Bathing Suit Straps

Whether it is a resumption of the suntan craze, or a realization of the health giving qualities of warm sunshine, or financial conditions whereby large numbers of persons have lost their shirts, we do not know, but the bathing suit situation seems to be kicking up more than any ordinary rumpus this winter.

This morning we noticed that twelve persons have been hailed into court at Miami Beach for not keeping their shoulder straps up, and a few days ago we read that a policeman, in attempting to arrest a bather for what the policeman thought was indecent exposure, was set upon by four or five other bathers, severely pummeled and finally thrown into the sea.

We suppose it is a very difficult matter to please everyne in such regulations. What is indecent in one place is one in such regulations. What is indecent in one place is not indecent in another. What would be insufficient clothing on one person might not be offensive on another.

The prize fighter before the eyes of thousands steps into the ring with nothing on but trunks and no one is shocked.

Yet, if he walked down First Street in the same condition, he might start a riot.

In the matter of bathing suits it does seem as if some line of demarkation might be set, with the agreement if not the complete satisfaction, of all, establishing exactly where salubrity ends and indecency begins. Certainly there should be some specific understanding about it, as the embarrassment which an arrest causes is likely to far exceed the shock of a hairy chest.

It seems to us that if men were allowed to wear trunks acceed the shock of a hairy chest.

It seems to us that if men were allowed to wear trunks of the beach, but were forbidden to wear them away from the beach, on the atreets, in nearby stores and lunch rooms, there should be no complaint either from the sun bather of the prude. The former will not find sunlight rays in a tench room, and the latter should wear sun glasses on the latter should wear sun glasses on the should try to believe in his elected public officials and should give them a chance. Advertising Pays

The big question being asked by everyone who visits Miami this winter is "How do they do it," meaning, to be more explicit, how does Miami, in the face of an intensified business depression, manage to attract such throngs to her confines that the city has taken on a boom time appear-

One answer to this question might be that former corbitant hotel and apartment rates have come down to a very same and reasonable level, that prices for food have seen reduced to the point where one does not feel like tricity. There was a lot of exciteamusement prices are within the reach of almost every one. It might also be added that lower transportation the roar of the motorcycles and the yelling I did not even hear the shots. buccaneer's victim when ordering a good steak, and that ment going on anyhow, and with costs are contributing their bit.

However, all these explanations could be applied to other towns which are not basking in the same good fortune as Miami. The real reason for the Magic City's extraordinary success in attracting tourists is its unbounded faith in the efficacy of advertising and publicity. It has always been so, yes, to such an extent that Miami today is the best advertised city in America.

Mami is so well advertised that people in the North, winter tourist resort, so strong has been the power of suggestion contained in countless advertisements and reams of gestion contained in countless advertisements and reams of gestion contained in countless advertisements and reams of the habots.
