Chamber to discuss C.R. 46A

SANFORD — The Transportation Committee of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce will discuss the C.R. 46-A Interchange Thursday. A shirt-sleeve meeting is scheduled for 8:15 a.m.

Sanford City Manager Bill Simmons serves as chairman of the chamber's Transportation Committee.

Simmons projected, "The discussion will center around whether the new interchange is necessary, warranted, or designed in light of projected plans for the extension of the Seminole County Expressway to I-4.

Farr added, "We want to get opinions on both sides of this question, as well as hear from people who may be neutral on the concept, so we can determine whether the Chamber should support it, or leave it alone."

Simmons said the main purpose of the meeting is, "to determine if the committee and the Chamber need to take a position in the matter."

In addition to the 18 member Transportation Committee members and guests, Farr said the meeting is open for other Chamber members as well as individuals who may have a concern about the interchange proposal, or have some input to add to the meeting.

The meeting, scheduled to begin this Thursday morning at 8:15, is expected to last until approximately 10 a.m. It will be held in the meeting room of the Chamber building, 400 E. First Street in downtown Sanford.

Sanford gets tough despite opposition

By NICK PFEIPAUP

SANFORD — A proposed Code Enforcement ordinance drew considerable citizen comment during last night's City Commission meeting. The measure passed, however, on a three to two vote.

Although only three citizens spoke in favor of it, a show of hands asked by Mayor Bettye Smith indicated several dozen were in support of the move. A similar number opposed it, with seven persons voicing their objections.

Commissioners A.A. McClanahan and Whitey Eckstein voted against the measure, as they had when it was originally presented two weeks ago, resulting in a tabling.

M.E. McDaniel of 2810 Magnolia Avenue told the Commission, "This ordinance will hurt a lot of small people who can't pay fines." He suggested, "If you want to turn Sanford into a Winter Park or Heathrow, why don't you move there."

McDaniel added, "You are going to turn us into a police state - neighbor spying on neighbor. I don't believe we want this."

In favor of the move, Cliff Miller, of 5211 Brentwood Drive said, "This is a positive step and a modern step. It's not scare tactics like some would have us believe."

SANFORD — Despite shortfalls in projected revenues, Seminole County officials are pleased their current budget status is not so glum.

County Manager Ron Rabun said income from state-shared revenues such as sales and cigarette taxes, combined with lower than anticipated interest on investments have resulted in about a $1.1 million shortfall in revenues to the current $283 million yearly spending plan.

Library grant ups money to county

SANFORD — Seminole County will receive a $29,000 windfall from a state library grant.

"We're very pleased in this year of hard times, they decided not to cut us back on this," said Jean Rhein, director of the Department of Library and Leisure Services.

Rhein said she anticipated receiving $289,347 this year when she applied for the annual grant last year. But she recently learned the county will actually receive $318,347, $29,000 more. The grant is issued each year by the state to counties and larger cities with library systems. Florida law limits the "State Aid to Libraries" grants to 25 percent of the annual expenses to operate the library See Grant, Page 5A

Polo without snob appeal

By LACY DOMEN
Herald People Editor

SANFORD — It was a jolly good show. Her Royal Majesty's British Polo Team thundered up and down the Bakersfield Polo Field on horses they had never ridden. They hadn't played in five months.

British Army officer Lt. Steven Arrowsmith tilted his face toward the warm, bright sun Tuesday. "It was snowing when we left England," he said.

Members of the Bakersfield Polo Club were a little older than their British counterparts. Rated slightly lower in competition, they were spotted three points at the start Tuesday and one point Thursday.

The polo match, demanding agility, grace and horse sense, had begun.

"It's dangerous, not for soft gentlemen or soft-hearted," Arrowsmith explained earlier.

Last Tuesday, four men on each team mounted regal ponies with braided tails, swung wood mallets at a baseball sized plastic ball, and bumped steeds to dissuade the opposition.

"It's great exercise and very nice to have the opportunity to play this team," Stan Sandefur, who played in a second match Thursday, said.

Joe Baker, owner of the Bakersfield Polo Field played Thursday with his wife JoAnne as teammate. He said many things add to passion for the sport. Proponents agreed. Honing skill and dexterity, developing sportsmanship and courage, working with gentle but regal creatures and galloping at break-neck speed in an attempt to smack the ball between the goals before an opponent wrests it away all add to the lure of the game.

"And it's interesting to me where those people come from," he said, pointing to the field of horsemen. "Cuba, Chile, Argentina, Kenya, Australia, Iran, England and even Plant City and See Polo, Page 2A

Concern over codes marks Duany's return

By LACY DOMEN
Herald People Editor

SANFORD — While Sanford Historic Trust members eagerly anticipate the return of Andres Duany April 1, Georgetown civic leaders express concern that Duany's proposal for Sanford's future may include some codes that could create an economic hardship for many homeowners.

Duany, a renowned Miami architect, was contracted this past fall by the Historic Trust to study the area and formulate a plan to reurge the downtown historic district. At that time, he conducted a series of charrettes, town meetings, to compile information and ideas from interested citizens. He will be returning to present his master plan to the public and to city officials April 1, 6:30 p.m. at a location still to be confirmed.

"I'm very excited this is coming to the end with something solid, the finished proposal," Sue Olinger, chairman of the Duany project, said.

The sensitive issue that has surfaced stems from the inclusion of more stringent codes in the area that Duany proposes will include a portion of Georgetown, the area See Duany, Page 6A

Final defense witnesses take stand

MIAMI — A Panamanian legislator and a drug agent testified in Manuel Noriega's trial as the defense prepared to rest, but the ousted Panamanian leader's attorneys refused to say if he will also take the stand.

Noriega's usually talkative attorneys, joking about a "news blackout," ducked questions Monday about whether their client will testify.

If he doesn't, the defense is expected to conclude today, with the prosecution beginning a weeklong rebuttal case.

On the witness stand Monday, a former Panamanian legislator testified Noriega personally lobbied for a tough anti-drug law finally passed in late 1988. The legislation made drug prosecutions easier, and for the first time outlawed money laundering.

"Many in Panama objected to the law," said Jerry Wilson. "They complained about U.S. interference to get it approved."

One who opposed it, Wilson volunteered, was the current Panamanian foreign minister, whose government replaced Noriega following the December 1989 U.S. invasion that led to his surrender.

Sanford are represented," he smiled and said.

Time is marked by chukkers. Six chukkers are played each game. Players switch horses every chukker, so it is expensive to participate.

"Owning a string of six horses with a trailer, the groom, shoes every month, food and veterinary care is expensive. People think you have to be rich to take part, even to watch, but we don't operate that way. Anyone is welcome to come watch for free. There are no snobs here, and you don't have to dress up," Jackie Baker, secretary for the club said.

From an elevated platform, Jackie, Tracy Orush and Joan Reyes take turns announcing each bit of the action as spectators don't even have to understand the game at first to enjoy it.

And it is action-packed. At one particularly harried point during Tuesday's match, Bakersfield player Jonathan Wolfe tumbled over the head of his steed, Peanut, confirming what Arrowsmith had said. Polo is a dangerous game. Wolfe resumed play later.

The Brits, guests of clubmembers here, have extended an invitation to Bakersfield players. Some of them will visit England next year and play the team again.

"It's just nice to see this in Sanford," spectator Matt Farrell, a Sanford resident said. "The last polo match I saw was as a young boy in the late 30s. I'll be back."

A piercing airhorn honked the end of the match. Gentlemen, faces flushed and slightly breathless, were still astride horses cantering from the field.

Matches both days were close. The teams tied at seven Tuesday. The Brits edged ahead Thursday, seven to four.

"We played well and they were a good team, really good," Jackie said.

Senate panel: Ban doctor referrals

By JACKIE HALLIPAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The next battleground for a proposal to ban doctors from making referrals to clinics they own is the full Senate, after action by a panel whose chairman called the debate the fiercest he's ever seen.

"In 14 years that I've been in this Legislature, I have never seen an issue as intense as this has become," Sen. Winston "Bud" Gardner said Monday night.

Gardner, who represents Sanford and Seminole County east of 17-92 and who is chairman of the Appropriations Committee, told the panel members they were working at 8:45 p.m. on the legislation because he had been accused last week of trying to avoid hearing the bill.

"The point to this is the proponents of this bill have attempted to manipulate my vote," he said, adding that he's always been a supporter.

The people who support the bill have been "a little less than truthful," he said.

Gardner didn't say to whom he was referring and left before the committee meeting was over.

The committee voted unanimously for the legislation (CS-SB 2264) after narrowly defeating two amendments that bill supporters said would gut the bill. Gardner, D-Titusville, cast the deciding vote on one of the amendments.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Eleanor Weinstock, D-West Palm Beach, now moves to the Rules and Calendar Committee to be scheduled for a floor vote. The House passed similar legislation last week.

The bill would ban doctors from making referrals to clinics or centers they own for cancer treatment, physical therapy, clinical lab work and tests such as X-rays and CAT scans. Such arrangements are called joint ventures.

The legislation is based on a two-year study by the Health Care Cost Containment Board, which found that more procedures were ordered when physicians had invested in those centers and more was charged per procedure.

An analysis done later and paid for by bill supporters estimated the overcosts in one year to be around $500 million.

Spring break birthplace eases bans

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — Seven years after the city made international headlines with its heavy-handed crackdown on spring breakers, some of the beach restrictions are quietly being lifted.

"There must be a million things you can't do at Fort Lauderdale's beach," said Anne Martone, director of the Broward County Hotel & Motel Association.

No eating on the beach. No drinking. No dog-walking. No water scooter rentals. No late-night parking. No football-throwing or Frisbee-tossing, except in the picnic area behind the South Beach parking lot.

"Now that our market has changed, things that were put into place to bring some order to spring break don't apply to the market we're seeing today," Martone said.

Lifeguards say they are no longer stopping picnics and Frisbee-throwing if people are behaving responsibly.

Last week, the no-parking-after-9 p.m. rules went by the wayside when the City Commission agreed to allow parking until 11 p.m. and 2 a.m. at many beach-area parking lots and metered spaces near the beach.

Next, the city will consider allowing rental concessions for sailing catamarans and other non-motorized watercraft at the public beach.

And a group of city staffers and beach business people have been meeting to reconsider the other dozens of laws and restrictions that specify what you cannot do at and around the beach.

Budget

constitutional officers have been thrilly during the past several months. As a result, the county reserve account will double. County budget director Jean Kasab said the account now has about $2.4 million for the "rainy day" fund, even after covering the shortfalls. That amount is about $1.2 million above the reserve account budgeted last September.

"We'll be able to cover the shortfall and still provide for reserves," said Kasab.

"The department directors have done an excellent job in holding the line," said Rabun.

Based on a mid-fiscal year analysis of revenues and expenditures, Kasab said the county will receive about $413,000 less than the $10.2 million expected from the half-cent portion of the state shares with counties and cities from sales taxes. Kasab said the county will also receive about $172,000 less than the $4.6 million expected from the state from intangible and cigarette taxes.

Also, as interest rates declined, so did one source of county revenue. Kasab said the county had budgeted to receive about $416,000 from interest on bank accounts. She said the county will apparently earn about $100,000 less than that amount.

Much of the savings resulted from leaving vacant employee positions unfilled. In December, Rabun ordered a hiring freeze on all new employees unless he approves them. In February, he asked departments heads to target a 5 percent reduction in spending. Kasab said in her own department, she's cut down on the amount of copying and her demand for copies from other departments.

"What I do sometimes has an effect on other departments so I try to be aware of that when I order copies or pages and pages of computer printouts," Kasab said.

Constitutional officers, including the clerk of courts and sheriff, have also submitted a higher than expected amount of unspent fees to county coffers, which softens the revenue reduction blow.

Rabun said the savings may appear to be a windfall, but it may not be so. He said the Sanlando Softball complex will be completed this year and the county will need money to operate the facility, built on an old garbage dump. He said revenues might decline even further, placing a demand on the savings account.

Seminole part of redistricting offer

From Staff and Wire Reports

TALLAHASSEE — A Senate compromise offer on congressional redistricting would replace a proposed black district that extended from Tallahassee to Orlando with a more compact one in North Florida.

Instead of the meandering 57-percent black district contained in the earlier plan, the new Senate map substitutes a 52.5-percent black seat running from Jacksonville along the St. Johns River through Sanford to Orlando and stretching a finger into Alachua and Marion counties.

"We made it more logical," said Senate

Reapportionment Committee Chairman Jack Gordon, D-Miami Beach. "It was pretty impossible to do that (elongated) district."

Legislators must now review the compromise offer that makes the area below the Georgia border part of a more compact district that runs from Washington County to Lake City, which is 24 percent black and 78.5 percent registered Democrats.

In other developments Monday, Republican lawmakers refuted a lawsuit claiming Democrats were at an impasse, and four more House members were added to a House-Senate conference committee appointed to work out differences in the plans.

Alleged killer accused of past abductions

Associated Press

FORT MYERS — Investigators are looking into allegations that a church volunteer accused of kidnapping and fatally shooting two teen-agers and wounding a third previously abducted two other boys, a newspaper reported.

Robert Kay, 24, of Fort Myers pleaded innocent last week to first-degree murder and kidnapping charges in the case. He is accused of tormenting the three at a remote campsite in Lehigh Acres before shooting them last month.

Nathan Goldsberry, 13, and Irish Mullins, 15, were shot to death, while 14-year-old Chris Stricklin survived three bullet wounds.

Two Lee County women claim their sons were abducted by Kay in 1988 and 1991 while he was on probation on a burglary charge and that he told their sons he had killed before. The News-Press in Fort Myers reported in Sunday's editions.

One woman, who said her son was abducted last April, said he was bound, gagged and put in the trunk of Kay's car by Kay and another youth and taken to a tent in Lehigh Acres.

"He told my son he could very easily kill him," the woman told the newspaper. "He had done it in the past and would do it again."

In the other case, Virginia Kelly said Kay and another youth abducted her son, Michael Montgomery, in 1988 and took him to a remote section of Lehigh Acres. She said he was tied to a tree and forced into sexual acts.

Barbecue funds aid in borrow pit battle

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

GENEVA — The Geneva Defense Association and Geneva Citizens Association are seeking about $5,000 to continue their battle against a proposed borrow pit near Cochran Road.

The two organizations will cosponsor a "Save the Bubble" benefit barbecue Saturday from noon until 4 p.m. at the Geneva Community Center to raise money for the borrow pit challenge. Tickets for the fund-raiser are on sale at Geneva Oaks Animal Hospital, Cort's Feed-N-All, Gene's Produce, Geneva Grocery and Boater's Marine.

GDA president Don Crabtree said his organization had spent between $2,500 and $3,000 to fight the 47-foot-deep pit proposed by Excavated Products Inc. Crabtree said he anticipates expenses to reach a total of $8,000 or more to conclude appeals of Seminole County and St. Johns River Water Management District decisions favoring the proposal.

The GDA and GCA have joined together to fight the borrow pit by establishing a joint bank account for the defense effort. Residents fear a 55-acre pit will expose the fragile "Geneva Bubble" to contamination from nearby State Road 46 and the proposed Sanford sewage sprayfield northwest of the sprayfield site.

In December, the GDA filed an appeal in Seminole County Circuit Court of the county's Oct. 22 approval of the pit after commissioners refused to reconsider their decision at a November hearing. Crabtree said commissioners have been served notice of the appeal but hearings have been set.

The group has also appealed a December water district approval of a stormwater plan for the pit proposal, needed before it could be excavated. Crabtree said a hearing before a state hearing officer has been scheduled in Orlando April 21 to 24.

Crabtree said if the district decision is overturned, the court case may be resolved quickly. Crabtree said the challenge effort has hired Orlando environmental attorney Irby Pugh and Mark T. Stewart, chairman of the University of South Florida geology department, to represent them.

County road impact fee could rise

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Seminole County road impact fee could be increased by 66 percent or more if new residents help pay for completed roads, according to a county study.

The current county road impact fee of about $848 per home in the north sections of the county would increase to $1,554 per home. The $940 eastern-area fee would increase to about $1,750, the $1,186 fee in southern areas would increase to $1,649 and the $1,271 fee in the western areas would increase to $1,852.

County commissioners were scheduled to consider the changes today. If the changes are approved, they would be incorporated in an impact fee review that could take until December to complete. The new fee would be adopted in early 1993.

Pam Hastings, county capital planner, said the fee estimates are based on the current fee updated in 1990. Since then, county commissioners have decided to allow more congestion in the areas near Interstate 4 to encourage mass transit and denser housing to protect rural areas. That change will tend to reduce the increase.

But the 1990 fee also doesn't take into account developments allowed since then. That factor might increase it even further.

The current impact fee is based on the cost to improve roads for new residents multiplied by the average number of auto trips a new home will generate or a business will attract. The fee is paid for construction both in and out of cities.

It's more harmful than you think.

There's a good chance your hard-earned money is vanishing into thin air. Floating through untinted windows. Escaping into a poorly insulated attic. Being swallowed up by an inefficient central air conditioner.

The fact is, many Florida homes are just not energy-efficient. Untinted windows can drive up your cooling costs. Insufficient ceiling insulation can cost you hundreds of dollars each year. An outdated air conditioner may actually double the cost of cooling your home.

But, FPL can help. Simply call 1-800-DIAL-FPL (342-5375) or mail the attached coupon to arrange for a free no-obligation Home Energy Survey. An FPL representative will come over and determine just how efficient your home is.

You'll learn about the energy-saving steps needed to improve your home's energy efficiency and how FPL can even help you pay for them.

Up to $150 toward the installation of window tinting and up to $300 for adding ceiling insulation to the recommended level.

Plus, FPL may pay up to $584 for replacing your old outdated central air conditioner with a new qualifying high-efficiency central system through an approved FPL contractor.

In all, you could get up to $1,000 from FPL for making these improvements. And continue to reap savings for years to come.

The sooner you call for a free Home Energy Survey, the sooner you'll start saving. To arrange for yours, call now at 1-800-DIAL-FPL (342-5375) or mail the attached coupon.

We'll help you hold on to your money before the hot summer sun comes and makes it disappear.

Act now and start saving before the summer. FPL may help you pay:

- Up to $150 for installing window tinting.
- Up to $300 for additional ceiling insulation
- Up to $584 toward a high-efficiency central cooling and heating system.

The survey is free and there's no obligation.

Nuclear reform

Nuclear energy has received an important vote of support from the Senate. As part of a comprehensive energy bill, senators overwhelmingly approved an amendment that would do much to streamline the licensing of new nuclear power plants.

Under the current cumbersome rules, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission separately licenses the construction and then the operation of power plants. The measure adopted by the Senate would require only one license. Industry experts say this change could reduce the current regulatory delays by up to 10 years.

Regulatory reform is precisely what America's nuclear power industry needs to realize its goal of bringing on line a new generation of safer reactors, beginning in the middle of this decade.

The changes adopted by the Senate would inject a measure of predictability into what now is a highly capricious licensing process. Without these reforms, the financial community and the utility industry would remain wary of investing in new plants.

Largely because potential investors have been uncertain about America's commitment to nuclear energy as a source of electricity, construction of at least 100 nuclear reactors have been canceled during the last 20 years.

During the previous decade, not a single new nuclear plant was ordered and eight licensed reactors actually were shut down. Meanwhile, utility companies were required by regulators to write off $10 billion already invested in canceled plants.

In the 1990s, however, it appears that nuclear energy is positioned to make a comeback.

Last year, as part of the administration's national energy strategy, President Bush proposed to increase America's nuclear power production by 10 percent above the levels otherwise projected for the year 2010. If the Senate-passed measure becomes law, that goal will be reachable.

America's 110 nuclear plants provide one-fifth of the nation's electricity, including one-third of the electricity consumed in nine states. Since the first oil embargo in 1973, nuclear energy has produced the power equivalent of burning 740,000 barrels of imported petroleum per day. This adds up to a savings of 4.3 billion barrels and $125 billion during the last two decades.

Environmental considerations, particularly the safe disposal of radioactive wastes, continue to be major concerns. But it should be noted that nuclear power is the only major source of electricity that does not emit harmful pollutants into the atmosphere.

By comparison, the environmental damage caused by burning coal and oil is considerable. If America returned exclusively to fossil fuels and abandoned nuclear energy, an additional 128 million tons of carbon dioxide would be spewed into the atmosphere every year.

As for safety concerns, the nuclear industry has developed a new generation of standardized, advanced, light-water reactors with improved safety features. In the event of an accident, the new reactors would rely much less on pumps, valves, emergency generators and plant personnel than do present models. The NRC could do much to advance nuclear energy by approving a generic design for these new reactors, rather than approving multiple designs on a case-by-case basis.

By no means can nuclear power meet all of America's future energy needs. But it is a vastly underused power source that can enable the United States to ease its growing appetite for imported oil.

Who pays most in federal taxes?

It is now clear that the liberal game plan for the 1992 elections is based on that Old Reliable of political demagoguery, class warfare. Faced with widespread popular recollection of the Reagan years as a kind of Golden Age, liberal pundits are busy rewriting its history as a dreary chronicle of aze and greed, capped by the contention that during the 1980s "the rich got richer, while the poor got poorer." This can then be used to fuel demands for higher taxes on "the rich" — always a popular target, for all the obvious reasons.

The New York Times for March 5 had a story on page one in which, using Congressional Budget Office figures given a special spin by "Paul Krugman of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology," it purported to show that the 1980s were "A Very Good Time for the Very Rich" — but not for anyone else.

Two charts accompanying the article indicated that "From '77 to '89" the "pretax income" of the richest 1 percent of American families rose 77 percent, and that of the top fifth, 29 percent, while the average income of the bottom fifth actually diminished by 9 percent; and that "the rich reaped most of the after-tax gains, too," since they "received 60 percent of the after-tax income gain," while the "Portion received by families with incomes below the top 20 percent" was only 6 percent.

There are so many things wrong with this analysis that one hardly knows where to begin. Just for one thing, note that while the story's focus is totally on the 1980s (the Reagan-Bush era), the statistics, for some mysterious reason, all begin in 1977 — or, in other words, at the outset of the Carter administration. Were Jimmy Carter and his Democratic Congress part of the conspiracy to further enrich the rich?

Second, we are supposed to assume that the "bottom fifth" of American families remained more or less stable over the whole period, grimly watching its income fall. But the "bottom fifth" in fact changed drastically, absorbing up to a million illegal immigrants per year from Mexico alone. These newcomers pushed many Americans upward out of the "bottom fifth" altogether, and dragged its average income down, while earning far higher incomes than they had ever enjoyed at home.

Third, note the breezy assumption (which the Times shares with its columnist Anthony Lewis, as I discussed in a recent column) that "pre-tax income" and "after-tax gains" are both national assets, which "the rich" somehow manage to invade and plunder out of all proportion to their numbers or deserts. It cannot be stressed too often that this money was earned by them in the first place — all of it. Without their efforts, it wouldn't be there for the rest of us to grab and spend.

And boy, do we grab it! The richest 1 percent of American families paid 18 percent of all income taxes in 1980, and over 25 percent in 1990. The top tenth were paying, by 1990, well over half of all the income taxes collected by the Internal Revenue Service. Think of it: Ten percent of American families pay over half of all defense expenditures, over half of all welfare costs, over half of our enormous debt service, etc.

Ah, but they paid more taxes because they earned more money! That, it seems, is their real sin in the eyes of the class warfare strategists.

Antarctica: lab for eco-research

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand — The South Pole, with its cold, wind and six months of constant darkness annually, remains one of the most inhospitable places on Earth. But for scientists, some of whom now remain there year-round, Antarctica has become one of the planet's most important laboratories.

Where the north polar region is actually ice-covered ocean, Antarctica is a solid continent. This provides a wealth of scientific information not obtainable in the north polar regions. The continent's altitude, up to 10,000 feet in places, provides space scientists with a high-altitude solid platform, and the Earth's best view of the heavens.

The U.S. Antarctic Program — run by the National Science Foundation and funded by Congress for about $180 million a year — is the most ambitious scientific program on that continent.

It is headquartered in a series of ultramodern buildings adjoining Christchurch's international airport. This southern New Zealand city is the closest international gateway to Antarctica.

The U.S. program maintains three major bases in Antarctica:

The central base at McMurdo, built on ice-free volcanic rock on Ross Island, about 1,200 kilometers from the Pole, and accessible six months a year by ship.

Palmer Station on the coast of Anvers Island off the Antarctic Peninsula, used mainly for ecological and biological study.

Aminaden-Scott, the grotesque dome-covered base at the geographic pole itself.

According to Dr. Chuck Paul, head of the NSF's Antarctic effort, "The more environmental and ecological problems affect the Earth, the more there is for us to do and to learn in Antarctica."

The work currently underway in the Antarctic includes astronomy and astrophysics, biology and medical research, geology and other earth sciences, ocean and weather studies and glaciology.

Among the most important current investigations are those on ozone-depletion, ultraviolet radiation in the atmosphere, studies of the ocean food chain and its changes, ice sheet response to global warming, ice core sampling at various deep depths to determine the makeup of Earth's atmosphere in the distant past, and attempts to learn how fish can live in waters cold enough to freeze all bodily fluids.

Although all bases are manned year-round, 95 percent of the scientific research is done during the Antarctic summer, which runs from October to February. The McMurdo population, which falls to about 200 in the winter, swells to more than 1,500 in the summer. Only 22 people spend the winter at the pole itself. The summer population can exceed 200.

Getting these people in and out, and resupplying all the bases, is the job of the ships and planes of U.S. Naval Support Force Antarctica, headed by Cmdr. Jim McAllister. His job is a seven-day-a-week, 18-hour-a-day grind for six months — and then six months are spent preparing to do it over again.

With one exception. In June — the middle of the pitch-black Antarctic winter — using the full moon, one danger-fraught 18-hour resupply flight is made both to McMurdo and the Pole, bringing in fresh food, mail and needed equipment.

The planes cannot land, so protected pallets are dropped at very low altitude.

"One of the biggest dangers is the speed with which the weather can change down there," explains McAllister. In a matter of minutes, a clear night can suddenly be brought down to zero visibility with snow. Then too, when the cargo loaders open the hold to kick out the pallets, temperatures in the planes drop to as low as minus 90 degrees within less than a minute.

"But we have always been successful in making the drops," McAllister says, "and I know our efforts are appreciated by the men and women on station."

The biggest project now going on in Antarctica is a several-year-long attempt to construct a permanent "blue ice" landing strip on a 5,000-foot-thick ice sheet near McMurdo. This would allow large wheeled transports to land up to nine months out of the year.

"Right now we spend about 600-flight hours just bringing people out at the end of the summer at the rate of about 30 people per ski-equipped C-130," explains Erick Chiang, NSF's Manager of Polar Operations. "If we could use wheeled C-141s we could bring people out 125 at a time, and we could free up perhaps 400 flying hours annually to use in direct scientific support. That will make a major difference."

The U.S. program maintains three major bases in Antarctica.

Cuomo infatuates, infuriates again

It was the morning after our latest big election night, the one in which Bill Clinton won in Georgia, Paul Tsongas won in Maryland, Jerry Brown won in Colorado and George Bush won in every Grand Old Party primary, but not by enough to make Pat Buchanan shut up and go away.

And when we turned on our TV sets, we saw — for one full hour — Mario Cuomo. Say what?

Yes, the 10th-year governor of New York and quadrennial non-candidate of Democratic presidential primaries was the sole guest on a Phil Donahue show devoted to America's favorite topic: Why not, Mario? And Cuomo — who can be the most infatuating and most infuriating figure in politics today — was, once again, all of the above.

That's the way it goes in this, the campaign Year of Anybody But —

Every Tuesday, Republican voters tell us they want Anybody But Bush, as long as it is Anybody But Buchanan. And Democrats say they only want someone who is electable and wish they could vote for Anybody But Clinton/Tsongas/Brown/Harkin/Kerry. Voting these days has become a two-listed ordeal; one hand holds the lever, the other holds the nose.

And that seems to have been what was troubling Phil Donahue, as he opened his show with a dramatic recitation about a deadlocked convention turning to Cuomo. "What the hell is wrong with this kind of speculation?" he asked. To which the governor gave a most Cuomorian reply: "It is not compatible with my own nature to do things in a kind of oblique, indirect, eccentric way. If you can't go into New Hampshire, rule yourself out. ... To have me and Jesse (Jackson) and other candidates hovering around the margins would not be good for the party."

Donahue, better prepared than most political reporters, interrupted to show a videotape from Feb. 12, just before the New Hampshire election. There, hovering around the margins of the first primary state, was Mario Cuomo, speaking at Harvard as television carried his words to viewers (read also: voters) just a half-hour's drive to the north:

"People are saying, 'We think Mario should be the president; we want to write his name in. ...' You can write in Pinocchio, you can write in Mario Cuomo (a timely tutorial on precisely how it must be written). ... Why shouldn't they do it if they feel like it? In my own state, they're saying lousy things about me; if they want to say nice things in New Hampshire, I'm going to encourage them."

Mario Cuomo: Most infatuating/Most infuriating. He was easily the best campaigner and probably the best candidate the Democrats could have fielded in 1992. Opponents would have painted him with all the sins of New York; he would have dealt with that and come back with more. And mainly, by campaigning in the South, he could have proven what he's always professed (and I've always believed): When times are tough, the same message that moves a middle-class voter in Buffalo will also move a middle-class voter in Birmingham.

(As luck would have it: If you want to prove yourself by running in Birmingham, you can get on the Alabama primary ballot up until April 3. Also, you can get on the California ballot by March 18 and New Jersey's by April 9. Win those three and you'll earn credentials strong enough to break any convention deadlock.)

This has not been a good 12 months for Cuomo.

Voting these days has become a two-listed ordeal.

Loch Lowe Prep School. The matter was brought up during the Feb. 24 City Commission meeting, but tabled pending further information.

Last night, Joan Randolph, representing consulting engineers Harling, Locklin & Associates, discussed changes that had been requested by the Commission, as well as recommended by a number of citizens who turned out in opposition during the meeting last month.

One of the big objections centered on the opening of a portion of Loch Lowe Drive, which would have provided access to the Hidden Lake subdivision. Barbara Howell, of 233 Loch Lowe Drive had expressed the concern over increased traffic.

"We will be closing off the end of the road," said Howell, "so that there will not be any through traffic. I believe that will resolve the traffic situation."

City Manager Bill Simmons however, expressed additional problems. "Since we received this change," he said, "the staff has come up with another concern. Under the plat presented now, the roadway will just end abruptly." He observed, "The city restrictions call for the addition of a cul-de-sac."

Simmons explained how a cul-de-sac provides easier turn-arounds than a dead-ended street. In cases when emergency vehicles may be in the area.

"Another concern we have," he said, "is that it appears as though a number of lots are double frontage lots and that would require approval of another waiver."

Randolph was able to explain both concerns. "The lots are not intended to be double frontage," she said, "and we are willing to make the end of the roadway into a cul-de-sac."

After briefly studying Randolph's revised plat map, Howell did not express any additional objections to the development.

"There are some additional minor engineering refinements still to be made before the final plat comes up for approval," Simmons said, "but none of them will have any serious effect on the overall project."

Sanford City Planner Jay Marder explained, "The next step will be for the staff to work out final refinements, then have the final plat submitted for Commission approval."

The four waivers approved by the Commission last night deal with wetland buffer zones, sidewalk locations and open street drainage. The waivers were also approved by the Commission.

system. The grants are issued by the Florida Department of State Division of Library and Information Services.

The $318,347 grant represents about 9 percent of the $3.5 million library budget for this year, said Rhein.

"It goes up and down from year to year, depending of what the Legislature does," said Rhein. "This year we were lucky. Other years, it comes up less than we anticipate."

Rhein said the county uses the grant to reimburse itself for taxes spent on library services.

Warren Skipper, president of the Sanford Historic Trust commented, "This is going to be helpful and beneficial for our city, and we support it."

During the workshop meeting of the Commission earlier in the evening, Commissioner Eckstein expressed his opposition. "Look at the amount of overtime pay for court appearances this is going to cost us, and I'm sure a lot of citations will be contested," He suggested, "This is going to polarize our city. We're trying to create a utopian community during a recession and it's not right."

Eckstein projected, "This is going to be citizens against citizens, it's going to set off neighbors against neighbors. We're not going to be a friendly city when we're through with this."

McClanahan recalled years ago, "when we eliminated the positions of constables and justices of the peace to decide our violations, now we are trying to re-create the constables, and I don't think we want this."

Mayor Smith as well as Commissioners Bob Thomas and Lon Howell all spoke in support of the ordinance. Thomas commented, "I've seen many things happen around here in my eight years on the Commission. This city used to be a jungle, but we have instigated cleanup programs and did a good job, but eventually we backed away."

He added, "We don't want a city that looks like the Goldsboro area used to, we want a city that exemplifies beauty. Let's try it and see what happens. We have to start somewhere."

According to the wording of the ordinance, the City of Sanford considers the measure, "a supplemental and additional method of enforcing its codes and ordinances by the issuance of citations for violation of City codes or ordinances."

"Prior to issuing a citation," the ordinance stipulates, "the code enforcement officer is required to provide notice of the violation, and establish a reasonable time period during which the person must correct the violation. Such time period shall be no more than 30 days."

If the code enforcement officer believes the violation presents a serious threat to the public health, safety or welfare, or if the violation is irreparable or irreversible, the citation may be issued immediately, without a time period to be considered.

Civil penalties range from $50 for Class I, to $300 for Class III; the City has temporarily listed only Class I and II. According to City Manager Bill Simmons, "The higher fines are included in the ordinance for future classifications from those already enacted."

Mayor Smith, Commissioners Thomas and Howell, during separate comments, each projected, "If it doesn't work, I'll be the first to bring it back and rescind it."

The measure was approved on second reading last night, and thus becomes effective immediately.

Equine encephalitis detected

OVIEDO — Veterinarian Dr. Peter Haberly today reported a case of equine encephalitis has been found in a horse in the Black Hammock area of Oviedo.

"This is a relatively annual occurrence," he reported, "but apparently it's starting earlier this year because of the relatively mild winter we've had."

John Cochran, with the Seminole County Health Department said that the human population is not very susceptible to this disease. "We have a lot of eastern equine disease in our horse population," he observed, "but it hasn't been directly related to human diseases."

Cochran observed that no reports of equine encephalitis have been received by his office so far this year, but that it was generally a yearly situation. "We will probably receive word of the problems in regular reports we receive," he said.

Dr. Haberly handles only horses from a mobile practice, and covers a four county area. He observed, "The disease is generally transmitted by birds and mosquitoes," and could quickly cover most of the Central Florida area.

He suggested, "Horse owners should make sure their animals are properly vaccinated for this disease."

Oklahoma man executed

McALESTER, Okla. — An inmate whose death sentence was overturned because a judge told the jury not to be swayed by sympathy was executed early today, two years after the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the penalty.

Robyn Leroy Parks, 37, was put to death by injection, becoming the second person executed in Oklahoma since the high court in 1976 let states resume capital punishment. The Supreme Court rejected a last-minute appeal.

Moments after the drugs began to flow, Parks said lightheartedly, "I'm still awake." He said to girlfriend Debra Shelton, "I love you too, Debra."

Parks was executed for the 1977 shooting death of Abdullah Ibrahim, 24, who worked at a gas station in Oklahoma City while attending college. Prosecutors said Parks killed Ibrahim for fear he would be caught using a stolen credit card.

In conversations taped by police days later, Parks told a friend he killed Ibrahim and said where the gun was hidden.

'Wayne's World' still tops

LOS ANGELES — "Wayne's World" partied on at the box office for the fourth straight weekend.

The expanded "Saturday Night Live" skit about the two metalhead hosts of a public-access cable show made $8.4 million over the weekend, for a total of $57.2 million. Exhibitor Relations Co. reported Monday.

"The Lawnmower Man," a high-tech adaptation of a Stephen King story, opened in second place with ticket sales of $7.8 million. In third place was "Fried Green Tomatoes," which brought in $3.9 million in its 11th week.

Bank profits at three-year peak

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Banking profits rose to a three-year high in 1991, despite the persistence of problems at some large banks, according to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The nation's 12,000 banks earned $18.6 billion last year, up 15 percent from 1990, the agency said Monday in a preview of a report due out later this week. It was the best since banks earned $24.8 billion in 1988.

"That's not bad, all things considered. Definitely last year was a turnaround year for banking," said economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates Inc. in West Chester, Pa. "I think the worst is over for most banks."

However, the industry total obscured the picture of a business in which the rich got richer — helped by lower interest rates — and the poor got poorer.

For the industry as a whole, a key measure of profitability, return on assets, edged higher, from 0.49 percent in 1990 to around 0.55 percent last year, FDIC Chairman William Taylor said.

Twenty-three of the 50 largest banks had a healthy return on assets of 0.90 percent or better, he said in a speech to the Institute of International Bankers. Eleven lost money.

"You've got a very, very large chunk of the industry earning quite a bit of money, actually more than has historically been the case," he said.

"More sobering, a significant portion of the industry is not doing well at all. ... To put it another way, the winners are winning big and the losers are losing big," he said.

Because the prices of Treasury debt rise as interest rates fall, banks were able to earn $3 billion from securities sales in 1991 compared with $482 million a year earlier.

Operating income, which excludes profits from securities sales, fell slightly, to $14.8 billion from $15 billion.

"For all the pain and strain in '91, that's not so bad," Taylor said.

But he acknowledged that the average size of troubled banks has increased "in a pretty sizable fashion."

X-rays show four mummies were normal folks

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Four mummies in the Smithsonian Institution apparently were from the Egyptian elite thousands of years ago and probably enjoyed easy, comfortable but rather short lives, according to new X-ray studies.

The mummies, a woman, two men and a child, were put through a series of X-ray exams at George Washington University Hospital. Experts said evidence from their skeletons suggests they were healthy, well-fed and apparently not overworked during their lives along the Nile.

The skeletons, lacking the strips of cloth expected in the classical image of mummies, were laid out in boxes and atop tables in the hospital's radiology department.

"These people were all of the middle to high status," said Dave Hunt of the Smithsonian. This is evident, he said, by the fact that all went through the elaborate and detailed mummification of the upper crust of Egyptian society.

The process caused their skin to turn a leathery brown, shrink and harden on their skeletons. The bones, for the most part, are well preserved. The mummies grin at the world with perfectly aligned teeth in noseless, eyeless skulls.

One has arms crossed at the chest, while the others lie with arms at their sides.

Some of the specimens have breaks caused by handling since their removal from Egyptian tombs many years ago, Hunt said, but all of their bones were intact in life and give no indication of the injury or disease that killed them.

"There is no evidence that they were in bad health," Hunt said. "All are nutritionally sound."

Nor is there evidence that three adults ever had to work very hard. There is none of the bulky bones, small fractures or wearing skeletal injuries expected from prolonged physical exertion.

The only female in the group has the bones of a woman who died in her late 20s.

designated on the National Historic Register and an area beyond the historic district. He has tentatively dubbed the area Old Sanford. Duany has already said that codes are necessary to preserve the flavor of both the commercial and the residential historic districts.

"The issue is affordability," Charles Rowe, president of the Community Improvement Association of Sanford, Inc., formerly Georgetown Community Improvement, said. "My feeling is that the association would be in favor of any codes that would aggregate improve the area without imposing any economic hardship," he added.

"We want to see what Mr. Duany is coming up with before we make a decision, but we feel that many in the Georgetown area can't come up to codes. I know some personally who can't," Bernard Mitchell, vice president of the CIA said.

Trust member Laura Strachla said she felt codes Duany will introduce may include guidelines on maintenance of a historic home, landscaping and upgrading existing structures.

"We all know that just maintaining property is expensive, but we feel some things need to be required. The codes will address things like boards falling down that are not replaced, using inferior materials, structures that need to be painted and the type of boards needed to build a porch. These are just examples," Strachla said. "He will also address codes for new structures built in the historic area."

Olinger said Trust members understand finances are an issue.

"We don't want to step on any toes. We want to be sensitive to their needs. We feel Georgetown has a lot to offer historically, but we can't afford to scrap the whole project," Olinger said.

Olinger has already discussed the issue with Duany, who outlined the possibility of "zoning skin codes" where layers of codes, some stricter than others, would apply in different areas. Mitchell said he did not favor different codes for different areas.

"If you have it enforced in one area and less in another area, that's wrong. It should be zone wide."

A second possibility would be the exclusion of Georgetown from the plan if Georgetown residents feel they do not want to participate. Mitchell confirmed that when Duany's plan becomes public, the CIA will personally survey those affected by it in Georgetown.

"Whatever the citizens want. We'll call a special meeting to survey them and see," Mitchell said.

Both Olinger and Rowe hope the issue can be settled in favor of a better city.

"We have to accommodate the people who are already here but we don't want to upgrade half way. We want to develop our own sense of who we are. We are not Winter Park, not are we trying to be. But we want the historic area to be better. Duany is helping us draw from positive characteristics already here. We're offering it to them (Georgetown residents) and we welcome them, but they are not obligated if it would create a hardship," Olinger said.

The streak lives on

Braden, Freeman five-hit DeLand, Tribe wins 6-3

From Staff Reports

DELAND — Doing what it takes to win.

Despite being mired in a hitting slump the Seminole High School varsity baseball team continued to find ways to score runs Monday and the result was win number 14 without a loss as the Tribe bested DeLand 6-3.

Sophomore righthander Todd Braden continued his hot pitching, combining with Matt Freeman on a five-hitter. Braden pitched five innings to improve his record to 5-0 while Freeman pitched two shutout innings to pick up his first save of the year.

"For the third straight game we didn't hit," said Seminole assistant coach Rod Ferguson. "But we used pitching and defense to keep the streak going. I just hope we can keep it going a little longer. We should have a real good test Wednesday against Lake Mary."

Seminole will look to go 3-0 in the Seminole Athletic Conference Wednesday when they host the Rams at 3:30 p.m. at Seminole Field.

Pitching and defense has been the main reason for the Tribe's undefeated season. After Monday's game Seminole has scored 88 runs (6.3 runs per game) while allowing only 38 (2.7 per game).

The defense has committed only 15 errors in the 14 games while the team E.R.A. (Earned Run Average) is a paltry 1.88.

Seminole made the most of their hits Monday as they scored the six runs with only four hits.

The Tribe got on the board first by putting a two spot on the board in the second inning. Tony Duncan led off with a single and advanced to third as John Langering and Phillip King both walked. Scott Ferguson then tapped a ball between the mound and first base that the pitcher couldn't handle and Duncan scored. David Eckstein then doubled in the second run.

Seminole took a 3-0 lead in the third when Anthony Roberts reached on an error, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a ground ball by Deny Beaton.

The Bulldogs cut the lead to 3-2 with a pair of runs in the bottom of the third, but the Tribe got one run back in the top of the fourth.

Despite some helpful advice from Seminole Community College head coach Jack Pantelias, Joey Golinski could not get a hit as the Raiders dropped a 3-2 decision to Western New England College from Massachusetts at Raider Field Monday afternoon. Golinski did reach base twice as he drew a walk and was hit by a pitch.

SCC opens homestand with loss

SANFORD — No hitting on offense and errors and walks on defense are a bad combination for a baseball team.

That scenario was played out at Raider Field Monday afternoon with Western New England College of Massachusetts being the recipient of the gifts in a 3-2 victory over homesteading Seminole Community College.

SCC only committed three errors, but two led to a run. See SCC, Page 2B

'Boys' topple Rummel, league lead up for grabs

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — It's a race again.

Ken Rummel, Chevrolet could have clinched at least a tie for the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Monday Night Polar Bear Super C League with a victory, but the Boomtown Boys weren't ready to quit and edged the league leaders 6-5 in eight innings at Chase Park.

Ken Rummel's nearest competitors also won Monday night throwing the league into a four team race with two weeks remaining in the regular season.

Steve Arthur's one out single in the bottom of the eighth inning scored Jeff Belle with the winning run as the Boomtown Boys ended Rummel's six game winning streak.

In the other games, Lake Mary Pub scored four runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to outscore the Wrecking Crew 13-10 and Cafe Sorrento scored 12 runs in its final two at bats to defeat Sladek's Sluggers 13-7.

Ken Rummel still leads with a 6-2 record, but Lake Mary Pub is just a game back at 5-3 and Cafe Sorrento and the Boomtown Boys are both still alive at 4-4. Sladek's Sluggers (3-5) and the Wrecking Crew (2-6) trail the leaders.

Next week, Cafe Sorrento and the Wrecking Crew play at 6:30 p.m., the Boomtown Boys take on Sladek's Sluggers at 7:30 p.m. and Lake Mary Pub looks for a tie for the lead against Ken Rummel at 8:30 p.m.

The game was just the first of a busy seven game week for SCC. The week starts a schedule that will see the locals play 14 of their next 16 games at home. few Lake Mary made each one count for at least one run. The Rams got on the board at the bottom of the first inning when Scott Johnston walked and scored on a double to left center field by Chad Ebbert. Lake Mary increased the lead to 3-0 in the fourth when Ebbert reached on an error. Pinch runner Dan Anson stole second and went to third on a ground out by Chris Barfield. Mike Werner then walked and Hudick hit a bloop over the shortstop's head to score Anson with Werner going to third. Werner then scored on a successful squeeze bunt by Matt Greene. The Buccaneers scored a pair of unearned runs in the fifth to cut the lead to 3-2 but the Rams answered with three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to seal the win. Barfield and Werner led off the inning by being hit by pitches. Hudick walked to load the bases and Greene singled to score Barfield. Dan McGathin then hit an RBI Sacrifice fly and Brian Milner walked before T.J. Hamilton reached on an error on the second baseman that scored Hudick.

Plan protection against violence

DEAR MARY: I've got a problem I can't talk to anybody about because I'm afraid of what might happen to the kids and me if I do. When my husband drinks too much, somebody in our family gets hurt. Very often it is me because I try to reason with him and get him to stop picking on the kids. He blames us for his behavior and thinks he has good reasons for pushing, shoving, choking, or hitting us with his fists.

I keep hoping and praying he will see what he's doing and stop before someone finds out and IRS comes and takes our kids. I'm ashamed to talk about this with anyone because everyone thinks we are the "perfect" family.

If only he could control his

DRUG COUNSELOR

temper when he's drinking everything would be OK. How can I convince him that he needs to work on this?

SCARED MOM

DEAR MOM: You need to be scared. You and your children are living in a dangerous and potentially fatal situation. Your most important concern must be to seek protection for yourself and your kids. Research on domestic violence shows that witnessing violence may be just as emotionally and psychologically damaging to a child as if (s)he was actually the victim of the abuse.

You must make your plan for getting protection while you are not upset. Decide where you can go for protection at any time of the day or night. Domestic violence incidents may be weeks or months apart, but once the pattern is established, they will recur.

You will have to decide for yourself whether to discuss your plan with your husband. If you decide to do so, only approach him when he is sober. Do not attempt to warn him if you think his reaction will be violent. Don't allow yourself to deny the danger you and your children are in. Abusive incidents may be fairly infrequent initially, but the pattern is that they become both more frequent and severe over time. The only way you can help your husband face the problem is to make him responsible and accountable for the consequences of his behavior.

The 24-hour Spouse Abuse hotline for Seminole County is 740-0017.

Mary Balk is a certified counselor with the Drug Prevention Office of the Seminole County School District. Write to her in care of the Herald at 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, 32771.

Mom gets jabs for letting son off hook

DEAR ABBY: I enjoy your column and usually agree with your advice, but today I disagreed so completely, I had to write. I refer to the letter signed "Don's Mother." It seems Don (age 14) was with some kids who were throwing rocks at passing cars, and when the police knocked on his mother's door, asking if her son had been with the rock-throwing kids, she told the police that her son had been home with her for several hours and could not possibly have been with those boys.

Then she wrote to you, saying she felt guilty for having lied, and you said: "Don't be so hard on yourself; you did what most mothers would have done — instinctively — to protect their children. However, had you let Don take his lumps from the police, it may have been a valuable learning experience. Tell him you'll never let him do that again, and insist that he avoid hanging out with kids who have to run from the police."

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Abby, a better solution would have been for Don's mother to have matched her son down to the police station and stood beside him while he confessed. That way, both mother and son would have felt good about their honesty. Parents should use every opportunity to teach by example.

Sorry, Abby, you deserve a wet noodle swat for that one.

JEANNINE MILNE, IONEOYE FALLS, N.Y.
DEAR JEANNINE: A wet noodle is far too gentle. Try a 2-by-4.

Anger over sex crimes focuses on castration

Associated Press

Men wince at the word. It evokes images of eunuchs and castrato choirs, Nazi Germany and Sigmund Freud. But castration has been hauled into public discourse by a judge who ordered it performed on a child molester.

District Judge Mike McSpadden of Houston saw it as a solution to one of society's most vexing problems, sexual assault. While some people agreed, others saw it as barbaric, freakish, cruel and unnecessary.

It's an old debate, one that goes back to at least the 1850s in this country. By the middle of this century, it was mostly discredited, but there has been a revival of discussion — and now, apparently, action — in the past couple of years.

McSpadden, in his decision last week, did not impose the surgery on an unwilling subject. Steven Allen Butler said he preferred to have his testicles removed than face trial for the rape of a 13-year-old girl. The crime carried the possibility of a life sentence. Instead, Butler will be placed on a form of probation for 10 years.

In agreeing to the plea bargain, McSpadden apparently was counting on the procedure to deflate Butler's sex drive and aggressiveness. That assumption underlies most of the attempts to make castration a part of the judicial process.

The testicles produce much, though not all, of a man's testosterone, the main hormone fueling the male sex drive. Without them, a man can still have an erection and still have sex. But his desire for it may decline dramatically.

He does not, as folklore would have it, suddenly gain a soprano voice. That is the result of castrating boys who have not yet reached puberty, a practice that produced the famous castrato singers of the 17th and 18th centuries.

According to researcher Philip Reilly, executive director of the Shriver Center for Mental Retardation in Massachusetts, castration was widely discussed in this country in the 1850s.

Rick Higley, Lester Henderson, Gordon Thaxton and manager Cal Letchworth, of McMullen Oil are ready to help your business.

How McMullen Oil Company Can Help Your Business

You are a business with big jobs, big machines and big problems. You need high quality fuel and lubricants to keep those big machines going. You need fast, friendly answers to all of your questions. Where do you turn? You turn to a business with sixty years of experience and the desire to help you with your big problems. McMullen Oil Company.

"Who is McMullen Oil Company?" you ask. "If they've been around for sixty years, how come I've never heard of them before?" Because McMullen is the new kid on the block, so to speak. In Sanford, Paul McMullen, owner of McMullen Oil Company, of Clearwater, opened up his second location, located at 409 Laurel Avenue, in November of 1991. The Harvey company was, as McMullen is, a Chevron jobber of diesel fuel, gasoline, kerosene and lubricants for commercial, industrial and farm accounts. The history of the company stretches back to 1925 when Chevron was known as the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky. Earl Higginbotham was the agent from 1948 to 1987, then W.T. Harvey and now, McMullen. But even though McMullen is new to Sanford, McMullen Oil has been located in Clearwater since the 1930's.

Add all of this history together with the combined experience of all of the McMullen Oil employees and you end up with a lot of people who know a lot about grease!

Cal Letchworth heads up the crew of Gordon Thaxton, Rick Higley and Lester Henderson. Henderson came to Sanford in 1965, and went to work for Earl Higginbotham. He has 44 years of experience Thaxton has 46 years, Letchworth, 11 years, and Higley, 5 years.

What does all of this mean to you, the business with big machines and big problems? It means you can depend on a company to supply all of your needs. McMullen carries Delo H.D. oils, Ultra Duty grease, Arco prime white mineral oils, Atlas Automotive products, Baldwin filters, mineral spirits, aviation, hydraulic and other industrial oils. For the month of March, McMullen is offering full strength antifreeze/coolant for $3.50 per gallon or $3.00 per gallon if you buy 36 cases.

"Quality Chevron products. And service before and after the sale. It's the way I run my business. And the way I can help you run yours." McMullen Oil Company, located at 409 Laurel Avenue, Sanford, is open from 8:00 AM to 5:00 PM Monday through Friday. Or give them a call at 322-6560.

Do calcium deposits in lungs need treatment?

DEAR DR. GOTT: What causes calcium deposits in the lungs? Is there a cure, or can I expect the condition to get progressively worse with time?

DEAR READER: As a defense mechanism, the body deposits calcium at the sites of inflammation. The calcium walls off the inflammation and may prevent contamination of surrounding tissues. Sometimes the calcium deposits cause more trouble than the inflammation itself; for example, calcific deposits in tendons often cause severe pain. Lymph glands can also calcify. Such a reaction is common in the lungs and usually results from old, burned-out infection, such as tuberculosis and fungus inflammation. These deposits are not painful and are usually discovered accidentally in a chest X-ray. The calcium itself needs no treatment and progresses slowly, if at all. The important consideration is to make sure there is no active infection needing antibiotic therapy.

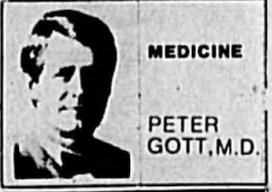

Therefore, if your doctors have checked you for active infection (with blood tests and sputum analyses), you can safely disregard the calcifications in your lungs. Of course, this is a general answer; you must ask your doctor's advice about your particular case. Although calcium deposits do not cause disease, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease."

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from impotence, borderline glaucoma (treated with pilocarpine and Timoptic) and have been on liquid antacids for five years. Is there any connection between my impotence and the other problems I have?

DEAR READER: Impotence is not a consequence of glaucoma per se. Nor does it follow digestive problems, for which — I gather — you are using antacids. Impotence is usually caused by arteriosclerotic blockages in the circulation to the genitals and by certain medicines. Timoptic is one.

Until fairly recently, doctors did not believe that eye drops affected the body's other organs. Clearly, however, some medicines — notably beta-blockers such as Timoptic — do affect more than the eyes. For example, Timoptic can lower the blood pressure and the pulse rate; it has been reported to cause impotence.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

For the second Bois Bridge Tip of the week, we turn to a former European champion, Anders Brunzell of Sweden. His recommendation applies to all hands, but he focuses on a deal in which North (who becomes dummy) thinks for a long time before bidding a game. Your initial reaction is that he is overbidding, hoping for the best. But after you lead, you see that he was actually contemplating a slam. With all that high-card power in the dummy, you are sure the contract is laydown. However, don't fall asleep. There might be one chance to defeat the contract, and you mustn't miss it.

Cover the East and South cards in the diagram. As partner didn't double the Stayman inquiry, you guess to lead the diamond five, hoping to find partner's suit. The 15 points on the table are a shock; you were expecting far fewer. At trick one, declarer plays low from dummy and captures your partner's nine with his ace. Do you see any chance for the defense?

At the table, South calmly led a low spade at trick two, but West couldn't believe that he had found such a successful lead. Almost by reflex, he played low. Dummy's spade jack won the trick and South tabled his cards, claiming nine tricks: one spade, three hearts, one diamond and four clubs.

If West had kept the faith, he would have won with the spade ace and led another diamond. True, that defense isn't guaranteed to defeat the contract, but at worst it will cost only an overtrick.

Never get depressed by a powerful dummy. Keep looking for a chance to kill the contract.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 11, 1992

A number of interesting changes, both socially and materially, could be in the offing in the year ahead. You're in an interesting cycle with all types of beneficial linkage.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unless you set a shining example, don't expect business associates to behave the way you desire. They will emulate your standards. Pisces, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Pisces' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Individuals you're involved with today won't tolerate heavy-handed tactics. Use procedures that are fair but firm, and be considerate of others' feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Things should work out well for you today, provided your expectations are reasonable.

This is not a day when you are apt to get something for nothing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your efforts will be well-coordinated and effective today, but only up to a point. Problems could develop through impulsiveness, just when you're close to fulfilling your objectives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Situations can be adjusted to your satisfaction today — if you keep an open mind. Feelings of unfairness that you project on others could be your own creations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you're involved in an arrangement with a friend today that requires an investment on behalf of both parties, be extremely careful. There's a possibility someone will feel put upon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Endeavors you personally manage have good chances for success today. However, if you have to share your authority with another, problems could develop.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Serious matters should be treated with the respect they deserve today. If left unresolved, they could later rear their ugly heads and cause you considerable inconvenience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Warning signals are up today where joint ventures are concerned. This could be especially true if you have to gamble on someone to do something that you can't do yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're an effective strategist today, but you might not be as equally competent where execution is concerned. If you have a good game plan, follow it to the letter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You should be rather adroit at managing your material affairs today, but your performance isn't apt to be as impressive where human relationships are concerned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's a best to do without today rather than knowingly make a bum deal with strings attached in order to get something you think you need right now. Be patient.
