I-4 lane closed for bridge repair

SANFORD — One westbound lane of in-terstate 4 over Orange Boulevard was closed this morning when a section became uneafe. A plate between two slabs of concrete gave way this morning and proturuded into the lane

Work done two weeks ago to tack down the loosening plate failed this morning and state road crews may have to close both westbound lanes today to make additional emergency repairs, said Steve Homan, spokesman for the Florida Department of Transportation. The plate, which has emerged above the level of the concrete now extends into the lane of traffic and threatens passing vehicles, said Homan.

Trophy winner loses to customs

KEY WEST - Like the fisherman in "The Old Man and the Sea." the winner of this year's Ernest Hemingway fishing tournament in Cuba has arrived home with almost nothing.

Dr. David Bregman, a heart surgeon from Tenafly, N.J., landed a 246%-pound blue martin to take top prize in the Ernest Hemingway International Billfish Classic Tournament.

But he ran afoul of the U.S. trade embargo against Cuba when he returned the 90 miles to Key West on Sunday. Customs inspectors searched his bost, Heart Mender.

"They took all of our trophies and all our plaques and all the T-shirts they had given us and assorted other little gifts," Bregman said. This is just ridiculous."
Customs officials said the fishermen were warned in advance that the agency would enforce the 30-year-old embargo against the communist island nation. The anglers could have lost their boats and been fined.

School district heads renewed for full year

By West Beech Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Despite the protests of two board members last night the Seminole County school board will renew the contracts of 47 district level administrators for a full year.

Though board members Bandy Robinson and Barbara Kuhn argued in favor of limiting the contracts of district administrators to a less-than-one-year term, it was decided to renew the contracts for 12 months.

Robinson and Kuhn had called for the more conservative contract lengths to give the in-coming superintendent a chance to review and make any changes he would need in the administrative structure when he arrives next

"I just felt we should give him some latitude," Robinson said of Dr. Paul Hagerty, the recentlyhired superintendent. "I wanted to give him the opportunity to make some changes if he wanted

Chairman Hancy Warren said she believed that shortening the contract length would put people on the defensive as Hagerty was assessing the attuation after his arrival.

"Dr. Hagerty has to have a staff that is open and honest when he arrives," Warren said. "I can't support this at this time."

Robinson argued that the school district has been trying, at the urging of the community and the Business Advisory Committee, to operate more like a business.

"This is a business approach," she said. "In business there are no guarantees."

Board member Joe Williams said that while he agreed that Hagerty should have the freedom to review and reorganize his staff, putting the administrators on a three month contract is

Parents not satisfied with magnet program

By WOK! Decens Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - While the school district went shead with plans to look at a magnet school program at Seminole High School, some parents who attended a meeting last night were not satisfied that it would help increase enrollment at the school.

Seminole High has an enrollment of 1,818 students. It has a capacity of nearly 2,000 students.

While parent and community groups had petitioned the superintendent and the school board to expand the achool's attendance zones to bring in more students the board decided, instead, to study the possibility of bringing a magnet school to Seminole. The program, if it is used, would not begin until at least the Fall of 1993.

"What do we do about enrollment in the meantime," asked Pat Southward of the SHS Parent ☐ See Magnet, Page SA

Chamber extends new-member drive

By MICK PPEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce membership drive is being extended. The event will now continue until the goal of 92 new members is attained.

According to the chamber's executive director. Dave Farr. "The executive committee met yesterday afternoon and reviewed the drive. He continued, "Because it looks as though we won't reach our goal by the original deadline of this Friday. they decided to extend it throughout the rest of the year."

The membership drive got un-derway on May 5. Farr said this morning. "As of yesterday, the teams had only reported 10 new members have been signed up." He added. "There may be more new member names that the teams have

This year's membership drive was different from the past. "Every year." Douglas said, "We've included getting present members to renew their membership in addition to finding new members." He added, "This year, our aim is strictly for new members. We'll take care of the renewals through other contacts, probably through the chamber staff."

Depending on the size of the new members, charges run from $30 for an individual, to a minimum of $450 for businesses with 100 employees or more. There is an additional fee of $15 to cover the cost of processing the application papers.

A total of 39 teams were set up to

Each team has one member of the Chamber's Board of Directors, and two or three non-board members. They have been supplied with a list of approximately 250 businesses that might be contacted, but Membership Committee Chairman Larry Strickler said. "The list is just a starting point, our teams may approach any new business". He commented. "In addition to local area businesses, we would like to have members who live here but own businesses elsewhere, or people who live elsewhere but operate a large percentage of their business locally.

GAINESVILLE - Scientists have genetically altered wheat, clearing the way to create grains more resistant to drought and pests, the University of Florida and Monsanto Co. announced. Inserting new traits into one of the world's most important crops promises to improve production and food quality around the world, said UF Graduate Research Professor Indra K. Vasil,

"These qualities will result in a more abundant source of nutritionally improved food in the United States. Europe and more importantly, in developing countries such as India, Mexico and Argentina," he said.

Each year, growers worldwide produce about 550 million metric tons of wheat valued at $50 billion. Any improvements should have a significant impact on international agriculture, the scientists announced Tuesday.

Lawmakers return some expense money

Before the program started in August 1990, only one or two returned money on a regular basis. Twenty-six of the state's 180 legislators returned some money during the most recent reporting quarter.

The amount returned in recent quarters is averaging about $15,000 of the more than $700,000 sent out.

State Rep. Art Simon returned $3,000 of the $9,000 he received in the last six months of 1991. He said he thought he should because of the state's budget crunch.

Crossbreeding ducks threaten species

TALLAHASSEE - Urban mailard ducks are crossbreeding with wild mottled ducks, threatening a native species already in decline, state biologists say.

"It is something we are becoming increasingly alarmed about," said David Brakhage, a Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission waterfowl biologist.

If crossbreeding increases, it could undermine the genetic purity of the mottled duck, one of three wild ducks native to Florida and protected under state wildlife laws, Brakhage said. The other two are wood ducks and fulvous whistling ducks.

Prisoner reclassification begins

by JACKIE MALLIPAX Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - The Florida Parole Commission has begun the job of re-evaluating prisoners convicted of manslaughter, aggravated battery, robbery, bur-glary, theft and certain drug crimes for possible early release.

Under emergency rules adopted by the seven-member panel in April, more immates are eligible for the state's "control release" program, under which time can be shaved from their sentences.

By law, career criminals, murderers, rapiets, molesters and defendants sentenced to serve at least a minimum portion of their term are still barred from the program.

Based on their record, their latest crime, their victim and the risk they pose to the divided into two categories by the Parole Commission — those who will get time off and those who won't.

The Parole Commission can still vote to lessify individual prisoners as too dangerous to get any extra time off. As it is, those prisoners serve only about half their sentences, thanks to things like automatic "gain time," which cuts a third off the sentences of all prisoners when they enter Florida prisons hold about 46,000 beds. Because of early releases mandated by overcrowding, inmates on average serve 36 percent of their sentences.

Commissioners Tuesday considered 423 cases as they began to re-evaluate approxi-mately 7,000 prisoners, according to Ruth Ann Reese, an aide to commission chairman

Although judged too risky for early release when they first entered prison, those 7,000 inmates could get time off under the new

Self-injury sufferers get help

GAINESVILLE - People who suffer from self-injurious behavior are benefiting from new treatments that replace physical restraints and seda-

"The general public doesn't know much about this disorder because most people who have it are institutionalized," said psychologist Brian Iwata, director of the University of Piorida's Center on Self-Injury.

About 600,000 mentally retarded or autistic people around the country have the problem of self-injurious behavior, also known as SIB, Iwata said.

Although its exact origins are unknown, researchers believe SIB is a learned disorder. It is often characterized by headbanging, self-hitting, biting, scratching, chronic vomiting or ingesting inedible substances.

Those suffering from the disorder seek attention, Iwata said. "They learn that if they're injured, they get a lot of attention. Over time, SIB also can develop into a source of stimulation, which eventually can even be thought of as feeling good," he said. They learn that when they're hurt, they get to stay in bed and other things they may not want

At the university's Center on Self-injury, psychologists work to identify and withhold the reward gained by self-injury. SIB is disrupted and gradually replaced by more positive behavior. The treatment is successful in more than 80 percent of the patients treated at the center, which is the only one of its kind in Florida and one of four in the country.

"We consider our treatment successful if the person no longer requires drugs or physical restraints, no longer needs extensive supervision or medical cure, and qualifies for programs he or she didn't qualify for in the past," he said.

University psychology profemors and students operate the treatment program at the Tacachale Center, a state-run facility in Gainesville for the developmentally disabled.

FORT LAUDERDALE -Jurors have tried for four days without success to make sense of federal racketeering laws in the trial of black religious sect leader Yahweh Ben Yahweh and 15 followers.

The panel began deliberating Saturday and planned to return to the jury room this morning after Chief U.S. District Judge Norman Roettger asked them to reconsider the charges against each of the accused.

Yahweh and his co-defendants allegedly conspired to commit 14 murders, two attempted murders and the firebombing of a city block as they built their church into a multi-million dollar enterprise. Jurors saw five months of bloody autopsy photos and gripping testimony from former sect members, including one intoat cut after leaving Nation of Yahweh in 1963.

But none of the defendants are charged with murder. Instead, Yahweh and 10 followers face up to 40 years for conspiracy and racketeering. Five others are charged only with conspiracy and face 20 years.

"It's a very nasty, stupid, complex law," said defense attorney Thomas Buscaglia, whose client. Anthony Murphy. allegedly stabbed a homeless man to death under Yahweh's orders and is charged only with conspiracy

In a nutshell, the jury has to find that a defendant played a role in or had prior knowledge of two of the crimes to convict him of racketeering. To prove conspiracy, they must find only that the defendants joined a core group of sect enforcers knowing that at least two crimes would be committed.

Lake Mary OKs public workroom

LAKE MARY - The citizens of Lake Mary will soon have their own workroom at City Hall. A workroom designed for use by the mayor and commission is being converted for public use.

The change was suggested by Mayor Randy Morris in April, when he proposed converting the room, located north of the City Hall lobby, for use by the general public.

"I would propose that we open the commission workroom and use it as a public resource area," he said, "where any citisen or board member could use it for document review or dis-

Morris suggested, "Pertinent documents such as budget reports, land use plans, and current board packets would be placed on file in somewhat of a library fashion."

At the present time, the room contains adequate seating space, but city Building Official Stan Welling proposed purchasing three large book cases and a five-drawer file cabinet for use in the room. He estimated the price at 8753.

Morris specified, "Under no conditions would we have original documents in this room nor should we place old copies of minutes from various boards in the room." He continued, "However in the case of minutes and other repeating documents, we could start building a library."

The matter was brought up for commission consideration during last week's meeting, and approved by unanimous vote.

Madness

Last November, Serbian gunners laid waste to Dubrovník, an Adriatic jewel founded in 200 B.C. Their aim was to terrorise civilians in an attempt to stop Croatian independence. Now the gunners have opened up on civilians in Sarajevo, capital of the new republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Not even the recent arrival of two U.S. cargo planes carrying relief supplies stopped the bombardment, characterized by a representative of the European Community as "barbaric." Fortunately, the U.S. C-141s carrying food. blankets and medicine to Sarajevo were not hit.

In continuing these attacks, which are in violation of an April 12 cease-fire agreement in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the Serbian government in Belgrade and the rump Yugoslav (Serbian) army have become their own worst enemeies. They are creating an unbridgeable chann of enmity between Serbs and every other ethic group of what was formerly Yugoelavia.

Europeans and Americans alike should be aghast that these atrocities can take place in modern Europe. Even allowing for the ethnic rivalries that have marked Balkan history, the Serbs have gone beyond the pale. In attempting to create a "greater Serbia," uniting Serba in all of Yugoslavia, they are using some of the same methods and tactics used by Hitler to unite Germans in the 1930s.

Belgrade's protest to Washington that U.S. policy has become anti-Serbian is pure latuity. In an attempt to satisfy Belgrade, the United States delayed longer than other Western countries in recognizing the independence of Croatia, Slovenia and Bosnia-Herzegovina.

That delay did no good. It did not slake Belgrade's desire for more land. But in turning their artillary on cities and towns, the Serbs have forfeited any good will the world might have had toward them., As the largest Yugoslav republic, Serbia should have taken the lead in forging a new confederation of southern slavic states. Serbia could have played the same role that Russia is playing in the former Soviet Union. Instead. the Serbs tried to block independence by the others and steal their territory - not through warfare, but through military terrorism.

These tactics are pathetically self-defeating. Today's Europe is composed of states and poeples — not killing each other to conquer more land - but breaking down borders to create an expanding community of cooperating nations, East and West, North and South.

By its actions, Serbia has ostracized itself from the rest of Europe. The United States should give the European Community and the United Nations whatever support is requested to bring the Belgrade madmen to their senses.

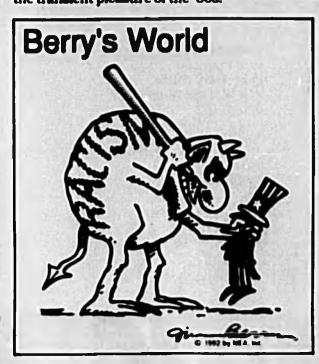

Look where polyester's apt to crop up next

Sisting through 20th century landfills. anthropolgists of a future generation are sure to come upon the first polyester leisure suit: a jaunty little number stained by the grime of time, but still wrinkle-free. Orange rinds and Kleenex come and go, but polyester is forever.

Or maybe not. According to a report in the jaournal Science, researchers at Michigan State University have genetically engineered a plant that produces a biodegradable form of polyester. Someday, even the genes of potatoes or sugar beets may be altered to grow this environmentally friendly plastic for medical uses such as sutures and for bottles and other packaging material.s

Probably not for fabric, though. Imagine the sensation you could cause in a disappearing leisure suit. You'd be a walking metaphor for the transient pleasure of the '60s.

in population explosion

Recite after me: Population growth rates are going down, way down. Keep saying it. That should inoculate you to the rhetoric due soon from the Rio de Janeiro "Earth Summit," dealing with what is said to be an environmental

But is there an environmental crisis? No one knows. Certainly not about global warming. Consider the demographic busis for the idea of such crisis, composed of a much-trumpeted alleged fact linked to a much-trumpeted alleged theory. The alleged fact is that we face runaway population growth (inexorable, catastrophic — a population growth (inexoratic, Catalague bomb, an explosion!). The alleged theory is that more people produce more pollution.

Face the fact first: The keystone demographic datum is the "Total Fertility Rate" (TFR). That represents the number of children a woman will bear in her fertile years. In modern countries, a TFR of 2.1 children per woman ultimately yields a population that neither grows nor shrinks, but merely "replaces" itself. In the poor Less Developed Countries (LDCs) the replacement rate

In 1960-65, according to U.N. data, the global TFR was 5.0. In 1990, according to the new Population Reference Bureau's "Population Data Sheet!" the rate was 3.3 — a 34 percent decrease in slightly more than one generation.

Explosion? Hardly. And the drop is more than it seems. Only 2.1 is needed for stability in a modern country. By that standard, the global TFR has gone 50 percent of the way down toward replacement. In one

But, ah ha, it is said, the population explosion is not oc-curring "globally." In modern countries the TFR is already down to a belowreplacement 1.9. It's in the LDCs where "the people bomb" is said to be on a short fuse.

generation.

Indeed, LDC rates are higher. The LDC/TFR was 6.1 in 1960-65. But by

This doesn't meen that global population won't grow.

1990 it was 3.8 — 62 percent of the way down toward the LDC replacement rate. In one generation. Compare that to CNN's recent purple proce: "...as the planet's population grows exponentially....

Consider the most populous LDCs: In Mexico, in 1960-65, the TFR was 6.8. By 1990, it was 3.8. In Brazil: 6.2 and 3.1.

Consider the two Asian giants: China 5.9 to 2.2, India 5.8 to 3.9.

In North Africa, Egypt's TFR fell from 7.1 to 4.4. The slowest drops are in black Africa. Nigeria scores 6.9 and 6.5. (But U.N. estimates had Nigerian population at 117 million. A good census was finally taken in 1990 — counting 86

This doesn't mean that global population won't grow from the current 5.4 billion. It will. But by how much? The U.N. has just issued projections. Their "medium" scenario is based on an ultimate global drop to a 2.1 TFR and yields 10 billion by 2050 — substantial growth.

What it all means is that we do not confront a relentless, bomblike circumstance. Whatever will be thrown at us in terms of environmental theory, the population aspect of it is less than the purveyed nightmare.

Assisted death raises doubts

BOSTON - Put aside the subtle arguments about the right to die. Shelve the intricate ethical questions about doctor-assisted suicide. Jack Kevorkian is on the loose again.

The state of Michigan has a serial killer on its hands. Or a serial mercy killer. Or a serial side and abettor to suicide. Choose one of the above. But the distinctions are becoming more biurred all the time.

Kevorkian, trained pathologist and self-proclaimed "obitiatrist," thinks of himself as a maverick and martyr in the spirit of Mahatma Gandhi. Dr. Death, the man with the motive -"My motto is a rational policy of planned death" — believes he's a crusader like Martin Luther King Jr. But as the count of the dead grows he looks a lot more like Jack the Ripper. M.D.

First on the list of Kevorkian's patientvictims back in 1990 was Janet Adkins, a woman with Alzheimer's who pushed the button on the machine in his suicide-mobile in a park in Oakland County. For this death. Kevorkian was charged with and acquitted of first-degree homicide. It was ruled that she killed hernelf and there was no state law against physician-assisted suicide.

Then, last fall, came Sherry Miller and Marjorie Wantz, one with multiple sclerosis. the other with chronic vaginal pain. For his involvement with these deaths he was ndicted again for murder and is awaiting trial.

Now there is Susan Williams. On May 15. while out on ball. Kevorkian provided the gas canister and hands-off technical assistance to a 52-year-old woman crippled by multiple sclerosis. He was there - on a suicide house call when she put on the mask, pulled the handle and breathed the carbon monoxide.

Each of these women wanted to die. Each of them was grateful, polite, replete with thank yous to the man who provided them with the means. But that doesn't diminish the fact that Kevorkian has become an ethical outlaw. a free-lance death dealer providing paraphernalia and know-how to the users.

When Janet Adkins decided to take her life before she lost her mind, she saw suicide as a pre-emptive strike against a bleak Alzheimer's future. In the debate that followed, Kevorkian's bizarre personality seemed like a distraction from central questions about life and death

The Adkins case ratcheted up the national discussion on everything from disconnecting life support to aiding suicide. Since then, Derek Humphry's how-to-kill-yourself book, "Final Exit" has become a surprise best seller. The state of Washington proposed and defeated a referendum that would have allowed doctors to assist suicides in carefully defined cases of terminally ill patients.

In intimate conversations over living wills. families have discussed the conditions under which they want to live and die. In public forums doctors have been called to reconsider their role at the end of a life. There is appropriate debate about how and when a doctor might help us out of a lingering death.

Now Jack strikes again. This time, the sensitivity about life and death and medicine can only distract attention from the central question about Kevorkian. Janet, Sherry. Mariorie and Susan were not terminal by accepted medical definitions. Janet. Sherry Marjorie and Susan — is it a coincidence that they are all women? - were not Kevorkian's patients in any traditional sense. He has no more right to wander around Michigan offering death to ill women than he has to put loaded guns in the hands of depressed teen-agers. As ethicist George

The only

The rebel and provocateur has so far frustrated the state's attempts to control him. He's been prosecuted as a criminal and had his license to practice medicine revoked. He's kept one step ahead of the legislature's attempts to write a bill outlawing physician-assisted

As long as Janet. Sherry, Marjorle and Susan pushed the button, he may not be guilty of first-degree murder. But he has provided the means and recklessly endangered lives.

As Susan Wolf of the Hastings Center says. "The number one thing he's doing is killing people. You have to say it as it is."

In 1990 Kevorkian threw down a challenge. "If it's legal, let me do it. If it's illegal, stop me." Now this renegade - have carbon monoxide, will travel - has issued a new challenge: Stop me before I kill again. That's exactly what Michigan must do.

Tsongas reflects on campaigning

WASHINGTON - For former presidential candidate Paul Tsongas, the things he remembers best about his campaign are the moments of mirth and mahem that accompany a run for the White House.

Frozen out of the New Hampahire primary by better-organized, better-financed candidates. Tsongas recalls the paramilitary tactics of his young campaign staff, a makeshift unit that even took to the high seas to spread the word.

Once, they rented a speedboat and drove it all night alongside a small cruise ship filled with influential supporters of Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin. Buzzing along the ship flashing signs, the Tsongas campaign managed to steal Harkin's thunder that evening, and went on to win New Hampshire in an upact.

Tsongas remembers the phone call from Gary Hart after getting into the race last summer. Tsongas and Hart served in the Senate together and Hart had his own run at the presidency. Their common experience provided an immediate bond between the two.

actually raised more money than any other

Democrat.

"There was no conversation, just this sort of rolling laughter. After we finished laughing, I said, 'what are we laughing about?'' Hart's one-word reply: "Life."

This is the spring of Paul Tsongas' discontent, a season in which the anticharisma candidate came within a whisker of an upact. Today, Taongas is replaying the race frame by frame in excruciating slowmotion. For starters, life on the campaign trail could have been a lot sweeter if the deluge of political contributions had started before his candidacy rocketed in New Hampshire.

In a recent gathering of close friends and supporters. Tsongas explained the turning point of his suspended presidential campaign.

It came in the final days of a close three-way race in Colorado. With six days to go before the primary, Bill Clinton suggested that Tsongas would be too cosy with the nuclear power industry if elected president. The next day, Tsongas ordered a counter ad, but the campaign had neither the funds nor the facilities to get it on the air in time. Five days later he lost Colorado by two points to Jerry Brown.

"If you have a well-financed campaign, you aiready have a (television) studio that's committed to you, so you just call up and get (an ad) on the air the next day," Tsongas explained to us recently.

Tsongas actually raised more money than any other Democrat in the two months following his surprising victory in New Hampshire, but in the first year of his campaign, he could only muster $1 million in donations. By contrast, 1988 nominee Michael Dukakis had raised ten times that amount at the same juncture.

Taongas thinks his message has an immortality, a message that Ross Perot, not Bill Clinton, seems to be seizing.

While he will not rule out another run for the presidency in 1996, he is currently preparing to launch a group with retiring Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., that will focus on fiscal responsibility in government, a theme that anchored his campaign.

For a man whose platform resonated like a root canal. Tsongas had a sense of the abourd, which killed some of the pain.

'Campaigns are issues, and not sleeping and jet lag — all of that — but ultimately it is just the people that you run into and the friends that you make - just an extraordinary experience," he said.

Pit opponents, including the Central Florida Wetlands Society, vow they will band together and oppose the proposal before state and federal environmental permitting agencies and will appeal the approval in court if those efforts are unsuccessful.

Gilmartin, president of the North Lake Jesup Property Owners Association, said the opposition group which will in-clude Geneva residents will in-corporate in order to raise money for the legal and administrative battles.

Commissioner Jennifer Kelley, who joined with commis Larry Furlong to oppose the pit, said there are already more dirt pits in the county than will be needed for the expressway.

"According to the expressway authority, 9.7 million cubic yards are needed for the expressway," said Kelley. "Already, we've permitted 14 million yards of fill dirt. I got to thinking, airight, maybe we've got enough."
Kelley asked commissioners to reject the White proposal, but received support from only Furlong. When Kelley asked for a vote on a pit moratorium, Warren at first joined the call for a vote, but then retracted it when staff said data submitted by White was adequate to show impacts from the pit would be minimal. With Warren's backing down, commissioners did not vote on the moratorium.

Commissioners Bob Sturm. Fred Streetman and Warren said they were assured by staff members data shows the pit would not affect area groundwater or adjacent wetlands.

"Do we have sufficient data?." saked Warren.

'We have information on rainfall and it indicates to us that there will be no drawdown wetlands," said Glenn Semanisin, director of the Development Review Division.

'What if they're wrong," asked Furiong. "Do we have a bond or anything that would cover the damage to the wetlands?"

Firefighter of the year

The Sanford Lione' firefighter of the year was honored by the Club Tuesday. Accepting the sward for Firefighter Richard A. Cohen was Fire Chief Tom Hickson. Giving the award was Lions Community Service chairman Ken Powell. Cohen was on vacation.

"I don't know," answered Semanisin.

"We don't have the answers for your questions," added

Area residents and environmentalists asked the county to delay their vote until the cumulative impacts of the pits on surrounding areas could be studied. Mike Rich, an environmental consultant who is participating in the appeal of a controversial Geneva borrow pit. said after dirt is removed, the level of groundwater nearby is lowered by a foot or more.

Rich poured water from a jar with a sand and water mixture to demonstrate the level would be lower. The demonstration that will adversely affect the engendered an testy response from Hugh Harling, the engineering consultant for White. "It is neat to make something with a jar of water," said Haring, his voice trembling. "But it is a simplistic view of what actually happens underground." Sydney Bacchus, who said she was a former wetlands specialist for the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation, St. Johns River Water Management District as well as for a consulting firm, said even a foot "drawdown" of surrounding water could affect neighboring wetlands.

Todd Swearington, president of the wetlands society, said his research indicated that of the 960 acres in the South Sanford Avenue area, pits have been completed, approved or porposed for 150 of those acres. These can have a cone of influence of up to one mile away," said Swearington. "I hardly think we can make an intelligent decision unless we know what the cumulative impacts will be," said Gilmartin. "Do you have any idea where the first should come from?," she was asked by Warren.

"People would feel more comfortable about these proposals if there were comfortable with the data," answered Gilmartin.

County commissioners approved creating the new job Tuesday. The person will be paid $30,500 annually, or about $14,000 through the end of the flacal year on September 30.

Seminole County has had a growing focus on housing during the past three years since their Affordable Housing Task Force was created to study the needs of residents. The group, in a report released in January 1991, found hundreds of people were on the Sanford Housing Authority waiting list and many residents rebuild delapidated homes in the were apparently buying their first homes in Orange County, where prices are lower.

Black access to education, business stressed at meeting well as improved education, black leaders said at a conference.

Gov. Lawton Chiles bruight the 100 religious leaders, professors, business people and politicians together to discuss ways state government can ease the poverty and hopeleanness that helped touch off the Los Angeles riots.

"What we're hoping is this will be the start of a real dialogue," Chiles said. "We understand now that we need to involve you more."

The riots four washs ago, touched off by acquittal of four white police officers in the beating of a black motorist, was "a wake-up call," the governor said.

Several conference participants said the gap between black and white, rich and poor, educated and unsequented in Florida and the nation as a whole is widening, leading to the danger of more race violence in the years to come.

"We see the current situation as a time bland ticking, waiting to go off," said Sharen Demark, a psychology professor at Florida Addi University, where the conference was held.

The main message Chiles and five of his agency chiefs got was that more blacks should be in government decision-making positions, such as judges and high-level law enforcement officials, and minority businesses need government's help to succeed.

said Tom Lewis, a business professor at Florida A&M.

Lewis and other participants recommended boosting the number of minority businesses certified to get state contracts, slapping criminal penalties on those who masquerade as black-owned, and setting up more tax credits for inner city investment.

Education is another cornerstone of improving the lives of Florida blacks, participants said. They called for a state budget with enough money in it to improve public instruction.

Law enforcement officers should have improved training, particularly in the use of force, and a better understanding of the black community, said Lucretia Shaw-Collins, staff director of the House Corrections Committee.

"We don't want to experience the same thing that happened in L.A.," she said.

Chiles and Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay mostly listened but also pitched their $1.35 billion tax plan. Both said it would fund education adequate. ly and pay for preventative social programs that can stop people from turning to crime or the welfare system to survive.

Mackay said. "We're out on a limb."
The plan would end sales tax exemptions on 99 goods and services and roll back the overall sales tax rate to 5 percent from 6 percent. It will be debated in the legislative session set to begin

Can the premium potato. choicer corn and sophisticated soybean be far behind?

'No question that's what this is all about," says Dan Wagster, chief financial officer of Calgene Inc., a California biotechnology firm that got a government go-ahead Tuesday on its super tomato, the Flavr Savr.

The Flavr Savr - the first whole, genetically altered food headed for U.S. grocery stores can be picked ripe from the vine and shipped thousands of miles to market without spoiling. Currently, most tomatoes are picked green, sprayed with a gas to ripen them and then shipped.

That has led to winters of who have made mushy tomatoes a top complaint to grocers.

Wagster said.
"We're all about changing that," he said in a telephone nterview from his office in

Davis, a suburban city just west of Secremento. "We have turned off the gene responsible for rotting." What's next for the food of the uture? Genetic engineers are at work n corn, soybeans and potatoes o produce plants that remain resh longer, produce high yields of more nutritious food, and are stant to insects or drought. Other projects include a lowcholesterol pig, cholesterol-free canola oil and a cotton plant that packs its own weed killer, said Richard D. Godown, president of the Washington-based Industrial Biotechnology Association.

"Today ... was really a milestone because it lays out the road map for the commercialization of these products," he

The low-cholesterol pig, which isn't covered by Tuesday's guidelines, is being worked on in Princeton, N.J.

"They don't feed it sweets and they don't let it go to the movies," Godown joked, quickly adding that, in fact, the pig's genetic structure is being changed to make it grow faster, producing more muscle and lose fat.

Scientists at Calgene are fol-lowing up their better tomato with new strains of canola, or rape seed, and cotton. Wagster

The Flavr Savr was improved by inactivating a gene that produces an ensyme which causes the fruit to soften. The tomato should be in stores by 1993 and is expected to cost more than the green-picked tomatoes, but less than hothouse varieties.

Wagster said the Flavr Savr is about the same size as a regular store tomato but has much less pulp, is juicier and has a more intense flavor. It is red, but not necessarily redder than a chemically ripened tomato.

NEW YORK - "Roses are red. violets are blue.

Sugar is sweet. Remember?"
If you remember that rhyme, you probably remember May 1942 - 50 years ago - when the government imposed sugar rationing.

The nation had been in World War II for about six months when about 131 million Americans — men and women, boys and girls — trooped off to their neighborhood schools. After looking a teacher in the way and declaring how much sugar they had at home, they received

The Sugar Book, as it was known, marked the beginning of food rationing on the home front. The booklet contained a year's supply of ration coupons, each about half the size of a postage stamp, which allotted the holder eight ounces of sugar per week.

Sugar had begun to get scarce in December, and the fall of the Philippines and a lack of cargo shipping space from Latin America created a shortage that would last until 1946.

Rationing worked, more or less, but no one liked it. "No form of regulation con-flicted more sharply with traditional American values," historian Richard Polenberg wrote.

So we laughed about it. About the farmer who demanded a ration book for his mule, which supposedly would not work unless rewarded with sugar.

Now, consumers have to put up with mushy winter tomatoes that are shipped green and then sprayed with a gas to make them ipen. The new tomato, the Flavr Savr, will cost more than the green-picked kind but less than hothouse varieties. Because it ripened on the vine, it should approach homegrown taste, said Calgene chief financial officer Dan Wagster.

The government's announce-ment drew raves from the food industry, but critics said more precautions are needed, and a rmers group threatened to sue. Government officials said consumers should not fear the new technology.

At a Walnut Creek grocery store, shopper Donna McKeon said she wasn't overly concerned about gene-splicing.

like a for.

"I don't believe that was a bumbling mistake," said Steve Priedman, executive producer of "NBC Nightly News." "I think they probably sat in a strategy session and said 'look, what we are talking about is family values and look what was on televistes last night." I don't think they blundered into it at all."

Few in the television business missed an opportunity to respond to Quayle, though few did so publicly.

"Murphy Brown" co-creator Diane English said "If the vice president thinks it's diagrace-ful for an unmarried woman to bear a child, and he believes that woman cannot adequately raise a child without a father, then he'd better make sure abortion remains safe and legal."

"Murphy Brown" star
Candice Bergen refused comment, as did parent network CBS.

But in the last week of Carson's show. Quayle became an increasingly big-ger monologue target. "Do you get the feeling that Dan's golf bag doesn't have a full set of irons?" Carson asked on his penultimate show.

David Letterman didn't let up, either. At one point he shoved his face toward the camera and admonished the vice president to listen up. "I'm only going to say this once. Murphy Brown is a fictional character!"

Lookouts win by footbell score

ORLANDO — Willie Greene hit a grand slam in the fifth inning to lead the Chattanooga Lookouts to a high-scoring 19-11 victory over the Orlando SunRays in Southern League play.

Dolphins trade Apopka's Smith

DENVER — Disgruntled fourth-year running backs Bobby Humphrey and Sammie Smith have swapped uniforms, eager to make new starts with the Miami Dolphins and Denver

Broncos, respectively.

Smith, from Apopka and FSU, led Mismi in rushing each of his first two seasons, but fumbling and injury problems cost him a starting job last year.

The 6-foot-2, 228-pound Smith rushed for 659 and 831 yards his first two seasons, but alumped to 297 yards last year.

Humphrey rushed for 1,151 and 1,202 yards in his first two seasons with the Broncos. But his long, bitter holdout, which ended in mid-October, set back his conditioning last season, and he was never able to unsest Gaston Green as the starter. He carried only 11 times for 33 yards.

One champ crowned as YMCA caps hoop season

From Staff Reports

SANFORD - The regular season of the Seminole County YMCA (Young Men's Christian Association) 3-on-3 Baketball League came to an end last Sunday night at the Lakeview Middle School Gymnasium, but only one of the three League's crowned a champion.

The Raiders finished with a 12-2 record, an 85.71 winning percentage, to claim the A League. But the B-Busters and The Tragic both posted 12-1 records to tie the for the B League while the Oreos and 3-Be-Jammin both went 10-2 to tie for the C League top spot.

The winners of the leagues are determined by winning percentage, not just wins. Each match-up in the schedule is actually a best-ofthree series.

The post season tournament will start next Sunday at Lakeview but the YMCA will play tie breakers to determine the B and C League winners before starting the tournament. The Raiders finished the A League with a full two-game lead over runners-up TBD (9-4, 69.23) and three-games ahead of third place Shot Happens (11-5, 68.75) in the 10-team league.

Completing the B League standings were State

Farm (6-7, 46.15), the Fat Boys (6-8, 42.86), TKO (6-10, 37.50), the Predators (3-10, 23.08), Class Break Billiards (2-10, 16.67), the Over Achievers and the Rookies (both 1-12, 7.69) and The Parrotheads (0-12, 0.00).

The C League was also very close as the top six teams in the 12-team league all won better than 60-percent of their games. The Oreos and 3-Be-Jammin's 10-2 records, an 83.33 winning percentage, was just one loss better than the Predators, who finished 10-3, an 76.92 winning percentage.

Also winning over 60-percent of their games were the Jayhawka (9-4, 69.23), Rain Man (8-4, 66.67) and the Lakeshore Legends (8-5, 61.54).

Pinishing seventh through 12th were Help (5-8. 38.46), the Bad Apples and Med-Plex (both 5-9, 35.71). Da Bums (3-10, 23.06), the Brick Masons (2-10, 16.67) and The Amazing Individuals (2-11,

Longwood's Burkett goes wire-to-wire for Late Model victory

pooled to the Horald

SAMBULA - Current FASCAR Late Model point leader Ronnie Burkett held off a late race charge by Daniel Keene to win the division's feature event Saturday night at New Smyrna Speedway.

From his pole starting position, Burkett, who is from Longwood, led every circuit to notch his third win of the season.

Following Burkett into turn two at the drop of the green were Dennis Schoenfeld, Chuck Abel and Keene. As that trio dueled for second place, Burkett started to pull away from the pack and built a comfortable lead. By the midway mark, Burkett had a half-lap lead on the field with Keene settled into the No. 2

But a spin with two laps remaining brought out a caution flag. On the restart, the field bunched up with Keene sitting on Burkett's rear bumper. Keene tried unsuccessfully to gain the point but couldn't overtake the frontrunner before Burkett crossed the stripe.

"We were really hooked up tonight," said BUrkett, who was the 1991 Late Model division Rookie of the Year. "The car handled well and the engine was real strong. It feels good to win. but when you beat a veteran like Daniel (Keene), the win is a lot nicer.

Rounding out the top five were, in order of finish, Thomas, Schoenfeld and Abel.

Surviving three cautions in the first two laps of the Limited Laie Model main event, Sanford's Don Roberts cruised to his first ever feature win in that division.

Roberts took the lead on the second lap when leader Darrell Frye burned a clutch and slipped back into the field. Once in the lead, Roberts drove to victory lane uncontested.

"I've been racing a lot of years and I've lost some races on mechanical problems," said Roberts. "Tonight, though, someone else's problems worked in my favor. I don't like to win like this, but if I didn't get it.

someone else would." Following Roberts to the finish line were Jason Burkett, Gary | See Burkett, Page 38

Wood starts strong, has to hang on late in Late Model feature

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO - Ricky Wood sped to a 25-lap FASCAR-sanctioned Late Model win at Orlando SpeedWorld last Friday

After handily winning his heat, Wood, from Orlando, started from the pole and belt a sizeable lead and running Jeff Burkett.

Jeff's brother Ronnie, who started near the rear of the field. soon moved up to challenge for second. But the two brothers. who are from Longwood. tangled, bringing out the caution flag and sending the embarassed pair to the rear of the field for the restart.

From there, Dennis Schoenfeld inherited second and began applying pressure to Wood as Ronnie Burkett charged back up through the field to make it a three-way battle fot the lead.

But Wood was up to the challenge, holding off Schoenfeld and Ronnie Burkett for his first Late Model win in several years. Steady Don Fenn claimed fourth over Scott Reeves.

"Everything was just perfect tonight," said Wood, a former Modified driver. "The car worked great and I was able to stay out of trouble. During the last few weeks, I've been running close to the front. But tonight. I had the car to beat."

Putting several years of frustration behind him, David Lecklitner finally took his first feature win in the Mini Stock division.

at the end of the season and get into race promotion, jumped out front on the start and fended off several challenges. Having built up big leads in the past, only to see his advan-tage wiped out by caution flags. it was deja vut for Lecklitner as the caution flag waved for a spin with two laps to go.

BARBERVILLE - DeLeon Springs' Mike Hunter came out on top of Round No. 1 of the Budweiser Triple Crown Late Model Stock series got this past Saturday night at Volusia County Speedway.

A three-race series offering over $30,000 in posted awards, the Budweiser Triple Crown Series awards bonus monies to the top five finishers in each heat race along with feature event Lap Leader bonuses.

A separate points sylem has been set up for these three events with a champion being honored at the Banquet of Champions and the top five in each division receiving point fund bonuses.

Ken West of Jacksonville and Ormond's Mike Goldberg battled side-by-side from the drop of the green flag. But with only one lap completed, the two came together in turn two to bring the field under a caution flag.

Inheriting the lead was Greg Ward, also from Ormond, who blasted to a 10-car length advantage on the restart. A battle ensued for second between Bill Kopka of lly Hill, St. Augustine's David Showers and Hunter. Showers getting by on the low side of Kopka to claim second and Hunter following to take third.

Showers then began to apply heat on Ward. However, he lost a tire and took Ward with him on lap 14. Hunter became the new leader and held tough the rest of the way for his third victory of the season.

Scott Laughlin of South Daytona held the early lead in the 20-lap Street Stock feature. But after working his wat up through traffic. Ormond's Rod Gammon Sr. took over the point on the eighth lap.

Scott LeCates, also of Ormond, and Bunnell's Gene Pelliver ran a strong seconf and third, respectively, for the last 10 laps, LeCates trying to pass Gammon on both the inside and the outside right to the stripe. Despite LeCates' efforts, Gammon went on to take the checker.

It didn't take long for Jimmy Winks of Edgewater to take a commanding lead in the 20-lap Sportsman feature. Charging through traffic and moving into second by lap nine was DeLand's David Ponder, who then started to reel Winks in, gaining ground with each lap.

By the 15th lap, Ponder was breathing down Winks' back. Unfortunately, Ponder's No. 26 mount suffered tire problems on the closing laps and began to back down as Winks held strong to the end of the run to score the win.

Robert Griner of Salt Spring and Apopka's Phil Orr led the way in the 20-lap Mini Stock feature. Orr having enough of an edge to take the early lead. There was a lot of three-wide action throughout the feature between Derick Luthe of DeLand, Rob Ford, also of DeLand, and Inverness' Rick Fairbanks.

After moving into second, Fairbanks began to hunt down Orr, Riding on the high side, Fairbanks took over the lead on the sixth lap, then held off charges by Ford to claim the victory.

The 20-lap Charger feature saw several different drivers hold the lead, including Bob Peterson of Pierson, St. Augustine's James Bragg. Jim Heffner of Ormond and Orlando's Tony Newsome.

Enjoy a bounty of vegetable choices

Fresh vegetables and the combination. The most nutritious and tasty vegetables start with the best produce. Very fresh vegetables from the garden are ideal, but frozen and canned produce is more than convenent. These commercially prepared vegetables can be more nutritious than fresh produce that has been stored too long at the grocery or in your refrigera-tor. Buy the freshest produce you can at least once a week and supplement with frozen or canned vegetable.s

Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — Erma and Earl Douglas have a perfect partnership. Earl, a prolific gardener, grows the goodies and Erma cooks the bounty into wonderful culinary creations. Although he served as cook in the Army, it is Mrs. Douglas who has a real command of the kitchen now. The couple retired to the Central Florida area from Missouri over six years ago.

Erma Douglas learned to cook at the age of sixteen when a favorite aunt taught her how to make an angel food cake. Over the years she has expanded her hitchen reportation to include all kitchen repertoire to include all types of dishes. Douglas used her kitchen skills to help her sister who owned a restaurant in St. Charles, Missouri. She baked many different varieties of cream pies for the customers. "She makes the best coconut cream pic. People always ask her to make them one." Earl says proudly.

Douglas is also renown for her homemade chicken and dumplings. She likes to take a huge pot of this favorite dish to church suppers. She would love to share the recipe for the often requested dish but she does the preparation strictly from memory and by sight and feel. A touch will tell her whether to add more flour or if the mixture needs additional chicken broth. "I don't know how to put this down on paper."- she told a friend. "I just do it!" It is one of those instinctive things that only truly great cooks can make.

Douglas and her husband often extend hospitality to large groups of guests. Harvest Moon parties and picnics are festive occasions where friends can sample delicacies from Douglas' kitchen. "We had two turkeys and two hams and I made a large batch of chili," ahe recalls. Douglas makes her chili from scratch including first preparing the dried beans for cooking.

Her husband favors country style cooking like fried chicken with pan gravy. Douglas makes family members their favorite cakes on their birthdays. She says that she loves cooking for her family most of all. Her visit and she prepares all of the meals for them.

Douglas happily shows off a fine set of professional type pots and pans. The pots were a gift from appreciative family mem-bers. She certainly needs them to help her can fourteen quarts of green beans her husband has harvested not to mention all of that blackberry jelly she has made. Her husband is more than happy to cultivate the berries so that he can have a supply of his favorite jelly.

Douglas, who also creates beautiful cross stitched and appliqued quilts, shares some of her favorite, time-tested recipes. 'The potatoes give the rolls a nice texture," Douglas claims.

Put in bowl and place in refristerator overnight. Next day refrigerator overnight. Next day punch dough down and shape into rolls. Place on greased cookie sheet and let rise in warm place until doubled. Bake at 400 degrees for about 15 minutes

The note on this recipe says she "Makes for all her angels." Douglas says she does make this cake for all of her favorite people.

Teens urged to consider consequences attractive 13-year-old girl. I have a problem that's been on my mind for a while, and I can't tell my best friend for fear of her disapproval. I don't think many girls have faced this. Here goes: I am afraid of dying, and I do not want to die a virgin. I have had a few invitations to have sex, but I did not, although I have gone kind of far with one guy.

I am a good student and very responsible person. But just lately, I have had the feeling that if something were to happen to me and I died, I will have missed out on an experience I probably wouldn't have a chance to have in heaven. I am not saying I would run

No. You are not a slut for having sexual thoughts and feelings you are normal. But today's teens must realize that they increase their risk of dying, or infertility, if they have sex with partners infected with a sexually transmitted disease. That is why I urge teen-agers to consider the consequences of becoming sexually active.

French eat faster, better, drink more water, less wine

By MARKLYH AVOUST Associated Press Writer

PARIS — The French, a nation of gastronomes, are spending less time at the table, but may be eating better than their parents did.

They linger less at lunch, over fewer courses and less bread, drink less wine and have discovered frozen food, take-outs and home delivery, just like Americans

A study by the National Statistics Institute says these habits reflect a changing lifestyle laced with stress, lengthy work days and longer commutes as high city rents force people to the suburbs.

As more women take jobs, they are less willing to spend hours cooking.

Twenty years ago, any self-respecting French cook could whip up a white sauce, pastry crust or salad dressing from scratch. Today, there is no shame in buying it from the grocery.

"My mother used to make her own vinalgrette fresh every night," said Corinne Gurfinkiel, 35, who has three children. "But thuy it in bottles."

I buy it in bottles."
Supermarkets are the beneficiaries. In 1962, there were only 224 supermarkets in France. In 1991, the number was 7,043.

Over 20 years, with prices 10 to 40 percent below those in smaller grocers, their market share jumped from 10 percent to 59 percent. The Leclerc chain, one of France's biggest success stories, has increased frozen food sales by 10 percent each year since 1968.

Statistics published in the weekly news magazine L'Express indicate one reason the French are eating better is that their meals are more balanced.

For instance, French people eat half as much sugar as they did in 1962, three times as much fresh fish and 30 percent more fresh fruit and vegetables.

Average annual consumption of potatoes was 225 pounds 30 years ago, compared with 150 pounds in 1989, and bread consumption was 200 pounds in 1962, compared to less than 145 in 1989

Baguettes, made from refined white flour, now compete with breads made of whole wheat, rye or bran flour.

The current generation drinks far less wine, washing meals down with mineral water or fruit juice instead, and more of the wine consumed is of better quality. Wineshop chains say sugar, milk and salt. Cook slowly over low heat until it thickens, stirring constantly. Soak gelatin in cold water and add to hot custard to dissolve. Cool mixture, blend cream cheese with vanilla, lemon juice and a few tablespoons of the custard. Stir gently into custard, whip cream and fold into mixture. Blend crumbs with 1 Tbsp. sugar, cinnamon and melted butter. Press into bottom of 8-inch spring mold pan. Spoon custard over crumbs. Place in refrigerator until completely set. Serves 8 to 10.

demand is stronger than ever for wines costing more than $3.50 a bottle.

Wine is "no longer consumed for its energy value," said Patrick Marandon, a wine expert.

The statistics institute study notes that people eat out more often, about three times a week on average. Eleven percent of the family food budget went to restaurants in 1969, compared to nearly 20 percent in 1969.

Restaurateurs say there is a new attitude.

"Customers look very closely at prices." said Patrick Bramone, who manages the fashionable bistro Battiol. "At lunchtime, they're in a hurry, and so they usually order just a main course, never desert.

A decade ago, he said, they lingered over three courses and ended with coffee and brandy.

The business lunch endures, but with major changes.

Yves Le Gougec, 46, a computer salesman, recalls striking deals over fole gras, canard a l'orange and mousse au chocolat.

"We used to have these big meals designed to impress the customer," he said. "Today, we sign the deal in the office and seal it over lunch. Lunches are less formal, more friendly, and we stay away from the heavier dishes in rich sauces."

Produce from Spain, Iarael, Morocco, South Africa and South America is available year-round. Avocados and kiwis, once rare, are as common and cheap as tornatoes and oranges.

Diet sodas arrived only last year, but low-fat dairy products abound. The "all natural" label, translated as "bio," was once an advertizing gimmick, but today most neighborhoods have a health food store. The Left Bank has an open-air organic food market.

"We're eating lighter, but more and more people have weight problems," said Arnaud Basdevant, a nutritionist. "The key to the paradox is the for breakdown of traditional eating patterns. People no longer eat when they're hungry. They eat when they have time."

Fast food has not spared the French. McDonald's opened its first outlet in 1973 and now has 2,000 in France. The study says one in nine meals outside the home is eaten in a fast-food restaurant.

Tex-Mex, American-style pizza and North African, Lebanese and Vietnamese cuisine are available in fast-food shops that often stay open late.

However, many French still prefer fast food a la Francaise: "croque monsieur" (toasted ham and cheese), broiled chicken, cold cuts, cheese and salads.

These and distens of other traditional dishes can be had, made fresh daily, at the "traiteur," neighborhood take-out shops whose business has boomed in recent years.

"We added a take-out section two years ago and my business has nearly doubled," said Rene Faucher, who owns a butcher shop off the fashionable Rue de Faubourg St. Honore. Most of the customers are office workers who want quality food quickly and economically.

The shops also prepare gourmet cuisine for busy executives who still like to entertain at home.

Sylvie Samaran, a 35-year-old lawyer, intended to cook dinner for her eight guests, but got hung up in the orice.

"So I called the caterer and ordered everything from the appetizer to demert," she said. "All I had to do was set the table and uncork the champagne. Twenty years ago, that would have been seen as socially incorhusband suffered from a severe . prostate infection and then was found to have an elevated antigen level. Biopsy revealed cancer. He's been given a choice of radiation treatments or sur-gery to remove the prostate. Which course would you recommend? DEAR READER: First of all, I don't believe your husband should be forced to make a choice without further information. He is not knowledgable enough to be able to pick the right option. I think his specialists should put their heads together, arrive at a consensus, and present a recommendation to your husband, who can then decide to proceed or to obtain another opinion.

Patients do, indeed, need to make choices but, I believe, the doctors should give more information so the patient can make a rational decision. Either surgery or radiation is probably appropriate. Your husband can decide when the risks and benefits have been explained to

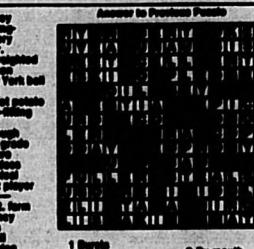

In addition, I am not familiar enough with the details of your husband's prostate cancer to make a judgment. This is best left to his doctors who should propose a plan of action for your husband's approval.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 10-month-old grandson had a scizure after receiving his first DPT shot at 4 months. He's had four seizures since. Is there a link between the DPT and the scizures?

DEAR READER: 1 do not believe the diphthe. ria/pertussis/tetanus inoculation caused your grandson's seizure. My pediatric consultants tell me that DPT shots do not cause this reaction - unless a child develops a fever from the injection, with a resulting febrile convulsion. In this instance, the seizure is not due to the injection itself, but to the fever caused by it -- an unusual complication.

Almost everyone's dream is to make a small investment in the stock market and later to take out a vast profit. Similarly in bridge. Sometimes you have to make a small investment sacrifice a trick you needn't have lost - for a large return success rather than failure in your contract.

Today's hand was played brilliantly by the mercurial English expert, John Collings. East's double of the final contract is typical of rubber bridge. but it isn't recommended when you are playing against a good declarer who will draw the appropriate inferences about the lie of the cards.

Declarer won the club-nine lead with his singleton queen and played the spade king. East grabbed it with the ace and flashed the heart six onto the

It was obvious even to the barman in the next room that this was a singleton. But if East had the diamond ace, as seemed certain from his double (and West's failure to bid on the first round of the auction), how could declarer get into the dummy to cash those lovely club winners?

Collings saw how. He won with the heart ace, cashed the spade queen and led the spade four, giving East a free trump trick with his nine.

What could East return? If a club, it would give declarer four tricks in the suit for all his red-suit losers. If a diamond, declarer would get two tricks in the suit as well as a dummy entry to the club suit.

West apologized, saying that next time he would lead the club five, not the nine. Everyone pretended to believe him.
