

Writer Huxley Visits America On Lecture Tour

NEW YORK, Feb. 13. (AP)—One day in 1882, Oscar Wilde and his curly locks arrived in America to announce cheerfully: "We have everything in common, except language."

Since his time British authors by the score have crossed the Atlantic to observe their American cousins and to reap the harvest of an American lecture tour.

Unusual in that procession is a man whose brilliant and bitter words of the post-war years condemn an era. The man is Aldous Huxley, author of "Antic Hay" and "Point Counterpoint." He, too, is here to lecture, but with a difference.

A grandson of the famous 19th century scientist who wrote "Man's Place in Nature," Huxley is looking to discover contemporary man's place in a universe of conflicting ideas. In "Antic Hay and Means" his most recent book, he sums up his hopes and fears for civilization. What America is accomplishing interests him deeply, and he has been spending his time between lectures inspecting the TVA and other large-scale projects, and reading American books like "The Folklore of Capitalism" and "Middlemarch," the study of a typical American town.

He was in the lobby of his hotel when the interviewer appeared. He explained that his room was in disarray and that the interviewer could take place in the lounge on the 30th floor. It was early in the morning, and there wouldn't be anyone around, he said.

The interview began with mention of "Ends and Means." "Every age," he said, "thinks it is the worst, but this time it would appear to be true because of the acceleration of change. There is a real science of change, a normal process, but if you go faster than that you have to use violence—and probably defeat your own ends doing it."

Tall, almost willowy in his tallness, with black hair in which thin silver is barely discernible, he speaks in a soft, clear voice, wielding his spectacles as a prop for emphasis. With characteristic humor he says:

"People who talk may do more harm than good. They preach ideas which sort of float around on the ceiling. The danger is that verbal idealism may become a vaccine against activity or reforming action. Having talked about it, men think they have done enough."

Passionately against war, he believes that war will be with us until people, collectively, wish to put an end to it. He feels contempt for those "desperately conservative" people of 30, who have arteriosclerosis of the mind.

"Universal technological changes have imposed psychological changes," he explains. "Yet there are people who are not conscious of change, who attack to the folklore of our existence. It shows at any rate

Housewives Of America Move To Label Fabrics

Result Of Action Focuses Attention On Woolen Goods

By ADELAIDE KERR

Housewives of America are backing a movement to have the fabrics they wear labeled as to content in a manner similar to classifications required by the pure food laws. As a result of their action, attention of the fashion world is focused for the moment on woolen goods.

Recently the General and New York City Federation of Women's Clubs asked the Federal Trade Commission to call a trade practices conference for wool.

"We regard rules which adequately inform women regarding the kind of raw materials used in wool fabrics, and, in fact, in all kinds of fabrics, as important in the influence on their lives as are the pure food and drug laws," said Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation.

"There is great confusion in the public mind between virgin wool, which is new wool that has never been used before, and reclaimed wool, which, in the majority of cases, is made from worn rags or old clothes, and which in the process of picking to pieces and re-weaving loses a great deal of its strength and much of its protective qualities against climatic conditions."

One of the first goals the federation seeks, Mrs. Lawson says, is the setting up of a legal differentiation between virgin wool and reclaimed wool. She asserts that quantities of fabrics marketed as wool contain little or no virgin wool. The federation, she explained, did not want to stop the use of reclaimed wool, but simply to have it identified as such.

Differences Explained

Julius Fortmann, veteran wool fabric manufacturer, a leading advocate of the labeling of wool fabrics, said recently:

"There is a decided difference between virgin and reclaimed wool. Virgin wool has greater warmth, elasticity, and wearability. Reclaimed wool does not hold its shape and is apt to be more flimsy. It is important that the poor woman, to whom pennies count, should be able to know which she is buying. The average buyer, however, is unable to tell the difference between the two."

The Federal Trade Commission is expected to call a hearing on wool soon.

The action of women's clubs on wool is in line with a general campaign for "marks in fabrics" they have conducted for a decade. In October, 1936, the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs asked the Federal Trade Commission to adopt measures to assure "fair competitive identification of fibers." This appeal was followed by a trade commission investigation resulting in the famous "rayon rules" of October, 1937.

By these, all rayon fabrics or garments made from them must be labeled "rayon." Thus taffeta, chiffon, crepe, velvet, etc., containing rayon fibers or dresses made from these materials must now be labeled and sold as "rayon taffeta" or "rayon crepe" instead of simply "taffeta" or "crepe." Terms associated in the public mind with fabrics which are likewise made of silk, wool, linen or cotton.

By the same rules, fabrics made partly of rayon and partly of other materials, such as wool or silk, must be labeled by designations such as "rayon and wool" or "wool and rayon," depending on the proportionate amounts of each.

The materials which will make the new spring clothes are interesting in weave and color. The smartest wools feature homespun and tweed-like weaves. In soft muted colors as tones and shades.

Rayons and silks appear in smooth textured weaves, ribbed and twills and in a variety of smart patterns of prints, stripes and floral designs. New cloths, colored with a batik-like finish are expected to appear in sports clothes.

BABY BURBANK

Every child, at some time or other, should plant something for himself, even if it is only a flower, water and care for it, and watch it grow. There is a certain appreciation of the earth and its life that can come only after an experience of this kind.

Clare Foster, Jr., when a 4-year-old genius of Arvada, Colorado, tried out such an experiment of his own accord, when he was less than two years of age. Clare is truly a "Baby Burbank," and gives excellent promise of filling the shoes of the late plant wizard.

Building blocks, trains, airplanes and other toys so admired by the average boy, have all been discarded by Clare. In their place, he has rare but special flowers, pots, seed catalogs, and the like. Instead of the usual boyhood pranks, he plays pranks on Mother Nature, for he has already experimented with grafting and its attendant mysteries.

On his 4th Christmas Clare was presented with a huge fernery, one half the size of an ordinary fernery, and filled with rare botanical specimens, rare coral, the geranium family, and varieties of ferns claim his deepest interest.

Another Christmas present was a glass flower pot, but "it isn't any good," said Clare, "the roots have to have air, and glass or paint keeps it out."

To keep up his strong love for plants of all kinds, Clare has an excellent memory, and can recognize and call by their scientific name, more than 500 uncommon specimens, most of which the average adult doesn't even know exist!

He was born in Denver, but his family recently moved to Arvada. In his new home, he has a garden filled with specimens of nearly every plant that will grow there.

Fruit Of Christian Living Is Preached

Love is the fruit of Christian living, which Christ desired of his followers, the Rev. John B. Williams said last night at the Presbyterian Church in the evangelistic services now being held there. Evangelist Williams based his sermon on the text Matthew XXII:9. "And when he saw a fig tree in the way, he came over to it and found nothing thereon but leaves only and said unto it, 'Let no fruit grow on thee henceforth forever.' And presently the fig tree withered away."

"Spiritual love alone can produce fruit," the evangelist said. "Without love in the heart, life is found barren and fruitless. What will you show Christ when he turns the searchlight on you? He and demands fruit? On Sunday you may go to church, make liberal contributions, sing in the choir, but Christ will not accept these things for fruit—they are leaves only. He will say, 'I want fruit! You will find yourself in a present position unless your life has the spiritual love abounding in it, which Christ lived and died, that planted you in creation for love and love alone. Is your love reaching depth of spirituality?"

The subject for the address tomorrow night is "The Bearing of the Yoke" which is said to be one of the most impressive passages to be heard here, it was announced this morning.

Psychiatrist Says Rough Treatment Good For Children

By Associated Press

If Bobby is an A student at school, always comes home to meals on time, and goes to bed willingly by his parents, may hold him up as a model, but it doesn't necessarily indicate Bobby will become a college professor—or even a bank president.

If he had a few difficulties while he was growing up Bobby probably would be better prepared for life. Soon enough he'll be out in the cold, hard world, where no one is going to soften the way for him.

Fall And Go Boom

That's the opinion of Dr. Thomas F. Bamford, Jr., psychiatrist in charge of work with problem children in the Fordham University department of psychology.

Dr. Bamford says: "The first time Bobby falls down, it will really be a case of 'fall down and go boom.' He won't be able to pick himself up. When he's completely shot emotionally, he'll look to a psychiatrist for aid, when his childhood should already have prepared him to slant off hard knocks."

Dr. Bamford may sound pretty hard boiled, but he's watched plenty of children of all ages, and thinks that a few failures in early life are good for the average youngster.

When he says "failures" he means things like these:

Falling down while learning to walk and not being consoled or helped to get up.

Kicked Around

Getting knocked about in football games and tussles "good for him" to take it, says Dr. Bamford. School difficulties—reporting to the principal, now and again is good for him. Criticism from high school will come eventually, says our psychiatrist.

In fact, Dr. Bamford makes parents of model children feel awfully nervous about their offspring.

"The child who always does as he's told," he asserts, "is worse than the child who breaks a few toys and hits a couple of playmates now and then."

"Why is he worse? Because he always escapes the attention of guidance authorities and yet may be as disturbed psychologically as his rambunctious friends. Model children don't disturb their parents."

AZALEA FESTIVAL BEAUTY ENTRY

Miss Mary Elizabeth Ryan, freshman at the Florida State College for Women, has been named to represent the Palatka Junior Chamber of Commerce as a beauty contestant to be held at the Ravine Gardens there Sunday afternoon, Feb. 20. The beauty contest will be held in conjunction with the Azalea Festival at the gardens which will climax a two day mid-winter conference of Jaycees from all sections of Florida. More than a score of Florida's most beautiful girls are expected to represent various Jaycee chapters of the state in the beauty contest.

Veterinarians of Kansas State college have discovered that a cat's murring does not come from the larynx and may be a vibration of the soft palate.

To Please Mother

In other words, obedience, as well as the other virtues of childhood, can be over-emphasized. Dr. Bamford thinks a child should learn to do the thing because he gets pleasure out of doing it right, not because someone tells him to do it. But doing it wrong is part of learning to do it right.

Dr. Bamford's biggest worry is the child who obeys to please his mother.

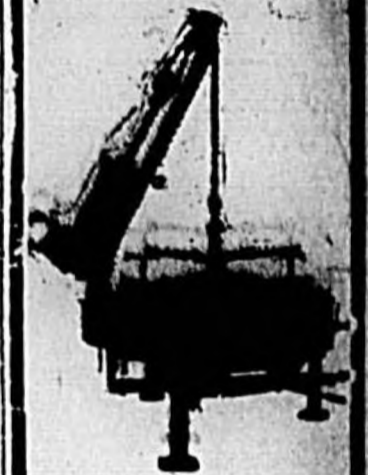

He thinks the mother who is constantly saying: "Now hang up your coat to please Mother. Don't play with that rough little boy across the street, to please Mother..." should be outlawed from society.

In 1929 there were 518 persons with a net income of a million a year, or all time high.

army and navy. Stalin's declarations were made in a letter in Pravda, the party organ, written in response to a question of a young communist league agitator who asked him whether the final victory of socialism could be considered won.

"The aid of the international proletariat appears to be a force without which the final victory of socialism in one country is not to be decided," he declared.

He did not say whether he had in mind collaboration with foreign labor parties, non-communist as well as communist, nor did he mention communism as a source of the overthrow of capitalism in other countries.

"Of course," Stalin said, "it doesn't mean that we must sit with folded arms awaiting help from the outside.

"On the contrary, the aid of the international proletariat should be joined with our work for increasing the defense capacity of our country, of strengthening the Red Army and the Red Navy, the mobilization of the whole country and with our struggle against armed attacks and attempts to restore bourgeois connections."

The first stage of socialism's victory in Russia has been won, Stalin wrote, "by liquidation of the Bourgeoisie." He said the exiled Leon Trotsky and others who advocated international revolution had been shown to be wrong.

He added, however, that the second problem, that of foreign relations and guarantees against military invasion and restoration of capitalism, had not been solved.

Since Russia is surrounded by capitalist countries, some of which are hostile, he wrote, "We say honestly and openly that the victory of socialism in our country is not yet complete."

Borah, republican Idaho and others had contended.

The bill provides fines and imprisonment for police officers who fail to make diligent efforts to prevent lynchings. Counties in which lynchings occurred would be liable for damages, the money to go to the victim's relatives.

Lewis said the bill must be considered as being "a proceeding on behalf of the people." The government has power, he said, to legislate for the public welfare.

In a forceful speech Senator Milton, democrat, Indiana, told the senate that the doctrine of dual sovereignty of the states and federal government does not apply to the fourteenth amendment guaranteeing the rights of individuals.

Senator Ellender, democrat, Texas, leader of southerners who have been filibustering against the bill for 27 days, predicted again that today's effort to shut off debate would fail.

Senator Ellender, democrat, Louisiana, read to the senate, as a part of his filibustering against the bill, a record of arrests for violent crimes and robberies in Jacksonville, Fla. and Charleston, S. C.

Beautiful HIALEAH PARK

Paddock Lawn and Walking Ring

Recently a group of men—famous in American business and sports life visited Hialeah Park for the first time. All were extravagant in their praise of its beauty—the character and conduct of its racing—the dignity and refinement of its atmosphere. One of them whose name is known in every American household turned to another and said, "Certainly, Mr. Widener has built here no less than the 'Eighth Wonder of the World'. I have visited racing plants everywhere but I have never seen such a magnificent establishment as this."

Such genuine praise, coming from men who have earned the respect of the nation has been one of the objectives of our efforts for the past five years.

The other has been to produce a worthwhile revenue to the State. Last year Hialeah Park paid to the State Comptroller for distribution to the sixty-seven counties of Florida, $677,912.96. This year's total will be much greater.

In all respects we feel that Hialeah Park has fulfilled the pledges it made when it was granted a racing permit.
