Election Day Approaches

As the hour approaches which brings to an end the time when candidates can qualify for the City primary election on November 5, Sanford citizens should be giving more and more of their thought to the matter of choosing honest and capable officials to represent them for the next year or two. As there is no recall provision in Sanford's charter, the time, and the only time when the people have any voice in their government, is on election day.

A year ago the people took the power of governing into their own hands and elected three men who have served this city throughout a trying period with as great efficiency and loyalty, we believe, as was humanly possible. We sincerely regret that one of them, Nelson Gray, through process of business in another section, has been forced to resign before the regular expiration of his term of office, but we are indeed thankful that he, together with Commissioners Speer and Newman, could be on the job long enough to give Sanford the honest and businesslike administration it so badly needed.

This sort of government must be continued. By proper management throughout the coming year we have every reason to believe Sanford's financial problems can be settled once and for all. We believe that far-sighted, hard-boiled business men, who will continue the policies inaugurated by the present commission, will within a year's time give Sanford the lowest municipal tax rate in the state and will do so without saddling on to future generations a huge bonded debt. That, and that alone, will provide Sanford with another "growing" opportunity.

This certainly is no time to take chances on electing to office any set of grafters or professional politicians. This is no time to turn the reins of city government over to any individuals who recognize in the City Hall an opportunity for making an easy living at a time when "easy livings" are few and far between. Any men, who would place their personal advancement ahead of the best interests of the city or who would use the City Hall as a public lunch counter, could settle this city's future in very short order. A little improper administration at this time would prove a set-back from which we would never recover.

There are men in Sanford who have exactly the qualifications needed in this emergency. Most of them hesitate to run for the office of commissioner because they realize that it means hard work and no pay, that service to the city at a time like this means great personal sacrifice. But these are the men who are needed. They must be drafted for a worthy cause. The people of Sanford must be carefully studying this problem and must bring out, forcibly if necessary, men who are competent. Those, too eager for the job, are not wanted.

Remember, it's an election day when the people get their innings. After that, if the wrong men are chosen, it's too late.

So Say We All

In order to prove beyond all question of doubt that women automobile drivers are not only as skilled as men but are actually better, the Tampa Times introduces some interesting statistics compiled by Philip D. Hoyt, deputy police commissioner of New York City, which definitely show an infinite superiority on the part of women when it comes to police court records. Commissioner Hoyt's report says:

In the last four months, 27,130 men violated traffic laws, as against 653 women.

On an average day, 250 men are arraigned and only four women.

Over this four-month period, 3,018 men were up for speeding, as opposed to 66 women.

Difficulties over car lights have brought 4,635 men to court, while only 69 women were charged with similar offenses.

Smoking motors were charged against 17 men, but against not one woman.

One woman was very lightly booked for intoxication. To offset that showing there were 132 men accused of driving while drunk.

Thirty women failed to keep to the right, 4,075 men did likewise.

Seven women mistook a one-way street. There were 481 men who made the same error.

Thirty-two women did not have their licenses at a crucial time, while 2,837 men had the same lapse.

Now the Tampa Times is moved to conclude that these figures indicate that women are better drivers than men. "Just how much better and safer drivers the Hoyt figures show women to be," says the Times, "cannot be appreciated until it is considered that sixteen percent of New York's automobile drivers are women. It is easy to see that not many things like sixteen percent of the lapses that lead to fatalities and the traffic courts of New York are attributable to women. Facing the Hoyt statistics one cannot argue that women are not the best and safest drivers."

But the fact remains that, after all, this assumption is based wholly on police court records. It might be, it seems to us, that women may violate as many traffic laws as men, only don't get pulled so readily. It might be that women are not better drivers than men, only better talkers to policemen. We have never yet been able to talk a cop out of arresting us when overhauled for speeding, but we have never failed to see a girl, even a homely girl, get away with it. As a matter of fact, the surprising thing to us about the Hoyt figures is that they show any arrests at all among the fair sex.

We believe that the Tampa paper recognizes this virtue of all police patrolmen, for in concluding its editorial it leans slightly to the other side of the argument when it says, "Still, the average man would like for somebody to devise a means whereby he might tell just what it is that the average woman driver means to do when she holds out her hand signaling that she is about to do something different from what she is then doing."

A HUNDRED BILLION NEW YORK MEN

The sum of $100,000,000,000, the aggregate of life insurance in force in the United States, is too large for comprehension; the fact that it is divided among 65,000,000 policyholders is not. This means that of every two persons in the United States at least one is named as beneficiary of life insurance as a form of practical thrift; its dissemination so widely among the American people is therefore a matter upon which this nation has every right to congratulate itself.

There is additional significance in the statement of George T. Wright, manager of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, that whereas it took 75 years to reach the first $50,000,000,000, the second has come in the last seven years. This can only mean that participation in American prosperity since 1922 has been general and not confined to comparatively few, especially foreign-born individuals. With prosperity has come increased willingness and ability to obey the dictates of common prudence, and the intelligent campaign of education conducted by the insurance companies has borne fruit.

A CLASH OF RIGHTS GREENWOOD (S. C.) INDEX-JOURNAL

There may be some dispute as to which side, the union strikers or the workers, actually started the row at Marion, N. C., Wednesday, but there can be no dispute as to the following fundamentals:

The right to keep on working is as strong a right as the right to quit work.

The right not to organize is as strong as the right to organize.

These are fundamentals, in any discussion of rights, and yet they seem to be ignored or overlooked in the ordinary discussion of situations in which they play an all-important part.

If a man wishes to work he has a right to do so. It makes no difference what others may think about his doing so, if he wishes to work he has the right to demand legal protection if necessary in order that he may work in peace.

If a man wishes to quit work he has a right to do so. It makes no difference what others may think about his doing so, if he wishes to quit work he has the right to quit work and the right to demand legal protection against being forced to work should such an absurdity be attempted.

If a man wishes to join some organization, union or what not, he has a right to do so. That is a right no sane person will deny.

If a man does not wish to join some sort of organization, union or what not, he has a right not to do so. That is a right no sane person can deny.

But up at Marion, from the reports sent out, it appears that a group of workers in one of the mills decided to quit work. They had a right to join the union and also the right to quit work, but their rights ended there and the rights of others began.

The rights of one man end where another man's begins. It has been said:

The union strikers tried to keep the non-union men and women from working. They yelled at them and called them names and finally used the old threat, "That no one should go in the gate unless they went over their dead bodies." That has been heard before.

They were going beyond their rights when they attempted to keep others from working.

Even before that they were trespassing on the mill property, but that may be overlooked.

The State of North Carolina nor any other state cannot afford to let any class of men dictate to others what they can do and what they cannot do.

If that sort of thing is to prevail, then the states might as well prepare to liquidate and go out of business. Law and order will be utterly destroyed and human life will not be worth any more.

Henry Mason Day who was associated with Harry F. Sinclair in international oil activities and was a partner in the Sinclair Petroleum Company, is a man who has been in prison for a long time. He is a man who has learned the lesson his prison experience was supposed to teach. His first utterance that came with his restored freedom indicates his continued willingness to see the wealthy oil baron for Mr. Day regrets that it is himself and not his chief who is free to go and come as he will.

This thought indicates clearly the mind of the man. The position shows that he regards Sinclair as a better man than himself and suggests that he would have been willing to be remained in prison had it been possible for the other to have been set free.

There was a time when a person's sentence carried a stigma that reminded of the mark of Cain but that now appears to be little more than the myth of a long ago past. It is doubtful if Mr. Day was ever before licensed as he was made his way from the District of Columbia Jail early yesterday. Fellow prisoners waiting up into the small hours of the morning to celebrate his freedom with yells and a barrage of cameras, facing the outer prison gate as he stepped through indicated a holiday rather than

THE CUBAN WAY TAMPA TIMES

If the Cuban court presided over by the Judge Campos is correct in its construction of the law of the island republic it is law in Cuba that a husband must come across with the money necessary for his wife to prosecute divorce proceedings against him—including retainer fees for the madam's attorney and the costs involved in the impending suit. The view entered such expenses by the wife come tained by Judge Campos is that such expenses by the wife come within her legal allowance, even though they are for a divorce.

This country will look up that as something novel, to say the least of it. If wife's allowance in America is also to include divorce proceeding expenses there will have to be a hastened and widespread revision of family codes, we are afraid.

Further, that such a rule might reduce the number of marriages in this land of the constitutionally and divorce-court free, for it is difficult to comprehend that many men will not be slow embracing upon the matrimonial altar if they know, in advance, that they must "put up" for the expense of the divorce which may come some day.

If this is law in Cuba it is law in America that's all even if it is rather strongly found to require two-time-with-apologies-to-wife "Law is common sense" and "The woman always pays."

What is Cuba about, anyhow? Is this just her way of looking after our own men as a debt to the able place to which women who bring divorce can repair? Maybe, though, Havana does not divorce as quickly nor as lightly as Reno. If such be true the divorce expense as part of the allowance will not have so much appeal for us Americans as a hurriedly paid and without delay of the time in which they can be secured in the prime consideration of our law books by the madam's attorney and divorcing have long been things of special notice.

The conclusion of a sentence imposed for violating the law of the land. And then the former convict's statement that his only regret that it was him and not his boss, Mr. Sinclair.

Mr. Day has served his sentence to be sure and society will have to be satisfied but if his imprisonment was meant to teach him a lesson we are afraid that it failed.

TUNG OIL [CHINA WOOD OIL] from FLORIDA

CHINA exports to this country $15,000,000 worth of Tung Oil each year. Florida, seeking in ancient China another productive source of income, has borrowed the tung tree and is seriously going about the business of developing this new industry; which, of course, will add millions of dollars to the wealth of the State.

After twenty years of growth and experimentation, Tung Oil is being produced here in commercial quantities. The first oil extracting plant began operating in Alachua county this year and its modern machinery is said to have a working capacity equal to that of one hundred Chinese laborers.

For centuries the Chinese have laboriously extracted the oil from tung nuts by crude wooden presses, carried it in baskets on their backs and floated it down the river in perilous journeys to seaboard markets. Since history began they have used it as a varnish for water craft, for lacquering furniture and waterproofing silk and paper. In recent years tung oil has become indispensable in the manufacture of water-resistant paints and varnishes. It is employed as a first coat in painting automobiles, in the insulating of electric wires and in dozens of other modern industrial processes.

Florida tung oil is said to be far superior in quality to the adulterated product imported from China and will find a ready market as fast as it can be supplied. Full grown tung trees yield a much greater money value per acre than other oil-bearing crops such as cottonseed, peanuts or flaxseed. Due to the fact that cut-over pine land can be economically utilized, the possibilities in Florida are particularly brilliant.

Competent authorities state that it is possible for the tung oil industry in Florida to develop into an annual production of forty to fifty million dollars and that this will increase with the growth of the paint and varnish industries.

Florida, with its great opportunity as the tung oil center of the country, will attract many allied industries—increasing the wealth and prosperity of its people many-fold.
