Watching Without Paying: A Million Cable TV Thieves

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

More than a million Americans are watching free cable television, depriving the nation's cable industry of hundreds of millions of dollars in potential revenues.

In Seminole County, the cable companies are fighting back.

Cable pirates are people, who through either their own skills or those of others out for hire, have their sets illegally hooked into the cables outside their homes or apartments.

Cathy Thorsen, special projects coordinator for Orange-Seminole

Cablevision, says her company has stepped up its campaign against thefts of its service by an on-going detection process and vigorous prosecution of violators.

"We are going out and checking all addresses in our service area and monitoring those receiving a signal, but not paying for it," she said. "We compare our records and find out if they are not paying. We can tell at the source of our connection, we don't need to check electronically or go in the house. It is causing people to stop and think twice and consequently the problem has decreased."

The company gets some unsolicited aid in its fight against the cable pirates from people who don't appreciate their neighbors getting the free, albeit illegal, service while they have to pay for it. They also get mad when the illegal taps cause their signal to be weakened or interrupted, Ms. Thorsen said.

Cable pirating is a crime and violators can be fined up to $1,000 or three times the damages that the company proves were caused.

"Orange-Seminole Cable Television provides quality programming and expects to get paid for it," Ms. Thorsen said. The company has prosecuted two motels in civil suits for connecting one room to cable and illegally wiring the rest of the rooms into the system. In one case, the motel settled out of court for $10,000 and in the other a $1,000 judgement was received, said Ms. Thorsen.

Orange-Seminole is in the process of prosecuting another motel and an individual for cable pirating.

Storer Cable Communications, which serves Altamonte Springs, Lake Mary and some unincorporated areas of the county, so far has not prosecuted anyone locally, but they have in other areas the company serves, according to local system manager Carol Joyner.

"Sometimes it is just ignorance on the part of the individual, particularly in an apartment complex," Ms. Joyner said. "Many apartment dwellers are accustomed to a master antenna, so when they move in and the previous resident didn't call to have the cable disconnected, they don't realize they are receiving something they are not entitled to."

She said that Storer personnel continually audit cable customers

Educators Favor Merit Pay...Sort Of

By Micheal Beha
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County School Superintendent Robert Hughes and Seminole Education Association Director Ron Boeth agree that a merit pay program for teachers might be a good thing — under certain conditions.

President Reagan has endorsed the concept of paying outstanding teachers more than their counterparts and the Florida Legislature has been grappling with a merit pay plan.

Hughes said the state Superintendent's Association is on record supporting performance pay if dollars are available.

"But you can't cut out programs," he said. Basic funding for schools should be the prime consideration. If there are surplus funds available after basic needs have been met, then the excess could be spent on teacher incentives.

"It can't be an escape from the reality for responsible funding for all departments," Hughes said.

He said a merit plan must be well defined to be effective. "There are at least 50 kinds of merit pay plans."

Several proposals to reward outstanding teachers were presented to a conference committee of the Legislature. A state Senate plan would reward 1 percent of teachers and administrators with a $5,000 bonus. A state House bill would provide a $5,000 bonus for "master" teachers who score in the top 10 percent on standardized tests and who demonstrate outstanding teaching skills. Teachers scoring in the top 50 percent of those taking the test would receive a $2,000 bonus.

The district currently has some facets of a merit pay plan, Hughes said. Teachers with advanced degrees are paid more than their counterparts with only a bachelor's degree, teachers who supervise clubs and extracurricular activities receive a supplement and department heads receive higher salaries.

Boeth agreed that a merit pay plan isn't unreasonable if teacher salaries are raised to the county's median income level.

"The median income in Seminole County is $23,000," Boeth said. "We're operating 25 percent below the median level."

He said the average teacher's salary in Seminole County is about $18,000.

But Boeth said a merit pay plan would probably not have the desired effect.

"All it will do in Florida is pay a few good teachers more and a few bad teachers less," he said. "Why not just get rid of the bad teachers?"

Boeth said school boards must take responsibility for getting the bad teachers out of the classroom.

"The teachers can't fire them," he said.

Boeth said the state's education association is urging Gov. Bob Graham to veto the Legislature's continuing resolution on education spending. That resolution continues education spending at its present level for the coming year, eliminating any funds for new programs.

"We hope the governor will call the Legislature back for a special session on education in July," he said.

Parks

Where Will The Space Come From In The 1990s?

Seminole County's 13 parks comprise over 800 acres, more than enough space to meet the county's needs through the end of the decade.

But what happens in the 1990s, and in the 21st century? As development increases and the price of land skyrockets, what will the county do for more recreational space?

County planner Tony Vanderworp has a four-pronged solution to the problem:

- 1) The county's existing parks should be developed to their maximum potential
- 2) Multiple use of parks should be encouraged.
- 3) New parks should be developed.

4) The county should get as much use as possible from available resources.

The County Commission has not decided which, if any, of these options to take, and is now studying Vanderworp's report.

The most cost-effective of the four approaches is multiple-use, Vanderworp said. The idea is to utilize land barred from commercial or residential development as passive recreation areas. Water management land, for example, could be turned into hiking trails and picnic areas.

Rights-of-way and other undevelopable land can be turned into recreation areas as well, he said. Property around interstate highways and other expressways can be used for building athletic fields, basketball courts and bike trails.

Vanderworp's report, which has been turned over to the County Commission for study, endorses the state's purchase of Spring Hammock, a natural water storage area between Lake Mary and Longwood. The state is purchasing the land to prevent development which would damage the recharge area.

The county could provide trails and other recreational activities within the area, he said.

Vanderworp said private developers could also use a portion of their developments for recreation. County zoning law already requires builders to set aside a certain portion of a development for recreation areas, but other parcels of land which cannot be used for commercial or residential purposes could also become picnic areas, ball fields or other recreation areas.

That's already being done. The Seminole County School Board has accepted a plan to construct a new playground at Sabal Point Elementary

Sanford Readies For Start Of Amtrak Auto Ferry

Amtrak, a federally-subsidized passenger rail system, will begin its Auto-Ferry service around Oct. 30 using the 1,300-mile Lorton, Va. to Sanford route formally used by the now-defunct Auto-Train.

The Auto-Train service ran between Lorton and Sanford for 10 years before closing May 1, 1981 after the company filed for bankruptcy in September, 1980.

Amtrak officials have already contacted Sanford officials about plans to restart the service and the need to smooth out the railroad crossing at Persimmon Avenue between Fourth and Eighth Streets.

Amtrak is gambling $4.4 million to get terminals and equipment ready to resume the operation with the expectation that they will be able to operate the service more profitably than Auto-Train.

Amtrak officials have said they expect the service to make a profit, thus easing Amtrak's need for federal subsidies.

The nine-member Amtrak Board of Directors backed the Auto-Ferry service concept at its Jan. 19 meeting in Washington, D.C., and on April 21, following the required period for public comment, the board authorized the management to proceed with plans to get the service back on track again.

Officials of Sanford, Lake Mary, Seminole County and the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce have gone on record in support of bringing the Auto-Ferry to Sanford and are among those who have been actively trying to convince Amtrak to locate here where the necessary facilities already exist.

Sanford won out over such cities as Orlando, Jacksonville, and Miami for the ferry's southern terminal.

According to Jack Pridgen, press secretary for U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., Sanford had the inside track from the beginning. Pridgen told the Herald in January that although an agreement had not been finalized between Amtrak and the trustees for Auto-Train Corp., now in receivership, Amtrak's feasibility study for the proposed Auto-Ferry was based only on the Lorton, Va. to Sanford route.

Amtrak is leasing the old Auto-Train Corp terminal in Sanford and the firm's equipment. Preliminary work has begun to get the local terminal back in shape for a revival of the service.

Amtrak had originally hoped to

NATION

IN BRIEF

Court Backs Air Bag Seat Belt Regulation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court has revived chances that air bags or automatic seat belts will be standard equipment in new cars, but the Reagan administration still has the power to block it.

The high court ruled 9-0 Friday the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, after President Reagan took office, illegally killed a rule that would have required the safety equipment in cars beginning September 1981.

Although the ruling technically puts the regulation back on the books, the justices said the traffic safety board is free to rescind the rule again whenever it wants — as long as it cites better reasons than last time.

The Supreme Court Friday ruled the traffic agency acted "arbitrarily and capriciously" when it repealed the safety regulation.

The agency failed to cite solid enough reasons for junking the rule and also failed to consider alternatives, such as requiring only air bags, when it discovered it did not like the type of seat belts designed by the auto industry, the court criticized.

Cuba Travelers Grounded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Regulations prohibiting most American citizens from traveling to Cuba will remain in full force for at least the next few days by order of Supreme Court Justice William Brennan.

Brennan granted a Reagan administration request Friday to temporarily block a lower court ruling that would reopen U.S. tourist travel to the Communist-ruled island in the Caribbean.

Brennan's order stays the appeals court ruling at least until Tuesday, the deadline for both the government and the lawyer for a group of U.S. citizens trying to travel to Cuba to file additional papers in the case.

In papers filed at the high court, Solicitor General Rex Lee argued U.S. foreign policy will suffer "important and irreparable" harm if tourists are permitted to travel to Cuba against President Reagan's wishes.

Shuttle Crew Resting

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Challenger's exuberant astronauts relaxed today after a historic six-day voyage that proved the unique capabilities of the American space program and gave the nation a new heroine.

"The thing I will remember most about that flight is that it was fun," said America's pioneer spaceman Sally Ride. "In fact, I'm sure it was the most fun I will ever have in my life."

Landis, Others Plead Innocent To Movie Site Deaths

By James J. Doyle

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Director John Landis and four assistants pleaded innocent Friday to charges of involuntary manslaughter in the deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two children during filming of the movie "Twilight Zone."

Landis and his colleagues, flanked by attorneys, elbowed their way through a corridor packed with reporters and television cameras to the courtroom to hear charges handed down a week ago.

Landis, who became one of Hollywood's most sought after directors after the smash hit "Animal House," and the other were released on their own recognizance after the brief arraignment hearing.

Ironically, the arraignment was held the day the "Twilight Zone" made its nationwide premiere.

Indicted with Landis were special effects crew chief Paul Stewart, helicopter pilot Dorcay Wingo, associate producer George Foley Jr. and unit production manager Dan Allingham.

Landis, Stewart and Wingo were charged for all three deaths. Foley and Allingham were charged in the deaths of the two children, but not Morrow.

The indictment said the defendants killed the victims "without malice but in the commission of a lawful act which might produce death in an unlawful manner and without due caution and circumspection."

Morrow and child actors Renee Chin, 6, and Myca Dinh Le, 7, died instantly last July 23 when the helicopter plummeted to the ground during location filming in a remote canyon near Newhall.

Explosive charges — part of the special effects — apparently disabled the rear rotor of the craft and sent it spinning to the ground. Morrow, star of TV's "Combat" series, was decapitated.

Lightning Fire

Fire, smoke and water damage was extensive to the upstairs of this house at 609 Magnolia Ave., Sanford, which caught fire after it was struck by lightning during a Friday thunderstorm. Fire Chief William Gailey said firemen worked for about 30 minutes to extinguish the blaze which started at 1:15 p.m. Firemen said no one was injured in the blaze. The house is owned by Robert and Mary Ross.

Reagan To Visit Voc Ed 'Olympics'

By Brian Malloy

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — President Reagan will pick up first-hand knowledge about vocational education Wednesday with a visit to the "United States Skill Olympics" and organizers hope it will lead to first-rate funding.

Reagan, stumping the nation for his education program, will mingle with about 5,000 vocational education students gathered in Louisville to compete for gold, bronze and silver medals in their various skills.

Janet Mathos, spokeswoman for the sponsoring Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, said vocational education has been hurt by federal budget cuts. She said Reagan's visit would call attention to a type of education she feels is essential for America's youth.

"He should see that this is important," she said. "What are these kids going to do if they don't get this kind of training?"

In Kentucky, where vocational education programs have borne the brunt of federal and state budget cuts in education, leaders believe Reagan will better understand the need for such programs when he sees the best and brightest students from across the country compete for national distinction.

"I hope that his coming is some indication he is willing to look at federal funding in a little different light than they have in the past," said Mary Ella Conner, director of vocational education programs in Louisville's Jefferson County.

Mrs. Conner said Reagan's visit will help focus national attention on the plight of vocational ed programs. But she said the president's personal experience is more important.

"I would hope as he gains more on-site experience with education programs, he will be impressed with their need and the need for a federal involvement with education," she said.

The president could not have picked a more opportune site or time for such a visit.

The skill olympics are what the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America call "The Showcase of Vocational Education." And the visit comes while Congress is conducting oversight hearings into the reauthorization of the Vocational Education Act of 1963.

Shafer Bailey, program consultant for vocational education for Kentucky, said Reagan should like the way the conference is handled. Although it is sponsored by VICA, it is supported by various industries and businesses from around the country interested in vocational education.

"I'd say you'd have to look a long time before you found a better example of cooperation between the two sectors," Bailey said.

Bailey said June 30, when the finals are held for the olympics, is called the "86 Million Day" because of the vast amount of equipment used in the competition. Complete machine shops, kitchens and mini-medical labs will be built, mostly donated by business and industry.

The three-day olympics are composed of 38 areas of competition ranging from prepared speechmaking to bricklaying and everything in between related to trade and technical skills, Bailey said.

With the president on hand, the event will feature its "leadership" section in which students compete in managerial skills.

The 5,000 students were culled from 275,000 members of 13,000 local VICA clubs in all 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Each competed at local and state levels to get to Louisville.

"The basic philosophy of the VICA organization is to develop leadership skills," Mrs. Conner said. "It's generally a motivator. It motivates students to a higher level of achievement than they would obtain if they were not competing for something."

NATIONAL REPORT: Four Utah towns in the path of 5-foot floodwaters were evacuated and officials said water released by what the government called a controlled disaster program will be washing the banks of the Colorado River for months. Authorities Friday evacuated about 1,000 people from the small Utah farming communities of Southerland, Oasis, Desert and the summer resort community of Sherwood Shores. The eastern DMAD dam pounded by tons of water from exceptional Rocky Mountain snowmelt broke Thursday, unleashing 5-foot floodwaters. DMAD Water Co. attorney Thorpe Waddingham the floods wiped out irrigation channels to 15,000 acres of arid land. He said the disaster represents a one-time crop loss of $6 million. "And that's just the crops. That doesn't count all the structural damage there and elsewhere."

An advancing Canadian cold front cooled the eastern heatwave — but there was no relief in sight for the Chicago area, where temperatures were to hit the 90s for the fifth straight day today and peak even higher Sunday. Officials in Arizona warned the Colorado River will rise 8 feet in the area below Yuma in the next few days and could cause serious lowland flooding near the border and into Mexico as water is released from the Hoover, Davis and Parker dams. Colorado River flooding is expected to last into September, causing more erosion and damage. It has destroyed homes and businesses and ruined a multimillion dollar summer tourist season for the desert community of Parker. Officials had said the water was released from reservoirs in a "controlled disaster" to relieve record snowmelt from the Rocky Mountains and avoid an all-out flood.

1 Longwood Worker Arrested, 4 Quit In Drug Probe

One Longwood public works department employee was arrested Friday and four others have resigned as a result of a police probe into the sale of drugs while on the job.

Wilbert Williams, 34, a foreman in the public works department was arrested at the Longwood City Garage Friday at 12:05 p.m. on a charge of selling marijuana.

Williams, who lives at 1506 Southwest Drive, Sanford, is accused of selling a bag of marijuana for $35 to Seminole County Drug Task Force agents on June 17 at 5:25 p.m. along Warren Avenue in Longwood, near city hall.

City Manager David Chacey and Mayor June Lormann refused to give any information about the investigation which led to the arrest. Nor would the city officials divulge the identities of the four employees who resigned.

Repeated attempts to contact Police Chief Greg Manning were also unsuccessful.

Other city hall employees said they had been instructed that the incident was a police matter and couldn't be discussed.

CAMARO COPPED

A 1980 Chevrolet Camaro valued at $6,000, belonging to Scott Christopher Matthews of Hampton, New Jersey, was stolen from the Jai Alai Fronton parking lot in Fern Park between 7:30 and 11 p.m. Tuesday, police report.

SWINDLER KILLS HIMSELF

An Altamonte Springs man who faced sentencing Friday in Orange County Circuit Court killed himself Thursday night rather than face a life in prison.

Jerome Sheldon Swartz, 49, who rented a condominium at Sandy Cove Apartments in Altamonte Springs, died at Orlando Regional Medical Center at 8:23 p.m. Thursday after he swallowed rat poison during a pre-trial deposition.

Swartz swindled Central Florida residents out of about $500,000 during the past three years and had felony charges pending against him in Seminole, Lake and Orange counties when he died, police said.

Swartz called his defense attorney, Garrick Fox, and told him that he had poisoned himself and would die during the deposition. He left tapes for Fox which expressed his sorrow at the life he had led. Swartz blamed his swindling on mental illness and said he wished the system would have worked to help him rather than put him in prison. Swartz refused medical treatment from Orlando firefighters who were called to the scene when Swartz became ill.

Swartz had 11 felony convictions during a 25-year criminal career. He had been charged more than 30 times with felonies in Michigan and Florida and went to prison five times.

He faced a possible 35-year sentence for taking $46,000 by forging endorsements on cashier's checks. Swartz pleaded no-contest in April to a bad check charge and two charges of grand theft and forgery. Fox said Swartz did not want to face the prospect of returning to prison.

Illegal fireworks were removed Friday from three area Circus World stores, including one store at the Altamonte Mall.

Fire department officials learned that the stores in the Altamonte, Winter Park and Fashion Square malls were displaying cherry bombs, which are illegal for sale in Florida.

Altamonte Springs fire department officials said no charges will be filed against store personnel because management willingly removed the fireworks displays. At least two packages of cherry bombs were sold at the Winter Park store, officials there said.

Amtrak officials said the service will combine modern passenger coaches, sleeping cars, food service cars and auto carriers on one train. The train will operate on an overnight schedule three times a School for the use of the school and the community.

Sabal Point Land Development Co. president Walter Temple said the company will eliminate a severe slope and construct new basketball and softball fields. Other areas will be used for free-play activities.

Vanderworp said more facilities of that type should be constructed for use of residents within the developments.

The second most cost effective approach, Vanderworp said, is increasing the use of existing resources.

The county needs to catalog and distribute historical and archaeological sites of interest within the county. The Longwood Historic District and Big Tree Park are examples of the county's historical attractions.

The Wekiva, St. Johns and Little Econlockhatchee Rivers can be better utilized as canoe trails. More than 50 miles of potential canoe trails exist in the county which could be developed by establishing camp sites and increasing access to the rivers.

Developing existing parks by putting in more playground equipment, building tennis, racquetball and basketball courts or boat ramps is a more costly alternative, Vanderworp said.

None of the county's 13 parks is built to capacity. According to the county's comprehensive parks plan, much building is left to be done.

Vanderworp said the most expensive alternative is creation of new parks. Each new park could cost an estimated $500,000 for development.

Linear parks are recommended for new recreation areas. But development of the county's first linear park, a three-mile abandoned railroad right-of-way near State Road 46 in Paola has been slowed because of questions about the right-of-way.

County officials said the Seaboard Coastline Railroad may not have the right to sell the right-of-way to the county.

The county plans to use $150,000 from Booster Improvement Funds, derived from fees paid for boat and motor licenses, to develop the park, which will be used as a hiking trail and canoe launching area on the Wekiva River.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Lawmakers Back Home, But They'll Soon Be Back

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida lawmakers have left the Capitol after a legislative session that ran into three weeks of overtime, but they will be back again next month after Gov. Bob Graham vetoes part of the budget they approved.

The House and Senate on Friday approved a "no frills" state budget of $11.2 billion and finally reached agreement on water quality and education bills. The House approved the budget 86-25; in the Senate the vote was 33-6.

Graham plans to veto the $2.6 billion education portion of the budget and call the Legislature back into session around the middle of July. In the meantime, he plans a seven-city swing around the state to drum up support for $300 million in new taxes for education programs.

The budget approved by the Legislature raises state spending by $600 million, or about 10 percent, and includes an 8 percent increase for the public schools.

Hero Faces Deportation

MIAMI (UPI) — A Haitian who tried to save fellow passengers on a refugee boat when it was pummeled into wreckage by offshore waves two years ago, killing 33, may face deportation for his efforts.

If Marcelin "Luce" Pierre had run for freedom in the early-morning hours when the rickety craft was destroyed in rough seas off Hillsboro Beach instead of pulling survivors from the water and pumping water from their stomachs, he would have been much more difficult to send back to Haiti.

The issue revolves over whether Pierre, 23, made official "entry" into the United States or whether he was stopped at the border.

Current immigration laws make it fairly difficult for the INS to deport aliens who have "entered" the country. But it is far easier to deport those arrested at the border.

Immigration and Naturalization Service Judge Jose Simonett found that Pierre did not make official entry. But he agreed to delay deportation to give Pierre's attorney a chance to appeal.

Reporter Sues Sheriff

TAMPA (UPI) — A television reporter convicted of interfering with a police investigation while he was trying to gather news has filed suit in federal court against the Hillsborough County Sheriff and members of his department.

Channel 10 reporter Craig Roberts was convicted Thursday, sentenced to one year probation and 150 hours of community service, and fined $1,000 in court costs. But County Judge Susan Bucklew withheld a finding of guilt so Roberts would have no criminal record if he successfully completes his probation.

In the suit he filed against the sheriff this week, Roberts alleges the sheriff's legal adviser used "extortion" in an attempt to keep Channel 10 from airing the story about Roberts' confrontation with deputies.

Landing Diversion Cost NASA Week, Over $1 Million

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The diversion of the Challenger from Florida to California because of bad weather will cost the space agency more than $1 million, a NASA spokesman said Friday.

Challenger was scheduled to make a first-ever landing at the Kennedy Space Center shortly after sunrise Friday, but was waved off because of low clouds and patchy fog.

As soon as the "no go" decision was made for the Cape, NASA ordered a chartered jumbo jet to rush 300 shuttle service engineers and technicians from Kennedy to Edwards to speed up the ship's return to Florida.

NASA spokesman Mark Hess said the chartered L-1011 and travel expenses for the crewmen will cost NASA between $600,000 and $700,000. He said the support workers will spend "a good week" at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., servicing the vehicle.

It also will cost the space agency $220,000 to ship the engine tail cone to California and another $189,000 to fly the shuttle back to the Cape atop a 747 transport jet, Hess said.

The switch in landing locations also will delay the next shuttle mission, scheduled for mid-August, by eight days.

Meanwhile, the space shuttle, which had circled Earth 97 times, got stuck in soft sand Friday on the edge of its lakebed runway as it was being towed to a work area.

NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson said the right landing gear sunk in a soft section of the packed sand lakebed because of an unspecified brake problem. Workers placed plywood under the wheels to try to free the 102-ton spaceship.

"Getting stuck in the lakebed is not unusual," Jackson said. "The lakebed just dried out recently. There's a lot of small soft spots."

Looking For A Job

C.J. Offenga, personnel manager for Burdines in the Altamonte Mall, makes the acquaintance of a youngster at Gerber Day Care Center in Altamonte Springs recently during a tour of United Way agencies by the store's pre-campaign drive workers. The center is one of 21 in Seminole County that welcomes the Community Coordinated Child Care Program, a UW agency. Under this program, United Way dollars purchase day care for children from low income families. The tour also included a visit to The Grove Counseling Center, a drug rehabilitation and prevention center in Winter Springs.

Funds OK'd For SCC Entrance Road

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Both houses of the Florida Legislature Friday approved additional funding necessary to four-lane the entrance road from U.S. Highway 17-92 to Seminole County Community College.

Rep. Carl Selph, R-Casselberry, reported that a new allocation of $250,000 was approved to be added to $225,000 previously approved for improving the southernmost entrance road off U.S. 17-92 to the community college.

The bill is on its way to Gov. Bob

Graham's desk, Selph said.

County Engineer Bill Bush said Friday he is excited about the appropriation, adding, however, that past experience tells him not to celebrate until the bill is approved by the governor.

The money is to be used to purchase right-of-way, modify the intersection of East Road with U.S. 17-92 and install a traffic signal at the intersection, plus four-lane East Road to Main Road on the college campus.

In addition, the entrance road is to be of boulevard type divided construction with a grass median and bordered by a sidewalk to the campus.

He said the estimates of the work place the cost at about $485,000, but he is gratified about the amount that was procured from the Legislature. "If it is short, I suppose the city of Lake Mary and the county can regroup," he said and try to find another source of the additional funds.

"I had no inkling this was going to happen," Bush said, adding that he only recently talked with state Department of Transportation officials about going forward into right-of-way acquisition with the funds previously approved by the Legislature.

"Our first priority is to acquire the right of way to protect from developmental pressures. Once we nail down right of way and if the new appropriation is for real and doesn't get knocked out, we should be able to substantially complete the job," the county engineer said.

"I had abandoned all hope of the funding being approved this year," Bush said.

Agent Orange Is Dioxin, Too

The images, the scenes are unsettling: Grim troopers sealing off Newark's farmers market, health workers in gloves collecting dust-filled vacuum cleaner bags door to door, wild rabbits with weird growths in Lock Haven, Pa. These are the legacies of dioxin, the insidious, unwelcome compound — the most toxic ever made by man — that showed up in potent herbicides manufactured and sprayed across forest and farmlands in the United States and, until 1970, in Vietnam.

In Vietnam the defoliants containing dioxin were called Agent Orange. And as the horrors of dioxin are surfacing close to home — since the discoveries in Times Beach, Mo., the stuff is showing up everywhere — a rather disturbing inconsistency is developing.

Rep. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., put his finger on it a few weeks ago. He is a Vietnam veteran himself and the sudden kidglove approach to civilian victims triggered something in him. "Our government has agreed to buy out the entire town of Times Beach, Mo.," he observed, "because its residents were exposed to dioxin levels 20 times smaller than those found in Agent Orange sprayed in Vietnam."

Daschle said he found it "incredible" that the United States was ready to accept responsibility for a community whose residents were exposed to dioxin by a private company, but not for American fighting men and women who were exposed to it by their own government.

Incredible, indeed. Those veterans — 20,000 already are in court suing Dow Chemical Co. for not warning of the compound's dangers — are suffering a grotesque catalog of health problems that they fear may be linked to Agent Orange: so-called soft-tissue cancers of the kidney, bladder, colon and testicles; discoloring chloracne rashes, migraine headaches and possible immunological damage that strips the body of its defenses to a host of invading diseases.

The Veterans Administration has refused to pay any compensation for victims of Agent Orange, although at long last full-blown studies are being made of the chemical's health effects. Daschle thinks that it is a disgrace and an insult that veterans may die before those studies are completed. He has introduced a bill that would pay Vietnam vets "presumptive compensation," if they were exposed to Agent Orange and developed disabilities associated with it.

Depending on the severity of the illness, compensation — which would initially cover about 3,000 veterans — would range from $60 to $1,200 a month, a total annual cost of $4 million.

Hearings were held in April and more are scheduled for July. In the few months in between, the medical evidence on dioxin has grown more alarming, the chemical industry's early silence has become increasingly suspect and the government's official concern for civilian exposure has blossomed, if somewhat belatedly.

As dioxin's domestic damage toll grows almost daily, the case for Daschle's bill — for the soldiers who flew and wallowed through clouds of Agent Orange — grows along with it. And it grows exponentially.

Another Agency

Congress is quietly moving ahead on a Reagan administration proposal to create a new federal department, this one to handle foreign trade matters now generally left to Commerce. Administration spokesmen stress that the new agency will be "lean and mean," which in the government vernacular means only about 8,000 employees and a budget of several billion dollars.

Reagan supporters, of course, wonder what all this has to do with the president's promise to seek the elimination of such departments as Energy and Education. (Consult "The Republican Party Platform of 1980," GOP archives, Washington, D.C.)

We suggest a variation of the "build-down" plan for U.S. and Soviet missiles being advanced by arms controllers: For every new department created in Washington, two must go. It was Lenin who warned that communists might have to take a step backward in order to take two forward; maybe the maxim applies to the Reagan Revolution as well.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Now say Yasser Arafat has NOT become too modern in times."

By Doris Dietrich

Show me a kid who takes dancing, and I'll show you dotting parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles, cousins, a host of other relatives and several friends who willingly stand in a long, hot line to see maybe a future Fred Astaire or Ginger Rogers take center stage in the annual dance recital.

Valerie Weld and Miriam Wright presented their students at the School of Dance Arts, Sanford, in the 18th Annual Night of Dance last weekend in the auditorium of Lake Mary High School.

Not much has changed since the Rye sisters (at least, they were Ryes when they opened up the dancing school) moved to Sanford, except maybe the site of the recital this year.

In years past, the colorful extravaganza was staged in the hot and humid auditorium of Seminole High School when patrons began lining up hours before the recital to get a choice seat.

This year, a long line formed outside the LMHS auditorium long before the doors were opened to the auditorium during the three performances. But this time, patrons sweated seats out in air conditioned comfort.

In fact, complaints were registered that the auditorium was too cool. Technician David Scott good-naturedly announced to the audience that the show went from a hot house to an ice house.

The auditorium has more than a 600-seat capacity, and according to Valerie, there was standing room only at all three shows.

Other than the location, the recital was the same — exceptional. And, as usual, shades of Broadway were captured in the dazzling costumes and high caliber choreography by Miriam and Valerie.

Petite Miriam, who weighs slightly more than 100 pounds soaking wet, danced in several numbers. You have to hand it to her. Her kicks, swirls, jumps and bumps are on the same par with the teen-age dancers and 14-year-old Eddie Korgan seemed to have no problem lifting her high above his head in one lively and complicated dance.

The cast featured tiny, talented 4-year-olds who made their stage debut, veteran dancers and several advance (in age) dancers. But it's the little ones who steal the show every time and some of them EVEN dance really well.

The show we attended featured a real trooper in the corps of 4-year-old dancers in "The Banjo Babies." There she stood, center stage, keeping in perfect step to the music. Is that a shiner Stacey Irgang is sporting? It is. That afternoon, Stacey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F.C. (Dr. Sara) Irgang, was kicked in the eye by one of the family-owned horses. Not even heavy theatrical makeup could conceal the swollen black and blue bruise. A real pro, that Stacey.

Dancers were tripping all over each other backstage which was typical of Hollywood's most glamorous and glittering premieres. Magnificent arrangements from fans of dancers were everywhere. They sniffed at the flowers they were clutching, grinned all over, and lovingly sniffed again.

What a night — the Annual Night of Dance.

And they were all stars.

Measuring Blacks' Feelings

If you need a measure of black antagonism toward the Reagan administration, read on.

In early June, a group of black Republicans told President Reagan's political people that administration policies have created a "vengeance vote" in black America. The black Republicans said that it will be impossible to explain or defend the Reagan program to black America and complained that the White House has created antagonism toward the president among blacks. They said the administration accepts that antagonism as a fact of political life, taking no steps to refute or disprove it.

The administration denied that it is hostile toward blacks, but admitted that it has not had black Americans in mind when it has devised its policies. It argued that it has tried to restart the economy by unleashing capitalism and that, if it succeeds, blacks will benefit with all others.

The black Republicans responded that the free market cannot tolerate practices that threaten a sizable segment of the population purely because of its race. That marks those people as enemies, the black Republicans said, and leads them to plot your removal.

Those dusky members of the Grand Old Party spoke for no more than 10 percent of black Americans who vote. But their alienation means that the other 90 percent will register their frustration with great vigor. A look at that frustration, and the reasons why it exists, appeared a week after the "vengeance vote" issue surfaced.

The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, under attack by the president for its sober, factual criticism of his programs, let loose another salvo in mid-June. Using public data it had obtained only after threatening the White House with a subpoena, the commission issued a report showing that Reagan had appointed about two-thirds fewer blacks to high-level federal positions than had President Carter.

The report showed that 16.1 percent of the judges appointed by Carter during his four-year term were black and 15.1 percent were women. In the first two years of the Reagan administration, only 2.5 percent of judicial appointments were black and only 8.3 percent women. The commission said that only 4.1 percent of Reagan's full-time appointees were black, compared to 12.1 percent under Carter.

Joining the commission majority was chairman Clarence Pendleton, the black Reagan appointee from San Diego.

In late May, President Reagan fired the only black woman on the commission, Howard University professor Mary Frances Berry. He would have also removed a white woman, Jill Ruckelshaus, if he had not just hired her husband, William, to replace the woman he'd fired as administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Replacing Dr. Berry and two other commissioners — who had been vigorous in detailing the Reagan civil rights record — will be three nominees who describe themselves as Democrats. That's possible, since the party has no position on the issue that attracted them to Reagan: affirmative action.

CIA Group: Israelis Magnify Prowess

WASHINGTON — A faction in the CIA — admittedly a minority — believes the Israelis are setting the stage for a pre-emptive attack on Syria. In their view, this would explain Israel's repeated scare statements about Syrian missiles and other supposed indications of warlike intentions by the Syrians.

One secret analysis charges that the Israelis deliberately exaggerated the success of their weapons last year against the Syrians' Soviet equipment. If this is true, the question is: why?

One example is the press report — allegedly dependent on Israeli military sources — which touted the Israelis as having a great new anti-tank weapon that cut through the Soviets' top-of-the-line T-72 tank like so much butter. But several Pentagon sources late last year

Sexual Questions

I am not surprised to learn that American kids are more ignorant about sex than youths in other countries. I'm referring to a report at the Sixth Annual World Conference on Sexology held recently in Washington.

Two Australian researchers, Ronald Goldman, a psychologist, and his wife, Juliet Goldman, a sociologist, told the Conference of their questions to 838 children, aged 5 to 15, from Sweden, Australia, England, Canada and the United States.

U.S. kids, they claim, know the least about sex, yet date and have intercourse at earlier ages than their peers. I say I'm not surprised to learn how misinformed and naive our kids are because I have been paying attention to the questions they ask teen-advice columnists in newspapers and magazines.

Here's a sampling of questions written by baffled, worried and confused youths: — "This probably sounds stupid, but I don't know what V.D. is. I asked my mom and she slapped my face and said she never wanted me to say that word again."

— "I am 14 years old but my voice hasn't changed and I have nothing to shave. Am I homosexual?"

— "I am 12 and my boyfriend wants to go all the way. What is it like when you lose your virginity, not just physical feelings but the emotional ones too?"

— "I hear that 'Frenching' involves the guy curling up his tongue and sticking it up the girl's nose. Is this correct?"

— "I am 17 years old and I'm built like an ironing board. I have heard of creams and oils, but I'm not sure they do any good. I have also heard of an operation where a surgeon can insert paraffin cups. Please tell me what to do."

— "I let my boyfriend have his way because I was in love with him and didn't want to lose him. When I told him I thought I was in trouble, he said, 'Gee, that's tough.' My dad would kill me if he knew I was mixed up in something like this."

— "I always wear briefs. My friend told me it's dangerous in hot weather. I might get overheated and sperm might be destroyed. Would wearing tight underpants mean a guy couldn't get a girl pregnant in hot weather?"

I think these letters are more pathetic than funny.

They were written by children robbed of their innocence yet bereft of knowledge. It must be a terrible burden to be caught in a web of sexual activity yet to understand so little of its complexities and consequences.

Is it any wonder that these frightened 14-year-olds-going-on-40 turn to alcohol and drugs?

Marie Winn, writing about "The Loss of Childhood" in The New York Times magazine, says that parents once wanted to shelter their children from life's vicissitudes, but today great numbers of them feel that children must be exposed early to adult experience in order to survive in an increasingly uncontrolled world. She says the Age of Protection has ended and the Age of Preparation has begun.

Where, then, is this preparation? It seems to mean only exposure to reality without the knowledge of how to deal with it.

The Goldmans, in their study of youths in different countries, found that Swedish children were the best informed about sexuality. That's because, they said, for the last 20 years, sex education has been compulsory in Swedish schools for all children beginning at age 8.

In the United States, many parents are too inhibited to deal effectively with their kids' curiosity about sex. It is often these same parents who vehemently oppose sex education in schools. And in the schools that do take on sex education, the curriculum is often a wash-out, mainly covering the basic plumbing.

Ideally, such courses should tackle the hard questions of sexual attraction and how to deal with it, the risks of sexual activity, and how to arrive at personal, moral values and have the courage to stick to them.

The course should also give answers to youngsters who wonder if tight underwear deactivates sperm.

Now that's my idea of real preparation for life.

Veteran Journalist's Odyssey

This is a column in praise of John Chamberlain, the author, editor, and newspaper columnist, who, in my judgment, is the finest journalist in America. The occasion is the publication of his autobiography entitled "A Life With The Printed Word."

It is very difficult to write a brief article about John Chamberlain because he has done so much as a writer. At age 80, he writes a superbly crafted column for leading papers across the country. He lectures and travels widely, most recently to Guatemala. He has both an extraordinarily inquiring mind and a skill at reporting and editorial writing that has been honed over the decades. He can write rings around journalists half his age. Indeed he isn't a senior writer, but the sharpest of contemporaries.

I don't know of any other American journalist who can match his record of accomplishments. Among many other things, he has been editor of "Barron's," chief editorial writer of "Life," editor of "The Freeman," daily book reviewer for "The New York Times," journalism school professor, editorial page columnist for "The Wall Street Journal," and author of books.

More than 20 years ago, John Chamberlain published "The Enterprising Americans," which is a marvelous antidote to the robber baron theory of American business history. Like many of his works, it is a book that should be in every school library.

Born in Connecticut in 1903, John Chamberlain had the advantage of good timing at the Loomis school and a college education at Yale. He was adventurous, and worked in a fruit packing house as a seaman in California and at a variety of rough jobs from which he gained a knowledge of life and of his country. His years as a reporter for "Fortune" also has given him the keenest understanding of American free enterprise.

It's impossible to condense the story of his professional life, beginning as an ad copy writer and then a cub reporter on "The New York Times."

Over the years, he was involved in all the New York intellectual battles and came to know an enormous array of people ranging from novelists to high government officials. He made what he calls "a dissident pilgrimage among the scribblers." Over the years, he also moved through radical phases to become a leading voluntarist and pioneer of the conservative movement. His hallmark as a writer has been a generosity of spirit that is rare among literary people. He has helped and encouraged countless writers, including this writer.

John Chamberlain has tremendous faith in America, and the discernment to pinpoint what is wrong with the country today, what must be corrected in order to provide future generations with a good life.

In no sense is John Chamberlain a narrow ideologue. He appreciates the many strands in American society, and, as he says in one passage, he is aware of "the danger of relying on old shibboleths." May he go on writing for years to come with the approval of his journalistic brothers and all Americans who believe in a free society.

Protecting Hash From Foreign Competition

Does national security require that the U.S. purchase hash and other unspeakable military chow at home?

Early last year, Rep. Cardias Collins of Illinois introduced legislation to require the military to buy its rations in the U.S. Said she, "The complex process of manufacturing or producing thermostabilized food in retort pouches is only in its infancy in this country, employing hundreds of people in this aspect of the procurement phase alone. Unfortunately, the (Department of Defense), supported by the General Accounting Office, has not recognized the wisdom of developing and protecting this important defense industry."

Now, it is hard to imagine soldiers asking each other to pass the "thermostabilized food." And we probably shouldn't ask how they refer to "flexible retort pouches." But, however juicy the slang, we are sure it is fittingly applied to the idea that combat food is an important defense industry requiring protection.

Liberal and conservative economists alike generally ridicule the economic arguments in favor of import restrictions. "Buy American" provisions don't add to the overall level of employment — they merely shift work around inefficiently. And they clearly raise prices and lower our standard of living. When Mrs. Collins refers to the GAO's support of foreign produced combat rations, she is saying, in effect, that the American producers of combat rations aren't cost-competitive, that Congress' watchdog agency considers foreign supply contracts an ordinary, prudent use of the taxpayers' money.

So there aren't really any economic reasons for "Buy American" provisions. Some people, however, maintain there are national security concerns that justify "Buy American" restrictions. When we produce key military items at home, we maintain control over technology and we limit our reliance on allies. The cost of doing so is quite high, of course — which is why so many administrations have pushed for weapons specialization and trade within NATO. But Army chow?

Luckily for the taxpayers, Mrs. Collins' proposal was as palatable to her colleagues as the "thermostabilized food" itself. The chairman of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, Joseph Addabbo of New York, rejected Collins' proposal. Instead, he instructed the Defense Department to conduct a study of the problem — thereby killing the issue in a way that maintained Congressional courtesy.

At least for the time being, GIs in the field can dream of Mom's cooking while cursing foreigners for the rotten food.

Florida Lawmakers Take Too Long In Session

We believe that the people of Florida are entitled to a more responsible performance by the state Legislature than they have witnessed for the last seven years.

We consider the unwillingness to conduct the business of the Legislature within the allotted sixty days as inexcusable. The practice of one Chamber attempting to hold the other hostage is an expensive political power play. To your constituents such a performance indicates inept leadership in the House and Senate, with not much help from the governor.

For those of us opposed to the constantly increasing expense of State Government, this session has one bright achievement. You, with the Governor, have assured that the voters of Florida will pass the tax limitation amendment in November 1984.

Opinion Of Taxpayers On Gas Tax Sought

On Thursday evening, June 16, 1983, I appeared on Nighthine on WDBO Radio, taking the place of Morton Downey Jr. The program started at 6:30 p.m. and lasted until approximately 11 p.m. During that time I took a vote on whether or not the citizens of Orange and Seminole counties desired the Orange and Seminole County commissioners to restore to them their right to determine any increase on taxes by a referendum.

Every call was opposed to any increase of taxes on gasoline and they also expressed an interest to have an opportunity to determine whether or not they would restore any potholes in the pavement with a referendum. The results of the poll was very clear that they were not concerned with the potholes in pavement but with the potholes in their pocketbooks. The phone lines were virtually jammed from the beginning of the program to the end.

If this is any indication of how the citizens of Central Florida feel, it would seem that the overwhelming majority are opposed to losing their rights in determining taxation on gasoline by a vote of the people. The result of this poll will be given at the public hearing on June 20, 1983.

Few Support Bill For U.S. To Sell 613,376 Acres Of Southern Land

By Joey Ledford

UPI Southern Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation is to be introduced in Congress to give the U.S. Forest Service authority to sell about 613,376 acres of Southern forest land, but there are indications it has little support.

The move to sell the Forest Service land was prompted by President Reagan, who instructed federal agencies that manage land last year to come up with a list of expendable parcels.

Of the Forest Service's 191 million acres nationwide, 6 million acres were targeted for sale under Reagan's "asset management program," which was designed to "improve management and reduce the federal deficit." Some 613,376 acres of the targeted land are in the eight Southern states.

Some 24 percent of Mississippi's 1,141,379-acre national forest land is listed for possible sale. In contrast, only 0.5 percent of Florida's 1,088,587 acres are slated for the auction block under the administration proposal.

Roy Gandy, the Forest Service's director of lands and minerals for the Southern region, said Mississippi and Georgia, which had 15 percent of its forest land targeted, were not unfairly singled out.

"We were looking for tracts separated from the main bodies of national forests," he said. "And some tracts may just contribute more in private ownership."

In Florida, he said, the government already owns more than 90 percent of the land within national forest boundaries. In Mississippi, it owns less than 50 percent.

Legislation to give the Forest Service authority to sell the land is expected to be introduced in Congress sometime this summer. However, response to the proposal has been overwhelmingly negative.

Several governors have written letters in opposition to the proposal. Congressional support for the idea has been lukewarm at best.

"It's all up to Congress," said Jay Humphrey, a Forest Service spokesman in Washington. "If they want us to sell the national forest (land), they would have to give us the authority and lay out the guidelines for how it would be done. We don't know who could buy it."

However, one congressman, Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., says his constituents seem to be solidly behind the idea.

A brief look at each state follows:

—Of Virginia's 1,627,539 acres of total forest service land, 48,577 is listed for possible sale, about 3 percent. Of that, about 30,000 acres are in the Jefferson National Forest, 14,000 of which are in the Clinch District near Clintwood. The rest is scattered tracts in the George Washington National Forest.

—In North Carolina, 71,358 acres of the total federal holdings of 1,213,568 acres are targeted, some 6 percent. Some 41,800 acres are in the Uwharrie National Forest. The rest are in scattered tracts in the Nantahala and Pisgah National Forests.

—Four percent (23,322 acres) of South Carolina's 609,702 acres are targeted. Most of it consists of scattered tracts in the Sumter National Forest.

—Of Florida's 1,088,587 acres, just 5,297 are listed. The land consists of scattered tracts in the Apalachicola and Ocala National Forests.

—Of Tennessee's 625,348 total acres, 6,523, or 1 percent are listed for possible sale. The land consists of scattered tracts on the edges of the Cherokee National Forest.

—Nine percent of Alabama's 644,591 acres, 57,068, are listed for possible sale. Some 30,800 are in the south end of the Bankhead National Forest and 20,000 are in the Talladega National Forest.

—Mississippi's 1,141,379 acres include 271,081 targeted in the proposal. Some 147,000 are in the Holly Springs National Forest, another 66,000 acres are located in the Tombigbee National Forest.

—Georgia's 865,393 total acres include 130,150 the Forest Service wants to sell. About 96,000 acres are in the Chattahoochee National Forest and the rest, about 34,000 acres are in the Oconee National Forest.

Seniors Can Draw On Equity In Their Homes

G. My mother owns her home which is in need of repair. She is 86 years old and her only income comes from Social Security and a small pension from my deceased father. I have heard about situations where people can continue to live in their own homes and receive monthly payments which are deducted from the value of the houses.

My mother would love to continue living in her home, but simply can't afford to. Can she enter into an arrangement such as I described which would help her maintain the house? If so, who should she contact? Are such arrangements sound?

A. It is quite possible that your mother could enter into a legal arrangement which would enable her to draw upon the equity in her home to make necessary repairs and maintain her residence.

Home equity conversion or reverse equity plans are designed to help house-rich and cash-poor homeowners unlock the value of their homes and convert it into income, without having to move or to repay the loan from monthly income.

According to a recent study by the Senate Special Committee on Aging, approximately 12.5 million homes are owned by Americans over 65 years of age. Eighty percent are owned free and clear, without any outstanding mortgage. For most older homeowners, the equity they have in their homes represents their single largest asset, their major lifetime investment, and the bulk of the estate they have to leave their children. It is estimated that the home equity held by elderly Americans totals more than $500 billion.

Growing Older

Studies have shown that one-fourth of all low-income elderly homeowners could raise their incomes above the poverty level by drawing upon the equity of their homes.

Within the past several years, a few programs have been developed or proposed to permit older homeowners to unlock home equity. The major methods are the reverse annuity mortgage (RAM); the split equity and sale+leaseback arrangements; and the deferred payment loan. In all of these programs, the home equity is converted to cash — either in the form of monthly payments or a lump sum.

Equity conversion, however, involves costs and risks for the homeowner. Depending upon the method of conversion, the costs could be in the form of interest and various fees or commissions. The owner may receive less for the property than full market sale value and not receive the benefit of any appreciation in the property's value over subsequent years.

Many homeowners would consider it risky to deplete their home equity during their own lifetime. Owners also must consider the possibility that the lender or program provider might default on monthly payments and the potential erosion of the value of monthly payments due to inflation.

For many older homeowners, debt-free ownership of their homes is a hard won lifetime accomplishment. Understandably, they may be reluctant to assume any new mortgage debt or relinquish complete ownership of their homes.

Home equity conversion can be complicated and confusing. Because of the novel character of home equity conversion, plans may contain provisions which even the most well-informed consumer would be unable to properly evaluate.

Also, home equity conversion plans are so different from conventional loans that financial counseling is essential. This counseling should involve the homeowner's attorney and any heirs to make certain that the older person's rights and interests are fully protected and that the consequences of the plan — repayment of the loan, eventual ownership, and disposal of the property — are fully understood by all parties.

For further information on specific plans and home equity conversion, you can contact the American Bar Association, Commission on Legal Problems of the Elderly, 1800 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036; (202) 331-2287.

President Reagan ended his April 28 address to Congress on Central America with an appeal for bipartisan support — followed in the next and last breath with a partisan threat: "Who among us would wish to bear responsibility for failing to meet our shared obligation?"

Many Democrats sense the sickening slide toward regional war inherent in El Salvador, the mounting tension on the Nicaraguan-Honduran border, and the steady escalation of the U.S. military commitment, but still they are keeping a low profile. They foresee echoes of 1950s McCarthyism in the 1984 campaign and fear taking on the president too directly.

Although the House Intelligence and Foreign Affairs committees have both voted to cut funds for the intervention inside Nicaragua, they have tiptoed around evidence that the administration has violated congressional stipulations that CIA money not be used to overthrow the Nicaraguan government or spark a border war, but solely to "interdict" alleged arms traffic to El Salvador.

There's a self-evident reason to assume CIA operatives have participated in contra discussions of overthrowing the Nicaraguan government. If so, they have broken the law, and if their superiors knew about it, they have broken the law.

It's time for a serious probe. ... American confidence in our system of government is undermined when the executive branch defies Congress with impunity on a matter of war and peace.

The (Providence, R.I.) Journal-Bulletin

The solemn hopes of many Americans who oppose abortion that the United States Supreme Court would reverse its 1973 decision legalizing the procedure were dashed ... when the court reaffirmed its stand and overturned several restrictions imposed at the state level.

... In the last decade anti-abortion groups have sought to accomplish at the state level what they could not accomplish through the courts and Congress. In that effort they met with considerable success. Nine states, including Rhode Island, enacted parental consent laws in some circumstances. Eleven require a waiting period and 15 prohibit the use of Medicaid funds for abortions. A variety of other restrictions also have been adopted.

The court's strong reaffirmation of the right to choose an abortion is a welcome response to the continuing, highly emotional controversy.

Newsday, Melville, New York (Sirhan Sirhan's) self-pitying justification and his absence of remorse, together with his threats to prison officials and others over the years, add up to convincing evidence that he would be a menace to public safety if he were freed.

But the truth is, of course, that Sirhan's crime was not merely an ordinary murder ... for this assassination was an attack not only on the man but also on the American political process.

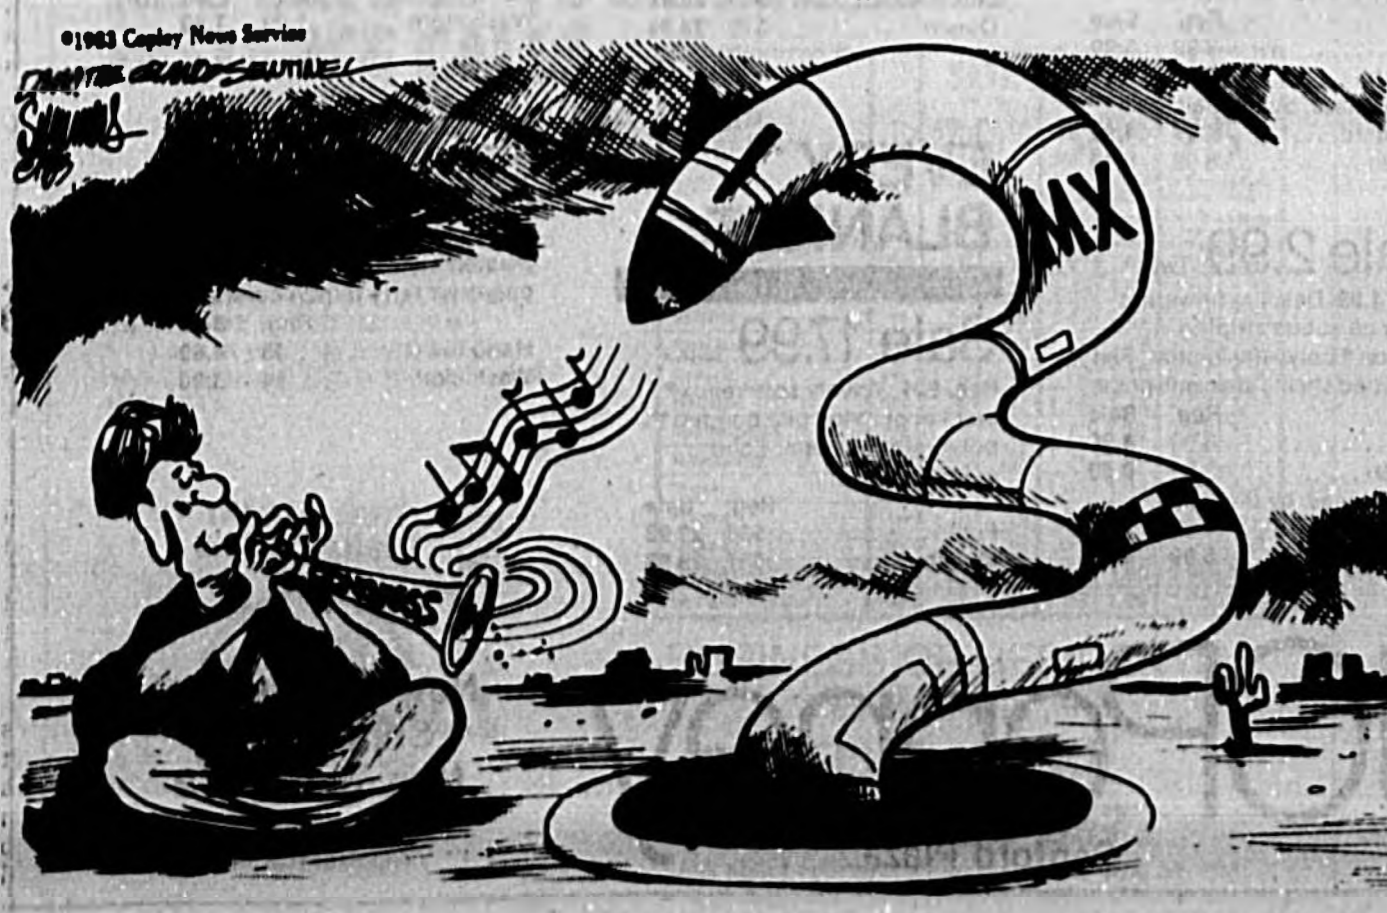

No one can truly assess the full extent of the nation's loss. If (Sen. Robert) Kennedy had captured the Democratic nomination and gone on to win the presidency, the trauma of Watergate surely would have been avoided and the agony of Vietnam almost certainly would have been shortened. But Kennedy might not have been elected or even nominated. Perhaps Sirhan's worst crime is that his murderous act prevented the American people from making a choice that was rightfully theirs — not his — to make.

The Wall Street Journal, New York

Our notes show that after the first full week of Margaret Thatcher's second term, she has fled to revolutionize British society. In fact, tradition never had it so good. True, the Royal Ascot wasn't televised, but this was because the BBC technicians went on strike (a newer British tradition) complaining about a demand that they begin to submit receipts for their claimed expenses.

A recently fired woman newscaster gracefully tossed a scornful glass of Chablis in the surprised face of her former employer (male) at a high-society bash. Afterward she only regretted that she hadn't thrown a better-staining red wine instead.

Finally, Mrs. Thatcher herself invoked a little tradition by awarding the first hereditary peerage in years. This might have raised more anti-fudal eyebrows if the new viscount, elderly William Whitelaw, had sons or at least a brother to carry on the title.

Carters Still Play Old-Time Country Tunes

By Clady McAfee

MACES SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) — Far from the glitter of Nashville and the opulence of the new Grand Ole Opry House, the Carter family still plays old-time country music every Saturday night.

Emanating from a drowsy hollow below Clinch Mountain are the familiar strains of "Wildwood Flower," "Keep on the Sunny Side" and others that made the Carters the first family of country music more than 50 years ago.

The legacy of those forerunners of today's multi-million-dollar country music industry is as dominant as the surrounding Southwest Virginia hills.

Patrons still take to the dance floor in the ragged barn-like stagehouse and clippety-clop and stomp on steel-tapped black patent shoes to the rhythm of a tradition that always includes the best-known Carter tune, "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?"

Even though it is tarnished and twisted and stretched from Atlantic to Pacific, the circle that A.P. Carter wrote about long ago is still intact — thanks mainly to his and Sara Carter's daughter Janette Carter, 59.

She calls the stagehouse she runs the Carter Family Fold.

"It's never made money. It wasn't intended to make money. The whole thing down here, the idea of it is to keep alive their music, carry on what they done," she said of the Fold.

"I thought it would be good to have something right here where it all started."

The birthplace of the Carter legacy, Maces Springs, is not much to see. The Carter section, with Ms. Carter's well-worn white frame home settling on a hill behind the stagehouse, is no different than the rest of the valley.

"I think really people expect us to be millionaires," Ms. Carter said. "I think this kindly shocks people. They (the Carter Family) had the name, but they never did have any wealth. If I had to choose which I'd rather have to carry on, I'd choose the name. It lasts."

Scott County takes the presence of the Carters for granted — only one sign leads to the Fold. But the Virginia General Assembly last year acknowledged the Carter heritage by renaming the tight two-lane road leading to Maces Springs as the A.P. Carter Highway.

"That pleased me," said Ms. Carter. "It's just a little stretch of road, but I'd rather have that than a big highway."

The telephone rang. She answered and said, "Yes, it's at 8 o'clock. No, there'll be room. There always is." The Fold seats close to 1,000.

Married and divorced twice, the stout two-time grandmother left a world of weaving mill work and waitressing nine years ago to carry on the family tradition of making a living through music. She also opened a museum dedicated to her family in her father's old store next to the arena.

She says she has had to put up with criticism from "narrow-minded" neighbors for being "independent" enough to run her own business and for letting people dance in the Fold. But there are two things that she won't allow in the Fold: drinking and electric instruments.

Well, there is one exception to the last rule.

"Johnny Cash comes here once a year as a benefit," she said, adding that her cousin and Cash's wife, June Carter, comes with him. Their first of many unannounced visits "helped to pay for that big building down here," Ms. Carter said.

The telephone rang again. "Yes, ma'am, it's at 8 o'clock. We have two bands tonight so it's $3 for adults and 50 cents for children. Thank you, now."

She operates the Fold as though it were her parlor. People who stop at the museum and the stagehouse are welcome to knock on her door and visit.

Official: Fireworks Threat To Eyesight

By Torri Latimer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Even a simple sparkler can be a lethal object this Fourth of July, a safety expert warns.

Dennis Hirschfelder of the National Society to Prevent Blindness said there is no safe way to use fireworks because they can ignite clothing and cause severe burns to skin and eyes.

"There is no such thing as 'safe and sane' fireworks. People are just not aware of the tremendous danger involved when they let young kids wave around burning objects," said Hirschfelder, director of the society's Eye Safety Program.

He said the society advocates all fireworks be limited only to licensed public displays conducted by trained people in a safe way.

"We'd like this July Fourth to be a happy celebration, not a painful, tragic holiday," he said. "We want people to look at fireworks at public displays, not play with them at home."

Last year, fireworks-related eye injuries went up 14.5 percent over 1982, and an estimated 8,544 people were treated in hospitals across the country for fireworks-related injuries — 1,866 involving eyes. Nearly 70 percent of those treated were between 5 and 24 years old.

"Among the common pyrotechnic materials that caused those injuries are small firecrackers, sparklers, bottle rockets, fountains and Roman candles," Hirschfelder said.

He said there are no Federal laws banning fireworks, so it is up to each state legislature to decide which type of fireworks, if any at all, will be sold.

Most types of fireworks are easily obtained in almost every state, where the current trend seems to be to relax fireworks laws.

"This year, 23 states as opposed to 28 two years ago, have laws limiting the use of fireworks," he said. Hirschfelder said many laws and regulations aimed at the illegal use of fireworks at both federal and state levels carry jail sentences and heavy fines, but fireworks are everywhere because of extensive bootlegging and poor enforcement of existing regulations.

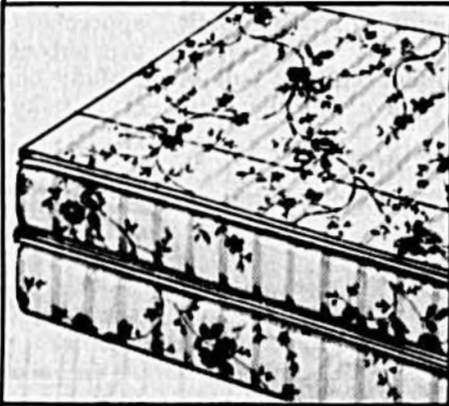

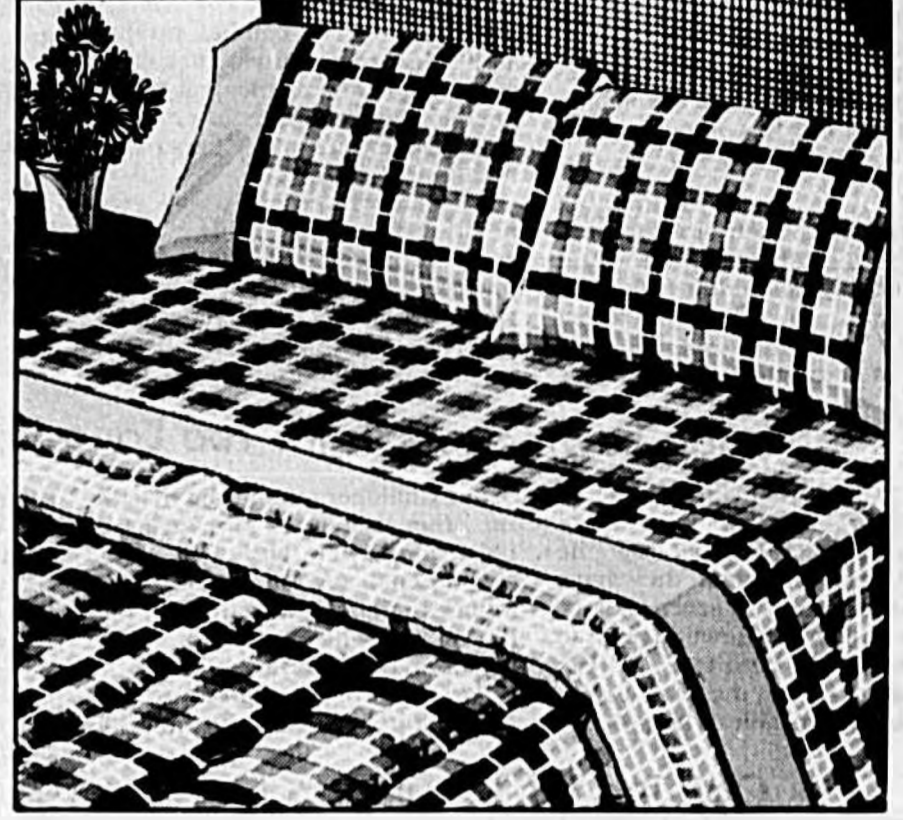

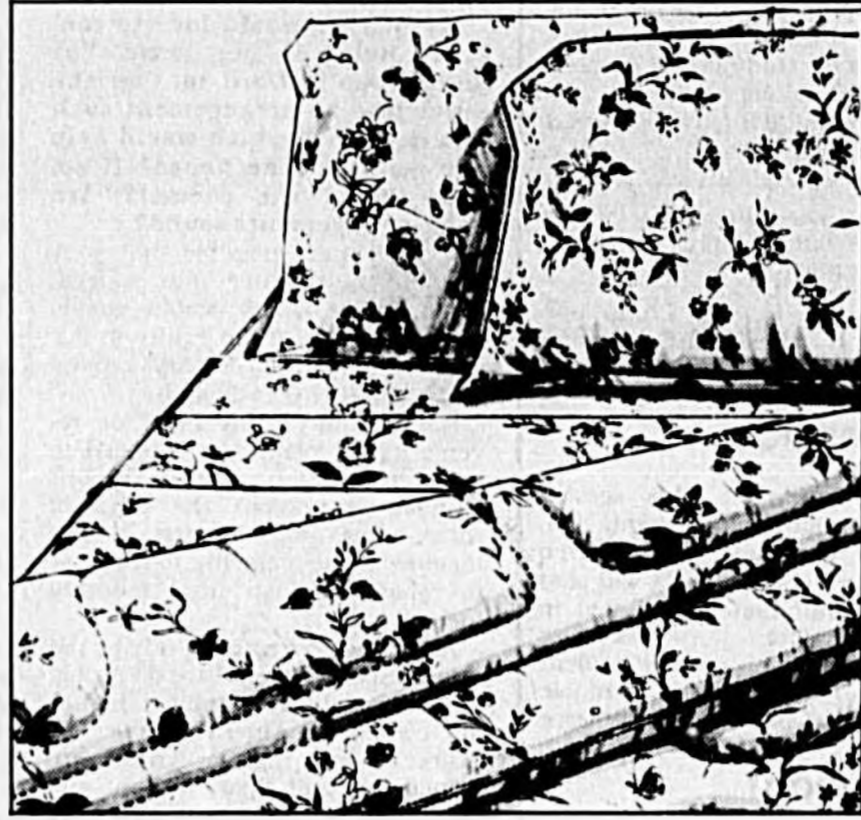

"A prime example of poor enforcement is one supplier, based in a state that bans fireworks, who advertises his wares in a current issue of a national magazine, boasting of 'delivery to 50 states,' and includes a toll-free number for inquiries and orders," Hirschfelder said. "His pitch is: 'A great American tradition. Cherish it. Protect it.'"

"What he doesn't advertise is the kid who gets his eyes burned or his hand blown off by the same traditional fireworks."

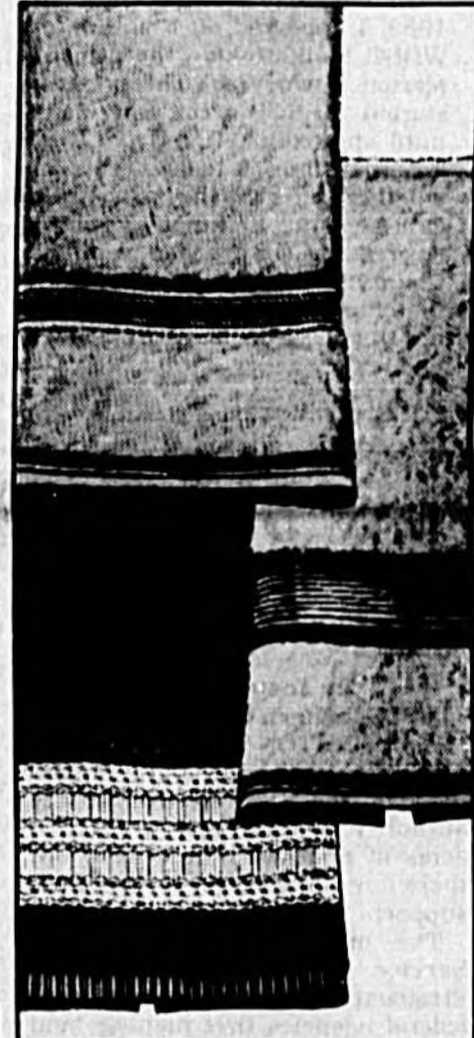

Hirschfelder said public displays usually are presented safely, but danger occurs when people in the audience bring their own fireworks.

He said wearing glasses, visors and non-flammable clothing can help prevent injury.

Health Officials Adopt System To Halt Plaque

By John A. Webster
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — The persistence of plague in New Mexico — a record 10 cases this month — has led public health officials to set up a system to quickly block the spread of the contagious form of the disease.

Plague, known as the "Black Death" when it ravaged Europe in the 14th century, has been present in New Mexico for at least 80 years. It is curable if diagnosed early and treated promptly.

The 10 cases are more than twice the number ever recorded in the state in June. In previous years, most cases occurred from July through September.

A case becomes a major concern to public health officials when it infects the lungs because then it can be contagious. The "pneumonic" form also poses a greater danger to the victim.

"A bubonic case is important to the individual who has it, but it is not a public health threat," said Dr. Jonathan Mann, New Mexico state epidemiologist. "However, a pneumonic case is not only important to the individual, but it has genuine public health importance."

"The danger is if it started to spread ... it would move very fast.

For instance, say person A infects persons B, C and D, and two days later, each of them (is) spreading it. What you could have is a rapidly moving, highly fatal disease that would be spreading geometrically throughout the population."

To help counter the chance of an outbreak — which never has occurred in New Mexico — the state Health and Environment Department keeps physicians statewide advised about plague, provides expertise in diagnosis and treatment and takes charge in cases where a public health threat exists.

The system was tested May 19 when officials at the Gallup Indian Medical Center alerted Mann that they had a suspected case of pneumonic plague in a high school senior. It was feared the youth might have attended classes where he could have spread the disease.

Without waiting for confirmation, which was made the next day, Mann and Dr. Tim Fleming, the hospital medical director, decided to give preventive medication to 15 people, who were placed under medical surveillance because they had had contact with the sick student.

Mann drove to Gallup to work with local officials in carefully tracking the steps of the patient to find other possible contacts.

"My first assumption was that we might have to deal with up to 100 kids," Mann said.

"However, through careful interviewing, we were able to confirm that he had no evidence of coughing or pneumonia until that evening (after school). From that point, we were able to confirm that he stayed home."

School officials were concerned, not only for the health of the patient, but for graduation ceremonies scheduled June 20.

"We were able to assure them within an hour or two that they could hold graduation," Mann said.

Nonetheless, he joined school authorities in writing a "low-key, non-scary" letter to students on what steps to take if plague symptoms developed. By 6 p.m. on May 20, about 20 hours after the initial notification, Mann's work was done.

"The surveillance system (for contacts) was set up, the medical community was informed, telephones had been set up for people to call with questions and the media had been informed," he said.

The young man died June 11, but the disease did not spread.

Stromberg Installs New System In New York

Stromberg-Carlson recently installed a System Century Digital Central Office with more than 5,000 lines and 1,700 trunks for Continental Telephone Co. of Uptate New York.

The new digital office, in Johnstown, N.Y., is a tandem switch and interfaces a toll board for telephone service to 13 surrounding communities. It provides line-service observing and full local and toll test capabilities.

By the end of the summer, the Johnstown central office will function as the host office for two Remote Line Switches (RLSs) to be installed in Glen and Caroga Lake, New York. A third RLS is scheduled for installation in Broadalbin in 1984.

Johnstown, Glen, Caroga Lake and Broadalbin are in east central New York State, and on the southern edge of the Adirondack National Park.

Stromberg-Carlson, a Plessey Telecommunications Co., is a leading designer and manufacturer of telecommunications equipment.

Condominiums Sold Out

A sellout has been announced at Destiny Springs Condominium in Altamonte Springs, a 249-unit complex located on Lake Destiny Road near the 436 Interchange of Interstate 4.

All units were sold — and converted to condominium — in less than two years, amounting to some $10 million in sales, according to Sandi McElreath of Equity Realty Inc., which marketed the project.

Allied Tire Expands

Stanley Hanin, president of Allied Tire Sales headquartered in Altamonte Springs, has announced the formation of two new districts on Florida's West Coast due to store expansion.

Cardinal Opens Gainesville Knights Inn

Knights Inn, the rapidly growing motel division of Cardinal Industries Inc. of Sanford, Atlanta and Ohio, has formally opened its Gainesville facility.

Located at 4021 S.W. 40th Blvd., the Knights Inn facility is composed of 115 rooms. The motel officially opened for business in February.

"We're extremely pleased to be a part of what we feel is one of Florida's fastest growing areas," says Bud Recklaw, Cardinal's director of Motel Operations. "Because of the area's heavy popularity, particularly during the University of Florida football season, and its emergence as a business center, there was a need for quality, budget-structured motel rooms in the city and the reason why Knights Inn expanded its operations in the area at this time."

Presently, there are five Knights Inn facilities in Cardinal's Florida Region and 40 in all encompassing 4,500 rooms in seven states, including Florida, Georgia, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Pennsylvania and Kentucky. The motels, which in most cases enjoy a AAA industry rating, are geared toward the budget-minded business and vacation traveler.

Since its beginning 10 years ago, Knights Inn has enjoyed success. Last year, it was the industry's 109th largest chain and the 10th largest motel management company in the country. Company spokesmen feel the division will sell $30 million worth of rooms by the end of 1983.

"We expect to bring on 20 new motels by the end of this year, 30 new motels by the end of 1984, 40 by the end of 1985 and 50 by 1986 and 1987," says Art Stiles, vice president of Cardinal's Motel Division. "By 1987, we project we'll be handling between $300 and $400 million in annual sales."

Over the next two years, Florida and South Georgia will account for 30 percent of the division's growth, with six new motels slated to be added in the region by the end of the year and 10 new complexes the end of 1984, notes Stiles.

In addition to motels and rental apartment communities which number more than 500 and represent nearly 20,000 units, Cardinal also builds single-family homes, condominiums, commercial office parks and adult congregate living facilities.

Cardinal has four manufacturing plants in Sanford, Atlanta and Columbus, Ohio (two).

Cardinal Industries has broken ground for its third rental apartment community in Melbourne.

Huntington Green II is a planned $3.3 million garden apartment community that will comprise 86 units in one- and two-bedroom configurations. The 6.6-acre, 10-building complex, which is located at 1135 N. Wickham Rd., is scheduled to open in August.

"We've made a major commitment to the Greater Melbourne area," says Steve Casey, director of Land Acquisition for Cardinal Industries. "We see the area as an emerging market and welcome the opportunity to play a continuing role in that growth picture."

Village Green Center Open

Sondra (Sunnie) Lichtenstein, manager of marketing and sales for Village on the Green, has announced the opening of the Information Center on site in Sabal Point on State Road 434 in Longwood.

The 3,000-square-foot center includes a decorated model of a one-bedroom apartment offered at the luxury community geared to active retirees.

Mrs. Lichtenstein has begun marketing the community to be built in an area surrounded by five holes of the Sabal Point Golf Course. Phase One includes 164 units; a total of 288 villas and apartments are planned for the project.

Sun To Sell 11 Flagship Banks

Sun Banks Inc. has announced that it has signed agreements for the divestiture of 11 Flagship banks in accordance with the plan announced on June 2. The divestitures are intended to facilitate regulatory approval of the merger of Flagship into Sun, and will occur immediately after that merger.

The 11 banks will be acquired by five Florida-based financial institutions for a total of approximately $132 million. Due to minority interests in some of the banks, Sun will receive approximately $128 million when the divestitures are consummated.

The Flagship banks in Volusia County and Melbourne (Brevard County) will be acquired by First Florida Banks Inc., for a total of approximately $38.0 million. The Flagship banks in Highlands County, Lake County, Tallahassee (Leon County) and Charlotte County will be acquired by Florida National Banks of Florida Inc., for a total of approximately $30.4 million. The Flagship banks in Okeechobee County, Putnam County and Kissimmee (Osceola County) will be acquired by Barnett Banks of Florida Inc., for approximately $25.6 million. The Flagship bank in Orlando will be acquired by First Fidelity Savings & Loan Association in Winter Park for approximately $22 million. The Flagship bank in Haines City (Polk County) will be purchased by First Bankers Corporation of Florida for approximately $15.7 million.

Phone Calling Card System 'A Success'

Southern Bell says that its Automated Calling Card Service has been a success since being introduced one year ago.

"We encourage our customers who have Touchtone phones to use this convenient service," said Sanford Southern Bell Manager Larry Strickler. "All that is really needed in one of our credit cards — a Calling Card. Then customers at Touchtone phones simply dial 'O,' the telephone number wanted, and the Calling Card number after a special tone sounds. Customers should remember that they do not have to listen to the recording that follows the tone but can begin inputting the Calling Card number as soon as the tone sounds."

Southern Bell's computer instantly verifies the Calling Card number. If that number is valid, the call is automatically advanced. If the number is incorrectly dialed, there is time to redial correctly before having to hang up and start again.

The advantages of Automated Calling Card Service include:

- Increased speed. Provides much quicker calling for the customers by eliminating the need to talk to an operator.
- Increased security. Since customers do not have to repeat the card number aloud, there is far less chance of someone else getting the number.

● Increased convenience. Sequence calling allows callers to make several Calling Card Calls after entering the number only once. Callers merely hit the pound sign (*) at the end of one call and dial the next call without repeating the Calling Card Number.

● Reduced rates. Customers can save up to $.50 per call on station-to-station interstate calls if they use their Calling Card.

You can arrange to have a Calling Card by simply calling your local Business Office at 322-6701.

Stayin' Alive Indians Overcome Maitland

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

When you're just 10 years old and playing in a Major Top Team Tournament with baseball players one and two years older — things can get a little tense, especially when it seems like every groundball is coming your way.

Altamonte Indian third base William Thompson was the 10-year-old behind the eight ball Friday night at DeLand in the District 14, Division 2 Tournament. And when it was all over, he looked more like a 10-year veteran than his present age.

Thompson put some early inning fielding problems behind him and ripped a single to left center with the bases loaded in the top of the sixth inning to cement a 9-5 Altamonte victory over the previously unbeaten Maitland Astros. The victory forces a winner-take-all game Saturday night at 7:30 between the same two teams.

"William started out a little shaky," said Altamonte manager Don Birle. "But he got over it and he came up with a couple big hits and two nice plays."

Altamonte, which has now won five games in six days, jumped out of the gate early. Kevin Wainscott doubled to start the game and Kent Brubaker followed with a single to center. When Brubaker broke for second, an error by the second baseman allowed Wainscott to score. Two outs later, Joseph Difrancesco delivered a single up the middle for a 2-0 lead.

In the second, Thompson singled to right center and moved up on Sean Lanagan's walk. A passed ball on Kevin Lovett's strikeout moved both runners again and when the shortstop threw away Wainscott's groundball, both came around to score for a 4-0 advantage.

Altamonte first baseman Tony Ganci knocked out Maitland starter Billy Magee in the third. The stocky 12 year old picked out a Magee curveball and sent it bouncing off the street way beyond the left-field fence. It was Ganci's fourth round-tripper of the playoffs and fifth of the year.

After Magee walked Thompson, reliever Greg Llewellyn came on to shut down the uprising. Llewellyn kept Altamonte off balance with a dipping curve for the next two innings, striking out five.

The Indians' starter, Kent Brubaker, pitched hitless ball through the first three innings, facing just one of the minimum and getting some solid defense from second baseman Difrancesco and rightfielder Lanagan.

That defense came apart in the fourth, however, when the Astros reeled off all five of their runs. After Magee grounded out, Willy Daunic drew a walk and Llewellyn reached on a fielder's choice. Doug Schoen then reached on an error by Thompson to fill the bases.

Dan Royal then hit a sharp one-hopper to Difrancesco's left at second. He speared the ball falling down, scrambled to his feet and looked home for a force out. Seeing no play there, he tossed the ball to first, but Ganci, too, was looking home and the ball rolled by him. Two runs scored and the runners moved to second and third.

At that juncture, Altamonte skipper Birle pulled Brubaker, who still hadn't been touched for a base hit, in favor of Difrancesco. The first hitter, Russ Mc Bryde, cooperated by hitting a groundball back to Difrancesco who looked the runners back, but then threw the ball over Ganci's head. Two more scored to pull the Astros within 5-4 and Mc Bryde sailed into second base.

Difrancesco then fanned the next batter for the second out. At that point, Maitland manager Sid Cash made a key move, pinch-hitting his only substitute, Jeff Rapson. Rapson swung and missed twice, then picked on a curveball up in his eyes and scorched a line drive into the left-field corner. Mc Bryde scored the tying run and Rapson stroled into second with Maitland's first hit. A. J. MacArthur followed with an infield single, but Magee grounded to third and Ganci made a great scoop on the low throw to end the rally.

Wainscott, who took a painful foul tip off the leg in the bottom of the fifth, shook it off to put the hurt on Maitland in the sixth. He walked on five pitches and when Brubaker reached on an error, the Indians were just breaking out the war paint. Birle struck out for the fourth time, but Todd Christensen walked to load the bases.

Difrancesco then drew a pass on a 3-2 pitch to force in the tie-breaking run and the dangerous Ganci also walked to give Altamonte a 7-5 lead. Thompson then put Maitland away with a base hit over the shortstop's head to chase home two more for a 9-5 advantage.

Maitland received two-out hits in the sixth, but Difrancesco induced MacArthur to ground back to the mound and he tossed to Thompson for the force and final out.

"We made some errors, but we came back and got them," said a relieved Birle after the game. "We played errorless ball for a couple games...then it seemed like we came apart all at once in the fourth inning."

Saturday night should be a brilliant matchup between Altamonte's ace, Alex Birle, and Maitland's lean lefthander Willy Daunic. Daunic, who moved to Maitland this past year from New York, was 11-0 during the regular season when the Astros lost just three of 24 games. He has good speed and averaged 11 strikeouts per outing.

"We've faced some good pitching throughout this tournament," said Birle. "And we've hit everybody so far."

Sunday morning, he'd like to be able to say the same thing.

Duncan's Single Drops Eustis

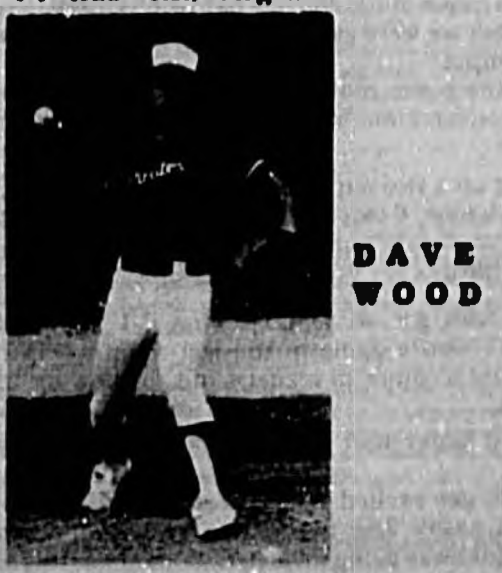

Craig Duncan broke a 4-4 tie with a two-out single in the bottom of the sixth inning Friday night as the Oviedo Giants slipped by the Eustis Rangers, 5-4, in the Senior League District 14, Division 2 Top Team Tournament at Eustis. The Oviedo victory forced a second game between the two teams for the championship which got under way at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Oviedo had taken a 4-1 lead after four innings only to lose it as Eustis rallied for three runs in the fifth. Oviedo hung tough, however, behind the strong pitching arm of David Wood who went the distance for the victory.

"I'm proud of the way we remained calm after losing the 4-1 lead," Oviedo manager Tommy Ferguson said. In Saturday's tie-breaker, Ferguson said he would go with Duncan on the mound.

Eustis broke on top with a run in the top of the third inning. Rich Curry led off with a single, stole second and the next two hitters reached safely to load the bases with no outs. Jay Carter then lifted a sacrifice fly to center field to score Curry for a 1-0 Eustis lead. Wood then struck out the next two hitters to end the inning without any further damage.

The Giants bounced back with four runs in the bottom of the third to take a 4-1 lead. Ron Magoutas and Wood walked to lead off and advanced a base on a passed ball. Duncan then stepped up and drilled a two-run double to give the Giants a 2-1 lead. Randy Ferguson followed with an RBI single to chase home Duncan. Terry Gammons then reached on an infield single and Ellis Bell walked to load the bases. Mark Merchant then hit a grounder to the shortstop who got the force out at home, but, Eustis' catcher threw wildly trying to get the double play at first and Gammons came around to score the fourth run of the frame.

The Rangers, which had a 3-0 record going into the game, got back in the thick of things with three runs in the top of the fifth. Rich Curry walked and Chad Terion reached on an error. Wood then struck out the next two hitters, but Tom Ruggier followed with a double to left center to drive in Curry and Terion. David Thornton then reached on an infield single as Ruggier moved to third and Damien Thornton reached on an error as Ruggier scored to tie the game.

Wood held Eustis scoreless in the top of the sixth and Eustis pitcher Carter retired the first two Oviedo hitters in the bottom of the frame. Wood then stepped up and belted a single to keep the inning alive. Wood stole second and advanced to third on a passed ball and Duncan followed by slapping a shot up the middle to drive in Wood with a 5-4 Oviedo lead.

Wood retired the Rangers in order in the top of the seventh to send the Giants into Saturday's final. Wood struck out 12 Friday night and walked four while his counterpart, Carter, struck out seven and walked six.

Duncan led the Giants at the plate as he went 2 for 3 with three RBI.

Korgan Likes Rotary Chances For Sweep Of KOC Tuesday

By Chris Flister
Herald Sports Writer

Rotary manager Ed Korgan feels his team has a pretty good chance of sweeping Knights of Columbus in the Sanford Junior League City Championship when the series resumes Tuesday night at 7:30 at Chase Park. Heavy rains caused the second game to be postponed on both Thursday and Friday. The three-day delay is because Jeff Monson, director of parks and recreation, will be out of town.

"My team is really up after winning that first game," Korgan said. "They are really motivated and are ready to play. They have been waiting for this chance."

Rotary got only three hits in the first game, but played solid defense and held on for a 4-3 victory. The Knights had six hits, but four baserunning mistakes took the second half champions out of the game.

On Tuesday night Rotary will have Jason Heffington on the mound against David Rape for the Knights. Rape had a 5-0 record during the regular season while Heffington was 3-1, his only loss coming at the hands of KOC and Rape the last week of the season. In that game, KOC got only two hits off Heffington while Rotary had six hits off Rape.

"The biggest difference in that game was that I didn't have any catching," Korgan said. Rotary's regular catcher, Eddie Korgan, missed three of the six games Rotary lost in the second half. "Eddie makes a big difference when he's behind the plate, he's the team leader."

If Heffington gets into trouble Tuesday night, Rotary will go with Mike Edwards in relief. Edwards came on in the bottom of the seventh inning in the first game and wound up with a save after striking out Todd Revels to end the game. Revels wasn't too happy with himself afterwards and he was suspended for the second game after throwing his bat and helmet.

"KOC is handicapped without Revels," Korgan said. "He's a good ballplayer and means a lot to the team." Along with being a powerful hitter, Revels is also the only other pitcher the Knights have besides Rape and first-game loser Leonard Lucas.

Knights of Columbus will have to cut down on defensive errors and run the bases correctly if it wants to get back in the series. KOC couldn't pull out the win even though they had two managers Wednesday night who had a combined total of 29 victories. Moose manager Bill Dube came on as an assistant to Al Whitted just for the city series and he coached first base while Whitted took third. Even Whitted and Dube couldn't stop the Knights baserunners from stumbling around.

If KOC wins Tuesday night, a third and final game would be scheduled for Wednesday night at 7:30 to decide the city champion.

STANDINGS

Tim Raines continued to swing a hot bat with a single and a double and the game-winning RBI Friday night as Montreal edged the Chicago Cubs, 4-3, to extend its National League East lead to 3 1/2 games. The Atlanta Braves moved to within 3 1/2 of the Los Angeles Dodgers in the West by sweeping a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds. Craig McMurtry tossed a shutout in the first game for his eighth win. See Page 10A.

Thurston, Astros Lose Heartbreaker In 7th, 3-2

Jerrey Thurston deserved a better fate.

Altamonte's 11-year-old hurler struck out 12 batters and allowed just four hits through six innings only to lose a heartbreaking 3-2 decision in seven innings to Ocoee in the District 14, Division 1 Major League Top Team Tournament at Rolling Hills Friday night. The loss eliminated the Astros from the tournament. Ocoee must beat Apopka twice to win the division.

"I feel sorry for Jerrey," said Altamonte coach Doug Heiser. "He pitched a whale of a ballgame. We just haven't been hitting."

And the Astros haven't been swinging either. They struck out 16 times, seven of which were called strikes. "And it was called strike one, strike two, and strike three," lamented Heiser.

John Casteel didn't have any trouble hitting the ball, though. Casteel slapped four hits in four at bats for the evening, and his last base hit — a groundball between shortstop and third — came with the bases loaded and no out in the bottom of the seventh to chase home the game-winner.

It was also Casteel who singled in the sixth, moved to second on a passed ball, took third on a sacrifice bunt and scored when J.C. Chandler reached on an error to tie the game at 2-2. Chandler fouled off four two-strike offerings from Thurston before delivering. Thurston finished with 13 whiffs and a seven-hitter.

After Ocoee moved ahead 1-0 in the first, Altamonte stormed back with single rallies in the third and fourth innings to take a 2-1 lead. With two outs in the third, Jeff Conklin doubled over the left fielder's head and moved to second on a single by Wes Weger. With Thurston at bat, Ocoee starter Mark Schoenfelder was victimized by a passed ball allowing Conklin to score the tying run.

In the fourth, Andy Spolski walked, then alertly swiped second base on a delayed steal. Ronnie Dudley struck out, but Todd Heiser stroked a base hit to left field to chase home Spolski for a 2-1 lead.

Casteel pitched the seventh to pick up the victory.

Discovered Ring Revives Memories For Howard's Widow

Funny, how one phone call can bring back so many memories.

Arlene Howard, the widow of Elston Howard, got a call like that Thursday from the Bronx District Attorney's office while watering some of the tomatoes, peppers, egg plant and basil she grows in the garden of her home in Teaneck, N.J.

Assistant District Attorney Edward Finerman was on the line, telling her they had arrested a man in the Bronx wearing a 1977 New York Yankees World Series ring originally given to her late husband and stolen from their home on March 21, 1981, three months after he died.

The man the police had arrested was Carlos Maldonado, 41, owner of a grocery store in the Bronx, after his car ran into a police van carrying officers Marvin Carroll and Raymond Loughlin of the Bronx Task Force. The two cops had been following the vehicle that had collided with theirs because they suspected the car had been stolen.

While questioning Maldonado, the police could hardly help noticing the flashy diamond studded ring with the Yankee logo on his left hand.

"You know something," Loughlin said to his partner. "I don't ever remember seeing this guy in the World Series."

"Me, neither," Carroll said. "Where did you get the ring?" they asked the suspect.

No answer. Upon examining the ring, the cops discovered Howard's name on the inside. They also discovered the car Maldonado was driving had been stolen, so they took him in.

Mario Merola, the Bronx District Attorney, has begun an active investigation to find out how the man in custody came into possession of both the ring and the car. When Howard's home was burglarized two years ago, 11 other baseball rings were taken plus other jewelry. Howard had been given rings and watches as mementos of the 10 World Series and nine All-Star games in which he had participated as a player and coach with the Yankees and Boston Red Sox. The police and D.A.'s office wanted to find out more about all the other jewelry stolen from Howard, but Maldonado wasn't talking. He got himself a lawyer.

When Finerman called Arlene Howard and told her he had recovered at least one of her husband's rings, she was excited.

By MILTON RICHMAN

"I was really pleased," she said. "My first thought was, 'gee, maybe they've recovered everything.' People who know about the burglary have always asked me the last two years, 'Did you ever get anything back?' and 'Have you heard anything yet?' It was so painful everytime they asked. I really thought that whoever took stole the rings had melted them down for the gold and destroyed them. When I got the call from the district attorney's office, I was told only one ring was recovered. I was hoping it was the 1956 ring, but it wasn't."

Howard's wife explained that the 1956 World Series ring was always considered something special by her husband.

"It was the first World Series Elston ever was in and that was the only ring he ever wore," she said. "The 1977 ring meant a lot to him, too, even though he was a coach with the Yankees by that time. It represented the first world championship they won after they were rebuilt, but the 1956 was the one he treasured. He was wearing it when he went into the hospital and I took it home after he passed. Why I was hoping all the rings had been recovered was because I wanted each of my children, Cheryl, Elston, Jr., and Karen to have one and I wanted to give some of the others to special friends."

The rings and watches were stolen during a time when Arlene Howard was in Atlantic City with friends for two nights. It was the first time she had left the house since the death of her husband in December of 1980 at the age of 51 and she remembers her anguish when she returned to find all of his most treasured possessions had been stolen.

"It was a sickening feeling," she explained. "You feel so furious. You feel violated and so helpless, and you say to yourself what can this possibly mean to someone else? I cried. Those rings and watches were very important to Elston. He was very proud of them. It was always a source of conversation whenever people came to visit us. They'd always ask about the rings and Elston would show them. He just kept them laying around the house. I knew I should've put everything in a safety deposit box after he was gone, but I just didn't have the courage to do it, so they just lay there in Elston's room."

Yankee owner George Steinbrenner takes a lot of criticism for being so dictatorial and tough on his employees, but you'll never hear anything like that from the widow of the former Yankee catcher. One of the Howards' neighbors in Teaneck for many years has been Marvin Goldklang, a limited partner of Steinbrenner's with the Yankees. Goldklang told Steinbrenner about the burglary and the Yankee owner immediately replaced the two of them, the 1977 and 1978 rings he had given Howard as a coach with the Yankees those two years. The other rings stolen had been presented to Howard before Steinbrenner had the Yankees.

"George couldn't have been nicer to us," Arlene Howard said. "When he replaced those two rings, that meant there'd be one for Cheryl and for Elston, Jr. Now we'll have another one for Karen. I was wishing it was the 1956 ring. It meant so much to Elston."

Texas Tames A's; Assumes 1st Place

Usually an early candidate for Boot Hill, the Texas Rangers are suddenly taming the West.

Led by the timely hitting of Pete O'Brien and Bill Stein and the clutch pitching of Mike Smithson and Charlie Hough, the Rangers swept a doubleheader from the Oakland A's, 6-5 and 6-2, Friday night to take over first place in the American League West.

"Any time you win a double-header from a team in your division it's very important," said Stein, who started both games in place of the injured Wayne Tolleson. "In the first game, we were four runs down in the first inning, but we had the feeling we would come back to win. I think that feeling helped carry us through the doubleheader."

The Rangers, who won only 64 games last season and finished in sixth place in the division, boosted their record to 37-31 by posting their 11th victory in their last 15 games. Last year the Rangers didn't win their 37th game until July 23.

In the opener, Texas came from behind to win 6-5 when former SCC star Larry Parrish led off the ninth inning with a triple and scored one later on Pete O'Brien's single. Smithson, 6-5, earned his third victory in the last four starts and recorded his fourth complete game of the season.

"I feel this series is bigger than the one with California," said Smithson. "Nobody expected us to beat California, but we just have to win against Oakland."

In the nightcap, Hough blanked the A's until the ninth when Wayne Gross singled home a pair of runs. Hough, who retired 16 batters in a row from the third through the eighth innings, struck out six and walked none.

Stein delivered a two-run double in the third to stake the Rangers to a 2-0 lead and singled home another run in the fifth. Parrish also chipped in with a two-run triple.

Tigers 9, Orioles 0
At Baltimore, Chet Lemon and Enos Cabell blasted home runs and Larry Herndon collected four hits, including a pair of doubles, to lead the Tigers to victory behind the five-hit pitching of Dan Petry. The Tigers collected 14 hits off Dennis Martinez, 4-1, and relievers Sammy Stewart and Dan Morigiello.

Red Sox 5, Yankees 4

At Boston, Glenn Hoffman doubled in one run and scored two more and Bob Stanley picked up his 15th save of the season, enabling the Red Sox to snap a three-game losing streak. Five different players knocked in runs for the Red Sox, who knocked out starter Dave Righetti with two runs in the sixth inning. Don Mattingly homered for the Yankees.

Brewers 6, Indians 2

At Milwaukee, Don Sutton pitched a three-hitter and Cecil Cooper drove in three runs with a homer and a triple in leading the Brewers to victory. Sutton, 5-4, didn't give up a hit until Andre Thornton opened the seventh inning with his first of two homers in the game. It was Sutton's first victory since May 1.

Royals 11, Angels 3

At Kansas City, Mo., Frank White's three-run homer capped a seven-run seventh-inning that carried the Royals to victory. The Royals rapped off six consecutive hits to open the seventh off Tommy John, 6-4, and Luis Sanchez, and White capped the inning with his sixth homer to ensure Kansas City its sixth victory in its last eight games.

Twins 5, White Sox 1

At Chicago, Gary Ward had three hits, including a two-run homer, to help the Twins snap the White Sox's five-game winning streak. Al Williams, 4-8, pitched seven innings and allowed four hits to get the victory. Ron Kittle hit his 17th homer for Chicago.

Blue Jays 4, Mariners 2

At Seattle, Cliff Johnson's bases-loaded single highlighted a four-run third inning that helped the Blue Jays hand the Mariners their eighth straight loss. Luis Leal, 7-6, scattered six hits and struck out six in going the distance for the victory.

USFL Report Card Earns 'C' For Attendance

NEW YORK (UPI) — Any report card on the United States Football League must pay special attention to the attendance grade. Give it a "C."

With its league championship game just three weeks away, the USFL and its Oakland franchise share a prominent characteristic ... both are playing .500 ball. Commissioner Chet Simmons says his twin barometers of USFL health are attendance and TV ratings. While both have been slipping, they remain within the acceptable parameters as defined by Simmons before the league's inaugural season began.

"The birth of this new league represents one of the finest chapters ever written in professional football," proclaimed Peter Spivak in May of 1982, when he served as acting USFL chairman. But the league's first chapter is closing on a somber note as the novelty of the first professional spring football venture fades in the heat of June and the steady lure of major-league baseball.

After three weeks of play in the 18-game regular season schedule, the USFL boasted an average attendance of 33,570. Last weekend, the average was 25,968, slightly above the overall average of 25,214 through 96 games. There is little link apparent between success on the field and USFL attendance. The Denver Gold, 7-9, lead the league with an average attendance of 41,736. New Jersey, 5-11, ranks No. 3 and Oakland, 8-8, is fourth. The USFL's class act — the 14-2 Philadelphia Stars — is averaging a paltry 19,195 at Veterans Stadium.

"Our owners didn't join the league with their eyes closed," says Peter Hadnagy, director of operations for the USFL. "They were told to expect to lose 'X' number of millions. That's why we require $1.5 million credit contribution from every team."

The USFL's first major coups were the signing of 2-year television contracts with ABC and ESPN. While TV officials publicly profess unabashed delight with the ratings to date, the facts suggest otherwise.

"There obviously won't be the same kind of numbers now that we had at the beginning of the season because of the nice weather," says an ABC spokesperson. "We predicted a 5 rating at the start of the season."

Through 16 weeks, the USFL has an overall 6.1 rating and 17 share on ABC. For the first 15 weeks of a similar period last year, ABC garnered a 4.8 rating and 14 share with a combination of "American

Pro Football

Sportsman... "Superstars" and "Sportsbeat."

On ESPN, which reaches 25 million American homes, the league received a 3.9 rating in the first quarter, covering seven telecasts, second on ESPN only to coverage of the NCAA basketball tournament. In the second quarter so far, though, covering 23 games, the cable network shows a 3.2 rating.

ESPN Executive Vice-President Scotty Connal is gushing over the USFL's cable numbers, despite a steady plunge.

"I felt at the start of the year that if we did between a 3-to-5 rating we'd be doing extremely well," says Connal, noting a 2.0 rating is a traditional cable yardstick for success. "With all the weather problems the league has had, it still has gone very well. Herschel Walker has rated well — no question about it. We did a 5.3 on a New Jersey-Chicago game even though New York City picked up a local telecast."

"The reason I'm optimistic is that basically, people have stayed with us. Of course, there is a strong tradition for Monday night football established by the NFL. In my opinion, the league is going to succeed. It's been exciting for us — we promote the hell out of the USFL. We took a lot of flak in the beginning for shilling for the league, but we believe in the USFL."

Meet some people who don't. "I'm a traditionalist," says ex-NFL star receiver Paul Warfield. "In the spring, with baseball on and track and field, there's no question what I'm gonna watch. Football's a fall sport. The USFL has a lot of converting to do."

Cleveland Browns' owner Art Modell is unimpressed by the USFL's quality of play. "They've got a very long way to go," Modell says. "You see things like 28-yard punts and fumbled snaps repeatedly."

While the 12 teams already in the league figure to improve the overall level of performance next spring, the USFL has announced '84 expansion into Houston, Pittsburgh and Jacksonville, Fla., with a 16th team to be named shortly, probably in Tulsa, Okla.

This rapid growth doesn't set well with Blitz coach George Allen.

"It is my firm belief that expansion at this time or in the next two years would not only hurt the Blitz but every other team," he says.

The issue of unionism is still on hold after two rival labor groups Tuesday failed in attempts to organize the 600-player league.

A runoff election is likely to determine whether USFL players will align with the NFL Players Association or choose to have no union.

The league has made minor inroads in snatching away high draft choices from the NFL, with first-round pick Jim Kelly, a well-regarded quarterback prospect from Miami (Fla.), deciding to ditch the Buffalo Bills for the Gamblers of Houston next season.

As the USFL approaches the July 17 title game in Denver, it's apparent the league will survive at least another season, but the long term is another chapter from Spivak's book. In the latest Nielsen ratings, two USFL games, Chicago-Birmingham and Los Angeles-New Jersey, rank 72nd — and last — on the list with a 4.8 rating. According to the report, just 10 percent of homes with TVs that were turned on during the time period were watching Herschel Walker or Chicago's own star back, Tim Spencer.

"Coming out of college I may have had some doubts, but once I started to play, I realized what great intensity there was," says Michigan rookie safety David Greenwood. "I think the USFL will become a great league and I have no more doubts of its future or of its success." Chet Simmons should be so lucky.

Relentless Press Leads Sanford Kiwanis To Win

A relentless press against a much taller Miami team enabled the Sanford East-West Kiwanis to roll to a 82-65 victory in the first round of the AAU/Jr. Olympics 15 and Under State Basketball Championship Friday night at Santa Fe Community College in Gainesville.

The full-court press enabled Sanford to outscore Miami, 24-12, in the second quarter after Miami had taken a 22-19 lead after the first quarter. A 26-point fourth quarter put the game on ice for the East-West Kiwanis.

"We didn't rebound well at all, Miami was a lot taller than we are," Sanford coach John McNamara said. "I don't think we had a defensive rebound the entire first half. But, when we put on our press, it really got to them and forced them to make a lot of mistakes."

Sanford will now go on to play defending state champion Tampa, Saturday at 12 noon. Although Miami was a taller team, they don't even compare to Tampa according to McNamara. "Their (Tampa's) starting five are 6-5, 6-5, 6-4, 6-4 and 6-3," McNamara said. "We don't have any six footers."

Mike Wright took high-scoring honors as he poured in 24 points for the East-West Kiwanis including eight points in the fourth quarter. Daryl Williams added 20 points including a 12 for 15 performance from the free throw line. Williams hit 8 of 10 free throws in the fourth quarter. Jerry Parker added 14 points for Sanford including seven in the fourth quarter while Alvin Jones toaced in 13.

"We only had eight players for the ballgame and they all played excellent basketball," McNamara said.

Cook's Corner Rolls On

William Wynn and Willie Mitchell each tossed in 19 points while Bruce Franklin added 11 as Seminole Cook's Corner rolled over Lake Howell, 69-51, Thursday night in AAU basketball action at Seminole High School.

Cook's Corner, 2-0, hosts Colonial on Tuesday.

Upset Of Evert Leaves Clear Road For Martina

Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — With her strongest rival the victim of a surprising upset, Martina Navratilova now appears to have a clear road ahead for her second successive Wimbledon title.

Second-seeded and three-time champion Chris Evert Lloyd was upset 6-1, 7-6 by unseeded fellow American Kathy Jordan and No. 3 seed Andrea Jaeger now is favored to meet Navratilova in next week's final.

Evert was apparently troubled by a stomach virus and had hardly slept or eaten before the match.

Navratilova meets Mima Jausovec in what appears to be a predictable fourth round match Saturday. The top-seeded Navratilova has beaten the Yugoslavian clay court specialist 19 times in 20 matches and should improve that total Saturday.

The five other surviving seeds in Navratilova's half of the draw all are in action Saturday as well, but none seem likely to be in much danger of falling to reach the 16.

Eighth seed Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia faces Louise Allen of the U.S., ninth-seeded Sylvia Hanika of West Germany plays South African Jennifer Mundel, 12th seed Virginia Ruziel of Romania faces Sabina Simmonds of Italy, Britain's Jo Durie, the 13th seed, plays Eva Pfaff of West Germany and 16th seed Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany plays Kathy Jordan's older sister Barbara.

John McEnroe, the 1981 champion and No. 2 seed who threatened to walk out during his bad-tempered match against Florin Segarceanu of Romania meets fellow American Brad Gilbert in the third round. They have never played before.

Other other top seeded men also are playing their opponents for the first time.

Third seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, bidding to get to the fourth round for the first time in four attempts here, meets unseeded Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland.

Lendl, who dislikes playing on grass because of allergies, said he was enjoying the tournament more this year.

"I'm beginning to like Center Court because you are able to show more people what you have learned and what you know how to do," Lendl said. "My grass allergies have not been too bad here so far."

Sweden's Mats Wilander, the fifth seed, meets Roscoe Tanner of the U.S. Tanner has slipped in the world standings since losing the 1979 final to Bjorn Borg.

Other men's seeds in action are No. 11 Johan Kriek of the U.S., who faces Robert Van't Hof, and 14th seed Bill Scanlon, who plays American compatriot Tim Gullikson.

Evert Lloyd's defeat Friday stunned players and fans alike.

"I really was surprised," said six-time champion Billie Jean King, who clinched a fourth-round place with a straight set victory over her old doubles partner Rosie Casals.

"I heard that she wasn't feeling all that well before the match but I thought she would dig down deep into her reserves to pull it back when she was in trouble," added King. "But if you are not feeling so good, sometimes you can't do that."

Casals added, "Everyone of us (the players) are shocked. But you must not take anything away from Kathy Jordan. She played great tennis. She was the deserved winner on the day."

Jordan broke through a psychological barrier to destroy Lloyd's dreams of winning the Grand slam following her victories in the U.S., Australian and French Opens.

Jordan needed just one hour and 36 minutes for her victory and was understandably jubilant.

"I think it is good for women's tennis that someone is able to beat Chris or Martina because they have this aura of invincibility about them," Jordan said. "This hasn't sunk in yet." Lloyd, who won the title in 1974, 1976 and 1981, seemed almost as permanent a fixture at Wimbledon as the ivy-covered walls. The 28-year-old from Fort Lauderdale... had figured in the last five finals and had never failed to make the semifinals in her 12 previous appearances here. But Lloyd's hopes were dashed under an overcast court by a player who had never previously managed to take even a set from her in five earlier encounters.

John McEnroe flashed his terrible temper and his excellent tennis Friday while subduing Romania Florin Segarceanu.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Arafat Charges Syrians Plotting PLO Massacre

By United Press International

Hours after Syria expelled Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat, the guerrilla leader charged Syrian forces had surrounded his men with plans to massacre them.

Arafat made the charge Friday after arriving in Tunisia on a flight from Damascus, where officials ordered him out of the country for making "false accusations" that Syria was plotting with Palestinian rebels challenging his leadership of the PLO.

Arafat said his own Fatah guerrilla group, with 15,000 members the biggest of eight factions in the PLO, was besieged "by Syrian tanks and special forces" in Syria and in the Syrian-occupied parts of eastern Lebanon.

"I'm afraid that what's happening is the start of a new massacre to finish off what the Israelis had not completed in the siege of Beirut," he said.

The guerrilla chief also charged the government of Syrian President Hafez Assad was responsible for an ambush in which at least 13 Arafat loyalists were killed around midnight Thursday on the Homs road 25 miles north of Damascus.

The ambush between the Syrian towns of Ma'loul and Nabak appeared to have been the work of anti-Arafat Palestinians.

Strike Sent To Arbitration

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — In a bid to end a 12-day nationwide hunger strike by thousands of doctors demanding higher pay, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin agreed to refer the dispute to binding arbitration.

Begin also appealed to the country's doctors to end their fast in view of his change of mind on handling the dispute, Meridor said.

Israel television said two cases of severely injured children who were turned back by strike-bound hospitals in their hometowns prompted Begin to drop his opposition to arbitration.

The doctors have demanded a 100 percent pay increase over their $442 starting monthly salaries. The government is offering a raise of 30-40 percent.

More than 2,500 doctors have joined the hunger strike, and as hundreds of them began collapsing from weakness and fatigue nearly all of the nation's medical centers were closed or nearly shut down.

Martial Law May End

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — A day after Pope Paul II ended his tour of Poland, a minister in Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's government said the "moment of lifting martial law does not seem to be far removed."

Justice Minister Sylwester Zawadzki made his remarks Friday, following two meetings between John Paul and the Communist Party chief during the pope's second homecoming as pontiff, which ended Thursday.

Jaruzelski, who also is prime minister, might opt to lift martial law imposed Dec. 31, 1981 possibly before the July 22 National Day celebration.

In Moscow, the military newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star) said life in Poland had stabilized and the threat of anarchy was fading into the past.

The timing of the article was significant. It could have run earlier, but Soviet authorities may have been waiting to be sure the visit of the pope did not ignite rebellion.

U.S.-Backed Insurgency May Radicalize Regime

By Daniel Drosdoff
UPI Senior Editor

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua's revolutionary regime, though battered by U.S.-backed opposition guerrillas and by shortages of basic consumer goods, is firmly in power four years after the overthrow of dictator Anastasio Somoza.

Its leaders are drastically reorganizing national life, setting up a virtual one-party state with only token opposition.

An all-powerful political apparatus called the Sandinista National Liberation Front controls the army, judicial system, the major labor union and government at all levels — from the nine-man directorate at the top to neighborhood block committees at the bottom.

News on radio and television stations has been government-run since a state of emergency was declared in March of last year, and the country's only independent newspaper, La Prensa, is subjected to heavy prior censorship.

Diplomats, businessmen and politicians inside and outside of government agree that the U.S.-backed raids by Nicaraguan exiles have done little to affect the power of the revolutionary regime.

The main cities are free of violent protest movements despite widespread grumbling about the rationing of basic items like rice, beans, oil, gasoline and soap.

"This is a well-organized and well-disciplined society," a Western diplomat said. But hostility is growing between Managua and Washington.

President Reagan accuses the Sandinistas of serving as a conduit for arms to leftist rebels fighting the U.S.-backed government in El Salvador, and claims the guerrillas are using Nicaragua as a base.

The Nicaraguan regime has identified the United States as a prime force behind Honduran-based incursions by rightist exiles whose goal is to overthrow the Sandinistas.

Diplomatic relations reached a new low in early June with the expulsion of three U.S. diplomats. Nicaragua accused of plotting to poison the foreign minister. The United States retaliated by closing six Nicaraguan consulates and expelling 21 officials who worked in them.

Neither Washington nor Managua at this point is predicting a complete diplomatic break. But some businessmen and diplomats fear the regime may become more radical because of the hostility.

The Sandinista front came to power on July 19, 1979. Somoza, heir to a 43-year ruling dynasty established by his father, fled the country after nearly two years of civil war.

The name of the front was derived from that of a national hero, Augusto Cesar Sandino, who fought against the occupation of Nicaragua by U.S. Marines in the 1920s.

Sandinino was not a Marxist, but his successors who use his name have, in the words of one diplomat, "a Marxist vision of society."

He said this meant a doctrine that calls for shifting resources for the benefit of "peasants and workers," with the middle and upper classes suffering displacement.

Literacy has jumped from 55 percent before the revolution to an estimated 80 percent now. An estimated 1 million children and adults attend school, a third of the country's population.

A campaign is under way to bring preventive medicine to the countryside, such as vaccination and medical aid to the poor.

The government was able to make these improvements partially through the aid of Cuba. There are currently 2,000 Cuban teachers and 500 Cuban health workers, many of them doctors, in Nicaragua.

Internal dissent has focused on curbs on the private sector and mass media, and on shortages of some food items and rationing.

Opposition political parties are cowed by the government, prevented by "emergency" laws from criticizing it or even suggesting they might have a better alternative.

Some days, the Interior Ministry prohibits La Prensa from publishing 90 percent of its stories, striking out with a green "x" every article that hints at criticism of the government or suggests its policies are less than perfect.

when they go out on service or installation calls. "It is a problem," she said. "They do discover individuals not legally on the system, but who are receiving service. It has been estimated 5-7 percent of those receiving signals are on illegal hook-ups."

"Ultimately, we do want the person as a paying subscriber and they usually decide to keep it and start paying," she said. "But if they don't, we disconnect them."

What legitimate viewers pay an average of $17 a month to see, an estimated 1.6 million cable pirates nationwide are receiving free: Home Box Office, Showtime, Prism, Cinemax and other premier entertainment channels.

It is the largest problem now confronting the nation's $4.9 billion a year cable industry, which says the 500-odd systems now in operation in the U.S. are losing more than $220 million in potential revenues annually through piracy.

The loss of those revenues also deprives states and municipalities of millions of dollars in franchise taxes and, industry officials say, forces cable systems to raise rates of legitimate customers.

"It's the same as shoplifting," said Ed Dooley, vice president of public affairs for the National Cable Television Association.

Cable pirates, according to industry officials, come in a variety of shades.

"The primary theft involves a homeowner or someone he hires who gets a ladder, climbs a utility pole, taps into the cable company's coaxial wires and runs an illegal line into the house," said Hank Boerner, a spokesman for the Long Island Cable Television Council, which was formed specifically to fight cable theft.

The line then is connected to a converter, which is wired into the television and allows the viewer to select channels.

"Another ploy is to buy the service for one set and then purchase converters for more sets in the house," said Boerner.

The converter is the key to unlocking free cable television.

"On down the road," said Storer's Ms. Joyner, "we will go into addressable converters that we will be able to activate and deactivate from our office so that when subscribers don't turn in the converters when they are disconnected they won't do them any good. But we do not yet have this capability. It would solve illegal service and theft that we have had for the past 10-15 years."

The converters are provided to customers by cable firms for a monthly charge similar to the telephone lease fees levied by phone companies. The charge depends on the type of service ordered.

The cost of basic service, which includes network and public television stations and public access outlets, averages $8.34 a month for a single connection nationwide, said Dooley. Customers pay more — an average $17 a month — to obtain a premier pay service like Home Box Office.

Cable companies use a variety of methods to scramble pay service signals so customers who do not subscribe receive distorted pictures on those channels.

But pirates can also use a variety of ways to "descramble" those signals.

One method involves tampering with the converter. Industry officials said some types of converters can be fixed simply by connecting the correct internal contacts; children have been known to do it using pennies.

Another method uses a filter between the end of the line and the converter so that signals used to scramble the pay service channels are removed.

Complete Cable Co. of Madison, Wis. is currently suing a number of electronic shops for selling for $64 filters that allowed pirates to receive the Showtime movie service for free. A company official said the filters wholesale for $8.

Karen Coleman was informed near the end of April, 1979, that she had been chosen Florida Teacher of the Year for 1980. It was a personally rewarding and humbling experience. I truly felt it was a shared thing - I am a representative of many, many outstanding teachers in Seminole county and in Florida,' she said.

Teacher Finds Something To Love In Every Child

By Katherine Burkett
Special To The Herald

"It is essential that a teacher find something to love in every child." This principle of unconditional acceptance is part of Karen Coleman's philosophy of teaching, the philosophy that makes the ex-Florida State Teacher of the Year an example of excellence in our public schools.

When Karen speaks of the teaching, she speaks as someone who has seen the school system from many angles. She has taught elementary and secondary school and gifted and compensatory classes. Currently an administrative trainee, she has worked on both the school and district levels.

Karen began teaching in 1967 at Sanford Grammar School. After a year of teaching fifth grade, the family moved to Birmingham, Ala.

In her five years there, she taught grades from fifth to eighth and several subjects including gifted education. The family consisting of her husband Roger and children Sherrille and Barry returned because they missed Seminole County, which they had come to think of as home.

Karen returned just in time to help open Tuskawilla Middle School where she taught seventh grade math and gifted education. She described the excitement of being in a totally new school.

"There is enthusiasm, excitement and a sense of newness that defies description. All the chairs, desks and textbooks are brand new. It's a totally fresh start - a clean slate," she said.

In 1979, Karen began to be recognized for her excellence in teaching. She was chosen teacher of the year first for her school, then for the district. As part of the process for state level selection, an interviewing board visited Karen's classroom for observation and spoke to her students and co-workers. After school the board spoke to her separately.

The group included representatives of the PTA, the Department of Education, and the teachers' union. Karen said the diversity of the board ensured that the types of questions she was asked were varied. "They asked me questions about my philosophy of teaching, but they also asked me how many days of school I'd missed that year," she said.

One of the questions they asked her was "how do you create a love of learning in the classroom?" Karen answered, "By first being a model - by loving to learn. That's a must."

Karen was informed near the end of April, 1979, that she had been chosen Florida Teacher of the Year for 1980.

"It was a personally rewarding and humbling experience. I truly felt it was a shared thing - I am a representative of many, many outstanding teachers in Seminole county and in Florida," she said.

Karen and a group of runner-ups were invited to visit Tallahassee. There they were honored by many state officials, including Governor Bob Graham and Commissioner of Education Ralph D. Turlington. Karen was invited to make an appearance before the Florida House of Representatives in Tallahassee.

"While I was up there, I got such a good feeling. My people were tenant farmers in Alabama. Because education was public and free, we were able to break the chains of ignorance and poverty. I felt a real pride for my people in the past," she said.

During 1980, Karen traveled as a representative of the school system. "I still have a difficult time describing that year of experience. It was a year filled with travel, speaking to different groups and meeting with other educators," she said.

After that year, Karen was ready for a new challenge. She accepted a position in Milwec Middle School's compensatory education program. There she taught math to seventh graders who were behind several years, and helped them to catch up.

She was pleased with the progress they made. "Those kids sometimes made two, three, or four years of progress in one school year," she said.

In 1981, Karen joined the school system's administrative trainee program, a new program in which prospective administrators work with the school system in order to gain experience.

"It's a very forward looking program. In the present system, a teacher goes directly to an administrative position. Usually the teacher has only worked under one or two principals, and we tend to emulate those we have watched work. That's a very one dimensional training.

"This program allows a trainee to interview and observe many different administrators and pick the strengths of each. I think before long the state will require it," she said.

Last year, Karen worked with different school administrations. This year, her focus is on the district level. Karen enjoyed both experiences and has no preference for either. "I'm hoping for an administrative position at either the school or

CFR Hospital Volunteers

Loving Care, Little Dolly Trolley Added To Auxiliary Services

Loving care of patients at Central Florida Regional Hospital is the major reason the hospital's Auxiliary was formed over 25 years ago and is why it still exists today.

And "Loving Care" is the name of a new service to be initiated next month by the 171 member auxiliary to not only show their concern for elderly patients caught in a web of anxiety, but to provide a few items of food to meet their immediate needs.

Care packages with foodstuff for several light meals are being prepared by the Auxiliaries under the chairmanship of Mildred Haen. "Developed in cooperation with hospital dietitians and the Dietary Department, the program will rely on referrals from the Social Services Department," Jane Saxon, president, said.

The Loving Care program is what its name implies. It is based on providing a convenience for patients and their families, meeting physical needs and just plain kindness rather than financial need.

Packaged individual servings are designed to help the patient, often home alone, over the first few days after discharge. Items include orange juice, cereal, milk, soup, crackers, tuna, beef stew, vegetables, coffee, tea and other condiments. If there are no diet restrictions, optional items will also include fruit, pudding and applesauce.

Haen said, "We expect to expand the program as we determine other needs, but at the moment we are excited about responding to these senior citizens who are often forgotten people. Our Loving Care program will let them know that our care and concern goes far beyond the hospital doors."

Always searching for new ways to care for others, the Auxiliary started a new service several months ago in the Emergency Department.

A mixture of a kindly traffic cop and juggler, volunteers for this service greet the incoming patients, direct them to their destination whether it be for testing, screening or treatment, seat their families, and quickly assist emergency room patients to the Triage nurse who determines their immediate needs.

"We dry tears, wipe runny noses, direct traffic, run errands, pick up trash, answer questions, hold babies, hug and pat shoulders, entertain, and in general, lend a helping hand to the ER staff," said June Moore, chairman of the new service. "And we try to do it with diplomacy, words of patience and a sense of humor.

"We comfort, transport patients and relay information. In other words, we act as liaison between the patient, family and staff. We have been kissed and cussed all in the same day. Moore laughingly confided as she went to get a coloring book to distract a bored little boy waiting for his grandmother.

Along with the surgical waiting room, another service offered by the auxiliary to comfort and provide information during long anxious hours of waiting, the ER service is one of the most important. Tragedy and trauma are very every day occurrences. But the ER has its moments of triumph as well.

Moore says, "We need more volunteers so we can expand our hours. You see, not everyone can handle the situation. It is hard work, but rewarding."

"Little Dolly Trolley."

A trolley, a six-passenger people mover, will go on line in early July. It will transport incoming patients, their families, and visitors from the front parking lot to the front door of the hospital.

Fashioned after a turn of the century street car or a San Francisco cable car, the trolley will be manned by Auxiliaries. Joe Liebert is chairman. He noted, "Our hours will be limited in the beginning, but we envision eventually running the service from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m."

The many other services operated by Auxiliary members include the Transporters - volunteers who transport patients to and from the floors to the Imaging Department. Also there is the Recovery Room service. The latter service entails keeping the surgical waiting room volunteer and the Information Desk volunteers advised when the patient arrives in recovery and is returned to his room.

The information desk is a vital cog in the operation of the hospital. It is open over 12 hours a day and the volunteers provide a number of essential services, augmenting many staff duties. It is chaired by a husband and wife team, Brownie and Larry Munroe and Rita Findell.

Volunteers for the Sunshine and Library cart services cater to the personal needs and small pleasures of the patients. Their mobile carts stock reading materials, toiletry items, etc. They also deliver mail, and floral arrangements and plants which they also water on a daily basis.

The gift shop is an interesting adventure. It is filled with a wide range of gifts from jewelry, household items, magazines, cards, candy to a veritable zoo of stuffed animals. An added attraction to the new hospital, the shop also has fresh flowers for the first time.

The Auxiliary's fund raising venture, the gift shop, is a convenient service to patients, visitors and employees alike. Monies raised is immediately placed to help others - purchase of the trolley, aid to the hospital Employees' Support Committee, the new Loving Care Program, etc.

Yet one of the most important areas receiving gift shop revenue is the Auxiliary's Education and Enrichment Program open to hospital employees and Candy Siripera. Over $8,950 have been granted in tuition reimbursement over the past 18 months to those pursuing health related courses and degrees.

New found skills and knowledge through this aid from the Auxiliary enhance employees' professionalism and thus is translated into better patient care.

Recruitment for the ever expanding services provided by the Auxiliary is ongoing. Nancy Rape, membership chairman, noted that 21 new members have been brought in since the first of the year.

This has boosted the total number of volunteer hours donated in the past 12 months. "Over 26,000 hours of volunteer time," the Auxiliary president said, "and that does not include those given by our Teen Age Volunteers."

"We will continue to seek new ways to show our love and concern," she pointed out. "I can think of no better way to spend our time than helping others."

Emergency Room Service chairman June Moore helps Michael Williams keep his mind off his injury while waiting in ER.

'Loving Care' chairman Mildred Haen, left, and diet clerk Mary Rife select food items to be placed in care packages for solitary family members and discharged patients.

Woman's Club Member Elected To RMH Board

At the annual Board meeting of the Friends of Ronald McDonald House, Inc. held recently in Gainesville, Kathy Miller of Sanford was elected vice president for Central Florida. Mrs. Miller is Home Life chairman and Ronald McDonald special chairman for the Junior Woman's Club of Sanford, Inc.

The Sanford Juniors have been actively involved in fundraising and in providing informational talks for the past five years. Because of their on-going commitment to the project, they were asked by former vice presidents Tom and Barbara Hunt to assume the Board position. Hunt was recently transferred by Southern Bell to Brevard County.

According to Hunt the Juniors were asked "because of their intense commitment to help build the house and keep it open" and "because of their dependability and their history of successful community projects."

The Junior Woman's Club of Sanford Inc., a member of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs and General Federation of Women's Clubs, is a non-profit civic organization.

"With Tom and Barbara Hunt's assistance we are well informed and are prepared and eager to accept this new challenge," said Kathy Miller. "Our club unanimously voted to accept this position and we support the Ronald McDonald House because we have seen the great need it fills and have also witnessed the incredible comfort this 'House That Love Built' can provide to families."

City Sponsors Summer Program For Area Youth

The city of Lake Mary is sponsoring a "Fun in the Sun" summer playground program for area youth at the Lake Mary Elementary School.

Karen Warner

The summer program, under the direction of Jolane Meinke, assisted by Lake Mary High School student Lorie Papa, is scheduled from June 20 through July 23. The children will learn arts and crafts, take part in skits and participate in outdoor activities.

The program is open to children ages 6 through 12 and already 30 children are registered. Although the program started a week ago, it is still open for registration. The cost of the 6-week program is $25. Scholarships are available to Lake Mary residents only. Registration is being held at the city hall. Program hours are from 8 a.m. until Noon, Monday - Friday.

Art and Lois Maheu had some company last week. Art's sister, Jean, with her husband, Bob Leath, were on a sightseeing tour of Central Florida and dropped in on the Maheus' Monday evening to catch up on some rest. The Leaths are from Lake Park.

Barbara Warman, president of the Lake Mary Garden Club, will spend a week camping out at Wekiva Springs. Every year the Florida Federation of Garden Clubs sponsors a 6-week camp for boys and girls from all over the state.

The camp, built by the F.F.G.C. with the help of grants, contains cabins and cots for over 104 children. The camp is led by volunteers from the state's garden clubs who teach the children about conservation, arts and crafts, swimming, nature walks and visits from the area foresters.

Barbara will spend the week as a volunteer teaching arts and crafts.

Lake Mary's chapter of TOPS (take off pounds sensibly) has recently elected the following new slate of club officers: Leslie Lloyd, leader; Barbara Woosley, co-leader; Linda Ellis, secretary; Elyse Isom, treasurer and Shirley Ripp, weight recorder.

On June 3 and 4, 17 club members attended State Recognition Day held at the Bob Carr Auditorium, Orlando, where club members Barbara Woosley and Jean Mikels received graduation caps, pins and corsages.

The two were honored for losing the most weight of all the club members. Barbara lost over 45 pounds, for which she was crowned Queen, while Jean lost 38 pounds.

TOPS meets every Monday evening at 6:30 p.m., above the Calvary Baptist Church. For more information, contact Lois Maheu at 323-1664, or Elyse Isom, 322-2554.

Elyse Isom and her 13-year-old son Michael will be spending some time up at Shands Teaching Hospital in Gainesville next week.

Michael, a student at Sanford Middle School, has already undergone two operations on his heart and is in need of an exploratory catheterization to find out why his heart is not healing as it should. Let's all keep Michael in our prayers.

On June 23 a luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Joan Clark for board members of the Lake Mary Elementary School PTO and Ways and Means Committee. Board members were making plans for next year's school fund raisers such as book fairs, flea markets and ways to increase the PTO membership.

According to Barbara Warman, chairman, the school will be selling jackets to raise money. The jackets are royal blue, come in four styles, and have the school's name and dolphin emblem on them. At least 105 orders have already been placed for the jackets.

Happy Birthday wishes to Phil Kulbes and Ralph Neff on June 26, Esther K. Osborn on June 27, Eunice Wilson and Mike Blythe on June 28, and Brionne Vinson on June 29. Special birthday wishes to Lois Maheu who will turn 50 on June 27.

Happy Anniversary to Orlando & Josephine Grassi on June 30.

district level - I love both," she said.

Karen said that there is an emphasis in policy at the district level to interact with students in order to keep the right perspective.

"Provided you are involved with students, it is imperative that you keep in contact with the children. We at the district level put an emphasis on getting into the classrooms, whether as speaking as a classroom resource, helping with special projects, attending school functions or observing in classrooms," she said.

Her involvement with students over the last two years included judging several contests, one of which unexpectedly taught her something.

"We sponsored a coloring contest for school bus safety week. It involved the children getting the pictures from their bus drivers, taking them home, coloring them and getting them back to the driver. The main idea was that while they were coloring they would read the bus safety rules printed on the left.

"Because of everything involved, we didn't anticipate too much of a response. However, we received 3,009 entries, including some from blind children. I thought - this is a real statement. This is how far we're coming in education when a blind youngster feels good enough about himself to feel he can compete in a coloring contest," she said.

Karen has great respect for the youth of today, and places great hope for the future in them.

"Kids can overcome what adults would call insurmountable odds. Some of the kids I've taught have the language skills of our best writers or the finesse of our best politicians. I feel so very good about the future because I've had the chance to work with today's youngsters," she said.

Parent-Child Co-Op Program Starts

The Parent Resource Center of Seminole Community College is offering a summer session in the development of the preschool child. The Parent-Child CO-OP program is for moms, dads and children under 5 years of age.

The parent actually participates in his/her child's laboratory school by working with their own and other children on a scheduled basis in the nursery school lab located at the Church.

Parents also attend a parenting class on Monday evenings. Cost of the course is $31.00, plus a small materials fee.

Pre-Nuptial Parties Honor Ellen Wilke

Miss Ellen Wilke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard A. Wilke, and recent bride of Stephen Donaldson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Donaldson Jr. of Sorrento, was honored at a series of pre-nuptial parties.

A miscellaneous shower given by hostess Mrs. Clyde (Rose) Long began the memorable events. A pink and white motif was carried out in the floral arrangements and decorations.

The refreshment table, centered with an arrangement of daisies, held party punch and a variety of party fare.

Highlighting the shower was the bride-elect opening her many lovely and useful gifts.

Ellen was honored on June 4 at a bridal luncheon given by her aunt, Mrs. Joe Wiley Jarrell, and her cousins, Mrs. Dan Mahurin, Mrs. Ronnie Clark and Mrs. Jerry Gay at the Orlando home of Mrs. Mahurin in the Southern Oaks section.

The hostesses served ham as the entree and a variety of salads, buffet style. Guests were seated at beautifully appointed tables featuring centerpieces of fresh flowers.

The hostess gift to the bride-elect was a large clothes basket filled with household items.

Mrs. Jerry Gay entertained at a miscellaneous bridal shower for Ellen on June 9 at her Orlando home. Guests came bearing a variety of gifts for the honoree.

The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of spring flowers surrounded by an assortment of party delectables.

Mrs. J.H. Lee Jr., Mrs. M.H. Goebel and Miss Ann Goebel of Palatka, the bride's maid of honor, entertained at the traditional bridesmaid's luncheon at Holiday Inn, Sanford Marina, on June 17.

During the festive event, Ellen presented her attendants with gift mementoes.

Bridesmaids attending were Christie Graham, Susie Anderson, and Dawn Donaldson, sister of the bridegroom.

Among those sharing in the pre-nuptial parties for Ellen were: the bride's and bridegroom's mothers, Mrs. Bernard W. Wilke, Mrs. Charles Wilke, Mrs. Albert Jarrell, Mrs. Joe Jarrell, Mrs. Ray Stone, Mrs. Dan Donaldson, Mrs. Donald Dunn Jr. and Mrs. Chet Davidson.

Mona thinks her class is the best there ever was and the classmates will probably echo her sentiments.

Speaking of high school reunions, Seminole High School class of 1974 is already planning the 10th class reunion to take place next year.

There will be an organizational meeting of the reunion committee on Tuesday, June 28, at SHS in Room 1306, at 7 p.m.

All 1974 SHS grads are asked to please attend this meeting. The committee needs your input and ideas.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. (Jean and Gene) attended the 40th class reunion of Hillsborough High School, Tampa.

Jean says the girls outnumbered boys 3 to 1 in the wartime classes and of the 342 seniors in her class, 33 boys were in the armed services and received their diplomas by mail.

According to Jean, over 200 attended the festivities which included a tour of the school with its now modern facilities, dinner and brunch. Jean says over 200 classmates and spouses attended from as far away as California.

Susan T. McCaskill received the Juris Doctor degree from Mercer University, Macon, Ga., during commencement ceremonies on June 5.

Spoiled Kid Brother Raises Family Stink

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 27-year-old self-supporting woman. My problem is my 20-year-old kid brother. I'll call him "Chuck." He's handsome, charming and spoiled rotten. Chuck was always the favorite, and he sure knew how to get what he wanted. For his 16th birthday the folks gave him an expensive new car, which he totaled three weeks later, so they got him another one!

Chuck's grades were only fair, but Dad pulled some strings and got him into a junior college. He flunked out in one semester and came home. He couldn't find a job because he didn't look very hard, so Dad pulled some more strings and got him one. Two weeks later, Chuck was sacked.

A psychiatrist friend of Dad's told him to throw Chuck out of the house and let him sink or swim, so that's what Dad did. Chuck's been hanging out with some crummy characters and living from hand to mouth. I'm sure he's into drugs, too, and I'm afraid he's dealing. He came to my apartment spaced out and asked if he could stay with me.

My parents say if I take Chuck in, he'll get the idea that someone will always be there to rescue him and he'll never stand on his own feet. Also, if I help him, they'll never speak to me again. What should I do?

SIS: Your parents, though well-intentioned, contributed to making Chuck the loser that he is. I can't imagine a psychiatrist advising parents to use the sink-or-swim technique on a child who was never taught to swim.

Tell Chuck he can stay with you on the condition that he finds a job, puts himself into the hands of a therapist and makes an effort to straighten up, clean up his act and get his head together.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were recently invited to the home of friends for a dinner party. Their teen-age son played his stereo at full volume most of the evening, making it impossible to carry on a conversation.

Later, when I suggested (politely) to my hostess that she ask her son to kindly turn the stereo down a little so we could visit, she told me that in his home he was top priority and could do as he chose. She added that if we didn't like it we didn't have to come again.

What do you think of such behavior toward one's guests?

OFFENDED IN CLIFTON, N.J.
DEAR OFFENDED: I think the son must have inherited his manners from his mother.

DEAR ABBY: One day I stopped at a gas station to have my tank filled, and on the way home I noticed my purse was not on the seat beside me, where I always keep it, so I rushed back to the gas station. The cashier had my purse and demanded a $25 reward! (I'm sure he removed it from the car.)

He emphasized that if I had lost all my credit cards, cash, etc., it would cost me a lot more than $25, so I figured a $25 reward was really not too much. I wasn't able to give him the $25 at the time, so I promised to give it to him the next time I came by.

The following day I talked to my co-workers about my story. They all told me to report him either to the headquarters of that filling station or the police. So far I've done nothing and have not visited the station since then.

What would you have done if you were in my place?

ANNOYED IN ORANGE COUNTY, CALIF.
DEAR ANNOYED: I would have notified the police.

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 36923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

CRUMBLING RUINS

These crumbling ruins of the ancient Temple of Jupiter at Baalbec in Syria, excite the wonder and command the admiration of modern architects and engineers.

With their primitive machines and methods, it must have required the labor of hundreds of thousands of men to mine these great stones, haul them from distant quarries, chisel them into beautiful designs and build them into this stately and imposing structure.

Religion has always inspired the best that was in man and called forth his noblest efforts—even when it was no more than blind faith in a pagan god.

In this modern and enlightened day, with our clearer understanding of the moral, ethical and spiritual character of God, religion is still the touchstone of human character, the inspiration of human action and the force behind man's highest achievements.

Every church and synagogue in the land is a shrine of God and every worshipper an heir to the eternal heritage of faith. Here the hopes and aspirations of mankind throughout the ages are brought to a rich fruition.

The Rev. Bule came to the church from Aldersgate United Methodist Church, Seminole. He succeeds the Rev. Leo King, church pastor for 10 years, who retired June 1 and makes his home in Sanford.

Church Membership Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Church membership in the United States increased in 1981, but the two newly merged American Presbyterian churches showed a larger than normal loss of members, a new study says.

Overall, the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches statistics shows U.S. church membership grew by 2.69 percent in 1981 with 3,635,671 new members for a total collective membership of 138,452,614.

The figures, the most recent available, show both the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. and the southern-based Presbyterian Church in the United States have sustained membership losses of 1.83 percent.

Constant Jaquet, editor of the Yearbook prepared for the National Council of Churches, suggested the losses might be partly due to the merger effort of the two denominations, which went into effect in Atlanta on June 10.

But Jaquet warned, that while the growth apparently outstrips the national population growth of 0.9 percent, it may be misleading because two denominations made major adjustments in the figures they reported.

The Church of God in Christ, Memphis, Tenn., for example, updated its figures for the first time since 1965, showing an increase of 3,284,661 over the 425,000 members it had on the books since then.

In addition, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints reported as full members some 850,000 unbaptized youth, something the Mormons had not done before.

The nation's largest church body, the Roman Catholic church, added 757,737 new members, bringing its total membership to 51,207,579 in 1981 from 50,449,842 in 1980, the Yearbook said.

U.S. Churches: Uniting, Dividing

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's two largest Presbyterian denominations recently formalized their reunion, underscoring the growing Christian unity movement among the nation's churches.

But even as the churches move to get their institutional houses in order and attempt to forge unity out of the vast array of American denominationalism, new forces in many churches threaten division and disunity.

Reunion of the northern-based United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. and its Southern sister, the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., ends of the last Civil War-era schisms among mainline Protestant churches.

It follows close on the heels of the decision of three major Lutheran bodies — divided by ethnicity and history more than theology — to unite in a new Lutheran church in the United States.

At the same time, church unity negotiations are proceeding — cautiously, but nevertheless proceeding — in the 10-member Consultation on Church Union.

The United Church of Christ and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) are also continuing their possible merger discussions.

And a host of denominations, including the Roman Catholic church, are engaged in bilateral theological dialogues aimed at overcoming historic differences through new or renewed understandings of critical matters of faith and doctrine.

As if to underscore such movements, the international joint commission of Roman Catholic and Lutheran theologians issued a joint statement marking the 500th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther that said Luther "teaches us that unity in essentials allows for differences in customs, church order and theology."

But "unity in essentials" is proving difficult not only in discussions among churches but within a number of denominations as well.

The nation's two largest Protestant denominations — the 13.9 million Southern Baptist Convention and the 9.2 million member United Methodist Church — have been the arena in the last several years of a growing division between theological and political "liberals" on the one hand and "conservatives" or fundamentalists on the other.

In both instances, the insurgency comes from the more conservative wings of the two denominations and they hope to replicate the experience of the conservatives in the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, who won control of the denomination's administrative machinery in the late 1970s, forcing an exodus of some 100,000 members who formed the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

The issues in each case are slightly different but in both instances, as well as among the uniting Presbyterian churches, and other mainline churches, much of the difference stems from unhappiness with the perceived liberal political and theological bent of denominational leaders.

In the Southern Baptist Convention, the most theologically conservative of the nation's major religious bodies, the issue has been the "inerrancy" of Scripture and the efforts by conservatives to make belief in the literal accurateness and truth of the Bible something close to a test of faith.

Moderate and conservative battles have been a major part of the denomination's annual meetings for the past year, but this year's Pittsburgh gathering, held this month, saw little of the traditional fireworks.

The Rev. James Draper of Euless, Texas, a member of the conservative forces, was re-elected president of the denomination without opposition.

In his presidential address, Draper carefully avoided using words like "inerrant" and "infallible" when discussing Scripture but warned that Southern Baptists are "still going to have work through what we mean by the authority of the Bible."

Among Methodists, it is the church's involvement in alleged "radical" political causes as well as a perceived departure from "biblical Christianity," evangelism and a traditional foreign mission approach that has generated conservative opposition.

Although leaders of the conservative movements in both denominations say they have no intention of creating a schism or leaving the church, members of both camps say that some defections are possible.

"I Do, I Do"

Twenty-five couples from Central Baptist Church, Sanford, renewed their wedding vows on Sunday night, June 5, in the church sanctuary under the direction of Pastor Freddie Smith. The oldest couple, the Rev. and Mrs. Guy Dillon, had been married for 61 years. Jack Thomas, minister of music, sang traditional wedding music for the occasion, which was the culmination of a month-long emphasis on the family. Tapes of the sermon series are available from the church office.

Old Magic Still Tricking Them

The small ad in the back of the magazine carried the caption, "Afraid of the water?" The ad said that for $7.50 this minister would send a "package of ash leaves. A few leaves on your person in a small bag will keep you from drowning. A bit added to the bath will also act as a skin softener."

He is not the only minister who offers magical cures for human problems. For a free-will offering, some radio preachers will send you a "prayer cloth" said to have healing powers. Or you can request a prayer card or other charm which is supposed to protect you from sickness, accident or catastrophe.

St. Christopher medals can be purchased in most stores selling religious goods. Many drivers carry these medals in their automobiles in the belief that the patron saint of travelers will assure them a safe trip.

Are these things out-and-out superstitions? Yes, psychologists would contend. Are they frauds? That depends, according to one.

"Is a rabbit's foot a fraud?" he asks. "Is giving people hope a fraud? If people believe something will bring them good luck, this often will keep them from giving up when all other resources have failed."

Most ministers who offer these "bags of tricks" to bring good luck or ward off evil are careful not to make any fraudulent claims for their products.

"We make no claims of supernatural effects or powers of any kind," says the literature mailed out by a Chicago minister, Rev. Billy Sunday. "Belief or disbelief in these products is solely the prerogative of the individual."

But then he produces testimonials from people who say that these products worked for them.

One woman gives credit for her success at bingo to Rev. Sunday's Bingo Spray which she sprays on her hands and her money before she plays. Two Las Vegas gamblers claim they made it big at the gaming tables after spraying their bodies and money with Rev. Sunday's Magnetizing Spray ("magnetize yourself for luck").

Saints And Sinners

George Plagens

This clergyman also sells a Love-Breaker Spray which "will spoil a love affair or break up a marriage" — in case you are sweet on someone who is married or in love with another person.

As widespread as belief in superstition and magic is today, it was even more widespread in ancient times. And for good reason. Sooner or later, magic always worked.

As J.G. Frazier says in "The Golden Bough," a ceremony intended to make the wind blow or the rain fall will "always be followed, at some time or other, by the occurrence it is meant to bring to pass. Primitive man may be excused for regarding the occurrence as a direct result of the ceremony."

Ancient magic was the forerunner of religion and science. The magician was often a man of stature in the community, not to be confused with the modern-day magician who performs magic acts for entertainment.

Later, when the believer in magic saw that the magician "had been pulling at strings to which nothing was attached," he lost confidence in magic. He came to realize that the natural forces were not under man's control — that the rain fell and the sun rose without man's incantations.

As for the St. Christopher medals, do they really protect the occupants of a car from accidents?

"Only if you're going less than 30 miles an hour," says a Roman Catholic priest.

Ordination Scheduled For Carolyn Jacobs

Mrs. Carolyn B. Jacobs of Fort Devens, Mass., member of the Congregational Christian Church of Sanford, will be formally ordained to the ministry of the Christian gospel following the 11 a.m. worship service here this Sunday.

She obtained her theological training at Hwassee College, where she received her Associate in Arts Degree and East Tennessee State University where she obtained her Bachelor of Science Degree. She was conferred with a Master of Divinity Degree by the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in North Carolina.

Mrs. Jacobs has served as chaplain at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, N.C. and at Georgia Baptist Medical Center in Atlanta, Ga. She was licensed to the gospel ministry by the Falls Baptist Church in Wake Forest, N.C., Feb. 8, 1978.

Presbyterians Celebrate Reunion

First Presbyterian Church of Sanford will host a special celebration of the reunion of the northern and southern branches of the denomination, which took place June 10 in Atlanta, this Sunday at 7 p.m. The 10 Presbyterian Churches of Seminole County will gather in Sanford for the occasion.

The Rev. John M. Braly, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Casselberry, will deliver the sermon entitled "A New Perspective." Special music will be sung by the combined choirs under the direction of Fred Mauk of St. Marks Presbyterian of Altamonte Springs. Joan Wilke of First Church will play the organ and the congregation will join in special hymn singing.

Preceding the sermon an impressive processional including colorful banners will open the service. A reception will be held in the fellowship hall following the service.

The local committee working on the arrangements includes Mrs. Mabel Davidson, Dr. Marion White, Cliff Miller, and Miss Joan Wilke. The Women of the Church will be in charge of the reception.

Other Presbyterian churches of Seminole County include St. Andrews, Tusawilla, Wekiva, Sanford Covenant, Lake Mary, Upsala, and Iglesia Presbyterian of Casselberry.

Scripture Demand Up

People who supported the American Bible Society in 1982 helped raise the distribution of Scriptures both at home and abroad to a total of 244,169,281 copies. That was a rise of 46 million over the previous year.

These Scriptures were mostly in answer to requests that came from denominations, churches, missions, schools, hospitals, military, prisons and other institutions, or from millions of individuals. More than half the Scriptures distributed, over 124 million, were in answer to calls from organizations and individuals within the United States.

Over 10.8 million Bibles were distributed through the global work of the United Bible Societies, making it a record for any year since the movement began in the early part of the last century.

Joe was flying on a wing and a prayer, and things looked mighty bleak when the defense started with two rounds of hearts. Joe ruffed in dummy and started on diamonds. East dropped the queen on the first diamond, and Joe saw a little light at the end of the tunnel. He cashed dummy's ace and king of trumps and came to his hand with the jack of diamonds. Then came a diamond to dummy's ace and a lead of another diamond on which he got rid of his last heart. West trumped and led a club. Joe had to finesse, but that worked also, and Joe wound up losing just one heart and two trumps to score a lucky game. As Joe said to Mary Louise afterwards, "You were lucky that I held the right queen and right jack."
