

Mr., Mrs. Carraway Retire, Plan Tour

C. McKIBBIN

By Harry I. Johnson
Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carraway, of 432 Elliot Avenue, members of an insurance firm bearing the name of Carraway & McKibbin, will retire Jan. 1 after more than 25 years in the business.

The insurance business will continue under the direction of Clifford McKibbin, presently a partner.

McKibbin has been with the firm for the past 11 years. Prior to that he was a consulting engineer in the area and before that from 1949 to 1951 he was Sanford's city manager.

He served as president of the Seminole Chamber of Commerce in 1957-58 and is member of the Chamber's advertising committee. He is also president of the Sanford-Seminole Development Company.

Judy Fund Near $2,000-Mark

More contributions to the Judy Kinnard Fund have come in from local persons, each giving what they can to add to past contributions, making a total to date of $1,800.

During the presentation of the Christmas Carol concert by pianist Harry Kuddell recently over the local radio station, station owner Myron Beck led off the contributions with a check for $100.

Others include John Sault, $50; Ed Hart, $25; Max Fisher, $25; Howard Wheeler, $25; Ed Hart, $25; A. B. Peterson, $25; Tom M. Davis, $25; Ed. Morris, $25; Boyd Robinson, $25; E. Carter, $25; J. T. Shepherd, $25; K. G. Galt, $25; E. A. Anderson, $25; Wilbur Bradshaw, $25.

Club Has Party For Children

By Mrs. Bitchie Harris
Sixty-eight children of members of the Florida Power Employees Club in Enterprise were guests of honor at the Christmas party held in the school cafeteria last night.

Decorations, including the beautiful tree, were done by Don Coxon, president, assisted by Ernie Hill and Kenny Gamm.

Each child was presented a gift, chocolate containing a new 12 bill and a bag of candies.

Tiberius, Roman emperor always clasped a laurel wreath on his head at the beginning of a thunderstorm.

A. CARRAWAY

He has been chairman of Sanford's planning and zoning commission since 1955.

He and Mrs. McKibbin live at 2450 Mellonville. They have a son, Bruce, now in the ninth grade, and another son Clifford III, who is receiving his master's degree in industrial engineering at the University of Florida, and a third son, Alex, who is majoring in insurance at the same university.

Alex McKibbin will join his father in the business when he graduates May 1. Until that time McKibbin will continue operating the firm.

The Carraways plan a two-month air journey of much of the Pacific Ocean area starting Jan. 3. They will depart at Orlando and stay over about three days in Honolulu, Carraway said this morning.

From there, he added, they will fly to Christchurch, N. Z., and visit with an old friend formerly assigned at Sanford Naval Air Station, Adm. and Mrs. James R. Beedy.

Admiral Beedy is now commander of the Navy Supply Forces in the Antarctic.

Mr. and Mrs. Carraway then will visit Australia, Singapore and many other places on their two-month trip.

Carraway has been extremely active in community affairs and is credited with much of the progress in the area over the past several years.

Among offices he has held is Sanford mayor for two one-year terms in 1949 and 1950. He was a member of the City Commission from 1942 to 1952.

He also is a past president of the Seminole Chamber of Commerce, having been elected to that office in October 1951. He was chairman of the annual services committee from 1951 until earlier this year when Mark N. Cleveland took over the post. He also is on the Chamber's port authority committee.

Carraway has just been elected to his third four-year term on the board of trustees of the Seminole County Public Hospital (Seminole Memorial Hospital). He also is a director of the Florida State Bank.

Carraway came to Sanford in 1939 to work for the schools and the University of Florida. Last October he observed his 25th anniversary in the insurance business.

A Time For Memories

Christmas is largely a season of remembrance. Most of us approach this time with many memories of past Christmases. The beauty of the Christmas tree, the fragrance of the fruit cakes, and the newness of presents, all carry us back to other years. Few fail to think of a cherished memory as they sit around on Christmas morning watching children at play, or thinking of another Christmas when this was true.

It is a time of mixed emotions. There is happiness in so many hearts, and yet there is a strange tinge of sadness. Still Christmas is wonderful and its wonder has been demonstrated in its becoming the most universal festival on our calendar. It is not only Americans who fall under its charm and beauty, but also around the world the bells of Christmas ring, children's voices laugh, and all ages sing.

How good it is to have such a time of remembrance, but let us ask ourselves if the spirit of selfish gratification is likely to outweigh the real significance of the occasion.

When we turn back the clock of time, we remember that the Christmas season is very definitely a Christian occasion. As we remember our history, we find that twenty centuries ago Christianity began to turn a secular world into a world where God is recognized as King. Since this is true we find that there are many wonderful memories that make Christmas a time of magnificent thoughts and deeds.

We remember that Christmas is the time of giving. Our Christmas gifts reflect the spirit of the giving of God as it so beautifully expressed in John 3:16, "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." There is no other time when the spirit of giving is so pronounced as in this season.

We remembered that Christmas is a time of beauty. The shining faces of loved ones is perhaps the most supremely beautiful physical sight that we see at Christmas. But so many things are beautiful. The beauty of the world seems to make itself known. For some this is expressed by snow-covered hills and valleys, for others it is expressed by the beauty of flowers that we find in Florida and that exist in the land in which Jesus was born. There is beauty of music at Christmas time. What is more beautiful and magnificent than the inspiring music of Handel's Messiah? What could warm our hearts more than the simple beauty of "Silent Night?" The beauty of Christmas should take us back to the beauty of God's Gift in His Son, Jesus Christ. Never was One so beautiful as He who came to a lost world to direct and redeem it.

There will be times during the Christmas season, when many people who have so many blessed memories will want to stop and say, "Well, what is the best of all?" That memory should be that the central truth of Christmas is Christ and not man. Yes, this memory will give real meaning to Christmas. It will give direction to our faith and our way of life. As these two great basics are provided for in Him, we will become awakened to the true importance of Christmas and we will thank God for memories that come to us at the Christmas Season. We will be thankful for an occasion so wonderful that makes us pause in the midst of our frantic hurry and look back to see truth Divine.

Bear Lake Methodist WSCS Meets At Minister's Home

My Maryann Miles The Bear Lake Methodist WSCS met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. William Irwin in Apopka last Thursday evening for their Christmas meeting and party. Members were happy that their president, Miss Virginia English, was back with the group and well enough to preside at the meeting.

Miss Phyllis Swisher read the Christmas Story and led in devotions. Miss English read a thank you card from Mr. and Mrs. Walt Griffith who received the first Testament to be given by the WSCS to a newborn in the church's little Michael Stanley Griffith. Miss English expressed her appreciation for the numerous gifts, cards, letters and visits during her recent stay in the hospital.

It was reported by Mrs. Ruth Howles, treasurer, that $16 had been sent for the mission pledge, $6 to the cultivation fund and $2.80 to the scholarship fund. Mrs. Jean Mueller reported that $40 had been realized from sales of light bulbs and toothbrushes during the month with proceeds to go for furnishing the church kitchen. Plans were made for a Jan. 23 rummage sale at the Eatonville Fire Station starting at 6 a.m. with the fire department to get 10 per cent of proceeds.

It was voted to provide food and blankets and other items as needed, if possible, to a needy family.

Members made Christmas favors for food trays of the 29 patients at Wekiwa Nursing Home in lieu of a Christmas program.

Class To Meet

The Christian Homemakers Class of Casselberry Community Methodist Church will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Casselberry, Lake Drive, Casselberry. Mrs. Darwin Shas will be co-hostess.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS

And they came to a city called Nazareth, and lived there, as the prophets foretold, Jesus was called a Nazarene.

Long after this first Christmas, David, now a man, continued to marvel that, though he never owned another sheep, he had never been cold.

And, of all things, Trouble, the black sheep returned. David always credited the fright produced by the flaming star on Christmas Eve with the improvement in Trouble's deportment.

SPEECH AND DRAMA Class of Deltona's adult education program presented the pantomime, "Seven Gifts of Christmas," for the Pioneer Club's first annual Christmas party. Shown here are Mrs. LaVerne Schoenlaub and Mrs. Hilda Richmond (foreground) with Mrs. Marguerite Fisher, (back).

CAROLYN TAYLOR, wife of AOI Joseph W. Taylor of North Orlando, displays some of the 18 dolls she sold outfits for to raise money for needy children in Sanford. The Taylors, who live on S. Edgemon Ave., have five children of their own but still find time to help the less fortunate.

BARBARA

ELEANOR

Eleanor, Barbara Ferrell Soon Will Be College-Bound

By Jane Casselberry The Ferrell sisters, Eleanor and Barbara, soon will be college bound and will be especially missed by Casselberry Community Methodist Church where they have given generously of their talents.

Watch Night Service Set

By Jane Casselberry A Watch Night program will be held at Casselberry Community Methodist Church starting at 9 p.m. on New Year's Eve. The evening's activities will include a song service, a 50-minute film in color, "Play for Keeps," and refreshments and will climax at midnight with a communion service.

By Mrs. Burton Ferrell of Church Street, Longwood. Barbara, a 1963 Lyman High graduate, will be entering Ashbury College at William, Ky. She has served as pianist and substitute organist, has sung in the Senior Choir and is secretary of the Older Youth Group. She plans to major in education and music.

Eleanor was graduated from Lyman with the class of 1960, attended Orlando Junior College for two years and later attended Florida Technical School. She will be attending Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss., where she will major in education. She is president of the Older Youth Group and has directed the Junior Choir for several years as well as being a former Sunday School teacher.

Herald Angel Got Directly To The Point

By Louis Cassels United Press International The first attempt to explain the meaning of Christmas was made by an angel of the Lord to a group of shepherds who were abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

The angel said: "Fear not! For behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day . . . a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

Writers and preachers have been trying for 2,000 years to improve upon the herald angel's performance. They have not succeeded, and no one is ever likely to succeed, for the angel got directly to the point of Christmas in remarkably few words.

Christmas is good news for ALL people. Not just for the shepherds, and not just for the people who lived in Palestine when Jesus Christ was born. "For unto YOU is born" . . . that is the crux of the proclamation. And the "YOU" means you who are reading these words on Christmas, 1964, no less than the thunder-struck shepherds who first heard them on a hillside near Bethlehem.

"For unto you is born THIS day . . ." The coming of Christ as Savior is not an event which happened once, long ago and far away. It is an eternally contemporary event.

This is what Phillips Brooks tried to emphasize in a Christmas carol that has been sung so often people have ceased really to hear the words:

"How silently, how silently, The wondrous gift is given: So God imparts to human hearts

The blessings of His heaven. No ear may hear His coming, But in this world of sin, Where meek souls will receive Him, still The dear Christ enters in, Where children pure and happy

"Pray to the blessed child, Where misery cries out to Thee, Son of the mother mild, Where charity at a nod watching,

"And faith holds wide the door, The dark night wakes, the glory breaks, "And Christmas comes once more."

Christmas is not a date. It is a discovery—the discovery that God loves you. This is nearly always a tremendous surprising discovery.

"The world we live in often seems indifferent or even hostile toward our hopes, so some proof that God actually cares about us, Christ is the living proof that He does! That is the basic message of the Christian gospel.

But, how do you know it's true? The only way to find out is to test in your own life the claim that Christ is a "savior" who can free you from fear and hatred and self-pity and make it possible for you to "live, as He put it, "more abundantly."

After all, the shepherds had no way of knowing that the herald angel was leveling with them . . . until they saw for themselves.

"And they came with haste," St. Luke reports, "and found Mary and Joseph and the babe, lying in a manger."

Church Classes Enjoy Party

By Jane Casselberry The first and second grade Sunday School classes of Casselberry Community Methodist Church were given a Christmas party Tuesday afternoon in Weaver Hall by their teachers, Mrs. Mary Mobley, Mrs. William Young and Mrs. Sam Hodge.

Games were enjoyed by the children and refreshments of cake, punch and candy were served. Each child received gifts of a bookmarker, a book and a decorated pine cone.

THE CHRISTMAS STORY in pantomime will be presented by children of Holy Cross Episcopal Church Sunday at 5:30 p.m. under direction of Mrs. Phil Roche. Shown here in rehearsal are Barbara Tamm and Fred Halback, front, and Murta Sheddin, Paula Roche and Frank Mebane III. Music will be by the Junior Choir with Miss Beatrice Buck as director.

RELIGIOUS DISPLAY outside Bear Lake Methodist Church was set up for the Christmas season by Johnny Morgan, chairman of the church's Men's Club. The scene is completely lighted at night for benefit of residents who wish to drive by.

Presbyterian Church Women Have Meeting And Coffee

Women of the First Presbyterian Church of Sanford met at 10 a.m. Monday for their general meeting and Christmas coffee.

Chapel Names Music Director In Altamonte

By Julia Springs Altamonte Springs Community Chapel has announced that Mrs. Dorothy McGrath has accepted the office of music director and will begin duties after the first of the year.

Mrs. McGrath is an experienced piano and voice teacher. She studied at Mount Union Conservatory in Alliance, Ohio, and received private lessons from Franklin Carnahan, Edward Schirmer and Arthur Kraft.

She comes here from New Smyrna Beach where she taught piano and organ for nine years, served as music director in the Christ Congregational Church and was a deaconess in the church and president of a ladies circle.

She also was president of the New Smyrna Newcomers Club and in 1963 was named in Who's Who Among American Women.

She presently is making her home at 118 Marshall Street, Oakland Estates, with her mother, Mrs. Blanche Stuffer and her sister, Miss Theo Stuffer.

College Boys Visit Church

The sermon, "No Room For Jesus," was given by Rev. Durward H. Knight for last Sunday evening's worship service of First Southern Methodist Church.

Among visitors present were college students, John Sauls Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Sauls; Dan and Emmett McCall, sons of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McCall and Bill Duncan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Getman, who is home from the U. S. Air Force. Recognition was given the pastor's wife and their children, Jack, Joyce and Gail and Miss Alicia Cameron, all of Stuart.

The Childrens Chorus, directed by Mrs. Evar Neider, presented special Christmas music and a reading was given by Jim Talmadge Jr., Superintendent of the Sunday School, R. D. Priest, and Mrs. Priest, entertained the children of the church at a Christmas party Monday afternoon at their home on S. Sanford Ave. They were assisted by Mrs. A. A. McClanahan.

Mrs. Edgar Smith, who was in charge of the program, read several Scripture selections relating to the birth of Christ and led the group in prayer. Mrs. Harry Eichelberger, accompanied by Mrs. Sanford Touhy at the organ, sang "No Lullaby Need Mary Sing. Young people forming a musical ensemble to play three Christmas carols were Perry Eichelberger, Mary Swignonsky, Elliott Toole, John Horner and Mickey McClanahan.

At close of the program members and guests adjourned to Fellowship Hall where they were served coffee and cookies from a refreshment table covered with white linen and centered with a blue, white and silver Christmas arrangement. Mrs. Schilke presided at the silver coffee service.

Band Members Entertained At Yule Party

Members of the Seminole High School band were honored recently with a Christmas party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon V. Frederick at Banna Lake.

The party took the form of a wicker roast. Gifts were opened and band members who usually play their instruments during the football games, reversed the procedure and indulged in a game of football themselves.

During the evening, Bandmaster Ernest Cowley recalled the activities of the band during the past four months, revealing a busy schedule of parades and shows.

On Nov. 14, the band held its annual barbecue and concert and on Nov. 21 participated in the Florida Bandmasters Association District marching contest, bringing home a rating of "excellent."

The band marched in the Ocala parade on Nov. 27, then staged "over to visit Six Gun Territory and Silver Springs the next day.

On Dec. 3 the members headed up the Sanford Christmas parade and on Dec. 5 performed a half-time show at the Elk's Bowl game in Leesburg.

The season's activities were topped off with an open-air concert of religious and secular music at the Pinecrest Shopping Center Dec. 18. Here the band had the odds against them when the night chosen for the concert turned out cold and windy, chilling fingers and lips and blowing away music. The applause indicated they performed excellently, however, despite their trials, Cowley said.

Nativity Scene Stamp Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Melvin R. Laird (R-Wis.) wants the Post Office Department to acknowledge — on its stamps — that Christmas is celebrated to honor the birth of Jesus Christ.

Laird has urged for many years that the department's annual Christmas stamp depict the Nativity scene.

But the department's special stamp committee rejected the request on the ground that this would commemorate a religious holiday.

Laird contended that the church-state argument was irrelevant. He said that even those who do not acknowledge Christ "as the son of God recognize that he was a great figure in history" and, as such, worthy of commemoration.

Mrs. H. L. Johnson
Well the big day will soon be here. And almost time for another year and another month. Resolutions are made with some by. There are serious problems to face, many to be thought of. It makes you sit down and think very seriously of the things that are going on in this great big world. * * * For example, last week 21 girls from the 4-H Handy Helpers Club along with myself, Hazel Warren, Pauline Kirkpatrick and Wilbur and Jaunita Pent motored over to Umattilla to visit the Harry Anna Gimpel Children's Home. What were we expecting there? We were sure we would find unhappy children. But we did not. They were all so sweet and clean and full of life. The actions of these children went straight to the hearts of those 21 girls and touched them so deeply that they now want to do everything possible for them. So if I'm not mistaken you can bet we soon will be making another trip over there. * * * Charlie Carlson Jr. is home for the Christmas holidays. He is in National Guard training at Ft. Jackson, S.C. Glad you got to come home Charlie. * * * Billy and Claudette Tenney and little Vickie and Jeffery were here for a couple of days with Claudette's parents Claude and Rena Hawkins. They could not be here for Christmas day so had to come celebrate it sooner. * * * The Youth Choir of the Lake Mary Presbyterian Church, under direction of Mrs. Kay Sassman, were guests of Upsala Presbyterian Church at morning service last Sunday. They sang several numbers which were greatly enjoyed by the congregation. * * * Rich and Agnes Rana have a new grandson. John and Irene Gromer of Beaufort, S.C., are parents of the new arrival. And for a coincidence the baby was born on his uncle's birthday. Uncle Ray Rana had a birthday for Agnes last Sunday. Congratulations to John and Irene. * * * After opening their many gifts on Christmas day Doc and Frances Warren and Melvin and Elizabeth will motor down to Wauchula to visit with her mother, Mrs. Robbie Benton, who has been ill. They will spend several days with her. * * * Marion Kennedy, Kay Sassman and I visited the Sarpeta Nursing Home last Tuesday afternoon to give the patients some small gifts which the Seminole County Extension Homemakers Council had sent to them. They were listening to Christmas music and one of the patients was singing right along with the music. Well, I would like to wish everyone of you a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. Be careful over the weekend. Our thought this week is a motto that one of my 4-H girls saw at the Crippled Children's Home. It had been made into a framed picture by one of the children. — Seek the truth, Act in kindness, Create Beauty, Do the needful Deed.

Seminole Baptist Association Honors Member At Luncheon

The Seminole Baptist Association Woman's Missionary Union honored Mrs. John D. Abraham for her many years of dedicated work at a surprise luncheon held during a recent meeting at First Baptist Church, DeLand.

husband was given a beautiful rose bush in recognition of his cooperation. Mrs. Abraham's given name is "Rose" and this theme was carried out throughout the program. What Did GOP Governors Say?

— When Gov. Robert Smylie of Idaho announced the text of the so-called "Denver Declaration" by GOP governors, he stressed that it had the unanimous endorsement of the attending executives, including Arizona Gov. Paul Fannin, friend of Barry Goldwater.

Newsman's questioning of various governors quickly brought out, however, that several of those present put different readings on the language of the declaration.

Finally a reporter asked Smylie: "Governor, is it correct to say that all of you governors are agreed on the text but not on what it means?"

Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., was groping for words to describe the size of the calamity that struck his party in the 1964 elections. Said he: "What happened reminds me of a story about a fellow who came up on the deck of the ill-fated liner Titanic just as it was about to strike a mammoth iceberg."

"The fellow grabbed a steward and shouted: 'I asked for a bucket of ice—but this is ridiculous!'"

This January, Osville Freeman begins his fifth year as secretary of agriculture. Reminded of this, Freeman noted: "That tenure is certainly not a record—but you don't find five-year secretaries of agriculture hanging from trees."

AN OPEN LETTER...

To Our Many Friends,

The Christmas season is a time for expressing thanks. With the approach of this holiday season, we find ourselves thinking with sincere warmth of our many, many friends throughout Volusia, Seminole and Orange Counties, and of the good fellowship and cooperative support which those friends have given us, to all the people in our organization and to our community, Deltona, over the past two years.

We are sure that never before has a builder or developer met with such a wonderful reception and such uniform good will among the people of the communities where he has chosen to do his work.

The sincere friendliness and encouragement, and the open-arm welcome given to us at Deltona, has been a true example of a basic Christian tenet—"Love Thy Neighbor"—at work. We are deeply grateful.

Deltona has had a very successful two years, and we fully expect that success will continue, enabling us to make our community into a fine asset not only for the people who live there but also to the residents of the whole "Golden Triangle" and all of Florida. A large measure of the credit for Deltona's past success and future promise belongs to all of you.

These thoughts are with us the year around. But we would not want the holidays to pass without expressing our sentiments.

So to all of you, from everyone in the Muckle organization and from all of the residents of Deltona: Thank you. And a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Spirit Of Christmas

The wonderful thing about Christmas is that it has never changed. Let us hope it never will.

A lot of things ABOUT Christmas have changed. The pre-Christmas ballyhoo begins earlier every year. The wrappings are fussier. The trees come in almost any color and almost any material, including natural.

The toys are more and more elaborate, more and more warlike and more and more expensive. And there has been a population explosion in the number of Santas to be seen in stores and on the streets.

But these are not Christmas. They are only the trappings of Christmas. The real Christmas is the Christmas spirit—the joy of planning and saving and even sacrificing to bring pleasure to someone very dear to you or to someone you may not even know.

It is the light in a child's face on Christmas morn when he sees what love has brought him—love that so many times transcends and overcomes the limitation of material circumstance.

It is the kindness and generosity of those who wish to share their blessings with others less fortunate.

It is the gaiety and confusion of young folks home from school. It is the hustle and bustle of shopping, of last-minute errands, of remembering just in time a gift or card for someone you can't see how you almost forgot to remember.

Christmas is the delicious tinge of nostalgia as you open Christmas cards from friends you never hear from at any other time, and the realization of how much you miss them.

Christmas is the Christmas tree and the fuss and bother of trimming it.

It is the hush of expectancy on Christmas Eve, the peal of church bells and the glitter of outdoor lights up and down the streets.

Most of all, Christmas is the reverence and the gratitude we feel deep down beneath it all, even though we may not show it or scarcely realize it.

No, Christmas has never changed. Let us hope it never will. The Christmas spirit is humanity at its best.

'Too Fast' Speed

It is not mere speed that is the major cause of accidents on the nation's highways; it is speed too fast for conditions.

That is the contention of Dr. John E. Baerwald, professor of traffic engineering and director of the Highway Traffic Center at the University of Illinois. He asserts that while we are building 300-horsepower super-highways, we still tolerate horse-and-buggy speed regulations.

Speed laws are set by state legislative bodies and officials who, he says, are not usually competent for this job. Only qualified traffic engineers, after a thorough study of a given situation or condition, should be allowed to establish or revise speed limits.

Reasonable, scientifically established limits, Baerwald believes, will satisfy drivers rather than frustrate them as arbitrary limits now tend to do. The result will be to encourage motorists to drive at or near the same speed, minimize maneuvering and passing and thus make the highways safer.

Thought For Today

Let no one despise your youth, but set the believers an example in speech and conduct, in love, in faith, in purity.—1 Timothy 4:12.

Youth, though it may lack knowledge, is certainly not devoid of intelligence; it sees through shams with sharp and terrible eyes.—H. L. Mencken.

The Lighter Side

Wanted Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The other night I caught my wife in the act of pouring beer on her head. My beer! Whereupon I threatened to call my lawyer and institute divorce proceedings.

"Cool it, little daddy," my wife said. "A lot of women put beer in their hair, it gives it body. Besides that, pouring your husband's beer on your head is not grounds for divorce in this country."

"Not even if it's the last bottle in the house?" I cried.

My wife said that in every case that had come to court the wife had been given custody of the beer.

That started me to thinking.

If beer is good for a woman's hair, I thought, why wouldn't it be good for a man's hair?

Innovated Hair

For the past few days, I have been dousing my hair with beer every morning in place of the usual creams, oils, tonics and unguents. If I do say so myself, I have never looked so well groomed.

Men, if you are still using that non-involving kid stuff on your head, you should try the head on a beer. One word of caution, however.

It is important to use the right amount. Otherwise, you're in trouble.

The first time I put beer on my head, the hair got into an argument with my sideburns over who won the 1928 World Series. The next thing I knew, they were fighting among themselves.

All that day, my hair looked like it had been in a tavern brawl. In any of the better places, it would have been arrested for disorderly conduct.

The next day I put so much beer on my head, my hair passed out. Which was great! All that day, it just lay there on my scalp, completely inert. This is the ideal condition for hair to be in.

Develops Hangover

But when I got out of bed the next morning, I discovered that my hair had a hangover. Believe me, it's tough to make yourself look presentable when you've got sick hair.

Through trial and error, I finally hit upon the quantity of beer that would make my hair feel good without making a fool of itself. I also discovered that my hair does better with draft beer than with beer from the can or bottle. There is still one major drawback, however.

In the last day or so, I have noticed that my hair seems to be gaining weight. Which simply has got to stop. The last thing I want is fat hair. I would rather be bald.

I mentioned this to my wife and she said I could counteract the extra calories in the beer by giving my hair more exercise. But I don't know about that. My hair is getting a little old for pushups.

What I think I'll do instead is lay off the beer for awhile and try grooming my hair with metrolol.

There is one thing certain about fall weather—you can't be at all certain about it.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Testimony given by Swedish Soviet agent Col. Stig Wennerstrom gives an insight into long-range Russian military strategy and the risks the Reds are willing to run.

A decade back, the Russians saw the United States pushing ahead with great numbers of intercontinental bombers armed with huge nuclear bombs.

The Reds decided there was no point in attempting to keep up. Instead, they chose a calculated gamble.

They let their intercontinental bomber force remain small. Thus they deliberately took the risk of committing themselves to being much weaker than their chief enemy, the United States, in strategic air power for at least a decade.

While leaving themselves partially naked strategically in the interim, they put their funds into what was then long shot atomic research on fissionable materials in the belief that by the 1960s they could leapfrog past the United States with nuclear tipped ICBMs. The United States could not match.

To realize what a long shot gamble this decision was, it must be recalled that at the time no one had ever produced intercontinental missiles. The Russians had no assurance they could make practical nuclear warheads. CAS that time U. S. experts had deemed the concept wasteful practically.

Wennerstrom's testimony indicates the Russians calculated they could bluff the United States as to their might until the leaping gamble succeeded and they had missile superiority.

The Russians may now be producing a 1964 version of that same gamble.

Moscow's military experts know as well as U. S. Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara that the United States is well ahead in Minuteman and Polaris type ballistics missiles. It appears that the Soviet Union is not attempting to catch up in this particular race.

If there is any parallel with the 1940s, the Soviet Union will let the United States win the Minuteman-Polaris sweepstakes without a real contest.

Instead, Moscow will in the 1964-1974 decade take a long shot research gamble on developing radical new types of strategic military weapons aimed at putting the Soviet Union ahead of the United States in the mid-1970s.

As noted in this column recently, there is considerable evidence that this is exactly what the Russians are doing.

Some U. S. military scientists, worried by this development, are pushing for expanded U. S. research in a "Clem asks a challenging question so scrupulous this psychoanalysis of the unique Bethlehem Event. Christmas is not just a Santa Claus holiday. Nor a means of saving us from sins, for God could have done that without a crucifixion. There is a deeper reason for Christmas, which is but the prelude to Calvary.

CASE U-464: Clem W., aged 23, is a seminary student. "Dr. Crane," he began, "I studied your college textbook as an undergraduate at the university.

"And I was doubly pleased with your chapter therein entitled 'Psychology Goes To Church.'

"But I don't recall that you ever explained the Bethlehem Story so, why did God send Jesus to this Earth?"

"Theologians say it was to give us from our sins, but couldn't God have forgiven us when we are penitent without having to sacrifice Christ on a cross?"

The Bible says we are God's children, created in his own image.

So he apparently hoped mankind would react to Him as a loving, affectionate Father.

Without being sacrilegious, I might say he hoped we'd look on Him as a modern Dad, raised to the nth power.

But no primitive tribe or race ever regarded God as anything but a vengeful, cruel Nero-like sadist.

Every ancient tribe soon concocted ideas of gods, but these deities were always stern judges who were viewed as delighting in sending lightning to incinerate us human children for any minor sin.

To appease and even "buy" a little favor with such gods, our ancestors thus hit upon the idea of offering sacrifices of food, wine and even their human infants.

Despite the fact that Jews were 2,000 years ahead of all other religions in offering other than only ONE God, whom they called Jehovah, even the Jews imitated the religious customs of their pagan neighbors and also sacrificed.

Abraham (about 1800 B. C.) is described as a personal friend of Jehovah who was tested to see how strong his affection would go.

The Bible thus says God asked him to sacrifice his only son Isaac on the altar on a mountain top as proof of his love.

And Abraham was going through with this test. When Isaac had been bound and laid atop the wood, Abraham raised his knife to slay him, prior to setting the wood afire.

But the Bible says God had an angel stay the hand of Abraham.

Mark this most significant event in all religious history up to that date! For it started the reciprocity that God engaged in at Bethlehem. Despite a long chain of prominent prophets, such as Samuel, Elijah, Isaiah and others, nobody had caught on to the idea that God wanted us to look upon him as an affectionate, loving Father.

In desperation, therefore, he probably told his angels: "We shall make one final gamble and see if we can't get them to see the point."

"Since Abraham was willing to sacrifice his only son on a mountain top as proof of his love for me, I'll reciprocate his faith by sacrificing my son atop Calvary."

Never in any tribe or on any continent had any god ever previously been depicted as sacrificing to us puny mortals, so this is the most unique event in the entire evolution of man's concept of Divinity.

Always the sacrificing had been a one-way street, with various tribes sacrificing to their cruel gods!

Bethlehem reverses that and shows God sacrificing to us to prove his love for us human children!

Bridal Coffee Fetes Miss Martha Stemper

Magnificent Christmas decor combined with an enchanting bridal atmosphere reigned at the lovely Mayfair home of Mrs. William Kirk recently at a charming coffee honoring Miss Martha Stemper, comely December bride-elect of Richard Springstead.

Forming the receiving line in the entrance foyer with Mrs. Kirk were Mrs. Milton Smith, co-hostess; Miss Stemper, honoree; Mrs. William Stemper, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. George Wells, the honoree's grandmother. Beautiful holiday creations were represented by the 75 fashionable guests who called during the appointed hours. The damask covered table was centered with a silver bowl containing an arrangement of radiant red carnations, tastefully combined with silver leaves and white carnations and mums.

Mrs. Douglas Stenstrom, aunt of the honoree, and Mrs. Richard Gleason assisted in pouring coffee and tea from handsome silver service to complement the dainty pastries decorated in colorful Christmas motifs.

MRS. TERRANCE EDWARD CHRISTENSEN

Vows Unite Vida Sue Smith And Terrance Christensen

Miss Vida Sue Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton E. Smith of Sanford, and Terrance Edward Christensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. James V. Stowell Jr. of Geneva, were united in holy matrimony on Dec. 19 at 7 p.m. at All Souls Catholic Rectory with Rev. Richard Lyons performing the impressive double ring ceremony.

The lovely bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a beige silk suit ensemble with matching shoes and accessories. Her flowers were Cymbidium orchids and her short illusion veil was attached to a velvet circlet.

Miss Loretta Fore of Orlando attended the bride as maid of honor wearing a sheer beige wool suit with matching accessories and orchids. Miss Carin Stowell was the bridesmaid and chose a blue tulle dress with matching accessories, headpiece and orchids.

William L. Hiner of Jacksonville served the groom as best man. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Smith wore a yellow knit suit with matching accessories and her corsage was of Cymbidium orchids. The mother of the groom chose an antique green wool knit suit with matching accessories and a matching orchid corsage. Following a wedding dinner, the newlyweds departed for a brief wedding trip and are residing at 1029 Elm Avenue.

Help Clerk Help You

Today's shopper is ahead of the game if he knows how to help the salesperson help him buy a quality product.

Not that we want to pick on the poor salesclerk. But experience makes us wonder if in-store selling is not a lost art.

During a visit in Helsinki, Finland, we discovered that a sales training program in Stockmann's, that country's largest department store, led to increases in salary. The incentive encouraged the sales personnel to improve their knowledge of foreign languages and of the merchandise they were to sell. Completing the course successfully got them an automatic raise.

A strong contributor to the lackadaisical attitude of many store clerks in the U. S. once was the short supply of desirable merchandise for a number of years. Supply isn't a problem now but the attitude remains.

You can encourage a change if you refuse to accept poor service and misleading information.

Recently, certain household appliance manufacturers were scolded by the National Better Business Bureau and trade organizations for the improper sales practices of their in-store demonstrators.

The demonstrators represented themselves as part of the store's regular sales staff. Their sales pitch was biased. The manufacturers have agreed that their demonstrators will not hide the fact that they are representing a specific product.

An executive of a major manufacturer of small electrical appliances said he encountered this "snooping" in the appliance section of a New York department store. He admits he learned a good lesson. "The consumer," he said, "is getting more sophisticated every day. A company that tries to hoodwink the consumer soon finds itself in hot water."

This is where you can help yourself, the companies and the salespersons. Be prepared when you go to buy. Find out all you can about a product through newspaper and magazine stories and ads. Without wasting the salesclerk's time, ask questions to determine whether the product will fit into your living scheme.

If the clerk is uninterested in answering your questions or gives fuzzy answers, then shop at another store where the salespersons are well-trained and are interested in your getting the most for your money—while adding to their day's sales commission.

Dear Abby: By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 17 and a senior in high school. We have never had any trouble with her but we have never told her anything about the facts of life, either, so we can't be sure what she knows and what she doesn't know. She and her girl friend were invited to a university for a college weekend. It is about a two-hour ride on the bus from here. If you have a book on ALL the facts of life for girls that age, please send it C.O.D. right away because she is leaving Friday on the 4:00 bus. I thank you.

WORRIED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I could send a book, but even if it were to arrive before the bus, it would be approximately four years too late. You had better have a mother-daughter chat with her before she boards the bus.

DEAR ABBY: Lately my home has been like a public telephone booth. We seem to be the only ones in this neighborhood with a phone. For instance, this week we got three long-distance calls from people who live down the block. They gave our number as their contact without even asking us. Then a woman I never saw before rang our bell and asked if she could use our phone. I thought it was an emergency (car trouble or something) but it turned out she just wanted to confirm some plans with a friend. She sat and talked for half an hour while I felt like a stranger in my own home. Last night another woman came over around midnight to call a taxi to see if her husband was there. I hate to be unfriendly, but I don't like being taken advantage of. How can I get this across? Don't use my real name or it will be mud.

WAVERLY, OHIO

DEAR WAVERLY: Why anyone should apologize for guarding his privacy is beyond me. Helping a neighbor be friendly, letting people "use" you is foolishness. Let each presumptuous neighbor know how you feel the first time he oversteps his bounds, and don't worry about what your name will be.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "AN ATHEIST IN ANAHEIM": What a sad day it will be for you when your heart is full of gratitude and you have no one to thank.

Troubled? Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

O' To Marking System

By Susan Light
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR MRS. LIGHT: The first grade in our school has done away with the old-fashioned marking system of A, B, C, etc. Now, all we get on our children's report cards is O, S, and U—"outstanding," "satisfactory," and "unsatisfactory." O and U are seldom used. S may mean "satisfactory," but it isn't satisfactory to me. I want to know where my child REALLY stands.

ANSWER: I think it's wonderful! Many schools forego marks altogether in the primary grades and depend on parent-teacher conferences for reporting on the children's progress. Research tends to support this stand.

First graders are in a constant state of growth and change, which makes it very difficult for the teacher to come up with fair and valid grades. Besides, they have enough pressures without subjecting them to the stiff competition encouraged by conventional grading.

Your child will be competing for college entrance soon enough!

DEAR MRS. LIGHT: My daughter told me that ALL of the students in the accelerated English class automatically receive A on their report cards unless they do something pretty terrible. I can hardly believe that the school would allow such an unfair practice, but I've checked around and discovered she is right. She isn't in the accelerated section and works her head off to get a B or C. Some of her friends work about half as hard for their automatic A's.

Did you ever hear of anything so preposterous?

IRATE MOTHER

ANSWER: What's so preposterous about it? Youngsters in accelerated classes are generally "A" students to begin with. Some may be more brilliant than others, but there is usually very little difference between the highest and lowest student. A full range of grades for such a narrow span WOULD be preposterous.

An average student in the accelerated class could very well out-perform an "A" student in a regular class. Should he, then, receive a "C" because he's only average as compared to his classmates?

You can be proud that your daughter cares enough about her own record to work hard for a B or C. She is doing well in her own right; don't make her dissatisfied by emphasizing the advantages her friends have.

Making Children Happy

By Polly Cramer
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR POLLY: With the approach of the holidays, I always wish I had a million dollars so that I could make sure that every child had something for Christmas. I finally decided there was no use wishing for the moon when I could use a little ingenuity and very little money and do something about the problem.

I have been saving the cardboard rolls from foil, paper towels and so on as there had been so many good pointers telling how to use them. I cut a piece of fancy Christmas wrapping paper wide enough to wrap the tube and long enough to extend out about three inches at each end. Glue the paper on the tube so it is completely covered. Twist the paper at one end and tie with ribbon or tape. Put small gifts in the tube and fasten the other end the same way. Items for the tube can be bought for 10 or 15 cents each. They might be jumping ropes, puzzles, crayons, whistles, marbles, balloons, play money and so on.

If the presents do not fill the tube, I add a few pieces of wrapped candy, raisins or nuts. The tubes can be first cut in halves or thirds if you prefer making more and smaller packages.

My neighbors and I share dress patterns so we can have many more than if we had to buy each one ourselves. We borrow one and copy it either on heavy tissue paper, brown paper or white shelf paper. Tracing paper or carbon can be used.—JAYNE.

DEAR POLLY: Take one bobby pin, spread it open, poke one side of it through a hole in the screen door so that one half of it is outside and one is inside. Press together again and the result is a good spot to fasten a note for the children, the milkman and so on. The note will not blow away and the bobby pin stays in place for years. Simple as that! —MYRTLE.

DEAR POLLY: When our Christmas tree ornaments get faded or discolored, we wash them with soap and water and then spray with gold or silver paint. Sprinkle glitter on while the paint is still damp. This makes lovely ornaments for a very small cost.—MRS. E. T.

GIRLS: These newly sprayed ornaments could be hung on the clothesline, with clothespins, so there is no matted side from laying them down while sticky.—POLLY.

Use Alert Eye

By Mr. Fix,
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

If you have been in the practice of making your own home repairs you are in a good position to inspect the next home you buy. Even if you haven't, you can purchase a check list of things to look for.

Obviously there are things that you cannot see and even an expert couldn't see them for you. Finished walls can hide rotten timbers.

Assuming the location, architectural style, price and general appearance suit you, you can concentrate on condition and the amount of money you may have to add to the price of the home to make repair or changes.

Remember that it costs more to add features or repairs to a used home than one that is under construction. Wiring and plumbing are more difficult to place in finished walls, foundations more of a job to repair on a completed house.

Floor sagging and also indicates that the builder didn't take shortcuts. Check to see if the flooring is really double. If it is, it will be indicated by sheets of lumber for the sub-floor or flooring that runs in the opposite direction from the floor above.

The basement may be the only place that you will be able to examine exposed plumbing and wires. Signs of rust and corrosion will give you a clue to the condition of the "treat" of the plumbing. Look at the wires. Are there many patched on circuits? Does the fuse box indicate a number of separate circuits, not just one or two?

Upstairs check the water pressure by turning on a number of faucets. Is there still plenty of pressure on the top floor?

Do floor and stairs squeak when you walk on them? Check exposed floors. Floor boards that separate indicate that green lumber may have been used and has since dried out.

Cracks in plaster due to structural weakness generally start at the corners of door and window openings.

Try windows and doors to see that they open and close easily. If there is an unfinished attic you have another chance to check exposed wood. Looking down at the top edges of the outside walls also will show you if the house is insulated.

Beauty after Forty
EDYTH THORNTON MCLEOD

Will you forgive me if I "Remember" just once a year at Christmas? I remember so well when I was a small girl in Georgia how beautiful and festive our house looked. My pretty mother worked for days twinning the balustrades and chandeliers with Southern smilax and trailing bamboo vines. Great bunches of holly were placed over the large paintings, and huge red jasponeas, massed on the mantles, were bedded in the beautiful Southern moss. Red candles were slight in crystal candelabras.

The cut glass punch bowl glittered in a nest of greenery and red poinsettias. One day it was filled with Eggnog, the next with the famous Georgia Artillery Punch. The brack in the hall was decked with holly and mistletoe instead of Father's hat, cane and umbrella. There were the Christmas trees, the mysterious comings and goings, and the wonderful smells of cakes and icing. And on Christmas Day there were the lace-covered table, the turkey and Ambrosia!

Early Christmas morning my father roused the household at six o'clock. The folding doors were pushed back and there—there in all its glory—stood the Christmas tree! Real candles burned softly, and a small Negro boy (usually the son of Amegia, the cook), in a white coat much too big for him, sat guarding them. The long, ribbed, like stockings, "hung by the fire," were opened, and they were stuffed with fruits and oases, for me, there was a turquoise ring! For my brother there were packets of wonderful stamps, for Mother a diamond pin, for Father his special "seegars." For "Dixie," our beloved dog, a new collar, and for "Buff," my cat, a can of salmon, his favorite. For Lizzie Bellinger, my beloved Negro nurse a new black plush cape, embroidered in jet. (This she wore summer and winter.) There were hot biscuits, steak, and gravy for breakfast. And we drank eggnog before breakfast. Later there was the great dinner, with turkey, nuts, fruits, wines, and the famous Ambrosia, lopped with rich whipped cream!

Christmas was a magnificent event; the day truly was spent as a festive holiday. What a difference, now! Today it's a sort of canned affair!

Forgive my remembering, will you—and Merry Christmas!

We The Women: By Ruth Millett

A woman's most valuable weapon against growing old isn't the beauty saloon. It is the ability to live in, and with, the present rather than to cling to a past that can't be recaptured.

A friend of mine in her late 40s is one of the most youthful women I know. Yet she makes no effort to look or behave younger than her years.

While many women of her age have worn themselves out trying to cling to youth, there is a youthfulness about this woman that makes children love her and young adults feel that they can talk to her about anything.

What has kept her young without trying to be? For one thing, she is intensely interested in the world about her. She thinks in terms of today.

For another, she is interested in new things and better ways of doing things. No young wife is more ready to experiment or find a better way of doing a thing than she is.

She doesn't think that the world or its young people are going to the dogs. Instead of dwelling on what is wrong with things, or how much better they used to be, she sees what is good in the time in which she is living.

She doesn't offer advice unless it is asked for. Nor does she insist that she knows the right way to do every thing.

And she never makes other women conscious of her age by talking about it. Since it isn't of prime importance to her, it never occurs to her that anyone else is particularly interested.

So you never hear her making such remarks as "at my age" and "if I were younger, or "how that I'm getting older." All such remarks when spoken by an older person make younger people feel ill-at-ease.

The most effective way to retain the quality of youth is to make the most of the present in which you live.

successful fitness was better than to hope for a club break. It all looked easy, but the hand turned out to be a big loser for us. The enemy North belonged to the mini man school and merely hid one heart at his first turn. Later, he jumped to three clubs over his partner's five spade rebid and went to five spades after his partner bid three no-trump. South bid six spades.

Of course, most of the partner had bid every strongly and some post game all by himself. But not only did South have a rock bottom minimum opening, but he could do nothing about the first two diamond leads. North had clearly indicated that he could not handle them, so South was looking right at two quick losers.

Jacoby On Bridge By Oswald Jacoby

There is a certain small group of so-called expert players who just hate to show that they have a really good hand. The idea is to keep their partner in the dark as long as possible so that they will be able to make the major decisions.

When Bob Hamman of the U. S. World Bridge Olympiad team held the North card, he jumped to two hearts as his first bid. This eminently correct procedure is quite foreign to this minimum school, but it made it very easy for Bob to bid only four spades at his next turn. His two heart bid had told his partner, Don Krauss, that Bob had a very good hand so the four-spade bid was not a request to stop. Of course, Don did stop. He really held a minimum opening bid.

Must She Blame Self?

By Muriel Lawrence
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR MRS. LAWRENCE: It's a year since my nephew, 4, had an operation to deepen a shallow hip socket that made one of his legs shorter than the other. He is now walking without a limp but my sister still acts like his slave. If he wants her attention when she's phoning, she hangs up. She lets him grab food from serving dishes. She says she knows she spots him because she still blames herself for his hip trouble but then starts crying and says she can't help it.

ANSWER: Maybe she's right. It doesn't do much good merely to "know" that we're unreasonable to blame ourselves for a child's disability. We have to feel the cruelty with which we are treating ourselves. And to feel it, we may have to go back to many other older experiences of false blame; to memories of our parents' misjudgments of our childhood's actions, of the hopelessness which overwhelmed us when our explanations of our "intentions" were rejected as "excuses"; of the accusations that made us feel guilty for things done by more favored brothers and sisters.

We may have to recapture these memories until the injustice of the mistaken blame that we start upon us is seen in its stark and unmistakable cruelty. Then—and often only then—can we feel our right to mercy. Often only then can our hearts break into love for ourselves so that we can begin to dimly discern the outrageous cruelty of our self-blame for our child's disability.

Your sister might find some sessions with a psychiatrist helpful at this point.

If she could stop overindulging her little boy, she would, you know. If she could stop using this overindulgence to still the past's accusing voices which insist "It is you who have been bad again," she would. Without professional help, the blaming past may speak too powerfully for her to be able to turn on it and say back at it. "I don't believe you any more. You have blamed me too often and too unjustly for me to credit anything you say! Including your lying hints that I was responsible for Tommy's shallow hip socket!"

God knows we human beings make enough mistakes without blaming ourselves for things we didn't do.

Loosen Up On Collars

By Jerry Sheehan
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA)—Men who would never wear the same tie frequently are guilty of radical conservatism when it comes to the choice of shirt collars.

There do exist, you know, other styles than just the medium-spread wing shirt collar. Granted, the somewhat off-beat collar shapes comprise a very small percentage of total shirt sales, but two or three tab collars, say, will add dash to any man's wardrobe. As a rule-of-thumb, the short and rounded collar shapes are not for men with short and rounded necks. These stalwarts look best in extended wing collars or the old stand-by, the medium-spread.

For a touch of elegance for a night on the town, the tab collar with collar pin is the thing. The pin sells for about a half-dollar and is inserted through the small holes in the collar end. Tassling, as it does, behind the tie, it tends to lift the knot into prominence and keeps things neat all evening. Buttons, long a favorite with the campus crowd, lend dash to a suit or sport outfit. It is important here to pass the fingers behind the buttons to give the collar a slight roll.

A word of caution on button-downs. It pays to cultivate the attention of a good hand laundry. Many big-time commercial plants are not set up to accommodate this type of garment, and they tend to mangle the buttons with the efficiency of rock crushing machines.

Record Shop Patriarch Of Ponderosa

By Joan Crosby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA)—No one knows Greek like a hit record!

The patriarch of the Ponderosa, Bonanza's Ben Cartwright, as anyone is known to millions of loyal fans of the NBC-TV series, has a best seller in his RCA Victor single, "Bingo."

"How about that?" he says with a broad smile. "I'm suddenly the Elvis Presley of the Stone Age."

Lorne recently returned from a series of appearances in Australia, where he discovered what it is like to be the singing idol of a large, screaming audience.

"You see a bunch of kids singing, and the audience screaming, but you can't imagine what it is really like until it happens to you. I now know why all those teen-agers use big electronic instruments. It's the only way to hold back the crowd."

"Bingo," which is not about people, became a hit because "the timing was correct, there is a certain beat to the rhythm that is acceptable, and the story is complete. There is actually a complete movie story in the three minutes the song takes, and I may make one heard on the song, next summer."

"It's interesting to speculate on why it is really a success. Greek tragedy has been a success all these years because people have dug it. This song has Greek tragedy about it: a man saves another man's life, and thereby damn himself. But that is getting esoteric about it."

Lorne has also recorded "Peter and the Wolf," with the London Symphony, for RCA Victor, as well as a follow-up which will record a series of 100 readings.

"They are letting me go off in all directions, and I am trying to do all the things a man wants to do in his lifetime."

Album of the week—No one could whip a symphony orchestra into stirring sonnet-like, furious fortissimo and placid pianissimo like the late Arturo Toscanini. If further proof is needed, it is offered in "Toscanini Concert Favorites," a superb two-record album (RCA Victor).

Among the favorites: Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries," Tchaikovsky's "Houso and Juliet," Richard Strauss' "Don Juan," and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2."

For the connoisseur: "Harold House's Gallery" (Columbia) is a sly, sophisticated and sentimental album with Jack Haskell, Betty Garrett, Rose Marie Jun and Rome himself singing a dozen of his songs. "Half-Forgotten Teddy Bear" and "Stop Wallowing Around in My Mind" are lovely ballads, and Rome's lyrics are at their best in his "Art in the Night." The songs are all illustrated in color reproductions of Rome's paintings.

"Markoski Cultural Life in Music and Art" (Columbia) is a book illustrating Mexico's music and art, with a single record enclosed in it. "The Clement Piano" (made in 1810), (Folkways) played by John Newman.

Give my regards to "Ben Franklin in Paris" with Robert Preston and "Golden Boy" with Nancy Davis are original cast albums from Capitol. Capitol has also released "The Beatles Story," a talking fan magazine which has snapshots of Beatles' songs and some direct quotes interspersed with a running commentary documenting the boys' biographies.

Single releases—"Secrets of Rome" (Sophia Loren, Columbia); "A Holly Jolly Christmas" (Burl Ives, Decca); "Amen" (The Impressions, Atlantic); "The Ball That Couldn't Jingle" (Bobby Vinton, Eps); "Gotta Get A 'Tain" (The New Christy Minstrels, Columbia); "Washington Mountain" (Kal Windling, Verve).

The Doctor Says: Questions X-rays

Wayne G. Brandstedt, M.D.

Q—A few months ago I had five X-ray treatments for bursitis of the shoulder. They cured my bursitis but almost immediately afterward I lost my sense of taste. Could the treatments have caused this?

A—In most persons who complain of a loss of taste it is the sense of smell that has been lost. Taste per se, which is appreciated by the tongue, is limited to sweet, sour, salty and bitter. This sense may be lost in diseases of the tongue or the nerves that supply it. The "taste" of flavors is lost in diseases of the nose or olfactory nerve. X-ray treatments to your shoulder would not cause either of these sensory losses.

Q—My doctor is giving me Rautrax-N for high blood pressure. Does it have any side effects and can it be bought without a prescription?

A—Rautrax-N is a combination of rauwolfia and a diuretic. The combination allows for a lower effective dose of both drugs and this lessens the chances of undesirable side effects. It should not be taken by persons with severe kidney disease. The drug is a great help in reducing the blood pressure but it cannot be purchased over the counter.

Q—I am taking Salutenin to bring my blood pressure down. Does it have any side effects?

A—This preparation, like Rautrax, is a combination of a diuretic, reserpine (a rauwolfia derivative) and protovaterin. By combining these drugs it is possible to keep the dose of each of them well below the dangerous level

This preparation should not be used, however, with digitalis and if you have frequent skipped beats. Even though this is not a symptom to cause alarm, you should stop the drug or reduce the dosage. Too large a dosage may cause nausea, dizziness, nasal stuffiness or general unpleasantness.

Q—My doctor says I have radiculitis of the spine. Could you suggest anything that would help me?

A—You have an inflammation of the root of one of the large nerves that emerges from your spinal cord. Movements of the spine usually cause pain and when the pain is severe a back brace or body cast may have to be worn. Meanwhile your doctor should search for and remove the cause if possible.

There's magic in these sands of time, and as a child you were bewitched with endless fascination as you watched the grains sift from one glass sphere into another.

But as you grow older, the hourglass begins to have a different significance. Now you see the grains of sand as passing time—almost as if it were being snatched away from you. And there is a kind of desperation watching it go.

Why? Because never again can we recapture those minutes, hours, days!

But let's not bemoan the passing of time. Let's determine to take advantage of those grains of sand which we still cup within our hands. It's really never too late to begin again. God has revealed this important fact of life to us again and again through-out His teachings. Discover it for yourself by going to church.

Shepherd's Son Brought Gifts

(Ed. Note: The following story, entitled "The Gift," was written by Albert Shaw, Sanford city engineer.)

By Albert Shaw

When the Wise Men were travelling with their gifts for the Child, word of their coming preceded them. Whenever they stopped at a village they were besieged by the villagers asking them to tell about the wondrous event. As tired as they were, they could not turn down the pleas of the group to tell them about the Child and the star they were following. All listened with awe, but none more open-mouthed than Barla, the youngest of six children of Chedra, the sheep herder.

A LIVING NATIVITY Scene is being presented by Luther League members of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church Christmas Eve from 7:30 until 9 p.m. The public is invited to view the presentation.

Being the youngest in a family as poor as that of Chedra was to be perpetually hungry since he was the last to be fed and often there was not enough to go around. Sleep was his substitute for food. Clothes were another problem. Never had he experienced the feel of a new robe. Cast-offs were all that he ever received, usually the rags his brothers had outgrown. Since Barla was only six and had never known any different life, he accepted this "existence" without complaint.

The arrival of the Wise Men, the stories they told, the clothes they wore and the food they ate all added up to the most exciting event in Barla's short life. That night, like on many other nights, Barla went to bed hungry. But sleep would not come. As he lay there in the dark, for the first time, a vague feeling of despair and want overcame him. He began to cry, not outwardly (because boys don't cry) but silently until he was exhausted. Sleep finally came, but it was a disturbed, restless sleep.

Hunger woke him early, but this morning he had no desire for food. Sometime during the night he had unconsciously made a decision and this decision was the overpowering urge of the moment. He would leave home and follow the Wise Men. In so doing he felt sure he could learn their secrets that would enable him to get fine clothes and food, perhaps even enough for his brothers and sisters. Having made his decision, he silently crept away. The excitement of the moment overcame his fear of leaving. This would be the first time he would be separated from his family. So, as the sun began to rise, he left to begin his great adventure.

For days he followed the Wise Men, never letting them out of his sight, keeping himself at a distance so that he would not be noticed and sent away to return to his home.

Food was his biggest problem. He dared not beg for fear of discovery. Whatever was available he scavenged from the wilderness. Where before at home he had often been hungry, now he was slowly starving. But the intensity of his desire overpowered his hunger and drove him on. And so, for days he walked, with the heat and hunger slowly taking their toll of his wasting body.

Then one day he saw the Wise Men stop and change their robes. Watching them he was amazed at the transformation. The new robes were the most beautiful things he had ever seen, colored and striped in patterns he had never before seen. He was transfixed. Suddenly the Wise Men mounted and the camels began to move, first slowly, then faster and faster as they were urged on. Barla found it difficult to keep up but somehow he managed. Then as suddenly as they had started, they stopped and he saw the Wise Men dismount and enter a stable.

Curious, he crept up and slipped unseen inside. It took a few moments for his eyes to accustom themselves to the dimness and he saw for the first time a Child lying in a manger. Standing on either side of the Child was a man and a woman and prostrated before the Child, the Wise Men. To one side stood a profusion of glittering objects. Even the dimness could not blot out their brilliance. Slowly the Wise Men rose and in quiet reverent tones addressed the man and the woman. Suddenly he recalled the night the Wise Men had spent in the village and their story of the Child. Now he was seized with a desire to emulate the Wise Men. But what to give as his gift? Barla had nothing, owned nothing. Then he remembered some glittering pebbles he had seen on the road not far from the stable. These to him were almost like the glittering gifts of the Wise Men.

Silently he crept from the stable. Once outside, he ran as fast as his weakened legs could lay claim to the pebbles before someone else found them. When he had gathered them he laid down to rest. Complete exhaustion and starvation were now overtaking him. But he would not sleep. He would stay awake until nightfall. Then he could leave his gift for the Child without being seen.

When evening with its coolness came, he felt himself chilled. Carefully he watched the stable and at an opportune moment crept in unseen. He hid in a corner waiting for the instant when the man and the woman would leave. As he huddled in the straw a numbness settled over him and slowly he drifted into unconsciousness. He never awakened.

When morning came, they found Barla, his head between his knees as in sleep and clasped in his hand, the shining pebbles, his gift to the Child. On Christmas Eve, if you look carefully at the eastern sky, you can see the outline of a little boy among the stars. They have a special twinkle all of their own. But do not search the sky on any other night, for the stars appear only on Christmas Eve.

Holy Cross Schedule Is Announced

Com mies Lose To CHRISTmas

VIENNA (UPI)—Christmas is still CHRISTmas in the communist satellite countries of eastern Europe.

Government efforts, especially during the Stalin era, to make it the "Festival of the Fir Tree" failed and have largely been given up.

Likewise, no amount of official persuasion has convinced the people that "Father Frost," kindly old gent that he may be, can ever replace their long-beloved "Christ Child," who pays miraculous visits to households in Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Romania to place gifts under the lighted Christmas tree.

In Hungary, where Christmas trees were almost impossible to obtain in Stalinist days, there is no problem now and no more official effort to create one. Fir trees of all sizes are imported from other communist countries and from capitalist Austria.

The only visible remnant of "Father Frost" is the "Celebration of the Fir Tree Festival" in the Hungarian parliament building, to which about 2,000 members of the Communist Youth organization are invited to receive presents from him.

Elsewhere, centuries-old Christmas traditions are in full flower celebrating the birth of the Saviour.

Hungarian nationalized stores and private shops start selling Christmas decorations, creches, candles and cards around the middle of November.

Stores are jammed with Christmas shoppers in the last days of the holiday.

The afternoon of Christmas Eve is reserved for decorating the Christmas tree in most Hungarian households, while housewives try the traditional carp for Christmas Eve dinner, followed by "Makosguba"—small dumplings with poppy seed.

Christmas is strictly a family festival in Hungary. Hardly any street cars run in Budapest on Christmas Eve and all theaters, movies and night clubs are closed. The radio broadcasts Christmas songs, among them the popular "Silent Night" and the Hungarian "Mennyből az angyal" (The Angel from Heaven).

Both Christmas and Boxing Day are official holidays in Hungary. While the first is reserved for the family, Hungarians pay visits to relatives and close friends on Boxing Day.

Churches usually are packed all over Hungary on Christmas Day. Many Hungarians attend midnight mass on Christmas eve.

Although Hungary is not in the sphere of American influence, the trend toward the American Christmas dinner of turkey is noticeable, replacing the traditional goose in many households.

The story is much the same in Czechoslovakia and Romania, with minor variations for local traditions.

In Prague, the lofty dome of St. Nicholas Church will be filled Christmas Eve with the ethereal strains of the Christmas Mass by Czech baroque composer Jan Jakub Ryba. Village churches also play it at the midnight mass all over Czechoslovakia.

Christmas trees, mistletoe and presents are institutions of long standing in Czechoslovakia and have remained undimmed by any official pressure.

For adults in Czechoslovakia the Christmas holidays end with Boxing Day, the day after Christmas, but for children they go on until Twelfth Night when, especially in the villages, they masquerade as the Magi and call on their friends.

In Romania, while authorities still officially stick to "Father Frost" and the "Festival of the Fir Tree," they are doing nothing to influence families to abandon their traditional observance of Christmas as the oldest and most sacred holiday of the Christian world.

Contrary to other orthodox countries, the Romanian Orthodox Church celebrates Christmas on Dec. 25, thus uniting the eastern, of Orthodox part of the country, and the western, Catholic and Protestant, in the observance.

Big fir trees, illuminated at night, stand in the centers of Romanian cities and, while "Father Frost" visits children in schools, the "Christ Child" comes to them at home.

Mass Schedule Announced For Altamonte

Briton Invented Christmas Card

GREETINGS
to you, our good friends!

DEKLE'S GULF SERVICE
2518 FRENCH AVE. SANFORD

LONDON (UPI) — In 1843 a British artist named John C. Horsley penned the words "A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO YOU" to the design in front of him and sat back to look. He had invented the Christmas card.

Now Christmas wouldn't seem the same without it. Britons are the biggest Christmas card senders in Europe and are second in the world only to Americans.

"Last year we delivered one billion cards and letters in the last half of December and the figures have shown a progressive increase each year," said a Post Office spokesman.

Horsley began it all by designing the first card at the suggestion of Sir Henry Cole, a leading figure in the Victorian world of art.

Around the inscription Horsley designed three panels, the center one showing a Victorian family party and the other two depicting the feeding and clothing of the needy.

A few people immediately attacked Horsley as "aging alcoholism" because the family was drinking a toast.

The Christmas card method of expressing goodwill and greeting caught on despite this opposition and was a nationwide habit by the 1870s, aided by the introduction of good and cheap postal services.

Religious scenes, Santa Claus rubins, logs and Christmas trees all figure in the quite early cards, as they do today. The signs of change can be seen in Santa Claus' form of transport. Once confined to a reindeer sleigh, he now travels as well by plane and rocket.

Victorians also loved cards decorated with frosting, lace and other scraps of material, and these were plentiful at a time of cheap labor. The idea still survives, but decorations are less elaborate.

A spokesman for one of the major British greetings card manufacturers said at present there is no definite trend in the popularity of styles of cards.

"There is no swing toward or away from religious cards or toward or away from humorous cards, for example," the spokesman said. "But this year there are two slight tendencies. The first is a small increase in the three-dimensional cards for children—the ones with flaps that open up decorated with frosting, lace and other scraps of material, such as 'To Mother From All Mine of cheap labor. The idea of the card industry's profit is hard to estimate.

"A recent survey estimated the total revenue at between 30 and 80 million pounds ($4-24 million)," the spokesman said. "That's pretty wide because although there are only eight or nine well known greeting card manufacturers, there are so many charities who print Christmas cards to raise money that it is difficult to pin down."

Because Britons send so many cards, one of the best known slogans in the country is the one publicized by the Post Office regularly each year—"Post Early for Christmas."

Put moderately soiled, lightly soiled and heavily soiled laundry into separate loads.

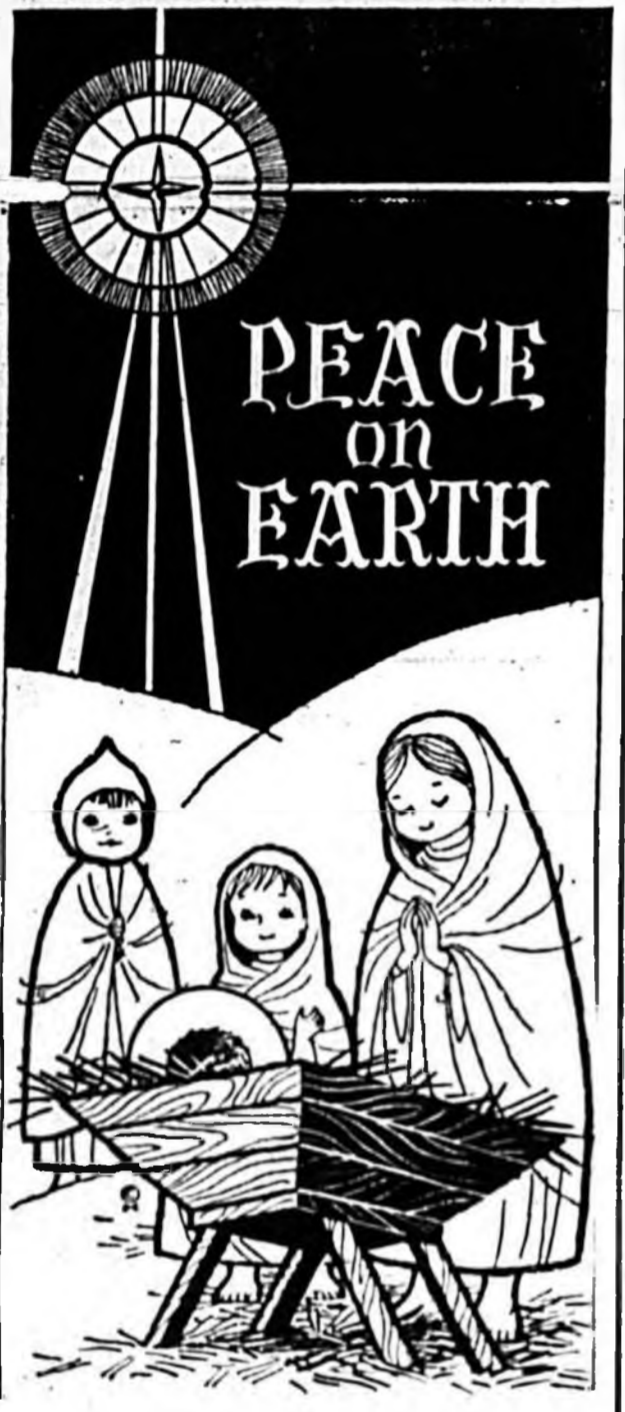

Nativity Masses Are Announced

By Donna Estes

A High Mass will be celebrated at the Church of the Nativity at midnight Christmas Eve to be followed by Benediction. The Mass will be preceded by Christmas Carols sung by the Adult Choir.

Masses on Christmas Day will be held at 9 a. m. and 11 a. m. The Children's Choir will sing at the 11 a. m. Mass.

Confessions will be heard from 7 until 8 p. m. Wednesday and on Thursday from 8 until 9 p. m. and from 7 until 9 p. m.

Santa Claus Wears A (GI) Uniform

FRANKFURT (UPI)—Along the cold, barbed-wired frontier separating communist East Germany from the free west, Santa Claus wears a uniform.

Instead of a sleigh pulled by reindeer, he drives a U. S. Army Jeep.

But it is Christmas, and that's the important thing.

The men who watch the empty miles, GIs far from home—many for the first time—will have their Christmas this year.

In a massive annual Christmas observance labeled "Operation Good Cheer," the U. S. Army and Air Force prepared to give their men an American Christmas in Europe, and to share the Yuletide festivities as in years past with their French, German, Italian and British neighbors.

U. S. military bases all over Europe are readying celebrations, Christmas dinners, gifts, and all manner of surprises for young and old.

Commissaries, PXs and post toy-shops were stocked for record-breaking holiday rush.

The U. S. Army alone reported a staggering 172,000 pound turkey order for its traditional Christmas Day dinner at European army camps.

The official army menu for the feast reads like a model for American Christmas dinners from Maine to Oregon: "Shrimp cocktail, roast turkey with dressing and giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, mashed and candied sweet potatoes, butter, green beans, salad, olives, hot rolls, fruit cake, and a choice of mince meat or pumpkin pie."

In addition, the army's "Operation Good Cheer" made it possible for American servicemen in Germany to take part in Christmas observances in German homes, feasting on a German Yuletide dinner of roast goose and noodles.

A spokesman for "Operation Good Cheer" explained the program tries to make the young soldier's holiday like the one he might have spent at home with his loved ones.

Plans were under way at U. S. armed forces installations all over Europe to supply orphanages, old age homes and thousands of needy families with Christmas dinners, gifts and holiday fun.

Men of Hamilton Air Force Base, Germany, once again tackled with enthusiasm their AWED BY SANTA, this young chap was hesitant about what he should say that he most desired for Christmas. But, somehow, Santa learned he wants a bicycle. What's more, he's just liable to get it, too.

pet Christmas pastime, bringing Yuletide happiness to youngsters at Riutala Orphanage in the Arctic cold 500 miles north of Helsinki, Finland, believed to be the northernmost orphans' home supported by U. S. servicemen.

U. S. Air Force personnel at Bitburg Air Force Base in southern Germany scheduled Santa Claus visits for needy families and charitable institutions of all kinds, supplying thousands of dollars worth of warm winter clothing, toys, bedding, food and other necessities.

Not to be outdone by the Air Force, the U. S. Seventh Army got rolling with planned parties, tree lightings, Santa Claus visits, dinners and other festivities at its posts throughout Germany.

Seventh Army Commanding general William W. Quinn planned to visit as many troop units as his schedule permitted, to see how things were coming along in an army spokesman told UPI.

The Seventh Army planned to send its chorus of four "outpost" areas along the "Roman land" of the East-West German border, to bring a bit of Christmas to troops keeping constant vigil.

Berlin command soldiers were to play Santa to orphans at more than 50 parties, proclaiming "Peace on Earth" in the very shadow of the communist wall.

In France, children of American military dependents were learning Christmas carols in French to participate in festivities with local children in the French town of Sarrebourg.

British RAF and U. S. Air Force personnel of air force bases at Bentwaters, Wethersfield, Lakenheath and Alconbury, England, scheduled tree-lighting ceremonies, caroling, band concerts and visits to homes for the aged, under a jointly sponsored "Remember Our Own" program.

Chaumont Air Force Base in France laid on a special Christmas program by the Vienna Boys' Choir at its Community Center.

In other countries as far apart as Italy, Spain, Turkey and Greece, Christmas was in the air at U. S. Army and Air Force installations.

And there was something else.

Everywhere there were Christmas preparations, tree lightings, and plans for observances in the churches, and in light services in Protestant chapels and midnight masses in Catholic, lest mankind forget at the end of a troubled 1964 the meaning of "Peace on Earth, Goodwill to Men."

Catholic Women Hear Program On Lourdes

By Donna Estes
Mrs. Ruth Franz of Orlando gave an interesting talk and showed color slides of Lourdes at the Christmas supper meeting of the Church of Nativity Catholic Women's Club held Monday evening at the church social hall.

Mrs. Franz spoke of her personal impressions of Lourdes which she has visited a number of times.

Presiding the program a covered dish supper was served to the 30 members and guests attending.

Rev. Hugh Keane, pastor was presented with a check for $50 from the club, a spiritual banquet from the parish and many other Christmas gifts.

Special guest was Mrs. Elizabeth Gehrig of Orlando.

Letters Flood Santa Claus

SANTA CLAUS, Ind. (UPI) — Santa Claus is going to have a very busy time this Christmas Eve if the letters which poured into his "home away from home" are any indication.

Thousands of letters from children around the world flooded this little Hoosier village.

The letters, all of them answered by Santa Claus, carried requests ranging from a time-bomb set to "mommy's purse."

One little girl, who apparently doesn't know her mommy has a purse, asked Santa for 12 cents.

From Wuerzburg, Germany, came a helpful letter from Mike Fleming who wrote, "Please bring me two space-phones as in Sears catalog, page 243."

Coleman and Hugh Groves, Prospect, Ky., also were space-minded with requests for a rocket and a jet, but they also asked for a fishing pole, rifle, gloves and candy.

Christina Lach, Grange Park, Ill., wisely adds a note that many fathers might second when she put on the margin of her list: "Nothing to put together."

Seven-year-old Julianne Sherman, Mason, Ohio, asked for "something to play with" and promised, "I will try to be good the rest of the year and the next year, too."

Pamela Schlie, College Park, Md., was more specific. She asked for "a pogo stick, a time bomb game, a cake mix set, a Mouse Trap game and a dish set."

Billy Watts, Germania, Pa., asked for several toys and said, "I have a lot of real nice clothes and I don't need any more."

Wayne James, Thomson, Ill., cryptically asked for 12 cents.

Frances Suarez, Pembroke, Mass., asked Santa for Beatle shoes, Beatle pants and Beatle game, then added, "I hope you know who the Beatles are."

Carol Williams, Sarasota, Fla., ended her letter with the thought that, "I want to leave some toys for the other kids."

Frank Stallon, Salem, Wis., asked nothing for himself but wrote only for "a spice rack for my mother please."

Debbie Daley, Mt. Pleasant, S. C., wrote, "I want anything you want me to have."

Members of the Santa Claus American Legion and Forty and Eight served as Santa's helpers, along with other groups, in answering the children.

The replies from Santa Claus made no promises and explained that, "I may not be able to bring you everything you want, but I'll try and do my best."

The California condor can survive sudden changes of atmospheric pressure that would kill other creatures.

St. Nick Prevails In Germany

FRANKFURT — (UPI) — Christmas in Germany is not what it used to be.

But then it never was. The Christmas traditions much of the world thinks started here are mostly overlaid and refined imports on a pre-historic foundation.

Take St. Nicholas, the German version of Santa Claus, for example.

The Christian German celebrated the Dec. 21 winter solstice, when daylight hours start to lengthen, as the Feast of Tyr, the god of the sun, war and justice.

Earlier in December, they believed, Wotan and his "wild army" of heathen, sub-gods roamed the land, blessing the crops of good people, wreaking havoc on evildoers.

Came the early Christian missionaries and German converts learned of St. Nicholas, the Bishop of Myra, who fed his Asia Minor flock miraculously during famine.

Still later, German Christian knights returned from the Crusades with happy tidings from Bari, the Italian town where St. Nicholas was buried.

St. Nicholas, the knights said, visited homes everywhere on the anniversary of Christ's birth, bestowing presents on all, especially the children.

The tradition took in Germany, as it did throughout Europe—but with a difference. Here the whitebearded, red-suited old gentleman traveled with an ogre-like club-wielding companion named Rupprecht.

While St. Nicholas dispensed joy, Rupprecht—descendant of Wotan and his "wild army," scholars say—spanked naughty children with his club and carried off the worst little boys in a sack.

Alas, poor Rupprecht is changing too. In recent years—perhaps influenced by the American G.I. concept of what Santa's assistants should be—German department store window decorations show him less ogre-like, more of a good natured elf—or omit him altogether.

Merchandise managers say they sell more toys that way. Another illustration of Germany's changing Christmas is the Christmas tree.

Ancient Druid high priests heaped piles of spruce and fir on mountaintops and decked them with chicken entrails and fruits the eve of the Dec. 21 solstice.

When the first rays of the sun peeped over the horizon, the priests set torch to the Yule logs. Yul was another name for Tyr) and hurled bonfires down the mountains.

Silver dollars have not been minted in the United States since 1935.

The flaming juggernauts signaled the bear-skinned heathen in the valley below it was all right to start guzzling mead.

The missionaries drove out the Druids. But early German Christians celebrating the coming of Jesus kept on using Yule logs. The firs and spruce were moved into the homes, minus chicken entrails but still decked with fruits and topped with the Star of Bethlehem.

Again, the metamorphosis is not over.

Until a few years ago, tree decorating was a do-it-yourself, family affair. Germans decorated their Christmas trees with apples, oranges, paper cutouts, even strings of beads. Now the shops sell tons of artificial ornaments—again perhaps the G. I. influence.

And the growing number of families who heed fire department warnings to use electric lights rather than candles on their home Christmas trees is enough to make Wotan turn over in his grave.

Joy Reigns In 'Cradle Of Christendom'

Kremlin Ignores Two Christmases

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union has two Christmases—both officially ignored by the Kremlin's atheistic rulers.

Except for a few thousand practicing Roman Catholics and Lutherans and the Western colony in Moscow, Dec. 25 is just another working day in Russia.

The Catholics and Lutherans observe Christmas Dec. 25, following the Gregorian calendar as most of the Western world does.

But Russia's Orthodox church as well as other small Christian faiths—such as the Baptists—celebrates Christmas Jan. 7—the Nativity date fixed in the Julian calendar.

Despite the official policy, the Christmas festive spirit from bygone religious days dies hard in this country.

At Christmas—New Year's streets are filled with decorated trees, colored lights, and there is a holiday gaily in the frosty capital. People scurry for holiday gifts.

But instead of the Star of Bethlehem, the Red Star of Communism tops the trees.

There's even Santa Claus, only he is known as Ded Moroz (Grandfather Frost).

The gaily builds up for New Year's eve. New Year's has officially replaced Christmas under Soviet Communism.

For adults New Year's is a time of parties, lavish feasts, champagne, vodka and exchange of gifts.

For children it is the night when Grandfather Frost travels with his reindeer-drawn sleigh through the snow with his granddaughter, Snegurochka (The Snowmaiden).

The yolk or fir tree fill Soviet homes. The biggest yolk in town is at the Palace of Congresses where the Kremlin leaders host a New Year's banquet for the foreign diplomatic corps and a few Western correspondents.

For those Russians, however, to whom fir trees, Grandfather Frost and gifts are the celebration of the birth of Christ, there is no official bar to church attendance. But at the normal Russian Christmas-tide (Jan. 7) the Soviet press generally steps up its anti-religious propaganda campaign.

On Christmas Eve and day, the 24th and 25th, the Western diplomatic colony will attend small, privately held masses in the apartment of Father Joseph Richard, of New York City, the American Catholic chaplain.

The Rev. Donald Roberts of Pelham, N. Y., also will conduct Christmas services in his apartment.

Faithful Of Many Lands Pay Homage

BETHLEHEM (UPI)—Nowhere in the world is Christmas a more joyous and reverent festival than here in the cradle of Christendom where it all began.

The ceremonies attendant on the occasion bring the faithful from many lands to join in the prayers and homage to the Christ Child at the Church of the Nativity.

In a service changing from year to year, a priest in gold and red robes at midnight on Christmas Eve lowers the wooden image of a child from the altar where it has rested since last Christmas, and takes it in his arms.

The priest moves slowly through the aisle of the church and makes his way through winding stone passages to a subterranean cave. Two rows of altar boys carrying candles, follow him.

When the priest arrives at the cave, bells begin pealing from above. They join in a message that has been sounded for centuries from this place to the world on Christmas night — "Peace on Earth, Good Will to All Men."

In the cave, the red-robed priest places the child's image on a marble slab over the hollow rock that guards the legendary place of birth. His chant mingles with the sound of the bells as he sings the Gospel of the birth of Christ, bringing the service to a triumphant climax.

Over the crib where the Bible says Christ was born, these sacred rites are celebrated as they have been every Christmas night in the memory of man. They actually begin as dusk settles over this little town, built of pale honey-colored stone, and the sleepy Judean hills stir to life.

"MY CHRISTMAS DREAM," theme of the recent Juycees Christmas parade is depicted with this float.

BETHLEHEM (UPI)—The Latin Patriarch having been received by King Hussein and the Guardian of the Franciscan Terra Sancta College, enters the church through the Needle Eye Door after first lighting a charcoal incense lamp and anointing himself with holy water.

Followed by monks from the Latin monasteries, he makes his way through the dark and empty main nave of the great basilica to the Roman Catholic Church of St. Catherine which adjoins it.

Inside, a choir chants prayers. When the Patriarch is seated on the dais, the vesper service begins. Meditation lasts throughout the evening—building up to the midnight mass.

Ebenezer Scrooge Buried Every Year

SANTA FE, N. M. (UPI) — They bury Ebenezer Scrooge every year at Christmas time in this quaint, European-like city in the Southwest.

That's because the Yuletide spirit in Santa Fe is a mixture of Indians, luminarias and pinatas, singing processions and holiday fun.

The bah-humbung visitor who isn't on his guard will be transported back 2,000 years in Santa Fe when he sees the barren New Mexico hills.

Lonely shepherds will tend their flocks as they did in Palestine. Narrow dirt roads wind up hillside to tiny adobe villages.

This natural Biblical setting just isn't the place for a bah-humbung attitude.

In pueblos and villages surrounding Santa Fe, natives enact Los Posados — the Proclamations. In one of the oldest Spanish traditions, groups of children spend nine days going door to door seeking shelter for the Virgin Mary. The answer for them as it was for Mary and Joseph is always the same: "There is no room here."

On Christmas Eve in Indian pueblos, natives recite prayers taught them 300 years ago by the Spanish padres. After the prayers, the Indians step outside and dance the story of the coming of Christ. The dances enact ancient Spanish miracle plays.

After the dances, bonfires are lighted to guide the lost Christ child to the village.

Big Time

In Santa Fe, Christmas refuses to be a one-day trim-the-tree affair. Homes gleam with hundreds of luminarias—paper sacks filled with a single candle inside each sack. Roaring bonfires are lighted and miracle plays take place. Families gather to break pinatas—colorful dolls from the ceiling to be broken by unwieldy children.

Early in December, the luminarias go up on the flat roofs and walls of Santa Fe homes. Traditionally the lights lead the way for the lost Christ Child, El Nido Perdido, who will walk among the faithful at Christmas time.

The feast of the Virgin of Guadalupe begins Dec. 11 and honors the patroness of the Americas. Then comes the nine-day re-enactment of the holy family's search for shelter in Bethlehem.

In Rio Grande villages around Santa Fe, folk plays with local casts are performed. Stories of the ancient shepherds—Los Pastores—are retold. Churches in the villages are lighted by incense candles made by the natives especially for Christmas.

Finally on Christmas Day, Santa Fe bursts with fiesta gaiety. In homes are roasted turkeys stuffed with pinon nut dressings. There are also marmititas—roast sucking pig. And there is corn, rice squash, tortillas and a glass or two of sugary chokecherry wine.

Austrians Kids Wait For 'Christkind'

VIENNA (UPI) — "Santa Claus Is Coming To Town" doesn't mean a thing to Austrian kids, but they don't mind.

Their Christmas presents are delivered by the "Christkind," or Christ Child.

The "Christkind" never arrives by chimney and how he gets into the house is a well-kept secret.

Just before he's due the parents send the children to their rooms, usually about 7 p.m. on Christmas Eve.

Later, the father of the family rings a glass bell and the children find their presents stacked under the Christmas tree.

Under every tree there is a candle replica of the stable at Bethlehem with small figures of Joseph, Mary, the infant Jesus, the Wise Men and the shepherds.

The tree, decorated with colored glass balls, chocolate men, silver snow, is lighted with wax candles—not electric lights.

Despite official protests that every year somebody's tree catches fire from the candles, Austrians point out they've had candles for centuries and Christmas wouldn't be the same without them.

The whole family opens its gifts on Christmas Eve instead of the next morning and then everybody sits down to a big dinner, the main course of which is fried carp. It's served with potato salad.

Then they all go to church for midnight mass—even the youngest kids. It's the only night in the year they may stay up so late.

Merry Christmas!

best wishes for happy holidays.

Miracle Of Mystery Painting Attracts Many

Yule Is Trencherman's Delight

PARIS (UPI) — Frenchmen take a lot of pleasure in proving that Christmas is a feast day.

It's a trencherman's delight.

A Catholic country despite rampant anti-clericalism, France fills its churches at Midnight Christmas Eve.

In November and December the streets are hot-boxes of crushed humanity as the nation goes on a buying spree as heady as any you would expect to see in Buffalo, Detroit or Atlanta.

The children find their presents Christmas morn. in slippers under the mantelpiece or the Christmas tree, much as those in America find them in stockings hung the night before.

But first, Christmas Eve, and foremost, into the wee hours of Christmas morning, this is a feast day, a day for eating, drinking.

Families start nibbling late the night of Dec. 24. They take a break for mass at midnight. And then they settle down to stuff themselves into the dawn of the 25th.

In Provence, deep in the south, they traditionally eat up to 13 kinds of desserts in a kind of gastronomic marathon.

But everywhere, when the family can afford it, and sometimes when it can't, the meal begins with pate de foie gras—the rich truffle-flavored paste made from the livers of over-fed geese.

This is followed by the turkey, fast becoming a tradition in economically burgeoning France.

And finally comes the "bûche de Noël," a creamy chocolate Christmas cake that sticks to the ribs.

When the family's champagne washes it all down, otherwise, white wine does.

What happens to the children? They sleep. What happens when it's time to open the presents? The world isn't so different from place to place. The revealing adults are grumpy, but they're there.

People come home for Christmas. It is a feast, but it is a family feast.

Old Mission, Built In 1772, Kind Of Shrine

TAOS, N. M. (UPI)—The miracle of the mystery painting inside the old mission church of San Francisco de Asis at Rancho de Taos attracts thousands of Roman Catholics each Christmas.

Painted by Henri Ault more than 60 years ago, it is a portrait of Jesus standing on the banks of the Seas of Galilee. In darkness, the picture becomes self-illuminated, and the shadow of a cross appears over the left shoulder of Jesus and a halo over the head.

This painting, plus the dozens of other old religious items has turned the mission into a kind of shrine.

Built in 1772, the old mission was one of 48 missions established by Spanish missionaries across New Mexico. One of the latest, the Rancho de Taos mission has been in use continuously since it was built.

The mission contains three pieces of handcrafted silver from 17th Century Spain. They include a recessed cross, an asperguel, or holy water sprinkler, and a set of three chime bells. The bells are still used to announce the entry of the priest at mass.

Two ancient sanblas and a silver candleabra are in the sanctuary. An old lamp hangs overhead and there are two rare statues of St. Francis at either side, the dates back to the 16th century.

Behind the altar is a hand-carved and painted crucifixion scene with figures clothed in deerkins. The value of all the church's items has been set at almost $1 million, but to the priests at the church, they are second value.

Construction of the church took almost a half century. Designed by Santa Fe, as well as all the Spanish missions churches, only native materials, dried adobe bricks and wooden beams, were used. It is 100 feet long with walls five and a half feet thick.

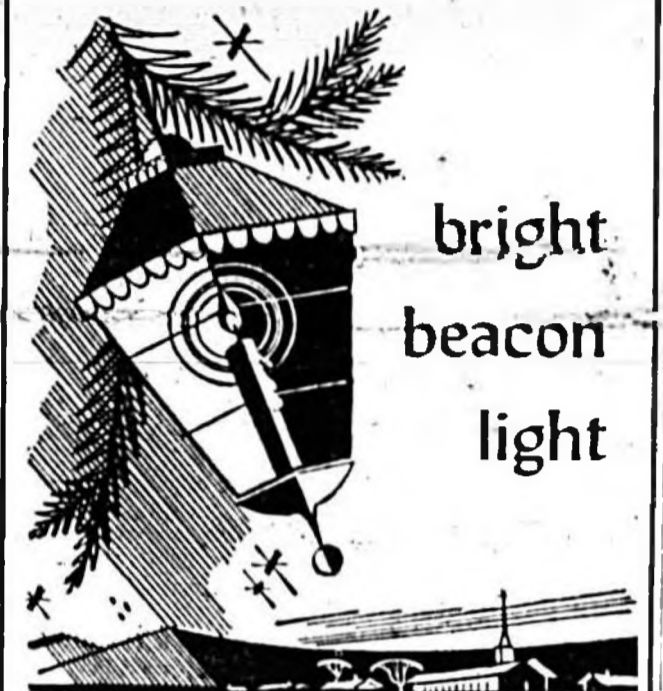

By tradition the church is annually repainted with white adobe stucco. Only the women may touch the church walls while the men mix and carry the mud for them. It takes nine days to re-stucco the mission, and a celebration is held after the annual chore.

The roof of the church is supported by huge hand-hewn rafters hauled from the nearby Laos Mountains. The supporting corbels were hand-carved and painted with vegetable dyes by native artists.

As time passed, additions were made to the church, but tourists still feel the mood of old New Mexico when they enter the mission doors. Like so many of New Mexico's missions, the church will remain a lasting monument to the first Christians in the New World for many years to come.

TOYS offered by Santa Claus are enough to thaw the awe of many youngsters, who soon whispered her Christmas Eve in his ear.

'Christkindl' Is Busy P. O.

VIENNA (UPI)—One of the world's busiest post offices during the yuletide season is the one at "Christ Child," Austria.

The real name of the village is "Unter Himmel," (Unterhimmel, near St. Veit, about 120 miles west of Vienna. In 1950 the Austrian post decided to give the place the postmark "Christ Child" — Christkindl) as a way of handling Christmas mail to children.

Children from all over Europe write to the Christ Child, the way children of the United States write to Santa Claus. Millions of them in the last 10 years have received replies with the Christ Child postmark.

The postmistress in Unterhimmel said letters in recent years not only came from all parts of Europe, but also from the United States and African and South American countries. The special holiday post office is set up, appropriately, in a village inn known since the 16th century as "The Christkindl." The staff tries to answer all the letters.

The postmistress cited a letter from Germany as typical.

"I would very much appreciate it if you would write to my three boys that they will get the presents they want so much if they are successful at school and are good to their parents."

Two ancient sanblas and a silver candleabra are in the sanctuary. An old lamp hangs overhead and there are two rare statues of St. Francis at either side, the dates back to the 16th century.

Italy Undecided About Christmas

ROME (UPI)—Italy, faced with the old and the new, hasn't quite made up its mind about Christmas.

For years, Christmas was a day of prayer in this Catholic nation, with the emphasis on its religious aspects. A large percentage of the population went to midnight mass after a huge dinner that traditionally consists of fish.

Gifts came later on Jan. 6. On that day, Epiphany, the good witch Befana brought children presents or hoops of coal depending on whether they had been good or bad during the year.

But now the holiday in such cities as Milan and Rome, has come to the way to what Italians call an American style Christmas. There are well-decorated apartment buildings and towns adorned with shops, cars in toking Santa Claus suits.

Newspapers and magazines are full with ads and you can even buy a Christmas suit. While Christmas is the day of Epiphany is still a day of prayer, but the way to what Italians call an American style Christmas.

Country Style

In the other hand in the rural areas there attend to their own Christmas. The birth of Christ, which Befana is the day for presents. Midnight masses are attended and Christmas Day is a time for a big dinner with friends for visits to relatives.

And then food. Daily there still remains the tradition of the crib, the miniature designs of the manger in Bethlehem where the Wise Men went to pay their respects.

These cribs are generally displayed in churches and some of them are truly works of art. The men who make them give an infinite amount of care in the smallest detail. In this regard, Naples still ranks as king when it comes to the displays of the "Presepe," as they are called in Italian.

A highlight of the Roman Christmas season is a visit to

Flooded Pacific Coast Staggers In Blizzard

40 Persons Die; Damage $200 Million

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—An Arctic-spawned blizzard blasted parts of the flood-ravaged Pacific Coast with swirling snow today, insulating hundreds of persons in the rough mountain country near the California-Oregon line.

At least a foot of new snow was reported in the Klamath and Salmon river areas of California's Siskiyou County. The weather bureau predicted that the total could reach more than three feet. Disaster officials said about 500 persons were stranded in the lumbering communities of Sawyer's Bar, Salmon, Cecilville and Soma Bar.

"People could be up there freezing to death," reported Capt. Bill Sowell in Yreka, Calif. "They haven't had food for a week and might be without fuel."

More Miseries

The new storm added to the miseries in the Far West, where six days of rampaging floods, heavy rains and high winds left at least 40 dead and damage estimated at $200 million.

The Red Cross in Washington, D. C., said more than 16,300 families suffered flood losses to their homes, farms or businesses.

The breakdown was 8,617 in California, 7,170 in Oregon, 365 in Idaho and 149 in Washington.

The flood-connected deaths included 20 in California, 17 in Oregon, two in Idaho and one in Nevada.

Eleven of the California victims died in the crashes of two helicopters involved in massive rescue and relief operation.

Others were killed trying to save their homes or neighbors from the rampaging water. The Nevada victim was 11-year-old Robert Osborne of Reno, who was in the Truckee River while trying to rescue his dog.

Huge Task

The worst appeared over in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Nevada, but the task of repairing highways alone was a gigantic one. Floods washed away 28 bridges in Oregon, damaged or destroyed 60 in California and wiped out a dozen spans in Idaho's Shoshone County.

In California, the weather bureau reported that the new storm would cause some rivers to rise again.

The Russian River, which winds through a popular summer resort area about 80 miles north of San Francisco, was expected to reach flood stage.

But after new minor peaking, the waters were expected to recede again.

Some major highways were cleared, but highway authorities estimated it would take months to rebuild in many areas.

Railroad service was partially restored but travel from California to Oregon was expected to be impossible at least until New Year's Day.

Director Donald Fielding of the Tampa insuring office of the Federal Housing Administration says that a vacancy survey conducted in Seminole County between Nov. 17 and 24, indicates that 6.4 per cent of all residences and apartments were vacant. This percentage represented 756 vacancies which were previously occupied, 91 new units never occupied and 79 new units under construction.

The survey was made by postal employees under the general supervision of five participating postmasters. They were Mrs. Margaret H. Ashley of Fern Park, W. K. Bryant of Longwood, Cecile P. Heard of Sanford, Ronald D. Masten Sr. of Altamonte Springs and E. B. Siler of Casselberry.

There were 108 vacancies in Altamonte, 235 in Casselberry, one in Fern Park, 91 in Longwood and 391 in Sanford. Under construction were 20 in Altamonte, nine in Casselberry, none in Fern Park, 11 in Longwood and 33 in Sanford.

"This," says John Kridler, manager of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, "is definitely a more favorable report than that last one."

Mrs. J. C. Kennedy, 129 Mayfair Circle, reports that her seven-month-old baby "Ringo" has been poisoned. Mrs. Kennedy resides in the same area where a dog named "Rebel" died of poisoning recently. "Apparently somebody out here doesn't like animals," said Mrs. Kennedy. "I thought I ought to report it so that parents in this area could warn their children to be extremely careful."

Memorial services were held this morning at Sanford Naval Air Station for Cdr. Cornelius V. Nolte Jr., killed Wednesday when his Vigilante bomber crashed in DeBary.

Commander Nolte died instantly as he tried in vain to guide his aircraft away from the populated area of the community. Injured in the crash and reported in good condition is Lt. (jg) Jaul A. Stokes, the commander's bombardier-navigator. Stokes suffered a vertebral fracture.

Meanwhile, a Navy board of inquiry has convened to probe cause of the crash.

Two Burglaries

Two service stations at the intersection of Highway 436 and Interstate 4 were burglarized over the weekend and money from cigarette machines was taken. The thefts are being investigated by sheriff's deputies. The exact amount of the money taken was not known, deputies said.

Applications for registration in all vocational training areas at the Mary Karl division of Daytona Beach Junior College will be taken throughout the holiday recess. Schedules, say officials, may be arranged on a full or part time basis. It'll be a great day when Seminole County can have its community college for persons wanting to further their academic, vocational and technical training.

Vigilante Use Is Curtailed, Navy Reports

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Navy has curtailed training flights in the RASC Vigilante Reconnaissance plane pending an investigation into a Dec. 23 crash, a spokesman said today.

The spokesman said that while training flights have been held up, there has been no interruption of use of the plane in the Pacific or Atlantic fleets.

The RASC recently joined the U. S. Fleet in the Mediterranean.

Built originally as a bomber, the Vigilante has been converted into a reconnaissance plane packed with electronic gear.

On Dec. 23, one of the planes on a training mission from Sanford crashed into a residential area in DeBary, Fla., and, according to reports to the Navy here, destroyed three houses and damaged several others.

The pilot was killed and the co-pilot injured.

The plane was demolished. A Navy spokesman said that the reason for the crash is so far unknown and it will be several more days before enough information is at hand to decide whether to curtail training flights or to order modifications in the airplane.

The pilot reported just prior to the crash that for some unexplained reason.

ORDERS RECEIVED BY HAWTING ONE

Capt. James O. Mayo, commanding officer of Reconnaissance Attack Wing One at Sanford Naval Air Station, this afternoon confirmed that orders have been received curtailing training flights with the RASC Vigilante.

The order followed the crash last Wednesday when Cdr. C. V. Nolte Jr., the pilot, was killed in seeking to direct his stricken Vigilante from striking homes at DeBary.

Bill O. Wydell, of 226 Bradshaw Avenue reported to police this morning that his house was entered over the weekend but apparently nothing is missing. A jalousie window was removed and a screen torn, he told police.

Sanford Guardsmen Save Youth

Two young National Guardsmen from Sanford are credited with saving the life of a 13-year-old Orange City boy, buried in a cave-in Saturday.

Raymond King, 20, of Lake Monroe, and Robert Murphy, 19, of Sanford were on their way back from DeLand, on SR 13A, just off Hwy. 17-92, when they were halted by Mike Blendinger and Calvin Malone, both 12, of Orange City, who said a companion had been buried in the sand of a cave the boys were trying to dig.

King and Murphy ran to the spot, grabbed David Lamb by his feet and pulled him out of the cave where he was buried head first down to his knees.

A passing motorist, Mrs. Carl Foote, who observed the happenings, called an ambulance. After a check-up Lamb was taken to his Orange City home, apparently none the worse for his experience. (The Volusia County Sheriff's Deputy Sherman Walker, of [unclear] office, said today that David

MAINE'S STATE CLASS I CHAMPIONS, the Ellsworth Eagles, arrived in Sanford Sunday afternoon for games tonight and Wednesday with the Oviedo High School Lions. Christmas Baby Is Girl

By Dottie Austin

"And there was abiding, 'Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy — for unto you is born this day, a daughter. And this shall be a sign unto you—you shall find the babe wrapped in a big red stocking, because it is the day known as Christmas.'"

And he came with haste and found Mary Jane and the baby lying in the bed.

And when the time comes that the young couple shall depart from the hospital with the child, the father shall take them to his home at 2633 Sanford Avenue. And later he shall return to his duties in HVAH-3 at Sanford Naval Air Station.

Navy Appeals For Lost Parts

The Navy appealed again today to souvenir hunters to please return parts of the Vigilante airplane which crashed last Wednesday at DeBary.

"Some vital parts of the aircraft are still missing," a Navy spokesman said today. "It may be these parts are still in the crash area, or they may have been taken by souvenir hunters."

These missing parts, it was explained, may hold the answer to the cause of the crash.

Martha Vance Killed Sunday In Car Crash

Mrs. Martha Ellen Vance, wife of the late W. L. Vance, of Sanford, was killed Sunday in a two-car crash of U. S. 231 near Troy, Ala.

A prominent member of First Baptist Church of Sanford, Mrs. Vance was the mother of Mrs. June Brodie 108 Temple Drive, Sanford, and Mrs. Richard Barreineau, who now resides in California with her husband who is in the military service.

Mrs. Vance left Sanford Saturday for a holiday visit in Troy with her mother. Four other persons, none of whom were identified in reports received, were injured in the accidents.

First Baptist Church officials said this morning that Mrs. Vance had been superintendent of one of the Sunday school's beginner departments for the past 20 years.

Dog Credited With Capture

Tex, a police dog owned by Lt. Earl Hourquades, of the Sanford Police Department, today was credited with tracking down a would-be kidnaper and saving a Sanford woman from further assault.

At 1:19 a. m. Christmas morning, the Seminole County Sheriff's Department received a call from Harley Anderson, of E. Onora Road, who said that a man had broken into his house, beat him up and forced a woman, Rosa Green, to accompany him into a nearby woods.

Deputy Bill Chandler and Constable Bob Carroll called on the Sanford Police Department to bring a dog to track the man.

Lt. Hourquades' dog, Tex, was put on the scent and quickly tracked down Wayne L. Francisco, 28, who was hiding in the woods with the woman. Sheriff's deputies placed him under arrest.

Francisco is in county jail under $2,500 bond, charged with breaking and entering, assault and battery, assault and indecent exposure.

Constable Carroll reported that Anderson suffered lacerations of the face from the beating administered by Francisco, and Mrs. Green had bruises about the face and throat. He said Francisco had forced entry into the house by breaking out a window.

Constable Carroll credited the police dog, Tex, with swiftly and efficiently tracking down the man to his hiding place.

Florida Death Toll 24 Over 3-Day Holiday

MIAMI (UPI)—Eighteen people died on the highways and at least six more were killed in other accidents during the Christmas holiday in Florida that was climaxed by a 17-car smashup on an interstate highway Sunday.

Noah Hodges, 25, of Apopka, was the last victim reported by the highway patrol during the long holiday. Hodges was killed in an auto accident south of Plymouth Sunday night.

The Florida Highway Patrol said 18 persons received minor injuries in the mass collision on Interstate 75 near Ocala. Police said the accident was caused by an unidentified motorist who stopped in the road where the highway merges from four to two lanes.

Four drowned in fishing accidents and a Jacksonville fire claimed the life of a Jacksonville invalid during the holiday period that began at 6 p. m. Thursday and continued through midnight Sunday.

By Saturday night nine smashups had taken the lives of 13 people in Florida.

Killed Saturday were Steven C. Wetherington, 22; Lydia Eates Wetherington, 19, and Mrs. Gertrude Christy, 75, all of Orlando.

A United Press International count showed 378 traffic deaths throughout the U. S. during the holiday. The breakdown of all accidental deaths: Traffic, 376; fires, 47; planes 18, and miscellaneous, 62, for a total of 703.

Military Gets LBJ Orders

JACKSONVILLE (UPI)—President Johnson wants the armed forces to wipe out "every vestige" of racial discrimination in National Guard units at home and in housing and public places used by American troops abroad.

He issued such instructions to the Pentagon on the basis of a presidential committee's report calling for "immediate and, if necessary, drastic action" by U. S. commanders abroad to assure equal rights for Negro servicemen.

Welder Slays Two, Himself

JACKSONVILLE (UPI)—A young welder who killed his ex-wife and another woman Sunday died early today from a bullet he had fired into his own temple.

Authorities said a note was found in Larry D. Boyer's possession which read: "I am sorry for what I have done but I loved her too much."

His two victims were Mrs. Sharon Boyer and Maxine Stackhouse, both 22.

City Ponders Bars Closing

Consideration of a change in closing hours for bars for New Year's Eve will face City Commission when it meets tonight at 8 at City Hall.

Also on the agenda is a scheduled address by Municipal Judge Ken McInosh. His topic was not listed in the memo to city officials.

Other items in the brief agenda lists consideration for the transfer of funds for police cars; approval of specialized engineering services of Clark, Dietz, Painter and Associates; consideration of adoption of an area at 27th Street and French Avenue; and renaming of Lincoln Street to Grove Manor Drive.
