Oiled birds treated at sanctuary

MAYPORT - A diesel-fuel spill from an unknown source left about 50 birds with an oily coat, says Cindy Mosling, the director of a bird sanctuary and rescue center.

Lt. Bob Donnelly of the Florida Marine Patrol said a rainbow-colored sheen was visible in the water on the south bank of the St. Johns River near the ferry landing and boat docks.

Ms. Mosling, director of BEAKS, the Bird Emergency Aid and Kare Sanctuary, said she found 50 birds, mostly pelicans, coated in the Birds covered with fuel or oil lose their ability to repel water and keep their body temperatures at normal levels.

"It makes them lethargic, and takes away their ability to hunt. These pelicans are drenching wet," she said.

Board ready to oppose distribution to students

SANFORD - While Gov. Lawton Chiles officially heard the recommendations of his Red Ribbon Panel on AIDS this afternoon, the Seminole County school board is already prepared to oppose at least one of those recommen-

On Tuesday, board member Barbara Kuhn will present her colleagues with a resolution that opposes the distribution of condoms by Seminole County public schools. The resolution rebuts a recommendation Chiles' panel is making: to distribute condoms in schools.

Kuhn said she wanted to take a "pro-active stance" on the recommendations.

Board members discussed various aspects of the resolution at last week's legislative workshop, but will not take a formal stance until they approve or reject Kuhn's resolution next week. "I think they were pretty united on this issue," Supt. Paul Hagerty said. "I believe that the (Red Ribbon) panel's recommendation oppose what we are teaching in our schools."

The resolution states that the board believes that "programs recommending the postponement of sexual activity while simultaneously distributing birth control devices send contrary, diametrically-opposed messages to youth."

P&Z eyes transient rental housing codes

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Rental housing and conditional use requests will highlight tonight's meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The matter of clearly defining transient occupancy housing in Sanford has been the subject of a number of workshop meetings by P&Z as well as the city.

The latest plans for codes to govern rental housing requirements will be discussed during a workshop meeting of the P&Z prior to the regular meeting.

Early last month, P&Z asked for a draft on rental housing requirements. The materials are to be presented for consideration tonight. The document outlines translent occupancy, weekly rentals, twofamily dwellings, licensing, and the various licenses and inspections required.

In the draft document, City Planner Jay Marder described the draft as being, "...designed to provide a city-wide approach to property management and maintenance of rental housing."

He continued, "While recognizing that several of problematic uses presently occur in the residential historic district, this approach does not specifically single out the manner in which tenants pay rent."

One item stressed in the new regulations will require an on-site resident manager to insure adequate maintenance. For Bed and Breakfast establishments, the resident manager is also required to be the owner.

The new rental housing requirements will be discussed at the workshop meeting of the P&Z, scheduled for 6 p.m., in the city commission room of the Sanford City Hall.

During tonight's regular P&Z meeting, items to be considered include a conditional request to at 655 Fulton St.; a conditional request for 202 First St. for alcoholte beverage sales; and a conditional use request fo establish an accessory residential structure at 1017 Persimmon Ave.

Also, on the agenda is a conditional use request for alcoholic beverage sales at 1301 Celery Ave.; and final engineering/improvement plans and final plat for Indian Trace. Phase I, located at 2215 Oregon Ave.

Both meetings will be open to the public. The regular meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. this Man killed chasing thieves

POMPANO BEACH — A man who raced after car thieves while his wife called 911 was killed when the squad car she summoned smashed into his vehicle.

Robert Barry, 23, was ejected from the car and hit a light post Wednesday, according to Broward Sheriff's Office spokesman George Croitus.

"Possibly, if he had left the entire matter to the deputies, he might still be with us today," Crolius said. "But apparently he felt so strongly about private property being stolen, that he decided to take a personal hand in it, and this was the unfortunate result."

Barry heard someone breaking into a car outside his home and told his wife to call police. He ran out the door to see the thieves race away in a stolen car.

Only blocks from his home, he ran a stop sign and was broadsided by a deputy's squad car also racing to the scene. Barry was pronounced dead later at a local hospital. The deputy was not seriously injured, said Crolius.

Parolee rapes 85-year-old woman

The woman's acreams alerted neighbors who helped reacue her, but the fire seriously damaged her home.

Circuit Judge Michael Jones set sentencing for Feb. 9 after accepting the pleas Tuesday from Thomas Martin Farker, 24, of Penascola. Assistant State Attorney Ed Zeitlin said he will ask that Parker be sentenced to five consecutive life terms as a habitual offender.

In May 1991, Jones had sentenced Parker to three years for breaking into a truck and stealing some tools followed by a year of house arrest and five years of probation for breaking into a 77-year-old woman's home and robbing a gun, jewelry and money from her in November 1990.

Roads and airport progress on Lake Mary agenda situation is to be given by C.W. Temby, director of public works and city engineer for Lake Mary.

In response to an earlier request from the commission. Timby will address the unpaved street situation within the city limits. The city presently has 41 miles of both improved and unimproved streets within the corporate limits. Of this total, approximately 13 miles are unimproved.

Temby's report indicates two types of unimproved road covering; sand and shell, each having been used for a specific purpose during past covering projects.

He is also presenting a listing of 10 streets involved in citisen complaints about poor surfaces, water runoff problems, storm discharge, and drainage problems.

Last year, the City Commission began a study of various unpaved streets where a plan was presented to undertake a paving and drainage project for areas with residents who wanted their streets improved.

Although Timby has not proposed any action by the commission regarding the unpaved streets at this time, the matter is expected to come up for additional discussion at tonight's meeting as well as in

Regarding the airport presentation, it is also the result of citizen input. A resident of Timecuan appeared before the commission several months ago voicing his complaint about noise being generated in his neighborhood by large planes making their approach to the 8,000 foot landing strip at the airport.

At that time, the commission suggested Cooke be contacted to make a presentation regarding proposed plans for expansion and what might be done to help alleviate noise

Cooke said he plans to center tonight's report on the progress made at the airport report on the progress made at the airport during the past year, as well as plans for future growth and improvements. "I am also bringing a consultant with me from the Federal Aviation Regulation board," he said. "The FAR is undertaking what is called a Part-150 study to determine airport noise, and what might be done to reduce noise problems to a minimum in the future."

Both items are listed near the beginning of the lengthy agenda for tonight's meeting of the city commission. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m., in the commission chambers at Lake Mary City Hall, 100 W. Country Club

Man charged with killing girl

By Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — A Superior Court judge has defended his decision to allow a convicted child molester to be freed from prison, despite learning that the man has been charged with killing a child in Florida.

Bruce Owen Barbre, 37, was charged Monday with murder in the death of a 13-year-old Sarasota.

In May 1988, Barbre pleaded guilty to a child molestation charge in Columbia County and was sentenced to serve 10 years in prison.

Two months later, Judge Franklin Pierce modified the sentence, allowing Barbre to be placed on probation and forcing him to live with his parents in

But on Monday, Barbre was

State halts prisoner roundup

The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE - A court ruling will determine whether the state resumes a roundup of dozens of inmates released before their sentences were up. Florida Department of Law Enforcement officials said.

Six of 100 former inmates were returned to confinement after the state revoked rec its they received in an early release program, and they will remain in custody, FDLE spokesman John Joyce said Wednesday.

'We'll just remain status quo until we get some kind of judicial ruling," he said.

The FDLE and the Department of Corrections put the effort on hold in light of a suit filed Friday by Gainesville attorney Richard Belz on behalf of inmate Jeffrey

"Our department ... and the Department of Corrections has decided it would be best to wait until the Florida Supreme Court rules," Joyce said.

The suit challenged opinions last month by Attorney General Bob Butterworth that said the Department of Corrections granted early release to about 100 inmates who weren't entitled to it.

In addition to starting the roundup of those already re-leased, Corrections officials put the early release of about 1,500 more inmates on hold, including Ipnar, 28, convicted of attempted murder.

The inmates, convicted of second- or third-degree murder or of committing sex crimes, were released after a law took effect July 1 revising the "proisional release credit'' s item.

The release credits, which are no longer being used, were designed to reduce prison crowding by shortening inmates!

One influential lawmaker objected to halting the roundup. Billiant if one of these possis who was improperly released goes out and rapes someone? Who is the victim-going to look to?" asked state Senate Correctors tions Chairman Gary Siegel.

R-Altamonte Springs. Deputy Attorney General Pete Antonacci said agencies are "under no obligation to agree with our opinions. They are professionals, and they know their departments.'

Butterworth's ruling followed public criticism in December of the near-release of Seminole County child-killer Donald McDougall, who would have served 10 years of a 34-year sentence. Butterworth's decision added at least five years to McDougall's term.

A kudo is owed Seminole County commissioner Larry Furions for his proposal to create a "Neighborhood Fund" to allow county residents to help one another.

The plan, patterned after a similar Florida Power Corp. program, allows county utility customers to send extra money with their monthly bill payment which will be placed in a special fund for needy utility customers. If a county social worker finds a customer cannot pay a water or sewer bill because of a financial crisis, money from the fund will be used to pay the customer's utility bill for a month or two. Once the person can resume payments, the support ends, A financial review will assure the fund won't bolster deallesses, but help only the truely needy.

The proposal amacks of sensibility. Although the county may chip in a couple of thousand dollars to "seed" the fund, the bulk of the money will — and should — come from citisens.

We support the concept of Neighborhood Fund and urge residents to support it when commissioners ask for your opinion.

Hero of the conservative movement

The end of 12 years of Republican and (broadly) conservative control of the White House presents an exceptionally fine opportunity to salute the achievement of F. Clifton White, who died Jan. 9 at the age of 74. For without his noteworthy but widely unremarked efforts those 18 years might have told a very different tale.

Students of the history of the modern conservative movement are well aware of its origins in the early 1960s, when William F. Buckley Jr. hammered the alliance together out of its libertarian, traditionalist and anti-Communist components. And everybody reof its libertarian, traditionalist and antiCommunist components. And everybody recognizes the key contribution of Barry Goldwater, who spoke up for the movement when most politicians scorned it, and won the 1964 nomination under its banner, even though he went down to defeat that November. Out of those ashes rose conservation's new national leader, Ronald Reagan, who led it to victory in 1980, and again in 1964.

But sharp-eyed observers will note a lacuna in this account, buckley and the other intellectuals who founded the conservative investment in the 1950s weren't politicians; they simply lacked the expertise. And while Barry Goldwater most certainly was a politician, he didn't set out to win the 1964 Republican nomination. On the contrary, he resisted the very idea until mid-1963.

How did the American conservative movement transform itself, between 1961 and 1964, from a handful of theories into a bare-knuckied drive for power, capable of capturing a major party and permanently changing the face of American political. The ican politics? The man who engineered the political organi-sation of American conservatism was Republican Neison Rockefeller in 1964. But White, whose quiet religious faith and upstate New York background would have inclined him toward conservation anyway, had noted the budding conservative movement and correctly judged its potential.

Working out of a tiny office in Manhattan, through friends around the country who had acknowledged him as their leader in the national Young Republican organization in the 1950s, the tall, gangly figure in the jaunty bow-tie crise-crossed America from October 1961 to April 1963, quietly putting together what he then unveiled as the National Draft Goldwater Committee, Goldwater had never authorized such a thing, and at first only grumpily allowed it to use his name, But in July 1964, in San Francisco, it presented him with the Republican presidential presented him with the Republican presidential nomination on the first ballot, with 863 votes out of 1,306. White's final prediction was off by just

Clinton should stomp the deficit

A battle royal is being waged for that corner of Bill Clinton's soul that has to do with debt and deficits. The hawks see such things as parrotes that are choking the life out of this country: the doven see debt and deficits as speed bumps on the road of progress, minor impediments to be accorded over.

I'm with the hawks. And this is fair warning to all the Clinton fans out there: If he flies with the deficit doves, he faces four years of heliacious torment f r o m t h i s

Curmudgeon.
It sounds bizarre, but deficit hawks are really fanatic middle-of-thereaders. They buy notion that steady! result of sound budgets and that debt is a devil's enticement that will lead to eternal damnation.

Ideologues of both the right and left, on the other hand. subscribe to the theory that balanced budgets are not the budgets are not the result of discipline so much as a byproduct much as a byproduct of economic growth. The difference is that the supply stiers of the right fervently believe that the private sector, if freed of regulation and burdensome taxes, will prime the economic pumps. The "public investment" gurus of the left, in contrast, believe the government ought to stimulate the economy by spending — mainly on the infrastructure and mainly with borrowed money.

The supply-siders blew their case in a spectacular way when they elected Ronald Reagan and he piled up deficits that were thought to be massive until George Bush rang up his breathtaking conglomeration of debt.

Now the public investment sealots are after Bill Clinton to carry their colors. Typical is Robert Kuttner, of the labor-backed Economic Policy Institute, who asserted in a recent mains. Week column that "the preferred ... policy is simulus now, best led by public matment followed by gradual deficit reduction after growth is back on track."

Throughout the campaign. Clinton coold like a deficit dove. He talked about public investment and "growing" the economy out of its doldrums. He promised more money for the young, the poor, the clies. The budget deficit was clearly a matter of secondary importance to him. He talked the same language during most of the transition period.

But then something remarkable occurred. He named Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., and former congressional Budget Office director Alice Rivita as his chief budget officers— both of whom are deficit itswits of the first both of whom are defict hawks of the first stripe.

Baid. Panetta during his confirmation hearing: "We need to confront these deficits, to make the tough choices and be prepared for some sacrifice." Wrote Riche in her book "Reviving the American Dream" (Breckings Institution): "The budget deficit has paralyzed policy for more than a decade," And, Rivin wrote, he has a bias ... against magic wands and painless solutions. Everyone looks for ways of accomplishing ambitious geals without effort — loss weight without dieting, learn French while you sleep.

And Clinton himself? When the latest Bush budget projected even bigger shortfalls for the foreseeable future, the president elect began backing off his promise to cut the deficit in half by the end of his term. But then he went an interest and warred to challenge the deficit many and warred to challenge the deficit

My ardent prayer is that he will declare war on this deficit. Not wreatle with it, not contract it, not grapple with it. Go to damn war with it. lioni it. Kill it. Obtherate it.

Campaign poetry gives way to prose of governing

By WALTER R. MEARS An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON - Amid the symbols, and celebrations of President Clinton's passage to power, one word resounds: sacrifice. That wasn't in the vocabulary he chose in his quest for the White House.

With his summons to sacrifice "for our own sake," Clinton dramatized the difference between the poetry of campaigning and the prose of

That image is Gov. Mario Cuomo's, and as he said, there is no more Gov. Clinton now, no more Bill Clinton. "There is a President Clinton. That makes all the difference."

For now, Clinton must offer solutions, get them enacted and make them work.

During the campaign, Clinton fenced with more pessimistic rivals — Paul Teongas in the primaries, Ross Perot in the fall — who said he was offering seemingly painless answers to economic and budget problems that could not be solved without sacrifice. It didn't become an issue between Clinton and George Bush because the Republican president wasn't prescribing painful remedies either.

When pressed, Clinton the candidate would talk of difficult steps, acknowledge a need for sacrifice, avoiding details.

So such steps as curbing entitlement benefits, raising energy taxes, forgoing a projected middle-class tax cut were not on the campaign docket. They will be now: Clinton's people say they are looking at exercise.

they are looking at every option.
"We must do what no generation has had to do before," Clinton said in his inaugural address Wednesday. "We must invest more in our own people and in our own future, and at the same time, cut our massive debt. ... "It will not be easy, it will require sacrifice," he said, setting his themes for the detailed proposals to come. "But it can be done, and done fairly, not choosing sacrifice for its own sake, but for our own sake." There was in his 14-minute speech an Arkansas echo of the signature phrase at the inauguration of Clinton's first political hero, John F. Kennedy

'Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country." Kennedy said in 1961.

"It is time to break the bad habit of expecting something for nothing, from our government or from each other," Clinton said. "Let us take more responsibility, not only for ourselves and our families, but for our communities and our country

At his inauguration, Bush had offered the outstretched hand of bipartisanship to leaders of the Democratic Congress. It was nice symbolism but no deal. The legislative gridlock of his term was a factor in his defeat, and Clinton took over with a pledge "that the era of deadlock and drift is over and a new season of American renewal has begun."

"I was pleased to hear him use the word 'sacrifice," Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said later on the Senate floor. "President Clinton is absolutely right. If we are to put our economic house in order, if we are to do right by our children and grandchildren, then we must deal with our national debt."

But the end of divided government does not guarantee the outcome, on proposals the new Democratic administration is still drafting into an economic program that won't match the pledges of the 1992 campaign.

"Well, all of us promise maybe more than we hould during the heat of the campaign," former President Jimmy Carter said in an Inauguration Day interview on CBS. But he said circumstances nged for Clinton with the dramatic increase in the deficit forecast.

The tone changed, too, as Clinton's economic appointees began appearing before Senate confirmation committees earlier this month to warn that the new administration will have to consider steps to curb the cost of entitlement programs — Social Security, Medicare, veterans benefits.

George Bush exchanges White House for white home in Houston

By MICHAEL GRACEVE Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Stepping off the big blue jumbo jet that had taken him all over the world, George Bush, private citizen, began a new life without limousines, the press pack, smothering security and "Hail to the Chief."

"We've done our best, tried our hardest," he said as he came home to Houston on Wednesday. "It's now time for a new team. It's time to stay away from the head table, stay away from

Things were decidely different on this homecoming.

Security, while still handled by Secret Service agents, was looser. The traditional press pool was absent at Bush's request. There were no helicopters, no ambulance, no band, no big black limousine with the presidential seal and flags. Instead, Bush and his wife, Barbara, rode to their new neighborhood in a silver-gray Cadillac near the front of a short motorcade. They will live a rented house until their new home two doors away is completed in October. "It's back to the real world for the Bushes," Bush said. "There's a time to stay, a time to go, a time to fold 'em. Our only objective is to be good, helpful, private citizens." The former president stayed home just 30 minutes, then made the five-minute trip to his new office atop the nine-story Park Laureate Building, where he spent more than an hour.

With Saddam Hussein and the economy another president's problem now, Bush's new challenges include building the house, setting up an office and spending more time with the

If the Bushes were downcast, they didn't show it as they emerged from the 747 for the final time at Ellington Field, four hours after Bill Clinton's inauguration. At their new neighborhood of about 30 two-story brick homes with manicured lawns. some 250 neighbors crowded the narrow, horseshoe drive to see his arrival. His three Houston grandchildren, children of his son Neil, tacked up handmade signs over the doorway and yellow balloons along the driveway. "I'm happy I'll get to see them more," S-year-old Lauren Bush said, "It's sad that he lost, but it will be good to see them more."

A steady stream of well-wishers brought flowers, balloons, baskets of food and even bones for the dogs. Cable television workmen made sure the final connections were made.

"I promise you that after today, it will be a little quieter," Bush told his new neighbors.

"I can't be happier," said John Eiband, who grew up in the wealthy neighborhood. "My parents are going to be concerned a little bit (about additional traffic) with having someone of that caliber on the street.

Samuel Wu brought his 7-month-old daughter, Hanmel, to greet the new neighbors. "He's very, very nice," Wu said after shaking Bush's hand in his driveway. "He didn't say much. But she gave him a very special welcome: She cried."

At Bush's office, men carried boxes into the building, where the register included a line and suite number for "Office of George Bush." Other people who work in the building clapped and ered when he arrived.

The return home completed a circle that began in 1966 when Bush won a seat in Congress, representing the same district where he now tears were shed, some of those aboard said.

The flight was not a sad one even though a few

Heat fall to 75ers in OT

MIAMI - Overtime has become horror time for the Miami Heat.

Philadelphia is the latest team to take advantage of Miami's overtime failures, with Jeff Hornacek hitting a pair of crucial 3-point baskets Wednesday night to help the 76ers to a 115-112 victory.

The Heat lost despite a strong performance by point guard Steve Smith in his first game this season. Smith, who missed the first 34 games with a knee injury, had 16 points and 6 assists.

LONGWOOD - Crunch-time heroics helped

Longwood — Crunch-time heroics helped Lyman take advantage of Seminole injuries and sloppiness to sweep a girls-hoys Seminole Athletic Conference basketball Soubleheader Wednesday night at Lyman High School.

The Greyhound girls nipped Seminole 47-46 as Felicia Kiep nailed a short jumper with 0:45 remaining while the boys hit four free throws and grabbed crucial rebounds in the final 2:00 to boat the Tribe 50-47.

It was a treasured win for the Lady Greyhounds (16-9, 2-1), their "first over Seminole in at least 10 years, maybe the first ever," said Lyman head coach Stephen Carmichael.

The win is a landmark in charting Lyman's growth, giving the 'Hounds a chance of challenging for the conference title. It also highlights the struggles of Seminole, five-time defending SAC champions. still recovering from an incredible string of illnesses and injuries, Seminole alumps to 13-9 and 1-4 in the conference. Seminole won 53 consecutive conference games over four years before losing its last two SAC games last year.

Sara Wood's three pointer gave Lyman a 37-30 lead with 2:00 remaining in the third quarter, when Seminole came out of its shell. Led by Niki Washington and Kay Kay Mulling the Tribe

Still recovering from an incredible string of Washington and Kay Kay Mullins, the Tribe scored the next 10 points. Lyman battled back, capped by Kiep's shot.

Lyman was only 6-for-23 from the free throw line, and in close games, that's usually deadly.
"Our lack of execution on the free throw line almost cost us the game," said Carmichael. "We did not execute well offensively, but that can also indicate a good defensive effort. Seminole is a strong team, and we're proud to play at their

Headache clinic may have answers

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've suffered from headaches for the past 50 years. I feel they aren't migraines since the light doesn't bother me. I've been to all sorts of doctors, have had brain scans with negative results, yet the problem persists. Even when awakening from a nap, nine out of 10 times I have a headache.

What's up? DEAR READER: Contrary to popular opinion, patients with migraine are not always sensitive to light. Thus, you could have migraine headaches, although their pattern (present on awakening) is not typical.

From the sound of things, I suspect that you've been examined by a caboodle of doctors, including neurologists. At this point, your best bet would be a headache clinic at a teaching hospital.

In this setting, specialists will review all the tests you have had and, perhaps, order further testing, such as magnetic reso-nance imaging, a technique by which doctors obtain pictures of the brain.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a foot "tic." In the evening or when in bed, a muscle in my left leg will contract, pulling the four smallest toes downward. It will intensify for about 20 seconds and then release. It's strong enough to awaken me. Should I live with my condition or is it a precursor for something serious?
DEAR READER: This is not a

tic. A tic is a repetitive, benign muscle twitch that may appear during periods of stress and emotional turmoil. For example, most of us occasionally experience tics involving an eyelid when we are overtired.

Rather, you seem to have described a muscle cramp. Such cramps, occurring especially at night in the legs, are quite common. Older people suffer from them more frequently than do the young, leading some authorities to speculate that these cramps may reflect diminishing circulation.

see whether East follows once or twice. Then cash your diamond and spade winners. This brings West down to five cards. Probably he will discard one club and three diamonds, retaining three hearts and two clubs. If so, lead a heart. Let him cash his three In today's deal, West leads the tricks, but force him to lead away from the club king at trick

It seems straightforward, but a clever West will put you to a guess. He will discard the diamond four, the diamond queen and two clubs. If he does You have eight top tricks: four that, you must cash the club ace spades, one heart, two diamonds to drop his now singleton king. If
