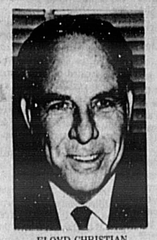
Christian Quits, Avoids Impeachment



FLOYD CHRISTIAN

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida Education Commissioner Floyd Christian, under court indictment and facing impeachment, resigned today.

"It will be impossible to obtain a fair trial if the case is heard by the legislature and at the same time by the court," Christian said in a statement read to a House committee by his attorney Joseph Jacobs.

Jacobs had handed the resignation to Gov. Reubin Askew a few minutes before informing the committee, which had assembled for its opening hearing on Christian's possible impeachment.

Christian was indicted last week by a Leon County grand jury on 19 counts of bribery, perjury and conspiracy. He was accused of accepting $83,000 in bribes in connection with state Education Department contracts for a reading program and a migrant labor education program.

Askew said he believed Christian "took the wisest course" in resigning.

"It is with a deep sense of sadness that I accept his resignation, but it is also with a deep sense of gratitude for his service to the school children of Florida," Askew said in a statement.

Askew has not made a decision on a success but "Ralph Turlington is under very serious consideration," said Askew's press secretary, Don Pride.

Rep. Turlington, D-Gainesville, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for education commissioner.

Turlington said he discussed the possibility of his appointment with Askew several days ago.

"The subject came up," he said. "There was nothing definitive ...I think I am well qualified and suited to the office."

Pride said Askew wanted to discuss with House leaders the effect removing Turlington from the house would have on legislation, including the closely fought financial disclosure bill on the House floor today.

Turlington is chairman of the Finance and Taxation Committee, where Askew's major tax relief program is under consideration.

Christian's statement said: "I am acting in what I know to be the best interests of the education system of Florida and because my attorney advises me that it will be impossible to obtain a fair trial if the case is heard by the legislature and at the same time by the court."

Immediately after the statement, committee chairman James Redman, D-Plant City, dissolved the committee.

"I want to commend the commissioner for his resignation," Redman said. "I believe he has done the proper thing for the people of Florida.

"I think the committee has been fair," he added. "We have done what we had to do under the Constitutuion of Florida."

The impeachment committee was formed last Thursday, the day after the grand jury indicted Christian.

At the organizational meeting Friday, the panel rejected Jacobs' plea that the hearings not be held because they would prejudice Christian's chances for a fair trial in court.

Charts were assembled in the committee hearing room, apparently for a presentation of some of the evidence given to the grand jury. That evidence was presented by Mike Rose, legislative auditing committee staff director who investigated Christian.

Mom's Talk Results In Mistrial

By CHRIS NELSON
Herald Staff Writer

A mother's unconscious plea for sympathy today ended in personal anguish for her and a mistrial for her son, an 18-year-old Seminole High School student charged with four counts of attempted murder in a Jan. 4 parking lot incident.

Mrs. David Floyd, whose son, D. Daniel Floyd, was about to start the third day of his trial, introduced herself to two women jurors in the lobby, commenting on the weather and telling them she knew "every blade of grass" outside on the courthouse lawn.

The incident was reported by Floyd's defense attorney, Ned Julian, to Seminole Circuit Court Judge David Strawn, who immediately granted prosecutor Claude Van Hook's motion for a mistrial.

Strawn went to great lengths to tell the jury and the Floyd family he did not consider that any attempt to prejudice the jury had been made, but said not even the appearance of prejudice can be tol-rated, and re-set the case for May 6.

Mrs. Floyd suffered a nervous breakdown after the judge's ruling and had to be removed from the courthouse on a stretcher and rushed to Florida North Hospital, where she was admitted for treatment.

Floyd, 113 Jinkins Circle, Sanford, is charged with running down four young men in Sanford Plaza with his 1964 Falcon station wagon after a football tossing incident and argument.

Witness Tuesday and Wednesday said Floyd tried to run over the football, was called back by the ball's owner, and got into a brief fight after allegedly pulling a knife and threatening to use a shotgun.

Floyd then got back into the car, drove off around the plaza, and came slamming through a group of boys walking away from him, witnesses said.

Newcomers and new discoveries could well be the theme of life in Central Florida. And behind each newcomer and each discovery often lies an interesting story. And checking into every interesting story you can usually find a Herald Staff Writer and photographer. Today is no exception. That ugly fellow on the left is the 'newcomer' and City Editor Bob Lloyd gives us a picture story of his arrival in Sanford on Page 4A. Meanwhile, almost anyone with a curiosity would pull up short at a sign that says "Stop. Dial O." Staff Writer Jean Patteson followed instructions and you'll never believe what she found behind that sign. Well, maybe you will believe it. You can share her discovery by turning to Page 14A.

School Meeting Open; Closed Session Illegal?

By MARK WEINTZ
Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County School Board Wednesday voted—in the sunshine—to enter collective bargaining with teachers after canceling a closed door session which its attorney said would violate the "Sunshine Law;" the ruling means the board may have violated the law with a March 25 private session.

Board Chairman Davie Sims called an executive session for Wednesday to reassess the board's March 25 decision to wait for state guidelines on collective bargaining before negotiating with the Seminole Education Association (SEA).

Board Atty. Douglas Stenstrom said Wednesday the scheduled Wednesday closed-door session would not comply with the law because the board could only meet privately with appointed negotiators. "The board had decided not to bargain until guidelines were established; therefore, there are no negotiators," he explained.

At the Wednesday meeting the board, on a 3-1 vote with Member R. G. Feather dissenting, opted to hire a negotiator and proceed with collective bargaining. Board Vice Chairman Allan Keeth was not present.

On the March 25 executive session that was closed to public and press, School Supt. William P. Layer said, "We were under the assumption it was legal to meet that way." Layer, declining to comment further on the legality of the March 25 session directed questions to the board attorney, who is out of town until May 7.

Layer said no attorney would sit in for Stenstrom while he is out of town because counsel is required only when the board takes action and no meetings other than work sessions are scheduled until his return.

The question of collective bargaining has been kicked around without action since the inception of SEA 10 years ago. However, this year the SEA, on the basis of recent Supreme Court rulings giving public employes the right to bargain has threatened to sue the board for the right to negotiate teacher contracts.

Layer said it has not been a question of whether or not the board will negotiate with the SEA, but when the bargaining would take place. That question remains open since the board has not picked a negotiator.

Since collective bargaining is a "new area" no guidelines have been established. Board members said they expect the state legislature to come up with guidelines, but if these rules are not established by the time the negotiator is appointed then they will be formulated at the local level.

Should the legislature come up with the guidelines after local policy has been established the board and SEA will be bound by them and may have to change bargaining procedures, Stenstrom said.

At an April 10 board meeting Sims said he favored collective bargaining, but he wanted to wait for the state guidelines. At the same time SEA negotiator David Rosenthal said, "We will not be content to wait for guidelines because we will then have to wait for interpretations of the guidelines."

In any event, the board now stands committed to bargain with the SEA for teacher contracts despite the present lack of guidelines.

Layer said he will begin looking for a negotiator today.

At the Wednesday meeting Board Member Stuart Culpepper recommended hiring a professional negotiator "to protect the best interests of the public and the board."

The proposal was favorable to all present except Feather who said it was his understanding that when teachers receive the salaries they deserve another area would suffer.

"The budget is such a delicate object that money will have to come from another pocket and the academic area would probably be the first to suffer," he said.

Around the Clock

By John A. Spolski

O.K., Patty—I believe you. No one forced you; you're not under duress—you want to belong to the SLA group.

You've picked your side, and it's the "other side" of the law (as far as most Americans view it, anyhow).

I would hope this is the signal which the FBI had been waiting for...may you and your inherited lot suffer the consequences you deserve.

And may those who were injured during the recent bank robbery be compensated accordingly, too.

The bleeding hearts will come quickly to your kind's aid. For a change, I'd appreciate hearing some concern for the law abiders.

When the Fred Dickinson-bank charter episode first surfaced a few months back, I wrote that it would eventually include the happenings of a proposed bank wright here in Seminole County.

That prediction still holds true...providing those who were interested in gaining a bank charter are willing to enter the fray and "tell it like it is"...

Harry Kwiatkowski resigned as Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Seminole County Democratic Part'. This will permit the committee ample time to secure a replacement while Kwiatkowski prepares to take the plunge into county politics.

Formal announcement coming soon on his plans to run for a county commission seat.

TIMELY QUOTE — "We say that television has replaced the Book, that the reason few people read books nowadays is because everyone is watching television. Nonsense! In the days before television, everybody watched radio. In the days before radio, everyone went out to look at ball games. In the days before sports, people sat and looked at nothing." — Scientist-author Isaac Asimov.

30 Impeachment Charges Out?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The staff of the House Judiciary Committee is ready to recommend a sharp reduction in the number of impeachment charges it has under investigation.

As many as 30 of the 56 charges involved in the inquiry may be laid aside as unsupported by facts when the committee meets today in one of its final sessions before it starts receiving evidence.

The effect of the recommendation, if accepted by the committee, would be to narrow the inquiry to allegations involving Watergate and its aftermath, the ITT antitrust settlement, political contributions of the dairy industry, President Nixon's taxes and the activities of the White House "plumbers."

Laid aside, at least temporarily, would be charges dealing with the impoundment of funds, the dismantling of the Office of Economic Opportunity, improvements to Nixon's Key Biscayne and San Clemente properties and the use of federal agencies for political purposes.

A decision on whether to keep the secret bombing of Cambodia on the list of possible impeachable offenses is being held up pending release of a Senate Armed Services Committee transcript of hearings on the subject that includes heretofore secret documents.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., said no items are being eliminated from the inquiry.

Nixon Visits Mississippi

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon returns today to Mississippi, where a year ago he adopted a phrase that came to be associated with his post-Watergate stance: "tough it out."

Accompanied by Mrs. Nixon, the state's two Democratic senators and a bipartisan congressional delegation, Nixon was flying to Jackson to address the Mississippi Economic Council.

Last April 27, Nixon flew to Meridian, Miss., to pay tribute to Democratic Sen. John C. Stennis, who in introducing Nixon urged that the President "tough it out" in the face of the unfolding Watergate scandal.

AID FOR TORNADO VICTIMS IS ON THE WAY

LEAVING LONGWOOD today for Louisville, Ky. is this truck loaded with boxes of clothing, 300 pairs of shoes, 800 sheets and other household goods, valued at more than $100,000. Collected by Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 8207 and its Auxilary from Seminole County area, the donations will be distributed to victims of the recent tornado in Brandenburg, Ky. Driver of the truck is Jimmy Wilkerson of Longwood.

Titusville Man Admits Killing Girl

A Titusville man today pleaded guilty to killing one of six young women whose decomposed bodies have been unearthed in Brevard County since November, then heard Circuit Court Judge Volie Williams say he could not morally sentence him to death.

Bernard E. Giles, 21, with his wife Joanne and infant daughter in the crowded Seminole Court House courtroom near the family of the victim, Nancy Gerry, 18, also of Titusville, was declared a mentally disordered sex offender by Williams.

The defense admitted a deal for Giles' life had been made over the strenuous objections of State Atty. Abbott Herring, saying Williams' declaration that Giles is a mentally disordered sex offender makes the death penalty legally impossible.

Herring criticized the negotiated plea as "not proper," saying no guarantee on the death penalty should have been given, then added he will push for the electric chair.

But Williams was having nothing to do with the demands for death, telling the hushed courtroom, "When I meet my maker, the last thing I want is justice — I'll be hunting mercy."

The 16-year court veteran, who said he has never imposed the death penalty and cannot conceive of doing so with two exceptions — murder within a prison by a man sentenced to life, or a hired killer — set formal sentencing for 10 a.m. Monday.

Giles spoke softly to Williams, admitting he killed Nancy Gerry, but only after defense attorney Ed Kirkland reminded him of her name.

Miss Gerry's remains were found Dec. 10.

Airport Receives $1.6 Million

Washington D.C.—U.S. Sen. Edward J. Gurney, (R) and Rep. Bill Chappell (D) said today that major improvements to Sanford Airport are going to be made with $1,688,914 in federal funds.

A federal Aviation Administration airport development grant is on the way that will provide for lighting taxiways and runways, installing visual approach slope indicators, putting in apron lighting, setting up security fencing and removing obstructions, including relocation of roadway.

Patty: Parents Pigs, Fiance Clown, I'm SLA Soldier

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — And now this from Patricia Hearst: my parents are "pigs," my fiance a "clown." And "I am a soldier of the people's army" who voluntarily robbed a bank.

Speaking in a calm, subdued voice in a taped message received Wednesday, Miss Hearst said "Greetings ... This is Tania." She then proceeded to heap scorn and ridicule on her family, said she never cared if she saw her "sexist pig" fiance again, and added:

"To those people who still believe that I'm brainwashed or dead, I see no reason to further defend my position. I am a soldier of the people's army.

"The only way we can free ourselves of this fascist dictatorship is by fighting — not with words but with guns."

In the tape, the 20-year-old college coed called her parents "the pig Hearsts," and at one point addressed her father as "Adolf," an apparent reference to Nazi leader Adolph Hitler. She termed Steven Weed, to whom she became engaged last December and planned to marry in June, "my ex-fiance."

Her father, San Francisco Examiner editor and president Randolph A. Hearst, confirmed the voice was his daughter's, and added:

"The only good thing is that she is alive. Regarding her personal attacks on me, if she has been brainwashed, and I firmly believe she has, then it's not surprising she would say something like this.

"No matter what she says, we still love her. The girl we've known all her life would not say something like that of her own free will."

Miss Hearst, whom the Symbionese Liberation Army claims to have kidnaped on Feb. 4, said in the tape she was a voluntary participant in an April 15 bank robbery in which four alleged members of the SLA have been named in warrants. She is wanted as a material witness. Of that robbery, which she called "a revolutionary act," she said:

"I was positioned so that I could hold customers and bank personnel who were on the floor. My gun was loaded and at no time did any of my comrades intentionally point their guns at me."

Pictures taken of the $10,600 robbery at the Hibernia Bank in San Francisco showed two of the armed participants with guns pointed in the direction of Miss Hearst, who was standing in the middle of the bank, a rifle around her shoulder, her hand in her pocket.

In the tape, Miss Hearst dismissed suggestions that she come forward for a personal interview as proof she is not being coerced.

"To the clowns who want a personal interview with me — Vincent Hallinan (an attorney), Steven Weed and the pig Hearsts" she said, "It's absurd to think that I could surface to say what I'm saying now and be allowed to freely return to my comrades. The enemy still wants me dead."

The tape, which also included the voices of two men, was Miss Hearst's first communication since she renounced her family on April 3 and said she was joining the SLA as an armed comrade. She also said she had taken the name "Tania," in memory of a slain girl friend of Latin American guerrilla Che Guevara.

Police Community Relations Director Rodney Williams, who obtained the tape through an intermediary, turned it over to the FBI. He said the tape was in a brown paper package along with half of Miss Hearst's driver's license and a red poster showing hands and a clenched fist. The other half of Miss Hearst's license was used to authenticate a previous SLA communication.

Speaking of Weed on the tape, Miss Hearst said:

"As for my ex-fiance, I'm amazed that he thinks that the first thing I would want to do once freed would be to rush and see him. The fact is, I don't care if I ever see him again."

Explaining the alleged reason for the bank robbery, she said the holdup "forced the corporate state to help finance the revolution ... As with the money involved in my parents' bad faith gesture to aid the people these funds are being used to aid the people and to insure the survival of the people's forces in their struggle with and for the people."

She said she was alive and well. "As for being brainwashed, the idea is ridiculous to the point of being beyond belief."

Shortly before police received the tape, the FBI announced that two rented getaway cars used in the bank robbery had been located in a basement parking garage. The FBI said the vehicles, which turned up in a routine check, apparently had been left there within a few hours of the April 15 holdup.

Two young women reportedly were called to testify today before a federal grand jury probing the robbery. The Examiner identified them as Janet Cooper Weiss and Cynthia Garvey, both of Oakland, and said they were acquainted with persons who later joined the SLA, a group which authorities say is multiracial, heavily armed and believed to consist of about 25 male and female persons.

Federal authorities had no immediate comment on the tape.

THE SLA'S 'TANIA'

They Wonder: What Happened To Her?

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Are Patricia Hearst's startling words being forced from her?

An Associated Press investigation finds no evidence in her background that the 20-year-old heiress to a newspaper fortune would say or do anything violent — much less join terrorists, mouth radical rhetoric or aid in a bank robbery.

But she has done them as the astounding developments of the country's first political kidnaping unwind. Whether or not her actions have been voluntary, whether she has been brainwashed, coerced, threatened, is not known.

This is the story of Patty Hearst before Feb. 4, when the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army claims it kidnaped her, before her friends and fiance and parents and some impartial experts say she was brainwashed and coerced into saying she would join her captors:

She was known as a bright, self-confident young woman, independent enough to fly the nest with a boyfriend, but caring enough to keep close ties with her family. She took vacations with them, and saw them often. She was making her wedding guest list and picking a China pattern shortly before the kidnaping.

Like many of today's youth, she had lived with her boyfriend, Steven Weed, a philosophy graduate student, for the past year and a half. Their relationship was to become marriage in late June.

She was a thoughtful art student at the University of California at Berkeley, once a hotbed of student radicalism but now stirred only by an occasional streaker. She rarely discussed politics.

Domestic life with Weed was quiet. They spent most of their time at home, watching television reruns of "Star Trek" and "Mission Impossible" during long, candle-lit dinners.

They lived in a $250 Berkeley apartment. Their income was a $300 monthly allowance from her parents and a small salary he received as a teacher's assistant.

Patty was an excellent cook, especially good at souffles, cakes and pies. She and Weed listened to the stereo, he favoring the classics, she the soft rock singers Paul Simon, Carole King and Carly Simon.

They had used marijuana, but wine was their thing. They usually had 20 or 30 bottles on hand and were trying to learn better vintages.

They didn't subscribe to the San Francisco Examiner, of which her father, Randolph A. Hearst, is editor and president, or any other newspaper. Their only magazines were Cosmopolitan, satiric National Lampoon and Sunset, a travel and recreation magazine.

The Hearsts learned of the living arrangement shortly before last Christmas. They had thought their daughter had a female roommate.

"Mr. Hearst was more understanding," said Weed. "Mrs. Hearst is very traditional and Catholic, so she was obviously opposed to it. But she finally said, 'Well, you're going to do it anyway,' so there was no big fuss."

Weed, a Princeton University graduate, is six years older than Miss Hearst, who had her 20th birthday in SLA captivity. He is tall and slender, with a brush mustache. An art professor of Patty's described her as "like something painted in the 15th century ... long, golden-brown hair and perfectly fair skin."

When they went out, Steven and Patty enjoyed prowling auctions and second-hand shops to find antiques and art works.

Last summer they traveled around California, in his Volkswagen or her blue MG, a gift from her parents. They went to Wyntoon, a Hearst family retreat in the forests of northern California.

RANDOLPH HEARST

Patty is the granddaughter of the publishing giant, William Randolph Hearst. But she knows little about him except as an important collector of art. She has read no biographies about him nor has she seen "Citizen Kane," the fictional film based in part on his life.

She was born the third of five daughters. Both parents have always been busy with their own lives. Besides directing the Examiner against stiff competition from the San Francisco Chronicle, Hearst served as board chairman of the Hearst Corp. His wife, Catherine, helped found the San Mateo Crippled Children's Society and is a regent of the University of California.

The daughters were supervised by a succession of governesses and maids, some good, some bad. An English governess named Heather proved kindly and sympathetic to the problems of the middle daughter as she sought her place in the family and at school.

Patty followed the family tradition: catechism and confirmation at the parish church, teaching from the nuns at the parochial school. She went away from home for the first time to begin high school at tightly-run Santa Catalina School in Monterey.

In the fall of 1971 she entered Menlo College, a liberal arts school near Stanford.

She met Weed at Crystal Springs, where he taught math. She pursued him, Weed said, and he was taken by her slim beauty and eagerness for knowledge. They dated regularly.

In the summer of 1972 Patty toured Italy and Greece with her art class. When she returned, she and Weed rented an apartment.

"Patty grew up fast; she didn't appear like an 18-year-old at Berkeley," said Weed. "Our friends were ones I had known, all in the 25-30 age bracket. She fitted very well into the adult world."

Though the Hearsts were upset at their daughter living with Weed, they were visibly relieved that a wedding was planned for June.

It seemed that their world, which combined quiet, graceful living with civic responsibility, would be well-ordered once more.

Then came the night of Feb. 4.

And from that point on the story of Patty Hearst blurs, and the questions that are being raised about what has happened to her, about what she is really like now, cannot be answered.

Kennedy Ends Russian Visit

MOSCOW (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy completed a one-week visit to the Soviet Union today and said it convinced him there can be progress on such major Soviet-American issues as arms control and extension of detente.

Kennedy revealed that he met Wednesday night in a Moscow apartment with a group of Jews who want to leave the Soviet Union. "But I won't talk about it (the meeting) here," he said.

The senator supports the Jackson Amendment to deny tariff benefits and preferential credits to the Soviet government until its emigration policies ease up. He said his talks with the Kremlin's leaders didn't change his position.

Connecticut Dog Racing

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The first applications for dog racing tracks in Connecticut have been accepted by the state Commission on Special Revenue, which now must study the proposals.

Connecticut Yankee Greyhound Racing, Inc., said in its application Wednesday that it plans a $3 million track on a 69-acre site on in Plainfield.

A $4 million dog racing track is planned on a 45-acre site in Colchester, according to an application from the Colchester Kennel Club.

U.S. Aid To Egypt Shaky

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed U.S. aid to Egypt has drawn an unlikely reaction in Congress that leaves its future in doubt.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, a powerful opponent of U.S. foreign aid programs, said he will view the Egyptian aid proposal with an open mind.

But House Foreign Affairs Chairman Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., one of Congress' chief foreign aid supporters, said he has "serious reservations about it. It seems to me now that we're trying to buy peace," Morgan said.

Banker Under Probe?

MIAMI (AP) — Banker Albert L. Dantzler, who told police he was kidnaped and held for $60,000 ransom, says his attorney has advised him not to comment on reports that he is being investigated for possible extortion.

Sources have told The Associated Press that Dantzler, who claimed to have been kidnaped late last Thursday, is the subject of an extortion investigation.

Meanwhile, Kenneth W. Whittaker, special agent in charge of the Miami FBI office, said Dantzler did not take a polygraph examination scheduled for Wednesday morning.

"Dantzler said he wished to discuss this with his lawyer before taking such action," Whittaker said. Dantzler refused comment on Whittaker's statement.

96-Hour Kiss Record

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Louise Heath and Vincent Torro had been kissing for 96 hours and 32 minutes, except for a five-minute break every hour, when their last competitors unclinched and dropped out.

"Far out," said Torro as the kissathon ended and he and his partner were declared the winners.

Wanted: One Burglar

MIAMI (AP) — "Burglar wanted. Only top professionals need apply," reads the classified advertisement taken by a Miami firm that makes security systems.

International General Electronics Co. is betting a corporate $1,000 that its new residential alarm system is burglarproof.

John Whitaker, an I.G.E. security consultant, says that 60 applications have been filed since the ad was placed in local newspapers. "They weren't all burglars," he said. "Some were criminology students, former security guards and former CIA agents."

Tourists Make Gas Calls

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida's toll-free telephone service to report on gasoline supplies in the Sunshine State received 1,131 calls in its first week of operation, the state Commerce Department says.

The largest number of calls, 164, was for information about gasoline along Interstate 75, while 86 inquiries concerned Miami, the agency said Wednesday.

President Will Oppose Any Oil Price Rollback

By The Associated Press

With oil profits continuing to soar, President Nixon reportedly has pledged to veto emergency energy legislation if it contains an oil price rollback.

Rep. James F. Hastings, R-N.Y., said Wednesday he had been told by "people at the White House" that the President would not accept an amendment approved by the House Commerce Committee.

That amendment would roll back domestic crude oil to the prices that existed in November 1973, at the beginning of the Arab oil embargo. This would lower the cost of most oil from the current $5.25 a barrel to $4.25, and would lower the retail cost of gasoline and other petroleum products.

Nixon vetoed previous emergency energy legislation because of a similar price rollback provision.

Profits of major oil companies, meanwhile, continue to show sharp increases for the first three months of 1974. Continental Oil (Conoco) reported Wednesday that net income after taxes for the first quarter rose 130 per cent to $109.2 million, or $2.16 a share, compared to $47.5 million in the same period of 1973.

Getty Oil reported a 122 per cent increase in its first quarter profits, with after-tax earnings reaching $73.6 million. They were $33.1 million a year ago. And Murphy Oil Corp. of El Dorado, Ark., a smaller firm, disclosed quarterly profits of $27.37 million, up 257 per cent from the year-earlier level of $7.67 million.

Earlier this week, Exxon, Texaco, Gulf, Standard of Indiana (Amoco) and Occidental reported first quarter profits up from 75 per cent to 718 per cent over 1973 levels.

"The exceptionally favorable results in the first quarter of this year are not indicative of the earnings gains anticipated for the full year of 1974," said Conoco chairman John McClean.

S. B. Pinyan, Atlanta representative of the Phillips Petroleum Co., said Wednesday it is a "phony charge" to say oil companies are making windfall profits. Large oil companies are reporting dramatic profit increases because current earnings are being compared to 1973 when, he said, industry profits were the lowest in a decade.

Senate Tries Reviving Price Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid predictions that inflation for the remainder of the year may be higher than previously believed, Senate Democrats are trying to breathe new life into the administration's dying wage and price controls program.

But the administration says it doesn't want the authority.

The Democratic action came as John T. Dunlop, the head of the Cost of Living Council, predicted that the rate of inflation for the second half of 1974 may be higher than the 5 or 6 per cent administration economists had forecast. Prices increased at an annual rate of 10.8 per cent in January, February and March.

Issuing the administration's objection to continuation of wage and price controls, Edgar R. Fielder said, "For the economy as a whole, standby authority creates more problems and more inflation than it could ever help prevent." Fielder is assistant secretary of the treasury for economic policy.

William E. Simon, President Nixon's nominee as the new secretary of the treasury, told the Senate Finance Committee Wednesday he opposes any continuation of controls except in the health and construction industries. Simon also came out against any income tax cut for citizens, a move which leading Democrats favor as a means of countering the effects of inflation.

The wage and price controls program will end April 30 unless Congress acts to extend it.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, the Democratic majority leader, said after Wednesday's vote by a Democratic conference that an attempt would be made to add the standby controls legislation to a minor bill already on the Senate calendar. Sources said the move likely would not come before next week.

Senators attending the conference said the Democrats were having second thoughts about the need for controls because of the serious inflation reported last week and the prospect it will continue.

One administration source said the Democrats may fear they will be blamed for continuing inflation since they had earlier rejected the administration's plan for continuing controls on a limited basis.

Police Fear 'Zebra' Will Kill Again

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Zebra killer will strike again, the chief police inspector believes. And he says nearly a week of stopping and searching young blacks on the streets has produced no clues in the case in which 12 white persons have been gunned down at random.

"I think it will continue," Chief Inspector Charles A. Barca told U.S. District Court Judge Alfonso Zirpoli Wednesday when asked whether he thought the killing was over.

Zirpoli is conducting a hearing on lawsuits seeking a halt of the searches of black men resembling the description of the killer.

Barca said that since the searches had been unproductive and ineffective, police are cutting them back drastically.

"There is nothing more urgent in the annals of the police department" than to find the killer or killers who have terrorized this city since last November, said Barca.

The killer has been described by two of the six persons who survived apparent unprovoked attacks. Police code-named the case Zebra after the radio channel being used on the case.

Barca said bus stops were the most likely spots for future Zebra killings, since 14 of the 18 shootings have taken place at city bus stops. Barca told the judge an injunction against searches "would make it difficult to locate the Zebra killer."

At the same time, Barca promised that police "from now on will be more selective in making stops" and would only make them "when the individual is acting or appears to be acting out of the ordinary."

Mitchell-Stans Case To Jury

NEW YORK (AP) — The fate of John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans, described by the government as men who sat at the head of government and thought "they were above the law," goes into the hands of the jury today.

U.S. District Court Judge Lee P. Gagliardi planned to instruct the panel of nine men and three women as soon as Asst. U.S. Atty. John Wing concluded the final 90 minutes of his summation of the government's case against the first present or former Cabinet officers to face criminal charges in half a century.

For nearly four hours Wednesday, Wing summed up the government's contention that Mitchell, former attorney general, and Stans, one-time commerce secretary, conspired to obstruct a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of financier Robert L. Vesco in return for his secret $200,000 cash donation to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

Stans and Mitchell, handpicked by Nixon to run his re-election, also were charged in the 10-week trial with perjury.

"What this case involves is telling the truth," Wing said as he opened his summation. "What this case is about, in part, is political influence on justice, an attempt to use political influence to impede justice."

Mitchell's lawyer, Peter Fleming Jr., whose own lengthy summation preceded the government's, characterized the case against the former cabinet members as "a prosecutorial vision — a vision that they set out to give life to.

Energy Conservation Slips

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
Associated Press Writer

Americans are abandoning the strict conservation measures they imposed on themselves at the height of the energy crisis.

A nationwide Associated Press survey finds that automobile traffic in most areas of the country is approaching pre-embargo levels. It also shows that toll road receipts are climbing, mass transit use is slipping and the rate of electricity conservation is falling.

"There are as many people on the road now as there were in September," before the Arab oil embargo brought the winter energy crisis, said federal energy chief John C. Sawhill. The AP survey showed that in recent weeks police have written many more speeding tickets as motorists press down on the gas pedal.

It was the embargo imposed by Middle East producers in the fall that forced Americans to significantly cut back their use of energy, and it was the end of that embargo on March 18 that apparently has started them back toward their old habits.

A spokesman for Florida Power & Light Co., the state's largest utility, said its customers used six per cent less electricity than they normally would have between early December and late February.

But that figure fell to three per cent in March and a spokesman said "figures the week the Arab oil embargo was lifted indicate customers used noticeably more electricity than any other week in March."

Isle Of Pines: Lush Retreat And Once 'Devil's Island'

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

ISLE OF PINES, New Caledonia — This is the remote, beautiful South Seas island you have read about in novels — with or without modern conveniences, according to your choice.

It is only 28 air minutes (44 miles) from Noumea, capital of the French territory of New Caledonia, but it is many hours or days by "appointment" telephone to Los Angeles, 7,107 miles to the northeast. The Isle of Pines is beautiful shoreline and dense jungle. It has a crushed coral landing strip and, believe it or not, a Hertz car agency.

It has an archaeological past and a tourism future. It has history dating back to discovery by Portuguese explorer Queiroz in 1606 and a role as a Pacific "Devil's Island" for French prisoners in the late 19th Century.

It has the fascinating Melanesian village of Vao and the luxury of Relais de Kanumera, a grass shacked hotel on Kanumera Bay.

Golfers will be unhappy here—until some energetic American carves a course out of the jungle—but those who love fishing, eating, drinking, swimming, skin-diving, exploring and simple relaxing will love it.

Relais de Kanumera snuggles against vibrant flowers and a grove of buni trees, with a deep blue bay and snowy white sand as the view from the simple but fully equipped beachfront cottages. The food is a combination of Melanesian, Polynesian and French provincial, and also a combination of the freshest lobster, crab and other seafoods along with pork, lamb and the tasty tropical fruits of the island. The bar, the hosts boast, is open 24 hours a day, if that is your wish, and informality is the rule.

The 200-foot trees that give the island its name sway gently in the tradewinds and provide good sleeping music.

They also provide appropriate "music" for your choice of several French wines or your appetizer of perhaps exotic raw fish marinated in fresh lime juice. If you are an author and want quiet for your work, this is the place. If you are one of those very busy American tourists who must see everything in 24 hours, it is also your place.

One of the musts in exploring is the ruins of the French prison, almost buried by jungle growth but now being bulldozed down for use as a field that will produce potatoes for sale on the main island of New Caledonia. The shell of the prison includes 18-inch brick and concrete walls, and it is easy to see that comfort was not the order of the day for the men sent here after a May 29, 1871, Paris riot in which 36,309 prisoners were taken. Nearly 4,600 were banished to the Isle of Pines and they were the toughest of the lot.

A nearby cemetery of about 250 graves indicates the futility of escape attempts and the general nature of prison life until the facility was closed in 1879. Some of the captives were released and others were transferred to other prisons. Today, several leading families of Noumea trace ancestors back to this prison.

There are other more cheerful things to do on the island. One is a visit to the vast cave-like Grotyto D'Ouatcha, once a burial area for native tribes. It is a fascinating maze of caverns lined with stalactites and stalagmites, with water frequently rising from—nobody knows where.

THE CHILDREN ARE FRIENDLY ON PINES

A walk on one of the long wide beaches is an experience in solace, contemplation and study of native life, plus a reminder of the less attractive aspects of the 20th Century. Melanesian fishermen will be landing with their catches in the afternoon. Many pines are cut off 10 to 30 feet into the air, victims of severe tropical winds.

Begonias, hydrangeas and coffee plants grow wild just back of the beach. And, inevitably there are a few beer cans along the sand, also the remains of a soaked wine carton.

There is no wildlife of any particular interest here but the French version of the U.S. Forest Service has a station and keeps a close watch on those who might otherwise cut the tall trees that give the island its character and its name.

The village of Vao includes self-government buildings, the remains of a Catholic church, a school, plus hundreds of friendly and inquisitive youngsters. They are happy and they like to present flowers to visiting women. Some of the grass roofs are giving way to galvanized iron but the farming shows evidence of irrigation practices of long ago.

Meanwhile, back at Relais de Kanumera, your dinner lobsters have been brought ashore.

You have had a fascinating day touring an island that may be unique in your experience. And, if you are unlucky, in less than 24 hours you may be whisked back to the 20th Century.

Short Stories Appealing

ENORMOUS CHANGES AT THE LAST MINUTE. By Grace Paley. Farrar, Straus & Giroux. 198 Pages. $6.95.

The 17 short stories in this book are not conventional ones, but for those interested in an impressionistic form of writing filled with lucid images and true dialogue they are well worth the reading.

Miss Paley has chosen New York City to celebrate in her work, and it is her impressions of the many kinds of people who make up the city, as well as the city itself and the interplay between the two, which are distilled to make these often vivid stories. As for the writing, well, it often is chatty, but never garrulous, saying exactly what the writer wants it to say and perhaps a little more to the reader who cares to think about it a bit.

She Is Bringing Wood To Life

The Herald Services

LOS ANGELES — Walk by the home of John and Winnie Baker most any night and you can hear the whine of a power saw or some other blade cutting wood.

And the person operating that power equipment is just as likely, to be Winnie as John. They both use it — he to build things; she to rough out wood for the remarkable art creations she does.

Mrs. Baker — exceptionally modest about her talent — carves nostalgic scenes in relief and paints them. Her work is reminiscent of Norman Rockwell's Americana.

Mrs. Baker, a self-taught artist, started painting in oils as a hobby in 1961 and continued "dabbling at it" until 1967. She painted still life and scenery and claims she was "never very good at it."

Then, with a painting half-finished, she started doing a carving with a pocketknife one day. And that was the end of her work on canvas.

"That painting is still half-finished," says her husband, a professional photographer.

Mrs. Baker was inspired to try carving when she saw a picture in a magazine of a rooster she thought would look nice in three dimension on her kitchen wall.

Finding a scrap of walnut in her husband's wood supply (he builds things around the house, including a boat a few years ago), she whittled out the rooster. It looked good enough that she did two similar ones. By then she was hooked.

Next she carved an eagle plaque. She sculpted the famous praying hands and began to get more courage and started a scene — several carved figures to make one picture.

Her earliest carvings were done mostly in hardwoods, but when she decided to paint her three-dimensional scenes, she turned to the softer woods such as sugar pine, basswood and Honduras mahogany.

"These are easier to carve and if you plan to paint your carvings it's no use to cover the beautiful grain of such woods as walnut," she said. "Hardwoods need to be left natural."

John was impressed. "If you can do all that with a knife, I'm going to look around and find you some better tools," he told her.

He did. Chisels and gouges enabled her to do more intricate details in the wood. Then he talked her into entering some of her work in the Los Angeles County Fair.

But fair officials reluctantly turned down her work because they had no category for painted carvings.

The next year — 1969 — they conveniently added that category and Winnie Baker's three entries won two first prizes and a third place ribbon.

And her trip to the fair that year brought her another unexpected bonus. There she found a wood-carving booth being manned by local members of the National Wood Carvers Association. She saw the group's magazine, Chip Chats.

"How can I get that magazine?" she asked Clarence H. Mussolf, a wood-carver manning the booth.

"By joining the association," he replied.

She joined, and since then she has been involved with other carvers — including several other women.

She meets regularly with a chapter of the newly organized California Carvers Guild and is also a member of the National Carvers Museum.

Mrs. Baker roughs out her wood in the garage, but does her carving and painting in the living room.

"It makes a mess," she says, "but, after all, I'm the one who has to clean it up."

Credit Card Cut Yet To Hit Seminole

By JEAN PATTESON
Herald Staff Writer

With profits booming and supplies short, oil companies are cutting the credit card agreements that helped make "Go now — pay later!" the call of the road — although the effect of the cutback on credit cards has not been felt much in Seminole County yet.

Of all the service stations visited, only the Imperial station on S.R. 46 at I-4 refused all credit cards.

"We were instructed about six weeks ago to cut out accepting all credit cards," said station operator Glen Lowe. "We were told the reason was the cost of processing the cards and the extra time needed to handle credit cards.

"Tourists off the Auto-Train who stop in here tell me a lot of service stations up north are discontinuing the use of credit cards," Lowe added.

All other operators indicated they had not changed their policy regarding credit cards, and were either accepting all, a select few, or no credit cards as usual.

"I'd rather deal with credit cards than cash," commented Vernon Lay at the Gulf station on S.R. 46 at I-4. "There's no problem if I get robbed, and I don't have to bank the slips but just mail them off to Gulf."

However, Lay will only accept Gulf and BankAmericards — the other cards cost him too much money, he says.

The Standard station across the road will also readily accept credit cards — except those of other major companies. "They're the same as money and people would rather use them," was the comment of the pump attendant.

Like many service station operators, G. M. Buerger at the Sunoco station on S.R. 46 at I-4 will only accept a limited number of credit cards — Sunoco, Master Charge, BankAmericard, American Express, Carte Blanche and Diners Club.

"I've seen signs up at a few stations in the past weeks indicating they're no longer accepting any cards, and I can understand why," said Buerger. "So many people abuse the cards — they get stolen or lost, and are often more trouble than they're worth."

He had no intention of cutting out the use of credit cards at his station, however, and John Brown, owner of Johnny's Standard Service on U.S. 17-92 at Airport Boulevard said the same. "Not unless the company tells me to," commented Brown.

The Wareco station on North French Avenue is one of several stations which prefers not to use credit cards, mainly because they cost the operator money and they take time to process.

However, if Seminole County station operators follow the trend that is becoming apparent across the nation, more stations are likely to start demanding cash instead of credit cards, particularly the bank-type card.

The paying for motel rooms, dinner or rental cars with gasoline credit cards is getting harder.

At the same time, the oil companies are slimming down their own accounts.

"We're not aggressively going for new credit card customers," said an Atlantic Richfield spokesman.

Added an Exxon official, "Our requirements are more restrictive today than they were two years ago."

A Shell official said card renewals will no longer be automatic for customers who have a history of difficulty in paying or who use their cards infrequently.

Statistics Dispute Mobil Oil Claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mobil Oil Co. claims in a national television ad that drilling for oil is a risky business since only one in 60 wells pays off. But oil industry statistics indicate results 36 times better.

Data obtained from the American Petroleum Institute and from several major oil companies appears to dispute Mobil's figures. However, a spokesman for the oil company said Mobil would stand by the television spot.

Sources within the Federal Trade Commission said that at one time an investigation of the Mobil ad had been suggested but said they did not know the current status of the matter. An official spokesman for the FTC would not comment.

The television ad is one of a number that were produced for major oil companies during the worst stages of the energy crisis to try to explain fuel shortages and high prices.

Figures compiled by the American Petroleum Institute show that of all new wells drilled worldwide last year, 61.2 per cent — or three of every five — was productive, a record 36 times better than that claimed in Mobil's ad.

An executive of Doyle Dane Bernbach, the advertising agency that created the Mobil ad, said the ad did not refer to all wells dug everywhere in the world, but only to exploratory wells. Asked why the ad didn't specify exploratory wells, the executive, Mary McCarthy, replied:

"We couldn't explain what an exploratory well is because the public wouldn't understand it."

Exploratory drilling, sometimes called wildcatting, is searching for oil or gas in new, untried areas. Production drilling is the sinking of wells where reserves have already been proved.

The public records of three oil companies — including Mobil — showed their success rate at wildcatting considerably higher than one-in-60, or 1.6 per cent.

Standard Oil of California, the nation's fifth largest oil company, drilled 33 wildcat wells in the United States last year and five, or 15 per cent, were productive. Worldwide, Standard's success rate was close to 17 per cent.

In 1973, the Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, drilled 161 wildcat wells and 23 were commercial successes for a 14.3 per cent success rate.

Mobil, the nation's third largest oil company, drilled 51 exploratory wells and nine of them produced for 21.4 per cent — or better than a one-in-five success rate.

J.A. Gillespie, the Mobil spokesman, defended the television ad, saying that both the CBS and NBC networks had accepted it on the basis of an API publication that used the one-in-60 figure.

An API spokesman, J. Speir Collins, said the figure referred only to a narrow segment of oil exploration.

Grand Jury Probes Bank Charter Process

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — St. Petersburg banker Hubert Rutland says he has testified before a federal grand jury about his relationship with state Comptroller Fred O. "Bud" Dickinson.

"I was asked about his relationship with me. I'm a good friend with Mr. Dickinson. I've known him a long time," Rutland, 77, told reporters after his appearance behind closed doors.

Though sources close to the investigation refuse to comment on the probe, Tallahassee sources say the grand jury is investigating procedures in bank chartering.

Dickinson and former Gov. Farris Bryant have been called to testify Friday.

Diets And Other Trivia

By JOAN COLBY
The Herald Services

Every so often, my husband becomes health conscious. I am notified of this when he exclaims, "I guess you want me to have a coronary so you can collect the insurance" after which he points at the egg and buttered toast I am about to serve him.

"Cholesterol," he hisses. "Animal fats. Arteriosclerosis!"

All he wants to eat, he continues, are green salads, wheat germ, raw vegetables and brown rice. From now on.

I remove the eggs and toast, feeling like Lucrezia Borgia.

"You could use a little exercise, too," my husband says, looking me over critically. "And a proper diet."

He then proclaims that we all will boycott cupcakes, Twinkies, candy bars, pop, gum and potato chips.

"And we'll all Feel Better," he concludes cheerfully.

You would never guess it from the thundercloud expressions on the children's faces. Those children exist on marshmallows and caramel corn. What are they going to eat?

"Porridge," says their father. "Porridge is very healthy. Why don't we ever have porridge in this house?"

Well, one reason could be that I'm not sure what porridge is, aside from it being the staple of the three bears. I suspect porridge may be oatmeal but I'm not positive. However, that would be unfortunate because we all hate oatmeal.

The children are already assuming the crafty expressions of closet cookie eaters. And I am wondering if sprinkling a doughnut with wheat germ would transform it into a health food.

Actually, I am willing to sacrifice junk food, however delicious, for nutrition's sake.

So I conscientiously prepare a dinner of raw spinach salad, wheat bread, herb tea and dried figs.

Unfortunately, by dinner time, my husband has forgotten this morning's resolve. "This is all we are having?" he inquires plaintively. "Where is the meat? The potatoes? The hot rolls and butter? The lemon cream pie?"

I remind him of the new health regime. Without comment, everyone eats a very small amount of this nutritious dinner.

A couple of hours later though, when my husband casually suggests we go out for cheeseburgers and shakes, no one demurs.

Little by little, however, our diet is improving.

A little wheat germ in the meat loaf. Honey instead of butter. Whole grain homemade bread rather than store bought white.

So we keep jelly beans hidden in the underwear drawer. So who's perfect?

The IRS Abused Public's Trust

Because its agents can pry into virtually every nook and cranny of American life, and because no citizen is immune from its proprietary interest in his financial affairs, the Internal Revenue Service has even more investigative powers than the Department of Justice and the FBI.

Most Americans have viewed the IRS with mixed emotions of fear, respect and trust. Once the trust is lost, respect is correspondingly diminished and all that remains is fear. When such fears are exploited by anonymous workers in a huge, unbending bureaucracy too often inclined to be arrogant and unthinking in its dealings with individual taxpayers, public anxiety becomes real indeed. All IRS functionaries don't win the arrogant label, but tales of high-handed treatment are all too easy to find this time of year.

So now when we have at hand confirmed examples of special IRS information being furnished the White House for apparent political purposes, we wonder how deep-seated is the malaise. And however one feels about Mr. Nixon's current tax troubles, this question must be asked: If the President's tax return can be "leaked" by a single disgruntled IRS employe, how can any citizen be assured his returns won't someday get into the wrong hands?

As a largely voluntary system for self-assessment of income taxes, the IRS is unique in all the world, not only in terms of the massive $260 billion a year it collects, but because it has always professed to protect taxpayers' private records and thus instill a spirit of cooperation in virtually all Americans. Now that its major deadline has been met for another year, the IRS no doubt will be making special efforts to affirm that the system indeed has no serious weaknesses and that the reported violations are mere aberrations that can be quickly corrected.

There can be even more credibility given this public relations effort if it recognizes the public's plea for a more responsive bureaucracy. Certainly there is no need for the "Christmas is over, let's get tough" syndrome.

Warts and all, the IRS is an institution essential to effective government, and with some simple surgery—"depoliticizing," or "humanizing" if you wish—public confidence in the system's integrity can be restored.

Stans Has Misused Talent

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
The Herald Services

One of the sadder figures caught up in the great maw of Watergate and related issues is former Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans.

This is said without in any way trying to pass judgment on the degree of his involvement either in Watergate directly or in such other matters as the Robert Vesco influence case. In this latter, of course, he and former Attorney General John Mitchell have undergone many weeks of formal trial for conspiracy in a New York federal court.

If the official judgments on Stans' conduct finally are harsh, some psychologist surely will be willing to step forward and say: "He had it in him all the time."

Neverthe less, up to the moment of a breaking point (assuming there was one), Stans seemed to countless people, and this includes numerous government insiders, a man beyond reproach.

It is widely accepted that, having served President Nixon heavily as campaign fundraiser from as far back as 1960 when the task was barnstorming the nation to help elect more U.S. congressmen, Stans took on the 1971-72 money-raising assignment with easy willingness.

He did not. He saw an impropriety in a former cabinet official going back to the cash circuit. And he tried to escape the assignment, in vain. The pressure was kept on him, and he yielded.

There is terrible irony for Stans that he is in such deep trouble today over money matters. Funds to finance Mr. Nixon's 1966 roamings for congressional bidders were not easy to come by. Standing out against any real help was former GOP National Chairman Ray Bliss. But Stans not only proved his skills, he husbanded the collections with scrupulous, tight-fisted honor. He didn't even want to let money go for an election-night party at New York's Hotel Delmonico.

After a 1968 presidential campaign from which the Republicans emerged without a penny of debt, Stans, however, encountered what is surely his greatest disappointment in life.

He wanted very much to be Secretary of the Treasury. A New York financier with a long background in accountancy (part of it as a federal court accounting aide in Chicago), he served—evidently well—as President Eisenhower's budget director in the 1950s. He felt qualified, and deserving.

But the banking community thought Stans lacked stature for the cabinet post. Mr. Nixon, notwithstanding heavy obligation to him, accepted the veto quickly and named the recommended Chicago banker, David Kennedy.

Coal Mines Are No Boon From Coast To Coast

By DON OAKLEY
The Herald Services

One of the most intense legislative battles currently being waged in Congress is centered on an amendment to an omnibus land reclamation bill sponsored by Democratic Rep. John F. Seiberling of Ohio.

The basic intent of the amendment, which is now before the House Interior Committee, is to equalize the costs of deep coal mining and strip mining. This would be achieved by levying a fee of $2.50 on each ton of coal mined by either method. The fund would be set aside for reclamation.

Companies could earn a credit of up to 90 per cent against the fee for costs incurred by their own reclamation efforts, but by the nature of their operations, strip-miners would be harder hit than deep-miners.

Without some equalization, however, Seiberling contends, there will be a massive shift of the industry from the east, where most deep mines are located, to the West, where cheaply recoverable coal lies close to the surface.

Not only would this further disrupt the already hard-hit coal economies of Appalachia, but it would lead to the ravaging of vast areas of the West. It would mean, quick, huge profits for the western miners, says Seiberling, but at the cost of the collapse of the deep-mining industry. Deep miners will be needed again as early as the end of the century after the western resources are depleted, he predicts.

"The difficulties of rebuilding the industry from scratch, in order to continue our reliance on coal, will be enormous."

Seiberling's opponents, who include major electric utility, oil and railroad companies controlling western coal reserves, warn that his amendment would cripple efforts to make the nation self-sufficient in energy. The Nixon administration agrees with them.

Former Federal Energy Office chief William E. Simon, now Treasury Secretary, has expressed "great alarm" at the amendment. It would, he charges, result in a 50 per cent increase in the price of clean-burning, low-sulfur western coal that is desperately needed to replace high-sulfur eastern coal, would have severe impact in the economy and would undermine efforts to offset oil shortages by greater use of coal.

"This is unthinkable," says Simon, "given our present energy crisis."

Oddly, the near 100 per cent increase in the price of petroleum that Americans have experienced in recent months has not only been thinkable to Simon but in his view has been eminently beneficial.

Countering Simon and supporting the amendment is Norman R. Williams, a consultant to the interior Committee. There is still plenty of low-sulfur coal in the East, he says. Also, eastern coal burns much hotter than western coal, thus "substantially more western coal will have to be mined, shipped and burned to produce the same amount of heat value as a similar amount of eastern coal."

Not only would we be in the anomalous situation of importing coal into one of the richest coal regions on earth but we would be wasting expensive diesel fuel to do it, says Williams. Moreover, when transportation costs are considered, western coal might in some cases actually cost more than eastern coal.

These are some of the major arguments on both sides. Whatever the resolution of the great coal controversy, there is no argument that it will have significant impact on the lives and life-styles of the ordinary American consumer, who ultimately pays all the bills.

Golda's Resignation Leaves Shaky Israel

The Herald Services

The road to peace in the Middle East has been marked with more than its share of chuckholes even with the flexible Golda Meir steering the course for Israel.

Her decision to resign as prime minister further complicates the task of finding a middle ground on which Israelis and their stubborn Syrian jdversaries can construct a truce acceptable to both.

Obviously, more than advancing years and weariness from her tumultuous leadership years prompted Mrs. Meir's resolve to step down. The coalition government she pieced together only last month not only has been the target of militant critics of its war policies, but has itself been torn by dissension.

It is doubtful that a new government, expected to be elected in August, will be willing to adopt the Meir spirit of compromise that produced the first flickering hopes for a permanent settlement of Arab-Israeli differences.

And the caretaker administration she has consented to head in the interim is unlikely to sponsor any daring initiatives.

The situation creates a dilemma for U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Troop pullback concessions authorized by Mrs. Meir in the hope that a quick resolution might be effected in the negotiations could be in jeopardy with the Israeli government beset by uncertainties. Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, who set out the withdrawal terms, is at the center of Israel's leadership crisis. He is blamed by many critics of the government for Israel's alleged unpreparedness for last October's war.

Kissinger can hardly wangle a commitment to peace from his suddenly shaky bargaining position.

Unless Israel can turn quickly to a new leader capable of pulling together a new, stable coalition without the agonizing delay and bitterness of an election battle, the visible progress toward peace achieved in the Suez Canal area may be erased along with the hopes for the cease-fire with Syria.

The potential for global disaster should spur the bickering Israelis to the effort.

Papers Are Full Of Mush

By KENNETH J. RABBEN
The Herald Services

High school newspapers are heavily censored by school officials, but it seems no one cares and there is little in them worth cutting out anyhow.

Such is the state of high school journalism, according to preliminary information from the Commission on Inquiry into High School Journalism, sponsored by the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial. The commission's final report and recommendations, based on six hearings nationwide and extensive surveys, are scheduled for release soon.

Jean Grambs, a commission member and a secondary education professor at the University of Maryland, provided a preview and her reactions at a recent meeting near Baltimore of the Johns Hopkins University and Towson State College chapters of Phi Delta Kappa, national honorary education fraternity.

High school papers, Dr. Grambs said, contain "mostly bland mush," with 50 per cent devoted to sports. Professional newspaper editorial writers surveyed "thought it was a good thing that much of the content was simply mush."

School newspapers are reluctant to discuss critical and controversial issues because pupils know what is permissible and they publish what they think school officials want.

Pupils who "make a loud noise" with "unpopular" articles are punished, in subtle and not so subtle ways, by being labled troublemakers and radicals.

Despite the fact that recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions and rulings in several state courts consistently upheld 1st Amendment free press rights of pupils publishing newspapers in secondary schools and higher education institutions, neither pupils nor teachers seem interested in fighting to insure that those rights are respected.

"Censorship was rated 10th on a list of student concerns." These commission findings parallel other recent research showing an amazing lack of public knowledge of or interest in constitutional rights and their observance.

"Students are almost always unaware of their rights or what the law is. Consequently, considerable harassment of students with outspoken views occurs. As teachers, we do not support freedom of speech in the classroom.

"Teachers do not respect student opinions and principals frequently veto student ideas."

High school journalism awards "generally were given for the right format, not content. Advisers, administrators and students thought this was a good thing."

"How can we preach what we don't practice? We must perceive students as able to think. There is room and need for diversity. Responsibility is learned through participation and practice. Children do not just gain skills in school, but a knowledge of their self-worth. The correction for extremism is in the body politic. We must make a big noise to be heard. Schools cannot be enclaves of totalitarianism."

Although high school newspapers are guaranteed constitutional rights, the courts also have ruled that school officials can ban obscenity and articles and activities that would disrupt the school.

Rockwell Gets Favors

(©Copyright, 1974, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON—Rockwell International, the corporate giant, has demonstrated a strange knack for wangling government favors.

The pattern is described by investigators for Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., in an unpublished staff report. Alleging a "government tilt toward Rockwell," the report makes these explosive accusations:

—When the Federal Aviation Administration wanted to modernize its air fleet, then Transportation Secretary John Volpe allegedly served notice that "he would approve the acquisition of the aircraft only on the condition that they come from Rockwell International."

—The Coast Guard is also rebuilding its air fleet with Rockwell Sabre Guard to guarantee that the best aircraft was selected for the least amount of money," charges the report.

Independent engineers, called in by Murphy to study the program, estimate "a minimum cost overrun of $32 million with a possibility of the overrun reaching $50 million."

—When complaints began reaching Congress of government favoritism toward Rockwell, the report alleges, "several companies were warned that punitive action would be taken in the future if they did not 'get the hell off' of this line of approach."

—The report cites the findings of a House civil service investigation that the Transportation Department was guilty of "cronyism" and "favoritism" in loading its professional staff with employes who had once worked at Rockwell.

—In an earlier column, we told how Rockwell unloaded on the taxpayers a lavish, out-of-the-way $20 million building it couldn't use. We reported that the General Services Administration has agreed to take over the unoccupied Laguna Niguel, Calif., building in exchange for more desirable, government-owned property, which the corporation is eager to acquire. GSA boss Arthur Sampson, in rebuttal, called the exchange a "once-in-a-lifetime" bargain.

We spoke to Volpe in Rome, where he is now the U.S. ambassador. The former transportation secretary denied ordering the FAA to do business with Rockwell.

"I am damn sure I never did any such thing," Volpe told us. "My conscience wouldn't allow me to do it." Volpe's former FAA chief, John Shaffer, agreed emphatically that he had never been ordered to buy Rockwell planes. The contract was awarded, nevertheless, without competitive bidding.

FOOTNOTE: The Murphy investigators got their information, one of them told us, from a witness who had heard Volpe issue the Rockwell order. Three other witnesses privy to the arrangement also confirmed it, said the investigator.

DARK DOINGS: The energy crisis has made one thing perfectly clear: bureaucrats don't trust each other to turn off lights. Ever since the government acknowledged there is an energy shortage, the General Services Administration has been sending crews around to federal buildings to remove excess light bulbs.

The experts prowl through offices and corridors with their light meters. When they find someone enjoying an extra lumen or two, they hustle in with their ladders and start yanking bulbs.

The great bulb raid, however, has created a storage problem. The GSA has accumulated 1.2 million fluorescent lamps and hasn't the room to keep them.

The federal raiders, therefore, have devised a grading system: the "bad" ones (though they were burning brightly when removed) are discarded; the "intermediate" ones are either donated to state agencies or put up for sale at government surplus stores; the "good" ones are stacked in warehouses.

LUCKY LUCKMAN: A mysterious, handwritten note, initialed by embattled Veterans Administrator Donald Johnson, directs that all the Veterans Administration's architectural contracts in California should be awarded to a Los Angeles engineering firm.

We have obtained a copy of the terse, handwritten order, which declares: "All A-E work in California (except Loma Linda) until further notice is to Luckman & Associates." The document is dates 12-17-71.

The instructions, according to our investigation, were not obeyed. At least six other contract awards have gone to firms other than Luckman since the memo was written. But Luckman landed by far the largest VA contracts in California, totalling just under $3 million.

Through a VA spokesman, Johnson said he had no specific recollection of the memo but did not deny its existence. Still, any charge of favoritism, he declared, was "untrue."

Jim Luckman, commenting on behalf of the firm, said it had been awarded the big-money contracts because of previous "efficient and economical" work for the VA. Of the Johnson memo, Luckman said wryly: "I wish it were true."

Informed sources suggest that Johnson, an intensely partisan Nixon man, may have been influenced by the political support the firm's head, Charles Luckman, has given to President Nixon. Luckman, the former boy wonder of the Lever Brothers soap empire, contributed $13,000 to the 1972 Nixon campaign.

Bailey Defense Begins

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Attorney F. Lee Bailey was expected to begin his defense today against federal charges of mail fraud and conspiracy.

The start of the Boston lawyer's defense had been scheduled for Wednesday but was delayed by day-long secret conferences between attorneys and U.S. District Judge Gerald B. Tjoflat.

Jurors, public and press were locked out of the courtroom as the attorneys argued.

Bailey is charged with Glenn W. Turner and seven former executives of three Turner corporations—Koscot Interplanetary, Dare to Be Great and Glenn W. Turner Enterprises.

After the trial began last September, the prosecution took four months to present its case, with 161 witnesses taking the stand before the defense got its chance.

Experts Predict Surplus

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — State budget analysts say they are confident Florida will end the fiscal year with a $225 million surplus despite tax revenue drops from the energy shortage.

But legislative leaders say they want more information before they recommend how much the state should spend next year.

The revenue-estimating conference assembled by Gov. Reubin Askew said Wednesday it would stick to its January estimate of $2.1 billion state income in the fiscal year ending June 30 and $2.3 billion in fiscal 1974-75.

McCarty Murder Trial

FORT PIERCE, Fla. (AP) — A policeman has testified that Benjamin Soloway was holding a marijuana cigarette when he was shot and killed in the home of the son of a former Florida governor.

Testifying Wednesday in the second-degree murder trial of Daniel Thomas McCarty III, Fort Pierce police officer Thomas Cook said that investigators examining Soloway's body found the cigarette in his hand.

McCarty, the son of former Florida Gov. Dan McCarty, is accused of killing Soloway, a 34-year-old friend, last Jan. 24.

Reporter Charge Dropped

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — A trespass charge filed March 30 against United Press International newsman Mark Scheinbaum will be dropped, his attorney says.

Judith Petersen said she learned Wednesday that the misdemeanor charge will not be pressed.

Scheinbaum, a member of the Wire Service Guild, was arrested during a strike against UPI when he attempted to follow a non-striking employe into a hotel ballroom for a speech by Vice President Gerald Ford.

Police said they asked Scheinbaum to leave, but he refused.

The Miami newsman pleaded innocent to the charge and was freed on $57 bond.

Miss Petersen said she will file a motion to expunge the record.

107 Young Evangelists Go To Jail For Gospel

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Smiling and carrying their Bibles, 107 youthful evangelists have trooped off to jail, refusing to accept freedom if it means giving up preaching even for a few days.

County Judge Raymond L. Simpson offered the defendants, who were charged with loitering, released on their own recognizance Wednesday if they would promise to stop preaching in area shopping centers.

Their attorney, Louis Hardin Jr., contended that such conditions would violate the constitutional rights of the defendants.

"All right, I will strike the conditions and deny any release on recognizance," the judge replied.

He set $26 bond for each and scheduled an arraignment for Monday.

Smiling as they went, the 35 young women and 72 young men marched to separate jails. Another 30 paid the bond and went free.

"We don't try to get arrested," said Jerry Romprey, 32, a leader who was not jailed. "This is not a promotional thing."

Romprey said the group, known as "Christ is the Answer," was founded two years ago in Milwaukee, Wis. and has grown from 60 members to 240. All travel in a 44-vehicle caravan, usually staying in a city for about eight weeks.

He said the group frequents shopping centers because that's where they find people.

"The Lord told us to go into the world and preach the gospel wherever people are." he explained.

Police said the group arrived from Fort Lauderdale this week and, after getting permission to conduct missionary work in Gateway Shopping Center, began grabbing people to get them to listen.

Merchants called police after getting several complaints from customers, said sheriff's information officer Mike Gould. The 137 arrests were made late Tuesday.

"We don't harass anybody," Romprey said. "The merchants are just very uptight about us talking about Jesus."

Senate Mulls Oil Spill Cleanup Fund

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Senate is being asked to set up a fund to provide unlimited payments to cover the costs of cleaning up any oil spill in Florida waters.

The provision is in an amendment to a bill that would revise the state's oil-spill law. It will be offered in the Senate today, Senate President-designate Dempsey Barron, D-Panama City, said Wednesday.

Meanwhile in the House, Guy Spicola, D-Tampa and chairman of the Environmental Protection Committee, expects committee approval of a bill to merge three state environmental agencies.

The House also meets this afternoon to discuss a bill to require financial disclosure by public officials.

Barron said the oil-spill amendment, which has been deferred by the Senate four times, would set up a $35 million fund to pay off any claims. The fund would be allowed to expand if claims exceed $35 million, he said.

The amendment was worked out at a meeting of senators late Wednesday, Barron added.

Under the amendment, $10 million would immediately be put into the fund from the state's general revenue resources. A 2-cent-a-barrel tax would then be levied on all petroleum products shipped into the state to bring it up to $35 million, when the tax would end.

If case claims exceed the fund, the tax would be increased to 5 cents per barrel until all claims are paid and the fund is built back up to $35 million, explained Sen. Robert Graham, D-Miami Lakes.

The fund would respond to all claims agreed upon in an arbitration process, Graham added.

Public Disclosure Debate Continues

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Rep. Don Crane, R-St. Petersburg, said today an "overwhelming majority" of House members agree with him that financial disclosure by public officials should be secret.

But Crane would not predict the outcome of a House vote later in the day on his amendment attempting to alter a bill requiring government officials to publicly report their finances.

His amendment provides that reports be filed with an ethics commission with investigatory powers. The reports would be kept secret.

"I have a lot who say they want to go with it," Crane said. He added that a number of supporters may not vote for his amendment because "they think it'll look bad on them."

Crane's amendment represented a major Republican roadblock to House leaders seeking a public disclosure bill.

The House adjourned Wednesday with about 100 amendments up for consideration on the bill, CS-HB3481, which would require some 12,000 officials to disclose their assets, liabilities and sources of income.

But for the bill's sponsor, Rep. Marshall Harris, DMiami, one amendment far outweighed the others—the private disclosure amendment by Rep. Don Crane, R-St. Petersburg.

"I'll guarantee 30 Republicans on the Crane amendment," he added. "It obviously is the Republican 'vehicle.'"

Technicality Delays Property Tax Relief Bill

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Only a legislative technicality is delaying passage of a bill to give senior citizens a property tax break of up to $100.

The House and Senate approved the measure Wednesday. But the bill was sent back to the Senate for the technicality of a rollcall vote on the final passage approved earlier by voice vote.

The measure will then go to Gov. Askew, who is considered certain to sign it. He made the tax break for senior citizens a major part of his tax relief program.

The measure, as finally approved, gives the $10,000 homestead exemption on city and county taxes to the disabled and to persons over 65 who have lived in Florida for at least five years. The exemption already applied to their school taxes.

The Senate rejected on a voice vote a House attempt to include widows and the blind. The House dropped its proposal.

The action came after a week of struggle over a House attempt to extend the $10,000 exemption to all Floridians.

The Senate refused to go along with the attempt and sent it back to the House, which rejected it 61-56 Tuesday.

Senate President Pro Tem Louis de la Parte, D-Tampa and sponsor of the Senate bill, called the House move an attempt to kill a proposal to aid senior citizens.

A proposed constitutional amendment to extend the $10,000 homestead exemption to everyone was sent to the House Finance and Taxation Subcommittee Wednesday for further study.

Shevin Says Gurney Fund Report Required

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A state grand jury's question about whether Florida can require Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla., to report gifts has previously been answered by state Atty. Gen. Robert Shevin.

Florida law requires elected officials to report any gifts of more than $25 value, as well as all campaign contributions.

The Leon County Grand Jury, investigating an allegation that Gurney violated state law by not reporting $100,000 in contributions, has asked if the state can impose the laws on federal officeholders.

Shevin says it can.

"The authority of Congress to regulate contributions to congressional officers nominated and elected from a particular state is a concurrent power which may be exercised at either level," Shevin said in an opinion written on March 1, 1972.

The opinion was for state Sen. Jim Glisson, R-Eustis, a state representative at the time.

Glisson asked if the state election law required congressmen and U.S. senators to report campaign funds raised at testimonial dinners.

The grand jury put the question to Circuit Judge John A. Rudd. Rudd, not bound by Shevin's opinion, promised an answer by Friday.

The jury's probe began when Rep. Marshall Harris, DMiami, said Gurney admitted in a December news conference that he violated the gift-reporting law.

Gurney said during the news conference that he learned in 1972 that $100,000 had been collected for his expenses by a secret fund-raising effort.

He said the money was not reported because he was not campaigning. Since announcing for re-election, Gurney has said he could not report the money because he does not know who contributed it.

The jury also asked Rudd if accepting and holding contributions before becoming a candidate violates state law.

The Miami Herald has reported that as much as $400,000 was collected during the then-secret 1971-72 fund-raising effort. Much of the money was from builders seeking influence with the Federal Housing Authority, the Herald has said.

Cuban Exiles Receive Death Threat Letters

MIAMI (AP) — Former Cuban President Carlos Prios and six other prominent Cuban exiles have received letters threatening death from a group claiming to have assasinated two Cuban exile leaders already, police reported.

Six of those who received letters were named on a list scribbled on a funeral home mirror when slain exile leader Jose de la Torriente was buried in Miami.

Torriente and New York City exile Arturo Rodriguez Vibes were shot earlier this month. A Miami-based group calling itself "Zero" claimed it killed them because they allowed a desire for personal gain to interfere with the effort to oust Fidel Castro from Cuba.

Police said six of the men threatened by a group live in the Miami area. The seventh lives in New York City.

In addition to Prios, the Miami men are Manolo Reyes, a television commentator; Roberto Fernandez-Miranda, brother-in-law of the late Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista; Mario Galeote, a Torriente associate; Manuel Artime, a planner in the Bay of Pigs invasion, and Tomas Garcia-Fueste, a radio station program director.

VEGA.
LOWEST PRICED CAR MADE IN AMERICA.

Vega has a lower list price than any other car made in the U.S.A.

VEGA $2380

That's the Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price for the Vega Notchback Coupe, including dealer new vehicle preparation charge. Destination charges, optional equipment, state or local taxes are additional. Other Vega models are available, of course. Such as the popular Vega Hatchback at $2492.

The quality and value of Chevrolet.

Vega makes as much sense for what it gives you as for what it doesn't cost you. Steel side guard beams in each door. Double-panel steel roof. Front disc brakes. A Full-Coil suspension for a good ride. A wide stance and low center of gravity for stability and good handling. Molded full foam front bucket seats.

And a few surprises for the money.

Carpeting. Floor-mounted shift and hand brake controls. A sporty-looking instrument panel. And our overhead cam aluminum block four-cylinder engine which is both economical and responsive.

29.8 m.p.g.

Yes, Vega Hatchbacks did get 29.8 miles per gallon. Results of recent Chevrolet fuel economy tests show an average of 29.8 miles per gallon for Vega at a steady speed of 55 miles per hour, the maximum Federal speed. In simulated suburban city driving (average speed 24 mph with 1.6 stops per mile) Vega averaged 26.5 mpg. Engineers conducted the tests at our Proving Grounds. Cars were Vega Hatchbacks equipped with standard engine and transmission and popular options. In all tests, cars carried the weight of two passengers. Of course the mileage you'll get depends on how and where you drive. Vega's fuel economy, coupled with its standard 16-gallon-rated fuel tank, offers the kind of driving range that makes lots of sense today.

A real value.

Vega is a comfortable, solid little car that's a lot of fun to drive and goes a long way on a gallon of gas. It just happens to have a very low price.

Dear Abby

Ugly Man Speaks Out

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I wish to speak for the ugly men in this world, including myself. Ugliness is a terrible curse. It makes us ugly people feel inferior to the point where we seriously consider suicide.

Our social lives are deficient, for few people seem willing to associate with physically ugly people. Without sex appeal we miss a very important part of life that the average person takes for granted.

My ugliness is not a bodily one. I am not grossly fat or painfully thin, neither am I deformed in any way. It's facial ugliness that has caused strangers to come up to me and say: "Gee, you're ugly." That is the God's truth. Can you imagine anyone being so cruel?

Abby, you could perform a great humanitarian service if you would devote a little space to a possible solution to this problem. Or perhaps a reader who has overcome his ugliness can tell me how he did it.

DOUBLE UGLY

DEAR DOUBLE: Did it ever occur to you that "ugliness"—like beauty, could lie in the eye of the beholder? Some of the world's most attractive and appealing people do not conform to the generally accepted concept of beauty, but that doesn't make them ugly.

The qualities that make one loved and wanted have nothing to do with the way his face is formed. Honesty, kindness, generosity, patience, compassion—all the virtues—can be developed. A beautiful character counts for more with people who count than physical beauty.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man who watches television while making love to his wife? My husband never makes love to me in the bedroom anymore, always on the sofa in the living room so he can watch TV, too. And it's usually on the spur of the moment, which is not to my liking.

He was a lot more considerate and loving when we were dating. He's so afraid he's going to miss something good on television it has practically ruined our sex life.

Will you please tell me how I can get him back in the bedroom?

DISSATISFIED

DEAR DIS: Move the TV into your bedroom!

DEAR ABBY: How can we thank you? Because of a message in your column telling runaways about a program called "Operation Peace of Mind," our runaway son let us know that he was alive and well. He is only 16 and had been gone for nearly a year.

Abby, please publish that toll free telephone number again so other runaways can let their parents know they are alive. It meant the world to us to hear from our son.

GRATEFUL IN SEATTLE

DEAR GRATEFUL: With pleasure: Runaways, call this toll-free number: 1-800-231-6946. An operator will telephone your parents anywhere in the United States and convey a message to them from you. There will be no lecturing or counseling. Your call will not be traced, and the only question asked of you is: "Do you need anything?" If you do, you will be told where you can obtain it free of charge. I repeat, no one will attempt to contact you or bring you home regardless of your age.

Runaways, please forget the past and send that message to your parents now. They will sleep better tonight, and so will you. God bless. (P.S. This wonderful program is staffed entirely by volunteers in Houston, and was aided by Gov. Briscoe of Texas.)

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212 for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

POLLY'S POINTERS

Doing Part During Crisis

DEAR POLLY—When taking a shower, I no longer turn the water on full blast, only about half as strong as I used to. This helps with the energy crisis and my utility bill has been visibly lower since I started doing this.—I.H.

DEAR POLLY—I put my wet clothes basket on the mat in front of a door and the dye from the mat soaked into the green-and-white checked tile floor. This left a red-looking stain that I have tried to remove with various household cleaners, full strength ammonia and lighter fluid but to no avail. I did not think the mat would run. There were no warnings or instructions on it when purchased. I do hope someone will have some suggestions as to how I might remove this stain from my slightly-cushioned tile floor of the type that does not require waxing.—SONJA.

DEAR POLLY— So many products now come packed in such heavy cardboard and plastic that is hard as glass. The guarantees, directions for use, replacement part numbers, etc., are written on the edge of the cardboard. This cardboard is too large for a file folder and too heavy to bend in half and also it often has to be damaged to even get the plastic cut enough to remove the item. It seems this pertinent information could be printed on a piece of paper inserted under the plastic covering so it could be saved for future reference.—RUTH.

DEAR POLLY— Since Mrs. W.S. finds toilet bowl cleaners and deodorizers that turn blue objectionable she could use bleach in the bowl. I have used it for years and find it works well.—MRS. A.H.

(POLLY'S NOTE—NEVER use a toilet bowl cleaner with the bleach.)

DEAR POLLY— Occasionally I have small visitors who need a booster seat to eat comfortably at the table. When our new telephone books were delivered I stacked the two old ones and covered them with a wood-grained design adhesive-backed paper. The resulting booster seat is over three inches tall, matches my maple chairs, is easy to wipe off, does not scar the chairs, is relatively easy to sit on and cost little.—MRS. J.A.S.

Pessimistic Pete looked over the dummy and remarked, "We have a pretty good play for seven, but since we are in six I had best try to insure my contract."

Pete took his ace of diamonds, led a low spade and ducked in dummy. West held the trick and led a second diamond, Pete, ruffed led a trump to dummy's ace, ruffed a low spade, cashed his queen and dummy's king of trumps, discarded his four losing clubs on four spades and claimed his contract.

The hand is worthy of considerable study. Seven would not be a bad contract. It would make against a better break in either major suit, but with the actual distribution of the East-West cards Pete's line of play was the only one that would bring in 12 tricks.

As a further point of interest, if West had been one of those super players who see all the cards before the opening lead is made, he would have plunked the 10 of clubs on the table. Pete would have been unable to find any play to make the slam.

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 26, 1974

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds you much too likely to look for conditions which make you feel imposed upon so you can complain. But by so doing, you are actually imposing upon others, so adopt a cheerful outlook instead.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Comfort and encourage kin, then entertain at home in the p.m. Get rid of whatever spoils the harmony that should be there.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Carry thorugh with duties, since they are important though boring. Postpone vital talks until Saturday. Get shopping, other errands done now.

DEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study monetary matters to solve such problems and increase income. A bigwig can help you get ahead faster. Accept invitation in p.m.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't get angry with others just because you're in the doldrums, then you can enjoy social pleasures in p.m. Some personal improvement can attact others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can remove obstacles to progress until noon, then get into studies important to your advancement. Evening can be romantically delightful.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Do what is necessary to gain your finest persona aims. Think over how to please your friends more now. Show more concern for their welfare and happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be conscientious, especially about credit and career affairs. Some entertainment at places you like with congenials is good in p.m. Don't argue.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Test your ideas for their real worrth now and put only the best to work. Push goals for greater success. Await a better time for enjoying company of friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Forget about going off on tangents and keep the promises made to others. Show true affection to mate in p.m., and she will be responsive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can get very angry with a partner who spoils one of your pet plans, but keep silent and tomorrow he will make amends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) While busy at work, plan how to have more enjoyment in life in the future. Get into the recreation of your choice in p.m.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be born with a sort of divine discontent. Teach early to rise above such negative thinking, then the life becomes successful, especially where serving the public is concerned, particularly with commodities. Be sure you are not harsh with this child who could be very resentful. Give a good religious training early in life. Teach to respect others, also.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Suicide Triangle Dangers

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.

Harry, as well as Marilyn Monroe and thousands of others, fell victim to the "Suicide Triangle." Follow the 3 rules below for preventing this said tragedy. Remember, suicide is the main cause of death among college students nowadays!

CASE A-616: Harry P., aged 19, was a quiet, introvertive college student.

"Dr. Crane," his roommate told me, "Harry was really shy about dating girls.

"And he seemed to prefer sitting at home, reading books, instead of going to ball games, dances or social events.

"He had moody spells and must have felt lonely.

"For he committed suicide last week!

"And left a note, saying since he had no friends, he thus had no interest in going on.

"Yet he was a brilliant fellow, making 'A' and 'B' grades, too!"

SUICIDE PSYCHOLOGY

We have an axion in psychology that states:

"You can't be active and meanwhile feel blue."

That means inactivity correlates with moodiness.

If the telephone were to ring just as a would-be suicide were ready to put a gun to his temple, his waiting over to take the phone call, might stop his autophypnosis about self-destruction.

Indeed, a good dose of Epsom Salts would likewise take his mind off the gun or bottle of sleeping pills.

And to play a game of tennis or compete in baseball, swimming, track or even take a hike, would activate his internal physiology.

Which, in turn, would change his melancholic outlook.

Did you ever hear of a person committing suicide while engaging in athletic events?

Ever see a suicide occur on a bowling alley, baseball diamond, tennis courts, etc.?

Have you ever read an account of anybody killing himself even while walking the dog?

Suicidal psychology can be charted by a triangle with these 3 corners:

(1) All alone;
(2) Inactive;
(3) Indulging in self-pity.

Change any one of those corners of that "suicide triangle" and you can prevent the most common cause of death among college students!

For example, being "All alone" means not just being without an immediate human companion.

It also includes the despair of a person who has lost his mate or his child or even his faithful pet dog.

"Being alone" likewise indicates lack of an active faith in God, for God's coworkers are "No, Never Alone," as the church hymn states.

When people are also indulging in self-pity, as by feeling sorry for themselves, they need both the ego-inflation of honest compliments from their comrades.

Which is why I stress the "Compliment Club" so frequently.

But they likewise should be extroverted in outlook till they are focussing on other people, projects or altruistic concerns, such as hospitals for crippled children.

When introvertive Silas Marner adopted little Eppie, he became wrapped up in her welfare rather than his own selfishness.

The final corner of that "suicide triangle" involves getting the potential victim into action.

Physical activity thus zooms your heart action and blood pressure, thus waking your sluggish brain from the auto-hypnotic trance that leads to suicidal notions.

So send for the "Compliment Club" booklet, enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

Tonight's TV Highlights

8-9 CBS THE WALTONS (Rerun) "The Odyssay" John-Boy delivers a baby tonight. He has a favorite hideaway, an abandoned old cabin where he likes to isolate himself and write. When he arrives, he finds a young woman about to give birth. She keeps him from going for help for fear her mother, whom she hasn't seen in some time, will learn of her condition. This raises the question of the child's legitimacy.

8-8:30 ABC CHOPPER ONE (Rerun) "The Boy Who Cried Wolf" The chopper boys have a tough assignment. They try to track down a ham radio operator who has been harassing the department with false emergency calls. Gets pretty frustrating at times.

8:30-9 ABC FIREHOUSE (Rerun) "Trapped" Grim drama tonight as firemen, headed by Captain Ryerson, are trapped in a tunnel under construction where high explosives are in danger of being set off

9-10 NBC IRONSIDE (Rerun) "The Hidden Man" A former POW returns home to a hero's welcome and a threat to his life. The soldier's father played a key role with polcie in jailing a mob boss. Then the father disappears. The mobster's son also targets the returning GI to pay for the mobster's jailing, and so Ironside has his work cut out.

9-11 ABC ABC THEATRE "Wedding Band" A moving drama which was critically well received in New York. It is an intense story about a racially mixed love affair in a southern town in the final months of World War II.

Tampa NFL Club Will Cost New Owners $16 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League begins considering ownership applicants for its new Tampa, Fla. franchise today and the bidders will have to come equipped with hefty bankrolls.

The league attached a record sports expansion team price tag of $16 million for the Tampa franchise granted Wednesday. Commissioner Pete Rozelle also said the NFL would add at least one other franchise to begin play along with Tampa in 1976. The same price, of course, applies.

The $16 million price represents a jump of nearly 100 per cent in the cost of an NFL expansion franchise. New Orleans, the last team added to the NFL, paid a reported $8.5 million in 1966. A year later Cincinnati was admitted to the old American Football League for somewhere between $7.5 and $8 million.

"A number of things have changed," said Rozelle. "Television for example. The new team becomes an equal partner in TV income immediately, diluting the shares of the other 26 teams."

Tampa was one of five cities under consideration for expansion by the NFL. Rozelle said that the other franchise the NFL adds this year will most likely come from the remaining four — Honolulu, Memphis, Phoenix and Seattle.

"We are relieved and elated," said Leonard Levy, former chairman of the Tampa Sports Authority and one of the city's representatives. "We felt that whatever criteria the NFL set for a franchise, we had to be seriously considered. We're very pleased."

The criteria included "stadium, weather, sports interest and growth potential," according to Rozelle. Tampa has plans to expand its current 47,000-seat stadium to 72,000.

The commissioner said that the league has been pursued by several groups seeking the Tampa franchise and had not sought ownership yet. He said general guidelines for the club would include at least 51 per cent individual ownership, local where feasible.

The commissioner said the owners wanted to give further thought to the other city or cities to be added. He said a final decision might come at their next meeting, scheduled for June 4 in New York. The current meetings continue today with a consideration of possible rule changes the chief topic on the agenda.

State Rolls Out 'Welcome Mat,' For 'Big League' Football Team

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Central Florida rolled out the welcome mat today for the National Football League, which Wednesday picked Tampa for an expansion franchise.

Across the state's midsection, business, civic and government leaders hailed the prospects for pro football in Tampa by 1976.

They predicted it will give Tampa a "big city" image, serve as a catalyst for other major sports activities and be an economic boost to the Gulf Coast.

"It's one of the greatest things that's ever happened to us," said acting Tampa mayor Dick Cheney said Wednesday. "It's like stepping out of the minor league into the big league," he said. "It really puts Tampa on the map as a sports town."

W. Scott Christopher, executive director of the Tampa Chamber of Commerce, praised the decision as a tremendous addition to the Florida Gulf Coast.

"It's hard to put a dollars and cents figure on what it will mean to us," he said. "But the conjecture is that it will attract people from 75-80 miles.

"During game time people will flood in here and everyone will eat and buy gasoline and some will stay overnight."

Curtis Ezell, tax collector for Hardee County to the southeast, agreed with the prognosis and added, "it will give people something to spend their money on besides taxes."

Bradenton, south of Tampa, will benefit by the overflow of visiting fans, said Mayor Albert Leach. In Sarasota, further south, Mayor Tony Saprito said, "I know there will be a lot of our people traveling to Tampa for the games. I'll be up there."

In Port Richey to the north, Mayor John Durney admitted, "I'm not much of a sports fan but I know many people in this area have waited a long time for a team."

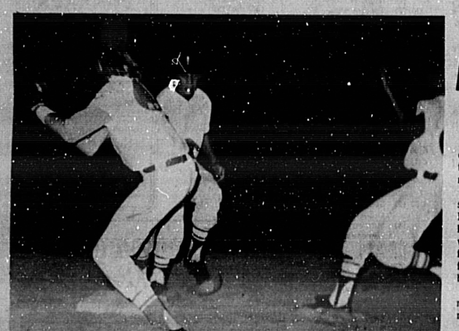
But people, especially football people, at the University of Tampa were a bit wary in their laudatory comments.

Coach Dennis Fryzel said it would take cooperation.

"As long as we both work together, it think it would be a positive motive for our program, which is my biggest concern," he said.

Sam Bailey, athletic director at the university, was more blunt: "No grocer likes to have a grocery store go up right next to him."

The Tampa Bay area claims 1.5 million residents. Tampa has a 46,000-seat stadium built in 1967 and plans are in the works to expand it 70,000 for the pro team.



TRIPLE PLAY COMING UP

A WEIRD combination of events led to this triple play action as Altamonte Springs took a 16-1 decision from Voska Air Condition in South Seminole Boys Basehall Pony Division action,Wednesday night. After a fly ball was caught in left field for the first out, two Altamonte players find themselves on third with the ball coming in. The Third, base runner was coming back to "tag up" and the second base runner had already tagged up, but got "tagged" himself by the ball.

Sports Briefs

Waldrop Honored

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Tony Waldrop, who ran seven straight sub-four-minute miles this winter, including a world indoor record 3:55, was awarded the Patterson Medal Wednesday, the highest athletic award at the University of North Carolina.

The award was established in 1924 in memory of Dr. Joseph Patterson of New Bern, N.C.

Team Tennis Trade

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Lobsters of the new World Tennis League have acquired the draft rights to Janet Newberry from the Baltimore Banners.

The Lobsters announced Wednesday they had acquired the rights to Miss Newberry in exchange to the rights to Paul Gerken and a high 1974 draft choice. Miss Newberry recently was named to the U.S. Federation Cup team.

'Foots' Gets Award

ATLANTA (AP) — Clarence "Foots" Walker, a 6-foot-1 guard who sparked West Georgia College to the NAIA basketball championship, Wednesday was named Georgia's top amateur athlete for 1973 by the Georgia Sportswriters Association.

The native of Southampton, N.Y., averaged 20 points in 1973-74, was chosen in the second round of the American Basketball Association draft.

Saint Defects

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints say defensive tackle Ron Billingsley has decided to join the Portland Storm of the World Football League when he finishes his 1974 option year with the Saints.

A spokesman for the National Football League club said Wednesday that Billingsley "was coming back off that knee injury, and with our line set with six good people we were trying to make a trade for him without success.

Kaline Climbing

DETROIT (AP) — Every time Al Kaline of the Detroit Tigers collects a few hits he seems to climb ahead of some famous predecessor on the all-time hit list.

In the few games this season he has surpassed Babe Ruth for 21st on the list and Mel Ott for 20th place. The designated hitter doubled in a key run in the 8-4 triumph over Minnesota on Wednesday night to pull within two hits of Frank Frisch for 19th place with 2,878 hits.

Matlock Joins 'Neels'

CHAPEL HILL, N.C.(AP) — John Matlock, defensive line coach at the University of Louisville last year, has joined the football staff at the University of North Carolina in a similar capacity, Coach Bill Dooley announced Wednesday.

Two Straight For Pirates

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It's not exactly what you'd call a winning streak ... but then, two in a row is better than nothing at all.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, preseason picks to win the National League's East Division flag, have looked like anything but winners thus far this season. In fact, it took them 14 games before they could put victories back to back.

They finally did it Wednesday night, using an old, reliable method ... Pirate Power!

Richie Hebner, Willie Stargell and Manny Sanguillen slugged the home runs that boosted the Bucs to a 5-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves ... and out of the basement for the first time this year.

In Wednesday's other National League games, Cincinnati edged the Chicago Cubs 1-0, Houston swamped St. Louis 9-4, Los Angeles defeated Philadelphia 6-1 and San Diego beat the New York Mets 4-3. Montreal's game at San Francisco was rained out.

"Two in a row! Wow! That's really a streak, isn't it?" Hebner said sarcastically after the victory. Hebner hit a first-inning solo shot, Stargell made it 3-0 in the fifth, the Braves got two runs in the sixth, one of them on Dusty Baker's homer, but Sanguillen wrapped it up in the eighth with a two-run clout.

Reds 1, Cubs 0

George Foster drew a bases-loaded, two-out walk from Bill Bonham in the bottom of the ninth inning to force home the only Cincinnati run — the one that beat Chicago.

Dave Concepcion doubled, Cesar Geronimo drew an intentional walk, Terry Crowley batted for winner Jack Billingham and forced Concepcion at third, Pete Rose popped up, then Joe Morgan singled to load the bases and bring Foster to the plate. The count went to 3-0, Bonham got a strike, then came the back-breaker.

Astros 9, Cards 4

Pitcher Dave Roberts slugged a two-run homer and Tommy Helms drove in four runs in the Astros' rout.

Dodgers 6, Phillies 1

Jim Wynn drove in two runs with a single and a homer and Willie Crawford tripled for two runs to kick Don Sutton's seven-hit pitching for Los Angeles.

Padres 4, Mets 3

Nate Colbert slugged a two-run homer in the first inning, then broke a tie with a one-out, bases-loaded grounder in the ninth for the Padres, dumping the Mets into the East Division basement.

Sports Spotlight

There are just so many ways you can build a stadium and all of them require a magical ingredient—money.

Such a short word to mean so much to a lot of folks.

The stadium, rather lack of one, at Seminole High has been a source of embarrassment to school officials and students for years. Even Oviedo, some Seminole High supporters say with a kind of "if they have one, why can't we" attitude, has a stadium. Lake Brantley, only in its second year as a high school, beat Seminole to the punch at football stadium groundbreaking time. Lyman's stadium is a fixture that gnaws at the collective Tribe pride. The newly proposed Lake Howell High School may come complete with stadium plans if my guess is correct. There's "money" in that part of the county, and "money" wants a stadium — a high school status symbol.

Reynolds' Horsepower

Since it appears each high school will have to furnish most of the power to build its own stadium, Seminole High Principal Don Reynolds is to be congratulated for helping to generate the needed enthusiasm for the project.

The drafting design technology class at the school, under the tutelage of Bob Schmidt, came up with some first class plans that reflect an imaginative view towards sports other than football, the stadium will end up more than just a Fall-only football facility.

With gymnastics, weightlifting and other optional areas underneath the 3,000 fan home-side grandstands, as well as a veritable treasurehouse of storage space, the stadium, rather, sports complex, will be a continuing asset to the school.

But the complex's value doesn't end at the school's borders. It continues to encompass the entire community. Graduation ceremonies, Easter Sunrise Services, church gatherings, and almost any other kind of event that would draw more people from this area than we have the space at present to seat them can use the facility.

Baseball Once Again

And returning the Sanford Municipal Stadium to its intended baseball use is also a boon to the city.

Nowhere in this county is there such a potential for night time baseball games, whether they are high school, junior college or little league, the stadium fits the bill.

There's also another team in town, The Sanford All-Stars, a locally run and organized Sanford semi-pro baseball team, comprised of local talent who presently play their Saturday and Sunday schedule at the Crooms High School baseball field.

Crooms, of course, is to be thanked for allowing the people use of the field, but how much nicer would it be if the All-Stars could work their magic—they're 3-0 right now—inside a real baseball facility.

City Leagues, Too

I'm also wondering why Jim Jernigan isn't already lobbying to return the stadium to baseball use as his very limited baseball and softball fields scattered throughout Sanford just barely are able to handle the load.

And if it rains, the recreation league schedule logjams, creating more hassles.

It's a thought, but it's worth presenting. Little leaguers, junior leaguers, senior leaguers and softball players alike also have a very solid reason to support the sports complex at the high school. If they can help build a stadium there, they may soon be playing in a decent field under the lights instead of a too-cramped and ill placed Pinehurst Park on 24th Street, where the seating from the landfill is causing the outfield to slump into trenches, or at the lakefront where parking is becoming impossible. At the municipal stadium these problems would be solved.

The Magic Ingredient

But the only way to build a stadium is to collect the money. The only danger to this is if the collection becomes too much of a burden on the average guy. I mean, one person can buy only so much chocolate candy in one month. The people heading the stadium drive are all pros. They are also all Sanford-oriented and recognize both the need for the stadium and the pitfalls such a fund-raising may wander into.

May will be the big month for the Drive, and that's just a few days away. Come on, Sanford, loosen up that wallet and maybe we'll have that stadium being built before fall.

Celtics Finish Long Road Back To Playoff Finals

BOSTON (AP) — The road back has been a long haul since Bill Russell retired as player-coach and a dynasty crumbled in 1969, but the Boston Celtics are ready once again to challenge for the National Basketball Association championship.

The Celtics advanced to the NBA playoff final for the first time since they won the title five years ago by defeating the New York Knicks 105-94 Wednesday night, taking the best-of-7 Eastern Conference series 4-1.

Now they move into a showdown with the mighty Milwaukee Bucks, led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. The first two games in the best-of-7 series will be played in Milwaukee Sunday afternoon and Tuesday night. Games No. 3 and 4 are scheduled for Boston May 3 and 5.

"It means a lot to beat the Knicks, but it is just another step along the way," Boston captain John Havlicek said. "Against the Bucks we're going to have to be on the run constantly. They like to set up their plays. As for Jabbar, maybe we'll have to let him get his points and try to shut off the others from scoring."

Havlicek, who played on six NBA championships in Boston during the heyday 1960s, was at his best against the Knicks. The Celtics thus avenged their elimination in the same playoff series last year when their team leader was injured. Hondo scored 33 points in the windup, averaging about 30 in the five games.

Tommy Heinsohn, who helped build the Boston dynasty as a player, is leading the Celtics as coach into the NBA finals for the first time.

The Knicks threatened to extend the series with Boston, taking a 52-45 halftime lead. However, the Celtics shook off foul trouble with a third-period spurt, capped by two threepoint plays by Big Dave Cowens for an 80-79 advantage.

Then Havlicek and Cowens took complete charge in the fourth period and the Celtics exploded for an easy triumph.

The old gag used to go something like this: Washington ... first in war, first in peace and last in the American League. Would you believe first in the American League?

Oh, it's not really the Washington Senators; it's the Texas Rangers. And it's not really the entire American League, just the AL West. And the lead is only a tiny one-half game over the world champion Oakland A's.

But there is the transplanted franchise in first place today, podnuh, thanks to Wednesday night's 3-1 triumph over the Boston Red Sox ... the first time the club has been in undisputed possession of first place in either Washington or Texas uniforms since 1948, according to publicist Burt Hawkins.

Elsewhere, New York's Graig Nettles tied the AL record for most April homers by swatting his 10th in the Yankees' 4-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals, the Chicago White Sox whipped the Milwaukee Brewers 7-2, the Baltimore Orioles edged the California Angels 4-3, the Detroit Tigers downed the Minnesota Twins 8-4 and Oakland trounced the Cleveland Indians 9-2.

The Rangers used a little luck to win Wednesday night's contest. Lenny Randle's catchable pop fly in the seventh inning became a tie-breaking two-run double when Boston left fielder Carl "Alphonse" Yastrzemski and center fielder Juan "Gaston" Beniquez couldn't decide who should catch it.

Yankees 4, Royals 3

Nettles' 10th home run in 17 games was the talk of New York but it was Roy White's double following a walk to Jim Mason in the seventh inning that produced the winning run. Thurman Munson hit a two-run homer for the winners.

White Sox 7, Brewers 2

Eddie Leon, hitless in 12 previous at-bats, singled in what turned out to be the winning run with his first hit of the season.

Orioles 4, Angels 3

Don Baylor doubled home the eventual winning run in the eighth inning and reliever Bob Reynolds choked off a California uprising in the ninth to save the triumph for Dave McNally.

Tigers 8, Twins 4

Jerry Moses and Aurelio Rodriguez delivered two-run triples for Detroit. Doubles by Gary Sutherland and Jim Northrup produced the first run in the opening inning and Willie Horton singled in another. Horton and Rodriguez singled in the sixth before Moses tripled and Rodriguez slammed his triple in the seventh.

A's 9, Indians 2

Sal Bando drove in five runs with a double, a sacrifice fly and his third homer, helping Ken Holtzman gain his first victory.

National League scores: Los Angeles 6, Philadelphia 1; San Diego 4, New York Mets 3; Houston 9, St. Louis 4; Pittsburgh 5, Atlanta 3; Cincinnati 1, Chicago Cubs 0. Montreal and San Francisco were rained out.

SPORTS FOCUS

By Ira Berkow

NEW YORK — (NEA) — With a collective sigh almost as rapturous and rippled as that of a victorious steed, the relieved officials of the Kentucky Derby are once again concentrating on sentimentality for their centennial at Churchill Downs in Louisville.

The only concern this year is that their beloved horse race may turn into the equine equivalent of the Boston Marathon. But this is small apples, as they say around shedrow, compared to the troubles in recent years.

There seems to be at this writing about 100 horses who are possible entries for the 100th running of this oldest continuous racing event in American thoroughbred history.

But at least the Dancer's Image controversy has subsided, if not altogether died, for all time.

And there is little frightened talk about a woman rider flowering up the Run for the Roses (as there was before Diane Crump became the first Derby "jockette" in 1970).

And there are no bomb threats or boycott threats by civil rights advocates using the Derby as a national vehicle for their views, as in 1967. So no state troopers have been called out.

Fans may sob with traditional sentiment into their mint julep glasses at the playing of "My Old Kentucky Home" as the horses, with little bouncy riders, canter onto the track for the seventh of nine races on May 4.

Perhaps there will even be some exceptional excitement as in 1961, when Carry Back came from the rear of the field to win. Or when Donerail, a longshot, won and paid $91.45, surprising all—including his owner and trainer who did not lay a bet.

Or like the win by the crooked-legged horse, Canonero II, or the thrilling majestic performances by Secretariat last year or Citation in 1948.

The embarrassments for Churchill Downs officials have been nearly as rife, however, as the thrills.

Probably the most famous and dirtiest finish in racing history was between jockeys Don Mead on Brokers Tip and Herb Fisher on Head Play in 1933. A famous photograph caught them hitting each other instead of their horses as they pounded to the finish line. Meade won. And Fisher continued the fight in the jockeys' quarters. Both were suspended by stewards for 30 days for roughhouse tactics.

There has never been anything like the "Drug-tore Derby," which began in 1967 and finally ended in 1973. Dancer's Image came in first ahead of Forward Pass. But a drug, butazolidin, was discovered in the bloodstream of Dancer's Image. "Bute" illegally supercharges a horse. Forward Pass was named the winner. But the owner of Dancer's Image, Peter Fuller, fought the decision for 5½ years, winning in a local court only to suffer a final reversal in a higher court.

Certainly the most terrifying Derby was the first horse race to be used as a sounding board for a cause unrelated to the event itself.

In early 1967, there was an "open-housing" conflict in Louisville. Local blacks were lodging complaints that they were not allowed to move from ghettos into finer neighborhoods. Dr. Martin Luther King had been in Louisville and organized peaceful demonstrations and talks with community leaders.

Dr. King left town. And in the week prior to the Derby, meetings were held by civil rights leaders. Their slogan was, "No Housing, No Derby." There were boycott and demonstration threats.

On the Tuesday before the Derby, during the running of the race called "The Derby Trial," five black youths mysteriously appeared at the head of the home stretch. They began to stroll up the track. The horses were on the far side. As the horses got closer, the youths kept walking with no show of concern.

The horses turned into the home stretch. Observers were shocked. Cries stuck mutely in the throat. The scene was weird and horrifying and totally unbelievable. Would the interlopers be trampled?

Almost instinctively, all five dodged under the inside railing as the horses pounded past. They were chased and rounded up by the policemen.

It was believed that the youths were acting independently but that they were also protesting the open-housing restrictions.

The night before the race, a sit-in group of 40 was arrested at the front gate of the Churchill Downs entrance. Some 2,500 state and local troopers were called out the next day.

Despite Dr. King's arrival and vows that there would be no disruption of the race, as an act of good faith, only some 80,000 people showed up for the Derby (traditionally there is 100,000 in attendance).

Perhaps, as an act of good faith of sorts, Derby officials made a nice ceremony of moving the grave of Isaac Murphy, the black jockey who won the first Derby, from a tumbledown site in Lexington, Ky., to a manicured cemetary. However, some civic rights sympathizers wondered why there have been no black jockeys in the Derby since 1930.

Derby Day 1967 dawned dark and dank, and stayed that way. Except for a little demonstration march through downtown Louisville on Saturday morning, all remained normal for Derby Day—prices stayed at their customary gouging levels, revelers acted idiotic, dreamers queued at the wickets.

It turned out to be the kind of nonexplosive day that Derby officials pray will be recreated on this centennial.

Bruins Face Pivotal Test

CHICAGO (AP) — The trailing Boston Bruins skate perhaps the pivotal game of their Stanley Cup National Hockey League semifinal playoffs against the surging Chicago Black Hawks tonight.

The Hawks moved into a 2-1 series edge Tuesday night with a dramatic 4-3 sudden-death overtime triumph at the Chicago Stadium.

"This is the big one tonight," said Bruin Coach Bep Guidolin. "But we think we can win it. Then it becomes a best two-out-of-three series and we play two of those games in Boston."

Even the Black Hawks cautiously appraised their chances of sweeping to a commanding 3-1 advantage in the best-of-7 playoff series, a springboard into the Cup championship round against the winner of the Philadelphia Flyer-New York Ranger semifinal round.

"I know we're ahead, but a series between these two teams figures to go all the way," said Hawk veteran Stan Mikita, the game-breaker in Chicago's come-from-behind victory Tuesday night.

As the Hawks trailed 3-1 in the third period, Mikita banged in one goal at 11:38 and then, on a six-man Hawk attack with Chicago's net unminded, scored with 42 seconds left to force the overtime.

In the sudden death extra session, Jim Pappin sent the capacity Chicago Stadium crowd into hysterics with the winning Hawk goal at 3:48.

"That game may have hurt the Bruins," said Hawk winger Cliff Koroll, "but they're too great a team to fold. They'll be back tonight just as tough as ever."

The Hawks won the series opener at Boston last Thursday 4-2 behind the superb goaltending of Tony Esposito, but then the Bruins exploded Sunday on their home ice for an 8-6 triumph.

Game No. 5 will be played in Boston Sunday. If a sixth game is needed, it will be played in Chicago next Tuesday night.

Laver Maybe Older, But Getting Better

By The Associated Press

Rod Laver continues to show that he's not only getting older, but he's getting better.

The Australian ace won his 17th straight match Wednesday, rallying for a 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 decision over Italy's Antonio Zugarelli in a $50,000 World Championship Tennis Green Group event in Denver.

Laver, who is seeking his fourth consecutive title on the Green Group tour, took the match with a single service break in the second game of the final set.

Others who had luck in the high altitude were Mark Cox of Great Britain who defeated Onny Parun of New Zealand 7-6, 6-3; Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn. who beat Haroon Rahim of Pakistan 6-3, 6-4 while Eddie Dibbs of New York eliminated Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-2, 7-6.

In a WCT Blue Group tournament, top-seeded John Newcombe of Australia easily defeated Buster Mottram of England 6-3, 6-2 in the second round of the $50,000 Holton Tennis Classic at St. Louis.

Third-seeded Alex Metreveli of Russia also had an easy time, defeating Jaime Fillol of Chile 6-4, 6-4.

Ismail El Shafei survived a flare of temper in the opening set to defeat sixth-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico 6-3, 6-4. Five-time Davis Cup performer Clark Graebner advanced over Sid Ball of Australia 7-6, 0-6, 6-3; while Dick Crealy of Australia disposed of Zeljko Franulovic of Yugoslavia 6-1, 7-6.

In women's tennis, Helen Gourlay of Tasmania upset an injured Evonne Goolagong of Australia to advance to the quarter-finals in the Philadelphia stop of the women's pro tennis tour.

Miss Gurley won 6-3, 3-6, 7-6 against Miss Goolagong who played with torn leg ligaments. Miss Goolagong later defaulted in a doubles round.

Lyman 9 Clobbers Pioneer Team, 11-1

By DOUG STORUM
Herald Staff Writer

The last time Lyman's Bob Keane and Oak Ridge's Dave Rodgers faced each other as pitching opponents, they dueled 10 innings before the Greyhounds won.

This time around, Lyman didn't give the Pioneer hurler a chance to get his "second wind," clipping him for seven early runs. Before two full innings had elapsed, Lyman was resting on a cushiony 8-0 lead en route to marking up an 11-1 Metro Conference win.

It was a two-hit, nine-strikeout performance from reliever Mike Simmons, who spelled Keane in the third inning.

Shortstop Bob Costantine got three hits in four appearances, and Hal Staats, poking his third home run of the season and second in two games, spurred the Greyhounds to their 12th conference win and 14th overall victory.

In a five-run second inning, left fielder Ed Callan delivered the big blow, a two-out two-run double that followed singles by Staats, Costantine and right fielder Clay Phillips' run scoring double.

Oak Ridge's lone run came in the third when the Pioneers' leading hitter, Danny Allie, doubled and scored on an error. Simmons then came in with runners on first and third, fanned Terry Reynolds and got third baseman Mark Combs to fly out to left.

Simmons, in 4 and two-thirds innings, struck out the side twice, in the fourth and again in the final inning.

Lyman faces Orlando Boone Friday at Tinker Field for its regular season finale prior to district play offs.

Elder's Masters Invite Brings Mixed Reactions

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Bitterness drips through Charles Sifford's words when he talks about not having the chance Lee Elder is getting to become the first black player in the Masters golf tournament.

"Some people are luckier than others and he seems to be the lucky one," said Sifford, in Tallahassee for today's opening of the $90,000 Tallahassee Open.

Elder's victory last week in the Pensacola Open qualified him for the 1975 Masters and also for the $200,000 Tournament of Champions at Lacosta, Calif., where most of the bigname pros are this week.

"I'm glad it's over with," said Sifford. "Eventually, it had to happen. He's just lucky to win when they changed the rules."

The Masters used to complete its field by taking the point leaders of the Professional Golfers Association tour. The change from point leaders to tournament victors didn't come until this decade, wiping out previous tournament titles by Sifford and Pete Brown, another golfer.

As it turned out, said Brown, "the change made it tougher — Elder and I could have made it before this under the old point system."

Jim Dent, another member of the handful of touring black players, called Elder's victory "a great thing and he deserved every bit of it."

Brown, slowed the past couple of years with a back ailment, said Elder's appearance in the Masters would encourage young blacks to take up the sport.

"What we really needed was a standout golfer like we have football and basketball players for youngsters to look up to," he said.

But Sifford disagreed.

"First of all, it's kind of hard for blacks to get started in golf. They don't have any (secondary) schools that have golf and most of the blacks — and I don't consider myself because I will be 51 years old (on June 3)."

Sifford said he expected Elder to be the first black in the Masters because "Elder has been playing better golf than most of the blacks — and I don't consider myself because I will be 51 years old (on June 3)."

Reporter 'Sees All' On Trip To Local Nudist Colony

By JEAN PATTESON
Herald Staff Writer

The gate was high, wide, and made of solid metal sheeting. Behind it lay the nudist camp — the first I'd ever visited — and my emotions were in a turmoil.

"Dial O," read a sign above the telephone on a post.

Jumbled thoughts of secret passwords and obscene telephone calls flashed through my mind, but I dutifully dialed "O". My carefully prepared speech of instruction vanished when a male voice on the other end answered "Yes?"

"I...I'm new," I stammered.

"Well fine. Just drive right in and you'll see the office at the end of the road in the large double trailer," was the courteous reply.

The heavy gates swung open.

A trailer park. Pine trees. In the distance a lake.

Was I in the right place? Cypress Cove, on the south side of Kissimmee, were my directions. But this was just a peaceful, sunny trailer park.

Then I saw the girl. High on a ladder cleaning the windows of her trailer. She had no clothes on.

Just like that — cleaning windows.

Stark naked!

It was a strange feeling.

A family rode by on their bicycles. Their suntans were deep, even and all-over.

I swallowed hard, steadied the car, and let out a low, "Wow!"

A foursome sauntered across the road, tennis racquets under their arms, tennis shoes their only attire. Kids raced among the trees, bare bottoms flashing in the sunlight. Adults sat in groups, sunning themselves, playing cards, barbecuing lunch.

An ordinary, harmonious, summer afternoon scene...except everyone was naked.

Of course, I had expected naked bodies, but the bare facts of the matter were still something of a shock. I couldn't help smiling though; somehow the whole scene was delightfully absurd.

BEHIND THIS GATE
... It's a 'revealing' world

The real surprise was how soon it all seemed perfectly natural. I started feeling a bit embarrassed and conspicuous about being overdressed—in shorts, halter top and sandals!

The office was cool and rather dim after the blinding sunlight. A coke machine, an ice cream freezer, and a man behind a counter with his shirt off.

He gave me a friendly wave and turned to get some forms from a filing cabinet.

His rear was smooth, sun-brown, and bare!

It wasn't quite as easy to feel comfortable in the close confines of the office as outside in the Garden of Eden atmosphere of the park. My eyes were glued to the literature.

Cypress Cove is a member of the American Sunbathers Association (SAA), I learned. A $3 fee would give me access to all the camp's recreational facilities for the day — tennis, volleyball, the lake and beach, sailing and canoeing.

A $20 fee would gain me access to all SAA camps at a reduced daily fee.

Full membership is $140 annually.

The camp offers tent and trailer campsites, rental trailers, a dining room and clubhouse.

"We're just like any other recreational club, only we don't wear clothes," the man explained — unnecessarily. He urged me to see how I liked it, to go out and swim, sunbathe, join a volleyball game. If, after a couple of visits, I decided I'd be coming often, we could talk about membership.

As I turned to leave, he called a warning. "The sun's pretty fierce out there, so if you usually wear a bikini, watch out for the light patches don't get too sunburned!"

'I saw the girl. High on a ladder cleaning the windows of her trailer. She had no clothes on.

'Just like that - cleaning windows

'Stark Naked!'

I parked the car in the shade and sat awhile.

Then I got out, standing awkwardly behind the half-closed door.

Could I go through with it? Just shed my clothes in full view of a hundred strangers and walk out across the grass?

It was a paralyzing moment, and I nearly blew it by leaping back into my car and racing headlong for the big iron gates.

But then I noticed no one was watching me. It didn't matter to anyone there whether I stayed or left: whether I stripped or wrapped myself in an overcoat.

"What the hell!" I exclaimed out loud, threw my clothes onto the car seat, grabbed a towel, and scooted out across the endless lawn. Diving precipitously into the lake, I struck out wildly for a raft floating gratefully far from the crowded beach.

And then, as I swam, all my tension, embarrassment and doubts whether I could, or even wanted, to go through with it, seemed to drain away with the exercise and cool water.

I sprinted the last few yards to the raft, hoisted myself up out of the water, and stretched out on the smooth, warm boards in sudden abandon.

The sun felt good.

From my vantage point I could see the whole camp. Kids frolicked in the shallows and jumped from the dock. Adults paddled about in red plastic kayaks or lay sunbathing on bright towels. A hectic game of volleyball was in session. An artist sat in the shade with his easel and brushes.

Several things surprised me. By far the greatest proportion of nudists there were older people—white haired retirees, they seemed to be. Also, there was a definite sense of restraint, a kind of respect for the next person's privacy, strange as that may sound.

No couple so much as held hands; certainly there was none of the cuddling and embracing one sees every two or three yards along Daytona or New Smyrna beaches.

I learned about half the members were locals, the rest tourists. They came from all walks of life, and a wide variety of professional and educational backgrounds.

In fact, the only thing most of them seemed to have in common was a desire to get away someplace where they could shed the fabric trappings of civilization and enjoy exercise, companionship and a good, stinging sunburn in the raw.

Aluminum Wire Linked To House Fires

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Two recent Altamonte Springs home fires have been linked to aluminum wiring by Fire Chief Tom Seigfried who says the blazes fit the pattern of fires across the nation which have led to county and national efforts to ban the controversial copper wire substitute.

Altamonte's discovery came in the wake of revelations earlier this week that Longwood's building code, passed in 1959, does not specifically mention aluminum wiring, thus allowing builders to use the breakable material in homes.

Seminole County Commission Chairman John Kimbrough, leader for several months of county efforts to ban aluminum wire, today called Seigfried's findings on two home fires "good bad news."

Kimbrough said Altamonte's findings will add impetus to the county's scheduled May 15 public hearing to consider banning aluminum wire for homes.

"What they're saying is that they have observed the very same thing we in the county have observed — that is, that unless aluminum wiring is properly installed by specialists you will have problems.

"We're not dealing with theory but facts, and the fact is there's problems and that's why I want to get rid of aluminum wire."

Almost Convinced

Mayor Norman Floyd, receiving his fire chief's report, said "I'm just about convinced aluminum wiring is unsafe for inside wiring," adding he has seen many stories and polls indicating the wire is dangerous.

Amending the cities' codes will take some time, however, he predicted.

A Herald poll of Seminole cities indicates most are awaiting the results of the county's public hearing to debate banning alminum wire for home use.

The commission recently ordered a weekly building department report on aluminum wire violations turned up by inspectors.

While no violations have been reported in the past two weeks, the firm owned by the county electrical board chairman, Buddy Eidel, a leader in the fight against the commission, was cited for six aluminum wire violations in the first weeks of reporting.

Not depending on the county's decision are Segfried and Floyd, who have called on city council to consider banning aluminum wire inside homes, and to beef-up all city building, electrical and fire codes.

Siegfried said more than 400 house fires across the nation have been directly attributed to power surges, jumps in current and wrong type connectors used in aluminum wiring installations.

Easy To Make

"The way aluminum wiring must be installed is so precise that errors are easy to make," Siegfried said.

Offering mild dissent is City Building inspector Murray Hanson, who claims "Aluminum wiring by itself is not as great in its transgression as faulty installation.

"I would not recommend its ban completely, but rather urge greater scrutiny and policing in the installation and types of alloys and devices used," he said.

Meanwhile, the cities of Winter Springs and Sanford are waiting to see what come of a county commission public hearing at 7 p.m., May 14 on the use of aluminum wiring.

The county, stung by an October grand jury report charging hazards to life and property, paused a beefed-up electrical ordinance, and escalated its battle to investigate aluminum wire use by contractors.

County Commissioner Sid Vihlen, himself an electrical contractor, says he is evaluating the county's proposed ordinance with several electrical contractors and experts in the field.

He said that while aluminum wiring in small sizes is definitely giving troubles, there is less trouble seen with larger size aluminum wiring in some areas.

Vihlen said he will recommend alternatives to the county commissioners next Tuesday and will point out the economics involved with a complete ban on aluminum and the fact that there is a shortage of copper.

Amended Code

Casselberry city council Monday night on advice from long-time Electrical Inspector Otto Umlauf agreed to amend its code to require apartment complexes with more than three apartments to use copper romex, confining aluminum wiring use to apartment building entrances.

Romex is a non-metallic coated copper wiring insulated with various types of plastic, Umlauf said.

"If aluminum is properly put in, it can be safe, "Umlauf said today, "but aluminum has a better chance of giving trouble. Copper is a better conductor and it does not expand as much."

Ray Bradshaw, Winter Springs building official, said "Aluminum if installed right works and Winter Sprigs has had no fires attributable to the aluminum wiring.

Follows County

He added that the city will however have to go along with whatever the county does. "I do not feel aluminum wiring should be abolished because of costs," Bradshaw said, pointing out copper wiring is very expensive.

Both Casselberry and Winter Springs have adopted the Seminole County electrical code.

Sanford, according to Electrical Inspector Bill Braceland, is also waiting to see what the county does.

"I feel aluminum does the job if it is installed properly," Braceland said. "The installation is the whole crux of the problem. When aluminum is installed proper connectors and receptacles must be used."

No fires in Sanford have been attributed to aluminum wiring," Braceland said.

"I'm biased," Oviedo Building Inspector Bud Claxton said today. "I personally feel that aluminum wiring is inferior to copper, but I also recognize that not enough copper wiring is available for its exclusive use."

Not In Oviedo

He added that Oviedo has adopted the National Electrical Code and this does allow aluminum wiring. "If aluminum wiring is faulty and troublesome that would show up after it is in use."

Longwood Fire Chief Roy LaBossiere said he has observed that contractors using aluminum wiring are buying outlets designed for copper wiring.

you're overdue at the library.

How long has it been since you sailed the high seas with an explorer from the past or came face to face with the king of the jungle? When was the last time you sat down with Mark Twain or circled the world in a traveling balloon? You can do all this by simply opening a book.

The library is filled with hundreds of books just waiting to be read. But that's not all. Many libraries have films that can show you anything from man's first flight across the ocean to a Charlie Chaplin talkie. You can sit down and listen to a symphony or a jazz session in the music section where records are kept. In some libraries you can even check out a Picasso print or work by another famous artist. You can experience a million things you never thought you could just by stepping into the library. And you can also help it grow.

Now with a $100 deposit in a new or present savings account, the Atlantic Banks will create a book fund that will be given to the participating library of your choice. To remember your gift your name will be displayed in one of the books given to the library.

Suspension Of Dividend Demoralizes The Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The suspension of its quarterly dividend payment by Consolidated Edison is more than just another demoralizing blow to the stock market. The big utility is also a symbol of an embattled industry.

Environmentalists have forced delays in plant construction. The increase in energy prices caused operating costs to skyrocket. The depressed condition of financial markets prevented it from raising cash.

Moreover, its customers, who are equally pressed, have tended to become slow payers, a problem that many businessmen around the country will recognize. Payment delinquencies are on the rise generally.

And what is Consolidated Edison's solution? Well, there is no over-all solution, of course, but one that has become rather common among giant companies is to lean on government for assistance, in the name of the public good, of course.

Unlike the Penn Central and Lockheed and some airlines, which sought aid from the federal government, Consolidated Edison seeks to resolve some of its problems by transferring ownership of one or more plants to the state power authority.

All these facets of the utility's problems also can be found in other areas of American enterprise — the environmental haggling, inflated costs, inability to raise money, slow-pay customers, the high cost of borrowing.

They are the business challenges of the day, and while businessmen are always facing and attempting to overcome challenges, many of them would agree that the set they now face makes them wonder if their abilities are sufficient.

Con Ed, as it is familiarly but not warmly called by customers, had been paying dividends every quarter since 1885. Of late that dividend, of $1.80 a share, represented more than a 9 per cent return.

Dividend consistency of that kind is what attracts investors, as opposed to speculators. Con Ed might have been an unexciting stock but it was safe and you could depend on it for steady income — until 1974.

In breaking that 89-year-old record, Con Ed probably has destroyed that feeling of investor security for years to come, not only for itself but for a lot of other utilities to which it might be compared.

Con Ed always could count on raising money too, it seemed, because it was the only electric utility in the biggest city of America, assured of income and growth and therefore of the ability to earn money, pay back loans.

But with the prime rate over 10 per cent even Con Ed balked. It could, as an alternative, go into the equity market by selling stock, but even at a relatively low price of $18, now around $12, there was a question of attracting buyers. Stock markets aren't what they used to be; there are fewer buyers.

Spanish Government Closes Gate To 'Rock'

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Rock looms high above the Straits of Gibraltar, gateway to the Mediterranean. Today it might as well be an island, rather than a peninsula — Spain has cut its links to the mainland. Gibraltarians, how-ever, seem determined to "muddle through."

By FENTON WHEELER

GIBRALTAR (AP) — Armed with binoculars and sometimes walkie talkies, a line of Gibraltarians gathers at the rusty green gate to Spain on Sunday afternoon.

They wave to relatives standing behind a Spanish barricade erected 100 yards from the border at La Linea.

"Listen, mother," shouts a woman in Spanish, "write me and I'll see you here next week."

A young, mustached Gibraltarian holds up the newest born. "Here's Manolo," he yells, straining to hear an answer.

Nearly five years after the Spanish government closed the border between Spain and the Gibraltar peninsula by locking the green gate, "the Rock" seems more Britain than the House of Commons.

Its 19,902 permanent residents — descendants of Italians as well as British and Spaniards — sound more determined than ever to stay beneath the British umbrella rather than accept Spanish sovereignty.

"We can hold out indefinitely," says Sir Joshua Hassan, the chief minister elected to run Gibraltarian affairs in the British crown colony.

"Nobody in Gibraltar trusts the Spanish," says opposition leader Murris Xiberras. "As long as Spain insists on sovereignty, we can't even start talking."

The last attempt by the two countries to negotiate ended unsuccessfully more than a year ago.

Gibraltar, captured by British and Dutch forces in 1704 during the War of the Spanish Succession, was ceded to Britain by Spain in the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713.

Gen. Francisco Franco, Spanish chief of state, alleges that a series of violations of the treaty by Britain over the years invalidate the agreement. The Franco government says that geographically, politically and legally Gibraltar belongs to Spain.

Britain says it will never surrender the colony against the wishes of Gibraltarians. In a 1967 referendum, 44 Gibraltarians voted yes for Spanish sovereignty while 12,138 said no. Politicians say the results would be the same if another election were held today.

Spain began placing restrictions on the peninsula before the referendum. Some Gibraltarians date the "campaign" from 1954, the year Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh visited the Rock. That's when Spain began making it difficult for Spanish workers holding daytime jobs in Gibraltar to get to work. From that time, the Spanish work force decreased until, in 1969, Spain withdrew the work permits of 4,700 Spaniards. Most worked as domestics or at the British military installation, Gibraltar's big employer.

Spain closed the land frontier at La Linea to all vehicle traffic in 1906. It restricted civil air traffic in 1967, closed Gibraltar to tourists coming from Spain in 1968 and stopped ferry service from Algeciras, two miles across the bay, in the same year. It also ended telephone and telex communications between Gibraltar and Spain.

The Spanish government says the restrictions are strictly legal, carrying out the letter of the law of the 1713 treaty.

Gibraltar still has ferry and air connections with Tangier, across the straits in Morocco, and a once-a-week flight to London and Madrid. But the old days of climbing into the family automobile and driving across to see Spanish relatives or a bullfight are long gone.

Why Onassis Chose New Hampshire For Oil Refinery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tax and regulatory advantages, plus New England's thirst for oil, apparently made New Hampshire a preferred site when an Aristotle Onassis corporation set out to build an oil refinery.

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The energy crisis dramatized what New Englanders already knew: they are major consumers of oil, but they are also at the end of the pipeline, totally dependent on outside suppliers for refined petroleum products.

So when Aristotle Onassis flew to New Hampshire last December, saying he was "not a Greek bearing gifts," he clearly expected a warm welcome for his proposal to build a giant oil refinery.

He encountered a mixture of enthusiasm and bitter suspicion.

Despite technological improvements, refineries produce noise and odors. Environmentalists have fought suggestions that one be built along the tourist-rich New England coast.

Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire has balked at suggestions from fellow New England governors and others that the six states join in a regional effort to solve the area's oil supply problems.

Since his inauguration two years ago, Thomson has been actively searching for someone to build an oil refinery in the state. He says it would be a boon to the economy and a solution to the energy shortage.

Industry engineers say any refinery in New England must be built near the coast to minimize the cost of piping crude oil from offshore tankers. New Hampshire is landlocked except for an 18-mile strip of rocks and beach that touch the Atlantic in the southeast corner of the state.

Five major oil companies have looked at the area and gone away, but Onassis decided it was worth trying.

He had the unqualified backing of Thomson and of William Loeb, publisher of the Manchester Union Leader, the state's largest and quite powerful newspaper.

New Hampshire has relatively little land-use legislation to protect the environment and ecology of the seashore. And there is no personal income or sales tax in the state.

Official studies indicate that the wording of the state's real estate tax law would exempt most of a refinery complex from property taxes, and tax revenue most likely would be derived from the state's 7 per cent tax on corporate profits—if the refinery makes a profit.

Industry spokesmen say refineries generally are the least profitable link in the oil producing and marketing chain. One called them "necessary evils that the companies are forced to build only because they can't sell crude oil at gas stations."

Onassis became a millionaire at 25 by shipping oil, not refining it, and has made hundreds of millions since by putting together one of the largest independent tanker fleets in the world.

Twenty years ago, Onassis signed a deal with the late king of Saudi Arabia that would have guaranteed him the right to transport at least 10 per cent and as much as 80 per cent of that oil-rich Arab nation's crude production. Several major oil and shipping companies, with the aid of the United States and Britain, combined forces to make him break the contract that would have given him a stranglehold on the market.

Onassis continued to make money on his fleet by putting some tankers under long-term charter to the major oil companies and retaining others for the "spot market," hiring out ships to haul a single cargo on a single trip.

Industry representatives say the spot market can be extraordinarily profitable but also risky. "You can lose your shirt if you build a supertanker, and then can't keep it full," said a spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute.

In 1968, Onassis tried again to guarantee constant cargoes for his tankers by promising to build a refinery and power complex for his native Greece. In exchange for building the $400 million plant, he would have had exclusive control over the refinery's oil shipments.

But the deal fell through two years ago when Onassis couldn't deliver a total financing package or assure the refinery a source of low-priced Arabian crude oil.

Olympic's proposal for New Hampshire would be even more expensive—an estimated $600 million for a 400,000 barrel-per-day complex—but with it Onassis would get a deepwater port on the Atlantic capable of servicing the supertankers.

Military Rebellion Erupts In Portugal

LISBON, Portugal (AP)—Armed groups of officers and soldiers seized radio and television studios in the Portuguese capital early today in an attempt to overthrow the government.

Reports reaching Madrid said the rebel movement had taken control of the government without resistance anywhere in Portugal.

The reports said rebel tanks besieged the army ministry in downtown Lisbon and that four ministers—those of the interior, army, navy and air force—who had taken refuge in the building managed to slip away through a hole they made in the wall.

The reports said government troops refused to obey their commander when he ordered them to open tank fire on rebellious troops in the center of Lisbon.

Reports said the revolt had the support of 29 regiments and that most of the leaders were young majors and captains.

Moving swiftly in the predawn darkness and benfiting by surprise the rebels took over the studios of Emissora Nacional, the national radio station, the studio of the Portuguese radio and television, and the studio of a private radio station, Radio Clube Portugues in the city proper.

Others in the coup apparently seized a transmitter of Radio Clube Portugues about 30 miles southeast of Lisbon on the other side of the Tagus River.

Shortly after the seziure the armed groups began broadcasting from Radio Clube, urging troops and national guardsmen and police to avoid bloodshed and urging the populace to remain at home.

The broadcast said that a "military movement" under the leadership of the armed forces was liberating Portugal from its present regime.

Activity throughout the city appeared generally normal. Despite the appeals to stay at home, traffic appeared as dense as ever, streetcars and buses were operating, and most of the shops were open.

The dissidence boiled over last month after President Americo Thomaz, an ultra-conservative admiral, forced Caetano to fire the armed forces chief of staff, Gen. Francisco Costa e Gomes, and his deputy, Gen. Antonio de Spinola.

Spinola, a hero of the 13-year-old war in Africa and one of Portugal's most popular soldiers, wrote that military victory could never be won and the government should seek a political solution, possibly by setting up a commonwealth system.

U.N. Condemns Israeli Raids

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Israel says it will continue to raid southern Lebanon in retaliation for guerrilla attacks from there despite the United Nations Security Council's seventh condemnation of such action.

The council on Wednesday night adopted a resolution condemning Israel for its April 12 raid on six Lebanese villages in retaliation for the guerrilla massacre of 18 Israelis the day before in the village of Qiryat Shmona. Lebanon said the Israelis killed three civilians and kidnaped 13 others.

The vote was 13-0, with China and Iraq not participating. It was the council's seventh condemnation of a retaliatory Israeli raid into Lebanon.

The resolution also condemned "all acts of violence, especially those which result in the tragic loss of innocent civilian life." But the council by a vote of 7-6 rejected an American amendment specifically including the attack at Qiryat Shmona in the condemnation.

Israel's delegation walked out of the council chamber just before the voting. Chief Delegate Yosef Tekoah said the resolution was a "gross miscarriage of justice" because it did not condemn the Palestinian guerrillas. He warned again that "Israel will continue to hold the Lebanese government responsible for any armed attacks organized or perpetrated in Lebanon."

The United States voted for the resolution after the defeat of its amendment. U.S. Ambassador John A. Scali said despite the failure of his attempt to get specific mention of Qiryat Shmona, "we believe the resolution ... did condemn all violence, whatever its origin, including the tragedy at Qiryat Shmona."

It was the third time the United States has voted against Israel in the council.

'Forced Labor'

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A court stenographer who fell behind in his work has been jailed along with his notes and dictating machine to complete a backlog of trial transcripts.

Dominic Roselli, 27, has been in Montgomery County prison since Monday. Roselli, who lost his job three months ago for not getting his work done, was arrested on a civil contempt charge and is sentenced to jail until he catches up.

"He's been kept in a cell away from the other prisoners so he can work without being disturbed," a county spokesman said.

Karl Wallenda

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Karl Wallenda crossed the street in a most unusual fashion — 80 feet above the ground.

The 69-year-old aerialist made the 500-foot walk on a wire stretched from the roof of the Onondaga County War Memorial to a construction crane, crossing over a city street and a museum. His high wire stroll was to promote a circus opening Thursday.

IRA Officials Caught

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British army claimed it captured two top officers of the Irish Republican Army late Wednesday night. The army said Con McHugh, 37, and Dominic O'Neil, 36, were in a car that was stopped at a checkpoint in West Belfast. Army sources said McHugh was a top operations officer on the staff of the IRA's Belfast brigade, and O'Neil was also a member of the brigade staff. McHugh was captured once before, in October, 1972.

Some Freedom

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man serving a prison sentence in the shooting and robbing Gen. John C. Stennis had a little vacation from prison life until officials realized he'd been freed accidentally.

John S. Marshall, 24, was in court Monday and had three other charges dismissed in connection with the shooting of the Mississippi Democrat in January 1973. After his court appearance Marshall went free, and one official said the dismissal of the charges apparently was misinterpreted.

Underwater Xanadu May Perish As Man Advances

KEY LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Relaxing in the old Caribbean Bar, Humphrey Bogart's hangout in the movie "Key Largo," diver-biologists spun a tale of the life and death of a coral reef.

Some 5,000 years ago, small animals called polyps got a foothold on the seabed off the Florida Keys. They soon formed small clumps of coral which, though sometimes battered by hurricanes, eventually covered many acres with the spires of an undersea Xanadu.

When Europeans arrived, it was home to millions of marine animals. The whites called it Hen and Chickens Reef, apparently because waves breaking over it reminded them of a hurrying fowl and her brood.

Sea bass weighing 250 pounds lurked in coral caves, casting baleful eyes on the passing scene. Shrimp gleaned a precarious living picking scraps from the mouths of big eels. Jewelfish patrolled their territories, blue spots gleaming like iridescent sapphires.

In the 1940s, man invented breathing devices that let him explore a world of breathtaking beauty. Soon, thousands of sports divers enjoyed the clear waters and a thriving industry catered to them.

And with the influx of men came dredge-and-fill and pollution.

Hen and Chickens Reef still lies in 20 feet of water about three miles off Upper Matecumbe Key, 75 miles south of Miami. But 80 per cent of its giant coral heads are dead, and the rest are dying.

Scientists studying its skeleton hope they'll learn how to keep the same thing from happening to the rest of the reefs that lie in a 160-mile arc from Miami to Key West. Divers report that the reefs range from healthy to nearly dead. They've made only spot checks. Only Hen and Chickens Reef, covering a few square miles, and one or two others near Miami, have been studied in detail by scientists.

If the reefs die, tourism and some fishing industries would suffer. Lobster and yellow tail snapper, both important to Florida commercial fishermen, would disappear, scientists believe.

"Man is killing the reefs. I know developers want to blame natural causes, but silt, coral collecting and sewage aren't natural," says Lee Purkerson, a biologist at Everglades National Park.

Purkerson has studied the Biscayne National Monument reefs near Miami for two years. He says that unless steps are taken soon to control development in South Florida and the Keys, the entire reef line will meet the same fate as Hen and Chickens.

"We found algaes that covered the coral and kept it from letting in light and food. It wasn't pretty. The best way to describe one algae is that it's like tubercular sputum. As long as man keeps dumping garbage into the sea, the reefs are going to suffer."

Purkerson says more needs to be learned about what happens when various inhabitants of a reef are killed by pollution.

"A reef is like a large city — everyone has a job. Some jobs don't seem as important as others most of the time, but look what happened to New York City when garbagemen went on strike," he says.

Florida boasts the only major coral reefs in the continental United States, but coral reefs are found in warm waters around the world, primarily in the Pacific. The largest is the 1,200-mile Great Barrier Reef that fringes Australia's East Coast.

Reefs are ridges formed in shallow ocean areas by coral polyps, which live in stony cups they themselves secrete. Only the outer layer of coral is alive. Polyps add new layers to build massive reefs millimeter by millimeter. Polyps are animals, varying in size from the microscopic to giants two inches across. They feed by sticking tentacle-fringed mouths out of their cups and grabbing plankton from the living soup that is the ocean.

Each polyp carries a genetic code that tells it what form to take. Some grow branches like elk antlers. Others form convoluted boulders. Some raise shafts like organ pipes.

Around the reef-building corals grow others that form only small clumps. Then there are soft corals, waving fans and plumes that look like plants but are really animals.

Scientists at the Harbour Branch Foundation Laboratory at John Pennekamp Underwater State Park on Key Largo are studying the reefs to learn the extent of danger and what can be done to save them. A private grant finances the study.

"Next to a tropical rain forest, a coral reef is the most complex eco-system we know," says Dr. Alfried Antonius, the laboratory's coral specialist. He adds that scientists are "getting all the information we can about the state of the reefs now so we can compare it with later data and see if things are getting worse."

The Harbour Branch study has concentrated on Pennekamp Park, but scientists say one thing stands out in inspections of the reefs from Miami to Key West. Where man has little to do with the reefs, they are healthy. Where man has the most interaction with the reefs through development, skin diving and boating, the coral is either dying or under stress.

One theory holds dredging indirectly responsible for Hen and Chickens death. This theory says men drained huge areas of water in the Everglades to the north. Then channels were dredged to get boats from Florida Bay on the west side of the Keys to the open Atlantic on the east.

SJC Scores State 5th In Courses

Seminole Junior College (SJC) ranks fifth in the state in enrollment for non-credit and vocational courses.

The state's largest Junior College, Miami-Dade, led the enrollment poll with 26,390 students. SJC has 8,902 students enrolled in the non-credit and non-vocational courses.

The 8,902 students enrolled in the SJC courses represent more than one out of every 12 residents in the county and about one out of every eight adults enrolled in continuing education at SJC. Officials at SJC say the total enrollment is about 12,000.

High School Orientation

An orientation meeting for students and parents of the new Lake Howell High School, will be held Monday at 7 p.m. at Eastbrook Elementary School.

At this time the principal, Dick Evans, and his staff will discuss curriculum, music and band programs, athletic programs, cheerleaders, school hours and bus schedule and clubs at this important meeting.

Until the Lake Howell School facilities are built, the student body and faculty will be on double sessions while sharing Oviedo High School's plant next fall.

Banks Raise Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 10 major commercial banks, including the world's largest, have raised their prime lending rate to a record 10½ per cent.

Analysts attributed the latest increase in the prime to high rates for short-term loans on which banks rely for their funds.

The prime is the rate banks charge their most creditworthy corporate customers. It is not tied directly to other bank loan rates but a higher prime can also lead to increases in those rates.

Leading the list of banks raising the prime to 10½ per cent Wednesday was the San Francisco-based Bank of America, the world's largest.

It Pays To Shop For Airlines

By M. J. LAGIES
The Herald Services

It pays to shop around for an airline ticket.

Anyone who doesn't may pay too much and never know it.

A check of fare quotations by four major airlines on the same trip — San Diego, Calif., to Baltimore — produced four different quotations. The difference between the highest and the lowest was more than $160. And even the lowest was still $118 more than the cheapest fare actually available.

The reason? Clerical error.

Airline fares are alike, but airline clerks are not.

Clerks use tariff schedules to determine the price of a ticket.

It's a simple matter to compute the fare for a lone businessman on a direct one-way flight. There is little room for mistake.

But take a family of four, children aged 9 and 12, on a flight which necessitates one or more plane changes, leaving on a Sunday and returning on a Saturday, and there is nothing simple about it any more.

The children's ages, the day and even the hour of departure, the length of stay, the season . . . these factors all have a bearing on the price.

"Fare structures have become so complicated that even people who deal with them every day become confused," says William R. Swift, an airline representative.

"Travel agents have called me after they got a new schedule from us and said they'd have to hire a Philadelphia lawyer to figure it out.

"And with tariffs changing constantly, even airline personnel can make mistakes."

Four airlines were asked for ticket prices on a round trip from San Diego to Baltimore's Friendship Airport for a family of four, children aged 9 and 12, leaving on Sunday, April 28, and returning on Saturday, May 11.

Airline "A" quoted $1,280.05, Airline "B" $1,241.40, airline "C" $1,402.11, and Airline "D" $1,247.70.

In theory, all prices should have been just about the same.

Airlines are not required to have identical fare structures, but generally they do.

Airlines file their fare schedules with the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington for approval.

If one line files for a rate lower than that charged by the others, its competitors will either protest the request or adjust their own tariffs.

Using that flight, the total ticket price would have been $1,124, as opposed to the $1,141 quoted by that airline's reservation agent.

The agent did not volunteer the information that there was a night flight available.

"There are so many different ways of calculating a fare that no agent can give them all over the telephone; it would take hours," says Mike Skitt, another line's reservation salesman.

Skitt says a reservations agent does not automatically assume that a traveler calling for a quotation wants the lowest-possible price.

"To get the lowest fare, you have to ask for it. If you want the savings of a night coach, you'd have to ask specifically whether there is a night coach available."

A ticket bought from Airline "A" for a two-leg flight using an Airline "B" plane on the second leg may cost $100 if the two lines have such an agreement.

Housing May Boost U.S. Economy

NEW YORK (AP) — Many economists are hoping for an increase in housing activity to help boost the economy out of the hole into which it tripped during the past year.

Unpredictable at the moment, however, is whether housing will be able to provide that push. The uncertainty of it all has many an economist in a quandary. Housing, it seems, hasn't made up its mind.

After plunging from an annual rate of nearly 2.5 million housing starts early in 1973 to fewer than 1.5 million this January, activity resumed in February. In that month the start rate rose to 1.8 million units.

Came March, however, and activity dropped again to the January level. That was bad news. However, housing permits, an indicator of future activity, rose, and that was good news.

To the rescue of forecasters who find the erratic activity too much to tolerate comes Saul Klaman, housing authority and vice president and chief economist of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. Said he:

"My hunch is that the coming housing upturn will proceed at a relatively slow pace. My fear is that even a sluggish recovery may be prematurely aborted." The long-awaited housing upturn, he said, "may prove disappointing."

In an address here, Klaman cited some of the most compelling factors underlying his relatively bearish view:

1. The large backlog of unsold new units. Buyer resistance in private housing markets was mounting last year, he said, at the very time many new homes were coming on the market.

"As a result, unsold inventory mounted and by early 1974 was equal to one year's sales, substantially above a year earlier."

2. Mounting land costs and housing prices. Some potential buyers, he said, may have been discouraged by the rapid acceleration in costs. "They have second thoughts when they see their favorite $30,000 house sporting a new $50,000 price tag."

3. Nagging energy uncertainties. "Uncertainties about where and whether to build or buy have not disappeared," said Klaman. Neither buyers nor builders have forgotten the trauma of the energy shortage.

4. General consumer malaise. Caution, concern, confusion and constraint tend to damper prospective housing buoyancy, he said.

Reservations Open For New Auto-Train

Eugene Kerik Garfield, president of the Auto-Train Corporation, announced the opening of reservations for the Company's luxury "auto-train" service between Louisville, Kentucky and Sanford. The first train will depart from Louisville on May 24, 1974.

The fare for the overnight trip will be $225 one way, subject to Interstate Commerce Commission authorization, for two passengers and their automobile. Included in this fare will be a buffet dinner, continental breakfast, lunch, live entertainment, and first-run feature-length movies. Currently being shown are the Academy Award winners, "The Sting," Northbound; and "The Way We Were," Southbound. The charge for each additional passenger will be $25.

The "auto-train" will operate initially on a selected schedule with departures from Louisville every third day at 5:30 p.m. The return trip from Sanford, will depart every third day at 12 noon. The Company plans to institute daily departures on this route early next year. The Company currently operates daily "auto-train" service between Lorton, Virginia and Sanford. Auto-Train, a private corporation, is not associated with Amtrack.

Bank Reports Income

MIAMI — For the quarter ended March 31, 1974, Pan American Bancshares, Inc., a Miami-based registered bank holding company, reported consolidated income before security transactions of $1,742,000, equal to 38 cents per share, and net income of $1,706,000, equal to 37 cents per share.

For the quarter ended March 31, 1973, after restatement to include an acquisition subsequent to March 31, 1973 which was accounted for as a pooling of interests, income before security transactions was $1,598,000, equal to 36 cents per share, and net income was $1,614,000, or 37 cents per share.

Results for the 1973 quarter include a tax credit of $70,000, or 2 cents per share, arising from losses incurred by a subsidiary prior to acquisition by Pan American.

Pan American Bancshares controls 14 Florida banks, ATICO Mortgage Corporation, a state-wide mortgage banking company, and ATICO Financial Corporation, a diversified financial service company.

Maintenance Seminar In Miami

FORT LAUDERDALE—David G. Osterer, president of the Condominium Executive Council of Florida Inc., is scheduled to be among the speakers to address the second annual Florida Apartment Managers Maintenance Seminar.

The seminar is scheduled April 26 and 27 at the Algiers Hotel, 2555 Collins Ave., Miami Beach. The two days of discussions and workshop sessions are open to managers of all types of apartment buildings including rentals, cooperatives and condominiums.

Osterer, a management consultant, will discuss personnel selection and training of apartment building personnel.

Stanley Buchwald, state education director of Building Managers Inc., sponsor of the event, announced that the two days of discussions and workshop sessions will cover many types of maintenance and operation problems encountered daily by residential building managers.

Deltona Appoints Jon Adams

MIAMI — Jon M. Adams, a community building specialist, has been promoted to General Manager of The Deltona Corporation's namesake community, located 9 miles from Sanford.

The announcement was made by Paul M. Schaefer, Vice President — Corporate Administration, for the firm headquartered here.

Adams joined Deltona more than five years ago, serving most recently as House Control Director at the Deltona community of Citrus Springs, near Dunnellon. He has seen Deltona grow from a row of model homes to a community of more than 11,000 residents.

Prior to this position, he held executive positions in the sales and construction fields for 15 years.

In his new position, Adams will oversee all marketing personnel and administration for the community.

Arvida Reveals Income

MIAMI — Arvida Corporation had net income of $2.1 million, equal to $.35 per share, on revenues of $15.5 million for the first quarter ended March 31, 1974. The announcement was made today by Charles E. Cobb Jr., president of the Miami-based real estate and community development firm, at the company's annual meeting of shareholders held at The Boca Raton Hotel and Club, Boca Raton, Florida.

Net income for the first quarter of 1973 was $3.4 million, or $.56 per share on revenues of $16.1 million.

Cobb also explained, "The first quarter of this year will be Arvida's strongest because of the seasonal influence of hotel earnings and real estate sales to vacationers. We do not anticipate earnings for any of the remaining three quarters of the year to match the strong 35 cents earned during the first three months."

Whisperliner To Serve Orlando

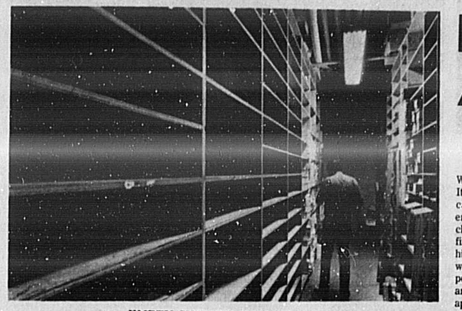
ORLANDO — Eastern Airlines, maximizing the productivity of its aircraft fleet amid limitations imposed by international energy problems, has selected Orlando as the eastern terminus of a convenient new service to California with the modern L-1011 Whisperliner wide-body jet.

Beginning May 1, Eastern flight 89 will depart McCoy airport each day on a new one-stop schedule to Los Angeles, via Atlanta. The big 254-passenger trijet will leave Orlando at 3:55 p.m., lift off from Atlanta at 6:41 p.m. and be into Los Angeles at 7:55 p.m., Pacific time.

The return flight, No. 82, will depart Los Angeles at 9:25 a.m. daily and, after the Atlanta stop, arrive Orlando at 6:41 p.m., local time.

Section of Orlando as the eastern terminal for the flight illustrates how Eastern within the constraints of problems with the cost and availability of fuel, is fine-tuning its schedules to put the best service into those points with the greatest traffic demand, Jack Coalter Eastern Manager explained.

Orlando typifies this situation, he said. Since April 1, Eastern's traffic here has grown 31 per cent over the same period as fast year. The airline is currently boarding an average of 2,000 passengers daily at McCoy, a figure that will rise significantly during the summer school vacation period.



EMPTY SHELVES TELL IT ALL

Shoe Industry Hurts Due To Shortages

By BARBARA HERRERA
Copley News Service

It's a sign of the times: a red-faced customer shaking a brown-and-white spectator pump in the face of an unhappy shoe salesman.

"Why don't you have anything in my size?" she demanded.

"Well, ma'am, there's a leather shortage and ..."

"Don't tell me your problems! I don't want to hear them," the woman exploded. "Everbody's got excuses. Just give me a good shoe in a size that fits."

This scene is likely to be repeated in may shoe stores these days. For shoe customers, some salesmen admit, are showing increasing frustration with limited selection of styles and sizes.

And what might have been the year of the shoe—when longer skirts are focusing attention on higher-heeled, feminine shoes—may turn out to be the year of the shoe shortage.

Here's why:

When housewives boycotted beef last spring and the oil shortage grew critical more recently, the stage was set for a drop in the available shoe supply.

The beef boycott meant fewer cattle slaughtered, thus fewer leather hides available.

The oil shortage meant less petroleum-based chemicals available for the production of vinyls.

And leather and vinyls, of course, are the stuff from which shoes are made. The result: a shoe pinch currently being felt in some stores.

How much the pinch hurts depends upon who's telling the story.

Managers of some shops, especially some connected with large chains, said in a survey that it's busness as usual in their stores because buyers ordered shoes before the current leather and vinyl shortages.

But others detailed a variety of problems:

—Higher prices.

—Late deliveries resulting in canceled orders.

—Less variety available in styles, colors and sizes, particularly of shoes in narrow widths.

—A general scarcity of a few items, such as leather handbags.

John Pennington, assistant manager of a shoe store said:

"I think the American shopper is going to have to realize that things are not going to be a plentiful as they have been, and that includes shoes. We just don't have the sizes we used to."

Stock in his store, he said, is running about 20 per cent lower than this time last year.

And in some cases the stock picture is worse, he said. For instance: "We ordered 874 pairs in 12 colors of a certain plain pump that's very popular. Only 354 pairs came in.

"When the housewives boycotted meat and the meat packers stopped killing cattle, the stockpile of leather went way down," Pennington said. "And it'll take awhile to build it back up."

Not only leather, but shoes with synthetic finishes — the "wet" look and patent leather-like patina—are also hard to get, according to the assistant manager of another store, Ray Hannon.

"I don't see how this will change so long as the oil supply remains critical, and petroleum-based materials continue in short supply," he said.

Another problem, Hannon added, is late deliveries by truckers.

"They seem to be taking 10 to 14 days longer than usual to get a shipment across country since the fuel shortage. The result will probably be cancellation of some shoes. Who needs a sandal in the middle of winter?"

The most painful result of the shoe industry problems, he pointed out, is increased prices.

Shoe prices have risen this year at twice the rate of most years, he said. "Current retail prices reflect about a 7.5 per cent increase over last spring," Hannon said. "About a 3.9 per cent retail price increase would be normal," he said.

A by-product of the shortages, according to Hannon, may be difficulty in getting narrow widths. "If the factories have to put all their eggs in one basket, they'll put them in the medium basket. So women with narrow feet have to buy their shoes early this year."

In the shoe section of a department store, a manager who didn't wish to be identified, revealed that placing shoe orders far in advance had opposite results for his company.

His company orders six to eight months in advance, too, he said. "But six months ago the political climate was so unstable and there was so much talk of recession that our buyers became cautious.

"We've got styles, but limited sizes—that's speaking off the record, though," he added.

Even His Errors Are Works Of Art

By TOM TIEDE
The Herald Services

WASHINGTON (NEA)—When he was a young man in Italy, learning his trade, stone carver Roger Morigi energetically, but foolishly, chipped a lily from an unfinished sculpture. Whereupon his teacher — "a giant of a man with a temper to match"— pointed out the error by raging and then cuffing the cowering apprentice behind the neck.

"That's the way we learned," Morigi says today. And learn he did. There are perhaps a dozen sophisticated stone carvers in America today, half of whom have been recognized as "masters" of the craft, and one of whom — Roger Morigi — is generally considered the maestro's maestro. It's been five decades since he's knocked a lily off a piece; even his mistakes now are wonderous art.

Morigi, in his 60s, is the chief carver for Washington's National Cathedral. He leads a group of seven carvers there, plus two lesser workmen who are not as advanced, and church officials say the Morigi-Cathedral tie-up is fitting. The church, a 65-year-old, $20 million gothic construction which is not yet finished, is perhaps the finest structure of its kind in the Americas. Morigi, equally dated and proud, is one of the few men in the world skilled enough to meet cathedral building standards.

Actually, skill is an inadequate description of Morigi's genius. Working with techniques that date to Michelangelo, with tools that have not changed since Nefertiti, Morigi's work is priceless.

It is so, explains an associate, "because he is one of the last of his kind." Once the world was crammed with stone carvers, in the days when structures were careful creations of stone on stone; now there is glass siding, aluminum trim and hermetically sealed sterilization, and Roger Morigi is an endangered species. "When he goes," the associate says, "who will we have?"

There will be a few stone carvers left when Morigi stops, no doubt there will always be a few around. But Morigi is one of the last who link today with yesterday. No longer is stone carving passed from master to apprentice — "kids today don't want to pay the price," says Morigi.

Thus with unionization and commercialization, not to mention laws which prohibit the cuffing of students, future carvers will learn from books and profit not from experience; and the loss will be irreversible.

So it is that authorities at the National Cathedral (officially the Cathedral Church of St. Peter and St. Paul) look after Morigi and his fellow carvers as any other finite treasure.

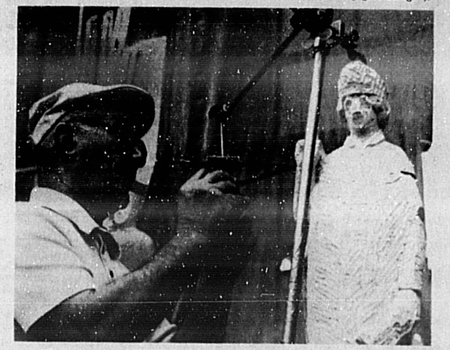
Completion of the 301-foot high church is at long last expected in the early 1980s, and such are the construction standards — many artistic touches have been done and redone repeatedly to pass muster — that only masters such as Morigi can assure completion. Morigi is not paid royally — $10 a hour — but his advice and idiosyncrasies are courted and favored.

"When the big fellows approach Roger," says a friend, "they do so with reverence for a true artist."

Truth to tell, Morigi is not an artist in the sense of being imaginative or experimental. He is a tradesman. The romantic artist works until he falls to the floor from fatigue; the unromantic Morigi remembers that even during the Depression, while working on a Philadelphia bank building, "I never tried for a dime of overtime. Came 4:30 and Roger went home to his family.

Yet though he follows the tradesman's work ethic, and though his job is not to invent but to copy the models of sculptors, he is, at least in execution, artistically facile. Chipping away in his small and dusty shed, his hands flying and his feet moving animatedly around his piece, he makes it look easy. Easy? He once spent more than four years carving 44 angels for the Cathedral entrance — "one of the most perfect doorways in the world" — and he spent a tedious month apiece on 14 smallish Stations of the Cross plaques that decorate a New York State Jesuit grounds.

Also, Morigi has the artist's sense of detail ("I never touch my stone with my hands; it leaves oil"), the artist's persistency ("I say to the stone: 'Stone, you ain't gonna whip me, I'm gonna whip you' "), and the artist's complex set of personal judgments ("I have no favorite work; to me nothing is every really good enough").



MORIGI IS MAESTRO'S MASTER

More Smokers But Less Tobacco

By EDWARD NEILAN
The Herald Services

WASHINGTON — In 1985 there will be more persons than ever turning to friends and asking, "Pardon me, do you mind if I smoke?"

More smokers, smoking less tobacco.

That is the forecast from a government expert who sees a 20 per cent increase in the number of cigarettes smoked by 1985.

The increase will come almost entirely from new smokers, according to Robert H. Miller of the Commodity Economics Division, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Per capita cigarette use isn't expected to change much, but the large smoking group — between ages 25 to 44 — is expected to grow by 40 per cent by 1985.

New smokers will increase despite the warning staring at them from each package of cigarettes: "Warning: The surgeon general has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

One trend which Miller predicts will continue is the cutting back of tabacco quantity per cigarette to bring over-all tobacco use below current levels.

In projecting cigarette use at around 200 packs per year per person in 1985, Miller said in a recent speech he assumes that antismoking activity "will remain at moderate levels over the next 12 years."

Use of tobacco has been attacked for centuries, but antismoking pressure peaked in the late 1960s with a massive television campaign. As a result, per capita consumption dipped from 214 packs in 1967 to 198 in 1970.

But a report released recently by the Economic Research Service of the Department of Agriculture said the per capita consumption per adult rose 3 per cent in 1973 to 4,155 cigarettes — 208 packs.

American smokers puffed a record 591 billion cigarettes last year, 4.6 per cent more than in 1972. The outlook is for a continued increase.

Cigarette use had bounced back to over 200 packs per person per year by 1971, but the campaign of the late 1960s left the smoking population with changed attitudes.

USDA research showed that more than 60 per cent of all smokers surveyed in 1970 had tried to quit — as compared to less than 40 per cent in 1966.

In Miller's view, "If current attitudes mellow, or if the industry starts to market a 'safer' cigarette that's lower in tar and nicotine or contains new smoking material, per capita consumption could catch up considerably by 1985."

The industry has already begun cutting down on tar and nicotine content by packing less tobacco in each cigarette.

Since the mid-1950s, tobacco leaf content per cigarette has been reduced nearly 2 per cent. The reason is the jump in popularity of filter cigarettes, which have shorter tobacco columns than most nonfilters.

Manufacturers also began making greater use of leaf midribs and produced slimmer cigarettes. Thus, while cigarette output jumped aoout 2 per cent in 20 years, tobacco use remained about the same.

Deltona 'Meals On Wheels' Is Working

By FANNETTE EDWARDS
Herald Correspondent

DELTONA— The "Meals on Wheels" program is progressing nicely in Deltona according to Mrs. Sally Roehner, coordinator of the program. "We now have 16 recipients being served each day, six days a week, with their noon-day meal, by Deltona volunteers to senior citizens who do not have the means, either physically or financially, to secure their own meals," said Mrs. Roehner.

"At present we have 30 volunteers on call, with more responding each week," continued Mrs. Roehner.

"It only requires 20 volunteers to service the 16 applicants, but we need substitutes when the regulars cannot make it and as more applicants names are added to the list we now have, we will need more volunteers. The program is in its infancy."

According to Mrs. Roehner, one volunteer, Capt. Edmund Evans, picks up the trays of hot prepared meals in his car from DeLand Southwestern Cafeteria, and brings them to the kitchen of the United Methodist Church of Deltona. Here two teams of two persons, each, one called the Blue Team and one, the Red Team, secure enough trays to take care of the list of names they have received from Mrs. Roehner, place them in their car, and deliver them to the recipients.

Upon arrival at each home, they withdraw each individual thermo-carton from the tray, containing soup, drink, main dishes, etc. and place them before the recipient and return the empty trays to the church kitchen after all have been served.

Next morning, another volunteer returns the trays from the church to the cafeteria in DeLand to be filled again.

This week the Blue Team consisted of Chester Weimer and Nelson Bacon; the Red Team of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Gydusek.

Mrs. Roehner said that the cost of each meal for each recipient is $1.30.

Crowd Of 300 Hear Deltona 'Loses' Roads

DELTONA— Expecting to hear of new access roads for Deltona's Third housing area, an overflow crowd of 300 at last week's Deltona Civic Association meeting was disappointed.

They came to the Deltona Community Center anticipating announcement of plans to provide road extensions or new roads for the convenience of Deltonans living in the third area in reaching area cities and shopping centers, but were told these roads were not planned by West Volusia County Zoning Commission.

Phase One of the Volusia County Land Use Plan for West Volusia was presented by Jeff Cloar, representative of the Planning Department. Introduced by Charles Wyman of Deltona, a member of the Volusia Zoning Commission, Cloar displayed two Land Use maps. He pointed out sections alloted for parks, various types of housing, recreation and commercial buildings. But it was when he explained to smaller map that the crowd became angry. The map showed SR 444 would connect with 15-A and on to Interstate 4, but Cloar said this was an old map and land within this territory had been sold and the county now has no plans for extending this road.

The audience became unruly at this point, one man shouting, "You've told us everything you plan to do for all sections outside of Deltona, in Volusia County, now tell us what you are going to do for us in Deltona."

A woman, shouted over the others, "We were all promised these roads would be completed for us when we bought our land and homes in the third area. The salesmen told us that and promised us shopping area, swimming pool, recreation areas and everything, and now here we are, stranded with nothing but promises."

Red Cross First Aid Due

DELTONA — Plans for an American Red Cross First Aid course were discussed at the Deltona Volunteer Fire Department Auxiliary meeting held recently. President Alice Gajhusek said the class will be open to all interested persons and details will be announced later.

Final plans were made for a Splash Party to be held at the home of Cay Anderson in Deltona on May 22. This will be the last meeting for the club before the summer vacation when it recesses for three months.

DELTONA—The Deltona-DeBary Chapter 939 of the National Association of Retired Federal Employes (NARFE) will hold its regular meeting on Friday, at 2 p.m. in All Saints Episcopal Parish House in Enterprise. Discussion on Resolutions to be brought before the forthcoming State convention in Cocoa Beach on May 6, 7 and 8 will be held during the business meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Shinton, will serve as delegates to this convention and Mr. Shinton, who is chapter President will also serve as chairman of the Credentials Committee there.

DeBARY—DeBary Post 8093 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Auxiliary will conduct a patriotic program on the school grounds of the Enterprise Elementary School, on Loyalty Day, May 1, at 9 a.m.

Reginald J. Burford, general chairman of the event, says they will distribute Flag Etiquette Booklets in color to the sixth grade students who will assemble with their teachers on the grounds.

Eugene Beinert, post chaplain will invoke the prayer; a Loyalty Day song will be played and sung and the Americanism chairman Edward E. Breadsley will give an address on patriotism.

DELTONA — The Empire State of Deltona Club's "evening at the Seminole Turf" has been changed to May 24. Reservations must be made and paid for by April 28.

The next regular meeting of Empire State Club will be held on Sunday, at 4 p.m. at the Deltona Community Center. Mrs. Betty Konigsmark, entertainment chairman will present a program, entitled. "A Take-off on a TV Show."

The club will sponsor a picnic at Campbell Park on May 4 for members who are paid up in their 1974 dues. The club is planning a "Roaring Twenties" dance to be held at the Community Center on June 7 with Norm Right's Orchestra.

Refreshments after the meeting were served by Mrs. Lydia Schmidt and her committee.

DELTONA — The regular monthly meeting of the Deltona Sportsmen's Club will be held May 1 in the Deltona Community Center, following a 6 p.m. carry-in dinner. The club will furnish the meat course while the members are asked to bring the salads, vegetables, relishes or desserts and their own table service.

All mothers will be honored at this meeting, and the men will do the serving and kitchen work.

On May 11, the club will hold a breakfast at Blue Springs Park, to be served from 7 to 9 a.m. Coffee will be furnished by the club.

The regular monthly Trap Shoot will be combined with Sports Day. Members are asked to bring horseshoes, archery darts or whatever on May 18 at 10 a.m. at Lake Gleason. Bring your own lunch.

On June 11 the Sportsmen will visit Seminole Turf Club. Reservations must be in by May 5.

The following were the winners in the Club Easter Ham Shoot: Orville Card, Sandy Holloway, Bernie Nagelmann, Sandy Sadler, Henry Sprague, Steve Daley, Frank Kramer, Dino Poli, James Scott, Ted Wheeler and Doris Yetka.

INTRODUCING THE TINKER-TOY SANDWICH!

You Build It Your Self!

Plenty of people are partial to perfecting palate-pleasing pleasure with the makings from our cold-cut counter. A whole new cult of culinary food-art is beginning to sweep the country. It's time you tried it. Maybe you'll just want to begin with a small starter-burger---A couple slices of spiced ham, some bologna, throw on some American Cheese, add pickle and smear on a little mustard. Thats just to get the hang of it, in no time at all you'll be up there with the best in the business.

Put your own particular personality in your next sandwich. Be the envy of all your friends... There's so many possibilities; for instance, have you tried peanut butter, grape marmalade and dill pickle yet?

(We also stock Bicarbonate and Alka-Seltzer)

Short Story Alive, Well

CHRISTMAS EVE. By Maeve Brennan. Scribner's. 244 Pages. $7.95.

Contrary to popular belief, the short story is alive and well and flourishing in the hands of such highly talented writers as Maeve Brennan.

In the 13 stories in this excellent book, Miss Brennan demonstrates again and again her great gift of insight into the human soul as well as her remarkable talent for using words in exactly the right way to create a complex image or strike a certain mood.

Divided almost equally between locales in the New York City area and Dublin, the stories primarily concern themselves with the interrelationships between people, whether close, such as that between husband and wife, or distant, such as that between a discontented housewife and a beggar who has come to her door for years.

In the opening stories, set in a wealthy community near New York, Miss Brennan shows great wit as she dissects the foibles of the area's habitues, particularly one obnoxious character called Charles Runyon. A self-appointed arbiter of taste, Runyon is skillfully played off against the stupid, wealthy woman who dotes on him and the domestic help who loathe him and bring him to his well-deserved fall from grace.

U.S. Economy Waits For Next Big Blow

NEW YORK (AP) — The poorly plotted play now being enacted on the economic stage could hardly be more diabolical, short of a depression.

Few economists predict that ultimate blow, but in the year's first quarter the economy took its biggest decline in 16 years and still may not be on the road to recovery.

The ingredients of the reallife economic drama are similar to those in the make-believe world of theater: pathos, tragedy, despair, irony, crisis, desire and a good measure of cynical humor.

Prices are rising and restraints on prices are coming off at the end of the month. The stock market is almost lifeless. Mutual funds continue to be cashed in. The savings rate is well below the 7.3 per cent for 1973's final months.

Widespread shortages are reported, adding to price pressures and lessening the buying power of the paycheck. And the job market, although strong in the latest reports, is threatened with weakness.

The housing market has dipped after showing signs of strength early in the year. And now, with interest rates so high, money reportedly is abandoning the relatively low yields of savings and loan accounts for bigger things elsewhere. That lessens the ability of the S&Ls to grant mortgages.

This is bad enough, but many of the scenes are being played against a backdrop of soaring profits for some companies and desperate fights for life by other businesses.

And while the great American dream of upward mobility continues as a goal, reality intrudes with its somber report that millions of Americans are going nowhere, and haven't for three years or more.

Not everyone is in that predicament, however. Managers of some huge, publicly owned corporations are receiving salaries, fringes and stock options several times the salary of the president of the United States.

The explanations given for such managerial incomes is that today's big companies employ thousands of workers whose pay scales must be graduated to provide incentives to advancement.

DECA Holds Annual Banquet

AWARD WINNERS OF DECA GOLD OF LYMAN
. . .(l to r) David Smith, Dorothy Conklin and Paul Cox

Lyman High School Blue and Gold Chapters of Distributive Education Clubs of America held their 12th annual Employer-Employe Banquet recently in Altamonte Springs.

Guest speaker was Warren R. Winn, regional director of Eastern Air Lines, who showed films and spoke on the impact of Walt Disney World.

Participating in the program and presentation of awards were Seminole County Superintendent of Public Schools William P. Layer, Lyman Principal Carlton Henley, Edgar L. Fleming, State Department of Education Distributive Education supervisor; David Smith, president of DECA Gold; Bud Farrier, president of DECA Blue; Dorothy Conklin, DECA Gold vice president; Carol Guglielmello, DECA Blue Vice president; and Robert Burkette, president of South Seminole Rotary Club. Trophies were supplied by the Rotarians.

DECA Diamond Awards went to the following: Mrs. Louis Guglielmello, certificate of appreciation; Flowertown, training agency of the year; James Kinsey, Seminole Plaza Publix manager, "boss of the year".

DECA Blue leadership award went to its president Bud Farrier, who has been also elected president of District 7 DECA, which serves a tri-county area.

Also receiving awards, Wil Hoenicke, congeniality award; Karen Watson, attendance; Rock Keller and Mickey Methvin, most improved; Ronald Cobb, sustained employment; and Miss Guglielmello, academic.

DECA Gold awards were presented as follows: Appreciation for Service, Glen Rayner of Howell Creek Nursery; leadership training, Elwood Owens; Civic Consciousness, Mike Burger, WDBO, and Ron Harrell, WHOO; Social intelligence, Mr and Mrs. Delmar Smith; leadership trophy and president's gavel to Dave Smith; academic, Miss Conklin; employe of the year, Paul Fox; leadership, and achievement, Eddie Gallagher.

Gallagher, who won first in district and state competition for advertising, will go to Chicago to compete in the National Leadership Conference of DECA. First in district, and a state finalist in job interview, is Debbie Hahn. A finalist in petroleum service station category on state level was Gary Davis.

Others from Lyman recognized as district winners were Suzie Black, Craig Gillette, Karen Watson, Pam Perkins, Ronald Cobb, and Paul Fox.

Middle Income Family Feeling Tuition Pinch

College costs continue to rise, according to a survey by the College Entrance Examination Board, which conceded that the tuition pinch is most painful to the middle-income family cut off from scholarship or loan assistance based on financial need.

But the budget crunch that spurs the tuition spiral may also promise some relief to struggling students and their parents.

Sagging enrollments at many private schools are a direct result of educational costs that in many cases have been pushed beyond $5,090 a year — an expense weighed carefully by even the more affluent families.

And these institutions, faced not only with the likelihood of empty classrooms, but with declining academic reputations, are reviving the concept of scholarships based on merit instead of documented need.

The Wall Street Journal reported recently that a number of prestigious universities and colleges — convinced, apparently, that half a loaf is better than none — are waiving portions of the tuition charge for students with a record of academic achievement.

NEW SANFORD PIZZA HUT OPENS
RIBBON CUTTING for Pizza Hut at 2002 French Ave. was held Tuesday morning with Mayor Lee P. Moore doing the honors as Paul Fasolas, manager, (left) and Tom Riggs, (right), general manager of Semoran Management Corp., operator of Huts in Orange and Seminole Counties. The opening marked the eighth Hut in Central Florida and 1,562nd in the country.

Analyst Sees A Silver Lining

The Herald Services

Market analyst Anthony Tabell of Janney Montgomery Scott admits to euphoria by a three-week vacation in Idaho's Sawtooth Mountains, but thinks he sees some slight improvement in the stock market.

"The real reason for our feeling lies in the way individual stock patterns seem to be developing," he says. "With a few notable exceptions, few issues appear to have moved into major uptrends. What has happened, rather, is that in many stocks -- perhaps the bulk of them--downside movement has been replaced by lateral movement. In a significant number of cases, downtrend movement channels going back two or more years have been penetrated, and it appears that a great many issues sometime between last fall and today became thoroughly sold out and reached what apparently are demand levels.

"Such action does not in any way suggest an immediate upmove, but it is nonetheless a precursor to it..."

Maryland National Bank Corp. is reported by Investment Dealer's Digest to have recorded annual earnings growth of better than 13 per cent compounded over a 10-year period ...

Zooming Prices May Keep Fuel Shortage Habits Here

By FRANK MACOMBER
The Herald Services

Sign of a gasoline station pump: "Last ripoff before the freeway!"

Or how about Bob Hope's observation that "I'm not saying gas prices are too high, but why does my service station operator wear a stocking over his head?"

These would be side-splitters or thigh-slappers at least were it not for the gradual nation-wide boost in auto fuel prices. A national survey showed that the average price for regular gas now has reached 52 cents a gallon, with premium grades even more costly — some as high as 65 and 70 cents a gallon.

Major oil companies, blamed along with the Nixon administration for the out-of-sight prices, predict the cost of gasoline to the motorist will go even higher in the months ahead.

But look at the other side of this dismal picture and things appear a little brighter. If gas prices climb beyond the reach of average American wage earners, the result is likely to be a continuation of all the conservation measures which came along during the recent gasoline shortage.

Sky-high gas prices should retain the new emphasis on small, economy cars and the gas-saving 55-mile-per-hour speed limit should have a good chance of becoming at least semipermanent despite the demands of some that it be returned to 65 m.p.h. now that the fuel shortage has eased.

Moreover, bulging gas prices should generate even more car pools, increased use of public transportation and a weekend attitude of, "Is this trip necessary?"

All these were the recent symptoms of the gasolinefamine. They would have been forgotten by many American motorists if gas were plentiful and the price had remained hovering around the 45- to 50-cent-per-gallon mark.

But it is not likely to slide down there again, oil company officials warn.

The price-war-in-reverse also will have a significant impact on car prices, new and secondhand, industry experts predict.

The auto with the most favorable fuel economy figures tagged on it by the government's Federal Energy Office will cost the buyer more, they forecast.

For example, a car getting 20 miles to the gallon will be considerably more valuable than a comparable one getting 12 to 15 m.p.g., especially if gas prices continue to zoom upward.

Automobile advertising is likely to put increased emphasis on mileage economy and less on cuptpile carpeting and automatic windows, etc., under these circumstances, industry experts concede.

Just as U.S. auto builders are experimenting with smaller engines for urban cars — even smaller than the Mustang II's four-cylinder power plant — the British are looking at engine designs with such economy details as combustion, engine breathing and valve and manifold layout.

ART WORKSHOP HELD FOR TEACHERS
. . . By Miss Elizabeth Belt

Head Start Teachers Set May 6-8 Session

Project Head Start director Mrs. Portia D. Spencer has announced an art workshop to be conducted May 6-8 at Fellowship Hall of First Presbyterian Church of Sanford, 1-6 p.m. Approximately 50 Head Start teachers are expected to attend.

A free educational service provided by Binney & Smith Inc., manufacturers of Crayola crayons and other school art supplies, the workshop will be led by Miss Elizabeth Belt, who has taught extensively and holds a Master's degree from Columbia University.

Participants will spend 15 hours of their own time learning about modern creative art education and some of the materials and tools available. Techniques they will try out include some of uses of crayons, water colors, poster paints, finger paints, colored chalks and modeling clay.

Simple craft techniques will also be shown giving the teachers an oppertunity to work with paper, paste and other materials to gain three-dimensional effects.

Assisting Mrs. Spencer with arrangements for the workshop is Miss Miriam E. Jenkins.

Social Responsibility Everyday Business

By DONALD C. BAUDER

In all the hullabaloo over social responsibility and business, many companies are unwittingly making the same mistake as their critics.

These companies set up a committee or department to work on "social responsibility." The committee or department is set up apart from the ordinary operations of the company. When the company talks about its social responsibilities, it does so in a special section of its annual report, clearly set apart from the other sections dealing with day-to-day business.

By thinking of social responsibility as a function which is separate and distinct from everyday operations, the companies seem to be implying that social responsibility ir not compatible with the free enterprise system — as the critics erroneously maintain.

Increasingly, executives such as Howard Morgens, chairman of Procter & Gamble, are reminding their counterparts that the ordinary manufacturing and marketing of products for a fair profit is a fulfillment of social responsibility in itself.

In its 1973 annual report, B. F. Goodrich Co., summarizes it s involvement through commercial products and corprate policies in areas such as highway safety, environmental protection, energy use and conservation and others.

"A lot of companies have special sections on social responsibility.

"To me, that's laughable," said John Bell, the company's public relations head who supervised the writing of the annual report.

"Social responsibility and the profit motive are two sides of the same coin," said O. Pendleton Thomas, chairman and chief executive officer. "Social responsibility isn't frosting on the cake — it's an integral part of a well-run business responding to changing consumer needs and public expectations.

"Putting this in our annual report sounds like we're blowing our horns, and I'd really prefer that our actions speak for themselves," he said in an interview. "However, periodically we do have to do this as part of our communications program."

Goodrich was the first major domestic tire company to push for the radial tire.

"One of the reasons the radial tire is catching on so well is that it cuts down on gasoline usage, thus helping in the pollution battle, not to mention the battle to get gasoline," Thomas said.

"Out Vinyl Core water filters are very important in water purification," he said, and there are dozens of other examples.

There are, of course, social problems. Will they be solved through the free enterprise system? "I'm a private enterprise man all the way," Thomas said, "and I'd like to be able to assure you that all this could be done without government subsidies, but it wouldn't be true.

"In some areas, government support is necessary. However, if the industrial community really fulfills its social responsibility to the degree it should, it can be done with a minimum of government involvement. Government can be an important catalyst."

There are times, of course, when social responsibility hurts a company's pocketbook — and in one such instance getting national attention recently, B. F. Goodrich has emerged the hero.

Federal officials are meeting with plastics industry executives to discuss whether the manufacture of polyvinyl chloride is exposing workers to fumes which can cause a rare form of liver cancer known as angiosarcoma.

Motorhome Ends Vacation Blues

By DORIS ADAMS
The Herald Services

Our family has always loved camping. Then, when we bought our motorhome, I actually used to almost dread the thoughts of going on vacation. Packing for five people and then loading and unloading the car was bad enough, but what I really dreaded was keeping three active children relatively quiet and occupied in the confines of a car for a four or five hour drive.

Last year, we bought a motorhome and not only have we put fun back into vacationing for all of us, but we have been able to add many weekends to the time we spend outdoors.

NAPS FOR KIDS.

Now, thanks to our 24-foot Avco, the kids can move around, take comfortable naps on the full length bunk beds, sit and eat meals at the dinette around the table and play cards.

I keep a good supply of coloring books and crayons on hand which keeps them occupied for hours. When they grow stale, out come the games. Fortunately, it is hard to find the kids are bored for very long, and dad and I have recovered our tranquility.

Furthermore, when we stop for a break or lunch, everything is conveniently available. No digging down through layers of curtains for sandwiches.

The gas stove and range combination enables me to prepare hot meals easily. Indeed, a supply of canned stew, meatballs, sausages and beans assures an easy to prepare and delightful addition to luncheon meals — even sometimes dinner when I don't care to cook a full course meal.

STORE FOOD EASILY

Actually, a supply of convenience type food is always in the motorhome cupboard. Canned fruit and fruit juices can be drained, sliced, and quickly turned into delicious pan-fries for breakfast or lunch which keeps them occupied for hours. When they grow stale, out come the games. Fortunately, it is hard to find the kids are bored for very long, and dad and I have recovered our tranquility.

The gas stove and range combination enables me to prepare hot meals easily. Indeed, a supply of canned stew, meatballs, sausages and beans assures an easy to puddings are always on hand. Many motorhomers use instant rice, but I find that the kids are happier with the converted types such as Uncle Ben's — can be prepared almost as quickly and easily as the instant type which is more expensive. On hand, too, are a variety of herb rices offer a great variety and are easily stored.

I keep the rice, coffee, hot cereals, sugar and flour, in plastic screw-top containers that are conveniently stored in the cupboards. Like all kids, my three would be lost without their favorite snacks and not only devour for breakfast but sometimes for dinner and frequently as snacks. Along with all the packaged goods, they are stored in plastic bags and tied with twist ties.

These and a few other staples are always on hand in the motorhome which simplifies both shopping and packing. The day before our departure, I purchase the meat, milk, eggs, fresh fruit and other perishables and store them in the refrigerator.

TWO-WAY POWER

While the refrigerator uses only an insignificant amount of electricity, and could be operated off either of the coach's two batteries, we generally make a practice of plugging the "shore line" wire into the electric outlet on the side of the house until we are ready to leave.

The refrigerator also is long enough since we store outdoor clothing in the coach at all times along with sleeping bags. Since we have an occasional guest, I keep a supply of fresh linen and sheets which, incidentally, are almost indistinguishable from the real thing except that you throw them away when finished.

Come what may as the nation struggles with this year's energy crisis, the vacation hungry public does have what is required in the way of means and spirit to enjoy much needed vacation time during the day-to-day tensions of these times—and in the process, to contribute to the easing of the energy crunch.

Basically the situation, as far as the vacation seeker is concerned, involves ways with restrictions on the distance one travels, because of gasoline shortage.

But that need not be enough to prevent the smart vacationer from finding the Great Outdoors. They and their families need not be deprived of the availability of hiking, hunting—way to shooting, boating, swimming, camping, picnicking and other activities of vacationers.

The natural resources of our own country are available for the enjoyment within easy driving distance of most everyone's hometown.

In addition to the convenient availability of vacations, the producers of outdoor recreational equipment, the [illegible]-to-sly the [illegible]-tertainers—have come up with information and plans for making vacationing in the great outdoors entirely simple, for the RV industry is [illegible] figure the bike out of your [illegible] organization of an Energy Conservation Corps among the some 30 million users of these modern vehicles. Membership will be available at most RV dealers.

Personal living expenses are served because the family car or cars remain [illegible] at home.

Think about your picture options. Is a closeup of the fisherman's face more dramatic? What about two pictures? Maybe three more for variety. Since a good camera has the new cameras require little more than a click of a shutter for clear color.

Think about your picture. Is it going to be a scenic or outdoor subject, sun and tennis or simply approach and shoot. If that's the way you work, STOP.

Before you shoot, look at the background object. Would this accessorize or be more interesting if there were people playing in the surf?

Like any other hobby-manufactured piece of equipment, your camera requires careful handling. Before leaving for your camera. Expose a roll of film to make sure it's operating efficiently.

Pocket Cameras Prove Profitable

Whether traveling by small plane or cruising the local countryside, you'll want some interesting aerial shots at the start of your adventure. Sit near a window on the shadow side of the plane.

With today's easy-to-use camera, even the novice can take good pictures. The new, small Kodak pocket instamatic cameras are great for outdoor travel. Their high quality lens fits easily into pocket or backpack.

Just tiny five by 2½ x 4½-inch color or black-and-white snapshots — or 3mm color slides. With a few simple rules of thumb, a pocket camera is an easier and more fun than ever.

Outdoor vacations often include bowling (tips — inning, water-skiing, if just for sport, a watercolor context. Whether camping, boating or hiking, dining in the great outdoors activity, a camera is for spray, a watercolor context.

Don't brave your camera to the elements. Tips for picture-taking from a small boat or unlike those of a plane.

Make sure the window is clear so your camera will allow. When the subject fill the picture area, details stand out and the picture has more depth.

Camera-eye around a evening campfire will probably be one of the high-light memories of your vacation. Be sure to record it on film. For step-saving companions, those manufactured by segment anything that vibrates — be gunned for instance. As a rule, the closer you are to your subject, the better your picture.

Outdoor activities are great for camera fun. Capture the spirit of your vacation in pictures by photographing them in moving boats as they speed by. Catch your subjects straight on. Minimize the motion of moving figures by panning — turning the camera with the action.

Don't forget to take pictures of your self-to-record it on film. For distractions from your subject, so try to keep it simple.

The sun warms your face, the wind whips your hair and the water reflects a healthy glow. Central Florida, particularly anywhere in the state, is at its best in the spring.

Spring vacation is the time for boating. It has the boater covered coming, going or just lingering.

Central Florida, for example, is the boater's gateway to the Atlantic Ocean via the Intercoastal Gateway to Florida, reclaiming it from

Fun Recipes For Your Camp Out Menu

It may not all be beer and skittles for mom when the family takes off on a camping trip, but with a little planning, a few of the right utensils and supplies, the camping trip can be fun for all.

SORRY OLD BOY

EVEN ROVER tends it hard to steal his share of the meal when it's locked up in Dinex insulated ware. Insulated Dinex helps protect food from hungry dogs and falling leaves.

Hearty appetites are part of the fun of camp. To guarantee an easy to fix meal and one that will satisfy the groanings of the hungriest camper, simplicity is the key. Here's a "camper's favorite" that will take little time to prepare and will insure you of your "fair share" of time for outdoor fun.

Make the dough with 2 cups Bisquick Baking Mix, ½ water. Smooth ball on floured surface and knead five times. Divide into four equal parts and pat into eight inch circles. Cook in lightly greased skillet until brown, about 4 minutes. Turn and spread with filling, cover with lid or aluminum foil until well heated through.

The filling can be made with whatever is available in camp. You can use spaghetti sauce or canned luncheon meat, frankfurter slices or pepperoni and parmesan cheese. Delicious!

Place a fresh piece of fish or a hamburger patty on a large square of aluminum foil. Top with thinly sliced potatoes, canned corn, canned green beans, sliced onions and a pat of butter. Season to taste. Pull the corners of the foil square up to form a pouch. Cook on grill or coals until fish or meat is done (30-45 min.). Fold down for serving. A whole meal in a pouch!

Unlike other liquid fuel, propane will not deteriorate. It is inexpensive and available almost anywhere, and refillable bulk tanks.

Try some of these suggestions the next time your family goes camping and maybe you'll realize what you've been missing in the great outdoors.

The mixture can be made at home and kept in the ice chest until you prepare the sandwiches. For each sandwich, hardboiled egg, one slice cooked ham, ½ green pepper, (all chopped) per sandwich, (per sandwich, salt, mustard and mayonnaise to taste. (Last ingredient can be added in camp if you have no refrigeration). Store in plastic bag.

At mealtime spread the mixture on a slice of bread, and make a sandwich. Fry in greased skillet until well heated through. Toothpicks can be used to hold sandwiches together.

Mealtime in camp is more fun if your equipment is easy to use. That's why propane fueled appliances are so popular. There is no dangerous spilling or pumping involved and propane burns hot and steady for efficient cooking.

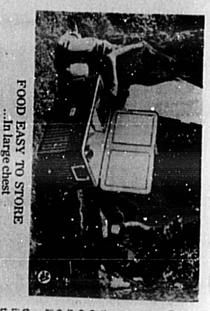
Ice Chest Pays Off With Cooler Camping Control

THE HERALD SERVICES

Campers and picnickers have always known that center compartment provides additional space for covered foods and beverages, and a many travel-minded Americans are joining their ranks. Not only does the meal taste delightful, but the partmentalizes food and beverages in the 100 quart sizzling restaurant-picnic with pays to take an ice chest along.

For camping, extended tended travel. For picnics and cookouts, large capacity is required. Ice cubes or commodate the amount of food required and carry sufficient ice. One of the most convenient models available today is the Cooler by Thermos that contains everything but the kitchen sink.



FOOD EASY TO STORE ...In large chest

These super coolers have two dual-purpose food trays to carrying meat and produce. One tray is covered with a flat lid that can be used as a cutting board; the other tray fits neatly over the ice to keep melted water from splashing out and getting food wet. A last a long time. Simply remember that block ice will longer than chipped ice and is better for camping and extended travel. For picnics and short trips, ice cubes or crushed ice may be used. Some of the cooler fresh and cold, and provide ice for beverages.

The ice compartment in the paper cooler has a cover to keep the food cold but it's a good idea to open the spigot once a day to drain off excessive water.

Coolers with separate ice compartments will keep food cooler than those without. Coolers with compartments will keep food cooler than those without. Coolers with compartments will keep food cooler than those without. Coolers with compartments will keep food cooler than those without.

Create An Imaginative Shish Kebab

THE HERALD SERVICES

A shish kebab to match your mood—Who says an outdoor cookout has to feature hot dogs and hamburgers? For something really different, imaginative shish kebab.

Cook your shish kebab on the spit of a rotisserie or on individual skewers placed on the grill. Either way, the same time for use on the same skewer.

How about these for an unusual shish kebab: Cubed ham, pineapple chunks basted with or small raw oysters dipped in melted butter and paloved in mushroom caps; or eggplant cubes, small onions, cherry tomatoes or wedges of green pepper, alternately threaded on skewers and brushed with salad oil or garlic-flavored butter. Cook over hot coals directly to the coals just before the food is done. For a dessert, orange slices and pieces of banana brushed with honey before grilling, and served with toasted coconut.

That favorite flavor—One of the nicest things about cooking outdoors is the flavor that food seems to have. The smoking, dripping fat and juices penetrates the food and creates that "outdoorsy" flavor. Soak wood chips in water, hickory for variety, mapple overnight in water. Drain chips when cooking with gas or a portable grill operated by LP gas.
