Junior Samples said he flew into Sanford last week -"but I flew low, in'at Lincoln out there," he said, and gestured out the window of the Holiday Inn where he is staying while bass fishing for a week. Although Samples is a regular on the "Hee-Haw" television series, it takes much less of his time than

"It takes three weeks to film a half season (13 shows) of Hee-Haw," Samples said, in the easy, almost halting voice so familiar to television fans. "We do that twice a year - in June and October," he said, "and then I spend 50 days ridin' from lake t' lake, and 250 days a yar

The voice is soft and gentle, and the accent is purest north Georgia. All the time - almost 10 years - in front of television cameras filming "Hee-Haw" apparently hasn't changed Samples much.

For one thing, he still lives in Cummings, Georgia. His family is there - wife, Grace, and their six children, and there are nine grandchildren in the Samples brood now. He had to call home and make sure everyone was all right after the recent north Georgia floods. "That happened about 30 mile from whar my place is,"

Samples said, and for just a moment a worried look crossed his sun-burnt face. "Grace said the whole hill in front of the school where some o' the young'uns went ta school moved. It ended up right in the middle o' the road," Samples indicated, with another motion of his never-quite-still hands. But the family was just fine - escaping from the water which junior loves so much and which threatened his own life at least once in the past.

"Me and a buddy was fishin," he recalled. "My boat has been worked on, and somebody didn't tighten down a bolt in the steering mechanism.

"We got out on the lake, hit a little bit o' wake" — he motions gently with his hand, showing only a alight movement. "The steering mechanism come out in my hand, and the boat went over and busted my leg in two places," Samples said. His voice sounded no anger, just the slighest touch of irritation that someone had endangered his life and that of a friend.

The rest of the story has to be eased out of him, one word at a time. Convinced that he was drowning, Samples spen his time talking to his friend, who was even less able to

"I kep' tellin' him, hang on, Pete. You got to hang on, Pete. Your wife and kids need you. Hang on." By the time another fisherman came up in his boat and offered assistance, Samples' friend had gone under. He sent the boater to rescue his friend.

"Pete had one arm floatin' above him, and the man grabbed him by his hand and pulled him up, I kept tellin' him, blow air into him. On the third blow, Pete reached out and grabbed him," Samples said, grabbing his own wrist firmly to demonstrate.

JUNIOR SAMPLES: ANGLING

Only after Pete was in the boat and breathing did Samples allow himself to be rescued. Samples would not say how he got into show business. " will not answer that on the grounds that it maht in-crimnate me," he said, pushing the words out one at a time, and fighting back a smile that threatened to cross

"They sent atter me," he said after a pause. "That's how I got on the show. They sent atter me." Samples said he had once cut a record with country singer-comedian Archie Campbell, one of the Hee-Haw stars, and Campbell had sent for him to come to Nashville to talk about being on the show.

"I got up there, stayed three days and couldn't get in touch with nobody," Samples remembered. "Then I caught them drinkin coffee, and they wouldn't talk to me then. They said they'd call me." Samples got tired of waiting, went home, and finally got Nashville. They promised him $73 "just for showin' up, if they didn't use me." Once again he went to Nashville and was unable to make contact. Disgusted, he drove home to Cummings, "and when I got there they was lookin' for Samples said he and Beauregard - the show's bloodhound - are the only members of the Hee-Haw cast who don't get made up for the television cameras. And contrary to what people seem to think, filming in television-land does not start in the small hours of the night - at least not for the folks at Hee-Haw. "They're lazy up thar," he said. "I git up with the chickens, five o'clock. They don't start filmin' until nine, and besides that their time is an hour slower than ours." He tossed a foot up on the table, shifted slightly in his chair and threw the punch line: "Heck, you can grow a crop before they get started filmin'."

Samples is a master at the gentle put-on, using it partly to defend the privacy which is so important to him. He has been troubled only briefly by autograph seekers in San-

Carter, MFBR And SALT Talks

The link between the security of the United States and Europe is bringing MBFR back into prominence with a more familiar acronym, SALT. Like the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the negotiations for a Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction in Europe (MBFR) have been frustrating for more than one American president. We are worried about how the Carter administration is reacting to that frustration.

From the MBFR talks in Vienna comes word that the United States and its allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are trying to break a fouryear dead-lock by offering to withdraw 1,000 tac-tical nuclear warheads from Western Europe, along with a cutback of 29,000 troops. As a sweetener, it is said that Mr. Carter might agree not to produce the deadly radiation weapon called the neutron bomb, which is designed to be a defense against the kind of tank warfare the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies could wage in Europe.

There is no hint, however, that the Russians have budged from their position that an MBFR agreement should leave them with a significant numerical superiority in tanks and troops. How far can NATO go with safety in offering compromises at Vienna? It is our tactical nuclear weapons, and potentially the neutron weapon among them, that offers some assurance that a Warsaw Pact invasion could be repelled.

Meanwhile, from Geneva comes word that a SALT agreement is taking shape that would limit the range of cruise missiles. The formula would limit the range of air-launched cruise missiles to 1,500 miles and raise serious questions about the value of the cruise without a B-1 bomber to launch it. Moreover, the reported plan would limit ground-launched and sea-launched cruise missiles to a range of 360 miles. This would mean that cruise missiles launched from Western Europe could not reach Soviet territory — another weakening of NATO defenses.

The idea for the SALT negotiations goes back to mistination. MBFR talks began in 1973 under former President Nixon. Progress in both areas has been disappointing, and President Carter obviously feels strongly about their goals. Indeed, he took office aspiring not only to see ngs placed on the nuclear arsenals of East and West but to see those ceilings progressively

But the emphasis Mr. Carter is placing on concluding SALT and MBFR agreements does not change the fact that for 30 years the Soviet Union has been arming in such a way as to suggest it does not regard the second World War as necessarily the last one. That is what brought our strategic weapons systems and the NATO alliance into ositions crucial to our defense. This is a truth we

BERRY'S WORLD

The Soviets have become willing to negotiate with the West in the forums of SALT and MBFR. but they also have been tenacious, clinging to ions that serve their interest while driving Nestern negotiators back to the drawing board in frustration. WASHINGTON WINDOW 4 Parties, But No System

The Clock

By MARK WEINBERG

American politics often confuses its own citizens may be the insistence of politicians that it is a "two-party system." That is a confusing claim because anyone who looks at American politics are two Democratic parties and two Republican parties. These parties within parties attempt to unite during election years, but the plaster usually cracks as soon as the votes are counted. For a period after World War II, political scientists, who yearn for the kind of logical order that can be demonstrated in chemistry or physics, were able to neatly divide the Democrats and Republicans into "congressional" and "presidential" parties. The ongressional, sometimes called "regional," Democrats and Republicans were the conservative wings; the presidential or "national" parties were home for the moderates and

Those classifications fell apart during the 1960s. In 1972, the "liberal" Democrats found their presidential candidate in the Senate. In THE LIGHTER SIDE 1976, the "conservative" Republican presidential aspirant was a former big state

In the 1972-76 period, political observers tried to keep the Democrats straight by referring to "regular" or "old line" party members as op-posed to "New Politics" or "reform" Democrats. Because there were "liberals" and divisions that followed the party's 1968 and 1972 court.

Carter's problems with a Congress dominated almost two-to-one by Democrats may be the sign that his party is reverting to the congressional-presidential division of the 1940s and 1950s. Meanwhile, the moderate conservative Republican coalition that Richard Nixon used to servative-liberal civil war. really care about." The retired American diplomat had one eye on history and the other or the Russians when he said that in a conversation about the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT II) the other day.

With most elements of the deal now surfacing it seems clear the Soviets had the diplomat's maxim in mind all along, while the White House had never heard of it.

The Carterites set out to be tough - or so they, said. Secretary of State Vance went to Moscow last spring with a proposition for major cuts in missile numbers, reduction in the number of supersize USSR missiles and restrictions on testing new systems. The Russians turned him

Instead of digging in, the administration began tripping over its feet to coax a smile from the Russians. But they, as usual, played their hand with a poker face. This produced even more concessions from the White House. The result is a SALT deal worse than the one the Soviets offered Henry Kissinger two years ago (and which was rejected). Carterites are hailing the SALT II as a "balanced" compromise, but (bearing in mind that diplomat's maxim) the Soviets haven't really compromised on anything of vital im-portance to them. We have.

Our biggest compromise is over the cruise missile. The United States is about five years ahead of the Soviets on cruise missile technology. With NATO ground forces at -aserious disadvantage in Western Europe. yment of the cruise missile there would provide needed balance. But, apparently, our negotiators have settled for a range limit of 1,550 miles on air-launched cruise missiles and deployment of only 70-120 of them. We got no restrictions on the Soviet's inter-continental The prosecutor is reluctant to proceed on that Backfire bomber which can strike the U.S. The Soviets were worried about the cruise missile. all? Not in the view of Paul Nitze, former U.S. arms control negotiator and former Deputy Secretary of Defense. He argues that the SALT II deal will leave the United States' land-based nuclear missile force vulnerable to a Soviet "first strike" by the mid-1980's. Anyone who dismisses that as so much "overkill" talk should nber that the nation with the "first strike" capability has most of the chips on its side of the table. If they're on our side, that means an efective deterrent

The Carter people wanted an overall limit on strategic missiles and bombers of ap-proximately 2,000. The Soviets wanted about 2.400. They settled for 2,250. A big Soviet compromise? Not when you consider their superior throw-weight (payload) and the fact that we weren't able to get any reduction in the number of Soviet supersize missiles (they have 306, we

The deal also would ban testing and deployment of hard-to-detect mobile missiles, such as the U.S. proposed N-X. This, too, works to the Russians' advantage. They have long since tested and deployed (we can only guess how many) their SS-20 mobile missile.

Last Week's Leftovers

The last licks from that hard hitting Lake Howell-Oviedo game ast Friday are still ringing in my ears. It turned out about as figured, though.

Last week's column predicted a Howell victory—because of the emotion envolved in Coach Curtis Keen's absence. That it was a "win one for the coach" victory was proven by presentation of the game ball to Keen's father after the contest.

Oviedo coach Joe Montgomery knew what was happening, too: he just couldn't stop it.

He knew fullback Doug Grieder would play, and would be near-impossible to stop.

Besides being a good prognosticator, Montgomery is also a nice guy. Even after losing a close one, THE big one for Oviedo fans each year; Montgomery wasn't bitter — just hurting.
"Curtis has worked hard over there; and has had so many problems...going up to AAAA, injuries, and a killer schedule.

"I don't believe Vince Lombardi could have done a better job and faster than Curtis." How's that for a testimonial?

Now, getting our the crystal ball for this week...riding, by the way, a 15-9 record (.625 batting average) for the season...

Q. Are there any other men besides the late Cal Hubbard who are in both the basehall and football Halls of Fame? - J.B., Springfield, Mo.

No. Hubbard, of course, made the Cooperstown shrine for his work as an umpire. Veteran baseball figure Paul Richards was describing his first encounter with huge Cal (an all-time football tackle). Richards, at bat, drew a ball on the first pitch. On the second pitch, which he took, Hubbard boomed out, "Strike!" Richards protested, "That was exactly the same as the first pitch." Hubbard looked down at him: "In that case, that'll be Strike Two." And he made it stick.

Q. Can you tell me something about racing driver Mario Andretti? — N.F., Levittown, Pa.

He may be the most versatile of all the top class racing drivers in the world, because he has been successful in almost every kind of four-wheeled vehicle Mario, now 37, was born in Italy where he started driving formula junior cars at the age of 13. He came to this country as a teenager and broke in with modified stock cars. He has, of course, won at Indianapolis and in recent years has been very successful on the world Grand Prix circuit. He makes his home in Nazareth, Pa. - when he's home.

Q. During an Oakland Raiders-Denver Broncos game, the Raiders had the ball on their 17-yard line and were called for holding. The referee stepped off the 10-yard penalty to the sevenvard line. Shouldn't it have been half the distance to the goal line, with the ball on the eight and a half-yard line? - S.D., Alameda,

The ref blew it. Norm Schacter, the longtime official who now major penalty inside the 20-yard line, half the distance to the goal Q. Where is Norm Van Brocklin, the former coach of the Atlan

Falcons, now? - R.G., Roseburg, Ore. Raising pecans on a farm down in Georgia — that's right. The tempestuous old quarterback would like to get back into football, but only as a head man. Because of his stormy past with both the Vikings and Falcons, it's doubtful that another big opportunity will open up. That's too bad because he is a brilliant football man. Q. What's your opinion on Joe Namath? Is he all washed up as a quarterback?- T.M., Anaheim, Calif. Not necessarily, if he can get his passing techniqu straightened out again. I think Joe's throwing off balance a lot of the time in his haste to get rid of the ball. He's also continuing a habit he had with the Jets of challenging secondaries by throwing into the heart of multiple coverage. He's playing more tentative than I've ever seen him. His basic skills have eroded some but not to the extent that his performance so far with the Rams indicated. I think there'll be another hurrah from Freeway Joe. Q. Does Tony Dorsett of the Cowboys have a nickname? - D.F.,

'Hawk." The name derives from his boyhood when his father called him "Hawkeye" because of Tony's wideeyed look. It was shortened as the year rolled by.

Q. You mentioned recently the distance between bases on a baseball field, in meters. Just as a rule of thumb, a meter is 1.1 yards and a yard is .9 meters. The 90 feet between bases (30 yards) would be .9 times 30, or 27 meters, nearly. If you have a pocket calculator handy, 90 feet would be 1000 inches, divided by 39.37 inches in a meter, which equal 27.432 meters. I hope they never round it off to 30 meters, as it is hard enough for a runner to beat out the throw to first base now, and it would be nearly impossible to steal second. — James Brown, Ventura, Calif. I believe Lou Brock would agree with you, even if he doesn't

Q. I have in my possession a book copyrighted in 1902 which pertains to baseball for the years 1845 to 1871. It has a great number of colored and black and white pictures of the ball players of that era and box scores of games. This book is a large one, 11 by 15 inches, and is in very good condition. Could you tell me if this book has any value as a collector's item? — Jack Wilson, Nevada

I'm sure it does. You get get a better appraisal by contacting a dealer who specializes in fine and rare books, such as the California Book Auction Galleries in San Francisco.

Q. In heavyweight boxing history, Muhammad Ali must rank as the greatest defensive boxer. There have been heavyweight overs with awesome knockout power, such as Jack Dempsey and oe Louis. Could they have overcome All's defenses?-Ken Garrison, Ventura, Calif? With an All in his prime, I don't think so. He had to be the fastest of all heavyweights, in foot and hand speed. And the factor that's becoming apparent is that Ali also takes a punch as well as anyone who's ever held the title. Unless a mauler like a Dempsey or Rockey Marciano could have sneaked in a bludgeon-like sock, I think All would have staved them all off. Q. Heart Attacks And Palpitations

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 73 and with the exception of ar-thritis am in good health. The other thing is a few years ago I began experiencing episodes of rapid heart beats. Usually these came on at night. I awaken with a sensation of laborious beats which go into palpitations and finally become so rapid I wonder how my heart can take them. My doctor tells me he can find nothing wrong with my heart. He prescribed Butisol which seems to work all right, but the palpitations have to run their course, lasting probably three to five minutes. These attacks are infrequent, but occur every three to four

Due On TV KANSAS CITY - The first animated "Doonesbury" television special will be shown on NBC-TV on Nov. 27.

The half-hour story features "Doonesbury" characters Michael J. Doonesbury, Zonke Harris, Uncle Duke, Joanie Caucus, and others familiar to the followers to the increasingly opular strip. James I ndrews of Universal Press yndicate, which distributes the comic strip, called the "a light-hearted ecollection of the painful days of the late '60s and early '70s. Where the comic strip is opical on a day-to-day basis, ne continued, "the television special reminds us of how eally frantic and important hose times were to so many of

The actual production of the television special began in lovember, 1978, but work on e project started in late 1975 The effort was marred by the death of animator John Hubley in February, 1977. Faith her husband in their New York studio, then became the sole collaborator with Trudeau. CALENDAR

Sylvan Lake Group Poises To Battle Private Landfill Plan

The six-year-old Sylvan Lake Association (SLA) will fight an attempt by Waste Management Inc. of Florida to locate a privately operated 275-acre sanitary landfill three miles west of Interstate -4 and SR-46. Officers of SLA made the decision at a Wednesday night meeting attended by 60 residents of the Yankee Lake-Sylvan Lake area west of Sanford. The proposed landfill site is just east of Yankee Lake. Sylvan Lake is south of the proposed site, across SR-46. SLA's founder and first president, Roy C. Thomas, asked for a show of hands at the meeting on the question of whether SLA should represent neighborhood residents to fight the landfill. Over half of the 60 who attended the meeting raised their hands. "I guess that decides it," Thomas said. The meeting was at Twelve Oaks Campground, owned by Roger Perra and his father, Raymond. Perra's 24-acre campground would be bounded on two sides by the proposed

Perra said he called the Wednesday night meeting to tell neighborhood residents what he had learned about to determine whether area > operate a landfill on the site. The company asked for a special exception to the site's agricultural zoning to permit a landfill. The Seminole County Board of Adjustment will conduct a public hearing on the request Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. in room 203 of the courthouse in Sanford, according to Bill Diamond, the county's coor-

If the board of adjustment's decision is appealed, the county commissioners will make the final decision in the matter. Commissioners have been looking for a site for a centrallylocated landfill to replace the county's remotely-located Osceola landfill in extreme See PRIVATE, Page 2-A

today that the Chicago-Florida "Floridian" passenger train be discontinued because Congress failed to appropriate enough funds to operate the entire national passenger system.

The recommendation will go before the Amtrak board on Nov.

other routes are being "formally examined and are subject to discontinuance," and several other transcontinental routes may

Amtrak officials had issued a warning that the route, which stops in Sanford, Fla., might be terminated and had asked for public reaction to the proposal. The company's officials also saidnegative reaction to the proposal was not strong.

Amtrak asked Congress for an additional $56 million in addition

The Floridian is one of Amtrak's biggest money-losers. It operates from Chicago south to Louisville, Nashville, Birmingham, Montgomery, and Jacksonville, splitting into sections that travel to both coasts of Florida.

The five other routes subject to later discontinuance are: - The National Limited between New York, Washington and

 The Lone Star between Chicago and Houston.
 The Lake Shore between Chicago and Boston.
 The San Joaquin between Bakersfield, Calif., and Oakland. - Seattle-Portland local service.
