Never Satisfied

President Roosevelt deserves the highest praise and commendation for his flat rejection of the impractical and unsound proposal of the five governors of the rebellious middle western states that the government of the United States should resort to price fixing of agricultural commodities at a level 70 percent higher than those prices existing today.

As an indication of the completeness of the President's refusal to be misled into another radical experiment, we cite the statement of Governor Langer of North Dakota, issued immediately following the conference, "Our mission was a hundred percent failure. He (the President) rejected the plan entirely and offered nothing in its place. I am much disappointed and disgusted. The farmer is the forgotten man. Everybody else has been here before him. The banker, the insurance man, the railroads have got all the money. There is nothing left for the farmer."

Perhaps the most ironical and ridiculous statement which was ever made in the history of the world is that "the farmer is the forgotten man" of this administration. All the convincing testimonials that you cannot cure a man of diabetes by feeding him sugar are as nothing compared with the failure of the government to satisfy its citizens by federal relief. The billions of dollars which Uncle Sam has poured into farm co-operatives, crop loans, seed loans, mortgage loans, processing taxes, farm board experiments and domestic allotment plans, have not only gone unappreciated but have actually produced greater recalcitrance than ever.

This latest proposal of price fixing would have been the most dangerous and radical experiment that could have been tried. It could not have been undertaken at all without complete government supervision and regulation from the first potato planted in every two-by-four garden plot at every village cross-roads, through all the middle men and commission merchants right on down to the ultimate consumer. It would have required an army of bureaucratic overlords almost as numerous as the farmers themselves. It would have taken the United States army and billions of dollars simply to enforce it.

Furthermore we do not believe the majority of the farmers in these middle western states want anything of this kind, any more than our own farmers would. Most of the farmers are independent, self-reliant men who do their own thinking and want to do their own farming. They naturally would resent the absolute control of their planting, production, and marketing by some political appointee from Washington who doubtless could not tell the difference between a head and a chicken's foot.

Most of this agitation for price fixing and farm strikes comes from a few disgruntled farmers who are by no means representative of their industry as a whole but who make more noise than all the rest of them put together. Nor are the farmers alone in possessing this type of personality. Every industry has them, a few hot heads who are always wanting to get out and raise Cain and who claim to represent a large following. The best thing to do with people of this type is to tell them flatly to go home and go to bed.

President Roosevelt is already testing many questionable experiments in his efforts to bring order out of chaos. There is grave doubt about some of them working any better than price fixing would, but the country is best that it is to be spared this one white rabbit at least. The President should be encouraged to say "No" with equal force to the next group of agitators making demands upon Washington.

Highways As Playgrounds

One scarcely picks up a newspaper in these days of rapid transportation that one does not learn of some new accident of the highways. The killing and maiming of little children is particularly deplorable, not only because such accidents constitute so large a proportion of the whole but also because in most cases they are avoidable. The use of streets as playgrounds and the least tacit approval by parents of such practices is held largely responsible.

"The practice of making exceptions, as so many parents do, permitting youngsters to play on certain streets but not on others is not to be condoned," says Harold Hoff, New Jersey Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. "It is obvious, of course, that traffic conditions vary on different thoroughfares. One will carry a greater volume of faster moving traffic than another. Such a street in the first category is patently less safe than the second; but it does not follow that the latter is absolutely free from danger."

"Evidence indicates that where children are permitted to play in one street, they begin to assume that all streets make happy playgrounds. They use no discretion in choosing which they shall use for this purpose. "It is one of the country's misfortunes that play space is not more available for all children; that there should be any inadequacy in this important facility. Yet we cannot compensate for that lack by converting traffic facilities into playgrounds, save under the stress of unusual circumstances such as when streets are closed to traffic in order to permit coasting, skating or some other children's pastime.

"Teaching children never to play in any street not especially designated for that purpose is a course that parents might profitably pursue. It would do a great deal to bulwark the safety education which is now being conducted in the schools; in fact, it would anticipate the latter for only the parent is in a position to teach this lesson to youngsters of preschool age."

PROBLEMS OF THE NEW CONGRESS

BY ROGER HANSON

When Congress assembled last March, it had done little thinking. The country was in a state of panic, and there really was no time for arguing. Bills were handed to the Senate and House, with orders to pass them. During the last few months, however, our senators and representatives have had opportunity to talk with the home folks and do some real thinking. This is especially true since the President's recent announcement relative to the "rubber dollar." The following is a summary of their present attitude.

(1) Congressmen will return to Washington in January with a continued desire to help President Roosevelt. They admire his courage, good nature and willingness to try things. Furthermore, a majority are in sympathy with the President's goal to have a more equal division of the nation's income. Every week, however, larger numbers are wondering whether the NRA and the AAA and the XYZ will bring it about. Although still hopeful and anxious for the "New Deal" to work, yet they are becoming a little skeptical. Too many are using it just to take a buggy ride.

(2) Congressmen recognize that speculation and debt are the basic causes of the nation's economic troubles. If convinced that inflation would solve this problem, congressmen would follow Thomas on his wild ideas. Congressmen, however, know that if they should get their constituents free from speculation and debt it would be but temporary. The love of speculation is as imbedded as the love of liquor. Ninety percent of those now burdened with debt would immediately get into debt again, even if freed from it now.

(3) Congressmen are willing that the President continue his experiments with the government buying up with agriculture, manufacturing, retailing, etc. Yet, when talking with the home folks, these congressmen learn that the only thing the people really want is reduced taxation (also reduced interest charges if they are in serious debt) and to be let alone. They find that although their constituents want a ball and chain put on the other fellow, they do not want it put on themselves.

(4) Just now the President is trying to sell the country on "controlled currency" or what they call a "rubber dollar." This is "all Greek" to most congressmen, but the older ones are shy of government control of anything under a present political system. They have seen the government try to control agriculture and spend $500,000,000 to teach the farmers to produce more crops, and now are being asked to spend $500,000,000 to teach the farmers to produce less crops. They remember the shipping board fiasco and the government's attempts to control labor unions, banking and various other lines. Hence they are fearful of too much control.

(5) There is a genuine interest in Congress as to national planning of some kind. Congressmen realize that half of the nation's wealth is being wasted through mismanagement of what they are unemployed because of the mistakes and inactivity of the other half. When looking into the facts congressmen find that everyone in this country could enjoy food, clothing, shelter, and luxuries, equivalent to an income of $10,000 per year, working six hours a day for eight months a year (depending four months in Florida). If waste were prohibited and industry properly planned. When told, however, that this involves the control of credit, advertising, and education, they become frightened. Thinking of the mess which the government has made in prohibiting the sale of liquor, what would happen if a hundred other lines were prohibited also?

(6) Congressmen are "not so hot" for federal appropriations for public works and unemployment relief as they were six months ago. They are finding out that plans by cities and states for construction work are now being given up and thrown into the lap of the federal government. Hence, the total expenditures and benefits are not being materially increased. They also are realizing that these appropriations mean increased taxes. They also wonder whether it is fair to make our children and grandchildren pay for our mistakes.

(7) Congressmen are giving much thought to the codes. They are truly anxious to do everything possible to relieve unemployment. They realize that for the capitalistic system to survive, work must be provided at a living wage for those willing to work. Hence, these congressmen are interested in minimum wages, a shorter working week, etc. Yet, they are now learning that minimum wages develop a group of defectives, who are not worth minimum wages to any employer. This makes it absolutely necessary to continue the public aid system as a nation cannot adopt minimum wages without an accompanying dole system. Furthermore, the curbing of production to uphold prices and wages may be shortsighted, purely there is more to divide, only as more is produced.

Violence Flares In Mayorality Election In New York City

cal questions, prohibition repeal yesterday comes before the voters of six states in what promises to be the decisive test of whether the constitution shall retain its anti-liquor provisions.

More than a fifth of the nation's population lives in the six states that are voting on repeal—Pennsylvania, Ohio, South Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky and Utah.

Of the local issues, chief attention centers upon the three-cornered mayoral contest in New York City in which is involved whether Tammany Hall shall continue its domination.

Regarding repeal, administration leaders who have been urging removal of the 18th Amendment from the constitution chief among them Postmaster General Farley, expressed confidence that the day's voting would signal the end of their campaign.

They viewed Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Kentucky as virtually certain to add their votes to the 33 states which have already voted for repeal and said there was little doubt that Ohio and North Carolina would do likewise. They were less certain about Utah but pointed to the fact that Senator A. D. Thomas was elected on a repeal plank, and that Senator King, and former Governor Dern, now secretary of war, were advocating repeal.

Small Docket Handed To Judge At City Jail

Police court activities of yesterday afternoon were limited to the trial of only a few cases. Two alleged law violations.

J. H. Caldwell and C. W. Shoemaker, white Coast Line railroad employees who were charged with drunkenness, were fined $5 each. The former's fine was suspended on a promise of good behavior. Another charge against the latter has been taken under advisement.

Eugene Vann, charged with carrying concealed weapons, was fined $50. He also drew a $5 fine on a charge of assault.

Lester Matthews, charged with possessing liquor, was fined $25. A similar charge against Charles Gibson was ordered dismissed at the request of police.

Luke Sanders, and Katherine Smith were fined $5 each on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Sam Singleton was fined $20 for being drunk and disorderly, and $10 for making an assault, with threats.

Cady May Brown was dismissed of a disorderly conduct charge, while Laura Wright and Otis Wright, in court on a like charge, will be tried next Monday.

Robert Hagan, charged with possessing liquor, is to be tried Friday.

This is considerably lower than their bid of last May, when the first sale was held, this bid being confirmed by the court.

Yesterday's bid showed $2,000 for the real property, including five buildings and approximately 1400 lots in the first unit and 900 acres in the second unit. The sum of $800 was bid for the personal property, including office fixtures, furniture and the development equipment and material.

JOHNSON HITS AT OBJECTORS OF NRA PLAN

(Continued From Page One) cense a newspaper. I think that the licensing sections of the statute must be read with the free press clauses of the constitution. I think that, together, they clearly preclude the idea of any intent of Congress to create any right in the NRA to license the press."

Johnson's speech was the first of a series of six to be delivered to the corn belt, rent at present by a farm-selling strike. He delivered it before 1000 members of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Illinois manufacturers' association.

Appealing for full support of the recovery program, he said all the objections to the NRA, freedom of the press, constitutionality of the recovery act, and interference with private individualism, were either "synthetic, dead cats" or "hogwashes."

He said the true grounds for opposition to the NRA were not those issues, but rather the desire of "a few powerful men" for the benefits of the act but none of its burdens.

He said "they want to organize and combine and escape the obligations of the Sherman act, but they don't want to give anything in return for these benefits. They want to give nothing and take everything."

He questioned whether some of the objections did not result because the NRA "raised wages and reduced hours of work and thus increased costs in order to relieve the distress of four million bread winners."

"Following the NRA and the Roosevelt administration have pulled the country one quarter way out of the March dunes, 25 percent in six months," Johnson said it had done so without violating the constitution, menacing the freedom of the press, or entering any industry into a code.

Some opponents of the NRA, Johnson said, have resorted to a device of witch doctors, which he described as "to set up a hogwash and then dance around the fire heating the tantom and scrawning at it."

"It awes the trusting natives, and nine times out of ten it does the trick of propounding the natives into prejudices against their own interests," he said "There is no limit to which this trick may not go."

"It is time to wake up and get rid of savage fetiches. This country under the tutelage of witch doctors has the jitters. We are seeing things on the air," Johnson said he had heard the President say that he would not censure any department of the government, and that he wanted the truth told. He said that no press ever was given more absolute freedom than in and about the NRA, and that the entire administration had been more than cordial to newspaper comment and suggestions.

"We do not mind really honest and substantial dead cats," he said, "and I have some justly coming to me. My only complaint is that most of these dead cats are synthetic. The biggest motion picture dead cat is the one about the freedom of the press."

"I am as devoted as any of these critics to the constitutional principle of a free press. Nothing ever will be done in, or by, the NRA to impair it."

"Opposition and criticism has not only not been resented, it has been invited on every decision and action. Even in the formation of policies, responsible representatives of the press have been taken into confidence."

"Any system for licensing the press is wholly repugnant to me. Even as a soldier in the war I did not believe in any suppression of news except as such as helped the enemy, news of projected military movements or conditions of supply and transport. I do not believe in any restrictions on the press today."

An Important MESSAGE To Our Customers

By B. L. PERKINS

In 1925 the "Friendly Five" shoe was created and placed on the market as a low priced shoe made of quality merchandise. At that time leather was selling at high prices, and the manufacturers put all the leather possible in their shoe to sell at $5. Today this same company is the largest manufacturer of shoes in the world.

As time passed and the price of leather dropped "Friendly Five" put better and better quality into its shoes, but did not raise the price. Just before the recent upward trend of the market, Friendly Five had gained the reputation of giving more quality merchandise for the money than any other shoe. Where before Friendly Five was considered a low priced shoe it is now referred to as one of the best shoes.

When the price of leather advanced so rapidly recently the manufacturers either had to reduce the quality or raise their price. Consequently, knowing that to lower the quality would be disastrous, this fine shoe was re-named the "Friendly" shoe, to sell at only $6, which at today's market price is far above the average shoe in merchandise. For those who prefer a lower priced shoe this company also manufactures the "Fortune." The $5 "Fortune" is not the old line $5 shoe, but a new line.
