Festivities planned for July 4

By Wayne Mize
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A bevy of activities for young and old are planned in Seminole County as part of the nation's Independence Day celebration next week.

Two fireworks displays top the county's Fourth of July schedule of events.

The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce and the city will conclude an afternoon of fun, food and music at Fort Mellon Park with its annual fireworks display at 9 p.m. There is no charge for the fireworks display.

Fort Mellon Park is located between First Street and Seminole Boulevard near downtown Sanford.

The Greater Ovido Chamber of Commerce and the city of Ovido are also hosting a giant fireworks display at the Seminole Flying Ranch at 8:45 p.m.

Seminole Flying Ranch is three miles east of Ovido on State Highway 419. People are asked to contribute a donation of $2 per carload for the fireworks show, which has attracted more than over 10,000 people each year it has been presented.

Activities at Fort Mellon Park will begin at 5 p.m. with a special appearance by Twiggy, the water skiing squirrel on Lake Carolla, which is behind the General Sanford Museum.

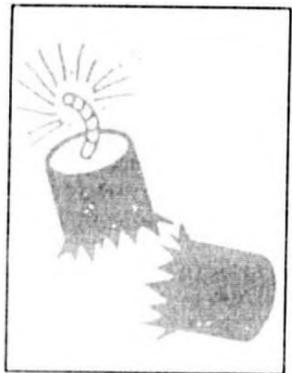

At 6 p.m., a barbeque of ribs and chicken, prepared by the Ovido VFW will begin.

Advanced tickets for the barbeque are $7 for adults and $3 for children. Tickets will cost $8 and $4.50 on the day of the event.

At 7 p.m., a musical concert by Sanford's own Beverly family will begin, featuring easy listening patriotic music.

Dave Larr, executive director of the chamber, says he is also planning a sail boat parade on Lake Monroe at the time of the fireworks.

The boats will have lights along their masts, said Larr.

Manhunt ends; suspect surrenders

ESCANABA, Mich. (UPI) — A man suspected of killing four people and kidnapping his estranged wife surrendered early today after eluding a 10-day manhunt by dozens of federal, state and local officers, the FBI said.

Vincent Loomstoot surrendered to local police about 4 a.m. Authorities said Loomstoot's estranged wife, Peggy, was apparently unharmed and was being examined at a hospital.

The details that Larr says that he made a telephone call to the Escanaba police department and surrendered around 4 a.m., FBI agent John Anthony said in Detroit.

She's okay. Anthony said of Loomstoot's wife, who was taken hostage June 14 after four of her relatives were shot to death.

British investigate near-collision

LONDON (UPI) — British aviation officials are investigating reports of a near collision between a helicopter carrying Princess Margaret and a British Airways jumbo jet near Heathrow Airport. An air traffic controller first reported that the helicopter and the Tokyo bound jet came within 300 feet of each other Wednesday but the military pilot of the royal chopper believed they were only within 700 feet of each other as the jet climbed above the helicopter. The Defense Ministry said the helicopter pilot was fully aware of the situation and had watched the jumbo take off.

Song writer sues record company

DETROIT (UPI) — Eddie Holland Jr., part of the famed Motown songwriting team Holland-Dozier and Holland has filed a $170 million suit against Motown Records owner Berry Gordy Jr. The 43-page suit, which was filed Thursday in Detroit, says Gordy hasn't been paying Holland his royalties and also requests that Gordy surrender Holland's compositions, master recordings and copyrights. Holland, working with his brother Brian and Lamont Dozier, was responsible for hits like "Baby, I Need Your Loving," "I Can't Help Myself" and "Stop! In the Name of Love."

Seminole starts program to dispose of waste oil

By J. Mark Barfield
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County environmental officials have begun a free waste oil and used battery collection program in an effort to prevent used oil from being poured into backyards and storm sewers where it might eventually pollute drinking water.

Under the program, residents can drop used oil and batteries off at the two county transfer stations at Sanford and Upsala and at the county dump on Osceola Road. Each facility is open from 7:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m.

Fred Blakeley, county solid waste manager, says the state prevents used oil from being disposed of in landfills because the oil might seep into drinking water and contaminate it.

But the oil is getting into the landfill regularly, he adds.

"We're not supposed to take it, but it gets in," Blakeley says. "People put it in plastic containers then put the containers in brown paper bags, and in it goes. We try to monitor it, but it's difficult."

State and federal environmental officials discover large amounts of oil are seeping out of the landfill, the county faces hundreds of thousands of dollars of expenses in cleaning up the leakage, Blakeley says.

Tim Clabaugh, county environmental control manager, says most used oil collected by do-it-yourselfers is disposed of improperly.

"A lot of it goes in the ground out back of their house," Clabaugh says. "Some of it goes into the storm drains. Some people leave them in plastic containers in the garage and forget about them. I can tell you after about six months, the oil eats through the plastic and you wind up with a big puddle."

Blakeley and Clabaugh began considering a county waste oil collection program after K-Mart and other companies stopped taking used oil from do-it-yourselfers about a year ago. When it became apparent this spring that state legislators would pass far-reaching laws requiring recycling, they put the plan into action.

The county began collecting used oil about two weeks ago and after finding a source for used batteries, they began allowing them to be left at the transfer stations and the county dump. The program will be continued for six months and, if successful, will be adopted permanently, Clabaugh says.

See editorial, page 2D

About 200 gallons of oil has been collected since the program began — all on word of mouth advertising, Blakeley says.

Two 55-gallon drums are located at each transfer station for used oil disposal and residents can pour oil into the county's own 1,000-gallon waste oil tank at the dump.

Blakeley cautions residents that only used oil will be collected. No other fluids or liquids of any kind can be mixed with the oil. Mixing the fluids creates a hazardous waste, which could cost the mixer $200 in state fines if the donor is found, Blakeley says. Containers used to bring the waste oil to the site can be left in the trash containers there.

The used oil is collected periodically from the three locations by Central Florida Used Oil Service in Sanford. Kokomo Tool Inc. in Sanford collects the used batteries for recycling.

The program is free for the residents and also costs the county nothing, Blakeley says if the county can start earning revenue off the waste materials, income will be used to expand the program.

One direction that expansion may take is in the area of aluminum recycling.

Clabaugh says by the end of this year he plans to begin an aluminum recycling clearing house to bring together aluminum recyclers and service organizations. The county may start collecting aluminum itself for recycling in the future, he says.

Hospitals face nurse shortage

By Carol Ramsey
UCF Intern

A recent health care job fair in Orlando drew recruiters from 92 Florida hospitals. Their goal — to entice out-of-state nurses to reduce the state's 10.4 percent shortage.

They set up booths, passed out brochures, showed videos of nearby theaters, parks and museums. They chatted about their families and what a great place Florida is for families.

There was one just one problem — nurses, or the lack thereof. Only 150 to 200 nurses and nursing students attended the event over a four-day period.

Organized by Florida Hospital Association Inc., and coordinated through the Center for Career Development in Tallahassee, the Florida Health Care Job Fair was by no means a failure, but it does demonstrate the acute need for nurses, a need which is not unique to Florida or Seminole County. Event organizers say the national shortage is 13.5 percent and hits hardest in areas of dense population like the Northeast and the West Coast.

"We don't want to encourage job hopping from one hospital to the next," said Mark Milner, director of human resources for Florida Hospital Association. "That's not what this is about. We're trying to fill critically needed positions." Also in demand are: respiratory therapists, physical therapists, pharmacists, occupational therapists, radiology technologists, medical laboratory technicians and technologists. In fact, the most critical shortage is in physical therapy. Milner said statewide it ranks at 24.1 percent.

According to Milner, job fairs are taking place all over the country, but in Florida the focus is on solving the long-term problem and not on an exchange of existing personnel.

Dave Fiore, program consultant for the Center for Career Development, said most job fairs charge hospitals $4,000 to $5,000 to attend compared to the $650 charged for this event.

The fee is not out of line when you consider that hospitals will spend anywhere from $2,000 to $20,000 to recruit one nurse, he said. Coupled with the convenience of the job fair concept, the event begins to look like a real bargain. "We didn't want to charge $4,000 because many of the smaller hospitals in rural Florida could not afford that," said Fiore. "But we'll be lucky if we break even."

Bicycle riders scheduled to arrive in Sanford Sunday

SANFORD — Sunday is the final day of a 1,500-mile bicycle trip, which four men began 14 days ago in Sanford, Maine.

The pathfinders, and back roads of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia have come and gone.

Having battled record temperatures most of the way, the cyclists are scheduled to arrive at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce at 4 p.m. with a police escort.

The public is invited to attend the welcome home ceremony for Sanford residents Jim Clark, John Lommerse and James Quinn, who along with Tom Clark of Manhattan, N.Y., made the trek to benefit the American Heart Association.

"We're toward the end and I guess we're all anxious to get home," said Lommerse, 23, during a telephone interview from Georgia Friday.

"We've had the wind and heat to fight and we've had to go out of our way to find a place to stay," said Quinn, 47. "But we feel like we've been real blessed in that we haven't been rained on much or had any bad accidents."

Jim Clark, 43, said the tourism consumes "an awful lot of water" during the daily rides, which have averaged 100 miles per day. "Sometimes we stop and eat, but it isn't always easy to find a place."

"We're all getting a little sore, but it isn't too bad," he added. "We've had a real good time."

Quinn told of a chance meeting with a former Sanford resident during Thursday's ride through Bristol, Ga.

"We were traveling on this country road near Bristol (Ga.) Her house was out in the middle of nowhere," said Quinn. "She came running out into the front yard and flagged us down."

POLICE

IN BRIEF

Sanford man arrested, charged with possession of rock cocaine

Len Clay Howell, 25, 2441 Jet Way, Sanford, was arrested shortly after midnight by Seminole County deputies at the Club 2 Spot in Midway after deputies reportedly discovered him holding a matchbox containing a small quantity of rock cocaine and drug paraphernalia, including a razor blade, a wire filter and a safety pin. He was charged with possession of cocaine and possession of drug paraphernalia. He was taken to the Seminole County Jail where bond was set at $2,000.

Driving under the influence

The following person faces a charge of operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol in Seminole County: Jimmie M. Con, 20, 224 Lenfield Cir., Winter Park, was arrested by Seminole County deputies at 3:40 a.m. at Lake Howell Square on State Road 436 after witnesses, including a Florida Highway Patrolman, reported seeing him leaving the scene of an accident nearby. Con reportedly failed roadside sobriety tests and was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of an accident. He was taken to the Seminole County Jail where bond was set at $1,000.

Churches report burglaries

SANFORD — Two churches reported to the Seminole County Sheriff's Department incidents involving burglaries and thefts, including: ● New Bethel A.M.E. Church, 3615 Main St., Midway, reported a $100 auto battery was removed from the church bus sometime between last Sunday at 7 p.m. and Friday at 9 a.m. The person reporting the crime said a chain used to secure the hood of the vehicle had been cut. ● Grace Presbyterian Church, 1111 Tusawilla Rd., Winter Springs, reported $1,500 in garden equipment was taken from the church's tool shed. The person reporting the crime said the lock securing the shed had been pried off sometime between noon last Saturday and 7:45 p.m. Thursday.

Burglaries, thefts reported

SANFORD — Three burglaries to private residences were reported to the Seminole County Sheriff's Department Friday. Those reports include: ● A Lake Mary home in the 700 block of Heather Glen Circle was reported burglarized while the owner had left the home for only one hour Friday. The victim reported leaving the home at 2:15 p.m. and when the victim returned, jewelry valued at $1,400 had been removed from a ransacked bedroom. Deputies determined the burglar apparently entered through a kitchen window by removing the window screen and breaking the glass so the window could be unlocked. ● A home in the 600 block of E. Chering Cross Court in Lake Mary sometime between 11:30 a.m. and about 7:30 p.m. Friday. The victim reported $1,400 in gold jewelry had been removed from the bedroom. The master bedroom window had been broken and opened, deputies found. ● An Altamonte Springs home in the 8000 block of Richbee Dr. was reportedly burglarized sometime between 1 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. Thursday. The victim reported the home was apparently entered through an unlocked utility room door. A cassette case and tapes, both valued at $640 each, were taken, along with $400 in cash and a $75 check.

TaxWatch group reports finding $150 million budget 'turkeys'

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — An independent government watchdog group said Friday it found a record $150 million in budget "turkeys" — the Legislature funded while ignoring the state's priorities.

"We are not meeting our existing lawful, constitutional, prioritized obligations today," said Dominic Calabro, executive director of Florida TaxWatch. "Why should we create artificially some others in an unfair and inequitable fashion?"

"When we see turkeys proliferate in the magnitude that they have, in the willy-nilly fashion that they have, we're seeing a legislative statement — intentional or unintentional — that might makes right," Calabro said.

TaxWatch officials asked Gov. Bob Martinez to veto as many of the projects as possible to discipline lawmakers who the group said cannot seem to stop themselves from inserting local pet projects into the state budget.

Martinez has until July 1, the beginning of the next fiscal year, to kill such projects by using his line item veto. His aides are looking at the $21.2 billion state budget, trying to identify such projects.

The item topping the Florida TaxWatch list was the $30 million package intended to help the Chicago White Sox to St. Petersburg. Other items on the list include roads, traveling exhibits and a flamingo aviary.

The TaxWatch list projects all benefit private interests or do not appear on priority lists drafted by state agencies, the governor's office of planning and budget or legislative committees. Such projects, which lawmakers refer to as "turkeys," are commonly inserted into the budget by powerful lawmakers in the closed door negotiations where the state budget is settled in the closing days of a legislative session.

Although many of the projects may be worthwhile, they leave other vital projects short of funds, said Calabro.

He said the dollar value of turkeys in the state budget has increased five-fold since 1980. Up to that time, only a handful of top lawmakers had the clout to insert turkeys in the budget.

But with passage last year of the services tax and its replacement with the 6 percent sales tax that put over $1 billion into state coffers, scores of committee leaders began demanding and winning "turkeys" of their own.

A single major turkey can inspire many more, Calabro said.

He cited the $30 million approved to help St. Petersburg finish its Florida Suncoast Dome in time for the Sox to begin their next season in Florida, presuming the Illinois Legislature rejects its own package to induce the team to remain in Chicago.

"The dome opened up the flood gates," Calabro said. "It was such a bold and unprecedented sweep. Everyone began to fight for themselves, not for the statewide public interest."

TaxWatch identified $528 million in vital needs the state is not funding this year, including $11 million for child care for the poor, $112 million for community care for the elderly, $13 million for emergency shelters for children, $4 million for foster care and $80 million for dropout prevention.

State, consumer leaders appalled by utility ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — State and consumer leaders are appalled by the Supreme Court ruling that federally approved utility rate hikes must be passed along directly to customers, calling the decision "the end of the world."

"I think it's horrible," said Mississippi Public Service Commissioner Nielsen Cochran after the 6-3 decision Friday on a case that began in his state.

"This is a slap in the face to the states that are trying to reduce the cost of electricity to their customers," Cochran declared, predicting the action would inhibit state regulatory powers across the country almost immediately.

The high court ruled states cannot prevent utilities from charging retail customers for wholesale energy rate hikes approved by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. The ruling reversed the Supreme Court of Mississippi, which held in February 1987 that the state utility commission was not obliged to grant a $327 million increase requested by the Mississippi Power & Light Co. to cover nuclear power plant costs incurred by its parent company.

In the short term, the ruling means Mississippi utility customers must pay about a third of the costs of the $1.5 billion Grand Gulf nuclear plant near Port Gibson, Miss.

But consumers everywhere are likely to feel the impact because states now must automatically pass along to customers the wholesale rate hikes approved by the FERC. According to court documents, about three-fourths of all rate cases heard at the state level involve utilities that engage in interstate activities overseen by the FERC.

From the point of view of states and people active at the state level, it's the end of the world, said Mark Cooper, research director for the Consumer Federation of America. He warned that utilities now may be encouraged to engage more interstate activities so they can bypass state regulatory bodies.

Writing for the court, Justice John Paul Stevens used a three-part analysis to conclude that the Constitution's supremacy clause bars states from taking action that conflicts with decisions made by the FERC.

First, FERC has exclusive authority to determine the reasonableness of wholesale rates, Stevens said. This principle binds both state and federal courts and is in the former respect mandated by the supremacy clause.

Second, he added, FERC's exclusive jurisdiction applies not only to rates but to power allocations that affect wholesale rates. Third, states may not regulate utilities from passing through to retail consumers FERC-mandated wholesale rates.

Wife of Jewish activist arrested

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Jewish activist living in Israel claims federal agents have arrested his wife for a 1980 bombing so they can lure him back to the United States to charge him with four other bombings.

Robert Manning, 36, a member of the militant Jewish Defense League, who emigrated from the United States to Israel in 1981, is the target of FBI investigations into four 1985 bombings, including one that killed Arab-American leader Alex Odeh as he entered his Santa Ana office, his attorney, New York lawyer Samuel A. Abady, said Friday.

A U.S. magistrate Friday ordered Manning's wife, Roselle Manning, held without bail for allegedly mailing a bomb that killed a secretary at a Manhattan beach computer company in 1980. She was arrested Wednesday at Los Angeles Airport as she arrived from Israel to visit her family.

Robert Manning wrote a letter dated Feb. 21, 1987, to the American Civil Liberties Union in New York saying he was a suspect in four bombings, Assistant U.S. Attorney Nancy Stock said at the bail hearing.

Singleton says he's still in Florida

RICHMOND (UPI) — Lawrence Singleton's ex-convict officer received a telephone call this week from the mutilation rapist, who said he was living with his brother in a neighborhood near Tampa.

The telephone call to Tom Webb, who supervised Singleton during the ex-convict's stormy parole, apparently was prompted by rumors that Singleton had returned to the Bay Area.

He asked me how I was and I told him I was fine, Webb said of Thursday's call. Then he gave me his address.

Webb said Singleton was living with his brother, Walter, in a neighborhood known as Forest Hills.

The rumors began when Singleton failed to appear in court this week for a hearing in Orange County Superior Court. The rapist, known as the "chopping off both arms" man, had written the court a letter with a Richmond postmark, however.

Singleton was due in court to explain how he planned his pending $2.4 million damages award to his victim, Mary Vincent.

The rapist is free to go wherever he pleases, but Orange County Sheriff's Office spokesman said he would be held in custody if he returns to California. Sheriff's Office spokesman said Singleton would return to California.

Alien forces affected power

By Fred H. Cooper Herald Staff Writer

It was a hot and sultry night followed by a sun obscured by haze, but giving promise of intensity to come. It is just that type of day in the life of citizens of Seminole County. But hark, The rains will come, probably even as you are reading this. We're going to consider a lot of weather today, just so you will be as confused about conditions as professional meteorologists seem to be all the time.

Seminole County is experiencing what is called a sea breeze effect, or after the case may be. This means that the rains will come in the early afternoon, not wait around until after naptime. How much? Anywhere from a quarter to three quarters of an inch in most places, and maybe up to two inches in others. How do you like those numbers? The effect will be in the rainfall, the effect will be in causing you to neglect yardwork and other aimless outdoor activities, thus providing time for more cultural pursuits indoors.

You probably noticed there was no rain during the past 24 hours, and the thermometer zoomed up to 95 degrees. Last night it bottomed out at 74 degrees and the easterly breeze is a pathetic 3 mph. The next 24 hours will be different.

We've been following those weak weather systems abounding in the tropics but have lost one along the way. The front down about Cuba which we hoped would gently strike the Texas coastline did just that last night. No damage but rainfall in small amounts pelted the coast just west of the Sabine Pass. It affected conditions from Lake Charles to Campeche Pass. The other two are still with us, however.

The tropical wave is now located just east of the Lesser Antilles, and is moving west north west at 15 mph. An Air Force plane is going up again today to keep us posted on its progress. The other is an upper level trough located between Bermuda and the Bahamas. It is also moving WNW at about 15 mph. That one might give some moisture to Georgia and the Carolinas.

Did you notice the blackout Friday night? Do you know why? Regardless of the flimsy reasons issued from earthlings at the power company, know you that it was the powers of alien forces at work on our area. Very, very, alien forces!

Streams of radioactive particles, caused by high energy explosions on the sun's surface, poured into Earth's atmosphere, including Seminole space. They may disrupt communications systems and ultimately cause auroras to glow at the poles. Scientists who recorded the activity believe the flares occurred as part of a new cycle of sunspots that are peaking in a region that expands an estimated 50,000 to 100,000 miles.

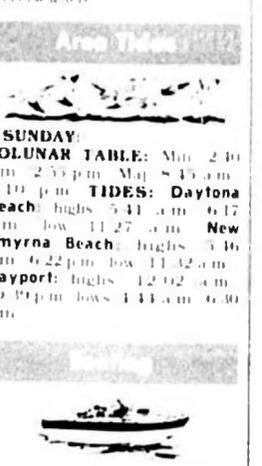

What all this means is that you should exercise care whilst wandering about in space and keep a sharp eye out for anything unusual about your abode. Don't look directly at the sun, however.

Reports of the drought continue to depress us, especially after hearing of the plight of our beloved cousins in and about Pascagoula and Ocean Springs.

(Reports by United Press International and data provided by the National Weather Service were used in compiling this report.)

The extended weather outlook Monday through Wednesday for Florida, except the Panhandle. Partly cloudy with a chance of mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms, but more numerous north. Lows in the lower 70s north to upper 70s south, except around 80 in the Keys. Highs in the upper 80s in beach and keys to low to mid 90s elsewhere.

SUNDAY: SOLUNAR TABLE: Min. 2:40 a.m. 2:55 p.m. Max. 8:45 a.m. 9:10 p.m. TIDES: Daytona Beach: highs 5:41 a.m. 6:17 p.m., lows 11:27 a.m. New Smyrna Beach: highs 5:16 a.m. 6:22 p.m., lows 11:32 a.m. Bayport: highs 4:22 a.m. 10:19 p.m., lows 4:41 a.m. 6:30 p.m.

St. Augustine to Jupiter Inlet: Today wind variable 5 kts except an onshore sea breeze of 10 kts near the coast during the afternoon. Seas 2 ft or less. Bay and inland waters smooth. A few thunderstorms. Tonight wind variable 5 kts. Seas 2 ft or less. Bay and inland waters smooth. Sunday wind south 10 kts. Seas 1 to 3 ft. Bay and inland waters a light chop. A few thunderstorms.

ROAD WORK THIS WEEK

Here are the projects in Seminole County that may affect the flow of traffic:

- 1 Red Bug Lake Road from east of State Road 436 to Autumn Glen Lane. Road widening. This major project will include substantial underground drainage work and removal of the existing road surface. Flagmen or detours may be used, but traffic backups are not expected to be worse than they are currently. Expected completion: November 1988. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.
- 2 Sand Lake Road, construction of sidewalk from W. Lake Brantley Road to Hunt Club Boulevard. Completion: July 1. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.
- 3 Pressview Avenue, construction work, drainage improvements and road reconstruction from North Street to Adams Street weekdays from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Motorists may encounter flagmen, reduced speed limits and single-lane traffic. Expected completion: September. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.
- 4 Winter Park Drive by Queen's Mirror Circle. Adding left turn lane. Lane closure and flagmen may create traffic congestion during rush hours. Expected completion: Aug. 6. Jurisdiction: Casselberry.
- 5 Orange Boulevard, extending pipe culverts. Motorists may encounter flagmen and reduced speed limits from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. weekdays. Expected completion: July 15. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.
- 6 C-431 and Wilson Road, construct turn lanes at Wilson Elementary School and partial paving of Wilson Road. Expected completion: July 1. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.
- 7 Intersection of Rightway and State Road 46. Constructing base drainage and paving Rightway, adding turn lanes on S.R. 46. Expected completion: July 29. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.
- 8 Lake Harney Road, paving and drainage work from Lake Geneva Drive to Harney Heights Road. Expected completion: July 15. Jurisdiction: Seminole County. (Not on map)

Writers' strike spells reruns for TV viewers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Television viewers can expect more reruns and fewer new shows this fall, and thousands of entertainment industry employees will lose their jobs, because the nation's largest group of scriptwriters voted to continue their 16-week-old strike, officials on both sides say.

The assessment came Friday from many film and TV executives and writers affected by what has become one of the most severe labor disputes in Hollywood's recent history.

Of the 3,722 members of the Writers Guild of America who cast votes in Los Angeles and New York Wednesday night, 2,789, or 74.9 percent, were against the "final" contract offered by the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers to end the writers' 4-month-old walkout.

Only 933, or 25.1 percent, voted in favor of the proposal. Guild officials said the vote signaled a record turnout for the 9,000-member union.

"This vote is awful for the industry as a whole, but especially for television," said Bob Gerah, vice-president and co-owner of the Gerah Agency, one of the entertainment industry's largest talent agencies.

"(The networks) face the possibility of losing all their first-run television programming for the fall season," he said. "The new season could now be moved all the way to January or lost altogether."

Gil Grant, a producer at Walt Disney Studios, said, "I don't think anyone doubts that the networks will lose viewership. If you don't have a new product, you have to have reruns. People will turn to video stores or cable TV."

The main issues separating the two sides have centered on producers' demand for scaled-back residuals on one-hour TV shows and a writers' demand for higher residuals for foreign sales of movies and TV programs.

Solar X-rays blast Earth

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Explosions on the sun hurled radioactive particles into the Earth's atmosphere and scientists said the spectacular flares may disrupt communications systems — such as ham radio operations — and will pose dangers for astronauts.

The high-energy explosions on the sun's surface Friday sent streams of radioactive particles into Earth's atmosphere that may also ultimately cause auroras to glow at the poles.

Solar flares of this magnitude have not been detected since 1984 and only 10 flares equally as spectacular were detected in the past 11-year sunspot cycle that ended in 1986.

"These flares are unusually large and certainly will be causing some disturbances on the Earth," said astrophysicist Dale Gary of the California Institute of Technology.

Low-frequency shortwave communications systems, such as ham radio operations, will especially be affected, he said.

Gary also said he and other scientists who recorded the activity believe the flares occurred as part of a new cycle of sunspots that are pockmarking the face of the giant star in a region that expands an estimated 50,000 to 100,000 miles.

In addition to causing radio interference, the solar flares pose dangers for astronauts. However, Gary said he expects the two Soviet cosmonauts now orbiting Earth to be protected from high-energy particles because "they are shielded by Earth's magnetosphere and the metal of the spacecraft itself."

"When flares occur, especially like these with lots of X-ray emissions, the X-rays arrive at the Earth as soon as the flares occur," he said.

Satellite communications whose signals beam through the outer layer of Earth's atmosphere, called the ionosphere, also will undergo disturbances because the particles from the solar explosions depress the layer, he said.

"This is the beginning of a new (sunspot) cycle and indications are that this one will be quite large. It's getting off to a rather big start," Gary said.

The flares erupted Friday in a region of the sun that had undergone on Thursday what Gary described as "flux." The solar flares are expected to be followed by magnetic storms that will dump energetic protons into Earth's atmosphere within 24 to 48 hours of the explosions.

"When these particles hit the upper atmosphere, they will cause it to glow," he said.

That bombardment is expected to affect Earth's North and South poles in the form of colorful auroras, which should be visible from the northeast regions of the United States, he said.

"Solar flares are very much associated with sunspots especially in the complex regions that give the most spots. Sunspots occur in groups and we call those groups active regions," he said.

Because sunspots occur in 11-year cycles, scientists can trace their evolution from cycle to cycle. Solar regions with high magnetic activity have been associated with sunspots, which are generally cooler than other areas of the sun.

The spots can be seen from solar telescopes as dark splotches on the sun's surface, Gary said.

"The peak of the last cycle was in 1980," Gary said. "The minimum, the time of least activity was 1986. So we're now two years into the next cycle."

Caltech astronomers, led by Hal Zirin, have been monitoring solar events from research telescopes on the campus and at the Institute's Big Bear Solar Observatory, northeast of Los Angeles.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Peru announces border closings in effort to curtail smuggling

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — President Alan Garcia Friday sharply restricted transit between Peru and five neighboring nations for a 30-day period in a sweeping move to fight smuggling of basic foods and other goods.

Garcia also ordered stiff fines for smugglers, limited the sale of gasoline along the Amazon frontier and required manufacturers to change labels on products sold in border regions to make them easier to control.

The measures were contained in four decrees published in the official gazette, El Peruano, and followed complaints that the treasury is losing $500 million a year on subsidies for basic foodstuffs and goods that are flowing to neighboring countries as contraband.

Business groups complain government policies of maintaining multiple exchange rates and rationing hard currency have distorted prices of many goods and create shortages.

The policies brought about record growth of 8.5 percent in 1986 and 6.7 percent in 1987, but have now sunk the country in a recession and triggered inflation racing at a rate of between 300 percent and 400 percent a year.

An overall decree by Garcia ordered the closing of "borders to all types of transit for a period of 30 days" except for transit regulated "by international treaties and pacts."

Peru shares borders with Chile and Bolivia to the south and southeast, Brazil to the east, and Colombia and Ecuador to the north.

Landslide cleanup begins

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — Rescue workers have abandoned hope of finding any survivors of landslides that buried at least 150 people in a northeastern Turkey village.

After a day of fruitless searching, officials said Friday they had lost all hope of finding survivors under the thousands of tons of earth and rocks that swept across a highway and buried the village of Catak Thursday in two rain-triggered landslides.

Aided by specially trained dogs, workers scoured the area as rain-loosened boulders and dirt continued cascading down the mountainside.

Seventeen persons were injured in the massive slide. Enver Hızlan, governor of the Black Sea province of Trabzon, said unexpected rocks and earth rumbling down the mountain hampered rescue work.

Turkish state television said Catak, some 400 miles northeast of Ankara in Trabzon province, is threatened by more landslides if the heavy rains continue.

Film footage carried on television showed rocks and earth still sliding down the slopes overlooking Catak Friday.

The rescue workers attempted to find victims in the village — where some houses were completely buried — using 18 specially-trained dogs flown in from West Germany. Officials said at least 150 people were missing and presumed dead.

Botswana draws heavy criticism

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok denounced Friday neighboring Botswana for giving refuge to the "despicable scum" of the African National Congress who carry out bombing missions in South Africa.

He pledged to attack ANC guerrillas, the white government's armed foes, "no matter where they hide."

Vlok's comments coincided with the death Friday morning of the second of unborn twin girls whose mother was seriously injured in a Johannesburg bomb blast Wednesday.

The minister accused the ANC of planting the explosive that ripped through a video games arcade and injured 10 people, including Michelle Ebrahim, eight months pregnant and expecting twin girls.

Delaware hospital announces plan to ban all AIDS patients

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — In what is believed to be the broadest ban of its kind, a foundation with hospitals in Delaware and Florida has decided it will no longer admit patients with AIDS beginning July 1, a hospital spokeswoman said Friday.

Patricia McNichol, spokeswoman for the Alfred I. du Pont Institute in Wilmington, said the board of directors of the Nemours Foundation in Florida, which supports the hospital, made the decision two weeks ago.

She said all incoming patients to be admitted will be screened and those testing positive for the acquired immune deficiency virus will be referred to other institutions.

In addition, the hospital's 750 employees will be tested and those infected with the HIV virus will be transferred to areas away from patient care. New job applicants will be rejected if they have the virus.

"This is the decision of the board of directors, who, in the current absence of conclusive medical information and clear legislative guidelines on preventing transmission of the virus, are concerned about assuring a safe environment for patients and employees," said McNichol, reading from a prepared statement.

She said the institute will "take strong measures" to assure confidentiality and compassion, and to provide counseling.

The policy also applies to the Nemours Children's Clinic, owned by the same foundation, in Jacksonville, Fla.

Security guard charged

CONCORD, Calif. (UPI) — A disgruntled security guard was in custody today on charges he walked into the offices of a company in the industrial park where he worked and methodically shot six people, killing a teenage girl who had taken a summer job at the firm to earn money for a car.

Sebron Fleaugh Jr., 45, was arrested without incident at his Oakland home three hours after the Friday evening shooting that left the 17-year-old Martinez girl dead and five other people wounded.

Jennifer Hollis died shortly before midnight of a bullet wound to the stomach after surgery at John Muir Hospital in Walnut Creek. Friends said the high school student wanted to earn money to buy a car and was working for the summer at Micropure, a maker of water purifying equipment.

Two other victims were reported in critical condition, two in serious condition, and one woman was in fair condition with superficial wounds.

Lt. Jim Jennings of the Concord Police Department said witnesses reported that the security guard, whom employees at the industrial park say had been working there for more than a year and was well-liked, was muttering under his breath when he came into the Micropure offices around 6:30 p.m.

Probers have videotapes of payoffs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Victor Cohen, a senior Air Force official implicated in the Pentagon corruption probe, boasted he was off the hook with investigators even as federal agents videotaped him and other Defense Department officials accepting alleged payoffs from private consultants, sources say.

Cohen was recorded with the consultants after a separate inquiry into alleged leaks of sensitive documents found insufficient evidence to prosecute him, law enforcement officials said in revealing existence of the videotapes Friday.

Speaking on the condition of anonymity, the sources explained that Cohen, a former consultant for Northrop Corp. who oversaw contracts on classified U.S. tactical programs, previously had been the subject of an inquiry by California investigators for the Pentagon inspector general's office.

It was that investigation that found insufficient evidence to prosecute him, they said — but the deputy assistant Air Force secretary became a subject of the current 2-year-old probe about a year ago when the use of wiretaps began.

Results of the earlier inquiry were reported to Air Force Secretary Edward Aldridge Jr. and the Pentagon's general counsel, Kathleen Buck, and sources said investigators later learned the results had filtered back to Cohen.

"He bragged about it to a consultant," one source recounted. "He was unaware that the taps were in place on the other investigation."

Cohen's lawyer, Seymour Glazer, could not be reached immediately about the allegations but has declined to comment to date.

NBC News, which first disclosed the incriminating evidence against Cohen Friday, quoted sources as saying that whenever a defense consultant would phone him at his office he would "clear his calendar" and leave the Pentagon.

The network also reported — and law enforcement sources confirmed — that Cohen's meetings were "recorded and videotaped and money changed hands."

He was not the only official filmed secretly, the sources told United Press International that James Gaines, a deputy assistant Navy secretary, also was videotaped meeting with consultants during the FBI-Naval Investigative Service probe of alleged bribes-for-contract data exposed last week.

The source said investigators suspect Gaines as the primary supplier of confidential data to his former boss, Melvyn Paisley, an assistant Navy secretary who left his post to return to private business as a consultant for McDonnell Douglas Corp. and other firms starting April 1, 1987.

Others among the six Defense Department procurement officials reassigned by Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci this week pending the outcome of the probe also are suspected of taking kickbacks, the sources said.

Authorities have alleged that industry consultants often sold information, including rival bids, on the same defense programs to several competing companies. NBC quoted an investigative source as saying the losers did not complain because "if the companies didn't play ball, they lost."

Officials confirmed for UPI that to conceal huge consulting payments from government auditors, defense contractors commonly asked their consultants to submit meaningless research papers, submitting the same ones repeatedly and collecting in each instance.

Even as the new revelations emerged Friday, defense lawyers in the sweeping case anonymously accused federal prosecutors of an intimidation campaign aimed at pressuring subjects of the probe to cooperate.

The lawyers charged numerous news leaks stating key figures have agreed to turn government witness have been erroneous — part of an effort to panic others into making a deal before it is too late.

Sources have said the investigation has implicated as many as 50 government employees, industry consultants and corporate officials, and that a number of them have expressed a willingness to cooperate. Several news reports this week have suggested Cohen and Gaines agreed to cooperate, but UPI sources familiar with the inquiry called these reports premature.

Cutting such a deal would be complicated at this stage, they said, because the Justice Department has kept under seal more than three dozen sworn affidavits supporting 42 search warrants executed nationwide last week.

 Fiore estimates $16,000 was spent promoting the event. Newspaper advertisements ran four consecutive Sundays in Chicago, Houston, Washington, D.C., Des Moines, and Detroit, as well as in two of the major industry publications.

A direct mail campaign targeted 40,000 nurses in Georgia and Pennsylvania. Posters and brochures were sent to nursing schools in Florida and across the country. Fiore said the demand for nurses has hospitals, independent practice, community settings, business and industry vying over nursing graduates. "It's extremely competitive," he said. "We encouraged students to attend who will graduate within two years because those already graduating have jobs."

"The biggest draw we have is the state of Florida, the beaches, the weather, the attractions," said Fiore. Florida is a diverse state and that diversity is reflected in nursing salaries, he explained. Although salaries in central Florida are competitive, southern Florida's tend to run higher and northern Florida's lower.

Milner said starting salaries average at $21,000 but they tend to level off at $28,000 after about three years.

One thing becomes clear when studying the nursing shortage and that is things will get worse before they get better. Milner said the shortage should peak in 1995 and a study performed by the Postsecondary Education Planning Commission, (PEPC) which serves as an advisory body to the state Board of Education, supports his view.

According to the PEPC report, the projected need for registered nurses in Florida in 1990 surpasses 70,000. To meet these requirements the supply of RNs would need to increase by approximately 13,000 in the next two years.

 Fred Streetman, chairman of the Seminole County Board of Commissioners, recommends the county also look into disposing of paint, aerosol cans and other hazardous materials that can't legally be disposed of in the county landfill. Clabaugh says such a program would require state and federal permits and an expense to the county.

Beginning the oil and battery collection program early may make the county eligible for state funds to continue and expand the program. Under the state's wide-ranging Solid Waste Act passed this year, $750,000 is available to be divided between local governments who already have recycling programs in place.

The act requires counties and cities to have recycling programs in place by July 1, 1989, with the goal of reducing solid waste statewide by 30 percent by 1994. The program requires the majority of newspaper, glass, plastic bottles and aluminum cans to be recycled.

The bill also requires that by Jan. 1, 1989, no batteries can be disposed in dumps or incinerators.

Martinez signs solid waste bill

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Florida's new Solid Waste Act calls for an ambitious social engineering project asking state residents to embrace recycling as an alternative to costly and polluting landfills.

Gov. Bob Martinez signed the legislation into law Friday. He said economic incentives provided by the law will prod Floridians into a "new era" of waste recycling and ease the state's mounting garbage disposal crisis.

Martinez said the law places Florida on the "cutting edge" of the national recycling effort and will "take us into a new era in terms of caring for our urban and natural environment."

The law is intended to encourage Floridians to recycle half their garbage output by 1992.

If the state fails to meet the goal, consumers will have to start paying "advance disposal fees" similar to deposits on returnable soda bottles whenever they buy products packaged in cans, glass and plastic.

The bill bans packaging considered harmful to the environment, including pull tabs on drink cans. Other packaging such as plastic fast food containers will be phased out over the next few years.

Sponsors of the legislation were divided on whether the public will assume the burden of separating paper, metal, glass and plastic refuse for recycling, although some pilot projects have been effective.

Martinez recalled the recycling effort during World War II, but House sponsor Mike Friedman, D-Miami Beach, said, "If you don't have a war effort, the only way you are going to motivate people is if there is a direct economic savings to them if they change their behavior."

George Kirkpatrick, D-Gainesville, the Senate sponsor, said it will take keen oversight by state environmental agencies to make the law work.

"Local governments are going to have a very difficult time getting local constituents to face the problem we all know is out there," he said.

The lawmakers agreed Florida is ready to become a national leader in the waste disposal problem because of the size of the state's population and the size of its waste disposal problem.

Similar bills are pending in 30 states.

Floridians produce some 15.3 million tons of garbage each year — more than one ton for every man, woman and child in the state.

Most garbage now is dumped in landfills where discarded pesticides, auto batteries and other toxic wastes leach into the shallow aquifer that provides most of the state's drinking water supply.

Many counties are being forced to close their landfills because of environmental concerns.

The new law is an attempt to recirculate more of that garbage, or at least force garbage producers to pay a fairer share of the burden of disposing of it as the state implements recycling programs.

Counties are required to recycle 30 percent of their garbage by 1994, or face loss of all state aid. The local governments will be assisted through $38 million in grants funded by taxes on retailers, newsprint and tires.

Bomb blast in hotel kills nine

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (UPI) — A massive bomb blast wrecked a hotel in the frontier city of Peshawar today, killing at least nine people and injuring four others, officials and hospital sources said.

The officials said the bomb went off at about 4:15 a.m. at the small Prince Hotel in the heart of the old district of city, about 25 miles from the Afghan border.

The explosive caused two of the building's three stories to collapse. Hospital sources said nine bodies had been recovered from the debris, and four other people were injured.

Troops used cranes and bulldozers to clear the wreckage in a search for the remaining four people missing from among the 12 guests and five hotel staff members in the building at the time of the blast.

Police cordoned off all roads to the scene of the explosion, which also shattered windows in surrounding houses and damaged a police post outside the hotel.

No one claimed responsibility for the explosion, but the caretaker chief minister of North West Frontier Province, Fazle Haq, blamed agents of the government of neighboring Afghanistan.

"The terrorists' activities will be increased inside Pakistan with the intensification of war inside Afghanistan," he told journalists.

Scores of people have died in Peshawar and surrounding NWFP in the last few years in bomb blasts blamed on Afghan secret service agents seeking to destabilize Pakistan for its support for Moslem guerrillas fighting the Soviet-backed government in Afghanistan.

Kabul has recently lodged a series of protests charging Pakistan has violated the April 14 Geneva accord under which Soviet troops have begun to withdraw from Afghanistan, by allegedly continuing to harbor the guerrillas.

Soviet troops entered Afghanistan in 1979 to prop up a Soviet-backed regime and became entangled in a guerrilla war with the U.S.-backed rebels.

Among those killed today were two Afghans, including a woman whose head was blown off, from among the more than 3 million war refugees residing in Pakistan.

Marcos may return to face trial

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — President Corazon Aquino is now prepared to let ousted ruler Ferdinand Marcos return to Manila if that is the only way to recover a vast fortune believed stashed in Swiss banks, a presidential spokesman said.

Press Secretary Teodoro Benigno told reporters Friday that Aquino spelled out her latest position in talks with lawyers shortly before her visit to Switzerland earlier this month. Marcos has been living in exile in Hawaii since being overthrown in February 1986.

Benigno said government lawyers told Aquino there was no way they could recover an estimated $1 billion in alleged illicit wealth from Swiss banks unless Marcos returned to Manila to face trial.

"Swiss law on the matter is very clear, the assets of Marcos would not be given unless and until there is an assurance that formal charges will be filed against him," Benigno said. "That (assurance) includes formal trial and indictment that should take place in Manila."

Formal charges are being prepared against Marcos, but under the Philippine constitution Marcos has right to be present at his trial and officials wanted to avoid his return. In an attempt to get around the constitutional requirement, officials explored the possibility of arranging a trial in Hawaii or on a ship in international waters.

But Benigno said Aquino "stated clearly that she is willing to accept" any legal ruling that Marcos must stand trial in the Philippines.

While Aquino has made similar remarks before, Benigno's comment was the strongest indication yet that Marcos would return to stand trial for alleged crimes including the theft and extortion of billions of dollars during his 20 years in power.

At least $1 billion is believed to be frozen in Swiss bank accounts while other assets have been discovered in New York and California real estate, among other places.

The Aquino government has until now resisted all appeals for the return of Marcos, whom it has labeled a security threat, saying he was welcome to return only if he first returned the hidden wealth.

Marcos' "loyalists," including a core group of former officials and hangers-on and many paid supporters, have maintained pressure for his return with regular marches and protests since the one-time martial law ruler was driven out in a popular military uprising.

Relatives of the ousted leader have tried to increase the pressure by postponing the burial of Marcos' late mother, Josefa, who died on May 4. Marcos fruitlessly demanded he be allowed to return for the burial earlier this month.

Angola peace talks set to resume

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — South Africa and a joint Angolan-Cuban delegation resumed talks today aimed at ending a civil war and granting independence to Namibia.

Conference sources said the two sides were expected to begin intense negotiations following Friday's opening session which outlined opposing positions.

South Africa is seeking withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola. In exchange for such a troop movement, Angola and Cuba are insisting that South Africa grant independence to neighboring Namibia.

A conference source described Friday's session as "exploratory," with the two sides sticking to their "basic, hardline positions."

With the United States acting as mediator, the negotiators examined what conference sources described as "concrete proposals" during a 75-minute morning session.

A conference source said the negotiators were discussing a document "which is basically South African, with some amendments" from the other side.

Negotiators hope to define "points" that can serve as a basis for a future agreement, the source said.

These include a cease-fire and the establishment of a committee to monitor the situation on both sides of the border, the source said.

Cuba has suggested a four-year timetable for the withdrawal of its forces but it is believed the latest South African proposals call for a more rapid pullout.

Angolan sources said Pretoria's proposals contained nothing new or positive.

Conference sources said the talks were likely to end today with a concluding statement.

South Africa insisted in the past on a Cuban pullout as a precondition for any discussion of Namibian independence. Angola and Cuba demanded the two problems be resolved simultaneously.

A conference source said working out timetables for resolving the two problems is the "tough and difficult" task facing the negotiators.

The two sides submitted working papers at a formal opening session, outlining their positions in detail, conference sources said. But the formal talks were unexpectedly brief.

Conference sources said progress was not expected to be made quickly because the two sides needed time to study each other's position. Both parties were expected to make their responses when talks resume Saturday morning, the sources said.

In New York, Pedro de Castro Van Dunem, Angolan minister of production, told reporters the Reagan administration was pressuring his government to talk to UNITA, the Angolan rebel movement led by Jonas Savimbi.

"From our point of view, it is out of the question to negotiate with Savimbi, said Van Dunem.

"If you want peace, cut all aid to UNITA now," he said.

The talks opened four hours behind schedule at Al Salam, or Peace Hotel, in suburban Heliopolis, which has been transformed into an armed fortress as a result of the security precautions taken.

The hotel once served as headquarters for Israeli officials negotiating peace with Egypt.

The American delegation, led by Assistant Secretary of State

Chester Crocker, sat at the head of a horseshoe-shaped table in a conference room on the hotel's ground floor.

The right side of the table was filled by the South Africans, led by Foreign Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha and the left by the Angolan-Cuban delegation. It was led by Angolan Foreign Minister Alonzo Van Dunem and Jorge Valdez Rosquet, a member of the Politburo of the Cuban Communist Party.

Soviets vow to expel more Canadian envoys

United Press International
The Soviet Union vowed retaliation against Canada's latest expulsion of a Soviet diplomat and accused the United States of orchestrating the weeklong series of Canadian moves aimed at Soviet envoys.

"I haven't any doubt about it (retaliation)," said Viacheslav Bogdanov, deputy press attache for the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa. "I don't know when, but definitely they will respond," Bogdanov told United Press International Friday in reference to the expulsion Thursday of a Soviet military attache and the banning of another representative into Canada.

Against a backdrop of easing U.S.-Soviet tensions, Canada expelled eight Soviet diplomats Wednesday and banned nine other officials from returning to the country last week on charges of espionage.

External Affairs Minister Joe Clark said the Soviet spying operations involved classified information with industrial and military applications, but that he was confident Canadian security was not compromised.

Moscow quickly retaliated Wednesday expelling two Canadian diplomats and banning three others from entering the Soviet Union also on espionage charges.

On Thursday, Canada booted out two more Soviet diplomats, reducing to 57 the total number of Soviet officials that can be assigned to Canada, a reduction of three.

Unlike the rigid equality maintained in the number of U.S. and Soviet diplomats in each other's country, Soviet diplomats outnumber the 42 Canadian diplomats based in Moscow.

Both nations have dismissed the espionage charges as groundless.

A commentary in the official

Soviet newspaper Izvestia, said Canada's action Thursday "does not differ really from similar actions of the past."

"And each time the actions were planned and coordinated to the south of Ottawa," the commentary said in a reference to the United States.

"The map of the U.S. notwithstanding the Ottawa government's announcement of its independence, is a sort of fig leaf which cannot hide the real opponent of developing Soviet-Canadian relations," it said.

The Reagan administration refused comment on the series of expulsions.

Canada said it was carefully monitoring the situation that has become the largest major expulsion of Russian diplomats since 1978, when 13 officials were sent back to the Soviet Union on charges of trying to infiltrate Canadian security services.

If something comes on their side, we will have to see to study it carefully," said George Rhoys, spokesman for the Canadian External Affairs Department in Ottawa. "Now it's wait and see."

News reports Friday said the Canadian government wanted to keep the first expulsions secret and had reached a deal with Moscow there would be no retaliation. But an External Affairs Department spokesman said "word leaked out somehow, and we were forced to respond to media reports."

Bogdanov, the Soviet Embassy spokesman, labeled the second crackdown as "the act of interference."

The expulsions could be costly for Canada in terms of potential wheat sales which have been declining in recent years.

"This certainly makes it more difficult to sell wheat, and other products or negotiate treaties," said one political observer.

Vietnamese may release MIA files

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnamese officials, who have information on 32 Americans listed as missing in action, are in Bangkok en route to Honolulu to discuss the MIA issue.

The military and civilian officials arrived in the Thai capital Friday night from Hanoi and made final preparations to fly Sunday to Hawaii, site of the Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the Army Central Identification Laboratory — the two military units responsible for technical work on MIA cases.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Ross Petzing quoted Vietnamese officials as saying they had information and remains they believe will resolve the cases of 32 U.S. servicemen listed as MIA in Vietnam.

The Pentagon lists 2,401 Americans as MIAs from the Indochina conflict which ended with the fall of Saigon April 25, 1975. A total of 1,763 of the MIA cases are associated with Vietnam and its coastal waters.

In addition, U.S. officials are investigating 111 "live sightings" of American servicemen in Vietnam, which cannot be explained by U.S. military intelligence.

Vietnamese officials turned over identification media and an undisclosed number of "name associations" relating to unresolved MIA cases under investigation when they released a record 27 sets of remains at Hanoi's Noi Bai airport April 6.

Frequently, when remains are returned, the Vietnamese will also turn over to us such objects as ID cards and tags, Geneva Convention cards, and similar items," Petzing said.

The six Vietnamese officials flying to Honolulu at U.S. government expense are to be accompanied by Lt. Col. Paul Mather, liaison officer of the Joint Casualty Resolution Center, and a JCRC official in Bangkok. Representatives of JCRC and Army Central Identification Laboratory regularly fly to Hanoi to discuss live sighting reports and pinpoint crash sites of American warplanes.

Toxic car to be removed today

CROFTON, Ky. (UPI) — Dozens of people still barred from their homes will be allowed to return when crews move a tank car that caught fire and sent plumes of toxic gases over western Kentucky after a train derailment, officials say.

The car carrying phosphorus is ready to be moved early today from the site where it derailed and burned, forcing the evacuation of area residents, officials said Friday night.

"At this time, there are 30 or 40 people out (of their homes)," said Don Armstrong, a spokesman for the state Disaster and Emergency Services Division in Frankfort.

Some of those evacuated were allowed to return to their homes earlier Friday, and the rest will be allowed to return when the car is moved and placed on a flatbed train car, Armstrong said.

After putting out the fire Friday, workers dismantled the outer shell of the tank car to ensure that the inner wall was intact. The inner shell is structurally sound, Armstrong said.

Valves that had been breached caused chunks of phosphorus to slip between the layers of the tank car, and as workers removed the plates of the outer shell, the chunks flared up, forcing workers to wait for them to burn out, he said.

The damaged valves were replaced, he said.

The tanker, part of a CSX Railroad train, caught fire when 36 of the 80 cars jumped the tracks Wednesday night about 1/2 miles north of Crofton.

The fire and resulting gas cloud forced about 15,000 people from their homes in an eight-county area.

The tanker reignited Thursday night after clean-up crews righted it. Residents in the sparsely populated area were kept away from their homes a second night, with most taking shelter with family and friends.

The chemical that burned was white phosphorus, a waxy, crystalline solid that turns yellow in sunlight and is used in military explosives. It came from a Stauffer Chemical Co. plant in

Fabrication, Express claim softball wins

SANFORD — Central Florida Fabrication edged the Illusions, 11-10, and Bo Kee Express ripped Tri-County Towing, 26-5, Friday night in Sanford Womens softball action.

Marie Byrd led Central Florida with a home run and a single with two runs batted in and one run scored. Vanessa Bryant connected for two singles with a run scored with Denice Byrd coming up with two singles with one run batted in. Josie Sanders added two singles with two runs scored and Rosa Williams had three singles and a run scored.

For the Illusions, Teresa Walburger ripped a double and two singles with three runs batted in and one run scored.

Lulu Chisolm led Bo Kee Express with a home run and two doubles to finish with four runs batted in and three runs scored. Brenda Sepino smacked a double and two singles to finish with two runs batted in and three scored. Karen Watson came up with a grand slam homer to finish with four runs batted in.

Bennett leads Bruisers to Arena Football title

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Den Bennett threw for seven touchdowns and ran for another Friday night leading the Chicago Bruisers to the Arena Football League championship with a 54-47 victory over the Pittsburgh Gladiators.

Chicago tied the score 47-47 with 1:53 remaining when Bennett hit Jeff Faulkner with an 8-yard scoring pass. The Bruisers took the lead with 0:21 to play when Carl Alkens caught his second touchdown of the quarter.

Pittsburgh's only score of the fourth quarter came on a 5-yard pass from Hohensee to Stuart Mitchell.

The Gladiators, 5-4, took a 12-7 lead by the end of the first quarter as Mike Powell ran 1 yard for a touchdown and Mike Hohensee hit Julius Dawkins with a TD pass. The Bruisers scored when Bennett crossed the goal line from the 1.

Ocoee upends Altamonte, 5-0

By Chris Flater
Herald Sports Editor

TOP TEAM BASEBALL

APOPKA — The Altamonte Athletics may have chuckled when they heard the only things standing in their way Friday night was a Rooster. But it was one mean Rooster.

Brian "Rooster" Russell tossed a four-hit shutout and the Ocoee A's scored four unearned runs en route to a 5-0 victory in Top Team Tournament Major Division action before 301 fans at the Apopka West Seminole Little League Complex.

Altamonte, which had a 20-game winning streak snapped, plays in the losers' bracket Saturday night at 7 at Altamonte's Eastmonte Complex against either South Daytona or Rolling Hills.

"We just got outplayed tonight," Altamonte manager George Pihakis said. "We had a 20-game winning streak, which we're very proud of, so the kids know what it takes to win. We're not out of this thing yet."

Ocoee, which ran its season record to 26-1, advances to the winners' bracket final Saturday night at 7 at Orange City. Ocoee has yet to lose in Top Team play.

Russell, a hard-throwing righthander, mixed his fastball and curve masterfully to keep the Altamonte hitters at bay all night. In throwing the four-hit shutout, Russell struck out 11 and walked just two. He also was backed by an errorless defense led by shortstop Bobby Swindle.

Although it came out on the losing end of a 5-0 score, Altamonte was in the game until the end. Behind some clutch defensive plays and the solid pitching of Matt Wolgemuth, the Athletics held Ocoee scoreless for four innings. Wolgemuth allowed eight hits in the game, struck out three and walked three.

The Athletics used their defense to get out of an early jam in the top of the first. Ocoee had a runner on first with one out when Swindle ripped a shot that deflected off Wolgemuth's glove and headed toward left field. Shortstop Rob McBae, though, made a diving stop and flipped to Chris Lewis for the force at second. After intentionally walking Russell, Wolgemuth got the next hitter to end the inning.

Altamonte got its first hit in the bottom of the second when Mike Gonzalez bounced a two-out single up the middle. He was left at first, though, when Russell struck out the next hitter.

Both pitchers sailed through the third inning and Ocoee had a golden opportunity of in the top of the fourth but came away empty after two runners were tagged out at the plate.

Altamonte had its closest scoring chance in the bottom of the fourth. With one out, Todd Herrbach stepped to the plate for the Athletics. In his previous at bat, Herrbach sent a shot to deep right field that Ocoee's Gary Young caught practically with his back to the fence.

This time, Herrbach picked on a high fastball from Russell and drilled a shot well over the fence in right — but foul. After the near miss, Russell fed Herrbach a steady diet of curveballs the rest of the at bat, eventually walking him.

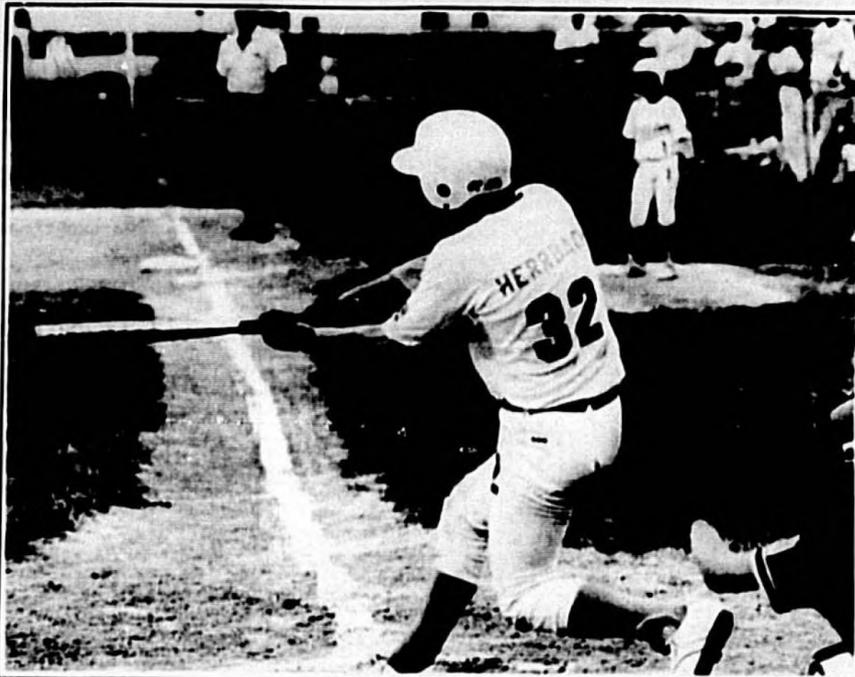

With two outs in the inning, Richie Alexander singled up the middle and a wild pitch moved the runners to second and third. The threat ended there, though, when Russell fanned the next hitter.

Ocoee then broke the scoreless tie with a run in the top of the fifth.

Bobby Simmons led off with a single to left and was bunted to second by Charles Taylor. Swindle then beat out an infield hit and Simmons scored on an error on the play.

Ocoee then put four runs on the board in the top of the sixth. A single by Heath Wise drove in the first run and Simmons' sacrifice fly drove in the second. A pair of Altamonte errors allowed two more runs to score as Ocoee built a 5-0 lead.

Russell quickly got the first two outs in the bottom of the sixth before issuing a walk to Lewis. Alexander then ripped a double to left to put runners at second and third but the late rally never materialized when Russell struck out the next hitter to end the game.

Altamonte's Todd Herrbach (above) rips a shot that cleared the fence in right field, but went foul. After the long strike, Herrbach was fed a steady diet of breaking balls by Ocoee's Brian "Rooster" Russell the remainder of the at bat. At right, Herrbach backs out of the box after a curve bounced in the dirt. Russell wound up tossing a four-hitter and Ocoee scored five runs over the last two frames in a 5-0 victory in Top Team Tournament Major Division action at Apopka. Altamonte returns to action Saturday night at 7 at the Altamonte Eastmonte Complex.

Senior Mets outslug South Daytona, 11-6

By Mark Blythe
Herald Sports Writer

OVIDO — The Altamonte Mets broke open a close game with five runs in the fifth inning and went on to claim an 11-6 victory over South Daytona in the Top Team Tournament Senior Division district playoffs Friday night at the Ovido Little League Complex.

Altamonte, which has one loss in the double-elimination tournament, resumes action Saturday night at 7 at Winter Garden.

The Mets received a nice combined pitching performance from Jeff Ostlie and J. J. Hamilton. Ostlie went the first three innings and allowed three runs on two hits, struck out one and walked two. Hamilton turned in a stellar relief effort as he pitched the final four frames, allowed three runs on five hits, struck out four and walked three.

South Daytona had built up a 4-3 lead when Altamonte put together its decisive five-run rally in the fifth. Tanner Morrison led off the frame with a double, and later scored on a passed ball. Kevin Morro also walked and Jeff Ostlie then singled. A Daytona error scored Morro and moved Ostlie to third and Ostlie then scored on another passed ball.

Mike Black also drew a walk, took second on a wild pitch, third on another error and scored on another passed ball. The fifth run of the frame also scored as the result of Daytona miscues as the Mets built a 8-4 lead.

South Daytona pulled within 8-6 in the bottom of the fifth when Mike Gist blasted a two-run homer.

Altamonte came up with three runs in the top of the seventh to pull away. Black started the inning with a single, Daniel Hench was hit by a pitch and they were bunted up to second and third. J. J. Gutierrez then singled in Black. Morro later walked to force in another run and Ostlie's sacrifice fly gave the Mets an 11-6 lead.

Hamilton quickly got two outs in the bottom of the seventh and then allowed a pair of singles before fanning the next batter to end the game. Altamonte will now look to Morro to provide strong pitching in Saturday night's game. The Mets need a victory to remain in the hunt for the district title.

No. 1 Lendl survives four-hour marathon

WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Top-seeded Ivan Lendl survived a near four-hour marathon Friday against 6-foot-5 1/2 Michel Schapery to win a 56-game third-round battle of big serves at the $4.3 million Wimbledon tennis championships.

Lendl, the world's top-ranked player, defeated Schapery of Holland 6-7 (7-9), 7-6 (7-0), 6-4, 6-7 (5-7), 6-1.

While Lendl was struggling on the No. 2 court, there were straight set victories by the men who had toiled his title bids in the last two finals, defending champion Pat Cash of Australia and West Germany's two-time winner Boris Becker.

The fourth-seeded Cash dispatched his Davis Cup doubles partner John Fitzgerald 6-1, 6-2, 6-3 and the sixth-seeded Becker, back-to-back champion in 1985 and 1986, defeated Sammy Giammalva of the United States, 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 6-4.

Giammalva was the only American loser Friday as the third round in the top half of the men's draw concluded.

The United States won two matches against the powerful Swedes. Paul Annacone upset 12th-seeded Jonas H. Svensson, 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 to earn a place in the last 16 and a match against Becker.

No. 10 Tim Mayotte overcame Joakim Nyström, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4, to set up a fourth-round date against seventh-seeded Henri Leconte of France, a 3-6, 6-1, 7-6 (7-0), 6-1, winner against South African qualifier Barry Moor.

Soviet Union qualifier Andrei Olkhovsky will meet Cash after beating Canadian Chris Fildham, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5, and Australian Mark Woodforde faces Lendl after defeating Italian Diego Nargiso, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

Women's top seed Steffi Graf of West Germany, chasing the third leg of the four-tournament Grand Slam, headed the women's action. The Australian and French Open champion.

Heavyweight battle dubbed 'dream fight'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — The Monday night bout between Mike Tyson and Michael Spinks has been called a "dream fight" and has played a major part in the boxers' dreams as it approaches.

Tyson, who talks as if he can't imagine himself losing, is a different fighter when his subconscious takes over.

"I always lose in my dreams," he says. "Every fight."

Spinks considers it a good dream when he survives. "I had a real good dream. I fought the fight and it was over," he said. "The only problem was I woke up and it wasn't over."

Opponents have found fighting Tyson and Spinks can be a nightmarish experience. Tyson's power, speed and intent to maim makes him perhaps the most dangerous fighter in the world. Spinks gives opponents trouble for another reason.

Spinks' best weapon is that people are unsure of what to expect from him in the ring. His defensive-minded style changes practically every fight, and is unmistakably his own.

The word most often used to describe Spinks is "awkward" but that might be inaccurate.

"Michael calls his style unique. I call it unorthodox," Spinks' trainer Eddie Futch said. "He's hard to hit, gives a lot of angles. He's hard to hit clean once and when you hit him, you can't hit him again."

"It's not a coincidence he hasn't lost in 12 years."

Spinks, 31, altered his style a hit when he moved up from the light heavyweight division to challenge International Boxing Federation heavyweight champion Larry Holmes in 1985. He became the first reigning 175-pound champion to win a heavyweight title when he upset Holmes, then repeated his 15-round decision in a 1986 rematch.

SPINKS VS. TYSON

In 30 rounds, Holmes barely hit Spinks clean — although Spinks was rocked twice late in the second fight.

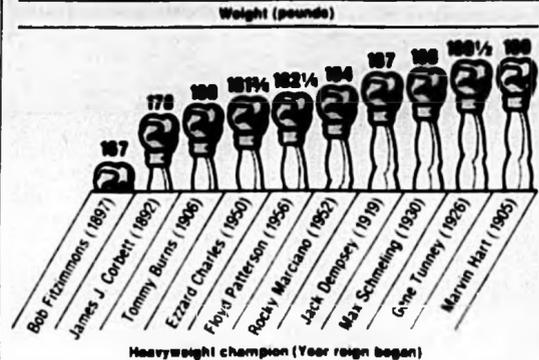

Holmes was unimpressed and predicts Tyson will win on a knockout Monday night. Tyson knocked out Holmes in four rounds in January.

"Spinks will run," Holmes said. "He'll try to sneak some punches in, and when he does he'll get caught. Tyson proved to me he's a champ. Spinks never proved anything."

"When I trained Michael and Larry, Larry used to ridicule Spinks' style," Futch said. "I told him, 'Larry, you shouldn't laugh at him, you should study him.' That's what I do when I see a guy who hasn't lost in 12 years. I study him."

Even those who study Spinks find it hard defining his style, and even tougher anticipating his moves in the ring. Promoter Dutch Lewis, Spinks' close friend and the man who has guided his entire pro career, says even he is baffled during Spinks' bouts.

Heavyweight Champs? The 10 lightest winners

"I watch him for six weeks every day in training camp, then he gets in the ring and does things I never saw before," Lewis said. "I don't know if he knows what he's going to do."

Spinks is unsure of who he is in the ring, not to mention what he will do.

"I will not be Michael Spinks in the ring," Spinks said. "I'll be the person I become in there, whoever he is."

Spinks is used to being a heavy underdog. Holmes was favored in both bouts against Spinks and Gerry Cooney was the favorite before Spinks stopped him in five rounds last June.

Spinks, 31-0 with 21 knockouts, is a 3-1-2 to 1 underdog entering the richest heavyweight championship bout in history. Tyson, 34-0 with 30 knockouts, was a 5-1 favorite until his marital problems surfaced early this week.

"I don't feel out of place, I'm used to whatever they say about me," Spinks said. "I feel good just to be talked about."

"I wouldn't say I'm out to prove anybody wrong. I'm out to accomplish this for myself. I get no special thrill when people's predictions about me aren't correct."

Tyson knows Spinks' style can cause problems, but he doesn't expect many.

"If he comes in and tries to win, and takes chances like I do, it could be a good fight," Tyson said. "If not, he's just in it for the ride."

Holland vs. Soviets for European title

MUNICH, West Germany (UPI) — Holland and the Soviet Union likely will rely on the attacking styles that have served them so well throughout the European Soccer Championships in Saturday's final.

The 15-day-long soccer festival, which has yet to produce a goalless game in its 14 matches, climaxes with a final at the Olympic Stadium featuring teams loaded with artistry and invention.

Holland's Ruud Gullit and Soviet striker Oleg Protasov best embody the finesse of the teams. They have helped their squads through the two-year qualifying campaign and the rigors of four matches in the finals in the last two weeks.

The Soviets, winners of the inaugural tournament in 1960, are competing in a record fourth final. The Dutch, runners-up in two World Cup finals in the 1970s, are looking for their first major honor.

Four of the Dutch players were on the PSV

Eindhoven team that won the European Champions' Cup a month ago and are looking for a unique club and country double.

There is an extra ingredient that makes Saturday's final more intriguing. The teams clashed in their opening group two match in Cologne June 12, with the Soviets winning 1-0.

Holland dominated that match for the first half, but was stopped from scoring by a superb performance from goalkeeper and captain Rinat Dasayev.

Holland was consistently blocked by a well-organized Soviet defense, but since then the balance has tipped slightly in Holland's favor.

Because of suspension and injury, the Soviets could be without two players who played in the victory over Holland. The Dutch also are likely to have two changes in personnel, but through choice.

The Soviets definitely will be without the suspended Oleg Kuznetsov, the attacking central defender whose second booking of the tournament, in the semifinal against Italy, automatically led to his suspension from the final.

Striker Igor Belanov, Gullit's predecessor as European Footballer of the Year, is not certain to start the match after injuring his thigh. Sergei Gotsmanov could take his place. Anatoli Demianenko will probably start for Kuznetsov.

Rinus Michels, who will coach Holland for the last time before taking on his new job as coach of West Germany's UEFA Cup holder Bayer Leverkusen, made two changes after the opening defeat and the new players have given his team a more balanced look.

...Wimbledon

runner-up at Wimbledon last year, outplayed Terry Phelps, 6-3, 6-1. The 19-year-old world No. 1 faces another American in the fourth round, 16th-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez, who scored a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Poland's Iwona Kuczyńska.

Australian Anne Minter eliminated injury-plagued Hana Mandlikova, the 1981 and 1986 runner-up. The Czechoslovak-born No. 9 seed, who has taken Australian citizenship, lost, 6-4, 6-3. However, there was no double celebration for the Minter family with younger sister Elizabeth falling, 7-6 (7-3), 6-0, to 12th-seeded Zina Garrison of the United States.

No. 6 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, the only other women's seed to play Friday, rallied to defeat Japan's Etsuko Inoue, 6-7 (6-7), 6-3, 6-2.

Serve dominated the Lendl-Schapers match. There were only five breaks during the 3-hour, 55-minute confrontation and the first one did not arrive until after 29 games.

The pattern was established in the opening set, which went into a tie-breaker with the Dutchman, ranked 39th in the world, emerging triumphant after Lendl double-faulted at 7-7.

Lendl won the second-set tie-breaker to even the match and registered the first break to lead 2-1 in the third set.

Schapers broke back immediately, but then dropped his serve again three games later and Lendl held on.

Lendl forced the fourth set into a tie-breaker with one of his 17 aces, only to lose out again. The deciding set was dominated by Lendl.

"I should have won in straight sets, and I thought I deserved to," Lendl said. "When I served at 6-5 in the first set tie-break, I should have hit a winner off his return, but I slipped and he won the point. Then I served a double-fault and ended up losing the set. But I won the next two, so it could easily have been a straight-sets win."

Schapers, the only player to take a set off Cash at Wimbledon last year, said Lendl's big serve would make him as dangerous an opponent on grass as either Cash or Becker.

"His volley may not be of the same quality as Becker or Cash, but that doesn't make him a bad grass-court player," Schapers said. "I beat Becker in five sets on grass without playing half as well as I did today."

Officials reject McEnroe's forecast

WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Officials and players Friday rejected John McEnroe's dire forecast for tennis, saying he overreacted in predicting the sport could lose its popularity in the United States.

Former star Arthur Ashe, international tennis officials and current Wimbledon 10th seed Tim Mayotte all said tennis is healthy and in no risk of losing support among Americans or U.S.-based sponsors.

McEnroe had warned Thursday that "tennis is losing a lot of interest rapidly in America" and said "it's a really critical time in tennis."

"It looks to me like it has the potential to turn into something like soccer, just where it's popular in Europe and no one gives a damn in America," McEnroe said after being eliminated in the second round of Wimbledon by Australia's Wally Masur.

"Maybe a guy like (18-year-old American Andre) Agassi could change that if he became No. 1 in the world, but I don't really see that happening and, even if he did, I'm not sure if that would save it at this point."

Ashe, who won the men's singles title at Wimbledon in 1975 and has remained a leading figure in U.S. tennis since his retirement, said participation in the sport is dropping in the United States but attendance is up.

"Tennis has very deep roots in America," he said. "Just about every junior high and high school in the country has at least four courts. The roots are too deep for it to wither away and die."

Ashe also pointed to U.S. Tennis Association programs to develop players, such as Agassi and 16-year-old Michael Chang, and to the strength of college programs.

Mayotte disagreed with McEnroe, saying fans in the United States and around the world have been "electrified" by Agassi.

"There's a lot of excitement in the game, with Agassi and Chang playing and looking to be future stars," said Mayotte, a former NCAA champion.

International tennis authorities agreed McEnroe's predictions were inaccurate.

"The way it is today, with the tour all over the world, it is just going to gain in popularity," said Wimbledon referee Alan Mills.

Here's the story of one of the greatest pitching feats ever seen in baseball. Hall of Famer Walter Johnson once pitched 3 shutouts in the big leagues on 4 consecutive days — and each game was better than the one before. Johnson hurled shutouts on Sept. 4, 5 and 7, 1908. All were complete 9-inning games. He pitched a 4 hit shutout on Sept. 4. Then, he pitched a 3 hit shutout on Sept. 5. And then he pitched a 2 hit shutout on Sept. 7.

In which pro sport does the visiting team have the best chance of winning? According to figures compiled for recent years, in major league baseball the visiting team wins about 48% of the time...in pro football, the visiting team wins about 43% of all games...in the National Basketball Association, the visiting team wins only about 36% of the time.

Only 8 baseball players in this century have ever batted over .400 in a full season of big league play. Can you name those 8 players? They were Ty Cobb, Nap Lajoie, Harry Heilmann, Rogers Hornsby, Joe Jackson, George Sisler, Bill Terry and Ted Williams.

Sixers' dilemma: Big man or guard?

BASKETBALL

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The college draft presents the Philadelphia 76ers with a chance to solve their most pressing problem or to obey the conventional wisdom for rebuilding a franchise.

The 76ers, who won the NBA championship five years ago, fell to 36-46 last season and missed the playoffs for the first time in 13 years, largely due to miserable outside shooting.

Guards David Wingate, Albert King and Andrew Toney made only 39.8 percent of their shots, allowing opponents to concentrate solely on stopping Philadelphia's inside game.

Thanks to the NBA's draft lottery, the 76ers have the third selection in Tuesday's first round with three promising shooting-guard candidates likely to be available.

Hersey Hawkins of Bradley, Rex Chapman of Kentucky and Mitch Richmond of Kansas State have outstanding college credentials and one of them is likely to be Philadelphia's choice.

But the traditional wisdom of rebuilding says a team must concentrate on adding talented big players.

For that reason, the 76ers still have a fascination with 7-foot-4 Rick Smith of Marist, 6-10 Charles Smith of Pittsburgh and 6-11 Rony Seikaly of Syracuse. Those three are generally considered the top big men available after Kansas' Danny Manning, who will be the first player selected by the Los Angeles Clippers.

Philadelphia's loss of 6-10 Hansi Gnad, a third-round 1987 draft pick who played last season in Germany, to Miami in the expansion draft has made height even more attractive.

"Now we're not so sure we're going to go with a guard," General Manager John Nash said. "We could still do the logical thing and take a guard but it might be better for us to go big."

Since Indiana has said it plans to select Smith, a player who could take a few seasons to develop, with the second pick in the draft, the 76ers were looking at Smith with renewed interest.

Smith averaged 18.9 points and 7.7 rebounds per game for Pitt last year and was named the Big East player of the year after finishing as the Panthers' all-time leading scorer (2,045 points), rebounder (987) and shot blocker (346).

He impressed the 76ers brass when he visited Philadelphia.

"He showed some running ability and open court ability that opened some eyes," Nash said.

Selecting Smith, however, would force the 76ers to find a shooting guard through a trade, or hope for a steal with their second-round draft pick, the 31st selection overall.

HEAT LINES POSITION

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Heat would like to find a shooting guard through a trade, or hope for a steal with their second-round draft pick, the 31st selection overall.

Despite grabbing 10 players in the expansion draft Thursday, the Heat claim the franchise's future begins with Tuesday's college draft.

That philosophy is underscored by the moves the club made during the expansion draft, which netted the Heat an additional No. 1 pick this year and a total of five second-round choices, two of which will be used Tuesday. That gives Miami five picks in the first 40 selections, including the ninth and 20th choices in the first round.

The 20th pick in the first round came from the Dallas Mavericks, a team most often mentioned when the ideal way to build an expansion franchise is discussed. The Mavericks came into the league in 1980 and steadily have built, mainly through the college draft, into a contender.

"We feel this is a deep draft," said Heat part owner Billy Cunningham. "We feel we can get a player who is very valuable to the Miami Heat."

In all likelihood, Miami will pick up at least five players Tuesday who will make the team. Cunningham and the rest of the Heat braintrust say though the draft lacks impact players, there are a solid number of quality athletes available.

"It just appears the draft is getting deeper and deeper," Cunningham said. "In this draft, the 35th pick could be as good as the 10th."

Who's Who to honor Sanford student

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — The editorial staff of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges has selected Crystal Alesia Caldwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caldwell of Sanford, as one of the country's most outstanding campus leaders.

Caldwell is a student at Alabama A. & M. University in Normal, Ala.

Caldwell was selected on the basis of her academic achievements, community service, leadership in extra-curricular activities and potential for continued success.

Golf tourney to aid in preventing blindness

ORLANDO — The National Society to Prevent Blindness will sponsor a benefit golf tournament and luncheon at Rosemont Country Club in Orlando on July 15.

Registration will be at 8 a.m., with 9 a.m. as tee-off time. An auction will follow lunch.

Tickets for participating in the tournament are $75 each and may be obtained by contacting the national society at 425-7002.

Special guest of honor will be Craig MacFarlane, 25, called the "world's greatest blind athlete," who golfs, swims, wrestles, snow-skis and water-skis.

Women gets degree, named to dean's list

GAINESVILLE, Ga. — Lori Marie Montero of Sanford received a bachelor's degree during the May 29 graduation ceremony at Brenau Women's College in Gainesville, Ga.

Montero also was named to the dean's list for the spring quarter. Students qualify for the dean's list by maintaining at least a 3.6 grade point average while carrying 15 or more course hours.

Longwood man set for summer degree

CLARKSVILLE, Ark. — James Allen Divine of Longwood is a candidate for summer graduation from the University of the Ozarks in Clarksville, Ark.

Divine would graduate with a bachelor of science degree in entrepreneurship.

She echoes famed father: 'Write on'

At 85, Bunting teaching his 'push-pull' method

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — In elementary school, many of us were taught to write by a method developed by her father, who built a million-dollar handwriting business after his daughter was born in a log cabin.

She is Ester Peterson Bunting, 85, of Sanford, and she's proud to say that Peterson's Directed Handwriting, established in 1920, is still located in Greensburg, Penn., and is operated by her family.

Education has been a primary factor in Bunting's life. For 28 years she was a music teacher, followed by 25 years as a first-grade teacher where she used her father's writing methods. She was recently honored as a Seminole County school volunteer, who helps first graders learn to read. But all she ever really wanted to do was cook.

Although Bunting never wanted for material things, men in her life—her father and brother—kept her from fulfilling her personal ambitions. Insisting that she study music was her father, Percy Orlando Peterson, who developed Peterson's Directed Handwriting, the "push-pull" method still being used today to teach youngsters to print letters of the alphabet.

"All I wanted to do was cook," she said. "I love to cook. I wanted home economics," she said, but her father, a college professor and business school founder, had other ideas. And so, Bunting, who was born in the small village of Lyctippus in western Pennsylvania Sept. 28, 1902, became a music teacher after studying the piano.

Despite her father's curbing of her personal interests, Bunting said, "I've always been very proud of our business. I wish I could have been involved in it. I have an elated feeling over being P.O. Peterson's daughter. There were several years when I taught handwriting in the '60s. People say, 'We have your certificate,' meaning they were taught to write by the Peterson method. That's the kind of stuff I hear almost every place I go."

But, Bunting said, as the eldest Peterson child she took some teasing as a youngster from children who hated to learn to write. "The kids used to yell, 'Here comes old push-pull.' It's remarkable how many people I meet who have had that system," she said.

Ester Peterson Bunting of Lake Mary, Fla., practices the famous writing technique that her father developed in 1920.

Her brother, who inherited the handwriting business after the death of their father, insisted one of his four sisters or the husbands could be involved with the writing business. He said if they were in, he was out, and Bunting said her father yielded to that demand.

Bunting began her music teaching career in Pennsylvania, but was forced to resign when she married. In those days it wasn't acceptable for a married woman to teach in public school, she said.

She and her husband of 30 years, D. Ray Bunting, a physician, lived in Erie, Penn., where she did fulfill her personal ambition and for a while operated a tea room.

Bunting has been a widow for 30 years, but said she enjoys being independent. "I think it's wonderful women can do what they want," she said.

She said she met her husband at a party and he left Pennsylvania to come to Florida. They write to each other for Prevent ballet boo-boos

By United Press International

SAN FRANCISCO — Each year, thousands of youngsters across the United States strap on their ballet slippers and take to the barre, dreaming of the day when they will become members of the American Ballet Theater.

For most, companies like the AHT will remain an elusive goal. But the injuries associated with the years of ballet training can become a painful reality.

"Unfortunately, injuries are a part of a ballet dancer's life," said Patrice Whiteside, the director of St. Francis Hospital's unique DanceMedicine Clinic. "We treat every member of the San Francisco Ballet at least once a year for an injury."

Whiteside said the parents of budding ballet stars can take steps to make sure their youngster's injuries remain relatively minor.

The parent should also pay close attention to the gait of their child's walk.

"Youngsters want to dance so badly, they try to hide their injuries," Whiteside said. "You should pay close attention to your child's gait and how they move. If something looks a little out of the ordinary, then your child may be hiding an injury. We generally see children at the clinic only after the pain has gotten too much for them."

If your child becomes injured, Whiteside says remember the acronym—RICE—which stands for Rest, Ice, Compression and Elevation. A handy tip is to place a couple of foam cups full of water in the freezer. When your child is hurt, simply go to the refrigerator, take out a cup and you have an instant ice pack.

Like your trip? (No slide shows)

Your friends are back from their vacation? They invite you over, take their 20-year-old slide projector out of its Christmas box, and sit you down for two hours of bo-humness.

"Here I am making the travel arrangements... Here we are at Yell-wstone, feeding the bears... And there's Martha, buying an 'Old Faithful' water pipe."

We at the Sanford Herald are looking for the best and worst vacation experiences, not the run-of-the-mill, suitable-for-postcard outing.

Perhaps, by chance, you got in on a diving expedition in the Bahamas that discovered a body downed in a Spanish galleon. Or you may have crossed paths with an intriguing but misanthropic mountain man who rarely sees other humans.

On the other hand, your hotel in Dublin might have been the scene of the worst high-rise fire in Ireland's history. Or despite Carl Maldin's warnings, you were ripped off at La Guardia Airport, had no traveler's checks and were left in a real bind.

If you've been retelling the story of your vacation throughout the years, it's probably worth repeating in our paper. In celebration of summer, the favorite time for getaways, we invite our readers to tell us about "My Believe-It-Or-Not Vacation."

In entering our contest, follow these instructions: Type or print clearly your name, street address, city and daytime phone number at the top of your entry. Then write your vacation experience, good or bad, without embellishing beyond the truth. There is no length limit, but the Herald reserves the right to edit as necessary. Mail to Vacation, c/o The People Editor, P.O. Box 14657, Sanford, FL 32771. Deadline for entries is noon on Monday, Aug. 1.

The top winners in the categories of best and worst vacations will have their experiences featured in the Aug. 14 edition of the Herald. Photographs should not be mailed, but winners will be asked permission to reprint any available photos from their vacation.

The road to China is inviting to shoppers

By Brian Hedberg
People Editor

Harry Scruggs has discovered a shopper's haven. It's called China and it's the ultimate for a bargain-hunter.

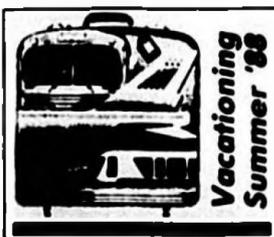

Scruggs and his wife, Dorothy, spent a week in China in 1983. Come Friday, they're leaving again for the Sleeping Giant, as well as Singapore and Thailand.

"China has always been a mysterious, interesting place to go," said Scruggs, of Altamonte Springs. "Of course, I wouldn't have wanted to go there a few years ago; they'd chop your head off. They didn't like foreigners."

The Scruggs' 1983 trek to Hong Kong was largely an exotic shopping spree. He and his wife had ultra suede suits made there. In the States, such garments would sell at $600-$700, but a tailor named "Fat Eddie" Sui Fat Tai (the tailor for American actor Charles Bronson) sells them at $250 each, Scruggs said.

Friends who had had the China experience recommended "Fat Eddie" to Scruggs, advising that he get at least three fittings. "Their sizes over there are much different than here. If you're buying for somebody in the States, you'd better know what they look like. They're people of much smaller stature." Scruggs wears an extra large, but couldn't fit into the XXXL size in Hong Kong.

At the Jade Gardens restaurant in Hong Kong, a waiter planned the meal for Mr. and Mrs. Scruggs and three traveling companions. The bill came to $50. "You think you can beat that here in Chinatown? No way," Scruggs said.

But restaurant fare is more than truly authentic eggrolls and fortune cookies, Scruggs said with a twinkle in his eye. "Of course, they eat dog over there. That's why you got to be careful when you go to some of these restaurants."

He cautions that tourists buy only where the Hong Kong Tourist Association seal of a gold junk is displayed in the window. The seal and association name ensure that a business or product is reputable.

Downtown Hong Kong shopping areas are like one big boardwalk made up of a collage of shop signs, an outgrowth of the country's $1.48 billion tourism industry, Scruggs said.

But he feels no sense of guilt at not buying American products. Both of his cars are American-made, he said, and "I'm not going to come back with 30 suits, just one."

On their trip this year, the Year of the Dragon, the Scruggs will take in more culture, although they plan to shop for Oriental rugs at the exchange rate of seven and a half Hong Kong dollars to one American dollar.

The Chinese "have the American way—free trade, capitalism and all that," Scruggs said. "They don't have the communism there that they're going to have in 1997, when the 99-year lease expires and the British give back to the Chinese. That's one of the reasons why we want to go back now, before the Chinese take it over."

He is excited about exploring Beijing, "The Forbidden City" on his second time through China. "Nobody ever say it except the emperors, and now you can see it. This happens once in a lifetime."

On their last trip, the Scruggs saw the Portuguese colony of Macao in China, a town popular among Hong Kong residents for its gambling casino. The Scruggs were intrigued with a Buddhist temple where natives burn paper-mache effigies of material goods they want.

In Hong Kong, a city of 5.5 million people, "Everything is bumper to bumper. There's a people everywhere," Scruggs said. Bangkok, Thailand, isn't much better, he is told it is common to wait five minutes at a traffic light.

The humidity in Hong Kong is high and it rains regularly there, but the friendly, gracious and hospitable demeanor of the Chinese made more of an impression on the Scruggs.

Interstate Mall Travel in Altamonte Springs estimates a weeklong trip to China averages $1,140 per person in a couple. That price includes round-trip airfare from Orlando, hotel, airport transportation, five nights' hotel accommodations, five American breakfasts, a half-day Hong Kong island tour, services of a tour operator representative, entertainment coupons, flight bag, baggage handling, and hotel taxes and services.

More than 1.7 million foreigners visited China in 1987, with Americans the largest Western group behind Hong Kong, Chinese and Japanese.

Services range from business tours to camel treks along the western Silk Road. A European firm even offers a deluxe Yangtze River cruise aboard a ship with a swimming pool, a far cry from the once-mandatory spartan ferries, all named "The East is Red."

"We still have a lot of shortcomings," said Shen Shoujun, a deputy director of the National Tourism Administration. "We are improving, but there is a long distance to go."

Shen said the government is budgeting $1.4 billion annually through 1990 to improve tourism facilities, including emphasis on economy class hotels. In May, China signed an agreement with the International Labor Organization to train travel personnel.

ENGAGEMENTS

Stacey Lanette Junto and Jonathon D. Burke

Junto-Burke

SANFORD — Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Junto of Sanford announce the engagement of their daughter, Stacey Lanette Junto of Sanford, to Jonathon D. Burke of Sanford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Burke of Sanford.

Born in Danville, Pa., the bride-elect is the paternal great-granddaughter of C. Wayne Gordon of Berwick, Pa., and the paternal granddaughter of Lillian Broderick, also of Berwick.

Miss Junto graduated in 1985 from Seminole High School in Sanford, was a 1987 graduate of Seminole Community College in Sanford, and now attends the University of Central Florida in Orlando.

Her fiance, born in Sanford, is a 1984 graduate of Seminole High School. He attends Seminole Community College and is an industrial design draftsman.

The wedding is set for the fall of 1989.

Mr. and Mrs. Brian J. Shinn

Brazelton, Shinn tie nuptial knot

LAKELAND — Tana J. Brazelton and Brian J. Shinn were married in a traditional ceremony at 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, May 14, at the First United Methodist Church of Lakeland, with Dr. James C. Rowan and Dr. David L. Brazelton officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David L. Brazelton of Casselberry, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Shinn of Lakeland.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a traditional, full-length, taffeta-and-lace gown with appliques and pearls. Both the gown and headpiece were accented with silk roses. She carried a bouquet of white roses, lily of the valley, and ivy.

The maid of honor, Heather Davis, and the bridesmaids—Marie Whitman, Jennifer Shinn and LeAnn Skinner—wore tea-length gowns of rose-colored, moon-glow-embossed satin. Their bouquets were arranged from white roses.

Brad Shinn served as best man. Ushering were Stephen Brazelton, John Hampton and Keith Hampton.

Attending as groomsmen were Vonnie Downey, Skip Moore and Mark Brazelton.

Flower girl was Caryn Slizeski. A reception in the church fellowship hall followed in the ceremony.

The couple took a wedding trip to New Smyrna Beach and plan to reside in Lakeland.

The groom is a recent graduate of the University of South Florida and is employed by Red Carpet Inn of Lakeland. The bride is a senior at Florida Southern College and works for Public Child Development Center.

Stewart to vie for U.S. teen title

ATLANTA — Miss Florida U.S. Teen, Shanna Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Stewart of Sanford, will participate in the National Miss U.S. Teen Pageant at Center State in Atlanta, Ga. on Aug. 13.

The pageant will culminate a week of festivities. Fifty-two contestants—from each state, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia—will compete for the title of Miss U.S. Teen. Girls will be judged on the basis of scholastic achievement, service to community and school, personality, poise, grooming and similar factors.

Stewart, who will be going into the 11th grade at Seminole High School in Sanford, has been state Optimist oratorical winner, varsity cheerleader, first-place winner in a social studies fair, Sanford city ambassador, freshman class president, and football statistician.

IN AND AROUND LAKE MARY-LONGWOOD

And the winners are ...several students

Summer is finally here officially, and the weather outside only confirms the fact. Relax by the pool, watch a ball game, and simply have some fun.

The Longwood/Winter Springs Area Chamber of Commerce has awarded several scholarships to area high school students. John Luce, Lyman High School; Anna Lau and Heather Wood, both of Lake Brantley High School; and William Kroll, Lake Mary High School, were first-time recipients. Receiving continuing scholarship support are: Calvin Harding and Dane Reece, of Lake Brantley High School; Susan Schwager and Kellie Weginz, of Lake Mary High School; and Sharon Lorraine and Tina Warden, of Lyman High School.

Education chairman Walt Lee, who is also assistant principal at Lyman High School, commented, "One of the major objectives of the Longwood/Winter Springs Area Chamber of Commerce is to nourish the spirit of working together for the benefit of the community and its residents. I can think of no better way to accomplish that goal than assisting tomorrow's leaders in attaining the education they will need to carry on our efforts. This is one of the most worthy causes we have."

Serving on the Scholarship Selection Committee with Lee were Keith Blanden, M.M. (Red) McCullough, and Bruce Cox. A total of $4,000 was granted by the Longwood/Winter Springs Area Chamber of Commerce.

Congratulations to all recipients!

Speaking of winners, the Sabal Point Garden Club's Living Legacy Garden at Sabal Point Elementary School in Longwood, earned first-place honors for school beautification from the Florida Federation of Garden Clubs.

Some of the people earning that honor were among the new officers recently elected in the Sabal Point Garden Club. They are Carole Krupski and Diane Moldenhauer, sharing presidential duties; Erin Tenney, first vice president; Karen Schwitzer, second vice-president; Cathy Henderson, secretary; and Becky Cook, treasurer.

A hearty congratulations to all new officers and to all members who earned the first place honor.

The Lake Mary Improvement Association has its regular meeting on Monday, June 27, at 7:30 p.m., at the Civic Improvement Association building, 260 Country Club Road. The guest speaker—Matt West, city planner for Lake Mary—will be talking about the Comprehensive Land Use Plan for Lake Mary. The public is invited.

Lake Mary is hosting a "Fun in the Sun" program for kids ages 5-12 during the summer. Hours for activities, which continue through Aug. 5th, are 8 a.m. to noon weekdays, at the CIA building, 260 N. Country Club Road. Registration is at Lake Mary City Hall, now housed at the Shoppes of Lake Mary, Suite 115, 120 E. Lake Mary Blvd.

The cost is $40 for each city resident and $60 for others. For more information, call city hall at 323-7910.

Looking ahead, the Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce is having a grand celebration honoring its 85th Year, and invites all members and friends to join their birthday. Mark your calendars for July 21, 6-8 p.m., at the Sun Lake Apartments' Clubhouse, 424 Sun Lake Circle, Lake Mary, and help celebrate! Call 322-1213 for more details.

Coming up in August is the Fifth Annual Pirates Ball, which is sponsored by the Sunshine Cloggers and will benefit the Russell Home for Atypical Children in Orlando.

Last year the ball raised close to $5,000 to help the worthy cause, and provided plenty of fun and enjoyment. This year's event is going to be more fun than ever with clogging workshops, a pirate costume competition, country western workshops and various exhibits.

The location of all this gala activity will be the Expo Centre, 500 West Livingston St., Orlando, on Friday, Aug. 12, 7-10:30 p.m., and Saturday, Aug. 13, 9 a.m.-10:30 p.m.

The Sunshine Cloggers are based in Longwood. Call 695-6437 for more information on how you can become involved.

...Bunting

about a year, before they married. But it wasn't his handwriting that won her hand. "His penmanship was horrible. Did you ever know a doctor who could write?" she asked.

She is the mother of three, including daughter Betty Ray Power, with whom she has lived in Sanford for three years.

During those years, Bunting has been active as a Dividends volunteer for the Retired Senior Volunteer Program. At Goldsboro Elementary School in Sanford, she teaches reading skills to first graders who have fallen behind.

She works with phonetics, since her eyesight has failed because of nearsightedness. Bunting said she can't see the faces of the children she teaches, but that doesn't impede their success.

She was recently honored for exceeding the 1,000-hour mark as a Dividend volunteer. Bunting has been named runner-up as Seminole County Schools Dividend volunteer of the year.

When Bunting moved to Florida in 1952, there was no funding for music teachers, so she became a first-grade teacher and continued in that job for 25 years. Her volunteer work, she said, is just a continuation of her interest in children and she has no intention of sitting still, despite her near-blindness.

Her voice is one of youthful enthusiasm, which belies her 85 years. Although her hair is white, "I'm not like a little white-haired old lady," Bunting said. "I guess that's one reason I get along with youngsters. I just seem to have patience. But I don't like to teach piano at all. I love to teach reading and writing."

She's optimistic about the future of today's children, although she does see the negative impact of drugs and broken homes. "I think we have a fine group of teachers dedicated to the profession. They're doing the best they can for children. They're not just there to making a living. They're there to teach."

Children today, she said, are more knowledgeable and less shy than earlier generations. Television played a major role in that change. "It's made them more versatile and outgoing. More ready to converse and give an opinion in school than they used to be. I haven't found the shyness I used to find. It used to be that they wouldn't approach and say, 'hi,' to a teacher. Now they run up to you."

Other than not being able to see her pupils' faces she gets by well without full vision, except when she encounters a curb or steps, she said.

Bunting still enjoys books, through the recorded "talking books" program. She also reads large print editions.

She said she makes a point of not interfering with the teachers she is assigned to assist. However, she said, her biggest challenge in boosting the writing skills of her pupils is a lack of blackboard space, since other teachers have the boards filled with other writing.

"I've taught writing some. It's such a job, because there's no blackboard space. You have to demonstrate what you're trying to teach."

This year she worked with 10 pupils. "I go into a corner of the classroom and tutor those children. I work with them in the same classroom where the rest of their class is working with their teacher."

"I'm not interfering. I'm so afraid of interfering. I don't think I could have stood having another teacher come into my classroom when I was a teacher," she said. "I've enjoyed coming into the classroom these three years."

Bunting has been warmly welcomed and appreciated by the children and school officials, who in May recognized her contribution with honors and gifts.

Matthews, Calloway take vows

LEESBURG — Laurie Lynn Matthews and Lt. Joseph Ray Calloway were married in a ceremony at 2 p.m. on Saturday, May 28, at the First Baptist Church of Leesburg with the Rev. Charles L. Roedel officiating.

Support needed for youth tennis program

The Chase Park Sanford Junior Tennis League began through a $1,000 donation from the United States Tennis Association. Where is the community support the USTA expects so that the program can continue past June 24?

Thus far, McKee Construction has donated $100 and Sun Bank $50. Sanlando Park in Altamonte Springs has provided all rackets and balls for the program.

The recreation department of the city of Sanford has agreed to let the Chase Park tennis courts on Celery Avenue be used from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Monday through Friday to instruct disadvantaged and other interested youth of Sanford. Thirty children, aged 7-17, are learning not only tennis skills but a life-time attitude of good citizenship and community pride.

The 70 children on the waiting list will be notified on June 27 if the program will continue.

Find out what a top-notch program the community should be supporting. Come on, our children are counting on you.

Ann Vanderbeek, president of

the Over 50 Club, wishes everyone going away a nice summer vacation and welcomes them back in September.

The Over 50 Club meets the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at the Sanford Civic Center at 10:30 a.m.

There will be a short meeting on June 28, after which the group will go to Burger King.

Memberships are only $2 per person. For more information, call Vanderbeek at 668-1631.

On July 5, Senior Tours will take a group west for a 26-day trip. Seats are still available at $1,950 for each person in a couple or $2,400 for a single seat.

Some of the places the group plans to visit are Helen Keller's home, Graceland Mansion; the Grand Canyon; Las Vegas; Mesa Verde; National Park; Bryce Canyon; Glacier National Park; Yellowstone National Park; the Durando Silverstone Trail; the Lewis & Clark Trail, and many more. States visited will include Alabama, Colorado, Nevada, Texas, Arkansas, Arizona and Idaho.

Anyone around 50 years old is eligible to go, along with their guests.

In the fall, Senior Tours will take a Hawaiian cruise and embark on a fall foliage trip to the Great Smoky Mountains.

Publicity procedure

The Sanford Herald welcomes organization and personal news. The following suggestions are recommended to expedite publication:

1. Releases should be typed (upper and lower case), double spaced and written in narrative style (third person).
2. Do not abbreviate.
3. A contact person's name and phone number are necessary.
4. Keep releases simple.
5. Organization releases (the program should lead the meeting event) must be submitted no later than two days after the event.
6. Advance notices and requests for photographer should be submitted one week prior to the desired publication date.

Radio Society sponsoring Field Day exercises

SANFORD — The Lake Monroe Amateur Radio Society will be participating in the annual national Field Day exercise sponsored by the American Radio Relay League on Saturday and Sunday, June 25 and 26, at the Sanford Airport.

The object of the exercise is to work as many stations as possible and in the course of doing so, learn to operate under less than optimum conditions. A premium is placed on skills and equipment developed to meet the challenge of emergency preparedness and to acquaint the public with the capabilities of the Amateur Radio Society.

Power output is limited to 150 watts if the highest multipliers for score are desired. Operation can be on voice, International Morse Code, radioteletype and other digital modes. Bonus points are added to the participants' scores for meeting several special conditions.

The public is invited to the Field Day site, across from the administration building at the Sanford Airport.

The American Radio Relay League was founded in 1914 for the purpose of providing technical information, standardizing operating procedures and working with the Federal Communications Commission in order to optimize rules and regulations. The ARRL now provides direct assistance to the FCC by administering the license exams to become an amateur radio operator or to upgrade licenses already held.

For more information about the Field Day, contact W.R. "Wimpy" Wimberly at 322-8204.

Tobacco smoke not the cat's meow for one pet owner

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked if secondhand tobacco smoke can affect pets. Here's my personal experience. Michael Francis, one of my Abyssinian cats, itched and scratched himself raw. His fur came out in great patches and his stomach was bald. My other cat, Alex, and a Sugarhouse, sneezed and coughed all her short life. My veterinarian didn't know what was wrong, and he didn't try very hard to find out.

Then I found another veterinarian, Vet No. 2, asked if I smoked (I did). She then asked me to scrub my walls, shampoo my draperies, carpets, upholstery, etc. to get rid of the smoke deposits. And to quit smoking! I quit smoking and followed her instructions. Michael Francis was miraculously cured, but my little Sugarhouse died before she was 2 years old.

When people ask why I quit smoking, I tell them. Some laugh. Others say they'd gotten rid of the cat instead. Most make it clear that they don't think a cat is worth "all that trouble," but I see it differently. I had a choice. My cats died.

Yet No. 2 said she has other clients whose cats are allergic to tobacco smoke, but I'm the only one who stopped smoking.

This tends to support your statement that if smokers don't consider their children, they are not likely to be concerned about a pet.

ELIZABETH THOMPSON, BATON ROUGE

DEAR ELIZABETH: Hooray for you! Let my readers assume that I am implying that all cats are allergic to tobacco smoke. Let me make it perfectly clear—I am not. (P.S. Sorry about Sugarhouse.)

DEAR ABBY: Would anyone be interested in my old Girl Scout uniform? I also have the hat and belt that go with it. I am now 72 years old, which makes my uniform 50 years old. I guess you could call it an antique.

I thought maybe some Scout organization might want it. I'd gladly send it to anyone who would give it a good home!

MILLIE FROM MELROSE, MASS.

DEAR MILLIE: I called the national headquarters of the Girl Scouts and spoke with Bonnie McEwan, the director of media information. When I told her about your uniform, she said, "What timing! We would love to have Millie's uniform! We've just established a Preservation Center for just such historic items. Perhaps if you mention it in your column, others will contribute other archival items for the Girl Scout museum."

So, Millie, dear, please send your uniform, belt and hat to: Girl Scouts of the USA, National Historic Preservation Center, 830 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 11002.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the party who wrote about the expression "I could care less," which I agree should be, "I couldn't care less." I want to add that there are many words used in today's conversation that are grossly misused. To mention a few:

People say, "We kept going back and forth." It should be "forth and back." (We don't say "to and fro" — we say, "to and fro.") When we back a car out of the garage, we go "back, then forth," but ordinarily, we go "forth and back," right?

Another common error is calling a water heater a "hot water heater." There is no such thing as a hot water heater—no one can heat hot water, but water is already hot and cannot be heated.

Also, most people use the word "indefinitely" incorrectly. They say, "This item will last indefinitely," meaning that it will last forever. Actually, "indefinitely" means "uncertain, an indefinite amount of time," but it is used incorrectly to mean "forever."

DICK ZONNEFELD, ARTERIA, CALIF.

DEAR DICK: Interesting! But untidy!

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I am writing to ask you a question

He is married, and a fairly successful salesman with good manners, but when he cuts meat, he makes a "tst" of his left hand and holds the fork straight up—like a 4-year-old child.

Others have noticed it, and I'm amazed that no one has called this to his attention. Should I?

This advice holds true for those who are tempted to offer unsolicited but well-intended advice, such as: "You should do something about that wart (or mole) on your face" or, "Replace that missing tooth in front" or, "Get a nose job" or, "Lose some weight."

However, it would be an act of kindness to quietly let a person know there's a piece of broccoli on his tooth, or a piece of toilet tissue clinging to his left shoe or his zipper is open.

Excess Baggage

Before you go on a trip, you must plan carefully in order to take as few pieces of luggage as possible.

Excess baggage can hinder you in life as well. The happy traveler through life is one who finds a set of values that serves him well in every situation.

Re-examine your life—is excess baggage preventing you from being open to all the joy there is in life? Worship this Sunday as part of this re-examination.

Happy millenium to Russian church

By David E. Anderson
UPI Religion Writer

First there's the four-tiered birthday cake, adorned with rows of crayoned candles. And then the careful, childish printing: "Happy 1,000 Birthday, 1,000 years is a long time!"

That's one of the nearly 30,000 birthday cards created by what is being called the "Crayon Brigade," a child-to-child, church-to-church peace effort being conducted through the National Council of Churches to celebrate the Russian Orthodox Church's millenium.

Other cards proclaimed "peace" and "let's be friends" or "1,000 years of service. Oh Boy!"

The project, one more effort at breaking down some of the barriers in East-West relations, was conceived by Suzanne Nagel, a saleswoman for an office supply firm and lay member of Trinity Episcopal Church in New York City.

It marks the anniversary — being celebrated throughout the Soviet Union this year — of the "Baptism of Kiev Rus," the conversion of the inhabitants of the Ukraine under the guidance of St. Vladimir.

Nagel first contacted council officials to ask whether participants in its six travel seminars to the Soviet Union taking place this year would be willing to carry the "birthday cards" from the United States to Russian Orthodox churches when they write.

She then contacted a large number of churches and denominations, inviting them to send cards made by Sunday school children to the National Council. An article in Norman Vincent Peale's non-denominational "Guideposts" magazine generated much of the massive response, according to council officials.

Colorful and joyful, most of the cards are decorated with birthday cakes, balloons, crosses, hearts, flags and people with smiling faces. They range from mostly simple to a few very elaborate collages and computer graphics. Some churches sent posters decorated by an entire Sunday School class and others sent cloth or felt banners.

And some senders, adding a further personal touch, sent photographs of the sender or the Sunday school class.

"These are really meaningful," Nagel said. "They are personalized. The recipient can say, 'That's my friend there. He has brown hair.'"

According to council officials, cards have come from children in all 50 states and from U.S. outposts abroad, such as the Bitburg Air Base in West Germany.

More than 60 denominations are represented in the responses, so far.

And cards have been received from a wide variety of groups, such as a group of recently arrived Vietnamese refugee children who, "although they speak little English, showed much enthusiasm in making these cards," according to a letter from their teacher.

"We want to be friends with our brothers and sisters in Christ in the U.S.S.R. and we send these handmade birthday cards as a token of friendship," wrote a Denver Sunday School teacher.

And a Florida teacher said the 7-year-olds in her class "showed more interest in the atlas, a Russian Bible, Russian alphabet and English-Russian dictionary — to make the card — than they showed in Christmas."

Nagel said she hopes the project "breaks down hate, lessens fear and helps us to see our mutual Christianity. So much of the hate on both sides is manufactured and our children are afraid."

"Each child who sits and scribbles away will be less threatened."

Volunteers Bob Kuhn, shown removing an old bed frame, and Jan Johnson, pulling weeds, were among those working to clean up the "House of Goodwill" belonging to Sanford's First Presbyterian Church.

'House of Goodwill' getting a facelift

SANFORD—First Presbyterian Church of Sanford wants to fix up the old runned down house it owns at Fourth Street and Oak Avenue with the help of donations of labor, materials and money so that its appearance will live up to the name "House of Goodwill."

Volunteers have worked for the last two Saturdays to clean up the inside and outside of the building and scrape off the old paint to get ready for termite treatment and a new coat of paint. They removed and hauled away two trailer loads of old furniture and junk and shrubbery trimmings the first week.

As an outreach to the community, the church makes the building available to various groups such as the Narcotics Anonymous and Alcoholics Anonymous for meetings. In years past it was used by a Boy Scout troop.

"We want it to be a practical center of Christian caring for hurting people in the community," the Rev. Graham Hardy, interim associate pastor, said. "We're open to suggestions of groups who might need the use of such a facility."

Tatgenhorst joins Community staff

The Rev. John E. Tatgenhorst Jr., 55, is the new associate pastor at Community United Methodist Church, Casselberry. A United Methodist minister in Ohio and Michigan for 27 years, he and his wife, Lynda, moved to Fern Park three years ago from Evria, Ohio, where he was in private business. Since then he has been self-employed and she has been working as a truck dispatcher for Harper's Express.

He is a graduate of Ashbury College, Wilmore, Ky., and Western Theological Seminary, Pittsburgh, Pa. Prior to joining the staff Tatgenhorst has been active at Community United Methodist teaching Sunday School, Wednesday night Bible studies and discipleship classes. He and his wife are co-teachers of the 7th and 8th grade class.

They have three grown daughters and a son and five grand-

Sex queries for seminarians

If homosexual seminarians seeking ordination are asked about their sexual practices, shouldn't heterosexuals be asked too?

It — as is the case in the United Methodist Church and the new Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA) — gay candidates for the ministry must answer whether they are engaging in sex outside of marriage, shouldn't heterosexuals be required to disclose that information as well?

Heterosexual divinity students in the ELCA can probably expect to have the question put to them in the future.

Rev. Craig Settlage, of the ELCA's division for ministry, feels that, as things now stand, there is a double standard. To be in compliance with church regulations for ordination, gays must affirm they are celibate. The subject isn't brought up with single heterosexual divinity students.

Can a pledge of celibacy be required of some single students but not all? Settlage thinks it is unfair.

The highly charged gay issue is only one of the many problems that have plagued the ELCA since it was formed six months ago. The new 5.5-million-member denomination appears to be controversy-prone.

First of all, some ELCA bishops were criticized for wearing miters (triangular liturgical hats) and carrying croziers (shepherd's staffs). For many old Lutherans who grew up with their ministers wearing plain black vestments — bishops were unheard of — this was a step too far in the direction of Rome.

When 38 of the church's bishops signed a letter opposing aid to the Contras in Nicaragua, another bomb was set off. The denominational magazine, The Lutheran, received a rash of letters, every one expressing opposition to the bishops' action.

George Plagens

The Lutheran later charged the bishops with exercising censorship over the magazine on another issue. The bishops were accused of persuading two authors to withdraw opinion pieces they had written for the magazine. The articles had raised questions about the ELCA's certification of three gay seminarians for ordination.

It is the matter of ordaining gays, however, that is serving as the lightning rod for much of the criticism the ELCA is getting. The church's Chicago office received what it described as "an avalanche of letters and phone calls" when news stories told of the three gay candidates having obtained certification.

Two of the homosexuals have since ruled themselves out of the running for ordination by refusing to tell their bishops whether they are engaging in homosexual practices and whether they intend to remain celibate if ordained.

The third gay said he was "not presently in a relationship" but said he objected to being asked. He said he also realized that if he were to become ordained and later enter into a relationship, the congregation "will ask for my resignation. There is this gigantic ax hanging over my head."

As tempers continued to rise, the bishop of one of the gay seminarians said he doubts the denomination is ready to receive into its ministry someone who is openly homosexual, whether or not he is practicing his homosexuality.

Another synod bishop referred to homosexuality as "an aberration of God's natural order." At the same time he acknowledged that "being homosexual is not what one chooses but is rather biological." The answer? "Celibacy may seem a high price to pay but others have paid it."

Meanwhile, a letter-writer to The Lutheran puts the denomination's troubles this way: "If the ELCA is intent on becoming another declining mainline denomination, it is off to a good start."

Youth teams plan mission work trips

CASSELBERRY—Two youth summer mission teams were dedicated June 19 at Community United Methodist Church during the 11 a.m. service. The Middle School Team is scheduled to leave July 9 for Tallahassee, Fla., where the members will build a native stone retaining wall and paint an addition to another church.

The Senior Highs will leave July 22 for Chateaufalls, Mass., where they will paint the sanctuary of a 147-year-old church. The youth raised money for the projects through fundraisers such as a rummage sale, dinner and auction.

Navy Band plays in park

WINTER PARK—People for People Concerts of First United Methodist Church of Winter Park will present as its last event of the season, a patriotic concert featuring the Orlando Naval Training Center Band this Sunday at 7 p.m. in Winter Park's downtown Central Park stage.

The concert is free to the public and those attending are encouraged to come decked out in red, white and blue.

Merthies hold marriage seminar

SANFORD—Pastor R.W. Merthie and his wife, Ruth, will conduct a marriage seminar Thursday and Friday at 7 p.m. at the New Life Word Center, 1402 W. 16th St., Sanford. The seminar will continue on Saturday at 9 a.m. at the Park Sun Hotel, Altamonte Springs, where it will be capped off with the renewing their wedding vows followed by a banquet.

Topics to be discussed include the covenant, the duties of husband and wife, financial wisdom, child training, communication and sex in marriage. Natives of Sanford and 1968 graduates of Crooms High School, the Merthies have spent the past five years speaking on marriage throughout the state.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

By Bernice Bede Osol YOUR BIRTHDAY JUNE 26, 1988

In the year ahead the aspects indicate improvements socially as well as in business. Take advantage of both over the coming months.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Usually you are not a grandstander, but today you might try to upstage your friends in order to call attention to yourself. Your performance won't get rave reviews.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Make the most of opportunities that are presently available or they may be withdrawn. Conditions could alter rapidly as of today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even though it won't be easy, try to own up to your mistakes today instead of making excuses. Rationalization will weaken your image.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is not a good day for you to go shopping. You may not be as value-conscious as you should be and could squander your funds frivolously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) By nature, you are not usually vacillating or indecisive, but today you may have problems making decisions and sticking to them. Get back in character.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Guard against tendencies today to leave essential tasks until the last minute. Your performances level will decline as the pressures build up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Optimism is an admirable virtue, but you must be realistic as well. Be careful today that you do not build your hopes upon unsound premises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Disappointment is possible if you are banking a little too heavily on chance or luck to carry you through. These are not allies who can be relied upon today.

By Bernice Bede Osol YOUR BIRTHDAY JUNE 27, 1988

Just because conditions are likely to be better for you in the year ahead, don't take things for granted. Capitalize on opportunities, don't waste them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll be disappointed today if you expect others to drop what they're doing in order to help you sort out your affairs. Stand on your own two feet.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Enjoy friends for what they are, not for what they can do for you. If you feel inclined to cut a deal, do it with your business contacts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Pretext doesn't become you today. It's best not to put on airs pretending you are more than that you are, or that you have something you don't possess.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you are rather straightforward with others, but today you might try to inflate the egos of associates by voicing what they want to hear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A companion investigates a situation today that requires your resources for it to succeed. Don't participate if you have doubts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today it may seem like the harder you try to please, the less you are appreciated. To avoid frustrations, steer clear of people who take you for granted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today make every effort to measure up in situations where others are depending on you. If you let them down, it could create new complications.

PICES (Feb. 20-March 20) If someone starts exaggerating his or her accomplishments today, don't try to imitate this person. He or she may be able to get away with embellishment, but you won't.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let your mind wander during financial transactions today, because oversights could prove costly. Count your change before you leave the store.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't use flattery to advance your aims today. The effects of insincere compliments will be the reverse of what you hope to accomplish.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your instincts may tell you today there's something you can do for another to help her over a difficult period. But feeling lethargic, you probably won't help.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The social scene is a critical arena for you today. Flamboyancy in either dress or demeanor could make a bad impression on others.

PICES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you might feel inclined to overindulge those in your charge. It's not a wise tactic — spoiling them now could create unreasonable expectations later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If someone praises you effusively today for what you inwardly realize is a routine effort, don't let it swell your head. It may just be flattery.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you might get involved with a person who has expensive tastes. That's well and good provided the resources are not yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be appreciative of your mate today if he/she is going overboard to please you. Strive to reciprocate instead of expecting everything.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Don't let your disappointment at not getting to what you think is a makable game cause you to misplay your hand. Watch how carefully today's South played.

Perhaps North should have immediately raised South's spade overall. But he waited. When East competed with three hearts, North raised. Naturally South passed. He angrily surveyed dummy after the opening lead. "Why wait to give me a raise?" he exclaimed. "We probably have missed a game." So saying, declarer took the king of hearts in dummy and led a spade. When East played low he put up the king. West took the A-Q-J and led another heart. In due time, declarer lost the queen of diamonds. Then, when he played out the A-K-Q of clubs, a funny thing happened. The suit didn't split. So he lost a club trick for down one.

It's true that 10 tricks would have been made if spades were 2-2 or if East had the ace. But declarer should still have played safe for nine tricks — his contract. All he had to do was play low when he first played the trump suit. West would win the jack and get out with a heart. Now instead of playing a second trump, declarer should go after clubs. Even though the club suit splits badly, West can ruff in only with a natural trump trick, and the losing small club in South's hand is eventually trumped in dummy. Sure, this play gives up the overtrick occasionally. But it guarantees making what South bid — three spades.

Lesson: Even when it looks as if you didn't bid enough, take the safest play for your contract.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books. ©1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

White Sox battle lines being drawn

The White Sox? I thought Florida was interested in having a major league baseball team to the state.

The White Sox? Isn't that an indoor soccer league team?

When we first learned that St. Petersburg was interested in becoming the home of a major league team, the first thing that came to mind was that maybe the city would be considered in league expansion plans. Sure, an expansion team won't win many games the first couple of years, but then again, the White Sox don't win many games anyway. So it's easy to see how proponents of the idea could become confused.

I'm sure the people of Florida didn't have the White Sox in mind when the idea of a professional baseball team was first mentioned. Come to think of it, it's probably not a good idea to ever use the terms "professional" and "White Sox" in the same sentence.

Still, battle lines are forming and people are taking sides. Obviously there are enough people interested in this white elephant to take a stand, one way or another. The state of Florida has been accused of trying to steal one of Chicago's ball clubs, a club most other states wouldn't have on a silver platter.

True, Comiskey Park is a baseball shrine, and it would be strange what had to see that facility suddenly void of a major league team.

However, waxing nostalgic has nothing to do with the bidding war being waged by the Illinois and Florida legislatures for the rights to claim the White Sox as their very own.

A writer in Chicago has taken the matter personally choosing to verbally attack all Floridians in general instead of singling out those guilty parties responsible for the idea. The banter and bickering has resulted in charges and counter charges, not to mention some pretty silly promotions.

Chicago residents were urged to send white sweatsocks to the mayor of St. Petersburg, the idea being that if Florida wants white socks, then the city of Chicago will send them some. Pretty clever, adult responsible thinking, right?

Not to be outdone, St. Petersburg residents were urged by a local newspaper to send orange seeds to members of the Illinois legislature. Probably not a bad idea. Legislators don't

Volusia County park will reopen soon

This 29 acre site just across the St. John's River from Seminole County has laid dormant for the past two months. Volusia County plans to reopen the park in the near future and take advantage of its boat ramps, fishing areas and campsites.

The park has been closed since the county's lease expired in March.

The park was formerly maintained by three separate parties.

Volusia County park to reopen

Facility could offer competition to marina

ENTERPRISE — Despite plans for reopening Lake Monroe Park in Volusia County, which will offer boat launching facilities for what is projected to be a one-dollar fee, Sanford officials said the park will offer competition to the Sanford Marina, which has plans for a five-dollar fee for boat launching, parking on weekends and holidays.

Sanford City Engineer Bill Simmons has been actively involved in Sanford's new of finance. In charge, weekend use fees at the Sanford Marina. He said he doesn't feel the two marinas will be in competition.

We're not doing it to make money, Simmons said about the new fees. He said the $5 fee on Saturdays, Sunday and holidays resulted from a need for additional money to improve the facility, primarily parking. It was part of the regulation of the use of the park.

The happy to see as many good facilities available to boaters as possible, Simmons said.

But that air of cordiality may change if and when Sanford residents decide to save a few bucks and drive across the St.

John's River to launch their boats.

The Volusia County Board of Commissioners will be the one to decide whether to raise the fee to $5. The board will also decide whether to raise the fee to $5. The board will also decide whether to raise the fee to $5.

Communist Party conference a 'snapshot' of internal struggle

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Communist Party conference that Michael Gorbahev convened this week is a monument both to the sweeping changes initiated during his three years in power and the immensity of the obstacles still in the way of ultimate success.

After months of rising, then falling, expectations and diplomatic tomes, the Tuesday to Friday meetings are a snapshot of the present balance of forces within the Soviet Union.

The forums under discussion, such as, are on the power of the party and limits to terms in office, appear revolutionary from the vantage point of the pro-Gorbachev side. But speculation about more dramatic reforms and a purge of old-line officials has faded, including a pessimistic tone among some of the Soviet leader's supporters.

Only two months ago, officials suggested that the conference, the first such gathering between five-year party congresses since 1941, would last up to 10 days. Now it's shorter than that.

Leonid Klumov, reformist leader of the cinematographers' union and one of 1,000 conference delegates, died recently, but his name is reported and was purged from television coverage of the meeting. The same week the government newspaper, Izvestia, announced live coverage would be limited to the opening and closing, presumably when Gorbachev is speaking.

Expectations have declined since January 1987 when Gorbachev first proposed an All-Union Party Conference, a device for speeding change that had not been used since 1941.

If the conference was to be a serious, thorough, seven-day session, the battle was just starting. It will involve a skirmishing before the delegates, through the Kremlin gate into the cavernous Palace of the Congress.

Watch the bidding for the gates, a Soviet official advised in April. Flipping his hand from side to side, he said, "It is not clear who will win."

By early June it was clear Gorbachev's instructions that delegates should be given supporters of the pro-reform program had been widely ignored.

Even in this capital, where his strength should be greatest, some of his most vocal supporters methodically were excluded by local party officials.

Among those who failed to qualify were two communists. I've read reports of people who have been checking the door. Mikoyan, playwright, and the composer, G. G. Gorbachev, the St. Petersburg party apparatus.

Deliberate exclusion of party officials could change the party's political line. There is a possibility that a

It's on to the nationals for jumbo-size cockroach

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don't step on that cockroach; it could be worth $1,000.

A two-inch cockroach took top honors in a contest to find the largest roach in New York — a city with a reputation for producing world-class bugs.

A two-inch specimen netted its owner a superintendent on Manhattan's Lower East Side a $200 prize Wednesday and a chance to win $1,000 in a nationwide contest to find the roach of all roaches.

The bug, who to the relief of onlookers was dead and pinned to a piece of cardboard, beat out 77 other entries to win the statewide contest, which was sponsored by Combat Roach Control bug killer.

Five entries were disqualified for tampering, said Nora Glass, co-owner of the Big Apple Pest Control when the contest was held.

The winning brown beauty was heavily favored to win a nationwide contest and the $1,000 prize in Philadelphia July 7, said Michael Bohdan, judge for the pest control manufacturer who has overseen contests throughout the 50 states.

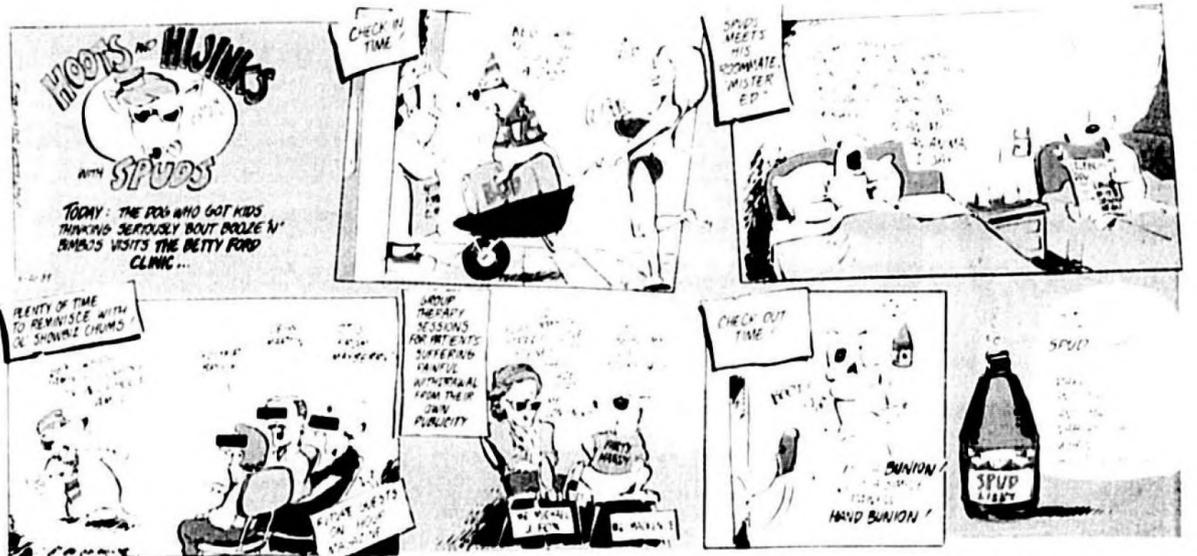

Superintendent Antonio Gonzalez set out several traps before nabbing the winning female, Glass said.

Finding a winning bug is a matter of luck and perseverance, said her husband, Barry, also co-owner of the pest control business.

"You cannot grow a big cockroach," he said.

Officials' vision benefits residents

Seminole County environmental officials have implemented new programs which combine two elements of good government: Service to county residents and the elimination of certain hazards to the environment.

The Environmental Services Department began a program of free oil collection two weeks ago and has now added a battery disposal service. Residents can take used oil and batteries to any of three locations — the two transfer stations at Sanlando and Upsala and the county dump on Osceola Road. Large barrels are available for the oil. Do-it-yourself oil changers have poured more than 200 gallons into the container during the past two weeks.

The dangers of dumping oil on the ground, whether at the dump or at home, are evident. Seepage into the ground threatens underground water supplies and the aquifer. Yet careless citizens have been doing just that in the past. Attempting to dispose of a used battery can be vexing and frustrating.

County officials began planning this program early this year. Then, when the state legislature enacted the Solid Waste Act this spring, they were prepared to inaugurate the service at once.

This early recognition of the problem, adequate planning and timely implementation might qualify the county for a special grant available under the act and designed to aid counties which are in the vanguard of implementing the provisions of the act. The next expansion of the services in Seminole County will be collecting aluminum, according to officials.

We can be justly proud of government officials who go beyond recognition of problems; who design and implement programs which not only benefit citizens, but also solve problems for citizens. And, perhaps best of all, programs which make significant contributions to the betterment of our environment.

Citizen's shame

We were appalled this week to view a picture of a truck loaded with bodies of dead animals. A story detailing the events which led up to the mass destruction of dogs and cats offended our sensibilities. We like stories and pictures of happy, healthy puppies and kittens. We really don't like to cope with the harsh realities of the enormous overpopulation of unwanted, neglected and abused animals.

But the seamier side of animal life will continue to be all pervasive as long as pet owners avoid neutering and attaching tags to collars. Runaways which cannot be identified, roving animals which have been abandoned, and abused pets which are just dumped out into the outside world must be collected by local government departments and are usually "euthanized," a polite euphemism for killed.

Seminole County has a department with approximately 15 fulltime employees just to handle these unwanted, neglected animals. The answer is not in anguish over what should not be, but in education and action in what should be. Pet owners have responsibilities to society, but most of all, to pets which can give so much love and comfort in return for care.

Reagan assumes stiffer stance on gun control

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, who was shot by a would-be assassin two months after he was in office, appears to be taking a stiffer gun control stance.

Reagan toed the National Rifle Association's line, even after he was wounded in the chest on March 30, 1981, by John Hinckley, and so did his press secretary James Brady, who was gravely wounded in the head and valiantly survived.

But both of them seem to be coming around to the handgun control point of view of the need for registration and a waiting period. Brady's wife, Sarah, has been in the vanguard of a crusade for tighter controls. And it is only lately that Brady has changed his view.

Reagan's statement at a recent news conference in Toronto supported a waiting period to buy a gun so that a law enforcement agency can check out the record of the purchaser.

His remarks also recalled the uproar a few days before the Reagans moved into the White House when Nancy Reagan told reporters she used to keep "a tiny little gun" in the drawer of her bedstand in California.

Reagan said at the news conference: "I taught my entire family at the ranch how to shoot a gun in case they ever had to. And I think maybe there could be some restrictions, that there had to be a certain amount of training."

Nowadays the Reagans have the Secret Service to protect them.

The Canadians were taking no chances at the recent Economic Summit in Toronto. Security was as tight, if not tighter than in Moscow where the KGB prevailed.

The Royal Mounted Police and police from all over Canada manned the barricades with reporters, loaded with credentials and passes hanging around their necks, had to go through several checkpoints to get into the door of the convention center.

Protecting seven heads of government is no easy task even when the leader brings in his own protective team. But the Canadians made it their serious business, imposing strong precautions.

President Reagan is finding more and more places in his speeches to give a boost to Vice President George Bush, who has sewed up the Republican presidential nomination. Reagan gave a plug to Bush in his last speech in Toronto last Tuesday, speaking of the vice president's meeting with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney on control of drugs.

In an address the following day to the Business Council, Reagan said that at the Economic Summit the leaders discussed a range of issues "and something I know every American family will cheer, the Bush Initiative to stop drug-money laundering. Thanks to Vice President Bush, the major industrial democracies have committed themselves to hanging up 'Gone out of Business' signs in drug money laundries all over the world."

The Reagans feel it is getting time to say goodbye. Even though they do not leave the White House until Jan. 20, President and Mrs. Reagan are saying their farewells to different groups.

Light on Pentagon probe

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Amid the massive bribery probe of Pentagon officials, a separate lawsuit by a fired employee of a defense contractor offers valuable insights into the relationship between the military and big business.

The suit — not part of the current inquiry by the Naval Investigative Service and the FBI — was brought by John R. Betzler, who was an employee of the McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Betzler charged that he was demoted and forced to resign as director of the company's military aircraft marketing office in Washington after he complained to top management about "illegal activities" involving the Defense Department.

McDonnell Douglas denied Betzler's allegations, but after a three-week trial in March, Betzler was awarded $250,000. He had sought $7 million.

Betzler accused McDonnell Douglas of using retired generals and other former officers to help market the company's aircraft to the Pentagon, and of using illegal means to acquire classified Pentagon information.

During the trial it came out that an unnamed consultant had obtained restricted information from the Pentagon on the plans of a major competitor — General Dynamics Corp. — to bid on a proposed sale of fighter planes to several NATO countries. It was implied that McDonnell Douglas used this information in preparing its own bid.

Betzler charged that despite Pentagon regulations barring Defense Department officials from accepting gifts from defense contractors, the company regularly approved expense accounts of employees listing meals, entertainment and gifts for such officials.

Sources close to the probe are calling it the "most serious bribery investigation undertaken by the federal government in the past 40 years." Predictions are that before it is over more than 40 defense contractors will be involved and dozens of Pentagon employees, defense contractor employees and consultants will be indicted.

Debate rages over AIDS research

By Jack Anderson and Joseph Spear
WASHINGTON — AIDS has become as much a political and economic issue as it has a social tragedy. Death and dying are the outward manifestations, but behind the scenes a debate is raging among scientists over whether AIDS research is following the wrong lead.

At the center of the debate is a University of California biologist who insists that the commonly accepted theory about the cause of AIDS is simply not true. Dr. Peter Duesberg of the Berkeley campus' Department of Molecular Biology has angered leading AIDS researchers by his contention that the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) is not the cause of AIDS.

By definition, AIDS is a breakdown in the body's immune system. The victim then dies of a condition that the body cannot fight, such as cancer or pneumonia. The popular theory is that HIV is the virus that causes the breakdown of the immune system.

But Duesberg thinks AIDS may be caused by lifestyle — not that lifestyle puts a person in contact

Pollution info revealed

WASHINGTON (NEA) — For the first time in the nation's history, concerned citizens soon will have access to meaningful information about the release of toxic substances into the air, water and soil of their communities.

Until now, only limited data was available in widely scattered locations about the extent to which manufacturers or users had discharged harmful chemicals into the biosphere.

Reports on airborne releases were maintained by one unit of the Environmental Protection Agency, while information about wastes dumped into landfills was the responsibility of another EPA unit. Regulation of toxics discharged into rivers and other navigable waterways was under the joint jurisdiction of the Army Corps of Engineers and the EPA.

"Some of the information may have been publicly available, but it certainly wasn't publicly accessible," says Dr. Gerry Poje, an environmental toxicologist with the National Wildlife Federation.

Beginning July 1, however, every substantial producer or user of 328 chemicals known to cause adverse health or environmental effects must provide annual Toxic Release Inventory reports to the EPA and to state environmental protection agencies. Those submissions are mandated by the Emergency Planning and Community Right to Know Act of 1986.

Companies must report all discharges into the environment of substances known or reasonably expected to cause serious or irreversible reproductive or neurological disorders, cancers, genetic mutations or other chronic health effects.

Until now, "most citizens had no means of discovering the sources of these chemical releases, the identity of the toxic pollutants being discharged into their community, or the health and environmental effects of those emissions," notes a coalition of environmental and other public interest groups.

The reports that have been required are often vague. A pulp mill, for example, could disclose the discharge of "spen; leuors" into a river without specifying the composition, concentration or other important details.

The organizations now working to promote awareness of the salutary change in the law include the Advocacy Institute, Environmental Action Foundation, Environmental Defense Fund, Environmental Policy Institute and Natural Resources Defense Council.

The revision of the federal law is aptly characterized by the director of EPA's Office of Toxic Substances: "The program is quite revolutionary. We have never had this kind of information, even here at EPA."

Moreover, the law is the first ever to require a federal agency to establish and maintain a computerized data base readily accessible to the public. Beginning next spring, computer users anywhere in the country should be able to gain instant access to the information about hazardous discharges.

Drought clues in treerings

By Celia Hooper
UPI Science Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Midwest and the Plains have had the driest early growing season in decades, experts say, and disaster is predicted if rain does not come soon.

But scientists studying rings in ancient trees say they give hints the drought may be part of a 30-year dry trend that has just started.

Writing in the journal Science, three geographers from the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville said they were able to use wood from the living trees — probably the oldest living creatures in the eastern United States — to construct an extraordinarily lengthy record in dating drought severity from the year 372 A.D. to 1985.

The scientists examined penit-thin cores from the bases of eight bald cypress trees growing along the Black River, a tributary of the Cape Fear River in southeastern North Carolina.

The oldest trees are 1,700 years old, making them the oldest residents of eastern North America, said Malcolm Cleveland, one of the research associates who worked on the study. He said bristlecone pines in western states have proven to be more than 8,000 years old.

The researchers said the width of the annual rings in the wood of the trees reflects the amount of rainfall and temperatures during the growing season, especially during June.

After analyzing measurements of the rings, the researchers found a regular switching of wet and dry years.

"These wet and dry regimes — last for some 30 years each," the scientists wrote, and are reflected in historic weather records from 1867 to 1985, as well as the tree rings.

Cleveland said in a telephone interview, however, that the 30-year pattern was not perfect, and ranged from 20-year to 60-year spells.

For recent history, "The bald cypress reconstruction (of climate history) ... indicates that the period from 1956 to 1984 was one of the five wettest 29-year periods in North Carolina during the past 1,614 years.

In congressional hearings recently, Rep. Edward Markey, R-Ill., said if the dry weather persists, 1988 would mark the worst drought in 50 years.

wholeheartedly buying into the HIV theory. They cite a lack of proof that HIV is the sole cause of AIDS.

Dr. Joseph Sonnabend, an AIDS researcher in New York, said he suspects AIDS is caused by many factors. He and Michael Callen of the People With AIDS Coalition in New York said they are concerned that treatment theories are based solely on the HIV hypothesis. Sonnabend said his views have also drawn hostility from his peers.

The National Center for Health Advocacy in Washington also has called for more investigation. Its president, Janet Smith, told our reporter, Scott Sleek, she is "concerned" about the reaction of the scientific community to Duesberg. "Instead of attacking him, there ought to be some serious soul-searching about the real role of co-factors in AIDS and what they may tell us about how to prevent and treat the disease."

Dr. Robert Gallo, the foremost AIDS researcher at the National Institutes of Health, has said publicly that he can't respond to Duesberg's questions "without shrieking." Experts such as Gallo say HIV acts like no traditional virus, and their extensive research shows overwhelming evidence of a link between HIV and AIDS. They criticize Duesberg for asking for proof in a field where circumstantial evidence is often strong enough to pinpoint the root of a disease.

Duesberg is no amateur. He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences and is considered a pioneer in the field of viruses and cancer-causing genes. He is also a friend and colleague of the researchers that oppose his theory.

The firestorm around Duesberg is caused in part by his bold style. He has said he would gladly inject himself with HIV to prove it doesn't cause AIDS. He claims AZT, a drug used to treat AIDS, is toxic and is adding to the death toll. And Duesberg has accused the foremost AIDS researchers of collusion, suggesting that they won't rethink their theory because they have financial interests in the tests for HIV antibodies.

"Until (the cause of AIDS) is proven in scientific or logical ways, it's obvious they are out to defend vested or personal interests," Duesberg told us.

Florida's children need more help

Sarah Overstreet

By Jack Lovise
Florida Center for Children and Youth

A baby born in Florida is less likely to live a healthy and productive life than babies born in all but a handful of other states.

It doesn't have to be this way. If Florida were among the poorest of states, our record of neglect would be more easily justifiable. Florida is, instead, the 20th wealthiest state per capita. Yet, we're 49th in funding for human services. There is no greater discrepancy in America between what we have as a people and what we do for our neighbors. Some call this a budget gap; in fact, it is a morality gap.

Consider these facts: Florida's school children are the most likely in the nation to fail in school. One in three Florida ninth graders will never receive a high school diploma.

Because of health problems, family disruption, poverty and school failure, our children are the most likely in America to be locked up in detention centers, jails and prisons. Since 1972, Florida has sentenced a dozen juveniles to Death Row at the Florida State Prison in Starke.

Every town and city in our state has

State support lacking

- Florida is the 20th wealthiest state per capita.
- Florida ranks 49th in funding for human services.
- One in three Florida children will not graduate from high school.
- Florida children are the most likely in America to be locked up in detention centers, jails and prisons.
- Every city has children on waiting lists for day care, drug treatment, and child shelter.

children on waiting lists for child day care, drug treatment, safe shelter and therapeutic care for child abuse victims. These are our other death rows, to which we condemn innocent young children.

A woman in her 50's was recently arrested at a toxic waste dump in the Midwest. She was protesting the lack of clean-up funds, resulting in current and future damage to public health and the environment.

When asked why she protested and trespassed, she said her childhood home was Nuremberg, Germany during the reign of Hitler. She was in her young teens when the war ended. Reporters covering the Nuremberg war-crimes trials asked her what she knew about the terror of the Third Reich. They asked what her parents knew, what they did, where were they when?

Now a mother and an American, she said she protests because, at some future time, someone will stop her child and ask, "Where was your mother when...? What did she do to make a difference?"

We can make a difference in the lives of Florida's most vulnerable children. Conversely, if we do not act, we share some of the responsibility for what happens to them.

In Miami last year, two toddlers burned to death in a clothes dryer. The boys, Maurice and Anthony Grant, were left unsupervised because their mother could find no alternative child care and she had to work. The boys' names were on a waiting list for subsidized child care. If she quit her job and collected welfare, her daily AFDC payment would total $5.32.

The deaths of these children could have been prevented. This fact should weigh heavily on the 160 members of the Florida Legislature. They know the length of the waiting lists for children's programs and yet choose each year to let them grow.

Our government leaders tell us year after year, we can't do it all, the poor will always be with us and we can't just throw money at problems. These phrases echo against the limestone walls of Florida's Capitol, drowning out the cries of children who wait for care.

Money won't solve all our problems, to be sure, but properly invested it can bring our youngest Floridians out of the depths of disease, disability and despair. For example, good health care before birth, early checkups for problems, and quality child care would do so much to guarantee our children productive lives. Tens of thousands of Florida children wait for this care.

Like the real mother who screamed in protest when King Solomon threatened to slice her baby, we must say cuts to children never heal. To be proud of Florida as our home, Floridians must guarantee a more humane future for our children, our neighbor's children and the millions of children we never see.

(The Florida Center for Children and Youth is a private advocacy organization which operates with no state government funding.)

Unglued by labels too?

I would like to direct the attention of American manufacturers and vendors to a very nice wax that affixes labels to products better than spit cements paper wads. From time to time, I've seen this adhesive on labels for cookware and other items, but I have no idea what it's called or who makes it.

If one puts a dot of this wonder gum onto the corners of labels, it will pretty well hold the label to the product through a nuclear holocaust. But the real miracle of this little stickum is that when the purchaser of a product exerts only the slightest pressure, the label will come right off!

I don't know why these labels can withstand tornadoes yet yield to gentle human tugs — I am a verbal type who received a C minus in chemistry despite turning in extra-credit titrations, whatever those were.

Yet I like to believe some scientist out there was so smart he or she invented a substance that responds only to pressure applied by muscles never taxed beyond opening car doors or playing softball once a year at company parties.

I call attention to this space-age chemical only because 99 percent of American manufacturers have as yet not discovered it.

They are still laboring under the misconception that to affix a label to a product, they must coat it generously with a mixture that would hold an ironworker to a beam via a small dot on his hardhat.

I am not singling out any one manufacturer, you understand, nor even any one flea-market operator sticking labels on fine antique furniture anywhere in America. I can understand the need to lessen the possibility of theft.

What I can't understand is super-gluing the daggummed labels on things like 800 pound oak wardrobes a moving team comprised of Rockies I, II and III couldn't steal, on the windows of brand-new automobiles, when the exact same sticker information resides safe in the sales manager's office; and on new water heaters.

My new water heater has its serial number clearly etched into its metal side. There is no way on earth a dishonest plumber could have walked into that plumbing supply house and paid a different price for the thing. And none of the sticker info had anything to do with price; they were ballyhooing features, instructions on use, and energy information. Did the manufacturer think someone was going to pull off those labels and stick them on another unit, just for fun? Can anyone be that hard up for entertainment?

Yet I've just spent two hours peeling labels off my new water heater with an anti-glue solvent aptly named Dadgummit! This, after the original insults of three days without a hot shower, the charred debris from the old water heater that ruined the bathroom carpet, and half a day spent trying to find a plumber. An open warning to whoever was responsible for plastering those labels on that water heater: I'd like to slather a streak of that glue on your backside and affix you to a city bus during rush hour.

I propose a mass protest that just might end glue abuse; and if it doesn't, it will at least be fun while it lasts. I suggest that anytime we have to chisel away at a label glued to a product, we save the shreds and pack them off to the CEO of the company. We send them off in an envelope marked, "Congratulations! You are definitely a million-dollar winner in our Grand Sweepstakes. Just peel off the label inside and call the phone number beneath by midnight tonight, and we'll send you a certified check via return mail."

Then we open up the envelope and pour a bottle of Superglue into it. Let them see how it feels to try to get one of those daggummed labels off, without tearing up something. (Sarah Overstreet is a syndicated columnist for the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

Bike riders need more support for their fund drive

I note in the article, by Wayne Mize, "Short Day for Cyclists" that while $3,000 was donated to AHA before the cyclists started their marathon ride only $20 has been raised since they began their ride for AHA's benefit.

What is the matter with AHA, that they have not been able to generate national T.V. coverage of this marathon ride?

And as for that matter, where are our local T.V. and radio stations that they give no publicity to the effort these dedicated men are making to raise funds for AHA.

Perhaps the head of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce could apply the spur of attention to the T.V. and Radio so that the heart warming effort of these dedicated men would result in people opening their heart (and pocketbooks) that Heart Association could have funds to aid those whose hearts are in need or is it possible that "TEKAL" (weighed in the balance and found wanting) will be written after their names, showing the heartlessness of those who should have a heart for their fellowman. Let this not be said of the fair City of Sanford that they are heartless toward their fellow man, but let it be said that Sanford like Abou-Adam whose name led all the rest, in the final accounting, have a Heart Give to AHA that your heart will rest at ease.

Grants for Sanford, St. Petersburg, not in public interest Wasn't it great to see that the legislature gave the city of Sanford a grant of $150,000.00 for use on the city's Civic Center? The people of the rest of the state should be just as happy to pay taxes to the state for this purely local project as the people of Sanford will be to pay to the state their part of the $30 million grant made to St. Petersburg for the purely local stadium there.

This discovery by our legislature that people have no objection to giving away their tax funds for non-state purposes as long as they think somebody else is paying it, appears to set our representatives on a course to equal the squander programs of the U.S. Government.

I note that the city leaders are so enthralled with getting all this free money that they will try doubly hard to get more next year. It would be wonderful to know how much more it costs local taxpayers to pay for the additional administration of their funds to send them the circuitous route through Tallahassee than it would if those funds were raised and spent locally as they should be.

Truly we do live in the age of economic and financial idiocy!

The evil empire is still evil

Has the Evil Empire reformed or has it merely become more proficient in the art of deceiving? If we look at their actions rather than their disinformation we find: The Soviets are still fomenting revolution in Central America with the shipment of $1 billion in arms annually; they are still sponsoring the starvation of the Ethiopian people; Russian Baptists are still in Soviet prisons for no other crime than the teaching of the Word of God to their own children; the Soviets are still cheating on every treaty they ever made with the U.S.; the Soviet Union is still a gigantic penitentiary surrounded with barbed wire. Anyone trying to escape is shot. If the Soviets have changed why don't they get their army out of Afghanistan? It is only 200 miles from Kabul to the Russian border; Gorbachev could have his armies home in a week if he so chose.

Our President insists the Soviets have changed. Gorbachev assures the Russian people they have not. In a speech in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses on November 2, Gorbachev told 6,000 Soviet Officials, "In October 1917 we parted with the Old World, rejecting it once and for all. We are moving toward a new world, the world of Communism. We will never turn off that road."

The Soviets are moving toward a world of Communism — many politicians and a broad spectrum of propagandists are eagerly acting as their accomplices.

Veteran looking for Frank Kelly

I am writing in hopes that some of your readers may help me locate a Frank Kelly.

I am John "Rocky" Wall and I was stationed at NAS Sanford in its infancy back in 1942. Maybe one of the following people will read this who remembers me and Frank.

These are all maiden names of people who knew both of us: Helen Stafford, Valerie Wells, Leona Howard, Alice Brower and Helen Tamm.

These are names of old buddies from the communications department at the base: Johnny McMahon, Sparky Fletcher, Jimmy Askew, Red Fuller, and Major Penn King, who married a local girl.

So, please, if any of you know a Frank Kelly ask him if he knows a Rocky Wall who he met at Frank's bar on Christmas Eve of 1942. Then please show him this letter. If Frank has moved and anyone knows his whereabouts, I'd appreciate a letter and his address.

Project Graduation had good support

As chairperson of Seminole High School Project Graduation 1988 — an all night alcohol-drug free graduation party — I wish to thank you, the Sanford Herald, the business community and the citizens of Sanford for the support and the news coverage afforded us.

Project Graduation was a roaring success! Each person and business who participated can certainly take pride in the fact they made an investment into our future and most precious resource — our children. For this, I will be forever grateful.

I would ask that you share this letter with your employees and the readers of the Sanford Herald in order that all who contributed to the over-all success will know that without them, Project Graduation would not have been possible.

Thanks for story on missing grandchild

My wife and I wish to commend you on having an excellent reporter, Susan Loden.

Ms. Loden did a beautiful job on the article about our grandchild, Kathleen Engels, missing for one year. The article appeared in the Sanford Herald June 5.

The article was written containing factual information and was satisfactory to us, Charles and Marie Hooper. A well-known medium is working on locating our Kathy. We will advise you if we receive any information.

We have had the Herald delivered for five years and feel the newspaper is newsworthy and informative. Thank you for your cooperation in having the story printed.

Sailing Association says Sanford's ramp fees are too high

As a citizen of Sanford, an active boater and a member of our local Lake Monroe Sailing Association, I took part in the opposition to the recent enactment of the ordinance placing an excessive user fee on the city-owned ramps.

Our position, we thought, was reasonable: charge out-of-towners a fee of $3 or less per day or a year's pass for $25. Knowing that there are no "free rides" left, the vast majority of boaters are quite willing to assist local taxpayers maintain a much-used recreational site. To charge the fees imposed by the ordinance, $5 per day or $100 per year, smacks of elitism or, at best, a desire to have our city attraction become an expensive and avoidable stopover.

The ordinance will allow me to launch free, a privilege for a resident. However, many of my boating associates from outside Sanford will take their cash and credit cards and go to areas that are more congenial. This city is surrounded by waters and communities that are more than pleased to accept their presence and trade; and, importantly, do not gouge boaters for the privilege of launching their craft. I am saddened and angry. Our city is the loser.

But one positive thing may have come from the city commission's action: The several area sailing clubs such as Lake Monroe Sailing Association are well-organized, have good treasuries, have members in Sanford and the surrounding three-county region, and universally are upset at the $100 per year ramp fee.

Out of common interest, these groups are now becoming political action committees. As such, they will become a voice with which unresponsive commissioners will have to reckon. I will be with them in their efforts.

Praise for staff at Lake Mary school

A letter to Seminole County Schools Supt. Bob Hughes:

An grandparents of a child attending Lake Mary Elementary School, we would like to reiterate what you already know, and that is Ms. Paul, principal, and her staff are doing an outstanding job.

Toward the end of the school year we had an opportunity to visit with Mrs. Butler's first grade class. Words can't begin to describe the professionalism and learning environment we experienced first hand.

From the time we arrive on campus and were cordially greeted by the secretarial staff until we departed, one acquired the knowledge that all workers in this school are dedicated and work as a team to make Lake Mary Elementary an outstanding school.

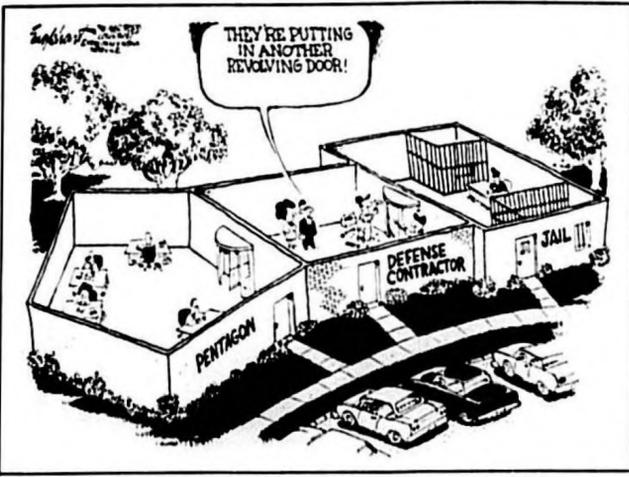

The media center has been very instrumental in developing a love for books and reading during the two years our grandchild has been in attendance.

We, the residents of Seminole County, can take great pride in our county school system.

We congratulate Ms. Paul, Ms. Butler and the entire staff for the dedication and work which goes into making Lake Mary Elementary a great school.

Mammograms painless

Women who have been postponing mammograms because they are afraid it will hurt should not be concerned, researchers say. The procedure rarely causes discomfort.

Doctors surveyed 1,847 women, aged 25 to 86, who underwent mammography at seven centers to determine how much discomfort or pain they experienced while undergoing the exams to screen for breast cancer.

Eighty-eight percent of the women experienced no discomfort or only mild discomfort. Only 9 percent of the women experienced moderate discomfort, 1 percent experienced severe discomfort, and 1 percent experienced moderate pain.

"The point is that no woman had pain so severe that it would make her reconsider having a mammogram again," said Dr. Paul C. Stomper of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston, who helped conduct the study.

"By releasing the results of this study we hope to alleviate anxiety related to the procedure," said Stomper.

The primary cause of any physical discomfort was the necessity to compress the breast between two layers of plastic so it could be X-rayed, Stomper said, adding the maneuver is necessary for the test.

The survey was published recently in the Archives of Internal Medicine.

Drug seems effective for lupus treatment

A drug that suppresses the immune system appears effective for treating severe forms of lupus, a disease in which patients' own immune systems attack their organs.

In a study published recently in The New England Journal of Medicine, researchers at the University of Michigan reported the drug cyclophosphamide appeared effective for treating severe systemic lupus erythematosus.

The findings indicate the drug may offer an alternative for patients who fail to respond or cannot tolerate the drug prednisone, a steroid, that is usually used to treat the disease, said Dr. W. Joseph McCune, an assistant professor of medicine who headed the study.

Jogging trails planned for health, fun

By J. Mark Barfield
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Hoping to beef up the health of Seminole County residents, county parks and recreation officials are planning to construct four jogging trails at four county parks.

Each of the four paths will feature a series of exercises and fitness challenges at intervals on the approximately mile-long courses. The challenge stations will also include information on heart rates different age groups at varying levels of fitness can expect after completing the exercise.

The jogging trails will be constructed at Sylvan Lake Park, Sanlando Park, Red Bug Lake Park and Lake Mills Park.

Construction is expected to begin this July and be completed later this fall.

Bob Chorvat, county parks and recreation manager, said the four 8-foot wide trails will be constructed through the natural beauty of each park, with special care to preserve as many trees and natural vegetation as possible to give joggers and walkers pleasant surroundings. Chorvat said the paths will avoid sensitive wetland areas in the parks.

The paths will be constructed of finely-crushed stone which will allow rainwater to soak through — preventing puddles — while giving joggers a firm, level surface for foot support, Chorvat said.

Each of the jogging trails will be about a mile in length, with short-cut courses constructed for those who don't want to tackle the mile barrier. Each park is expected to cost between $60,000 and $70,000, Chorvat said.

If the jogging trail at Altamonte Springs' two-year-old Merrill Park is any indication, the county's new paths will be a big success.

Marc Hultin, Merrill Park center supervisor, said every afternoon several dozen people jog into the park on Jamestown Boulevard and onto the 3,500-foot-long trail. Hultin said the trail has been in more use in the last six months as the word has gotten out to fitness buffs.

He said the trail features 11 exercise stations, beginning with warm-up, stretch exercises and progressing to more difficult exercises.

Bobby Cotton, 14, jogs along a trail similar to the ones planned for the county parks.

Four Seminole County Parks are slated to receive jogging nature trails. They are:

- Sylvan Lake Park—3 1/2 miles west of Interstate 4 on State Road 46, then one mile south on Lake Martham Road.
- Sanlando Park—One mile north of of SR 46 on Douglas Road.
- Red Bug Lake Road—on Red Bug Lake Road two miles east of State Road 436.
- Lake Mills Park—Third Avenue, one mile east of State Road 419.

Is your doctor competent?

By B.D. Colen

What is the difference between a competent physician and an excellent one? Or the difference between a poor physician and one who might be considered competent?

Perhaps you think that answering the latter question would be far easier than answering the former. After all, a competent physician at least knows the basics and provides adequate care. The poor physician lacks the basic knowledge you would expect him or her to possess and doesn't treat you as you expect to be treated. But is that really so?

There have been repeated cases of laypeople being arrested for practicing medicine without a license, cases that generally occur in poor urban areas and in which, invariably, the patients describe the doctors as wonderful, caring, competent physicians. Well, they may have been wonderful and caring, but they certainly weren't competent. But how is a patient to know that?

I'll never forget the day, early in my career as a medical writer, when a physician-friend gave me a list of reference books. I told him that he was recommending one that I had never heard of and had never seen on any of my colleagues' desks. My friend smiled. "You know how once in a while the doctor examines you and then disappears into the back room? Well, he's looking something up in that book."

There's certainly nothing wrong with a physician who knows the limitations of his or her own knowledge and knows where to turn for answers. The problem is patients have no real way of knowing when a doctor is refreshing his or her memory, or when the physician is practicing Cliff Notes medicine.

And when it comes to telling the difference between the competent physician and the outstanding one, we're on even shakier ground. The traits many health-care consumers attribute to outstanding physicians have far more to do with personality than medical competence. Personality is an important factor in deciding whether or not we like a particular physician and how effective that physician is in dealing with us. But many a supremely competent physician is a rotten human being, and many a quack is a duck in Marcus Welby's clothing.

Given this problem, the folks in the Reagan administration, who were going to get government off our backs, are working up a plan to rate physicians. Sometime in the next few years, they hope to make public a listing of patient-mortality rates of physicians who take Medicare patients.

If there were a reasonable way to make this scheme work, it might be a great idea. The problem is, it won't.

The feds now release mortality data for hospitals, adjusting the statistics for patient mix. In theory, before having your bypass surgery, you can check the list and get a good idea if you'll walk out of the hospital.

The trouble is, physicians and hospital administrators know how to beat the statisticians.

Recently, I talked to a physician about the marked decline in bypass mortality at his institution. I assumed it had to do with the hiring of a hot new chief of cardiothoracic surgery. Not entirely, he explained; it also had to do with getting rid of a surgeon who had a penchant for taking on the patients no one else would even try to save.

What happened to that surgeon? He became chief of surgery at another hospital. And now that he's responsible for maintaining the mortality statistics, he's far less eager to take on the tough cases.

So will an examination of physician mortality statistics help you tell the good physicians from the bad? Probably not. So instead of counting dead patients, federal and local governmental officials could do us all a real favor by lifting the licenses of the estimated 10 percent of physicians who are incompetent, and leaving us to sort out the rest.

Beware sunglasses wearers: the wrong pair can hurt

By Peg Byron
NEW YORK (UPI) — Those cute sunglasses with plastic penguin frames you bought as a souvenir for a child — like many fancy designer shades that don't protect against the damaging rays of the sun — could be worthless or even dangerous.

The wrong sunglasses may do more harm than good, and a surprising number, even some pairs costing hundreds of dollars, don't measure up to sun protection standards that many scientists say are needed.

Eyes need protection in bright sun from ultraviolet and blue rays of light, say many experts who believe such rays can damage the cornea and even the irreplaceable retina.

"I never go outside without eye protection," said eye specialist Dr. Jeffrey Taveras of New York Hospital in a recent magazine article that printed one of the first consumer guides on sunglasses protection.

"This may sound dramatic, but it's like radioactivity — there is no safe dose and it has a cumulative effect," he said.

Not all eye specialists are so concerned, but most recommend getting some eye protection if you are frequently in bright light.

Invisible ultraviolet rays may eventually cause the lens or its surrounding transparent membrane to cloud and obstruct the passage of light, a condition known as a cataract.

Blue light, which is near the ultraviolet end of the light spectrum, is also suspected of being harmful, especially for older people who have had part of the eye's natural filter removed with cataract operations.

"It's easy to protect against these rays if your sunglasses have the right kind of lens," said Dr. Felix Barker, an associate professor at the Pennsylvania College of Optometry in Philadelphia.

But it is not so easy for the consumer to determine what sunglasses are best. And the wrong kind of sunglasses, although they reduce glare and filter some light, may act like a welcome mat for damaging rays, which can pour in as the pupil dilates behind dark lenses, Barker warned.

"The amount of light exposure increases as a function of the diameter of the pupil, so as the pupil dilates, you get progressively more and more light into the eye. So, if you are dilating the eye in bright sun light, you could theoretically let more light in," he said.

Bright sunlight, intensified by white surroundings, like a beach or snowy mountainside, is most dangerous because it includes the most ultraviolet and blue rays.

As a rule of thumb, the shorter the wave length, the more damage to the cornea in front of the pupil, he explained.

"The big thing we have known about for a long time is damage to the surface of the eye from ultraviolet B."

The shortest light wavelength, UVB, can cause sloughing off of cells of the cornea, an acutely painful though repairable condition often suffered by skiers and welders, he said.

Over longer periods of intense light exposure, the thin mucous layer over the white of the eye, called the conjunctiva, can be damaged, resulting in tumors or thickening of the tissue later in life.

"It's really more a problem cosmetically, permanent reddening of the eyes, which you may not care for," Baxter said, comparing the effect to the unattractive results of chronic tanning.

"You have heard about leathering skin from too much sun? Well, you can get leathery eyes too," he said.

The Food and Drug Administration said eventually it may require manufacturers to label sunglasses according to what protection they offer, but an FDA source, speaking on the condition he not be named, said there is intense industry opposition.

Form of vitamin A prevents skin cancer

By Rob Stein
UPI Science Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — Accutane, the controversial anti-cancer drug based on a chemical related to vitamin A, could offer an effective way to prevent skin cancer, government researchers have reported.

Pills containing high doses of the vitamin A cousin known generically as isotretinoin reduced by 63 percent the incidence of skin cancer among patients with a rare genetic disease that makes victims prone to skin cancer, the researchers said.

But because the drug produced a variety of side effects, including very dry skin, abnormal liver function and calcium accumulations, it would not be practical for long-term use by the general population, the researchers said.

The researchers are now studying lower doses and variations of the drug in the hopes they may produce fewer side effects while still offering protection against skin cancer.

"(Skin cancer) is a significant health problem in that it's the most common type of cancer among Caucasians," said Dr. Kenneth H. Kraemer, a research dermatologist at the National Cancer Institute who headed the study.

"(The study) seems to be a good demonstration that the drug is effective in preventing the formation of new cancers," said Kraemer in a telephone interview.

Dr. Howard Koch, an assistant professor of public health, dermatology and medicine at the Boston University School of Medicine, said the drug is the first to have been shown to prevent skin cancer in humans.

"It's an important first step," said Koch. "Skin cancer is the No. 1 cancer in the country. If you could prevent it, you've done something good. So I think it's an important study."

About 500,000 people in the United States are treated each year for basal-cell or squamous-cell carcinoma of the skin. In most cases these forms of skin cancer can be treated by surgically removing the cancerous growths. A more severe form of skin cancer — melanoma — can be fatal.

Previous studies suggested forms of vitamin A might be effective for preventing or treating a variety of types of cancer, including skin cancer. But no long-term studies had been conducted.

In the new study, published in The New England Journal of Medicine, Kraemer and his colleagues gave five xeroderma pigmentosum patients daily doses of the drug for two years and compared their skin cancer rates before, during and after treatment. The condition meant the patients were at high risk for skin cancer.

The subjects had a total of 121 cancerous growths in the two years before treatment, but only 25 while on the drug. In the year after the drug was discontinued, the frequency of skin cancer increased more than eight times.

Isotretinoin is sold by prescription for severe acne. It was the center of controversy earlier this year when it was linked to birth defects among women who took it while pregnant, against warnings issued by the manufacturer and the government.

In the new study, the researchers selected patients who agreed to take precautions against becoming pregnant while taking the drug, Kraemer said.

Although researchers are uncertain how the drug prevents skin cancer, it apparently acts "as a switch" during the late stages of cancer development to prevent potentially cancerous cells from reproducing, Kraemer said.

Vitamin A can be found in many foods, such as liver. But Kraemer stressed people should not consume large doses of the vitamin in the hopes of reducing their risk for skin cancer because pure vitamin A can be toxic in large doses.

THE AMERICAN DIET

The consumption of eggs by Americans decreased dramatically between 1965 and 1985. In an even bigger shift, the yearly consumption of cheese more than doubled in the same period.

Drought-plagued farmer: What a difference a year makes WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — A year ago at this time, farmer Kirby Tolliver's corn was head-high and soaring. Today, it's knee-high and drooping.

The worst drought in 54 years has turned Tolliver's usually lush farmland into fields of dust. Crop failure is a distinct possibility. Financial disaster could follow.

"But I'm not contemplating anything drastic," assures Tolliver. "My wife hid my shotgun."

The Tolliver family was profiled by United Press International two years ago and perfect weather at that time helped them stave off money problems and continue farming. In the midst of the current drought — the worst since 1934 — UPI returned to the Tolliver farm to see how the family is holding up.

Things are so bad in this southwestern Ohio farming community that people are asking the Lord for rain.

"Everybody is including rain in their prayers every day," says Jack Tolliver, 60, Kirby's father and a 42-year farm veteran. "At the little church I go to, we pray for a change in the weather."

"Farmers are eternal optimists," notes Kirby, 35. "We believe it will rain."

"We just hope," adds Kirby's farming brother, Kelly, 31, "that it's not too late."

"Too late" would mean crop failure. For the Tollivers that would mean a year's work to produce 1,500 acres of corn and 300 acres of soybeans would be wasted. It also would mean increased debt at the bank.

"In the last couple of years, we were just getting to the point where we could see daylight at the end of the tunnel," says Kirby. "But crop failure would drop us back in a dark hole again."

"I never thought I'd ever see the chance of total failure. There's never been one around here. There's always been salvation. Droughts always happened somewhere else — in Iowa or South Carolina."

"But we've got a very real possibility of crop failure," adds Kelly, "about as real as it's ever been."

What happens if the crops fail?

"We couldn't buy anything," answers Jack. "Just the bare necessities."

"I worry about paying bills," says Kelly. "You can't meet your obligations if you don't have anything coming in."

"The drought has already managed to scare our banker to death," Jack says.

"The amount of debt that would have to be carried over to next year would be like buying a small farm that we'd never see," figures Kirby. "But the banks can't let all farmers go under because if they have that many farm sales, who's going to buy all that stuff?"

"I'm sure the government is going to step in with some low-interest loans, but that's the last thing you really want, to borrow money on top of borrowed money."

But if the government doesn't help, Jack says, "there are some farmers around here who probably will be out of business."

The Tollivers have always heard complaints that the government already helps farmers too much.

"Those people complaining about government help might stop when their food prices double," says Kelly.

And that is exactly what's going to happen because of this drought," predicts Wayne Gregory, 71, a 50-year farm veteran who owns most of the land the Tollivers farm.

"Everybody's going to feel the effects of this drought," adds Kirby's wife, Roberta.

"If we don't get any rain," says Kirby, "the only thing left for us to do is get our machinery all cleaned up and waxed so it looks real nice."

"For sale," says Roberta, hoping her comment is a joke.

"If it doesn't rain, I'll take my banker golling," adds Kirby, "and let him beat me."

How much rain will it take to save the corn and beans?

"If we can get something in the next 10 days, it will hold us a little bit," Kirby says. "But if it doesn't rain, we'll just sit here and watch the crops wilt."

"But what we really need is two solid weeks of steady rain," says Gregory.

"We need some today, a little more tomorrow and then some more the days after that," is the way Jack puts it.

The drought had its start late last summer. "We didn't get much rain then or much snow over the winter, so there was no sub-soil moisture this spring," says Kirby.

BOOK REVIEWS

Salinger biography keeps courts busy

NEW YORK (UPI) — If Ian Hamilton had known what he was in for, he would never have attempted to write a biography of J.D. Salinger, America's most elusive novelist.

Salinger's legal battle to quash Hamilton's original book was fought all the way to the Supreme Court. The court refused last October to review a lower court ruling that direct quotes from and extensive paraphrasing of Salinger's unpublished letters in public collections went beyond the limits of "fair use" and could not be used.

In 1987 the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals barred Random House from publishing Hamilton's first rewrite of his book, "J.D. Salinger: A Writing Life."

The ruling forced Hamilton to write what is substantially a new book, "In Search of J.D. Salinger: A Biography," (Random House, 222 pp., $17.95), published this month, two years after the scheduled publication date.

"If I had it to do over again, I think I probably wouldn't," said Hamilton, a graying, rumpled man, who pulled mechanically on his cigarette.

With a wry smile he called his ordeal "an illuminating experience."

"Not illuminating enough," Hamilton quickly added. "Not enough to make me want to do it again."

"I thought of this as a two-year project and instead it has stretched to five years. I have lost some 18 months in rewriting that I might have spent doing something else. So I won't profit as much as I might have, unless the book sells extremely well, and it might not if Salinger fans boycott it."

Hamilton, a British author, editor and poet, got a $100,000 advance for the book and reportedly spent $50,000 researching it. It is scheduled for publication in Britain in September and will be translated into German, Japanese, Spanish, Swedish and French.

Salinger, whose 1951 "Catcher in the Rye" set a style for youth in the 1950s, has not published anything since 1965, some 12 years after he went into virtual seclusion at his home near Cornish, N.H.

The idea of anyone writing his biography was an anathema to him, as Hamilton found out when he informed Salinger of his intentions.

Salinger fired back a warning against any trespass on his privacy and immediately copyrighted his correspondence in libraries at Princeton and the University of Texas, Austin, that Hamilton had mined for his book.

"This should have taught me to think twice before undertaking what seemed to me to be an amusing project, but it didn't," Hamilton said. "I know now that Salinger was much more in earnest about the whole business than I thought he was."

"You see, when the whole thing began, it was more than a mere literary whimsy, more than mere scholarship that led me on. The sharpest spur was an infatuation that bowled me over at the age of 17 (when he read "Catcher") and which I never properly outgrew. "Well, I've outgrown it now."

Hamilton, noted for his acclaimed biography of American poet Robert Lowell, said he also has outgrown some simplistic ideas he had about writing a biography.

"This experience with Salinger has made me skeptical. Biography appears to be a place where the wires of true writing can get crossed with sensationalism, which makes a book more commercial today. I think I've avoided the taint of commercialism because I set up rules to keep my decency intact."

"I won't deny that I felt some discomfiture and a slight queasiness over whether my impulse to write the book was really justified. I had insufficiently worked out the consequences when I began the project. If I had done that, the book might not have been written." What Hamilton eventually had to do was take his original biography, "connecting the work to what could be discovered of the life," and write a new version, which he describes as "more of a literary detective story with the biographer as a leading character."

"I invented an alter ego for the biographer, a constant companion who isn't as interested in the moral issues of writing about a man who doesn't want to be written about and just wants to get on with the job. It was a way of dramatizing the general division in myself."

"I had mixed feelings throughout the lawsuit. I was impatient with Salinger as a public figure, yet I had a sincere feeling that I was invading his privacy. The two views were irreconcilable. Perhaps this is true in all biography."

three boat launch ramps, docks, fishing piers, restrooms, 44 campsites and an office.

Two years later Seminole county pulled out of the arrangement. Crite said it has been managed and maintained by Volusia County ever since. He estimated that 25,000 people a year use the park's camp grounds, picnic areas and boat launch facilities.

When the park first opened, Florida Power and Light leased the property to Volusia County for $1 a year according to Crite. However, in September of 1983 Florida Power and Light sought "fair market value" for the land and increased the lease to $13,000 a year. Recently, the utility decided to sell the property. The park closed the first of April when the county's lease with Florida Power and Light expired.

Charles Carrington, manager of Florida Power and Light's real estate department, said the company determined the property was "surplus" to our needs," Carrington said Florida Power and Light received six or seven inquiries about the property. Volusia County however, was one of the first to express an interest and eventually, a deal was struck.

Clay Henderson, a member of the Volusia County Council, said the property will be bought through a unique program designed to save endangered land and parks. The program, started in January 1987, sets aside $20 million for the purchase of select parcels. Volusia County residents voted in favor of the program in November of 1986. Since January of 1987, the county has purchased more than 10,000 acres through the project.

"This is more than we usually pay for property, but it's a reflection of the fact that there won't be any more dredged harbors on the middle St. Johns," Henderson said. "It's an important parcel for access to the St. Johns River."

Henderson said the property was evaluated by three different appraisers and added all the appraisal were very close to the $1.1 million mark.

Crite said the park's trees may be increased. He said the park will be kept as an enterprise fund, which means the facility will have to pay for itself through user fees. The park's ramps have accommodated boats up to 30 feet, Crite said, with a one dollar launch fee. Campers could spend the week for $30. He said he did not expect the launch fee to change.

Crite said a budget for the park must be worked out before the new fees can be set. "We're not trying to make any money on it. We're trying to have it pay for itself," he said.

Crite said the park could be reopening in mid July if the county council and the Florida Power and Light's board of directors approve the purchase. The Volusia County Council will vote on the proposal July 7. The Florida Power and Light board of directors will vote on July 11.

Crite said the park is in good condition but will be inspected to insure safety. He added a crew will be sent out to mow the grass and "spill it up a little."

Previously, the park was open from dawn until 5:30 p.m. Crite said he was unsure if the hours would be extended when it reopens.

get much mail and besides, it will give them something to do.

What is really upsetting is that the Chicago writer has resorted to name calling, terming all Floridians as "Jousy ingrates," and suggesting that Governor Bob Martinez be sentenced to a diet of lava beans for his support of the White Sox move to St. Petersburg.

Members of the Florida media would never resort to something as unprofessional as name calling. We would certainly never try to sway people's thinking by saying unflattering things about the Chicago area.

Oh, we could believe it or not,

we have the technology.

For example, if we wanted to be as hostile as the next guy, we could say that Chicago is the murder capital of the midwest. We could say that it shows eight months a year in Chicago and when the sun does finally come out, you can't see it for the pollution. We could say the only good thing to ever come out of Chicago is an interstate highway. We could say there are still enough cattle slaughterhouses around to give the city that certain odor that has become an unofficial trademark. You mention Chicago, and what's the first thing that comes to mind? Right — dead cows.

We could say those things, but we won't.

What it all boils down to is this: The White Sox aren't coming to Florida, at least not anytime in the near future, and most residents of the state don't really care if they do or not. After all, that's an American League team, and everybody knows the American League ruined the game by adopting the designated hitter rule. With the DH in the lineup, you don't have to be a baseball wizard to manage an American League team. I think the only requirement is that you have a face.

Despite the hubbub and uproar, this time next year and the year after that, the White Sox will still be playing in Comiskey Park and still winning 65 games a year.

And Floridians certainly would never support a team that only wins 65 games a year.

general secretary with enough power.

Thus it had been widely assumed Gorbachev would use the conference to make major changes that otherwise would have had to wait for the regular party congress. His losses over delegates indicate he may be wiser to gather more strength first.

The result is that Soviet officials now say there will be no personnel changes.

Even though 20 percent of the approximately 300 members of the Central Committee no longer hold the jobs that entitle them to membership — and the list gets longer with each firing of a leader in a republic or region — they say there will be no replacements until the 28th party congress in 1991.

At the highest level, the Politburo, the only change speculated on by reformist historian Roy Medvedev is the promotion of Georgi Razumovsky from candidate to full membership. That merely reflects the power he already wields in supervising party cadres.

Gorbachev has other current problems, trouble that provides ammunition for officials who feel threatened by the relentless expansion of his reform program.

The economy, which even conservatives concede was stagnant, is proving difficult to change.

As predicted, officials in Moscow have managed to circumvent reforms intended to decentralize economic control. The result has been a half-reform and a growth rate that will fall short of that demanded by the five-year plan, the bible of Soviet administrators.

Gorbachev's effort to find help in the capitalist world also has hit a rough road. Low oil prices have cut into his ability to buy Western technology to modernize the economy. The search for foreign companies to launch joint ventures inside the Soviet Union so far has been more sound than substance.

Despite proclaiming popular support for the reforms, Gorbachev's backers concede that life for most citizens has not improved since he took office in March 1985.

Writer Daniel Gramin, a reformist delegate, talked recently about "hard times, when the whole country is standing in queues and constantly discovering that there is not enough of one thing and a deficit of something else."

Even Soviet officials now admit the anti-alcohol campaign launched shortly after Gorbachev took office was a blunder. It not only spawned infamous three-hour lines outside vodka shops, it led to sugar rationing as moonshine production soared.

The policy of glasnost, hitting the censors' heavy hand from the state media, has been the most obvious change and the one most visible to the West. But, while winning Gorbachev solid support among intellectuals, it has created by-products that can only alarm party officials.

Corruption, disasters, declining living standards — the revelations pour forth in the Soviet press and on television.

Armenia and Azerbaijan engage in an unprecedented public struggle for control of the region of Nagorno Karabakh, a tug-of-war that could trigger similar territorial disputes across the old Russian empire. Nationalist feelings, long denied by party officials, also are expressed openly in the Baltic republics.

Foreign policy failures, one of the last untouchable arenas, became a target in the days leading up to the conference.

With the exception of a brief period in the 1920s, Soviet analysts are finding little to praise in the 71 years of party rule.

But Gorbachev shows no signs of backing off. If the party conference turns out to show his limits, it will also underline how far he has moved to open up his society.

"I don't think these basic questions have been posed in the society since the 1920s," said a senior Western diplomat who has spent most of his career studying the Soviet Union.

Although early reports that Gorbachev would seek mandatory retirement of party officials at 70 did not materialize, the published draft of the "theses" to be presented at the conference did propose the first limits on tenure of office.

Under the proposal, party and government officials would be limited to two five-year terms, followed by a third if 75 percent of the body affected approves.

Even more fundamental, the draft theses call for limiting the party's interference in the daily affairs of the local Soviets who run cities and villages across the country.

They also seek personal legal protection against such traditional abuses as tapping phones and opening mail. Even the admission of such things happening would have been unimaginable four years ago.

The conference undoubtedly will approve, with the usual unanimous show of hands, the theses as they are presented. Officials say these will be only recommendations, to be acted on by the relevant bodies.

Those directly affecting the party will have to wait until the 1991 congress, unless Gorbachev feels strong enough to call an extraordinary congress earlier.

Gorbachev is a man in a hurry, but he is also a politician who has so far avoided a fatal confrontation.
