The spirit of Jimi

While budgets are tight for some this Christmas season, they are especially so for the needy.

With that in mind, the Jimi Brooks Spirit of Kids Toy Drive has been set up to gather up toys for all those youngsters who might have to go without anything this holiday.

On Friday, Dec. 17, there will be a party for all those who bring a toy to help the collection grow.

On that date, at Christo's restaurant, 107 W. First St., in downtown Sanford, anyone who comes bearing a toy for a little boy or girl will be admitted free beginning at 7 p.m.

Gizzi & Friends will entertain, there will be door prizes and specials in the restaurant throughout the evening.

All those who want to put a smile on the face of a youngster this Christmas should be at Christo's, toy in hand, on Dec. 17.

'Kmart Loves Kids'

Twenty needy youngsters in Sanford will have the opportunity to do a little holiday shopping at Kmart this weekend.

The annual Kmart Loves Kids shopping spree will take place on Saturday.

Local civic leaders are choosing the children who will have the opportunity to select the gifts they will be getting for their family and friends.

The Kmart Good News Committee, a group of employee volunteers at the Sanford store, is sponsoring the shopping spree. They will also be on hand to help the little ones select the gifts they will get.

Each child will be able to pick out $20 worth of gifts and, during a special breakfast with Santa himself, they will receive a specially wrapped gift for themselves.

Chamber plans breakfast

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Crown Bank will sponsor the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce monthly breakfast on Wednesday, Dec. 1, at the Holiday Inn, 230 W. Hwy. 436.

The guest speaker, Tom Garwood, will be speaking on the legalities of hiring and firing.

The breakfast begins at 7:20 a.m. and will conclude at 9 a.m.

The cost for members is $10 and $15 for non-members. Reservations are requested by calling 246-2562.

Autograph session planned

The inventor of "Santa Dollars", Sanford native Roz (Ratloff) White will be at the First Street Gallery Thursday to autograph the collectibles which are also legal tender. The $1 bills with a Santa sticker imposed over George Washington's face come with a card designed by a noted artist. They are sold for $2.50 at Eckerd Drug Stores. The profits from the Santa Dollars go to Abilities, a vocational rehabilitation program in Clearwater which trains disabled people and helps them find jobs.

White will be at the Gallery at 5:30 p.m. to sign the dollars people have purchased at the drug store. Jan Cara said her sister wanted to do something for her home town. There will also be a display of past Santa Dollars from the eight year old program.

Official: Sanford facility opens gate for international flights

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Work is scheduled to begin by January on the 30,000-square-foot International Arrivals Building at Central Florida Regional Airport.

A $1.8 million contract was awarded to Mark Construction Co. of Longwood to complete the addition to the existing 20,000-square-foot terminal by fall 1994. The Sanford Airport Authority will also pay Mark Construction $58,000 to build a reinforced foundation to support the hoped-for future second-floor SAA offices in the 50,000-square-foot complex.

"This facility will open the gates to international charter flights and commercial airline service at CFRA," said SAA chairman A.K. Shoemaker Jr. in a statement. "It's a key element in our development as a vital regional air-transport hub."

Planning and Zoning members review changes to Duany plan

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday will discuss regulations protecting the architectural purity of the historic district.

The codes the city has asked P&Z to review are based on suggestions from architect and town planner Andres Duany, who visited Sanford at the invitation of the Sanford Historic Trust two years ago. Duany conducted a series of charettes, after which input from residents was formulated into a set of proposed codes protecting the district. The city has been refining the regulations since then.

A workshop will precede the regular meeting, which will begin at 7 p.m., in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall. As of last week, the following items are listed on the agenda:

• Consideration — "Old Sanford Regulations" Based on the "Duany Code."

• Public Hearing — Application to rezone from GC-2 and SR-1A, General Commercial and Single Family Dwelling Residential, to PD, Planned Development, for property located between French and Elm Avenues, and 15th and 18th Streets. The property, directly east of Sanford Middle School, is owned by the city.

• Public Hearing — Application to rezone from RC-1, Restricted Commercial, to GC-2, General Commercial, property at 2484 S. Sanford Avenue. W. Donald Smith, owner.

• Public Hearing, Application to rezone from AG, Agriculture, to PD, Planned Development, property located at 1200 Upsala

One of the passengers was scheduled to be released.

Columbia Healthcare Corporation of Louisville, Ky. offered to purchase a 50 percent interest in the 339-bed Winter Park hospital for an undisclosed sum.

A merger is also in the works between HCA-Hospital Corporation and Columbia pending approval from the stockholders and the Federal Trade Commission.

Hunters becoming the hunted

By Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Authorities fear hunters are becoming the hunted in northeast Florida after two men were slain in the wilderness in the last 10 days.

The hunters were found on state-owned public wildlife land in Clay and Baker counties with fatal shotgun wounds to their heads. Both had been robbed, authorities said.

"There are similarities at both scenes to indicate that it's the same person involved in both crimes," Baker County Sheriff

Murray Richardson said. "My chief worry right now is that this guy could possibly strike again."

Clay County Sheriff Scott Lancaster warned hunters to be wary.

"Hunters aren't normally alarmed when they encounter someone in the woods with a gun," Lancaster said. "It's not supposed to be the place where someone becomes the victim of a violent crime."

Hunters were stunned by news of the link between the two killings.

"I'm appalled to think this type of thing is going on," said Gordon Vines, a Jacksonville hunter and a board member of the Florida Wildlife Foundation. "My concern is for everyone in the woods, be they hunters, bird-watchers or hikers."

The body of Don Hill, 63, of Orange Park was found by his son near a tree stand Nov. 20 in Osceola National Forest in the Oluatee section of Baker County. He had gone hunting the day before and didn't return to the camp that night.

Gregory Allan Wood, 35, also of Orange Park, was found dead Nov. 25, Thanksgiving, in Camp Blanding in Clay County. He had gone hunting the day before.

Add Duany's codes, enforce current ones

Over two years ago, architect and town planner Andres Duany was contracted by the Sanford Historic Trust and compensated by a grant partially paid by the city. He hosted a series of town meetings in which residents and officials aired their views of the good, the bad and the ugly in Sanford. Out of these charrettes, a set of codes was formulated to preserve the integrity of the historic residential and business districts.

They're fine-tuned, polished and just about ready for the city to consider for adoption. When these codes are approved, they will help preserve our historic buildings.

Sanford's move toward protecting its downtown historic district with the adoption of the Duany codes is an important one by which all citizens will benefit.

The city and the historic trust have been studying these codes in an effort to mold them to Sanford's exact needs. We applaud their efforts in bringing this arduous task to fruition.

The revised codes under consideration by the city address the architectural purity of the district. They disallow owners from cutting corners to the detriment of neighboring property and from using substandard or inappropriate materials that are inconsistent with older buildings.

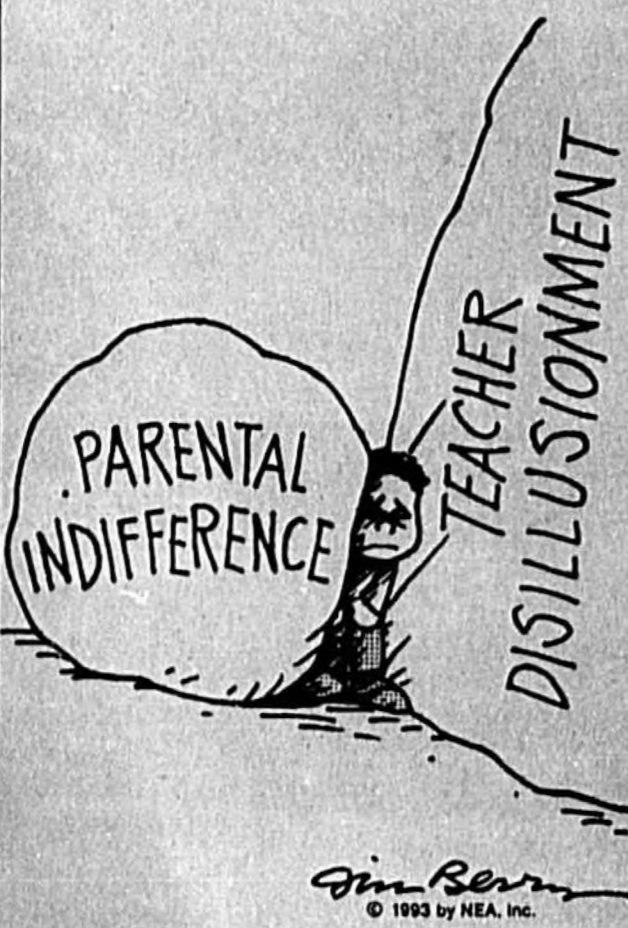

Duany also addressed special standards for the district, dealing with occupancy, maintenance and management of multi-family units, rooming houses and apartments. The city deleted these suggested codes because officials say they are already covered with current city ordinances.

We voice some concern over the enforcement of these current city codes. For example: Over the past several years, many residents in the historic district have sharply criticized the city's handling of transient rentals. We encourage the city to do a better job enforcing city codes now on the books. Coupled with the commission's approval of the new Duany codes, Old Sanford can join historic luminaries such as Charleston, St. Augustine and Savannah: shining jewels in history's crown.

Chronicles of conservative crackup

Nowadays there are many mansions in the great house of American conservatism, and a certain amount of internal disagreement among them is not only inevitable but positively healthy. It isn't even beyond the realm of possibility that some of the brethren may ultimately decide they would feel more comfortable elsewhere. But certainly sensible conservatives ought to try to get along with one another, and save their 16-inch shells for the liberals.

That was why I was distressed by an article in the November issue of Chronicles, the principal journalistic organ of a group that calls itself the "paleoconservatives." This is one of the more recent accretions to the conservative coalition, having appeared on the scene in the early 1980s. As their self-chosen name suggests, they like to think of themselves as squarely opposed in many respects to the "neoconservatives," a group of New York-based liberals and leftists (led by Irving Kristol among others) who crossed the aisle in the mid-1980s in protest against liberal indulgence toward the New Left.

The paleoconservatives make up for their recent arrival by professing allegiance, as their name suggests, to a conservatism grounded in the 19th century, long before the modern conservative movement was born. Among their intellectual forbears are John C. Calhoun, the Southern Agrarians and the eminent author of "Ideas Have Consequences," Richard Weaver. They make no bones about their nostalgia for an earlier America, of small towns and Tarkingtonian values.

They have, in my opinion, something valuable to add to the conservative dialogue, and indeed to mainstream American thought. Chronicles (which is published by the Rockford Institute of Rockford, Ill.) is, in general, well written and well edited, thanks to its brilliant young editor Tom Fleming, and a number of excellent commentators regularly find space in its pages.

But that is precisely why I was so distressed to find, in the November issue, in an article by Fleming himself, one of those paragraphs that many of us are guilty of in our youth, but that we usually come to regret as the years roll on. Quoth Fleming:

"The Republican elite, which includes most Manhattan conservative leaders, ... are still going about the business of selling their country to the highest international bidder. The editors of National Review and the Wall Street Journal are wildly enthusiastic for NAFTA, but this time around they do not even have the excuse of international communism. Like the old internationalists who were willing to betray their country for the sake of an ideology, these new internationalists -- that is, those who are not simple opportunists -- are ideologues who, in the name of free trade and international order, are eager to throw young Americans out of work and into a U.N. peace-keeping force to make the world safe for the Fortune 500, and they are the proper object of the popular outrage that is so far confined to venting itself on radio talk shows and Perot love-ins."

Now, there is undoubtedly a market for rhetoric like that in this country, but it is not to be found among sensible people.

But certainly sensible conservatives ought to try to get along, and save their 16-inch shells for the liberals.

We're into very smoky territory

BOSTON — Call me what you like. A virulent non-smoker. A hard-core tobacco hater. Cigarette averse. Cigarette-company hostile.

Need somebody to stand up for a $1 a pack tax? I'm your gal. Looking for someone to criticize cigarette ads? You'll find me in the non-smoking section.

As someone who spent her 30s silently suffering — well, not so silently — in a city room flanked by two cigar smokers, I have experienced the first-hand horrors of second-hand smoke. And I am not above a judgmental flash when I see a parent feeding a baby with one hand and holding a Marlboro with the other.

Nevertheless... For all my sterling credentials as an advocate of clean indoor air, I get uncomfortable when smoking starts to be a criteria for child custody. When a parent is judged unfit because he or she smokes. When you can lose a kid if you can't make the habit.

In the past few years, more than a dozen such cases have gone through family courts in at least 11 states. In most of them, the child has had some sort of respiratory illness and in nearly all the non-smoking parents won. Now the numbers are escalating.

Last month in Sacramento, Calif., a mother lost custody of her 8-year-old daughter, who has asthma. The girl was placed temporarily with a grandparent while the court decides on permanent custody between two warring parents.

With my anti-smoking cap on, I would have quite a lot to say to this mother — a 30-year-old nurse! — who is apparently puffing around her asthmatic child. If the girl's health is threatened, if the cigarette is a lethal weapon, there's reason to take the kid and run.

But these legal precedents have a tendency to drift into the nasty atmosphere of other divorce disputes. In nearby Contra Costa, for example, a mother has gone to court to make her ex-husband choose between his cigarettes and his visitation rights. The court will rule on whether he can smoke around his daughters. Neither of whom have respiratory problems.

You will not be surprised to learn that the parents in both cases were involved in long, rancorous fights before they took up the smoking cudgel. A family court worker in Contra Costa says that, in the last year, smoking has suddenly come up in half a dozen cases. It's fair to ask whether the cigarette is another weapon of warring parents. It's fair to ask whether smoking should be the trump card in everyday wrangles over the kids.

Just about nine months ago, the EPA released a study of the risks of second-hand smoke. Exposure to second-hand smoke causes 150,000 to 300,000 respiratory infections each year in children between infancy to 18 months. It affects about 20 percent of the 2 million to 5 million asthmatic children in the country.

We may only hear about these kids when they are involved in custody disputes, but the children of divorce don't have different respiratory systems than the children of marriage. If we award divorced kids a smoke-free home, then why not take all the children of smokers out of their dangerous environment? If so, where do we put them?

If health care becomes the pivotal issue in a custody fight, why stop at smoking? A n evaluation of mom and pop should include a lead-paint check, a radon test, a nutritional balance sheet, a search for dangerous weapons and a knowledge of parental seat-belt habits. For that matter, if health is a clue to health, should the richer ex-spouse get the kids?

And what about mental health? Is smoking a better criteria for deciding custody than what we used to call emotional attachment? We're into some very smoky territory.

There have already been two other cases in which asthmatic children were removed to foster care. In one, a Tennessee court refused to return the children even though the mother had entered a program to quit smoking. Now one of the more ardent anti-smoking crusaders suggests that the next wave of cases will include grandparents who want to rescue kids from a smoky environment.

Children have been the natural allies of the anti-smoking campaigns. They want their parents to quit. They nag them to quit. The risks of second-hand smoke provides another motive. Children should be a non-smoking zone. But threatening parents with the loss of their kids is not part of my 12-step program.

Should the smoker lose the kids to the non-smoker? Not even I want to see that warning on the cigarette pack.

Need somebody to stand up for a $1 a pack tax? I'm your gal.

Palestinians and quest for power

WASHINGTON — As the Palestinians move toward autonomy in the Gaza Strip and Jericho, one question haunts many of them: Can they truly have power, without power?

That is, will it be possible to run their own lives when all the energy and fuel is coming from elsewhere — primarily Israel?

If the United States thinks it has problems because of its addiction to imported oil from unstable regions like the Middle East, consider now the plight of the Palestinians.

Even though the Jerusalem District Electricity Co. in East Jerusalem is controlled by Palestinians, nearly 100 percent of all the electricity it distributes throughout the Occupied Territories comes from Israel. And it will have to remain that way for the near future.

The Palestinian region has no known oil or geothermal resources. And the likelihood that the Israelis would ever agree to a sure-fire solution for self-sufficient Palestinian energy — a civilian Palestinian nuclear reactor — is unimaginable. So the Palestinians, who want to cut the infrastructure umbilical cord to Israel that's been built since the 1967 occupation, cannot do so in the immediate future in this most vital area.

An unreleased U.S. Defense Department intelligence report we have seen states: "Electric power and other sources of energy may prove the greatest obstacle to Palestinian autonomy. Any viable peace agreement will have to specify a plan to gradually wean the West Bank and Gaza away from dependence on Israel. Alternative provisions for importing fuel for power generation will be necessary to lessen vulnerability to potential economic blackmail."

Not even 5 percent of the electrical power used in the territories is generated today by sources in Palestine. Two plants — one in East Jerusalem, and one in Nablus — provide the greatest capacity, but their equipment is old and poorly maintained. A number of rural communities have small generating facilities that provide part-time power.

Altogether, according to our sources, 95 percent of Palestinian urban residents have adequate access to electric power, though it is subject to frequent interruptions — mostly from the Israelis.

The Jerusalem District Electricity Co. buys its power from the Israeli wholesale and sends it over an aging system of 273 miles of wires that lose a fifth of the power. The price for the power from the Israeli electricity authority is probably cheaper than what they could purchase from Jordan or elsewhere.

Still, Yasir Arafat might well be willing to pay double or more the Israeli price to get the Palestinians off the Israeli system. Sources in the Palestine Liberation Organization say he's put a very high priority and premium on international aid pledged by the United States and other countries to build a new power network. To him, diversification of power sources is as much about political empowerment as it is electricity.

One likely possibility is reconnection with the Jordanian power grid. Until 1967, the Occupied Territories were part of Jordan and got their electricity from that Arab source. But the old lines were cut and cannot be reconnected until Israel and Jordan sign a peace accord. Even then, many Palestinian leaders believe Jordan might not want to share its already-strained power grid with the Palestinians. If they do agree, the Palestinians know the Jordanians will charge a huge premium.

One question haunts many of them: Can they truly have power, without power?

uled to disembark at the Sanford terminal, according to information provided by Amtrak in Washington, D.C. The name of the person could not be obtained.

"It was a communications breakdown," said Chris Gent, a spokesman for the Kissimmee Utility Authority, which owns the generator the truck was towing.

The trailer was carrying a $12.6 million power plant generator from Tampa's port to the utility's new power station in this dusty outpost about 20 miles southwest of Orlando.

Gent, who witnessed the accident, said a train dispatcher was notified at about 12:35 p.m. that the truck was stuck.

Confusion apparently arose about the location of the crossing.

Gent said utility officials were told the first train heading that way would stop at the nearby Kissimmee station at 1 p.m. and wait until the line was freed. But the trailer was stuck between the station and the oncoming Amtrak train.

The accident occurred at 12:45 p.m.

Both Amtrak and CSX Transportation, which owns the track, said no one called at all.

"There are all sorts of allegations and it's unfortunate," said Amtrak spokeswoman Pat Kelly. "But there's a missing link somewhere, and we'll all be most cooperative in finding out."

CSX spokeswoman Donna Rohrer said CSX provides toll-free numbers to police and emergency authorities, but apparently no one called that line. She said the first call CSX received was from police at 12:46 p.m., telling of the crash.

"We have second-by-second control over every train," said CSX spokesman Jay Westbrook. "We have the ability to stop a train by radio or by signal if we get a warning like that."

National Transportation Safety Board officials were to begin their investigation today.

Engineers said they had only needed at least a mile to stop the train.

"We had just come around the curve and it was there," said engineer James Thomas, 46, who with his assistant lunged into the safety of an engine room compartment. "We hit. Boom! Bang! Just like that."

The impact crumpled the truck, trailer and generator and pushed them the length of a football field. Four of the train's eight cars tumbled off the tracks in a cloud of dust.

"All I know is I woke up underneath the table," said Margaret Hawkins, 71, of New York City, who had just finished eating a banana nut muffin in the lounge car when the collision knocked her to the floor. She suffered minor bruises.

The truck, moving slowly under its huge burden, was escorted by two highway patrol cars as required by the state Department of Transportation.

Just a few hundred yards from its destination, the belly of the truck ground to a halt atop the raised railroad crossing.

Gent said he realized something was wrong when the crossing gates suddenly came down on the truck and the trailer. The troopers who had escorted the truck frantically tried to flag down the train, but it was too late.

"Then it hit," Gent said. "I heard the scraping and the screeching of the steel all along the track."

"Our landing fees are more economical than Daytona and Orlando," said Glenn, former county commissioner and member of the Seminole County Tourist Development Council. "It's centrally located between the beaches and the entertainment attractions, but we in Seminole County feel we too have some accommodations that would be nice for people to visit."

Glenn said the IAB may not be done in time for next year's World Cup games in Orlando, but she said international visitors will be exposed to the facility so they will want to return to central Florida by way of Sanford.

"It's one of those kind of things that if you don't have the facility, they won't come," she said.

National Air Charters, which now flies a DC-3 charter service, is planning regular weekend flights to the Bahamas. Cooke said several Canadian services have also expressed an interest in beginning regular flights to the Sanford airport.

The IAB is the latest step in several underway to upgrade the 50-year-old airport, a former military training base. Design and engineering is being completed on a new entrance and access which will extend Silver Lake Drive to meet the four-lane entrance west of the north-south runways.

The county agreed to shift projects to move the Silver Lake Drive extension forward to meet the airport's improvements schedule. Airport officials saw the extension as a critical link to the Central Florida GreenWay and Orlando-area markets.

Cooke said early next year, contracts are expected to be let for a 250-space parking expansion and 4,000-square-foot flight services center to replace the small office in the terminal.

The improvements are financed with a $3 million Florida Department of Transportation loan acquired by former Sen. W.W. "Bud" Gardner.

local hospital, greeted the news that Winter Park Memorial may be joining the Columbia chain as well with enthusiasm.

He said the HCA-Columbia merger may be finalized in February, if all goes well. With the addition of the Winter Park Hospital to the chain, Vincent said the hospitals will be able to compete in marketing their services to health management programs. The other two major networks in the area are Orlando Regional Healthcare System and Florida Hospital.

He said the completion of the bridge over Lake Jesup and GreenWay Expressway should reduce travel times between the hospitals making access easier.

Although the merger is not complete and HCA is still in a competitive posture with other hospitals, even ones affiliated with the Columbia system, Vincent is looking forward to the future.

"This is going to mean great things for our community," Vincent said.

Cynthia Suher, vice president for customer relations described the Columbia Healthcare purchase of a share of the Winter Park Hospital as a "win-win situation." She said the Sanford hospital will have access to the local hospital network as well as the resources of the national company. Supplies are purchased through the chain at less cost.

After the network is on line in Florida, Suher said there were will be 47 Columbia Healthcare hospitals and 95 percent of the residents in the entire state will be within 20 minutes of a Columbia facility.

Crime issue a winner for all politicians

By TOM RAUM
An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's increasingly passionate offensive on crime allows him to claim the forefront on what is shaping up as next year's single biggest election issue.

It's one on which Democratic advisers suggest Clinton can't easily lose — and one he is demonstrating he won't neglect.

As he signed the Brady handgun control law Tuesday, Clinton proclaimed "step one in taking our streets back."

It was rhetoric that wasn't falling on any deaf ears, either here or out across the country, pollsters say.

Crime has become "a no-lose political issue as long as you have something to say about it," Democratic pollster Mark Mellman said. It's been showing up in polls as the No. 1 concern of Americans "no matter how you ask the question," he added.

And it's a particularly important issue to Democrats, since they now have control of the White House and both chambers of Congress — and have a good shot at being able to propel their proposals to enactment.

That would be a further step in the Democrats' efforts over the past few years to wrest the issue from Republicans.

Fighting crime is far easier to sell to the public than the other major Clinton agenda items: deficit reduction and the North American Free Trade Agreement this year, health care overhaul next year.

"We've seen crime as the No. 1 issue since the end of summer, surpassing both jobs and the economy," said Republican pollster Ed Gocas. It far outdistances public concern about health care, Gocas said.

Clinton has been linking anti-crime measures with other domestic initiatives, like health care and economic security, for months.

But his recent speeches show he is fastening on the issue more and more, leading up to an emotional, podium-thumping speech at the Brady bill signing.

Clinton also has called for putting 100,000 more police officers on the streets of the nation's cities.

"You're wrong if you think this is a response to poll numbers. The poll numbers are a response to his leadership," asserted White House strategist Paul Begala.

Still, Begala was quick to concede that crime was "a winning issue" for Clinton.

Public concern over crime is only partially borne out by statistics.

The FBI reported earlier this fall that violent crimes reported to police edged up last year due to increases in aggravated assault and rape, but that the total number of crimes dropped 2.9 percent to 14.4 million — the first annual decline since 1984.

There were 1.9 million violent crimes reported last year, a 1.1 percent increase from the year before.

GOP pollster Glen Bolger said attention given to violent crimes against foreign tourists in Florida during the summer may have started the recent wave of public concern over violent crime.

"There's a sense that crime is raging out of control," he said.

But with so many candidates jumping on the bandwagon, a new political problem arises, Bolger suggested: "The challenge is for candidates to show how they are different from their opponents."

A hint of what's to come in upcoming midterm elections came in the floor debate in the Senate earlier this month on the crime bill. Lawmakers of both parties vied to outbid each other in demonstrating who was the toughest on crime.

The result was 50 new death penalty crimes and 21 new minimum mandatory sentences.

Clinton got wind of how strongly the crime issue was playing soon after he unveiled his health-care proposal.

When he went to Sacramento, Calif., in early October for a "town hall" meeting, the topic was supposed to be health care and the studio was decorated with huge blowups of doctors, nurses and patients.

But all the audience wanted to talk about was crime. And about all that was heard of health care were Clinton's opening remarks.

Study: Fat diet ups lung cancer risk

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — High-fat diets increase the risk of lung cancer, even for nonsmokers, according to a National Cancer Institute study published today.

An NCI study of nonsmoking women in Missouri found that those whose diets had 15 percent or more saturated fat were about six times more likely to develop lung cancer than those whose diets had 10 percent of less of the fat.

"We found that as you increase the amount of saturated fat, you increase the amount of lung cancer," Michael C.R. Alavanja, an NCI researcher, said Tuesday.

A report on the study was published in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

Earlier studies have linked high-fat diets with cancers of the colon, prostate and breast. High-fat diets also are thought to increase the risk of heart disease.

Alavanja said his research compared the diets of 429 nonsmoking women who had lung cancer with the diets of 1,021 nonsmoking women who did not have lung cancer. The women all lived in the same part of the country, Missouri, were of about the same age and represented "a typical American female population."

The women filled out forms that asked about their dietary habits. They were then divided into five groups based on the amount of fat and other nutrients they consumed.

Alavanja said the study found that those with diets containing the lowest amount of saturated fat and the highest amount of fruits, vegetables, beans and peas were the least likely to develop lung cancer.

At the other end of the scale, 20 percent of the women in the study with the highest consumption of fat and diets lowest in fruits, vegetables, beans and peas had about six times more lung cancer.

For a specific type of lung cancer, adenocarcinoma, there was an 11-fold difference between those on lowest fat diets and those on the highest fat diets. Adenocarcinoma is a form of lung cancer that is less often associated with smoking than other forms of lung cancer.

"The leading contributors of dietary saturated fat were hamburgers, cheeseburgers, and meat loaf ... followed by weekly consumption of cheeses and cheese spreads, hot dogs, ice cream and sausages," the study said.

Pats, Rams battle to tie; Silver Hawks, Lions win

By TONY DeSORMIER Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY — So this is the way it's going to be: the boys' soccer teams of the six Seminole County high schools are going to spend the next two months beating on each other, asking and giving no quarter.

Lake Mary outshot Lake Brantley 30-9 and had a 5-1 advantage in corner kicks, forcing Patriot goalie Sean Seaver to make 11 saves.

The Patriots capitalized on one of their few solid chances, Pat Ireland collecting a misplayed Lake Mary clearing attempt and tying the score later in the first half.

Lake Mary, which played the final 9:32 with a man advantage after Ireland was sent off with his second yellow card, had a chance to take the lead when it was awarded a penalty kick at 72:47, but Don Delaney's attempt hit the right post.

Now 3-2-1, Lake Brantley will host Oviedo Thursday. Lake Mary (4-0-2) will entertain Lake Howell.

LAKE HOWELL 3, SEMINOLE 0 SANFORD — Dean Shields scored two goals and had an assist as Lake Howell blanked Seminole 3-0.

Derrick Seaman scored the first goal. Eason Demayo and Jeff Yearick assisted on Shields' scores.

Lake Howell (3-1) plays at Lake Mary Thursday while Seminole (0-2) travels to Lyman.

OVIEDO 2, LYMAN 0 OVIEDO — Scott Thelen scored twice in the final 11 minutes to give the Oviedo Lions a 2-0 decision over the Lyman Greyhounds.

Lyman outshot Oviedo 17-8 and had a 7-1 advantage in corner kicks, but Lion goalie Darren Ockwig came up with six saves.

In junior varsity action, Lyman beat Oviedo 3-0.

LYMAN GIRLS WIN LONGWOOD — Sara Kane scored twice and goalie Cheryl Roberts notched her fourth shutout Tuesday as Lyman topped Bishop Moore 3-0 in a girls' soccer match.

Shea Donihl scored Lyman's other goal. Michelle St. Louis and Loretta Keith each had an assist.

Long-shot Jacksonville wins NFL expansion derby

By RON WORD Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE — The city which has spent years as college football's home to the world's largest outdoor cocktail party now will be celebrating with the big boys.

The NFL on Tuesday awarded the football-frenzied fans of longshot Jacksonville with the 30th expansion team — the Jacksonville Jaguars — upstaging two former NFL cities, St. Louis and Baltimore, as well as Memphis.

The decision also came after a tumultuous summer in which the city's longtime push for a franchise almost fell apart.

"I just knew," said Sara Nichols, a volunteer for the Jaguars Booster Club. "I bought a car tag in the summer that says, 'Jaguars.' I just knew."

Fans chanting "Whoop, there it is," and "Jaguars, Jaguars," gathered at The Jacksonville Landing, an oceanfront restaurant-shopping area, to celebrate the announcement as strangers high-fived and hugged one another.

"It's not a miracle. It's a well-earned victory for our community," said Wayne Weaver, the team's principal owner and the managing general partner of Touchdown Jacksonville Ltd., the group seeking an NFL team for several years.

"We are going to be a great new partner for the NFL," Weaver added, holding up a Jaguars jersey.

Calling Jacksonville "a hotbed of football interest," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said, "There was the feeling that the Southeast is the fastest growing part of the country, and even with a team in Charlotte, is under-represented." Jacksonville fans certainly have trained for the big leagues.

Attendance has been strong for several NFL preseason games, and the city has supported teams in the United States Football League and the World Football League. The Jacksonville Bulls led the USFL in attendance. And since 1933, the city has been the home to the Georgia-Florida game, touted as the world's largest outdoor cocktail party.

The successful drive to secure a team was the latest in a long list of

Gout drugs may dissolve nodules

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has lumps on his knuckles caused from gout. Is this a buildup of uric acid crystals? He's taking colchicine that doesn't appear to help, and we wonder what you would recommend.

risk of stroke or heart attack -- specifically, people with temporary, pre-stroke symptoms (TIA) or those who have had a previous heart attack.

DEAR READER: Uric acid crystals, the cause of gout, can indeed form permanent nodules around joints. Called "tophi," these lumps may be difficult to treat. He should bring this to his doctor's attention.

A gout preventive (allopurinol) may help release the crystals from the tophi. The doctor can prescribe these pills, if appropriate. Colchicine may accomplish the same goal but is usually less effective.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "About Gout." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm confused about the correct dosage of aspirin to be used as a blood thinner to prevent strokes and heart attack. One doctor suggests one buffered aspirin per day, another suggests one baby aspirin. Who is correct?

DEAR READER: Both doctors are correct because there's a range of dosage. A baby aspirin is probably sufficient for most people, but hefty or stout patients may need more. I would suggest a baby aspirin for a 100-pound elderly woman, and a full aspirin (or Bufferin) for a middle-aged, 200-pound man.

Authorities do not recommend aspirin therapy for anticoagulation in healthy persons; the treatment should only be considered in patients with a high

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Benjamin Stolberg defined an expert as someone who avoids the small error as he sweeps on to the grand fallacy. However, in bridge it is important to know whether your opponents are experts or less capable practitioners. You can conjure credible conclusions from the play of the former. The deductions are less dependable from the latter.

South didn't find the winning line on today's deal, which he played against two international champions. Was he unlucky or did he miss a key piece of evidence?

But if the aces were split, as they rated to be, he had to drive out West's ace first -- West's entry to his long spades.

South played a diamond to his king, which West ducked. Deciding this meant East had the diamond ace, South now led a club to dummy's queen. However, East won with the ace and returned his last spade. When declarer played another diamond, West won with the ace and cashed two spade tricks: one down.

West played well in ducking his ace. He could see that although he might lose a diamond trick, he had to retain his entry card. But South shouldn't have assumed East held the diamond ace, because if East did have the ace, he would have played it immediately at trick three. He would recognize the importance of preserving his partner's entry.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osool
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 2, 1993

A number of interesting changes could be in the offing for you in the year ahead. Your social life, the way you earn money and do business, and your leisure time interests may all be in for transformations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's best not to take gambles on persons or things today about which you know little. You might be a trifle more gullible than usual and you could be had. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Inconsistency substantially lessens your probabilities for success today, because you might do things in ways that will confuse associates who want to help you. Don't jump around.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you lack patience today when performing critical tasks, your potential for making mistakes could be greatly increased. Take your time and do things correctly.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It may be wise to avoid all forms of speculative risks today, especially ones where you hope to gain a lot for a little. If they are any good, they won't evaporate overnight.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Complications are likely today if you fail to take your pride out of the picture by refusing to let others run things you're ill equipped to handle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be very selective today regarding persons you tease or poke fun at. A sensitive friend might misinterpret your comments and seek some type of recourse.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If commercial matters aren't handled prudently today, opportunities could slip through your fingers. Situations where you should experience gains might be linked in red instead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Victory could elude you today if you lack focus and are unable to bring your forces to bear on specific objectives. Do less, but do it to the very best of your ability.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be a positive thinker today and try to behave accordingly. If you start feeling sorry for yourself and demand others assist you, even persons who planned to help could reject you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Involvements with friends where money is exchanged in some manner must be handled with extreme care today or someone, perhaps you, might end up thinking he/she got the short end.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions are rather unusual today and even after you achieve an objective, measures must be taken to solidify what you've won. If not, it might slip away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Companions will be more impressed today by the example you establish rather than the philosophy you espouse. Do more doing and a lot less talking.

father until the year that I was born. I was born and within a few months we moved back to Tennessee." In 1979, Bales moved to Florida and has lived in Sanford for the last seven years.

Bales and her husband, Jeff, have been married for four years. Jeff is employed with Sanford Motor Company, a family owned and operated business. She has been employed for the last three years as secretary with Ernst and Young, a CPA firm in Orlando. She is a member of the Junior Woman's Club of Sanford and also a member of the Sanford Historical Society.

Painting (art), collecting antiques, and scuba diving name just a few of the hobbies that the couple enjoy together. Jeff is also a dedicated hunter and fisherman. "We eat a lot of seafood," said Bales. "Most everything we catch I have a special recipe for." "With seafood I have found that there are endless and very creative ways to prepare it."

When it comes to entertaining her guests, Bales goes all out. "I love to do all those little extra things," she said. "For instance, taking the time to carve an attractive design into your raw veggies like maybe your radishes or mushrooms really makes a beautifully relish tray."

Her real specialty is her parties with a theme. It's creative as well as entertaining for the guests. And nobody enjoys giving or attending a boring party.

Bales has taken classes ranging from Chinese cooking to cake decorating. She doesn't hesitate to give credit where credit is due, that person being her mother. "My mom is a great southern cook," said Bales. "I've learned a great deal from her." But with her own culinary flair, Bales has created many of the recipes she uses.

With the holiday season being ever so present, parties and get together are almost inevitable. Appetizers are a must and Bales' own recipes for Artichoke Heart Dip served with crackers or her Oyster Stuffed Mushrooms are always a big hit.

ARTICHOKE HEART DIP
1 can artichoke hearts (for spicier dip, use two small glass jars of marinated artichokes, drained)

1 (8 oz.) can Parmesan cheese
1 cup Hellman's mayonnaise
Preheat oven to 350°F. Finely chop artichoke hearts (save a quarter of one to place on top for decoration). Mix together with cheese and mayonnaise. Bake for 20 to 30 minutes, depending upon the size of your baking dish, until lightly golden on top. Serve with crackers.

Another easy method is to place everything in your blender. Blend all ingredients together until well mixed and then bake. This makes a finer consistency.

OYSTER STUFFED MUSHROOMS
24 mushrooms (approximately 1 1/2 inches in diameter)
1/4 cup chopped green onion
1 Tbsp. butter
1/4 tsp. dried summer savory
1/4 tsp. pepper
4 Tbsp. white wine (reserve 2 tablespoons)
2 Tbsp. water

3 Tbsp. Parmesan cheese
1 tin smoked petite oysters
Preheat oven to 350°F. Wash mushrooms, remove stems and place caps in baking dish. Chop stems and cook with onion in the butter until tender. In same pan, add flour, savory and pepper. Quickly stir in 2 tablespoons of wine and 2 tablespoons water. Cook and stir until thick. You may need to add the other 2 tablespoons of wine, one at a time, if mixture is too thick. Stir in Parmesan cheese, drain oil from oysters, and stir in mixture. Let cool for a few minutes. Fill mushroom caps, top with breadcrumbs and bake for 15 to 20 minutes or until tender. Serve immediately.

JALAPENO CORN MUFFINS
1/4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour

1/2 cup yellow corn flour
1 Tbsp. baking powder
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1 cup milk
1/4 cup butter, melted
1 large egg
1 small red Jalapeno pepper
1 cup fresh or frozen yellow whole-kernel corn (drained)

1 Tbsp. chopped cilantro
Preheat oven to 400°F. Grease 24 1/2-inch muffin pan cups. In large bowl, combine all-purpose flour, yellow corn flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. In a small bowl, combine milk, butter and egg with a wire whisk. Stir milk mixture into flour mixture just until flour is moistened. Batter will be lumpy. Remove and discard stem, ribs and seeds from pepper and finely chop. Fold in pepper, corn and cilantro. Using a small spoon, divide batter among greased muffin pan cups. Bake 10 to 12 minutes or until centers spring back when lightly pressed with fingertip. Cool muffins in pan on wire rack 5 minutes. Remove muffins from pan and serve warm.

BROCCOLI CASSEROLE
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 (10 oz.) package frozen chopped broccoli
1 can Campbell's Cheddar cheese soup
1 package Quiggley's wild rice
Preheat oven to 350°F. Saute onions in a small amount of butter. Set aside. Cook broccoli according to directions and drain off all water. Cook rice according to directions (omit the butter and salt when using rice in this recipe). In a large bowl, mix onions, broccoli, rice and soup (straight from the can) together and place in a casserole dish. Bake 20-30 minutes or until golden and bubbly on top, depending upon the size of your casserole dish.

RED PEPPER AND BEAN SALAD
3 roasted red peppers (bottled). Depending upon their size, use as many as you think will look good)
2 lbs. green beans, trimmed
1/2 cup olive oil
1 1/2 Tbsp. red wine vinegar
1 1/2 tsp. Dijon mustard
2 scallions, minced
1 Tbsp. minced fresh parsley (or dried)

1/2 cup black pepper
Cut roasted peppers into thin slices. Steam beans in a steamer, using an inch or so of water until tender, 8 to 10 minutes. Rinse under cold water to stop the cooking. Drain. Mix all other ingredients in a jar with a tight fitting lid, shake well. Toss with roasted red peppers and green beans. Makes approximately 8 servings.

EASY RUMAKI
2 cans whole water chestnuts, drained
1 lb. bacon
Wooden toothpicks (do not use plastic)

Cut bacon into slices long enough to wrap once around a water chestnut, and secure with a toothpick. Place on a broiler pan so that juices from bacon will drain. Broil until bacon is done, turning once. You will need to watch so that bacon does not burn. Drain on paper towels and serve immediately on a bed of fresh romaine.

HOLIDAY PUNKI
1 carton sherbet (use whatever color goes best with your theme)
1 liter ginger ale
Let sherbet sit for 10 minutes. Place in bottom of punch bowl and pour ginger ale over. Break up the sherbet a little before serving.

Clinical depression more than a case of the blues

DEAR ABBY: More than 12 million people in America suffer from clinical depression and don't realize it. "Depression" is a word commonly used to describe temporarily "down" moods or sad feelings, but for many it means something much more.

Clinical depression is a serious medical illness that causes persistent changes in a person's mood, behavior and feelings. Too often, the illness is associated with fear and shame, which prevents the individual from asking basic questions about its causes and treatment. They view it as the result of some sort of personal weakness.

Research on clinical depression has established that one's family history is a risk factor. And in recent years, there is increased sensitivity to how environmental factors such as stress or personal loss can trigger the onset of an episode. Clinical depression often is accompanied by alcohol or drug abuse, and tragically, 15 percent of those with severe, untreated depression kill themselves each year.

BARBARA HIRST, MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION OF WESTCHESTER COUNTY, NEW YORK

DEAR BARBARA: Thank you for writing. With the holiday season upon us, many fall victims to depression because of the stress they place upon themselves to have a good time. They feel isolated, convinced that everyone is having a wonderful time except themselves.

The National Mental Health Association has published a free booklet titled "Answers to Your Questions About Clinical Depression." To obtain a copy, readers in the United States and Canada can call, toll-free, (800) 228-1114. For additional information, U.S. readers can call their local Mental Health Association. Canadian readers can call their local Canadian Mental Health Association or write to: Canadian Mental Health Association, National Office, 2160 Yonge St., Toronto, Ontario M4S 2Z3.

You would be doing your readers a tremendous service by informing them about this campaign. While effective treatment is available, only one-third of those with clinical depression seek treatment. The
