Test Teachers? No Way, Says Grooms

Herald Staff Writer Testing teachers is not the way to raise Functional Literacy Test scores. The answer begins at home." That was the reaction expressed today by Gene Grooms, executive director of the Seminole Education Association, to Secretary of State Bruce Smathers' suggestion that teachers be required to take a test to prove their competency in reading, writing, arithmetic and communication.

'Turn Off TV,' SEA Boss Suggests

"A teacher should at least pass what 11th graders are taking and this would be more difficult," Smathers. Grooms disagrees "I am saying that families should turn off the television except for maybe an hour in the evening and spend the rest of the time talking with their kids. They should spend that time making sure their kids are learning their multiplication tables, reading to them, learning what their problems have been during the day and showing them how to deal with those problems. "Then," Grooms said, "we would see a marked im-

3rd Graders Score Best

Seminole County educators today announced preliminary results of the third, fifth and eighth grade statewide assessment examinations taken by local students during October. Third grade students throughout the county had the highest scores on both communications and mathematics sections of the test, with 91.3 percent passing communications and 92.0 passing On the fifth grade level, 90.9 percent of the students passed communications and 89.8 percent passed mathematics.

Students in the eighth grade also scored higher than the 70 percent estimated by Florida's Department of Education ofificials. In that grade, 81.7 percent of the students passed the communications test, and 79.1 percent passed the mathematics section of the test.

Weak points on the student scores have not yet been specified, but each child's test results will show specific problem areas. That information, along with test scores, should be sent home t parents by the end of the week, according to school officials. Beginning with the June 1979 graduating class students in Florida schools will be required to pass an 11th grade Functional Literacy Test in order to receive a graduation diploma. The third, fifth and eighth grade tests are designed to locate problem areas before a child reaches high school, so that remedial education may be offered - MARILYN SHEDDAN

Government By Judiciary

"Government by Judiciary" is the intriguing title of a new, important book by Raoul Berger, the Harvard legal scholar. It is Mr. Berger's thesis that the Supreme Court, especially since 1954, has been revising the 14th Amendment, the source of most of its controversial cases, to mean, "exactly the opposite of what its framers designed it to

In substantiation thereof, Mr. Berger first goes off on an extensive archaeological dig. and unearths everything one would want to know about the 14th Amendment, including the keenly relevant facts: that the 14th Amendment excluded from its reach both suffrage and segregation and that it was confined to the protection of fundamental rights against state discrimination.

Next to this original meaning of the amendment, Mr. Berger then juxtaposes the many Supreme Court decisions — notably those dealing with school desegration and reapportionment that have relied for support upon the amendment; wrongly relied, though, as Mr. Berger points out, because the justices construed it to mean virtually anything they wanted it to mean. In this way we have become a nation less of laws than of men the nine men who sit on the nation's highest bench, as well as those sitting on the benches of all the subsidiary courts.

Mr. Berger's point seems obvious to anyone familiar with the extra-judicial edicts of the courts in recent years. But there are two additional points that strike one in reflecting on "Government by Judiciary," two points that are subtle, perhaps, but powerfully instructive of our contemporary

The first is that the judiciary increasingly has been tempted to over-reach its authority because of the unwillingness, in certain cases, of the legislative branch to act.

The second, related to the first, is that as the judiciary increasingly has succumbed to this emptation, there have arisen, as it were, on the rooftops of American households antennae that tune in - happily or angrily - the courts' decisions. Meanwhile, the antennae that have been there since 1791 — the ones tuned in to legislatures have been allowed to break down. So we have, then explanation for the shrunken authority and prestige of the legislative branches of government. And without assigning blame to the legislators, it is enough here to note that this state of affairs ought to be a concern, inasmuch as it is not the one the Founding Fathers planned. Indeed, it is one they feared.

Also of concern is "government by ballot," which describes the movement of legislative democracy that began in 1898 and in recent years has become as popular as do-it-yourself books. Do-it-yourself, in fact, is not a bad way to understand what is going on with the presence on the ballot, in numerous states and citites, of recalls, initiatives, and referendums. Voters may do it themselves rather than have their elected representatives do it for them: they may decide issues as major as taxation and minor as the fate of public swimming pools.

Government by judiciary and government by ballot contradict constitutional theory and today confound political practice. It is past time that the nation began understanding the significance of the national exams, "teaching to the tests," as republican government, and thus of the legislative the educators say, if such a uniform testing

It has been interesting to watch the returns on Florida's first Functional Literacy Examination especially since Seminole County students have scored so well.

The only people who have not shown a great deal of surprise are the principals and teachers in our schools - who almost all seem to feel that they knew all along the students could "make the

But a specific comparison is called to mind - the comparison between Seminole County's schools, which are not accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (with the recent exception of Oviedo High School) and other counties whose schools are "accredited."

In Duval County, where schools were once accredited, but lost their membership in SACS (and thus their accreditation) then regained the SACS affiliation, students taking the Functional Literacy Test had much greater difficulty. Duval's 11th graders ended up with scores showing 45 percent failure on the mathematics half of the test and 14 percent failing the communications section.

In nearby Orange County, 38 per cent of the students failed the mathematics section, and 11 percent failed communications. Their schools also have been accredited for some time.

The test was given to 120,000 11th graders around the state during October. Those students who failed the test will receive help during the second semester of this school year and an opportunity to ake the test again next fall. If they fail again, they will receive one more opportunity to take the test before graduating from high school. Those who fail that third opportunity will not graduate. They will receive a "certificate of attendance" instead. So far, Seminole County, with its "unaccredited" schools, is the top scorer from throughout the state on Functional Literacy Tests. It does give one something to think about.

Work will soon begin, we hope, on the specialized playground at Rosenwald Exceptional Student Center, Altamonte Springs. Mrs. Ruby Hendrix, the soft-spoken principal of the school for children with a variety of mental, physical,

Taking, Retaking The SATs

WASHINGTON - His name is Matthew, and he is 17 years old. His occupation, on official records, is listed as "student." What that really means, at this stage of his life, is that Matthew is in the test-taking

The high school senior from suburban Long Island, N.Y., wants to become a dentist. To achieve his ambition, he must first go to college. And to gain admission to college - almost any college- Matthew and millions of other oungsters his age must compete for good scores on the national Scholastic Aptitude Tests, the

Before long, millions, of Matthews throughout

he country are likely to find themselves taking similar standardized achievement tests at a far younger age. And that could have enormous ranifications for public education in America. Alarmed by a 14-year decline in SAT scores. parents, politicans and educators are currently clamoring for a renewed emphasis on the fundamentals of reading, writing and arithmetic in the public schools At the same time, they are seeking reassurance - through standardized achievement tests - that the "back-to-basics" movement will pay discernible dividends. A total of 26 states has already created "basic competency" tests to measure student achievement, while all the rest - except for

Montana - are planning such programs. The big question now looming is whether such tests should be national in scope, divised and distributed by Uncle Sam, or whether each state should develop its own. It is tempting to opt for national exams, for uniform yardsticks that would permit parents in South Carolina to compare scores in their school system against those of students in, say, Massachusetts. But there are some serious pitfalls to such an approach, as HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano

Jr. warned in a recent speech in San Francisco. This is a big country with an incredible diversity of cultures and lifestyles. How do you write test questions that would be equally comprehensible to a sharecropper's kid in rural South Carolina and an urban tenement dweller in

Can a test which is useful in measuring individual student progress over a period of years also help pinpoint the strengths and weaknesses of the curriculum in a particular school system? And most of all, what would federally imposed national achievement tests do to our cherished local control of schools?

It seems inevitable that every school in the country would soon be gearing its curriculum to

Miss Lillian Gets Award

MISS LILLIAN SWINGS: The president's mother stepped out Monday night, swinging at a New York City disco with the headliners of the social set. The occasion — a $50-a-head benefit for UNICEF dubbed the "Royal Jaipur Ball." It carried an Indian motif — flowers, live doves and a strutting peacock — and Lillian Carter felt right at home. She received the IndoAmerican Peace Award for her work several years ago as a Peace Corps volunteer in India. Joining her at the Studio 54 party were fashion designer Halston, Catherine Deneuve, Andy Warhol, Monique Van Vooren and Diana Vreeland.

Coal Strike: Industry Expected To Survive

A nationwide strike of coal miners began a minute after midnight this morning when continuous negotiations spanning four days failed to produce a settlement

The coalfields remained peaceful during the early hours as 130,000 members of the United Mine Workers launched their 10th nationwide strike in 35 years. UMW president Arnold Miller, who stormed out of the talks five hours before the actual strike deadline, accused the Bituminous Coal Operators Association of "trying to break

Even with the miners gone from their jobs, the walkout this year was not expected t cripple U.S. industry, which has been stockpiling the coal in recent months. Also, half of the nation's coal is mined by nonunion workers who are not or Federal mediator Wayne Horvitz scheduled a resumption of contract talks for Thursday at 3 p.m. EST in Washington D.C. Miller told reporters h would "return to the negotiations when there is some sign of real progress." Horvitz said he expected Miller to at tend Thursday's session.

In West Virginia, where nearly half the nation's union miners are employed, there was talk of shutting down nonunion mines and disrupting coal oarge traffic. Local union officials were predicting a strike of six to

The Coal Strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Here is the nationwide coal miners strike at a glance.

130,000 members of the United Mine Workers union covered by a nationwide agreement with the Bituminous Coal Operators of America, who represent most major soft coal mines in the nation. Another 58, OUMW members, affected by any settlement, were expected to join the

Wages are not a major roadblock. The union wants the coal operators to rescue its financially depressed health and pension funds, which have been hurt by past misuse of funds and wildcat strikers. It also wants members at individual mines to be allowed to strike on local grievances. The industry has not agreed to replenish the health and pension funds without a no-strike clause, and wants economic penalties against miners engaging in unauthorized walkouts. Production

The Energy Department says a major strike could affect energy needs this winter, but utilities and power companies have stockpiled up to three months' supply of coal in anticipation of the walkout. About half of the nation's yearly coal production is mined by the strikers.

The next negotiating session is scheduled for Thursday at 3 p.m. EST.

Ex-Mayor Becomes New Mayor Of Casselberry

Lake Mary election returns are checked on wall of polling place, Lake Mary Elementary By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

A total of 2,652 of the 9,163 eligible voters in the Cities of Casselberry, Longwood and Lake Mary went to the polls

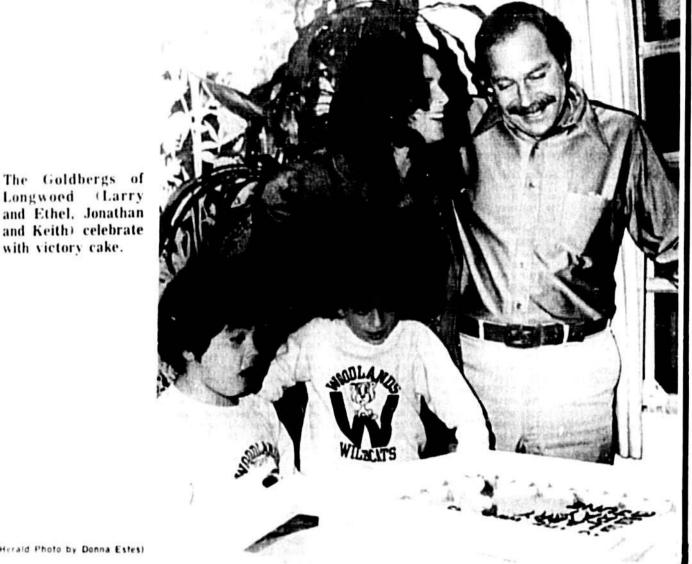

Highlight of the Casselberry election was the ouster of the present mayor by a former mayor. In Longwood, an incumbent councilman was re-elected by a landslide.

And in Lake Mary one race was decided by a single An elated Bill Grier, with his wife, Phyllis, at his side received pats on the back and congratulations all around from supporters at the Casselberry City Hall as Elections Clerk Raymond Morris announced the winners. Only two years ago, Grier, after have served three years as mayor and four years on the city council, had tasted defeat at the hands of Gerald Christensen. Christensen, a controversial figure during his single two-year term, was not present to hear the results. His college student son, Dale, represented his father as he had on the campaign trail, at a political rally and on the telephone soliciting votes in the final days of the cam-

Councilman John Leighty, who polled the highest number of votes cast in the Casselberry elections, for return to a fourth term on the city council, noted that he received 20 fewer votes than two years ago. Iron Bridge

Officials Give Go For Sewage Plant

By one vote, Seminole County Commissioners Tuesday gave Orlando the final go-ahead to build the Iron Bridge sewage reatment plant near Oviedo. The plant, which Orlando officials said would cost $81 million (including interceptor lines), will treat sewage from Orlando, Orange County and southeastern Seminole. Construction, officials say, will begin by next May. Commissioners Dick Williams, Bob French and John Alexander voted to give Orlando until June 1978 to begin building the plant, which will process up to 24 million gallons of sewage each day, pouring the treated waste water into the Little Econlockhatchee River. Commissioners Harry Kwiatkowski and Bill Kirchhoff voted against extending the construction deadline.

Commissioners made their decision at a public hearing on whether to give Orlando mother six months to start construction on the plant. In approving the six-month extension for the start of conmissioners also approved an Orlando proposal which will allow Seminole County to reserve up to 5 million gallons per day of sewage treatment the plant for the Seminole cities of Winter Springs and Casselberry, said Commission Chairman Dick Williams. He and French had indicated they wouldn't vote to permit construction of the plant in Seminole without a guarantee of treatment capacity at the plant for Seminole Countians. Orlando City Attorney

Egerton K. van den Berg made the offer to reserve treatment capacity for Seminole at a public hearing last week. "We worked with county staff members over the past week to draft an acceptable agreement I think we've done so," van den Under the agreement.

IT WAS COLD

Orlando officials will notify Seminole when the plant is treating 17 million gallons of sewage each day. The county would have until the following October to reserve treatment capacity in half-million-gallon increments up to 5 million

Commissioners emphasized they were approving a sewage treatment plant with a maximum capacity to treat 24million-gallons of sewage a day When Orlando officials first announced plans to build the plant, they said the plant would need a 48-million-gallon capacity to meet long-term sewage treatment needs of Orlando, Orange County and parts of Seminole.
