Which Vitamins Should You Take?

DEAR DR. LAMB— I am a bachelor and, quite frankly, my cooking leaves a lot to be desired. I eat intermittently at best and wonder if I should start taking vitamins. The question is, are there better brands than others and can vitamins replace a good dietary intake?

DEAR READER— I wish people would get their vitamins and minerals from good wholesome foods. That's the way nature planned things. There are people who do not eat a good, balanced diet, for a variety of reasons, and these are the ones who should take vitamins. Many people who live alone, young or old, don't eat properly. This is sometimes related to lack of cooking ability, as you confess. In other instances it is from lack of interest or just plain difficulties in cooking for one person.

I don't think it makes a lot of difference which vitamin tablet you take, as long as you take an all-purpose vitamin tablet, you can buy at any grocery store which contains the recommended daily allowances (RDA) for all the important vitamins.

I'm also sending you The Health Letter number 4-6, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA) to give you my thoughts on what you should be eating. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Tuesday, March 6, 1979

YOUR BIRTHDAY March 6, 1979. Take advantage of situations this coming year where you can make business contacts socially. Something very beneficial could develop from such an arrangement.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You will accept at keeping the big expenses under control today, but the smaller outlays might damage your budget severely. Be pennywise, too. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in 1979 by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are not sure of what you want to do or what your motives are, put off doing anything until tomorrow. You'll then have a more positive direction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Getting your facts straight should be your No. 1 priority today. You have a strong tendency to jump to conclusions because of faulty information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your head may not be altogether today, and you might have trouble trying to add two and two. Take special care with financial matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Important goals could slip through your fingers today because of your lack of attention. Negligence will take its toll.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The ways and means to say what is on your mind may not be present today. Rather than talking in circles and making little or no sense, keep quiet.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Opening lead: ♠ J. A New York reader asks why I don't "better place for it" play it. It is a specific bad play that got its name when a loquacious player holding ace-10-small overruled declarer's king with the ace while remarking, "No better place for it." Of course, there was a better place. If he didn't ruff he would have taken two trump tricks instead of one.

DEAR DR. LAMB— I have up by using a safety play card, which will only let me make six. Alan: "In other words, the best play at six won't produce an overtrick. Oswald: "South should win the club lead in dummy, and a spade in his ace, then cash his ace of clubs. That is a very slight risk. Someone might trump it, but once that ace goes through South has a sure thing."

ALAN: "The best lead plays a second spade. West plays low and dummy's jack is finessed. East takes his queen and is forced to give declarer his twelfth trick. A club lead allows a heart discard and a ruff in dummy. A red suit lead makes one of dummy's red jacks a winner. The hand is over and the slam made."

FRANCIS WYNALDA, city Equal Employment Opportunity Officer, agrees with Knowles, explaining that the construction industry takes most workers from the city's job force.

Iran Agents Still Hunting Shah; He'll Be Tried Anyway

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran said today it will put Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and his family on trial in absentia on charges of committing crimes against the nation. The government has indicated recently Iranian agents would be sent abroad to arrest alleged enemies of the state — including the shah — for trial in Iran.

Algeria Hikes Oil Prices

By United Press International
Oil-producing countries are raising their prices so fast that the OPEC price schedule, calling for an increase of no more than 14.5 percent in four stages in 1979, is falling apart. Algeria is the latest oil-producing country to join the bandwagon in escalating world oil prices.

Christians-Guerrillas Swap Fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinian guerrillas and their Lebanese leftist allies exchanged artillery fire overnight with pro-Israeli Christian militiamen in south Lebanon, reports from the south said today. In Beirut, security officials said overnight mortar and tank fire in the southeastern suburbs of the capital subsided at daybreak and only sporadic bursts of machinegun fire could be heard.

Carter Leaves Wednesday For Egypt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a dramatic personal intervention with no sure prospects for success, President Carter will walk an extra mile to try and bring about agreement in Israel and Egypt on remaining issues in their long-stalled peace treaty.

Opinion was mixed on whether Carter had any advance indication of acceptance from Anwar Sadat after three telephone calls during the hectic morning hours, but the Egyptian president did, at least, welcome Carter's offer to travel to Cairo to discuss it.

Oil Prices Up To Us

The Iranian Oil Co. is hoping to get $20 a barrel for oil when it resumes exports.

It's not that simple, of course. Oil companies have been paying as much to other exporters ever since the collapse of Iranian production three months ago.

What a barrel of oil is worth depends on what someone is willing to pay for it.

Kuwait has announced a 25 percent increase in its export price, lacking $1.25 on the official OPEC price of about $14 a barrel.

But what will the market bear? Only the consumers can answer that, and the American people, who stand at the head of the line among the world's energy consumers, need to make some decisions.

We can continue to run to the Middle East with our empty cans and pay whatever it takes for a refill.

We were importing 900,000 barrels of Iranian oil per day before the fall of the Shah.

If we were to replace that oil with imports at $20 a barrel, it would add $6 million a day to our overseas oil bill — an extra $2 billion in a year's time.

Or we can tell the Iranians and others that their price is too high.

The way to tell them is to reduce demand for oil to the point that there aren't enough takers for the amount of oil they want to sell. Why aren't we telling them?

The American Gas Association says there is natural gas available to reduce our industrial demand for oil by 700,000 barrels a day — three-fourths of the Iranian imports.

Our coveted coal reserves are remaining mostly underground due to environmental constraints on the mining and use of coal.

Controversy over nuclear power has brought growth of that industry almost to a standstill, even though our 65 operating nuclear plants in one month save the equivalent of an entire year's imports of oil from Iran.

Five years after the stark warning of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, what we heard from the Energy Department recently was a warning that the Iranian crisis might lead to a need for gasoline rationing or other mandatory fuel-conservation measures.

In other words, after five years of fumbling over energy policy we are back where we started. We are profligate energy-users and may need the warning of possible rationing to heighten our awareness of the need to conserve fuel.

Perhaps the 10-cent-a-gallon increase in gasoline prices expected before the end of the year will help us make the distinction between necessary and superfluous driving.

But our country is also uncommonly rich in energy resources. Given our coal and natural gas, our considerable domestic oil reserves, our nuclear technology and all the other avenues open for harnessing alternative energy sources, it is incredible that we are looking at a $20 price tag on barrels of oil that went for $2.50 in 1973 — and we are told we have no choice but to dig into our pockets and pay it.

ANGLE-WALTERS To Avoid Another Iran...

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Cocktail parties in this capital currently are overpopulated by self-proclaimed experts peddling facile answers to the season's most popular question: "Who lost Iran?"

Neither of the two most frequently cited scapegoats, the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Council, distinguished itself in the closing months of the Iranian crisis. But the tendency to blame those agencies is a reflection of the short-sightedness of most of the postmortems.

Too little attention has been paid to the root causes of Iran's problems and to a far more important question: What are the lessons of the Iranian experience and how can they be applied to the future conduct of United States foreign policy?

Circulating within the State Department, however, is an exceptionally thoughtful treatise which presents compelling cases that the Iranian crisis must be treated "as a failure in policy leadership and not as a failure in intelligence."

The analysis appears in a recent issue of the Armed Forces Journal. Its author is listed as "Abul Kasim Manar," but that is a pseudonym for "a former State Department official with intimate experience in Iranian affairs."

The explosive elements present in Iran (and often in those other countries as well) include: — A phenomenal rate of population growth (producing a large number of restless young people) and a massive shift from peasant agriculture to an urban economy — a combination leading to problems of education, job creation and career expectations doomed to go unfulfilled.

An authoritarian leader who tolerates — and even encourages — a pervasive police state atmosphere, widespread corruption and an overblown economy fueled by "modernization" moving at a pace far in excess of what the nation can tolerate.

Excessive, inflation-inducing spending much of it devoted to purchases of outrageous amounts of arms supplied by the United States in order to set up a military ally in an unstable region of the world.

When Iran's oil boom began in 1973-74, United States arms deliveries were running at an annual rate of $210 million to $240 million. By 1977, that figure had increased 10-fold, to $2.1 billion.

During a single three-month period last year, arms deliveries totaled $2.5 billion. When the Shah was toppled, an additional $1 billion worth of United States armaments were on order.

To avoid a recurrence of the Iranian crisis, this country must exercise far more restraint when levying military and economic aid on other nations in our efforts to "buy" friendships around the world.

The analysis also warns that we must "accept the risk of developing contacts with all the potential enemies in developing nations, while recognizing 'the unpredictability and interdependence of such relationships.'"

Burmese Leader Drug Peddler King?

WASHINGTON — From our private rooves' gallery of international scandals, we have identified the world's most notorious drug trafficker. He is Ching Chi-ha, 48-year-old Burmese leader of an army of mercenary cut-throats in the "Golden Triangle" area of Southeast Asia.

Ching, also known by his Burmese Shan name of Chue, is the boss of the world's largest opium ring. He controls a so-called "Shan United Army," supposedly a patriotic liberation army of freedom fighters that battles Communist enemies of the Burmese government. But the group is actually nothing more than a well-armed gang of drug peddlers led by Ching, who controls half the Golden Triangle's opium trade.

The self-styled liberation army's true mission is to provide protection for shipments of narcotics to Thailand — less of high-grade opium which, when refined into heroin, eventually finds its way into the veins of junkies in the United States.

During the years of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, Ching cleverly used his patriotic cover to consolidate control over the booming drug traffic in the Golden Triangle.

Burmese narcotics apprehended Ching and his associates were arrested for a couple of years in the early 1970s, but he escaped in 1975 and made his way back to his army headquarters.

well-rounded programs in the area with strong coaches, while Little League in the area of incentive. But youths have their paths pretty well set by ages 15 through 17. Little Leaguers, on the other hand, are that virtual glob of clay, just waiting to be molded.

And as a first-hand observer to all the youth programs in Seminole County, I'd say we are doing a pretty fair job of molding. There are almost 500 kids playing in the Altamonte League, and another 1,000 will swing into action next weekend in the Seminole Pony Baseball League.

Attending the opening day ceremonies Saturday at Altamonte Springs Little League, I couldn't help notice how baseball commanded the attention of the youth.

Execs Leave Trucking

By LeRoy Pope, UPI Features Writer. NEW YORK (UPI) — The furious debate over deregulation of trucking has created a climate of uncertainty that is driving top flight managers out of the industry, an executive recruiter reports.

Martin H. Bauman, who specializes in recruiting for the transportation industry and says he serves more than half the top 20 motor carriers, said the situation is so bad it has resulted in a "brain drain" during the past year.

"For a decade," says Bauman, "we were recruiting nine top-flight executives for trucking companies for every one we took out of the industry and placed elsewhere. This past year that ratio has been exactly reversed."

Bauman said the executives who are leaving the trucking companies go into other forms of transportation or into allied lines.

"They are leaving because they don't want to 'crash shoot' on the future of the trucking lines," Bauman said.

He said the brightest performers are quitting the middle and small sized trucking companies, and the recently graduated MBA's from name universities are unwilling to consider trucking because of this fear of the unknown.

This has got to hurt for many years to come, Bauman said, because the management training programs have been the heart of people development for trucking firms.

Freightways, Roadway Express, McLean, Ryder and a dozen others are financially strong enough to survive so they still can attract and hold people, the same can not be said for the 16,000 other trucking lines, Bauman said.

which grants exceptions to the ban on such hunting under the Endangered Species Act. The club recently withdrew the application on the grounds that the proposal was never approved by the board of directors.

That's just as well, because the club probably would have been subjected to a Justice Department investigation challenging some of the claims it made.

At one point in the permit application the club said it had the approval of various foreign countries to hunt the animals. But the New York Zoological Society noted that at least five animals on the club's intended list were fully protected by the host nations.

For example, the club asked permission to kill 10 orangutans yearly. But the Zoological Society noted that "in the last decade no permits have been issued for the legal hunting-killing of wild orangutans" in the only three countries where the valued animal is found.

The club's petition also cited the "well organized principle that regulated sport hunting is a valuable tool for scientific research and provides critical incentive for propagation and hence survival of the species."

The Orwellian logic here is that if an animal has become economically valuable — the birdies in the early 1970s, but he escaped in 1975 and made his way back to his army headquarters.

Possible. Just about everything and everyone has room for improvement. I would suggest, however, that those who take this stand are suggesting not so much it is the emphasis on winning which is wrong, but referring to the toes that are stepped on in order to win a game or championship.

It is unfortunate that every team can't be the big winner. Still, the nature of the game is competition, and when that concept is lost, the heart of the sport no longer beats.

I tell my children that the most important thing is not that they get a base hit, but that the team won the game. Likewise, on the day they struck out two or three times and still won, team pride should surely overhadow personal success.

Bar Bryant is credited with saying, "winning might not be the most important thing, but it sure beats whatever comes in second."

And, kept in context, he's so right.

VIEWPOINT View From 1979

By DON GRAFF. "I don't see me getting old of this."

"Stability has to come from the top and I'm not sure fire under his belly."

"He," in case you haven't already caught the drift, is Jimmy (James Earl) Carter, 39th president of the United States and, according to the large school of critics such as supplied the above quotes for a recent Wall Street Journal analysis of his presidency, very likely to give way to the 40th in 1980.

To those who know their presidential politics and performances, Jimmy Carter is not viewed as promising material for a two-term presidency. He is seen as beset by seas of troubles at home and abroad and woefully short of arms — or will — to take up against them.

For just a few headline examples, the collapse of Iran has eroded the U.S. position throughout the Middle East and beyond. Israeli-Egyptian chicanery may not be quite all the way back to the square one, but it has certainly backed up. And it may be questioned whether there are more rabbits to be pulled out of the Camp David hat.

The United States may no longer be a party of the first part in Southeast Asia, but it is acutely concerned over the possibility that it cannot control but that could well involve it in war-and-peace consequences.

At home, inflation rages — and rages and rages — with the public not perceiving Carter as providing the leadership necessary to straighten out the economy. Big labor's George Meany, after some flopping and flopping, has declared himself off the president's team. But Carter can't have all the luck. There is still Congress, which may be willing to play, but its way out of the unemployment, which has become a threat confrontation will stall progress on an anti-inflation program of any description.

Under the dismal circumstances, critics may be right that the Carter presidency at mid-term has been a disaster and that he should not be re-elected. It may be that this year will be a year of the "other hand," but it is not clear that he will be able to do so.

With the Twins, Koozman will get a chance to win a job in the regular starting rotation and that makes him feel good because he believes he can win for them.

"My hope is high," he says. "I'm throwing well and there's nothing wrong with my arm. It's the way the manager (Gene Mauch) runs everything here. He's on top of everything."

"Look out there," Koozman says, pointing to second base where Mauch is watching one of the Twins' young infielders turn the ball over making a double play during a practice session. "Everybody is doing something. Everyone's involved. That's the way it is at every minute. The same with the front office. The people in here are trying to make deals to improve the ball club."

The Mets made a lot of deals, too, during the time Koozman was with them, but the majority of their trades backfired. Some were positively terrible.

"I think that what depleted the ball club, the trades," Koozman claims. "I don't want to blame anyone but the Mets traded a lot of good talent away while I was there, and had they kept those players and gone out and gotten themselves one good hitter in the free-agent market, we could've been competitive."

Donald Grant, formulating club policy for the Mets, felt it was wrong to let the frequent market and the Mets never did. He still insists he will be proved right in the long run, only who can wait that long?

Like so many of the other Mets' players, Koozman believes his old club should've made more of an attempt to go after free agents.

"You spend too much time in an organization sweating, caring and helping people out not to be hurt when something like that happens," Koozman says.

The day Koozman was dealt to the Twins, Mets' General Manager Joe McDonald called him to tell him the trade had been made. McDonald, who likes Koozman, also told him how sorry he was to see him go.

NIT First Round Set Wednesday, Thursday

NEW YORK (UPI) — It used to be so simple when the entire National Invitation Tournament took place in Madison Square Garden, where it originated.

Now in order to be one of the four teams to play in the semifinals March 19, you have to be smart enough to figure out the schedule as well as being good enough to beat it.

Renowned basketball tournament in the nation were announced Monday and they may seem a little confusing, but it's just part of the NIT's 3-year-old effort to boost multi-regional interest in the tournament.

First-round action begins this week with seven games Wednesday and five games scheduled for Thursday. All six second-round games will be played Monday.

Bonaventure-Alabama winner and the Holy Cross-Dartmouth survivor faces the winner of Thursday night's matchup between Purdue and the Mid-America Conference runner-up, either Central Michigan or Toledo. Central Michigan plays Toledo tonight, with the winner going to the NCAA tournament.

The location of the second-round games will be as follows: If New Mexico wins, the Los will be the home team in the second round regardless of their opponent. If Texas A&M beats New Mexico, however, the Aggies will advance to the second round on the road, either at Oregon State or at Nevada-Reno.

If Maryland beats Rhode Island, the Terrapins will host the second round at College Park, Md. If Rhode Island wins, the Rams would either host St. Joseph's in the second round or travel to Ohio State.

The winner of the Kentucky-Clemson game will host either Wagner or Old Dominion in the second round.

If Indiana beats Texas Tech, the Hoosiers will be at home for the second round. If the Red Raiders beat Indiana, they would either host Alcorn State or travel to Mississippi State.

An Alabama victory over St. Bonaventure would host the Crimson Tide the host team against either Northeast Louisiana or Virginia in the second round. If the Bonnies win, they would either host Northeast Louisiana or play at Virginia.

If Purdue wins, the Boilermakers host the second round. If Purdue beats Holy Cross and Purdue loses, the Flyers host the second round. If Holy Cross wins and Purdue loses, the Crusaders either host Central Michigan or travel to Toledo.

Red Sox Seek Pitching To Replace Defectors

By United Press International. After Luis Tiant defected to the New York Yankees and Bill Lee traded to Montreal, Red Sox Manager Don Zimmer knew he'd have to look for some new pitching talent. And he's going to start looking Tuesday.

There are a couple of jobs he would like to see filled as well as start right in seeing what he has. I've got an open mind," said Zimmer Monday in announcing all nine rookies would pitch in an intra-club game Tuesday.

The nine are Chuck Rainey, Win Remmerswaal, Burke Suter, Allen Ripley, John LaRose, Steve Schneck, Bob Flinch, John Tucker and Bob Sprawl. Ripley, LaRose and Sprawl all pitched for the Red Sox last year, but none performed well enough to insure a job with the parent club this year.

Zimmer and his staff will be looking for relief help too in case reliever Bill Campbell cannot recover from shoulder problems. Remmerswaal is supposed to have the edge because he can warm up faster than the others.

"None of our kids is a Sandy Kousser or Rich Goetz who can blow away a batter. So we'll be looking for the best pitcher, a pitcher who can make a batter hit a grounder to get out of a tough situation," said Zimmer.

Jeff Torborg's pitching problem was of a different sort. The Cleveland Indian manager thought he had the pitching rotation set, but two right-handers, veteran Wayne Garmon and newcomer Eric Wilkins, have him reconsidering.

"Last week, I didn't think Wayne would be much help to us. I thought he would be an expensive matter, but now, though," Torborg said of Garmon, a multi-million-dollar free agent, who spent all last season recuperating from major league surgery.

Torborg had said earlier his five star-starters this year would be Rick White, Mike Paxton, David Clyde, Rick Wise and Len Barber.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OOL

YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 7, 1979
You can get what you get after this coming year because you are not looking for easy ones. The benefits to you will be worth the time and effort you expend.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Small opportunities for gain are likely to come your way today. You have the knack for turning negative situations into profitable ones. How you can get along the other sign of the sections you'll enjoy in your 1979 Astro-Graph Letter. Get yours by sending $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 48, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
If there is someone you want to get close to, today is the day to do so. People find you irresistible. There is not too much they'll refuse you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
You're able today to get along with even the most difficult of persons. This won't go unnoticed. Some very nice things will be said about you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
A long-term debt might finally be paid off today. Including your financial picture back in the black ink. This may present an opportunity to do something different.

CANCER (June 21-July 21)
Others find you an admirable person to be involved with today. You take all your responsibilities very seriously. You're chalking up many good points.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 23)
Blending fact, humor and charm with intelligence is the reason you'll be able today to accomplish an otherwise almost impossible feat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You are a strong person others can lean on today. You have compassion and understanding, and know just when and how to help.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Others are captivated by your pleasant manner today. They'll do all they can to make things easy for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23)
You are especially creative today and could use this talent to find the solution to an old, perplexing problem. Put your mind to it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
If there is something you've been wanting to get off your chest, do it today. You'll know just how to say the right things without losing a friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Advice that might be difficult to swallow could prove to be a real blessing. Don't let your pride stand in your way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
If you get your work done early, you'll be able to enjoy getting out. There are some fun and different things awaiting you. Don't waste your time.

When Young Avoid Excess Knee Strain
DEAR DR. LAMB—Our 12-year-old son has been diagnosed as having Osgood-Schlatter's disease. Our physician explained that this mostly occurs in boys when they are going through the growth spurt, but he has noticed it in some girls as well.
We've tried to find out some information to help our son understand his restrictions, but we're not certain how restricted he should be. The X rays of his knee show no significant changes, so, apparently, we've caught the problem early.
We need to know if being overweight can aggravate the problem. Should his legs be propped up when he is sitting? Is prolonged standing a problem? Will climbing a flight of stairs three times a day create any difficulties?
We were told that walking is OK. During school, should he prop his legs if it can be arranged with his teachers? Are we correct in assuming that any action which causes the knees to bend should be curtailed?
Our physician is very optimistic about our son overcoming this without requiring any surgery and we want to make sure of this by doing what is beneficial.
DEAR READER—You're talking about Osgood-Schlatter's disease. It sometimes think this should be called "adolescent knee" because that's when it occurs. The whole problem is related to the tony knob just under the kneecap surface of the shin bone (tibia). This is the spot where the tendon from the huge muscle group over the front of the thigh attaches to the shin bone. The kneecap is in this tendon.
This is also the area where there is quite a bit of cartilage in the shin bone during the growth phase. That may have something to do with the reason this area is easily injured. The pull on this point is made when you straighten the leg. Bending the leg wouldn't be such a problem if it weren't that bending it is followed by straightening it. During a knee bend, for example, the pull on the spot just below the kneecap is a straightening when the person stands up is tremendous.

Pain is the main feature of this disease. There may be some swelling. Some doctors think a small piece of the bone is literally pulled loose from the shin at the point of attachment. Opinions vary on how much restriction of physical activity is required.
Ordinary walking is perfectly all right. Some doctors insist on a straight leg cast to prevent bending and straightening the knee, pulling on that spot. It follows that knee bending motions such as climbing stairs or kicking a football are the ones that could cause the most trouble.
For mild cases I don't think you need to concern yourself too much about the boy when he is in a sitting position. He should learn to avoid heavy strain on his knee area when he is getting up. Standing upright won't be any worse than walking. In the vast majority of cases, continuing with a restriction of physical activity and time result in complete recovery.

Sanford Rate Hike Bid Still On Time Inc. Buys Seminole Cable Firm

Sanford City Commissioners will be notified officially next Monday that American Television and Communication Corp., owner of Orange-Seminole Cablevision, has become a wholly owned subsidiary of Time Inc.

The price for the merger was worked out in cash and stock options offered by Time Inc., according to Bob Miles, ATC spokesman. ATC stockholders were given the option of accepting cash for the merger or equivalent number of shares in Time, according to Miles.
The total figure for cash and stock is about $130,000,000, said Miles.

"Public officials say the move will not change efforts to seek rate hikes in Seminole County."
On the local level, the impact will essentially be nil," said Kevin Rorke, Cablevision's general manager.
"The management of ATC will remain intact. There will be no change in policy and procedures."
The move will also have no bearing on a scheduled hearing on rate hikes for Seminole County customers outside incorporated areas, according to Rorke.
The Seminole County Commission will review Cablevision's request for rate increases at 7 p.m. Tuesday meeting.

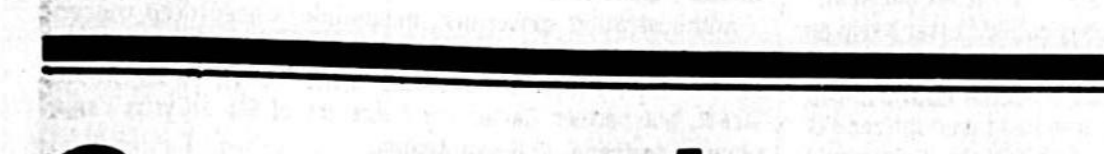

There will be no change in policy and procedures asked for permission to float the rate for Sanford customers from the current $6.50 per month to $8 per month over the next two years.
Rorke noted Cablevision will probably make the same request again to the Sanford City Commission in the near future. However, he admitted, a date for that request has not been set.
"I think it is very clear we will have to petition the City of Sanford for a rate adjustment in the near future," said

County Planning Boss Eying 80-Acre 'Service Center' Site

Seminole County Commissioners have begun the process of planning development of the 80-acre county-owned parcel near Five Points to what will ultimately be a full-blown multi-million dollar "equity service center"—including possibly a county commission office high-rise.
At least this is the vision of the county land development director John Percy, who presented his concept to commissioners Tuesday. County Commissioner Dick Williams said, however, his preference was to let an orange square colored on a Percy-submitted map of the county property as the county commission office building go unnamed and undesignated for use in the future.

Other commissioners present at the afternoon workshop made no comment on what might be in the future as far as a county commission high rise is concerned.
The major emphasis Tuesday was placed on approving in concept a plan submitted by County Engineer Bill Bush to change the main entranceway off U.S. 17-92 into the property. The 80-acre tract already has the old agriculture building, the road department and work completed by the planned opening date for the new jail, April 1, 1980.
Along with the new entranceway road, a looping road, by-passing the buildings would be constructed within the complex and a turning lane would be provided from the entranceway road to the south on U.S. 17-92. Bush estimated materials costs for the roadways at $14,000.

While Percy recommended a name for the complex such as "county service center," Bush agreed a name should be created for the property. He urged that thought be given as well to naming a "board of overseers" to see that the property is not mismanaged in the future and that future land use and construction there be according to a master plan to make best possible and most efficient use of the tract.
"Control of the property in the past has not been adequate," Bush said, noting control should have been exercised in the early 1980s. "Buildings have been allowed to be built at different angles and different elevations in the past," the engineer said.
Percy recommended that the commissioners consider adopting a conceptual master plan for the county property to provide general direction for the future development of the land.
As for the road modifications, Percy said the planning would be accomplished this budget year and funds for short term road modifications and parking areas would be included in the fiscal year 1979-1980 to begin Oct. 1.
Bush was told to proceed with negotiations with nearby property owners to determine if property may be donated to the county land for a second access road to the tract, possibly from Lake Mary Boulevard.

Wife-Slaying Suspect Kills Self In N.C.

Former Sanford resident Rod Daffron, 34, sought in connection with the slaying of his ex-wife and a Lawrenceville, Ga., man has been found dead in a Shelby, N.C., motel room. A nationwide alert had been issued earlier this week following the double homicide last Friday. The victims, the former Charlene Abrams, 30, of Sanford; and Dennis Moore, 29, had been found in the Daffrons' home, according to Gwinnett County Police Capt. C.T. Baber, with "multiple gunshot wounds."

Daffron and his wife were divorced last December. According to Patrolman Ken Smith of the Shelby Police Department, Daffron was found dead in his Hager Motel room about 10:40 a.m. Tuesday from carbon monoxide poisoning. Time of death was estimated at some time Sunday evening.

Patrolman Smith said the motel maid had come to Daffron's room on Monday, but could not find him. He was going to kill her and himself," he recalled.

"He had been telling her since their separation and then after their divorce that he couldn't deal with it and was going to kill her and himself," he recalled.

The Daffrons have two children, Laura, 6, and Jeff, 3.

The maid returned Tuesday morning. Again no answer. Police were called.

Smith said police found two small mini-charcoal grills burned out on the floor of the room. Daffron was lying across the bed, covered with a green blanket and a 357 Smith & Wesson magnum on top. The door had been barricaded with a chair, Smith said.

Smith said today a note had been found in Daffron's car parked outside the motel room, but declined to release its contents. Police officials were en route this morning from Lawrenceville to Shelby.

Earlier this week during the search for Daffron, Capt. Baber noted Daffron had been threatening his former wife for several months.

"He had been telling her since their separation and then after their divorce that he couldn't deal with it and was going to kill her and himself," he recalled.
