Drug arrests

FERN PARK — Three men were arrested by members of the City/County Investigative Bureau (CCIB) at a trailer park on U.S. Highway 17-92 in Fern Park last night. Sheriff's deputies reportedly charged them with sale and delivery of a controlled substance. They said the suspects are accused of trying to sell three and a half pounds of marijuana to agents, for $1,025 per pound. Suspects arrested include Carlos Hadid, 25, 160 Dublin Drive, Lake Mary; Alejandro Lorie, 19, 716 W. Pinewood Court, Lake Mary; and Matthew Younglass, 21, South Highway 17-92, Fern Park.

Deputies said a total of seven and a half pounds of marijuana was found in the trailer, and a 9mm handgun in a nearby pickup truck.

Lorie and Younglass were to make their initial court appearance this afternoon. Hadid was released after posting $5,000 bond.

Escapee nabbed

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Sheriff's deputies say 28 year old John Graham was to make his initial court appearance today. He has been charged with one count of escape.

Sheriff's investigators arrested Graham at approximately 5:30 yesterday afternoon in the Hidden Springs Apartments near Altamonte Springs.

Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough says Graham was reportedly serving a five year term for grand theft auto when he escaped from the Florida State Correctional Institution in Orange County.

He is also said to be a suspect in a series of burglaries and auto thefts in Orange and Seminole Counties since his escape.

Critical eye on TV

Schools, parents teach kids viewer discretion

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Parents, teachers and the cable TV industry are joining in efforts to control the effects of television violence and commercials on young people.

In Seminole County, students are being taught to view television, the other media and all aspects of life with a critical eye.

"We are teaching critical thinking skills across the whole curriculum," said Dr. Marion Dailey, executive director of instructional services for the district. "We are hoping students will take a critical view of all things."

The partnership's nationwide project seeks to provide families with practical ways to change how children watch the tube, how to understand the underlying reasons for different types of programs — and how to choose what kids watch.

"You have got to take a critical look at everything you see," Dailey said. "That's the message we have to get to the children."

Members of Parent Teacher Associations and executives of the National Cable Television Association and the Cable in the Classroom organization will conduct training sessions for parents, teachers and local cable operators across the country.

"We have to expand the schools' definition of literacy to include not only reading, writing and computer tech but also critical viewing and listening skills," said Barbara Totherow from the Harvard Institute on Media.

Dailey said that is "absolutely true," but believes that enough is not being done to ensure youngsters are watching objectively.

"We need to continue what we're doing," she said. See View, Page 5A

SANFORD — Not rain nor wind nor dark of night could keep more than 300 Goldsboro Elementary School students and their families from reading together at Goldsboro Elementary School on Tuesday night.

Despite weather too wet for even ducks, youngsters made way for ducklings and other childhood classics as part of the "Reading is a Family Affair" program at the school.

"We had a fantastic turnout," said principal Geraldine Wright. "We gave away goody bags and free books to the first hundred kids and those were gone in the first half an hour and we handed out 200 more bags without books. And I think there were some kids who didn't get bags."

Lake Mary eyes future downtown

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary commissioners learned what the city's downtown area could look like in years to come when planner and architect Bruce Andersen presented the first phase of his downtown Lake Mary development concept Thursday night.

He explained that the overall project would have two phases. "The first one, where I am at this point," he said, "is to identify the specific market. Secondly, if the area is identified, how then does it apply to the city and the people of that area?"

SANFORD — Loud music coming from a neighbor's house can be a problem; the question is, what can be done to eliminate it?

The Sanford City Commission heard from one woman this week who told them most people are hesitant to make complaints. Thelma Thompson commented, "Older people are afraid to call the police to speak up," she said, "they're afraid of what might happen if they do."

"But I am not afraid to speak out. I want this noise stopped," she said.

Thompson lives on W. 14th Street, and told the commissioners that while the biggest problem was from loud radios in houses, the loud car radios were also disturbing the area.

She added, "Even if the police do come out to our area all they can do is tell them to turn down See Noise, Page 5A

Wastewater treatment facility to expand

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

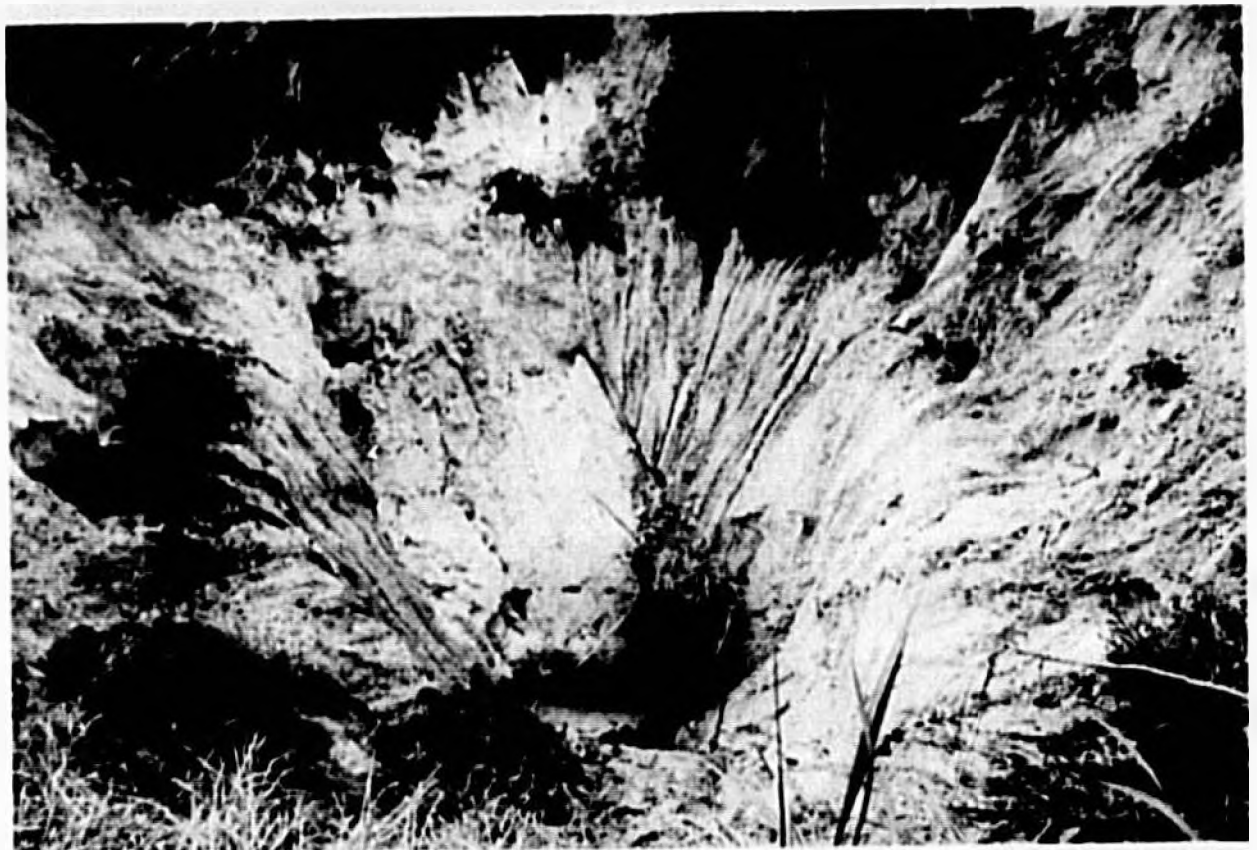

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners are set to approve construction of the first expansion of the Yankee Lake wastewater treatment facility — in an effort to get the $28 million facility operational.

The plan is to install irrigation piping from the treatment facility to 73 acres on the Yankee Lake premises to dispose of up to 365,000 gallons per day from the 2.5 mgd facility. Eventually, "reuse" lines will be extended throughout north-west Seminole County to dispose of treated wastewater.

Commissioners will consider a Public Works Department recommendation to award the construction bid to Prime Construction Co., Orlando, for $559,000. Prime submitted a bid $37,000 below the second highest amount. Work is expected to take six months to complete.

Yankee Lake was intended to dispose of highly-treated wastewater to a nearby wetlands system. The system was designed to "scrub" the drinkable wastewater See Treatment, Page 5A

A sinkhole near the Sweetwater Club subdivision in southwest Seminole County appears to have stabilized, reports a Seminole County sheriff's deputy this morning. The hole, estimated at 80 feet wide and 55 feet deep by engineers from Ardaman and Associates, is within 20 feet of homes and 20 feet of Hunt Club Road, closed since a storm washout Wednesday. No damage to the roadway or homes has been reported. There are no current plans to fill in the hole.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Inmate wins another stay

TALLAHASSEE — A death row inmate scheduled for execution this morning in the slaying of a Boca Raton florist has won another delay from the state Supreme Court.

The court had earlier delayed the execution of Paul William Scott, 38, from Wednesday to consider a request for a hearing on what his attorneys said was new evidence in the case.

A one-sentence order Thursday granted a new delay pending further orders of the court, and didn't indicate whether the justices would rule before Scott's death warrant expires at noon Tuesday.

If the court issues a decision after that, and denies Scott a new hearing, a new death warrant can be issued, said Mark Schlockman, assistant general counsel for Gov. Lawton Chiles.

Scott's attorney, Martin McClain, asked the state Supreme Court to order a hearing on evidence he said the prosecution failed to reveal to the defense. He said it showed that an accomplice, Richard Kondian, struck the blows that killed florist James Alessi.

Assistant Attorney General Celia Terenzio argued that similar claims had been considered before in unsuccessful appeals on Scott's behalf.

Scott was sentenced to death Dec. 14, 1970, in the slaying of Alessi, whose nude body was found at his home Dec. 4, 1978. Alessi had been severely beaten and died of a fractured skull.

Man gets life for killing toddler

JACKSONVILLE — A man convicted of killing a toddler by repeatedly smashing her head against a concrete patio faces a sentence of life behind bars.

Jurors deliberated only 20 minutes Wednesday before convicting Raymond Chapin IV, 33, of first-degree murder in the death of his girlfriend's daughter, 2-year-old Nina Marie Zalubski.

The beating occurred March 8 while Chapin was babysitting the girl and her 3-year-old sister.

Nina Marie died the next day of a severe skull fracture. Her sister, who was not injured, could not tell authorities what happened.

Testimony revealed Chapin and Nina Marie did not get along and that he blamed her for problems in his relationship with her mother. Witnesses also testified that the child had thrown up in his pickup shortly before she was killed.

Chapin, who did not take the stand on his own behalf, reportedly gave conflicting statements to police when questioned about the girl's injuries.

Chapin will receive a life sentence with no chance of release for 25 years. The death penalty was not an option because child abuse alone is not an aggravating factor that would qualify for capital punishment under state law.

Circuit Judge R. Hudson Oliff set sentencing for Nov. 30.

Orange test site for Army project

ORLANDO — The first venture of the Army's Project Flowshares program will be to develop a high-tech emergency response system to train fire, police and medical workers.

The Army Simulation & Training Command will develop the $1.5 million defense-conversion project to train civilians similar to how soldiers were prepared for the Persian Gulf War, officials said.

The computer system enables emergency workers to respond to simulated disasters and improve performance. Orange County is to become the first test site in August.

Brig. Gen. John F. Michitsch, commander of the Orlando-based Army Simulation Command, and Orange County Chairman Linda Chapin signed a cooperative agreement Wednesday.

"There is no limit to what it can do and where it will go," said Michitsch.

Mrs. Chapin said Orange County can be a showcase for advanced emergency management and the defense conversion technology.

The Army expects eventually to market the system commercially.

Greenpeace protests power plants

FORT LAUDERDALE — The environmental organization Greenpeace is calling on energy officials to declare a moratorium on construction of new fossil-fired power plants and to rely on renewable energy sources.

The request comes on the heels of a 50-state ranking of pollutants generated by new and proposed power plants. Florida ranks fourth in the amount of carbon dioxide emissions, a major cause of climate change, Greenpeace said.

"It is difficult for some people to visualize the impacts of global warming. Well, today all you have to do is think about Tropical Storm Gordon and multiply it many times over. Global warming means global disaster," said Jason Salzman of Greenpeace.

Florida also ranks sixth among emitters of sulfur, fifth among emitters of nitrogen and fifth among emitters of other pollutants.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

'Thanksgiving dinner under water'

Florida farmers assess damages after Gordon

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — High winds and torrential rains from Gordon's twisting path across Florida caused an estimated $200 million in crop losses, and consumers can expect higher prices for winter produce.

"Right now much of America's Thanksgiving dinner is under water," Florida Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford said Thursday. "This is our prime winter production season, and we're going to need a swift, federal response if we are going to salvage some of these crops."

Crawford has asked Gov. Lawton Chiles to seek a disaster declaration from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Besides ravaging crops, Tropical Storm Gordon spawned tornadoes and was blamed for six deaths in Florida before turning into the third hurricane of the Atlantic storm season Thursday and swirling up the East Coast.

Hurricane warnings were posted this morning for the North Carolina coast from the Virginia border south to Bogie Inlet. Forecasters said they expected the storm to brush by the Outer Banks but eventually turn northeast away from the coast.

Meanwhile, Florida farmers spent much of the day assessing damage in their swamplike fields of mud and willing crops.

Ed Hamilton, General Manager of A

Duda & Sons, said his company is still tallying the damage to the company's 23,000 acres near Belle Glade. Duda is the largest produce company in the southeast.

"It's going to be very costly," Hamilton said. "We know we haven't lost everything. But we've easily lost 30 percent in vegetables."

The majority of Duda's crop — 13,000 acres worth — is in sugar cane. The rest mirrors other farms in the area planted with lettuce, celery, radishes, parsley and corn.

Consumers nationwide likely will feel the effects with an increase in prices. South Florida supplies about half of the country's winter produce.

Wholesale vegetable prices have already shot up, said Agriculture spokesman Bob Blankenship. He said a bushel of peppers that sold for $10.95 last week was going for $30 on Thursday.

produce in Dade County, said the damage was far worse than with Andrew.

The farmers were not planted when Andrew hit, said Di Mare, whose family has been farming in South Florida for more than 40 years. "We didn't lose our crops."

Citrus growers escaped the storm relatively unscathed, said Ken Kennedy, owner and president of United Indian River Packers Inc. in Wabasso. He said delays in harvesting should not be long enough to cause the prices to go up.

Frank McCormick, owner of nearby Indian River Orchard, said a rainy season sometimes can help make for a sweeter fruit.

"It's good for the fruit as far as the quality and taste," he said. "But we don't need anymore. We're ready to start harvesting."

Farmers on the state's west coast also were affected.

Blankenship said leafy vegetable crops there were shredded and tomatoes, celery, radishes and sweet corn were total losses, primarily due to flooding.

"It's re-plant," he said. "That is the farmer's next step. He clears it off, plants it up and prays again."

Judge declares mistrial

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

MONTICELLO — Prosecutors will decide whether a teenager accused of killing a British tourist at a highway rest stop in North Florida last year will get a new trial after a jury failed to reach a verdict.

John "Billy Joe" Crumitie and three other teens were charged with first-degree murder and first-degree attempted murder in the botched robbery that killed Gary Colley and left his girlfriend wounded at an Interstate 10 rest stop near Monticello in September 1993.

Crumitie's attorney, Mina Morgan, said her client was upset over the hung jury.

"He was hoping it would be over today," Morgan said.

Crumitie was sent back to the Leon County Jail where he has been in custody since his arrest more than a year ago.

The jury, which included a former classmate of Crumitie's and one of his former teachers deadlocked after deliberating about six hours if he had been convicted of murder, Crumitie faced life in prison.

Circuit Judge F.E. Steinmeyer left it up to prosecutors to decide whether to retry Crumitie. He said it would probably be early next year before the 17-year-old gets a new trial if the state proceeds with the case.

Assistant State Attorney Mike Schneider had no comment after the mistrial was declared.

Another one of the suspected shooters is awaiting trial, and the other two youths have pleaded to lesser charges.

Colley, 34, was the ninth foreign visitor killed in Florida in a 12-month period.

Citrus juice exports expected to rise

By The Associated Press

LAKELAND — Orange and grapefruit juice exports to Europe may surge 20 percent higher than last season, fueled by expanded fruit production in the state, the Florida Department of Citrus said.

Export of the two juices could rise from last year's 34 million gallons to 41 million gallons, Joel Sellers, a marketing director for the citrus department, said Wednesday.

Florida held only 5 percent of European juice sales in 1990, but processing companies have been seeking new overseas customers for their products as Florida citrus crops swell with new plantings and generally good weather.

Sellers said the department's projection was based in part on declarations by individual brands that plan to participate in a department export promotion this season, when the state expects to harvest its second-highest crop on record.

Companies currently exporting juice to Europe include Citrus World Lykes-Pasco Inc., Dole, Berry Citrus, Winter Garden Citrus and Tropicana Products Inc.

"We expect orange juice and grapefruit juice exports to rise dramatically this year, with Germany emerging as a new, strong market," Sellers said.

As in the United States, not-from-concentrate juices are experiencing the strongest demand he added.

Higher exports to Europe would mean the United States was making small inroads against a dominance on that continent by Brazil, the world's leading exporter of frozen orange juice concentrate.

"In 1994 we should see double-digit growth in Europe," said Terri Mc Norton, spokeswoman for Tropicana, which two weeks ago began processing fruit at its Bradenton plant for the 1994-95 season. She said the sales growth is particularly strong in Britain, France and Germany.

Ornament Society seeks gifts for needy

From Staff Reports

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Seminole Ornament Society, a group of local business and community members who provide gifts for the needy during the holidays, has been inundated with gift requests from needy organizations this holiday season.

"We've received more requests from charitable organizations this year than any of the seven years we've been collecting gifts for the needy," said Bonnie Manjura, president of S.O.S. "Currently, we have more than 1,000 needy children, handicapped people and elderly shut-ins on our list and only 500 people volunteering to purchase gifts."

A Wish List Hot Line has been set up to take gift or monetary donations from any member of the community who would like to make the holidays brighter for the many disadvantaged people in our community who would otherwise receive nothing for Christmas. All gifts are limited to $15. Gift suggestions are available from the S.O.S. Wish List Hot Line at 407-682-7858.

The lists of names and wish lists come from 13 charitable agencies and organizations from all over Central Florida including the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, Chapter I Migrant Programs, Hospice, Good Samaritan Home for Seniors and the school board.

Since the group formed in 1988, more than 5,000 gifts have been donated to needy people in the Central Florida community. Each year, the gift drive culminates with a black tie Holiday Ball for Seminole Ornament Society members and their guests. This year's event will be held at the Altamonte Springs Hilton and Towers on December 4 from 6:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Society members bring their gifts and deliver them directly to representatives from charitable agencies for distribution.

Celebrating education

Although Tropical Storm Gordon prevented Seminole County students from going through a normal week, festivities were nevertheless held in keeping with American Education Week.

We are pleased that this isn't just another week on the national calendar which does little beyond the display of a poster or mention in a newsletter.

Most of our schools undertook a number of projects, many of which involved parents of their students. They did what we believe is one of the essentials in improving education, that is, expanding the responsibility to people beyond the doors of the classrooms.

As outstanding as most of them are, teachers simply can't do this alone. One person alone cannot succeed in educating a youngster. Without strong support from parents and others, it's most often a futile attempt.

Some schools observed the week by involving outside business and industry. This again, is a needed support in the educational process.

A few of the schools observed American Education Week by patting themselves on the back. We don't believe that was the true intent of this nationally recognized week. There are other observances during the year which this can (and should) be done. They include National Teacher Appreciation Day, Teacher Appreciation Week, Teacher Thank-you day, and Teacher's Day.

We can be proud of the school district and individual schools involved in expanding the responsibility of education through the various events and gatherings held during this week.

We also salute people working in other sectors who became involved in the school events. They are helping mold the citizens of the future.

We have so many weekly and monthly designations. As an example, this past week has been National Notary Public Week, National Chemistry Week, National Religious Book Week, and Radiologic Technology Week. We don't know if any special events were planned. But for American Education Week, kudos to everyone who observed it.

LETTER

Hats off

Hats off to Bobby Douglas for his astute and constructive appraisal of the need for business involvement in Sanford schools. Chamber members received an excellent report in June on a Hamilton Elementary school staff and chamber brainstorming breakfast where teachers emphasized the need for business volunteers and support at our school. Many of our students are socio-economically disadvantaged (71%). Most parents are unable to donate their time. Many of our students would benefit immensely from special time spent with a caring, responsible adult in small groups or one to one. There are numerous DIVIDEND programs in place. Volunteers are needed for everything from "art chats" to reading/math tutoring, to the MENTOR program. Even taking turns reading aloud with a child for 1/2 hour every week can have an amazing impact on a child's skills and self concept. We all know that a child with confidence and self esteem is far more likely to succeed, academic and social success leads to such confidence. Sanford need to cultivate successful productive children. The price of failure is too great a burden for all.

New schools in Seminole county are opened with computers in all classrooms, older schools languish behind. It is ironic that this oversight may contribute to why our students "cost more" than those at Heathrow or Redbug, but it may also be a reason that test scores are lower. Businesses in Sanford upgrading computer systems can make a difference by donating computers capable of running current software. People with computer skills can volunteer their time helping get computer "labs" in place. If it weren't for federally funded programs at Hamilton, most children would never get close to a computer.

I am very aware of the need for community support at our school. As a homeowner and parent, I believe we have two choices. Either we get involved in renovating our schools and making them a source of pride and attraction or we do nothing and end up with becoming "the poor relation" that we are already too often perceived as. I hope we all choose the former, the difference we can make either way is critical.

DONNA BRITT

How could a mother kill her kids?

WASHINGTON—How could she do it? For a few weeks, millions of Americans have imagined standing on a ramp on a deserted South Carolina lake they've never visited. Watching a 1980 burgundy Mazda slide into the dim waters, then submerge.

They've tried to fathom what Susan Smith could possibly have felt, watching the car—with her sons, ages 3 and 14 months, strapped inside—disappear.

Each time I try, I hit a wall. So do the friends who phoned me after Smith's confession. "How could she?" asked Avis, a devoted mom to 16-month-old Zachary who said she was "absolutely haunted" by the killings. "Did you see the video? Those children were so adorable. How do you do that to your babies?"

For answers, some of us have gone to the ramp. Trying on Smith's reported problems like a set of clothes, we've gone as far as imagining will take us.

I go to the winter of my elder son's infancy, when he had a case of colic so intense that for months he cried, literally, for hours at a time. Futilely, my then-husband and I walked, burped, fed, changed, rocked him and prayed. The doctor's "no big deal" didn't help. Exhausted, helpless and guilty, I had frightening fantasies of being rid of him. Later I learned such thoughts, unacted upon, are normal.

Many of us have had times when we could barely breathe, trying to figure out how we could pay our bills. Before remarrying, I, like other single moms, met good men who talked at an instant family.

From my place on the ramp, I can see Smith feeling trapped, broke, lonely. I see her enacting every parent's "going bye-bye" routine—strapping her babies into their car seats, kissing them, locking the door.

Then I look at the lake. Slamming into the wall, I ask, how could she do it?

And then blame a black man for it.

That part must have been easy, considering how well it worked, how even some reporters—who now say they should have known better—swallowed the story whole. Who, today, has trouble imagining a black man doing almost anything?

For answers, some of us have gone to the ramp. Trying on Smith's reported problems like a set of clothes.

Former D.C. police chief Isaac Fulwood Jr. does. As soon as he heard Smith's story, he thought, "She killed those kids."

Fulwood, 53, says Smith's story never made sense, especially in the rural South, "with the whole world looking" and he adds, "I've seen too many black men accused of offenses they haven't done. It didn't thrill right."

Avis, who's black, couldn't believe it. She surprised herself by realizing, "I wanted there to be a black carjacker," or anybody who'd "leave them alive."

Her nightmares about the case have less to do with race than with Zach with how his cheeks demand kissing, with how "he picks up a leaf and runs to show it to me."

The only good to be gleaned from Susan Smith's ultimately unimaginable crimes would be for the many who individually heard her story, and who then cried as one, to remain connected. For us in hold on tighter to our own beloved children, and, if we can imagine it, to each other.

And to know that, despite all of the agony Smith triggered that day on the ramp, her children are now at peace.

Going back to Square One

You know there's an old song with a line in the chorus that goes something like "And everything old is new again." The title of the song escapes me at the moment, but the point of the lyrics has recently hit home with a surprising relevance to my current life status. As of November 1st, I became a member of a new old socio-economic life grouping; my second venue if you will, into that wonderful world of meat racks, pumped up pecks and silicon filled mammary glands, laughingly referred to as the dating scene.

Yup, the divorce became finalized. I can officially and freely now look at shapely women walking by without fear of immediate yet never ending censure emanating from my wife's (ex) steely cold eyes. Heck, I can even talk to them! Boy, this is going to be the life! Now all I have to do is remind myself of the rules.

Unfortunately, as many of my co-divorcee brothers and sisters may have already learned, the rules of the game have changed substantially over the intervening years since we were last on the prowl, and if anything, they've become a whole lot harder.

For instance: It used to be that a fellow could throw a compliment in the general direction of some suitable young thing, and if he was lucky enough, she would respond appropriately. In the worst case scenario however, she would find the gentleman not to her choosing, and would alternately suggest he might take a very long walk off a particularly short cliff. It was simple contract law. An offer of interest was tendered by the first party (the male), and it would be accepted, or not at the option of the second party (the female). Terms would be negotiated thereafter. Well, it's changed folks.

First, the originating party to the dating transaction may or may not be of the male gender, and should the second party to the proposition in fact be female, she is definitely not however some sweet young thing, a sex object, or to be referred to in any way shape or form not specifically indicative of a person equal in stature and standing to the person making the initial offering.

Secondly, in evidencing any form of interest or attraction towards a member of the opposite sexual category, the potential for legal entanglements is a whole new wrinkle to be aware of and be on guard against by those returning to the wonderful world of singles. The specific term is called sexual harassment, and it is a strong and fearsome weapon currently in vogue for the wholesale slaughter (or at least emasculation) of the indigenous wolf population. While I've been led to believe that the art of flirting is still permissible in a diminished capacity at certain local watering holes, former expert practitioners of the craft should be strongly advised against it's incautious use anywhere else. One might end up in court for their trouble.

SEMINOLE OPINION

DAVID GEOFFREY COE

Now, as the thought of being hauled off to jail for the harmless pursuit of my natural albeit awkward interests reminds me somewhat of a slow death, perhaps I should digress (or perhaps progress) to a somewhat more personal subject, SEX. Those not hitherto familiar with my usual writing style will probably wonder what warped twist of my mental faculties has made a connection from one to the other, but the explanation is remarkably simple. When I was last in the so called hormonal gratification market, while the possibility of contracting certain afflictions which were not generally discussed in polite society did exist, for the most part they were curable. Today my unenlightened children, we have AIDS; a surefire way to cure the overheated and boost the commodities index for latex sap. Yup, just one false and unprotected step, and whammo, you've got a one way ticket to the other side of the rainbow somewhere in the too distant future.

Well gee wiz...talk about taking all the fun out of the whole thing...You can't converse about it, you certainly can't do it with the free abandonment you mistakenly thought marriage was going to allow you to finally get in; What's left? Heck, a body might just as well go and join up with the brothers of the holy salts of St. Peter or the sisters of the blessed sepuicher of celluloses. What's the point?

The truth of the matter my children is this: The game, truly the art of love still does, and hopefully will always exist, and grow. Each breaking dawn may bring about some new and different nuance to the way one might undertake their progression on its winding and sometimes rocky path, but in the end, the goal is still worth the risk of the pursuit. To me, it's kind of like cigarette smoking (no, I haven't quit yet!), or perhaps chocolate coating those pesky midges; someday, I'm going to do it right. And then all the grief and all the false starts are going to be found worth their enduring. I'm optimistic anyway...Oh and ladies: I'm also caring and adventuresome, fun to be with at parti...

(Editor's note: Sorry folks, but Mr. Coe's description began to go down hill from there. He'll be back next week however, after they release him from a short sanatorium for the incurably romantic.

Is BIA auditor being shafted for honesty?

WASHINGTON — As an auditor at the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Jim Parris often posed a hypothetical question to superiors: If a private bank had mismanaged the $2.1 billion Indian trust fund the way the BIA has, would there be criminal prosecutions?

In discussing his job with friends, Parris recently answered his own question this way: "I used to say that nobody could get away with this in the private sector. They (superiors) agreed but said this is the government. We're a federal bureaucracy."

Since 1985 Parris has confronted the government's attitude along with the mind-numbing neglect of more than 300,000 trust fund accounts. Under BIA stewardship, millions of dollars in profits from grazing fees, oil and gas drilling, and other income remain unaccounted for. The money is supposed to be held in separate trust accounts for American Indians, but some account holders have not received a balance statement for more than 70 years.

One Treasury Department official, commenting on the fact that so many accounts have never been reconciled or audited, told a congressional investigator: "The Bureau of Indian Affairs is like a company that's gone bankrupt, and then had a fire."

Now it appears that the BIA is also like a bankrupt company that shoots the messenger bearing bad news. BIA is trying to reassign — some would say fire — Parris, the director of the trust funds management division and one of the few white hats in this scandal. Parris and his wife, who are natives of the Southwest, are being asked to uproot themselves and their two high school-age children from Albuquerque, N.M., and relocate to Washington, D.C., where Parris would assume a vaguely defined position unrelated to trust fund management.

"This is not the way we are supposed to be reinventing government, by punishing the right people," said one congressional investigator who has worked closely with Parris. "The knives have been out at headquarters for Jim for two or three years. His biggest sin is that he has close working relationships with tribal account holders and they trust him to tell them what's going on."

Ironically, Parris got what amounts to his pink-slip on the very day last month that President Clinton quietly signed legislation taking the first step toward cleaning up the trust funds. The Interior Department, under which oversees the BIA, has papered over the problem for years — despite the fact that Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., has held five blistering oversight hearings since 1989. Incredibly, Interior officials had strongly opposed the reform bill co-authored by Synar, and even recommended that Clinton veto it.

In a scolding four-page letter to Ada Derr, Interior's assistant secretary for Indian affairs, Synar blasted Parris' transfer as a "slap at the tribes and those of us in Congress who have pushed for needed reforms," and charged it "constitutes indefensible treatment of a dedicated public servant."

Parris is at least going out in style. At a hearing last September before Synar's subcommittee on environment, energy and natural resources, Parris broke ranks with other officials by testifying that Indian tribes might decide someday to file a class action lawsuit against Interior. WHITE HOUSE WATCH — As the official responsible for refereeing disputes between bean-counters and environmentalists in the Clinton administration, National Economic Council Chairman Robert Rubin has often found himself up to his hip-boots in alligators.

In discussing his job with friends, Parris recently answered his own question.

Trade deficit increases to $10.13 billion in September

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — America's trade deficit swelled to $10.13 billion in September as the country remained well on track to record its second-worst merchandise deficit in history this year.

The Commerce Department said the September deficit was 4.6 percent higher than a $9.68 billion August imbalance as the deficit with China swelled to an all-time high of $3.49 billion. The July deficit had been $11.19 billion.

The volume of foreign oil imports shot up to a record even though America's overall foreign oil bill declined, reflecting a drop in the price.

The country also saw imports of high-technology products jump to an all-time high, a troubling development since this is the area where the United States hopes to make the greatest progress in narrowing the deficit by exploiting its traditional edge in advanced technology.

For the first nine months of this year, the United States is running an annual deficit in goods of $148.8 billion, the second-worst showing on record. The all-time high was a $152 billion goods deficit set in 1987.

The trade deterioration is coming despite the fact that President Clinton has made trade promotion a key part his foreign policy.

said. "I'm certainly not saying we don't need to do more."

Totherow conducted a training workshop at the Florida convention of the PTA on Thursday for implementing the venture.

Florida PTA President Kay Luzier praised the initiative as a nuts-and-bolts effort to address serious concerns about TV viewing by children.

"I feel this is just what the doctor ordered," Luzier said. "Teachers can use this information in class, and parents can apply the lessons at home."

"We aren't just worried about critical thinking with regards to the media," Dailey said. "We need to have these children doing this with everything they do at home and in school."

Dailey believes students will be less affected by the violence to which they are exposed if they are able to view it with a more critical eye.

In her training workshop — which will be repeated in hundreds of other settings — Totherow emphasizes to teachers that they have to include media awareness along with their teaching of reading and writing.

"I see the violence workshop as a foot in the door to overall instruction of what the media is, how television and radio programs are constructed, what they are geared to," said Totherow, who is also a high school teacher of English.

"We need to get parents aware, get them to start talking about it to their children, to start asking questions, to get kids to start questioning what they see and hear — make everybody become more literate, intelligent viewers."

Elementary teachers and the PTA are seen as the keys for parent involvement in the project. Teachers in the lower grades have direct contact with many parents, even those who are not PTA members.

The younger the children, the more receptive they are to such direction, Totherow said. She pointed out that before starting school the average child has watched 5,000 hours of television.

Using some of the workshop techniques, parents and teachers will seek to limit TV's influence by:

- Setting rules on how and when television is watched.
- "Resensitizing" the viewer by discussing the realities of violence as a way to change perceptions.

• Teaching the reason behind the commercial messages that expose kids to everything from cereals to toys.

• Beginning new activities for children.

The television industry has a responsibility to its viewers to address some of the problems because it recognizes it has a huge impact on children and society, said Torie Clarke, spokeswoman for the National Cable Television Association.

Central Florida's department of education called Project RESSPECT (Regular Education, Student Service Personnel and Exceptionalities Collaborating Together).

"It's an exciting program," said Dr. David Meador, coordinator of the program. "We are able to work with the community of historic Goldsboro Elementary to provide them with the kinds of services they need."

The program, Meador said, is created by the teachers at Goldsboro and the students and faculty members at UCF. It centers around the students.

A main component of Project RESSPECT is family involvement, including the family reading project and multicultural awareness programs.

grams.

"We have done a needs assessment and have tried to find programs that will meet the needs," Meador said.

Project RESSPECT is teacher-driven, Meador said.

"This program is very flexible," he said. "The teachers are free to try innovative approaches, whatever will work for their students."

Wright said she is "very pleased" with the partnership between historic Goldsboro and UCF.

"It's a strong program that will benefit the students," she said. "The students are the reason we are doing this."

Meador agrees.

"The students are the focus of this project," he said. "They are the reason we are doing this."

A recent survey of parents at Goldsboro showed that the number one priority was to find ways for families to help children in school. Other priorities for parents include help with children's behavior, with child care techniques, with job training and job finding, with health care, with money management, with earning a high school diploma and with adult reading courses.

The "Reading is a Family Affair" program was designed to help bring the joy of reading to families.

Information about different literacy programs was distributed at the event.

"I think there are a lot of people interested in improving their skills," said Wright.

Downtown

Andersen has proposed that the area be declared as downtown Lake Mary should be a four block area along Country Club road north of Lake Mary Boulevard, but should not include the land on which City Hall is located.

Andersen said in all of his planning and architectural work, he has determined that there are two classes for such development. Class A, which would be shopping centers, for which large volume roads and other improvements would be made.

"The second, class B, is for everyone else," he said. "The mom and pop stores, antique stores, and small shops. That's what I project for Lake Mary's downtown area, and that's the way I'm aiming my planing."

He gave the commissioners a bright picture of the four block area containing two story buildings with shops on the lower floor and offices above. They would be approximately 65 feet apart, with landscaping, off-street parking, quaint walkways, shady trees, park benches, and many other amenities.

"How would something like this be built," questioned Mayor Lowry Rockett. "Will the city have to try and attract some developer to do this?"

"This is the toughest part," Andersen replied. "The city alone can't take this on. Yet it will need to be done as inexpensively as possible."

"You have some buildings already there," he continued. "What we will need now is to work jointly on this between the private, public and government sectors. It'll be very time consuming," he added, "and a difficult project, but I feel confident it can be done."

Regarding why the area should have only four blocks, Andersen said that people who park their cars don't want to walk far. "If we keep it small, but attractive," he said, "it will draw people."

In explaining the steps which would be required for such a downtown development, Andersen said the city would have to create and finance a master stormwater system, parking areas, landscaping, drainage, open space and layout work. A developer or individual business owner would have to handle the actual building.

"It may also mean the city will have to take another look at the rules and regulations pertaining to creating and implementing such an area," said Mayor Rockett.

The next step to be made by Andersen is to define more clearly how existing homes and businesses in the designated area would be involved in the overall downtown development.

When asked by Commissioner Gary Brender if Andersen thought Lake Mary's downtown could eventually be competitive with the downtown Sanford area and all its antique stores, Andersen responded, "Definitely."

to an even higher degree before it flowed into the St. Johns River. However, the county could pump enough waste to the facility to make the system work properly, so the plant has been idled for two years.

This summer, consultants recommended extending lines throughout the northwest area to allow treated wastewater to be used for irrigation of agriculture, residential yards and recreation facilities. The wastewater doesn't have to be as clean as that which is pumped in the wetlands.

Simmons had supplied the commissioners with a copy of the city codes dealing with loud and unnecessary noises, and an overview of the ordinance.

"Since Code Enforcement is ineffective in this situation because to come into compliance all they have to do is stop the noise," he wrote, "we have referred these type of complaints to the police department as disturbing the peace."

Russell suggested that if the commission had no objection, he would instruct his officers to make a first call and issue a warning, but if there was a second call for the same address, a citation would be issued.

"Let's try it that way," said Mayor Bettye Smith, "and see what happens."

Smith agreed that such noise can be detrimental and urged that efforts be made to help control the problem.

Simmons had supplied the commissioners with a copy of the city codes dealing with loud and unnecessary noises, and an overview of the ordinance.

"Since Code Enforcement is ineffective in this situation because to come into compliance all they have to do is stop the noise," he wrote, "we have referred these type of complaints to the police department as disturbing the peace."

Russell suggested that if the commission had no objection, he would instruct his officers to make a first call and issue a warning, but if there was a second call for the same address, a citation would be issued.

"Let's try it that way," said Mayor Bettye Smith, "and see what happens."

Smith agreed that such noise can be detrimental and urged that efforts be made to help control the problem.

Biology may influence sexual orientation

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — A study of brains in gay and heterosexual men gives new evidence that biology may help determine a person's sexual orientation, researchers say.

Scientists found an anatomical difference between the two groups. In gay men, a communication conduit connecting two parts of the brain was thicker on average than in heterosexual men.

The parts of the brain connected by the conduit are used for understanding spoken language and perceiving objects.

The finding suggests that sexual orientation may be part of a larger package of brain characteristics, so that gay men as a group may have a different pattern of mental skills than heterosexual men, said researcher Sandra Wittelson.

She stressed that her study of 21 men was small and must be confirmed by further work. She also said its results and implications apply only to groups and not individuals.

Wittelson, a psychiatry professor at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario, discussed the work before presenting it Thursday in Miami Beach, Fla., at the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience. Studies in 1991 and 1992 reported size differences elsewhere in the brain that were related to sexual orientation.

"Wittelson's study is an important addition to the growing body of evidence indicating a biological basis for homosexuality in some people," Peri Jude Radevic, executive director of the National Gay & Lesbian Task Force, said in a statement.

Roger Gorski, co-author of the 1992 study on brain differences between gay and heterosexual men, said the discovery of another difference is no surprise. "I'm sure we're going to find others," he said in a telephone interview.

But it's not clear whether the brain differences found so far really influence sexual orientation, and they may even be results of it, he said. Nor is it clear whether the brain differences affect mental functioning, he said.

Gorski, a professor of anatomy and cell biology at the medical school at the University of California at Los Angeles, also said the size differences in Wittelson's study might have been due simply to chance.

Scientists are debating what produces sexual orientation. Wittelson said the idea that biology plays a role "clearly does not mean that environment is irrelevant, but what it means is that environment is not the whole story."

Wittelson and colleagues at her university and the University of Toronto's Sunnybrook Health Science Centre scanned brains in 11 gay men and 10 heterosexual men. The men were matched for age, and all said they were free of disease.

Researchers focused on a structure called the isthmus of the corpus callosum. The isthmus runs between the right and left sides of the brain, lying roughly between the ears.

Brain scanning showed that, on average, the isthmus was 13-percent thicker in the gay men than the heterosexual men. But some of the gay men had a thinner isthmus than some of the heterosexual men, so an individual's isthmus size cannot reveal his sexual orientation, Wittelson said.

Flower extract could wean smokers

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A chemical from a common blue flower or a popular antidepressant might one day help hard-core smokers kick the habit — without resorting to nicotine patches or gum.

"This is truly, truly exciting," said Dr. E.D. Glover of West Virginia University, who has tested anti-smoking drugs for 20 years. "This is the first time we've looked at non-nicotine products to help smokers."

Preliminary tests indicate the antidepressant Wellbutrin and the chemical lobeline, extracted from the lobelia flower, might help smokers toss their cigarettes away with milder withdrawal symptoms. One experiment even suggests Wellbutrin may be twice as effective as nicotine patches for some smokers.

Advanced clinical trials on hundreds of smokers begin this month across the country to see if the drugs live up to the promise.

"I'm hoping that by next summer we'll have some answers ... and maybe we can finally give some hope to people who can't quit smoking," said Dr. Linda Hyder Ferry of Loma Linda University, who stumbled onto Wellbutrin's potential.

"A non-nicotine, non-addictive product would have a very high degree of interest in the smoking and medical community," said Jay Wadekar, president of DynaGen Inc., which is developing lobeline under the name NicErase.

At least 70 percent of the nation's 45 million smokers claim they want to quit but can't. Other than counseling and support groups, nicotine gum or patches are the only aids available.

Yet prescription nicotine has only a 20 percent success rate at best. And doctors question prescribing the chemical blamed for addicting smokers in the first place and linked to heart disease and other ailments.

Ferry hit upon Wellbutrin's anti-smoking potential when she noticed that smokers who can't quit are more likely to be depressed. In her spare time she studied 42 hard-core smokers at a Veterans Administration hospital.

A startling 50 percent who took Wellbutrin for six weeks quit smoking for at least two years, compared with none among those who were given a placebo.

Intrigued, Wellbutrin manufacturer Burroughs-Wellcome asked about smokers who are not depressed, so Ferry studied 190 of them. Forty percent of Wellbutrin takers quit in the first month, versus 24 percent for a placebo. But by the end of a year, those rates dropped to 29 percent and 22 percent, respectively.

Now Burroughs-Wellcome is studying 600 patients to clarify Ferry's results. It notified the Food and Drug Administration of Wellbutrin's potential, and plans to test it in combination with nicotine patches.

"I don't think there's such a thing as a magic bullet," cautioned company pharmacist Andy Johnston. "We hope it will work better than the patch, but we have not answered that question."

Lobeline isn't as far along. In fact, the FDA banned its over-the-counter sale last year because nobody had ever proved the weak, oral dose sold ever worked.

Now DynaGen is hunting that proof, and says stronger pills that dissolve under the tongue directly into the bloodstream appear effective. Of 160 smokers tested for six weeks last summer, 36 percent on lobeline abandoned cigarettes for at least a month, an FDA requirement for effectiveness. Only 21 percent who took a dummy pill quit.

It decreased withdrawal symptoms by giving a buzz similar to nicotine, one patient said.

"The actual pill you take was very noxious. It's extremely bitter," said Ronald Benak of Fort Myers, Fla., a 20-year smoker who hasn't had a puff since taking his first lobeline pill in June. But, he said quickly, "my body was tingling, I felt really good."

Nobody knows for sure how either drug works. But Wellbutrin is believed to stimulate dopamine, a brain chemical involved with addiction, by causing the feel-good response to such drugs as nicotine. Lobeline, which once was standard therapy for stimulating breathing in sick newborns, may block the brain's nicotine receptors.

1994 Athlete of the Year
AWSA selects Winter Springs resident Roberge

Special to the Herald

WINTER HAVEN — Open division water ski competitor Carl Roberge of Winter Springs was selected as the American Water Ski Association's AWSA 1994 Male Athlete of the Year.

Kristi Overton from Greenville, N.C., also an open division competitor, was named the ASWA Female Athlete of the Year.

Roberge started his 1994 tournament season with a win in the men's slalom and a third-place finish in jumping at the Orlando meet, the Pro Tour's first stop of the season.

He continued his winning streak at Phoenix, placing first in the slalom and tying Sammy Duval, the Open men's jumping world record holder, for second place in jumping with an effort of 195 feet.

The highlight of Roberge's exceptional summer came when he soared 208 feet to win the cash prize for men's jumping at the prestigious Masters Tournament held in Pine Mountain, Ga.

At the Marine World (Vallejo, Cal.) tournament in June, Roberge again won the men's jumping competition. He also placed second in jumping at the Indianapolis tour stop and followed that up with a fourth in Hartford, Conn., fifth at both Shreveport and St. Louis, and fourths in St. Paul and Portland, Ore.

Roberge's performance on the 1994 pro tour elevated him to fourth overall in men's slalom and fifth in men's jumping in the tour's Grand Prix standings.

In July, Roberge was selected for the six-member team that will represent the United States at the Pan American Games in Mar Del Plata, Argentina. This is the first time water skiing has been included as a full medal sport in the Pan American Games.

Overton had an outstanding season, placing first in the slalom at both the Masters tournament and the Marine World tournament. She also won the 1994 Bud Pro Tour Grand Prix in women's slalom, placing first in all but two of the tour's 10 stops.

Each year since 1987, the AWSA has honored a male and a female water skier as the sport's Athletes of the Year. Their names are then submitted to the United States Olympic Committee for consideration as the USOC's Sportsman and Sportswoman of the Year awards.

The AWSA awards committee chooses the Athletes of the Year based on outstanding performance and sportsmanship. Roberge and Overton will be honored at a special awards ceremony during the 1995 AWSA mid-winter board meetings in Orlando in January.

Nicole Read (No. 32), who scored 10 points, and the Lake Howell Silver Hawks played an outstanding defensive game against Cocoa.

Silver Hawks, Hawks in semis

By DEAN SMITH

Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Thursday's quarterfinals of the Lady 'Noles Invitational basketball tournament at Seminole High School's Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium were for the birds.

In the first game, Lake Howell got 21 points from Christine James and the defense held Cocoa to less than 10 points in three of the four quarters as the Silver Hawks crushed the Tigers 69-29.

The late game saw the Spruce Creek Hawks overcome a frigid start with an impressive all-around performance to dismantle the Lake Brantley Patriots 52-31.

Today at 4:30 p.m., Lake Brantley will play Cocoa in a consolation bracket game before Spruce Creek and Lake Howell battle at 6 p.m. for a spot in the final against Seminole.

The Tribe and Bishop Moore, which beat Deltona 59-29 Tuesday, were to play at 7:30 p.m. today, but Bishop Moore has a prior commitment and will forfeit the game to Seminole.

Saturday's schedule has Deltona playing the Lake Brantley-Cocoa winner in the consolation final at 1 p.m.; Bishop Moore taking on the Spruce Creek-Lake Howell loser for third place at 2:30 p.m.; and Seminole facing the Spruce Creek-Lake Howell winner at 4 p.m. in the championship game.

Nicole Read joined James in double figures for Lake Howell, netting 10 points. They got plenty of help from their teammates as all 10 players contributed points. Angela Goff chipped in with nine points and Kelly Kohn added eight.

Trailing Lake Brantley 6-1 after the opening stanza, the Hawks — led by Keisha Crews and Alisa Agill — turned up the defensive pressure in the second quarter, forcing numerous Lake Brantley turnovers. That got the Spruce Creek

Three months ago, Dee Brown (No. 7) and his Lake Brantley teammates were a bunch of new faces trying to fill the shoes of one of the county's most successful teams. Tonight, Brown and the 1994 Patriots try to make some history of their own when they play at Jacksonville-Sandalwood in a Class 6A playoff game.

Traveling with holiday food

Make sure to follow safe handling rules

Many consumers ask if it is safe to travel with holiday foods. Yes, it's alright - if some safe handling rules are followed to avoid foodborne illness.

Here are some of the frequently asked questions from callers concerning safe transportation of the holiday turkey.

Q. Can the turkey be cooked a day ahead of time and then taken to someone's house the next day?

A. Yes, but for safety's sake, you won't be able to travel with the whole bird intact. Be sure to cook the turkey in an oven set no lower than 325 degrees F. Check to be sure the turkey has cooked completely to an internal temperature of 180 degrees F as measured in several places with a meat thermometer. Then let the turkey stand 20 minutes.

If stuffed, remove the stuffing and let cool in small, shallow dishes. Carve all the meat from the turkey, leaving legs, thighs and wings intact if desired. Divide the carved turkey meat and the turkey parts into small, shallow containers or packages. This ensures rapid, even cooling and quick reheating after getting to Grandmother's house.

Refrigerate the turkey and stuffing within two hours of cooking. Or freeze the foods if you don't plan to eat them within three to four days.

When preparing to travel, pack the turkey and other perishable foods in an insulated cooler with a cold source such as ice or frozen gel packs. At your destination, transfer the foods to a refrigerator and reheat in a 325 degree F oven or in a microwave oven until the foods reach an internal temperature of 165 degrees F, or are steaming hot.

CONSUMER FOCUS

Q. How long will a raw or cooked turkey keep unrefrigerated for transporting to someone's house?

A. No longer than two hours. For either a raw or cooked turkey, it's still a good idea to use an insulated cooler as a carrier (use two coolers if carrying both types). To transport a raw turkey, take it out of the refrigerator and place it in the cooler immediately before leaving. Stow it where it will be coldest in the car. Upon arrival, immediately refrigerate the raw turkey.

To transport an unstuffed turkey, take it out of the oven, immediately wrap it in foil and put it directly into the cooler before putting it into the warmest spot in the car. Don't try to transport a stuffed turkey.

A hot turkey must be put directly into a warm oven (set at 200 degrees F or higher) until serving time. Set the oven high enough to maintain the internal temperature of the turkey at 140 degrees F or higher.

Q. Can I slow-cook the turkey at 200F overnight so it's ready to go in the morning?

A. No! It's not safe to cook a turkey for any other meat, for that matter, in an oven set lower than 325 degrees F. That's because it takes too long for the turkey to reach a temperature high enough to kill foodborne bacteria.

Q. Can turkey be partially cooked ahead of time and then finished later?

A. No again! Partial cooking of meat or poultry is very unsafe. Cooking must be done in one continuous operation to assure the destruction of bacteria that cause foodborne illness. It is safe, however, to partially cook turkey in a microwave or other oven immediately before transferring the turkey to a heated grill or to a preheated conventional oven for finishing.

Other advice? Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold at all times. And sometimes it's just safer to give up on the idea of taking your feast somewhere else. The risks may outweigh the benefits.

When cooking in advance, divide foods into small, shallow containers and cool quickly. This includes the carved turkey.

Do not attempt to partially cook meat and poultry ahead of time and then finish cooking at the destination.

Transport cold or frozen foods in an insulated cooler with a cold source.

Hot foods should be kept hot, and should not be held at room temperature over two hours. Wrap well to insulate.

Keep hot foods HOT and cold foods COLD.

Sometimes it's safer just to give up on the idea of taking your feast across the country. Look for new traditions when you get there.

A new photograph for Sanford Museum

Mrs. Ralph Smith (left) presents a photograph of her late friend, Dr. Herberta Leonard (who died in 1981), to Alicia Clarke, curator of the Sanford Museum. The presentation took place at the November meeting of the Sallie Harrison Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Dr. Leonard, a former regent of Sanford's DAR chapter, went on to become state regent of the DAR. She received her juris doctorate from Stetson University and was organizing president of the Florida State Association of Parliamentarian. She was also an author and conducted seminars throughout Florida.

Writing notes helps melt away widow's grief

DEAR ABBY: It's been startling to read the opinions regarding responses to expressions of sympathy.

Upon the demise of my dear husband, Barnaby, more than 500 people phoned, sent cards, flowers, etc., attended the funeral or visited me.

Touched by the love that surrounded my family, I became more aware that God is love, and love is from God. For weeks I wrote thank-you notes, feeling that if a person could make the effort to express sympathy to my family in any way, I sincerely wanted to respond. It was a joy to write to those people. I even went over the list of those who signed the memory book at the funeral home and attended the funeral, and wrote each of them, expressing my family's gratitude for their love.

I was the winner, because as I wrote, my grief for Barnaby melted away and memories of his life and what it meant to others flooded my mind - and I remembered his deep love for all of us. Counting all our friends and blessings prompted me to write a book about my husband. Now my children and grandchildren have memories of Barnaby they would never have had.

The bottom line: There is joy in taking the time to write thank-you notes to those who have expressed sympathy. Your readers should try it.

VERA RUSH HILL, DECATUR, GA.

DEAR VERA RUSH HILL:

Thank you for the positive spin you put on acknowledging expressions of sympathy. More people may follow your innovative lead and find it rewarding.

DEAR ABBY: One of my co-workers left our company and moved to another state. She and I were very close friends so, naturally, we keep in touch.

My problem: Several individuals want her address, and they know I have it. She does not want any ties to her old job - especially with those she only tolerated while working here.

Abby, what should I say to these people without offending them, or causing hard feelings against me for protecting the privacy of my friend? Also, when someone with whom you have worked for several years leaves the company and asks for your address and telephone number, should it be given to them?

I am not terribly fond of my

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

co-workers and prefer to keep my social life separate from the workplace. However, some individuals have no social life outside the office, so they assume everyone who works there is a "friend."

I would appreciate a quick response while I stall everyone at work.

PRIVATE LIFE

DEAR PRIVATE: Since the departed employee "only tolerated" her co-workers while she worked with them, she shouldn't object to your telling them that she requested that her new address not be given out.

And since you - by your own admission - are not terribly fond of your co-workers, you have little to lose by being candid with them.

DEAR ABBY: unzipped zippers on men, other than being tacky-looking, don't usually reveal much. Women's dresses are another thing.

Try this one: I walked into the lower level of a bank looking for the accounting department. I passed a "picture window" to an office where a young woman was typing. Apparently, when she sat down, her skirt had caught on the back of the chair.

There she was - with her entire lower right extremity exposed up above her hip. I looked long and carefully to make sure of what I saw before I tapped on the window to alert her.

Girl 'doing wrong' is attempting to insure friendship

Our daughter is in sixth grade. She's always been an excellent student, but she definitely is still in the "ugly duckling" stage. Partly because of that she hasn't had many friends at school this year. That's why we were so happy when a very cute and popular girl in the neighborhood befriended her.

Now we've learned that the popular girl is getting our daughter to do her homework for her and asking her to copy work in the classes they have together.

We've talked to our daughter and she knows what she's being asked to do is wrong, but she's afraid (correctly, I think) that the other girl will snub her if she refuses to do it. We want her to have friends, but it's obvious that she's being used. Should we forbid our daughter from seeing the other girl? It would be terribly hard on her, as well as almost impossible to enforce.

PARENTS WHO WANT TO HELP

DEAR PARENTS,

Unfortunately, preteens who are still in the "awkward stage" when many of their age mates have turned into attractive young teens are very vulnerable to coercion by the popular students. Your daughter certainly knows what she's doing is wrong, but is trying to insure the "friendship" at any cost. You can also bet that she understands that this "friend" doesn't really care about her. However, if you attempt to forbid your daughter from seeing the other girl, it most likely will just make her resentful and defiant.

FAMILY COUNSELOR

What really needs to happen is that you need to provide the support and help for your daughter to improve her self-image enough that she will not allow other people to take advantage of her - period.

Perhaps you can help her find opportunities to make friends who share her interests and skills, rather than her trying to fit into the "in" crowd. Expand her horizons with some activities that she may enjoy - volunteering, church group, lessons or classes that interest her. Let her know that you are supporting her efforts and encouraging her.

A Prayer of Thanksgiving

"We praise Thee, Thou Source of great bounty, as our sincere supplications surpass space and time to reach Thy Heavenly Throne.

For the blessings of this year, both material and spiritual, we give Thee thanks...each sunrise a new beginning...each heartbeat a special gift.

Moreover, we thank Thee for difficult days that build strength...for sadness, so we might appreciate joy; for anxious moments that teach us of the importance of faith which sustains the human soul. Indeed, Thou hast written, 'Give thanks in all circumstances; for this is the will of God' (1 Thess. 5:18).

Each day, may we demonstrate our gratitude as we humbly share our blessings with those who need them most; that by our example, they might come to know Thy merciful and bounteous love. With thankful hearts we pray, Amen."

May you each have a most meaningful Thanksgiving.

Gospel Sing benefits firefighters

SUSAN WENNER

SANFORD — The City of Sanford Fire Department Firemen's Benefit Fund will feature it's Annual Gospel Sing on Friday, November 25 at the Sanford Civic Center from 7 p.m. until midnight. "This is the 39th year of the Gospel Sing," said Herb Rodgers, Chairman of ticket sales. "We put this on to help the firefighters."

The proceeds from this event are used to help pay for hospital and doctor bills not covered by insurance for the members of the fund. Firefighters are always present sacrificing their lives for the citizens of Sanford. What a wonderful way to say thank you for the effort they put forth as well as an enjoyable evening of Christian fellowship and song.

Rodgers further elaborated concerning the use of the proceeds. "For years this has been a way to help the firefighters with their medical expenses. Things like chiropractors, eyeglasses and dental work aren't covered. Most of our ticket sales are to businesses. We really need the commitment of Sanford to support this work. Last year after all our expenses we only made $2500. That amount of money doesn't go very far."

He also discussed plans for the fund if dollar amounts were in excess of their goals. "We'd really like to be able to give to a charity if we make enough money," said Rodgers. "We've talked about giving to the

Paramedic, Chris Murphy and Firefighter and E.M.T. Richard Lazar

Shiner's Burn Center or something firefighter related. We'd love to do that if we could just make enough money on the Gospel Sing."

Tickets are $6 in advance, and $7 at the door and may be purchased at the fire stations or from the ticket sales chairman, Herb Rodgers. Refreshments will be on sale and door prizes will be given away. Entertainment will be provided by The Florida Boys, Dixie Echoes and Marshall Henson.

Further information can be obtained by calling Herb Rodgers at 323-6019 or 322-7134.

Get the answers from your doctor

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What can you tell me about Paxil? Can it be given safely for all ages? What side effects are there for prolonged use? We've tried to ask our doctor these questions but he has become very belligerent with us, as if we are questioning his capabilities.

DEAR READER: I'm sorry to learn that your doctor takes offense at your questions about medication. In my view, this information is a vital component of a good doctor/patient relation.

Speaking personally, I don't ask my patients to take any drugs - even aspirin - without first discussing the side effects with them. I have found that they are grateful for this consideration and the opportunity to ask questions.

Paxil (paroxetine) is an anti-depressant medication that is not recommended for children, pregnant women, or nursing mothers. Although it is an effective drug, it has the potential for many side effects, including weakness, sweating, nausea, constipation, diarrhea, loss of appetite, sedation, dizziness, insomnia, impotence, and many others.

Paxil may interfere with motor performance (coordination, judgment and physical skills). It can interact with a variety of other drugs, including over-the-counter preparations, Coumadin (an anti-coagulant), Tagamet (for ulcers), Dilantin (for seizures), and other anti-depressants. For these reasons, Paxil should be administered by a psychiatrist, who should also monitor the effects of the drug. You can obtain further information from your pharmacist.

If your doctor is unwilling to discuss Paxil with you, fire him.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm basically a healthy person, 47 years old. My problem is that I am always hungry. I feel that I need appetite suppressants and wonder what you would recommend that is safe. I don't eat red meat, just a little chicken and fish and quantities of vegetables. One hundred-sixty pounds is too much for my height, but I'm so darned hungry all the time.

DEAR READER: First, you should be examined by your family physician to determine whether you have a physical basis, such as diabetes or a glandular disorder, that is causing your excessive hunger.

Second, you may wish to analyze your life pattern to see if stress may be playing a role. When people are under a lot of emotional pressure, they may eat excessively to reduce tension.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Juvinal presumably in Latin wrote "Count it the greatest sin to prefer life to honor." In bridge, though, is the greatest sin not to use an honor wisely by failing to count?

West led the spade queen, two, 10, three. West continued with the spade jack. South ruffed, cashed the heart ace and continued with a second heart. West won with the king while East followed suit. What now?

Today's deal (with a different auction) was written up by Rich DeMartino for the Daily Bulletins, which were excellently produced by Patty Magnus at the Springfield, Mass., Regional, held over the Labor Day weekend.

With those formidable diamonds in the dummy, there was a natural inclination for West to switch to clubs, playing partner for the king. But luckily West stopped to count declarer's tricks. South had at most five heart winners and four diamond winners. So West simply exited with another spade (a diamond would have been as good) and waited for two club tricks to defeat the game.
