanford if it should gain the whole world and lose its own boys and girls, or what would Sanford give in exchange for its boys and girls?" Mr. Hoyt knows boys and his presence here should bring much good to the young people of Sanford.

Mr. Marcus C. Fagg, superintendent of the Florida Children's Home Society, was the next speaker. He is to speak during this campaign on the social service branch of the work. He declared that Jesus Christ was the first and greatest social worker. He went into the slums and worked among the sick, blind, lame and down-trodden. Any church that does not recognize the child on the street or the girl who has gone wrong as a part of its work is not worthy of the name of him they profess to follow. He mentioned problems of poverty, the social evil, sanitation, etc., that Sanford must face and promised to take them up in detail and for practical solution in his address on Wednesday night.

Mr. Frank F. Fitch, general secretary of the Florida State Sunday School Association, was the last speaker of the evening. "You ask by what authority we come among you," he said, and his answer was "the supreme authority of God, for we are sending you back to the Bible itself to find out what to do. There has arisen a mighty revival in Bible study that is sweeping over this land. When men hear God's voice speaking to them they will respond."

The meeting closed with the singing of "Bringing in the Sheaves" and with the benediction by Rev. C. H. Summers.

Sunday Afternoon Meeting for Men

More than two hundred Sanford men attended the Sunday afternoon meeting to hear the address of Mr. George E. Moody, leader of the "Team." His subject was "The Man Who Went Wrong," and he was listened to with the closest attention by the audience. At the close of the meeting eight men raised their hands in token of their desire to consecrate themselves to God's work.

"And God would and Jacob wouldn't" was the main thought of the address. Mr. Moody told the story of Jacob's duplicity and how he failed to keep the promise solemnly made to God after his vision of the angels. Recounting Esau's loss of his birth right which he traded for a mess of beans he said:

"You say Esau was a fool, but let us not be too hard on Esau. There are many Esaus in this world today and in this auditorium this afternoon—men who have traded their birth rights for less than a mess of beans. I have talked with men who have traded their birth rights; the right to their own home, the right to be a father, to possess a happy home surrounded by rollicking happy children. I have met men who have traded their privilege to have a family for the enjoyment of one questionable am-

"Two or three years ago I was called to the home of an associate of my boyhood days to conduct the funeral services over his child who was dead at birth. The physician, to save the reputation of my friend, said the baby had died of heart failure, while the young man knew that his child had died of venereal poison. With tears streaming down his face he put his arms around my neck and said, 'Ernest, I am the murderer of my child.'

"If a man would commit one sin and stop, it would be had enough, but he never does. You did not know when you committed that sin the other day that it would draw you into the quicksand of a million other sins. The young man did not suppose when he took the first glass of whiskey that he would be a drunkard. He did not know when he told that profane story that it would breed a cesspool of profanity and vulgarity.

"I also learn from this story that Jacob was just following the bent of his disposition. Men, that is a dangerous thing to do. While I believe the good predominates in every man, every one has an inherited tendency toward evil. It may be pride, desire, vulgarity or lust, and if given the reins the steed will tear down the road and over the precipice of a shameful disgraced life. If Christ is not put into the weak places, there is danger inevitably."

At the close of the service Dr. J. E. Beery of Cincinnati sang with voice and deep feeling "Face to Face." Prof. Mendenhall presided at the piano most acceptably at both of the these meetings.

The Monday Afternoon Meeting was held in the Presbyterian church opening at 2:30. It began with a service of song and prayer led by Rev. J. D. Langley.

Dr. J. C. Venable of the Riverside Presbyterian church of Jacksonville had the opening address. He spoke on "Prayer as an Agency in the Kingdom." He called attention to the fact that few of the church leaders of today are interested in the work of the foreign field. Ask a young man to take up this work and he will reply that he cannot listen to such a call when there are so many needy fields at home. Churches all over the home land are calling for pastors and in vain God is the only one who can call men to the ministry and he has laid it upon Christians to pray men into the ministry.

Prayer for men is the most costly thing that one can offer. One may be called upon to give himself. A father may be asked to give up his son. When we are willing to give ourselves then our prayers will be answered and the world will be won for God.

We Presbyterians are asked to give four dollars a year per member to foreign missions and we consider it a awful burden. I know one man who spends a dollar a day simply on cigars yet if you asked that man to give four dollars a year for the spread of the gospel through the world he would be amazed. Prayer is the agency for raising money. You can actually pray money from the pockets of your people into the kingdom.

The Boys Bible Class was the subject of an address by Mr. Friend E. Hoyt, director of boys work of the Y. M. C. A., Jacksonville. Mr. Hoyt declared that the boy problem is not the problem of the boy but of the adult. It should not be "Go and do," but come and do with us.

Too much time is often spent in telling the boy what not to do until he comes to feel that his own name is Johnnie Dunt. The boy is naturally religious but his religion is of a kind that most people do not understand.

The adolescent boy—the boy in his teens—needs male leadership. The teacher of the boys' class in Sunday school should be a man. Sometimes, however, a woman who understands boys is equally good. The men must respond to this call of the boy.

Mr. Hoyt gave much advice as to the treatment of boys. Whatever you tell him, and so far as you do tell him, be sure that you tell him the truth. Untruthfulness from the adult to the boy is a very large cause of his going wrong. The boy must be trusted. Trust him and he will respond and can be led right. Don't be surprised if the boy prefers a game at home to going to church. If the boy does prefer a prayer meeting to a game of ball there is something the matter with that boy. Take care of the boys. There is no stock that the American people have been dealing in that is so grossly neglected as the coming generation.

A large audience gathered at the Methodist church at night to listen to Mr. Frank F. Fitch on "The Bible in Action." For nearly an hour Mr. Fitch held his audience while he showed the power that lies in the Word of God and the influence it has had and still has in the world.

He discussed the power of the Bible on the literature of the world in contrast with the literatures of Greece and Rome and other nations and how it has dominated the writers of modern times. "There is but one book," said Sir Walter Scott in his last days.

The Bible has shown its power upon the enemies of Christ, as witness Celsus and Julian, emperors of Rome, and Tom Paine, Strauss, Gibbon and Renan in later days. This book is alive and as some one has said, if you cut these words they will bleed.

The greatest power of the Bible is shown in its influence upon its friends. When Stanley went to Africa in search of Livingstone in his baggage was 118 pounds of books. As disease and death took off the burden bearers of the party they were obliged to throw away portions of their baggage. Among the things to go were the books, until all had been thrown away except one book which went with Stanley through all the wanderings of the Dark Continent—the Bible.

God speaks to us through the book and in two great messages: First, you are a sinner, and second, "Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow." We are lost if Christ is not our Savior. Dead libraries are all around us, but the Bible lives on.

Meetings of Tuesday

The afternoon program is being carried through in the Episcopal church. Tonight the address will be given by Rev. George Loring Hanscom, D. D., who has just left the Jacksonville Congregational church for the Central Congregational church of Atlanta, Ga. His subject is "Individual Evangelism." On Wednesday night Mr. Marcus C. Fagg speaks again at the Congregational church on "Social Service." On the afternoon of that day much time will be spent by the team in giving practical suggestions as to the work of the Men and Religion Movement as applied to Sanford.

Has Nice Crop

Henry Allen came to Sanford last fall and purchased five acres of land near Monroe from the Title Bond & Guarantee Co. The land was new but Mr. Allen put the elbow grease into his work, built a house for himself and several for other people and now he has a nice crop of cucumbers and tomatoes and expects to make good. Sanford suits him all right.

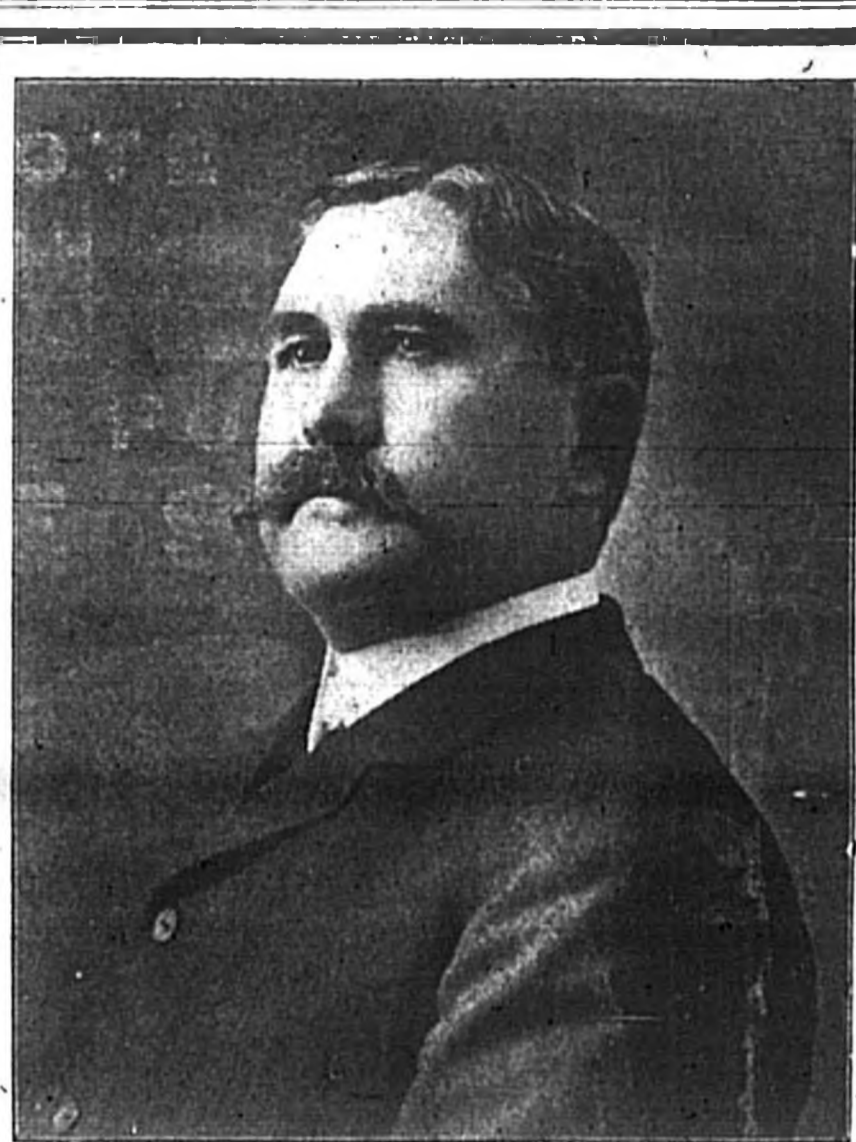

Every member of the chorus, which is practicing for the concert to be given on the 22nd, are urged to be present at the practice at Comfort Cottage, Saturday afternoon, at 7 o'clock sharp.

Rev. J. M. Bass

A few days ago we heard one of the city's most prominent men make the statement that Forsyth was one of the most moral places he knew, that should a moral inventory be taken of our people, Forsyth would be found to rank high among the cities of Georgia, but that Forsyth was not religious. Some of you who see our people only on Sunday when they occupy a high place in the church and give voice to loud and long "Amen's" will perhaps take him to task for this statement; but those who are "on the inside," who know how hard it is to get the men to do any church work during the week, realize its truthfulness. The people are not irreligious, but are unreligious, and these meetings are bringing them to a realization of this fact and the people are thinking.

If you haven't been to the meetings, you've failed to render yourself and your town a service and you've failed to do your part towards bringing about an improved condition in your community. These meetings mean much to your City, much to your Churches, much to the individual church members and still more to those who are members of no church and if you haven't been you've neglected a glorious opportunity.—Editorial from Monroe, Ga., Advertiser. Coming to Sanford May 28th.

WHY MAKE A CHANGE?

SEEMED TO NEED A DOCTOR

Varied Ailments of the Somewhat Afflicted Family as Catalogued by the Mother.

"Yes, Doc," said the mother of a family of nine to the young doctor who had ridden 16 miles into the backwoods in the dead of night, "we are a somewhat afflicted family, an' as home doctorin' don't seem to do no good, I thought I'd send for you an' see if you could straighten us out. Janey here, she's got something wrong with her bronchial tubes so she don't breathe like she should. I been keepin' a rag spread with goose grease an' sprinkled with red pepper an' mustard on her front chest, but it seems to add to her agny. Jake, he's got a misery all up an' down his spinal bone, an' I been usin' kerosene both external an' internal; but it ain't done him no good. Lizzie Belle, she's about ready to give up with plum-bago, an' her sister Nancy has been feelin' mean for a week. I think that it's skilatic roomatis that ails Nancy, but she's afraid it's the new disease they calls appendeshetus. The old man has been terrible allmy for some days, an' Rube, our oldest boy, is all broke out with a rash that shows his blood ain't all right. He had a terrible spell las' night, an' I thought he was in for cholery infantum. He's had it off an' on ever since he was 16 years old. I reckoned he'd outgrown it, but it grabs him as hard now that he's 24 as it did when he was younger. Wish, Doc, that you'd just turn yourself loose an' see if you kin sort o' straighten us out."—Judge.

To Open a Book.
How do you open a new book? In the natural, ordinary way you will tell yourself. No matter how you do it, this is the right way, and for the benefit of those who want to know as well as for the sake of prolonging the life of the book the "printed directions" would be well placed if they accompanied every new publication. Lay the book back downward on a table or smooth surface. Press the front cover down until it touches the table, then the back cover, holding the leaves in one hand while you open and turn back a few of the leaves at the front, then at the back alternately, pressing them down gently until you reach the center of the volume. This process should be gone through with several times. A new book should never be opened violently and the covers bent back as this method is liable not only to break the back, but loosen the leaves.

Cure for a Stiff Neck.

A simple exercise for the cure of a stiff neck is as follows: Turn the head slowly to the right as far as it will go, then to the left, and then repeat the movements half a dozen (or more) times consecutively three or four times a day. Another gymnastic for a similar purpose is in this way: Let the chin sink on to the chest, then roll the head gently to the right, then swing it around gradually until it has formed a complete circle and returns to its original position. This loosens the muscles of the neck and should remove all stiffness. The shoulders may be elevated slightly to meet the chin in its travels. Rubbing the muscles right and left of the neck with firm, vigorous strokes will also help considerably to do away with the discomfort of a stiff neck—so often caused through sitting in a drafty car or room.

Timelessness of Rome.

Few of us ever ask ourselves where in the eternity of Rome consists. It does not consist in a physical eternity, for Rome was not without beginning and she shall surely not be without end. It is rather a philosophical eternity. It is eternity as Kant has taught it to us, the eternity of timelessness. It is the timelessness of Rome, rather than the actual extent of time which makes the eternal, and this timelessness shows itself in nothing more clearly than in Rome's eternal youth. She who today might well be an old lady with her three thousand winters, is only the incorporation of young Italy, this modern young woman, with her head full of socialistic theories and her garments ornamented with the gridiron pattern of tramways.—Jesse Benedict Carter, in the Atlantic.

Building for Archives.

In other countries, notably Great Britain and France, the national archives are most carefully kept. But we need not go abroad for inspiration as to the proper manner of handling documents. The thousands who daily frequent the numerous public libraries throughout the United States must realize the importance of having accurate and authentic information "on tap." All of them must at some time or other have studied the history of their country, which of necessity is based largely upon national documents. This demand, therefore, for the construction of a national archive building is neither more nor less than a plea for the preservation of American history.

New One on Venus.

Mary, an older sister, had spent the morning shopping in town. Among her purchases was a square of dark red velvet which she intended to use as a background for a beautiful little statue of Venus de Milo, which had recently been presented to her. Just as she had temporarily fastened the velvet on the wall back of the Venus, her small brother Bobby, aged 5, walked into her room. "Well, Bobby," said Mary, "how do you like my Venus de Milo? Would you leave the velvet there?" Bobby looked thoughtful for a moment or so and then replied, "No, Mary, I wouldn't. I'd take it down and wrap it around her!"—Lippincott's.

Czarina's View of Education.

According to the czarina, Russia's troubles are due to the education of women. All girls, says she, should be taught to sew, to care for their homes and to become helpful wives and good mothers, but they should never be taught history, philosophy or science, "because these studies, when offered to women, only result in such terrible times as Russia is now passing through."

Dr. J. G. Venable, one of the visiting "team" of the Men and Religion Forward Movement Campaign, arrived from Jacksonville, Monday afternoon. He meets some of the men of Sanford at a luncheon given this evening at the Robin's Nest.

Mr. George E. Moody, head of the visiting "team" of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, has been obliged to give up his part of the work for a time. He went to bed after that powerful address on Sunday, and was too ill to take part in the program on Monday; but is much improved today.

Hon. M. F. Robinson and daughter, Mrs. Papworth, of Sanford, passed through Orange City Saturday for the day's trip to the beach. In their six-cylinder Everett, taking with them Miss Katie Kepler, of Winnemassett, and guest, Mrs. R. L. Hammond, of Iron Mountain, Michigan. They spent the afternoon on the fine Daytona and Ormond Beach, making a 50-mile spin up and down the most beautiful beach in America. They returned that night all going direct to Sanford, reaching there about 11 o'clock. Sunday they visited Matland Winter Park, and Orlando. Mr. Robinson returning to Deland with Miss Kepler and Mrs. Robinson Monday, the latter reporting the most pleasant trip that they have had for many a day. De Land Record.

One and two horse wagons with celery flared side bodies at Underwood's, fri-7-1f. Home-like and good accommodations at Stumson's, 117 E. Fourth street.

Base Ball Thursday. Kissimmee and Sanford will play at Hadden Park next Thursday. Every one come out and help the gate receipts. Both teams have been putting up a good article. Yucatan Water Caverns. Since Yucatan where the Mayas built their strange cities, is of coral limestone formation it follows that it would have been a desert but for its water caverns, which give access to them. The Mayas noted the course of the water and stored it in earthenware cisterns and the caverns. Many caverns are now found surrounded by ruins and give indication of the methods employed by the Mayas to reach their cool waters. In Uxmal a cavern about 40 feet deep is inhabited by a peculiar species of fish. At Bolanchen there is a cavern having five openings in the rocks at the bottom of the cavern. Ladders made by tying tree trunks together lead down a total distance of 1400 feet, but the perpendicular depth from the surface to the water is not more than 100 feet. Harper's Weekly.

Olympian Holdup. Mrs. Ed. L. Leland, who was visiting in Sanford, was held up by a man and he cried, "What become of that hat?" Perhaps I've took it when he went out for a smoke," suggested Mrs. Leland. "Nothing of the sort," snarled Mrs. Leland. "The old man wears a size 8 hat. That steel box of mine would break his neck, where is my hat?" At that moment Ganymede in a brand new suit, who was seen accompanying Mrs. Leland, stepped forward and said, "I saw the man who held up Mrs. Leland at 11 o'clock and then, at the helmet of the 'impending thunderbolts' he roared, 'Has the hat tip-trust reach of Olympus?' And rudely flinging a silver skeppollan at the boy he snatched away the helmet and went clattering down the hill." Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Never Speak Again. A man who has been speaking in the streets of the city for the past few days, has been seen on record. He had a speech which was a mixture of speech and gibberish in his place with a very bald head, known too at he was to everybody as one of the oldest stagers in all the ways of the world. He began with great affection of inexpressible and with an exceedingly mild voice. Mr. Speaker, I am but a young member. On hearing this assertion from so crafty a man, possessing so venerable a pate, the entire house roared with laughter. Twice he stopped and three times he compensated with these words but it was useless. The house would not listen and he never assayed to speak again. London Chronicle.

Didn't Get Even the Brick. "Did that man hand you a gold brick?" "I should say not," answered the amateur financier, "he sold me an interest in the gold brick on credit and took a mortgage on that together with everything else I owned. Then he called the loan and foreclosed the mortgage and took possession of the gold brick along with the rest."

Registered in Churches. One of the strangest things in connection with the recent registration in Los Angeles is that many of the registrations were made in the churches. Women attending prayer meetings were approached and if they had not registered they were asked to do so. As nearly 75,000 women are on the registration books, it does not look as though they objected to voting.

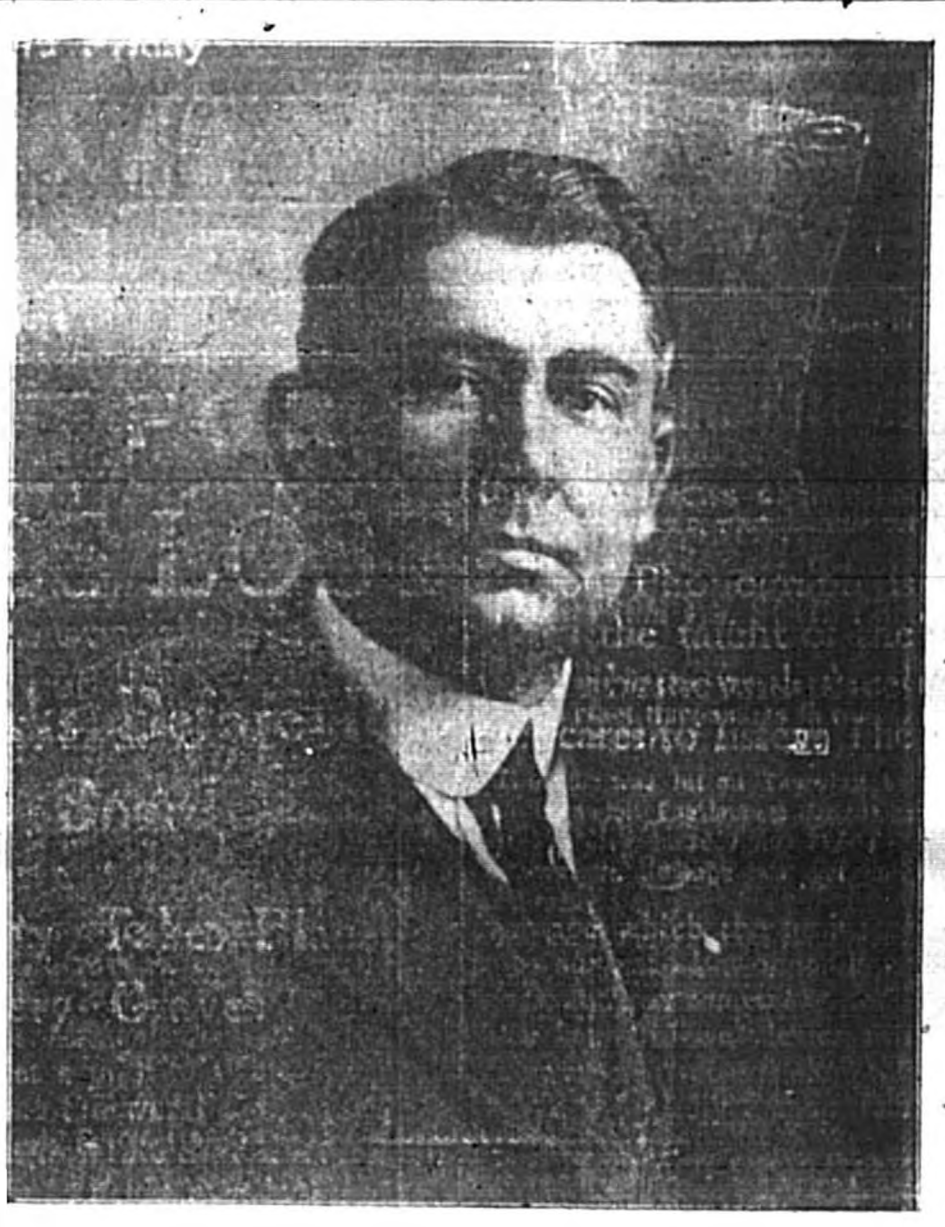

Animals That Count. There are human beings, such as inhabitants of the Murray Islands in the Straits of Torres, that cannot count further than two. But, most surprising still, most animals possess calculating abilities, and several have a distinct appreciation of number. In certain mines of Hainault the horses are so used to traversing the same road thirty times that after their last round they go to the stable of their own accord and refuse to take another step. Montaigne says that the oxen employed in the royal gardens of Susa for turning the wheels to which the water falls were attached absolutely refused to make more than 100 rounds, which constituted their daily task. Exchange.

Growing Young. Age has its beauty as well as youth, and we should all study the art of growing old gracefully, that we may be loved to the last by those who love us. On the stage of life we have our part to play. It would seem that religion has taught us better things than Socialism and helped us to bear and forbear. There is a great bitterness in the discovery that the treasures worshipped in our youth are at best but clay-footed idols; yet, if we cultivate a gentle philosophy we may be able to forget that the years, as they go, are stealing many of our best illusions. Exchange.

Plan Thought Out by a Mother. In the Woman's Home Companion there is what is called "The Exchange." It is a department of practical household news sent in by readers from various parts of the country. Following is a suggestion sent in by a mother in Michigan: "I buy the sweaters for my children the same color, and when the sleeves have given out, as they always do long before the body of the garment, I make new sleeves of the whole part of one sweater for the other one."

Miss Ellen Stone has returned to Turkey. Probably wants to be captured by those bold, bad bandits again.

In a mock court trial at Tallahassee yesterday Miss Clem Hampton sued Governor Gilchrist for breach of promise. Probably had Sheats and Holloway for witnesses.

Wayne Thomas, editor of the Plant City Courier is a candidate for delegate to the Democratic Convention, and while not in this district The Herald cannot help but wish Bro. Thomas good luck, even though he is a Wilson man. The newspaper men will make good delegates and they are all good Democrats.

Gov. Gilchrist says Florida land interests have been damaged millions by the investigation as to who suppressed a certain report regarding the feasibility of the Everglades. It may have prevented swindling land sharks from further robbing the people, but no legitimate land proposition will be injured in the long run. On the contrary, all lands in the State that are cultivable will be enhanced in value, for people in other States will learn that land sharks are not permitted to carry on their swindling games in Florida without being exposed, and confidence will once more be restored. Publicity never injures any honest business.—Gainesville Sun

The Sanford Herald announces that W. J. Bryan will deliver an address in its city on a date during the last week of April, and it adds that he will make no other in the State during the trip. The Herald invites all the people of Florida to come along and join the crowd.—Lampa Times

As the Peerless is due in Miami on the twenty-ninth, where he will deliver a lecture and probably buy a winter home, we insist on the Sanford Herald coming along down here. The trip would make bright copy for many a day.—Miami Metropolis

If you think we could win a home by coming to Miami send the transportation

Five inches of snow and a blizzard in New York State April 5th. For Mississippi valley a great lake with millions of dollars worth of property destroyed and making it practically impossible to plant during 1912. But Florida goes smilingly on, basking in the sunshine of Spring. The Spring planting done the potato crop is now being harvested. Our markets are well supplied with celery, lettuce, tomatoes, beets, carrots, turnips, rutabagas, cabbage, cucumbers, strawberries, blackberries, etc. Soon the delicious cantaloupe and watermelon will be here. How about these two pictures? Will you buy a home in Florida or remain where the snow falls in April and the rivers wash away the earnings of a lifetime.—Laft Measenger

GROWING ALFALFA IN FLORIDA

A few years ago few people knew that fodder could be raised in Florida. Hay, oats and corn were all shipped in for feed for horses and cattle. Now all of these crops are grown in abundance in the state.

Within the past two years alfalfa has been grown with marked success in several parts of the state. Fred R. Allen, a prominent citizen of St. Augustine, has raised several crops of the finest alfalfa ever seen anywhere, the stocks growing to a height of eighteen inches. At Kissimmee and other places there have been similar successes. It will be tried out at Pinellas Park this summer.—St. Petersburg Times

Alfalfa could be grown at Sanford and the man who makes the experiment will not only profit by the same but will be a public benefactor as well.

Announcement For The State Legislature

Having decided to enter the race for the legislature, I desire to make a statement to the people of Orange county of my reasons for so doing. Heretofore in making an announcement for this honor I have not pretended to do so because of any very strong solicitations.—In fact I had almost concluded that this urgent solicitation claim was rather mythical, and largely due to the fact that the would-be recipient of the same made known the fact that he was anxious to be solicited. However, I am going to offer, as a partial excuse at least, for my appearance at this time as a candidate for the legislature that, without saying a word about it myself, I have actually been solicited to run.

I used to be somewhat of a conservative in politics, but with the ever changing times, and without changing very much myself, I now find that, were I to express an opinion on most of the issues of the day, I would be classed as a radical, or more 'conservatively' speaking, a progressive in politics.

As soon as I entered this campaign it was my desire to go before the people and discuss such subjects as might interest them. With this object in view I addressed a letter on April 4th to each one of the other candidates for this honor, stating that I should like to arrange for a joint speaking campaign in different parts of the county. Without going into further details, I will state that the Hon. Forrest Lake of Sanford, and Hon. S. A. Robinson of Orlando declined to enter a joint campaign, and Mr. Geo. Fox, Jr., of Sanford expressed his desire to enter such a campaign.

I believe that it is not only the duty of aspirants for this position to go before the people and make known their position on any question in which they may be interested, but believe that it is also the duty of the people to insist on this being done; and, having this view of the matter, I want to state as briefly as possible a few of the things that the people would like to know about—and if opportunity offers I hope to meet some of the people later, and discuss from the platform some of the same questions as well as other questions.

I believe that the people of this state want our convict leasing system abolished, and I shall do what I can for the abolition of this system at the expiration of existing contracts.

It is needless for me to say I have always favored the primary system of selecting officers, but I think that it can be very much improved by cutting down the expense, and if possible eliminating a second primary. I believe that the primary system has come to stay and that the people having now tried it will not agree to give it up. It certainly cannot be assailed as un-Democratic in principle. I will admit that it is not impossible for the interests to win in a fight before the whole people. A bribed minority enslaved to graft, vice and drink are the evils of present day politics, but it is more difficult to control thousands than simply a legislature or a convention. Our duty is plain—we have simply to try to break their hold upon this enslaved minority. If it becomes necessary to break up a gambling business which is demoralizing not only to our leading citizens, but to the whole state, under the pretense of horse racing or, if needs be, clean out the saloons from that city or state. I have burned the bridges behind me, and my record stands clear.

Now, if there are any other questions that the people would like to know about, will state that I will be pleased to answer them at any time and in any manner, but I will further state that in common fairness you should also ask my opponents the same questions you may wish to propound to me. Trusting to have your support, I am, very truly,

In Memoriam

In memory of Thomas Arthur Newton, Junior.

On Easter Sunday while all the world was celebrating the Resurrection, little Thomas Arthur Newton, Jr. arose from this world of pain and sorrow, and went to be with Him who said "Suffer the children to come unto me for such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

"Little Junior," as he was fondly called, was born July the 20th, 1910. He had known what it was to suffer during his short life. The flower of Hope had just begun to flourish in the hearts of those who loved him, that he might be spared to make glad the home; when he was called away.

There will be many who will miss his bright little face,—for, all who knew him loved him.

Many were the beautiful floral offerings sent, and his little grave was a mound of flowers. His little body was laid to rest Monday, at 10 o'clock a. m. in Lakeview Cemetery.

We commend the sorrowing family to the Only One who can comfort them and sustain them.

God, in Love, have recalled The boon his Love had given, Though the Memory lingers here, The Soul is safe in Heaven.

Was a Soldier of Fortune

Organizer Messenger, who is here in the interests of the Order of Moose is an interesting character. He has been in almost every country of the globe, having been trumpeter in the English army for years and took part in many engagements while following the English flag that encircles the globe.

LAND SHARKS AFTER CLARK

Fakirs Will Use Corruption Fund to Defeat Congressmen

To the Democratic Voters of the Second District: I have never opposed the drainage of the Everglades as a work of internal improvement. I have opposed, am now opposing and intend to continue to oppose the fraudulent exploitation of the Everglades by some conscienceless "land sharks" who are robbing thousands of innocent and poor people all over this country and bringing discredit and disgrace to the State of Florida.

I have not charged that all persons operating in the Everglades are operating fraudulently. I have said that quite a number of them are fraudulently operating; that they are procuring money under false pretences and that their nefarious conduct and unholy practices, in addition to depriving thousands of poor people of their hard-earned savings, is proving more injurious to the State of Florida than all the fires, freezes and epidemics with which she has ever been afflicted. These things I have established by indisputable testimony.

It is natural that these "sharks" should seek to defeat me. They are flooding the district with dirty, scurrilous, lying literature about me. They have raised an enormous corruption fund with which to accomplish my defeat. Any enemy of mine who desires to circulate any old story about me can do so without a penny of cost, as these "sharks" will gladly pay the bill.

You need be surprised at nothing you see in print about me between now and the primary. To make good their claims that I am injuring the State they will manufacture and publish letters purporting to come from persons, firms and corporations in other states to the effect that the writers were just on the eve of investing large sums in the State when I made my speech in Congress, and that I knocked it all out. These letters will all be bogus, but they expect to fool some people with them.

To understand how unscrupulous they are, just let me call your attention to what one of them said to Mr. Arthur B. Brown, editor of the Fort Pierce News, just a few days ago. Mr. Brown says he asked this man why "they did not confine themselves to the truth in their fight against Clark," and this man replied that it was good campaign dope, that he "seemed to justify the use of anything that would prove detrimental to Clark." Mr. Brown further says that this man "intimated that they were out to win by any means available," and that this man added, "We want a man in Congress who is favorable to our interests."

These corrupt and dishonest "land sharks" want a man in Congress who is favorable to their interests. What do you think of this? What candidate is favorable to our land shark's interests?

Let me give you another instance of the scandalous and untruthful methods being used against me. Probably you have seen a document which makes a vicious and untruthful attack upon me and which it is boldly proclaimed, contains the names of "one hundred and one citizens of Fort Lauderdale." One man who is attacking me describes them as one hundred and one of the "best" citizens of Fort Lauderdale. I procured an absolutely correct and up-to-date list of the qualified voters of the Fort Lauderdale precinct, and had that celebrated "one hundred and one" carefully compared with the qualified list, and it was found that only one of the "one hundred and one" was a qualified voter of Fort Lauderdale precinct. And so it goes. I do not know whether the "one hundred and one" are myths, "land sharks," hoboes or what not, but they are not qualified voters of Fort Lauderdale precinct.

Honest real estate dealing is on trial in Florida. The honor of the State is at stake. One of the victims of these "sharks" will do the State more harm than one hundred new comers who are satisfied, will do good. I am standing for the protection of the poor and innocent against the machinations of these apostles of fraud, and for the preservation of the good name of our beloved State.

Yours respectfully, FRANK CLARK

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Richard Lightnut, an American with an affected English accent, receives a present from a friend in China.

CHAPTER II.—The present proves to be a pair of pajamas. A letter hints of surprise to the wearer.

CHAPTER III.—Lightnut dons the pajamas and late at night gets up for a smoke. His servant, Jenkins, comes in and, calling to recognize Lightnut, attempts to put him out. Thinking the servant crazy, Lightnut changes his clothes intending to summon help. When he reappears Jenkins falls on his neck with joy, confirming Lightnut's belief that he is crazy.

CHAPTER IV.—Jenkins tells Lightnut of the encounter he had with a hideous Chinaman dressed in pajamas.

CHAPTER V.—In a message from his friend Jack Billings, Lightnut is asked to put up "the kid" for the night on his way home from college. Later Lightnut finds a beautiful girl in black pajamas in his room.

CHAPTER VI.—Lightnut is shocked by the girl's drinking, smoking and slangy talk.

CHAPTER VII.—She tells him her name is Frances and puzzles him with a story of her love for her sister's roommate, named Francis. Next morning the girl is missing and Lightnut hurries to the boat to see her off. He is accosted by a husky college boy, who calls him "Dicky," but he does not see the girl.

CHAPTER VIII.—Jack Billings calls to spend the night with Lightnut. They discover priceless rubies hidden in the pockets of the pajamas.

CHAPTER IX.—Billings dons the pajamas and retires.

CHAPTER X.—Lightnut later finds a note in his apartment, a leafy pencil and a tin-chop whiskers and writing pajamas. Jenkins calls the police, who declare the intruder to be a criminal called "Dicky Grandpa."

CHAPTER XI.—The intruder declares he is Lightnut's guest and appeals to the latter in vain.

CHAPTER XII.—He is hustled off to jail.

CHAPTER XIII.—In the morning Lightnut is astonished to find Billings gone and more astonished when he gets a message from the latter demanding his clothes. Lightnut finds for Francis, Billings a home, discovers Frances, the girl of the pajamas, in the room.

CHAPTER XIV.—Lightnut speaks to her and alludes to the night before. She declares indignantly that Lightnut never saw her in black pajamas. At last Francis is met by a husky college boy who calls her "Lightnut's girl." She is so frightened she ignores the boy and she attempts to thrash him for off-lying Frances. Lightnut takes the next train home.

red with vermillion. "And what a more my name is not Dicky."

His hand slowly swept his chin and he whistled.

"Wha— Well, I'll be jiggered!" he whirled toward the car.

"On me, this time, I guess! You're right!"

Then his face clouded and he moved down upon me.

"Here, you get along now about your business, whoever you are!" His hand waved as though sweeping me away. "I've a mind to klick you for annoying that young lady."

He looked toward Frances and I could see he was showing off. But I thought she looked a bit disgusted.

As for the frump, she suddenly opened the door, stepped down and then up again, but this time behind the steering wheel.

"If you don't come on, I'm going," she said quietly.

"Just a minute," he said scowling back at her. He faced me.

"Look here, if I bit you once"—he leveled his finger—"well, they'll have to pick you up with a sponge, that's all!"

But, except for fixing my glass for a better study of Frances, I never moved. Didn't occur to me as necessary, you know, until she should drive off. Just stood leaning on my cane and with feet crossed, you know. In the way I had long ago found was the least exhausting, if one has to stand at all. But, by Jove, the fellow was right in my face now, almost! Devilish annoying!

"Did you hear me, you glass-eyed fool?" he barked in my ear. "You masher! By George, I'll mash you!"

And he looked at Frances again and laughed, but she was looking away off up at the big stone castle on the Pocantico Hills behind. And I just reveled in her glorious profile, splashed bright by the golden sunshine reflected from the Tappan Zoo opposite. Incidentally, I was trying in my mind the three arm movements that must be made as one, and for which, to learn, I had paid the great master, Galliard of Paris, a thousand francs in gold.

The car began to edge away.

"All right—coming!" he yelled; and then he launched his blow. But so rapid—instantaneous, in fact—are the famous three movements of the great scientist, I don't remember that my eye even shifted its grip upon the monocle. Therefore, as I came back into the same position again—as his shoulder hit the ground, I was in time to catch my darling's eye at last just and dusty and wrinkled as they were. But you see, on account of the rubies, I was leary about having them pressed or fussed over. So I wrapped and sealed them myself just as one does a jewel package. "Got them, did you?" I stared at Billings through my glass.

"Didn't you get them?" he questioned in alarm.

"Yes, yes—it's all right, old chap," I said hastily and as pleasantly as I could. Eugene delivered the box to Jenkins and I opened it myself.

Thought it was—him thought it was something else. Then I proceeded soothingly. But you're just a little mistaken about the dust and wrinkles, old chap—and about them being torn. Ha, ha! Good jokes!"

But Billings' face was unresponsive.

"Why, old goat," he said with cheerful contempt, "there's a triangular tear in the back of the coat you could stick your head through, and one of the sleeves is in ribbons."

I just opened the drawer of the table and took out the box—glove box, I think it was—containing the pajamas. I had read something somewhere about the clearing effect—the reaction, and that sort of thing, produced sometimes by a shock.

"See for yourself, old chap," I said gently. And I lifted out the gossamer fabric and again spread their crimson glory under the lamp. Billings examined them eagerly, but just looked confounded.

"Don't understand it," he said, biting his nails. Why hang it (they look smooth, too, as though never worn).

And the rubies are all right, too."

He rested his chin upon his hands and gloomed at the red swEEP.

I caught a few sentences of his mumbling.

By George, I'm half a mind to think there's something in the pajamas," he muttered—something un-canny and disagreeable something they're alive with!

I sprang up and back, overturning my chair.

"Good heavens, oh, I say!" I exclaimed in consternation as I fixed my glass on the garments. It's your jall, then, you know—"

And suddenly I made a discovery and I forgot about keeping still.

By Jove, Billings! I exclaimed excitedly. Here's something inside the collar, some sort of jolly writing!"

"What's that?" said Billings sharply. He jerked the garment from my hand and held it in the light. All round the circle within the collar band can four or five darker red lines of queer little cursive characters.

"Chinese laundry marks, you idiot," he commented carelessly. And then he ducked his head closer with a quick intake of breath.

By George, Dicky," he cried, his voice tremulous with some excitement. Can't be that either. It's woven in—awfully fine, neat job, too. Now, what do you suppose—"

He broke off wonderingly.

CHAPTER XV.

Billings' Symptoms Alarm Me.

"Most infernal outrage of the century, I tell you!" Billings stormed. For an hour I had sat there in my rooms, limp and bewildered under the tempest of his wrath. The wild and incoherent sputter over the phone that Jenkins reported upon my return had sent me on a hunt for my friend I had found him suddenly dining alone over at the club, and as soon as I entered he started to bolt from the room. Only through the greatest pleading had I managed to coax him back to my chambers, hoping I might screw out of him some explanation.

I had received it by Jove!

Of course, I recognized it all as impossible and crazy, you know, but when I said so to Billings his remark was so violent, and he turned such a dangerous apoplectic purple dashed if I didn't renege.

But then the old man, you know! I protested weakly.

Billings leveled his big arm at me, mouthing wordlessly for a minute.

That that'll do about that old man he choked at last. Not not another word about him!" And finally he collapsed into his seat. From sheer exhaustion. Just sat there panting and glaring at me like a jolly bulldog.

gradually he became calmer.

Tell you what, the only thing that lets you out, Dicky, in the way Van Dyne and Blakesley did, in turn when I got them there.

He spoke savagely but I brightened a little.

"Oh," I said. Didn't they recognize you either?"

Billings snort made me jump.

Recognize," he bellowed. They went back mad as hell!

By Jove," I said soothingly.

"That's not all," continued Billings grimly. "I was so sure it was a put-up job, some ashline fool joke, I wrote a cautious note to the governor. After a lot of pleading I got the fools to send it. He came."

Billings passed dramatically.

Oh, yes, he came. He went on bating me with an excited eye. And when I staggered forward and did the prodigious son act on his neck, he handed me a punch that jolted off his skull. Went straight up in the air with the whole bunch down there and contracted to do things for them that will keep them active for a year. Threatened to have me sent up for forgery.

This is my own father now, mind you, forgery of my own name! Ha-ha!"

Billings strode to the end of the room and back. Then he sat down again, beating with his foot upon the floor.

They were pretty nasty after that. Billings went on gloomily, and they wouldn't send for any one else. Just had to all there in that infernal battle with nothing on but pajamas and a pair of bedroom slippers. Every once in a while somebody would come and address me as 'Fozy,' and want me to send for my clothes or else send out and buy some. Finally, a big brute came and threw me some dirty rags and said I'd have to put on those or else buy some others.

"And I had just got into the toga and stuffed the rubies and pajamas out of sight in my pocket, when the particular brigand who had charge of my coop came back. He almost threw a fit when he saw me. 'Where's Twenty-seven?' he wanted to know. And then, before I could say a word, he blustered up to me with 'And say, what business you got in here? Clear out!' And you bet I didn't lose a single golden minute—I cleared. You should have seen me beat it down that corridor! The fellow followed me a little, grumbling to himself. Then he called to a cop who was just coming in: 'Say, O'Keefe, run that young fat freak out of here, will you? It's one of that bunch of visitors that went through just now. Fresh thing—snooping into the cells!'"

"And so the same cop that brought me there—the very same—was the one that shoved me out of the door, warning me that I'd beat not go poking into the prisoners' cells again if I knew what was good for me!"

"By the way, old chap," puffed Billings, his poised and good humor improving under the spell of a cigar, "I was sorry to return the pajamas torn

CHAPTER XVI.

An Inscription and a Mystery.

Billings rubbed his chin perplexed.

By Jigger, now, I wonder what those hen tracks mean?" he uttered musingly. Then he looked up at me with sudden animation in his face.

"Look here, Dicky," he exclaimed, "do you happen to know Doosenberry?"

I tried to remember. I shut one eye and studied the marks closely through my glass but had to shake my head at last.

"Why, man, he's a member of all the great societies of the world. Got a string of letters after his name like a universal keyboard, and in the main squeeze, the great scream, among all the scientific push over here and in Europe. Lots of dough, but off his trolley with learning."

"And in this building?" I said wonderingly. "What's he like?"

"Awfully large head," said Billings, elevating his hands some two feet apart, "pear-shaped affair—big end up—bumps on it like halves of grape fruit, porcupine eyebrows, and—"

"Oh, I know," I said, nodding eagerly, "and a little, shriveled—well, kind of mashed sort of face, eyes beadlike and jolly small. I've got him now! I've gone down with him in the elevator."

Billings nodded. "You've got him painted," he said drily. "That's the professor, only, his eyes are anything but jolly. I've ridden in the elevator with him myself. Always manages to look like he was traveling with a bad smell!"

"Devilish sensitive, I dare say."

Billings looked at me suspiciously, but I had got hold of the thing I was trying to recollect and I went on quickly:

"By Jove, you know, I believe Jenkins knows his man—fellow who butlers, and, I believe, cooks, for him. He and Jenkins belong to the same—how do they call it?—same club of gentlemen's gentlemen."

Billings brought his flat down. "Let's have Jenkins in," he suggested. And we did.

"I say, Jenkins," I began, "this Professor Doodlebug above us—"

"Doosenberry!" Billings sharply corrected.

"Well, some jolly rum thing about him, don't you know, Jenkins—something you said his man told you—remember, eh?"

"Why, sir, he told me that every night he had to turn down the professor's bed and go all over it with a two-gallon watering can—"

"Watering can!" gasped Billings. "I'm telling you what he says, sir. Then he covers it all up again, and in about a half-hour the professor turns the covers down; and if it's what he calls 'fine'—that is, damp all over—he climbs in and sleeps like a top."

"Cold-water bag, you know," I explained, but Billings shrugged his shoulders.

"That's all right. Bug or not, he's the goods, all the same. Greatest ever." He spoke with quiet conviction.

He deliberated a moment and turned to me.

"Tell you what, Dicky: I'm going up and ask him down. He's the one to give us the right dope on these crazy letters—Eh, what you say, Jenkins?"

"Beg pardon, sir; I was saying that the professor don't visit nobody; and he never sees nobody but the big H'r'y and scientific sharps."

"Oh, he don't, eh?" Billings snorted contemptuously. "Well, Jenkins, I haven't been a prize fisherman in my time for nothing; I guess I know how to select my 'fy.' I know what will fetch him: Mr. Lightnut's compliments, and will be pleased to honor him by passing upon an Oriental curio of rare scientific interest—that sort of merry rot! Why, you couldn't hold him back with a block and tackle. Oh, you needn't worry; I'll do the proper curves all right." He turned toward the door. "And, Jenkins, you come along and work me into the lodge."

CHAPTER XVII.

The Professor.

Billings ushered in the professor with a flourishing introduction.

The great man never spoke, but gave me the end of one finger, and devilish grudgingly at that. He just came to anchor and stood there very straight and stiff, ignoring the chairs thrust toward him from every point. One hand was stuck in his stiff broadcloth bosom, with elbow pointing outward, and his great topheavy head reared above us impressively.

I addressed the professor hospitably: "Ah! won't you sit down, professor?"

He drew back, frowning. "Sit down, sir?" he questioned. And, by Jove, by this time he showed his teeth. And devilish white, even teeth they were, too, only they didn't fit.

"I never sit down, sir," he said stiffly; "Never!"

"By Jove!" I explained.

"To be sure!" ejaculated Billings, looking extremely silly.

The professor appeared not ungratified with the sensation he had produced and condescended to smile; that is, if you can call a creasing and wrinkling like the cracked end of a hard-boiled egg a smile.

"You say, 'sit down,' sir," he said, addressing me. "I ask you, in turn: Is not 'sitting down' recrudescence back to the primordial?"

So saying, he took a pinch at my shirt front and stepped back again impressively.

Then his great head shot forward in front of his rigid neck—so suddenly, by Jove, that I reached out to try to catch it, don't you know. He made just two strides to the table, ten feet away, and pounced upon the pajamas with obviously trembling hands.

And behind his back Billings relapsed into an arm-chair and fanned himself with a magazine.

The professor fumblingly sought through his pockets, and producing a pair of spectacles with phenomenally large lenses, adjusted them shakily.

He bent over the pajamas eagerly.

"Impossible! And yet, it is, it is!" he muttered. "I would know the weave among a thousand. It is hers undoubtedly, undoubtedly—the lost silk of Si-Ling-Chi! How comes it here?"

He glared around rather wildly at each of us in turn. Without waiting for a reply, he whisked back to the pajamas, and fishing out a thick magnifying lens, scrutinized the garments closely. It seemed that he would certainly nod his big head off its jolly hinge; and his quick side glances at Billings and myself, together with his growling and muttering, just reminded me of a dog with a bone, by Jove!

I stared at Billings and Billings stared at me, and then he slipped over to the divan upon which I dropped, completely exhausted, dash it, from standing so long.

"Whose did he say?" he whispered.

"Cells something," I answered.

"Dash it, I didn't catch her surname. Oh, I say, you know, this is awful!"

Out of the professor's mutterings we caught a random sentence.

"Found, found again," we heard him say. "Hers beyond peradventure of a doubt. I am not mistaken."

"Ah, gentlemen!" exclaimed the professor, coming back again, "what a thing this little Chinese woman did for civilization when she gave the world silk culture and invented the loom! No wonder the Chinese deified her as a goddess."

"Goddess!" Billings swallowed hard. "And did these—hm—garments belong to the lady?"

The professor frowned at him in surprise. "Garments?"

"Them," said Billings in devilish questionable grammar, pointing to the table. "They are pajamas, you know."

"Ha!" ejaculated the professor, holding them up. "So they are. You are very observing, sir, very. Now, I had not noticed that at all; I was so interested in the material itself—the wonderful silk of Si-Ling-Chi, gentlemen. Ha! Indeed a rare privilege!"

By Jove! He stroked the stuff lightly, tenderly—as one likes to do a little child's hair, don't you know.

"Beautiful, beautiful fabric," he sighed half to himself. "Only once before have I seen a piece of it—but it was enough; I could never, never forget." Something like a groan escaped him.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Spell of the Pajamas.

The professor suddenly faced us, holding up the pajamas with a gesture of inquiry.

"From a friend of Mr. Lightnut's in China," Billings explained. "H'm! In the neck, professor—I mean inside the collar," he said, approaching the table—"there's some kind of freak lettering. Looks foolish to me."

The professor looked perplexed.

"I mean, looks like it was done by some one who was batty—had wheels, you know, probably some chink whose biscuit was drifty," floundered Billings. "You understand?"

The professor didn't. I knew that jolly well by the way he cocked his head on one side, standing like a puzzled crow, don't you know.

"Ha! I fear I do not as I should," he said with an apologetic cough. "Perhaps I do not intelligently and logically follow your deductions because your premises are inscrutable until I have seen the lettering. Ah!"

Out came glasses and lens and he bent over the collar eagerly.

The professor's lips moved rapidly and his visage twisted into a horrible frown.

"Why, why—a—what!" With mouth open, and gripping the pajamas tightly, he glared at us each in turn.

"Oh, impossible!" he rasped harshly, seizing the lens and bending again. "Incredible—poof—absurd—tut, tut, what nonsense!"

The glass swept the lines rapidly. Suddenly, with a cry, the professor dropped the lens, a violent start almost lifting him from the floor.

"Ridiculous, I say! Poof!" He snapped his fingers. "Necromancy and thaumaturgy transmitted in pajamas! Absurd!"

"Piffle!" said Billings emphatically. "Don't know what they are," he whispered to me, "but I'll take a hundred-to-one shot on anything he says. The professor's a corker!"

"By Jove!" I remarked. "Perhaps Professor Huckleberry won't mind telling us—"

"What I think, gentlemen? What could I think but what I am sure is your own conclusion—though you have generously and considerately left me to form my own opinion—namely, that the claim of supernatural attributes of these garments is preposterous. Enchanted pajamas! Haunted pajamas! Poof! Nursery lore, children's fairy tales! Ghosts, gentlemen? Tut, tut—nonsense!"

He snorted indignantly.

"Ghosts!" faltered Billings.

"Oh, I say!" I rather gasped. "Dash me if it didn't give me a turn, rather!"

The professor shrugged his shoulders.

"What other interpretation is admissible, gentlemen?" he questioned somewhat peevishly, taking up the coat. "Here, we have the royal insignia of the cruel emperor, Kee, and we note that these garments were given some one in his court by the alleged sorcerer, Fuh-keen. Perhaps it was revenge—perhaps some court plot in which Fuh-keen, for reasons of his own, was an active participant; it is of no importance, that part of it. So much for the first line; but now we come—"

He paused to polish his spectacles.

"Tell me," he said more cheerfully, "do our free translations of the ideographs so far agree in essentials—eh?"

"Like as two peas!" Billings declared with manifest enthusiasm.

The professor looked gratified and bowed.

"Now we come to the second line, or, more strictly speaking, column," he said, straightening impressively. "Here we find the astonishing claim made that there will be a change or metamorphosis of any kind of animal life that these habiliments ensnroud. Um!"

The great man breathed heavily and batted at us over his glasses.

"Credat Judaeus apella—eh, gentlemen?" And he winked knowingly. "Dashed if he didn't almost catch me swallowing a yawn, too! For I hadn't any idea what he was talking about or driving at, and, by Jove, I did know I was getting devilish sleepy."

The professor waved his glasses. "Did you ever read such a childish, ridiculous, extravagant assertion?"

he demanded.

"Ass—eh? I should say so!" I worked this off indignantly.

"Tommyrot!" murmured Billings absently. He seemed thoughtful.

I was thoughtful, too—wondering, by Jove, whether the professor would go soon, so we could turn in and get the earlier start tomorrow up the river. But chiefly I was wondering wistfully if Frances would still be angry with me.

"Moreover," broke in the professor's voice as he turned again to the lettering, "to assert further that these will be a semblance—not actual, gentlemen, mind you, but an optical illusion—taking the form of some creature of the same kind that this silken tenebment has previously inclosed."

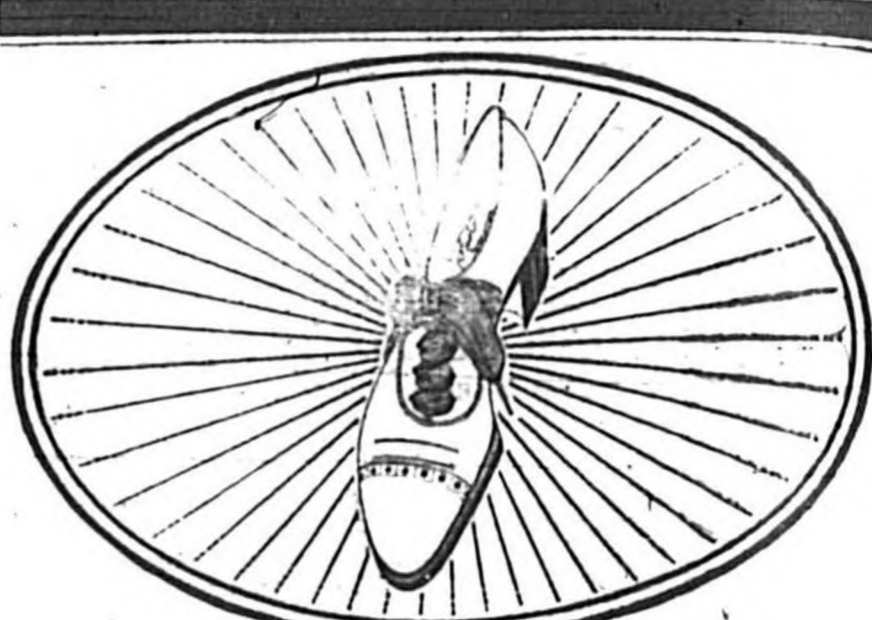

"In other words, gentlemen, if I were to don these garments, I might no longer look like myself, but like some one else who had worn them upon some previous occasion—perhaps last night—perhaps a thousand years ago. Eh? Is that what you understand?"

He ducked again over the letters and came up, looking chagrined.

"Moreover, I am forced to confess, gentlemen, that I fail to find a system—any rule governing these ridiculous transmutations. The hypothesis is, therefore, that the alleged materializations merely follow the arbitrary caprice of the magic." He shook his head. "Well, gentlemen, I—really, I must laugh!"

And he did! I hadn't caught the drift of what it was he thought he was laughing at—I got the words, but I was too dazed sleepy to get the sense. But I was awfully glad I understood this much—that what he was attempting now was a laugh. I never

VOTE FOR DONEGAN FOR STATE SENATOR

(From the Kissimmee, (Florida) Valley Gazette)

When the County of Osceola was created the late John Milton Bryan was the senator but at the next election Orange County furnished the senator and E. M. Hammond was elected. He was succeeded four years later by M. R. Marks of Orange County giving that County the senator for eight years. Mr. Hammond was succeeded by C. A. Carson, of Kissimmee who served for eight years and he was in turn succeeded by Louis C. Massey of Orlando, who has just completed his service for eight years. Then clearly if precedent is to be observed it is Osceola's time to have the senator again and in presenting the name of Arthur E. Donegan, the people of this county feel that they can assure the people of Orange County of a representative in the State Senate in every way the equal of any of those who have preceded him in service in that distinguished body.

Man Killed by Murderer

Bartow, April 14.—Frying to break through the cordons of armed men surrounding the swamp in which he had taken refuge, Sam Arthur, a negro murderer, was fatally shot this afternoon by Sheriff John Logan.

The crime for which the negro was being hunted was the murder about 10:30 this morning of C. M. McIntosh at the McIntosh Mill near Bowling Green. The negro Arthur quarreled with a negroess at the mill this morning and shot her, inflicting only a flesh wound.

Mr. McIntosh was sent for and ran to the cabin in which the shooting occurred and there the negro Arthur became impatient over what he had done. It is alleged that he took offense at Mr. McIntosh remarking something about quarrelsome niggers, and whipped out the pistol with which he had shot the woman.

Before either Mr. McIntosh or any of the employes of the mill could reach the maddened negro, he had taken deliberate aim and shot Mr. McIntosh killing him almost instantly.

One on Mamma.
Two little girls during the Christmas feasting the other day were confronted with the problem of selecting a choice from two apples—one apple much bigger and redder than the other. The mother of the little girl who was the hostess of the moment, was trying to have her decide to give the finer apple to the visiting little neighbor. "Your papa," she said, "is a gentleman, you know, and always generous and kind to everybody. You know very well that if it were father he would give this nice big rosy apple to Maggie and take the other for himself. You are father's little girl, aren't you? You want to do just what father would, don't you?" Esther's mind was visibly troubled, but she clung to the big apple. "I ain't father's little girl," she argued, logically but not flatteringly. "I'm your little girl." The mother, however, is one who can very safely tell this story on herself.

Policeman's Woe.
Stranger demands are often made at police stations than the most improbable situations in fiction, but the climax, in the minds of the officers at the East Dedham street station, came when a young woman entered the building breathlessly and wanted three canaries fed and watered. The lieutenant was about to give her the address of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals when she explained that she had been put out of her room by her landlady and had been unable to take her pet birds with her. The lieutenant detailed an officer to protect the young woman, the landlady proved not as hard hearted as her lodger had feared, and the canaries were given enough water and seed to sing merrily.—Boston Post.

How Popular He'll Be Some Day.
He is six and she is five. They are in the same kindergarten class. Their homes are less than half a block apart. They love each other dearly, and every day he escorts her home from school and leaves her with a kiss. The grown-ups noticed all this, and there was a little teasing. Finally Little Girl's mother said, "I wouldn't let the little boy kiss me good-bye if I were you." The next day mother was at the door when Little Girl and Little Boy came home together. "You musn't kiss me," said Little Girl. "Mother says she doesn't like it." Little Boy looked disconcerted for just about the tenth part of a second. Then, "But YOU like it, don't you?" he said, and kissed her as usual and trudged along.

Code of Honor.
Duelling is a survival from the ancient judicial combats which were at their height in the middle ages. The first formal duel among English-speaking peoples was in 1096. France seems to have been the land in which the "code" had its most flourishing times. From France the practice passed over to England, and from England it came over to America. In the early days of our country duels were quite common, but since Burr killed Hamilton the practice has been steadily on the decline. It is today a very rare thing for a duel to take place in any civilized land, and in the United States the foolish custom is practically extinct.

"The Intellectuals."
"In our democracy, where everything else is so shifting, we alumni and alumnae of the colleges are the only permanent presence that corresponds to the aristocracy in other countries. We have continuous traditions as they have; our motto, too, is noblesse oblige; and, unlike them, we stand for ideal interests solely, for we have no corporate selfishness and wield no powers of corruption. We ought to have our own class-consciousness. Les Intellectuals! What prouder club name could there be than this one!"—William James in "Memoirs and Studies."

Simple Question.
"What is the difference," asks the man with the dispirited whiskers and the keen eye, "between a girl with a clothespin on her nose, and one whose little brother is quarantined because of a disease incident to childhood, which is characterized by an eruption of the skin?" "To avoid argument," sighs the man with the rectangular Adam's apple, "what is the difference?" "One's brother is measles, the other's brother is muzzled." And afar down the glen arose the mournful cry of a loon lamenting its lost love.—Chicago Post.

Soothing Occupation.
"Who's that man who just kicked the chair over and threw a pack of cards into the fireplace?" Inquired one waiter. "Oh," replied the other, "he's the gentleman who tries to rest his nerves by playing solitaire."

Game Easy to Play.
I know of no easier or more delightful occupation than that of managing other people's business at long distance and without responsibility for the result.—Exchange.

Odd Ways of Catching Fish.

The Icelanders are said at one time to have taught bears to jump into the sea and catch seals. In China birds do equally well, for at a signal they dive into the lakes and bring up large fish grasped in their bills. In Greece the fishermen use branches of pine steeped in pitch and lighted, the inhabitants of Amorgos used cypress-leaved cedar, which served when lighted as a flambeau, and the Chinese fish in the night with white painted boards placed in a manner to reflect the rays of the moon doubly upon the water. These attract the fish to the boat, when the men cast a large net and seldom fail to draw out considerable quantities. Anchovies are fished for in a similar manner.

Hopeful of Results.

"Your wife is taking a tremendous interest in abstruse economic questions."
"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton, "and I'm glad of it. Maybe it will result in her conversation's putting me to sleep instead of keeping me awake."

In the Smart Set.

A woman who lives in one of the fashionable districts of New York telephoned the police. "A little baby's been left in the vestibule. We found it just a few minutes ago all wrapped up in a black shawl. We really don't know what to do with it." "Goodness! We didn't know it was getting as bad as all that."—Toledo Blade.

No Previous Employment.

"You say, 'Rastus, that you want work for your wife,'" said Gunbusta, eyeing the husky darky before him from head to foot. "Was she ever employed before?" "No, sir," replied the negro, nonchalantly, "dis am her first marriage."

CULLED FROM THE STATE PRESS

An Epitome of the Week's Most Important Happenings in the State's Domain.

By the overwhelming vote of 215 to 75, the voters of Daytona today ratified the granting of a franchise to the Holtz Railway and Electric Company to operate street cars in this city. It is proposed by the electric company to operate an inter-urban system between DeLand and Daytona, the year round and also connecting with Daytona Beach and Seabreeze by constructing a concrete bridge over the Halifax river. Although the opposition to granting the franchise was small, it was spirited and much interest was shown in the election.

April 17.—R. A. Turner, a laborer employed by the Peninsular Telephone Co., was killed Wednesday afternoon near Bradley junction, while assisting in unloading telephone poles from a truck. In some way one of the poles swung against Turner, who lost his footing and fell. The stick fell upon his head crushing his skull like an eggshell. He lived fifteen minutes.

Gov. Gilchrist has designated April 22 to 27 as the date for the official opening of the Everglades Canals from the Gulf of Mexico to Lake Okechobee and the Atlantic ocean, at which time an official tour of the canals, beginning at Fort Meyers and proceeding up the Caloosahatchee canal to Lake Okechobee, and thence down the north Lauderdale canal to Fort Lauderdale will be made by the governor, State Comptroller Knott and other State officials.

The representatives of at least twenty-five or thirty of the largest daily newspapers in the United States, particularly of the northwest, and the executive officers of the leading railroads of the State have been invited to accompany the party.

Col W. M. Toomer in the City

Col W. M. Toomer of Jacksonville, candidate for Congress at large, was in the city yesterday, accompanied by his son, William. Col Toomer did not have an opportunity to address the people, but managed to meet many of them and impressed everyone most favorably. In a conversation with a Herald representative, Col Toomer said he was against the initiative, referendum and recall, but in case it should be adopted he would "refer" the candidacy of Claude L. Engle to the Socialist party and have Albert Williamson recalled immediately.

He is advocating the administration of the quarantine and health laws by a cabinet officer of the government, because, he said, this function of government is too important to be left in the hands of minor officers. As he sees it Florida will be the most exposed of the states to the infectious diseases the south, once the Panama canal is opened.

He favors a revision of the tariff downward, and said: "Let us get at the job and have it done with. This continuous talk of tariff revision without anything being done is as pernicious in its result as high tariff itself."

He also advocates the transfer of the machinery now being used on the Isthmus to build a ship canal across Florida.

Congregational Conference of Florida

The General Congregational Conference of Florida and the Southeast brought to this city many visiting pastors and delegates this week. Because of the central location of Sanford, and the special interest in the Men and Religion Forward Movement, a particularly large delegation was present. Among the matters of business before the conference were certain phases of the difficulties in the Tampa church. The situation was handled most vigorously and it is earnestly hoped that this distressing situation may soon be remedied and the Tampa church put in line for better things.

Prominent among the visitors to the conference were President W. F. Blackman of Winter Park, Rev. George L. Hanson, D. D., now of Atlanta, Prof. Lawrence Phelps of Atlanta Theological Seminary, Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, missionary superintendent of the south, Rev. Jas. P. O'Brien of Kansas City, and Rev. Jas. Conway, D. D., of Orange City.

The conference adopted resolutions expressing their appreciation of the kind-

Carpathia Is In With Pathetic Story of Titanic

Latest Authentic Report Gives Loss Of 1700 Souls On The Ill Fated Vessel---Several Die From Exposure

Boiler Explosion Was Cause Of Rapid Destruction Of Ill Fated Vessel

NEW YORK, April 19.—The Cunard liner Carpathia, a ship of gloom and succor, came into New York last night with first direct news from the great White Star liner Titanic which sank off the grand banks of Newfoundland early last Monday.

To this awful death list six persons were added. One died in the lifeboat when it put off from the liner's side and five subsequently succumbed on the rescue ship Carpathia. The list of prominent men missing stands as previously reported and the total death list as brought to port to night by the Carpathia is 1,501.

Survivors in the lifeboats huddled in the darkness at a safe distance from the stricken ship and saw her go down.

As to the scene on board when the liner struck, accounts disagree widely. Some maintain that a comparative calm prevailed; others say that wild disorder broke out and that there was a maniacal struggle for the lifeboats. That the liner struck an iceberg as reported by wireless, was confirmed by all.

Sensational rumors told by hysterical passengers who would not give their names, said that Captain Smith had killed himself on the bridge; that the chief engineer had taken his life, and that three Italians were shot in the struggle for the boats. These rumors could not be confirmed in the early confusion attendant upon the landing of the survivors.

Ripped from stem to engine room by the great mass of ice she struck, the Titanic's side was laid open as if by a gigantic can opener. She quickly listed to starboard, and a shower of ice fell onto the fore-castle deck. Shortly before she sank, she broke in two abaft the engine and as she disappeared beneath the water, the expulsion of air caused two explosions which were plainly heard by the survivors adrift. A moment more and the Titanic had gone to her doom with the helpless passengers on board.

To the survivors were visible the remaining passengers moaning and crying as the vessel sank from sight.

Every woman and child with the exception of those women who refused to leave their husbands were saved. Among the last was Mrs. Isador Strauss.

The steamer went down with the survivors watching the lights ablaze, heard her band playing amid the groans of those left on deck.

Reports vary as to the extent of the disorder on board.

news and hospitality of the citizens of Sanford, particularly in the generous use of several autos, which made possible a visit to the marvels of the Celery Delta.

The Women's Home Missionary Union held their meeting Thursday afternoon. After the opening exercises Miss Mabel Bowler, accompanied by Miss Ward, sang beautifully "Just for Today." Among the interesting features of the afternoon were Mrs. Esminger's account of the West Tampa mission with some songs sung in Cuban by little Emparo, one of the inmates of the school; also a representation of a Turkish woman who in costume gave the story of her life, the part being taken by Mrs. E. S. Burleigh of Tavara. There was also an Indian widow represented by little Emparo.

Bryan Will Be Here

The Great Commoner Will Make an Address in Sanford next Friday night. Hon. William Jennings Bryan will address the people of Sanford, in the Star Theatre, on next Friday night, April 26th, at 7:30 o'clock. Mr. Bryan will give one of his noted lectures on vital questions of the day, and the building will hardly hold the immense throng that will be here to hear him.

In order to accommodate those who would like to attend, and procure seats, the tickets will be sold in advance, at the price of 50 cents each. Mr. Bryan is very much in the public eye at present, and is expected to throw some light on the policies of his wing of the Democratic party, and the Convention at Baltimore.

Beside Mr. Bryan, there will be other candidates here; and the day will be made a gala occasion. Remember the date—April 26th.

Sold at Auction

The stock of the defunct Boston Store was sold at auction on Wednesday and was knocked down to D. L. Thrasher for the lump sum of $3,310.30. Capt Marks acted as auctioneer in his usual gentlemanly manner and was highly complimented for getting such a good figure.

Woodruff & Watson

In this issue of The Herald appears the advertisement of Woodruff & Watson, the style of the newest firm in Sanford, although the gentlemen who compose it are not new to the public. Frank Woodruff has been a citizen of Sanford since the memory of man runneth not and for the past several years has been engaged in the shoe business, but being busily engaged in many other matters was forced to cast about for an experienced man to assist him in the business and take care of the constantly increasing trade. Will Watson happened to be in town and the two were not long in getting together and almost before the public was aware of the fact the firm of Woodruff & Watson had been organized. Mr. Watson needs no introduction to Sanford people, having been in the store of D. L. Thrasher for many years and is one of the most popular young men that ever called Sanford home. Mr. Watson has been on the road for some time, but the chance to come back to Sanford was too great for him and on first of May he will again become identified with Sanford's business interests. A big sale will help to clear out some of the older stock and a lot of new stuff will be shipped here immediately and the new store will make a strong bid for new business and more of it. In a new store room with new fixtures and new blood, Woodruff & Watson will become a household word.

Dinner Club

The Dinner Club, and the guest of each member of the club, were entertained by Misses Veda Ward and Lella Michaels, at the home of Miss Veda Ward, Tuesday evening. The long table was very attractive with vases of beautiful flowers on each end. The center piece was a large embankment of gorgeously lovely nasturtiums. The dainty menu cards, tied with narrow green ribbon, were ornamented with a fine group picture of the ten members of the Dinner Club. The delicious three-course dinner consisted of roast pork, escalloped corn, marmalade and beaten biscuit, banana salad, sandwiches, cheese balls, strawberry short cake.

When the dinner was concluded, the club and their guests enjoyed a very amusing guessing contest, which was won by Miss Genie Wicker and also the prize, a pretty pin cushion.

The pleasant evening was enjoyed by the members of the club, Misses Emma and Estelle Beard, Flora M. Johnson, Lella Michaels, Lillian Gibson, Annie Lee Caldwell, Madge and Veda Ward, Mrs. J. B. Lawson and their guests, Misses Peach and Lenda Leffler, Belle Smith, Mabel Bowler, Elizabeth McLaughlin, Genie Wicker, Ruth Mettinger, and Lucy Whitner.

Sanford Music Club

The Sanford Music Club will give the annual concert at the High School auditorium next Monday night and one of the best musical events of the season is promised. Elsewhere is given the program of the event. Tickets on sale at T. A. Newlan's drug store. Price 35 cts. The following members will take part: Club Chorus, soprano, Mrs. Geo. Hoy, leader, Mesdames B. H. Pugh, T. A. Newton, C. L. Polk, F. C. Rounhill, Ernest Tolar, Misses Mabel Bowler, Florence Frank, Jessie Stumon, Ellen Mahoney, Flora Johnson.

Altos: Mesdames James Bowler, H. C. Geroe, F. S. Munson, Misses Josie Stumon, Carrie Lovell and Martha Fox. Accompanist, Miss Olive Hill.

Auction Bridge

The Auction Bridge Club were entertained by Mrs. S. O. Chase Monday afternoon. Three tables of bridge were played. The highest score was made by Mrs. Samuel Puleston who won the first prize, a handsome Bohemian vase. The guest prize was received by Mrs. E. M. McCullough of Orlando, Mrs. B. F. Whitner's sister and guest. After the cards delicious strawberries and cream were served with cake. Mrs. Chase's guests were Mesdames Keelor, Brady, McLaughlin, Puleston, McCullough, Newman, Miller, Lane, Rapworth, Whitner, King.

HAPPENINGS DURING THE WEEK

Here the Readers Will Find a Brief Historical Spring Flowing For Hurried Readers

Unable to come to an agreement, the jury in Federal Court that has been trying E. G. Lewis, the University City man and founder of the various Lewis enterprises, has been discharged by Judge Amidon. The jury was out seventy-two hours. Lewis was charged with fraudulently using the United States mails.

In the cotton region the season everywhere is backward, according to a crop bulletin of the weather bureau. The soil appears in excellent condition as to moisture. In portions of the lower Mississippi valley much land is under water, which will retard planting.

Heavy rainfall over Louisiana added to the already miserable plight of the flood sufferers in the north eastern section of the state, which for several days has been under from one to fifteen feet of water. Four fatalities are reported as a result of the storm, and hundreds are homeless and destitute. Most of the sufferers are negroes, being plantation hands, who sought safety from the rising waters.

Chairman Alexander of the House committee on Merchants' Marine and Fisheries announced that an investigation would be held to question the Titanic survivors concerning the inability of the steamship officials to save the lives of all the passengers. The state will also probe the disaster.

More Sanford Hospital Donations

Under the energetic and unselfish efforts of Mrs. A. H. Moses, of New York city, who is spending the winter here, and who has become enthusiastic in advancing the interests of the Sanford Hospital Association, we have received: from the Imperial Theatre $73.50, from the Tent Show $9.40 and a number of new members, $25.00 of which has already been paid in. She obtained a large number of good names to a petition to the City Council asking for a $200.00 donation from the City; and the City Fathers, without the least hesitation, voted the appropriation at the last meeting of Council.

She is now looking for the other $100.00 subscriber.

The Welaka Club donated $5. C. B. McNair sent his check for $25. M. F. Robinson, Pres.
