MANY FIGHTS ON BOXING CARD FOR NEW YEAR'S DAY

No Matches Are Particularly Important In Ring World

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—(AP)—One big day to open the new year includes practically all of the interesting events in the boxing world this week as the cauliflower industry drops back into the depths of the depression that has marked this winter.

There are no fights of any particular importance although a few fairly prominent performers will show their wares on the New Year's day card. At Boston Thursday afternoon, Roberto Roberti, Italian heavyweight, goes against Jose Santo, 250-pound Portuguese battler, in the scrap which is the biggest in bulk and probably in importance on the week's program.

Another steady performer, Bruce Flowers of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Harry Dublinsky are the performers in a lightweight scrap at Milwaukee the same afternoon.

The Madison Square Garden program Friday brings together Mateo Osa, Spanish heavyweight, and Pierre Charles, of Belgium, in the 10-round main bout. It is proposed to match the winner against Max Baer, young Cincinnatian who made an impressive eastern debut recently.

Other bouts on the week's national program include: Today: At New York, Jamaica Aron, Al Rowe, Philadelphia, vs. Mel Argo, Peru, lightweights, 10.

Thursday: At Columbus, Ohio, Lou Bloom, Columbus, vs. Cowboy Eddie Anderson, Wyoming, lightweights, 10. At Portland, Ore., Leo Lomaski, Aberdeen, Wash., vs. Charles Bellanger, Winnipic, light heavyweights, 10.

Friday: At New York, Madison Square Garden, Ralph Fleucelle, New York, vs. Johnny Grosso, Mount Vernon, N. Y., heavyweights, 10. At St. Louis, Eddie Shea, Chicago, vs. Andy Martin, Boston, featherweights, eight.

Saturday: At Philadelphia, Feathers, Davey Abad, Philadelphia, featherweights, eight. Joe Medill, Chicago, vs. Jackie Brady, Syracuse, N. Y., welterweights, eight. Tommy Grogan, Omaha, vs. Eddie Ryan, New York, welterweights, eight. Lou Terry, St. Louis, vs. Sammy Offerman, St. Louis, lightweights, eight. Marty Fields, Chicago, vs. Joey Rivers, Kansas, welterweights, six.

He added that none of it was used to oppose any Senator. Wade H. Cooper, president of the Commercial National Bank of Washington, testified before Nye's campaign fund committee Monday that Nutt opened a $40,000 account with the bank Oct. 23 for the convenience of Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the National Committee. It was in this sum that Senator Nye referred yesterday.

President Of Rail Students Gather In Association Gives Atlanta To Attend Review Of Business Association Meet

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—(AP)—An agreement unanimously adopted by the nation's railroads, asking a respite from rate reductions and withdrawal of government competition was named yesterday by R. H. Ashton, president of the American Railway Association, as the outstanding development in the railroad field during 1930.

The policy was adopted, Ashton said, to stem a marked shrinkage in the growth of traffic since 1929, due, in part, to the use of automobiles, trucks and busses, traffic through the Panama Canal and over inland waterways.

He described the policy as asking "a fairly comparable system of regulation for competing transportation service," withdrawal of governmental competition through direct operation of transportation facilities as well as indirectly through subsidies; a respite from rate reductions and suspensions by regulatory bodies and adverse legislation.

In reviewing the railroad field for the year, Ashton said two records were established, one an average speed for freight trains of 13.7 miles per hour, and another for fuel economy, an average of 120 pounds of fuel, being used to haul 1030 tons of freight a mile. The leading of revenue freight for the year was estimated at $875,000,000 an increase of $21,000,000 over 1929 and $108,000,000 over 1928.

Class I railroads, he said, had a net railway operating income of $993,000,000 or a return of 3.41 percent on property investment, compared with $1,275,000,000 net operating income for 1929, gross operating income declined 15.5 percent, he said.

Machine guns mounted in steel cages were reported by the raiders to have bristled from the deck of the Johanna Smith.

Fitts said sufficient firearms were found on board to "blow right out of the water" any ship load of would-be raiders. Surprise attacks, he said, prevented resistance and resulted in seizures.

The supposed kidnapping of Zeke Carass, Southern California gambler, Fitts said, he now believes was not a kidnapping but a part of a gangland plot to "muscle in" on the gambling ship business. Checks which Carass signed under coercion to obtain his release, Fitts said, were to have been cashed on the gambling ships. As the result of reports by Carass, Ralph Sheldon, ex-Chicago gangster, was arrested after a gun fight with Long Beach policemen, one of whom was seriously wounded.

STATE ALL-STAR TEAM GETTING IN SHAPE FOR GAME

Coach Is Pleased With Form Of Boys Who Will Play Visitors

MIAMI, Dec. 29.—Florida's All-Star football team which meets White Plains, N. Y., High School New Year's afternoon at Moore Park, is fast rounding into form. Coach Tommy McCann announced himself pleased with the way the squad is shaping up after a long-by practice session yesterday afternoon.

Coach McCann and his assistant, Goldy Goldstein and Alex Rip Reeves, former University of Florida line stars, have refused to name the starting lineup and it has been impossible to get a glimpse on what they intend to do, as they have continually shifted the lineups in practice.

Wallace Brown, St. Petersburg's All-Southern quarterback, seems to have an edge on the rivals for the signal calling post. Jack Henderson, Miami High field general, has been forced to take things easy due to an injury received in the Christmas Day game with Stivers High of Dayton, Ohio.

Osborne Bessent of Robert Lee has been going good in practice at left halfback while Jack Beckwith, Miami High's All-Southern back, seems to be leading J. D. Morris, Lakeland captain, in a merry battle for the other halfback post.

Bob Shoun, Hillsborough, seems the outstanding fullback candidate with Hub McAnly, Arcadia, and Jimmy Adams, Leesburg star, pushing him.

Charlie Fleming, Plant, is expected to be in the lineup at center when the team takes the field against its husky New York rival.

Sam Dunlap, Robert E. Lee, may get the call over John Mastery, St. Petersburg.

Carl Schuman, husky Andrew Jackson tackle, has been shifted to guard and probably will be in the starting lineup. McCann has been high in his praise of the Tiger leader.

Hal Starbuck, Plant, and Hutto Cason, Lakeland, are the outstanding men at the tackle positions with Shag Curry, Clearwater, and Ralph Folk, Leesburg, receiving second choice.

The fight for the end posts also is being waged in a spectacular fashion. Benny Fenton, All-Southern flankman from Lakeland, and Reggie Wilson, Miami High star, seem to be holding a slight advantage over Bob Caldwell, Orlando, and Dick Plaman, Miami High.

Dreaded Jail Keeper At Dannemora, Dies

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Dec. 29.—(AP)—Life has left the mailed fist of Dannemora. Axel J. Granger, principal keeper of the dreaded prison, died here last night at the age of 40 after an operation for appendicitis.

As principal keeper of "the Siberia of New York" Granger was widely known as a severe disciplinarian. Since the riot of July 22, 1929, when desperate convicts tried unsuccessfully to kill him, Granger had kept more than 150 of the mutineers in solitary confinement.

A force of nearly 200 uniformed guards was under his direct control in the prison. Since the 1929 riot the prison population has been at high tension. At one time machine guns were mounted in the mess hall. During all this time Granger had to work inside the walls, in constant contact with the most ruthless and treacherous of the state's bad men. Friends said that his health finally was undermined by the strain.

STATE CAPITOL IN NORTH DAKOTA IS RAZED BY BLAZE

Official Records And Documents Are Destroyed In Flames

BISMARCK, N. D., Dec. 29.—(AP)—North Dakota's capitol building was destroyed by fire yesterday.

Official records and documents of practically every State department housed in the four-story brick structure were consumed by the flames which started on the upper floor.

State affairs were thrown in turmoil through destruction of records and Gov. George F. Shafer issued a call for an immediate meeting of all State officials to consider the situation.

The capitol was erected in 1884 at a time when North and South Dakota were one unit of "Dakota Territory."

Although the monetary loss is not expected to exceed $500,000, the damage caused by destruction of the records was described as "incalculable."

"Loss of the records will result in the greatest confusion in the State's history and years will elapse before it is untangled," Governor Shafer said.

The original copy of the State constitution was among the few papers saved. Secretary of State Robert Byrne brought it out of his office and was slightly burned and cut in his effort. He was the only casualty.

Among the papers lost were records of about $55,000,000 worth of investments in the State Land department and the records of $40,000,000 in the State treasury's office. State Highway Department officials estimated that it will cost from $200,000 to $300,000 to replace their plans.

Three hours after discovery of the flames, the four walls stood as a virtually hollow shell. The fire was discovered by Joseph Winkel, janitor and night watchman, at 7:35 A. M. He gave the alarm, but before firemen could arrive, the blaze already had eaten through the roof.

Washington State And 'Bama Outfits Sightsee On Sunday

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 29.—(AP)—Football players of Alabama and Washington State, opponents in the sixteenth annual Intersectional New Year's day clash, thrust the cares of the gridiron behind them yesterday and took sightseeing tours through Southern California.

Monday practice will be taken up in earnest again with the Cougars from the northwest facing probably the hardest workout, Coach Orin "Hale" Hollingsberry expects to put his gridirers through a hard session both Monday and Tuesday, allowing them to taper down on Wednesday.

Coach Wallace Wade has entirely different ideas for the Crimson Tide. He gave his squad its last strenuous drill Saturday. From now on it will be a matter of polishing off in an effort to round the team into a proper physical and mental condition for the struggle.

Unless injury befalls someone before the coming clash, both teams expect to send their strongest array into the Rose tournament game.

The State Legislature, which convenes January 6, is left homeless, but plans are under way to have members meet in the new county World War memorial and in the City Auditorium. State officials are prepared to submit immediately an emergency bill for appropriations to construct a new building.

For many years governors have recommended a new capitol building, but it was not until 1929 that the legislature enacted a law to levy a one-twentieth mill tax for the succeeding six years, the proceeds—estimated at $650,000—to go into the capitol fund in which there is already $300,000, derived from land grants.

Governor Shafer, who is preparing his inaugural message to the legislators, had inserted a few days ago, a recommendation that a new capitol be constructed.

Money Is Advanced For Crew Members Of Foundered Ship

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, Dec. 29.—(AP)—W. A. Miller, deputy collector of customs, was perplexed over what disposition to make of seven survivors of the schooner W. J. Colle, which was abandoned in the Gulf of Mexico last Sunday, until the ship's owner L. A. Scott, of Sharnock, Fla., telegraphed money for the men.

The survivors had no funds when brought here. They slept in the city jail and received prison fare for food. Arrangements were made for them being made by Corpus Christi chapter of the Red Cross when money arrived.

Members of the crew were discharged by the captain after they were paid and they planned to go to other seaport towns to seek employment.

Capt. O. R. Myles of the abandoned boat formally reported to P. McAuliffe, government meteorologist, that the schooner was smaller 20 miles northwest of West, Fla., its cargo of pitch and lumber well soaked and believed to be in the captain's hull. Members of the crew who were brought here were: Austin Bent, A. Williams, Erick Myles, J. H. Williams, Alton Perlin, and Alton Perlin.

Advantages Of Playgrounds

Taking advantage of cheap labor many cities are carrying out development programs for their parks and playgrounds which is helping much in the relief of unemployment. This is working a two-fold benefit. It not only provides jobs for the unemployed during the present depression but furnishes additional opportunities for people to get out in the open and build up health and morale, two factors which are needed when times are hard.

Municipalities are more and more coming to realize that recreation is an investment in health, safety and lessened crime and it is significant that nations which are usually leaders in mass athletics are the ones which are soundest economically and morally.

It is reported that numerous towns are co-operating in the movement to provide recreational facilities as an unemployment relief measure. Springfield and Boston, Massachusetts being two cities which are building municipal golf courses to provide work for the idle. The Boston course is expected to furnish labor during the winter for two hundred men. San Antonio, Texas has rushed to completion plans for building new community houses on the playgrounds and for enlarging old ones.

Many other instances could be recited of this same spirit. In assisting in alleviating a serious economic menace and at the same time to furnish opportunities for building physical and moral fibre.

The opening of Sanford's new recreational center at the corner of Palmetto Avenue and Second Street is an example of this nature, and the City is to be congratulated for its progressiveness in recognizing that a small investment in municipal playgrounds will be of no small value in helping to overcome the difficulties which the future may face.

Too Much Emphasis

College football has gained such popularity by its spectacular and thrilling nature that it is on the verge of destroying much of its good. It is generally recognized that football along with other sports is the laboratory of the classroom and that on the playing fields is built the manly qualities which are needed for a well-rounded character.

However, in discussing the gridiron situation the Miami Herald sees the sport becoming a menace to colleges and goes on to say:

"With the passing of the football season the professionalization of large college games is deplored editorially by the Paul Block newspapers, which have also carried an advertisement of their opinion in other journals. This professionalization, they say, applies particularly to the methods of recruiting players, to the practice of hallyhooning big games, and to the coaching system. These have led to over-emphasis of football. College football ought to be restored as a game directed as well as played by and for the students.

"Undoubtedly America has carried to ridiculous extremes the worship of football, which has become a great fall spectacle. These contests of a national character are fine shows, with thousands of spectators, broadcast throughout the country, colorful, enthusiastic. There is no harm in them as such, for they provide amusement and thrills to the millions. But they are but of the routine of existence by affording them an exciting interest.

"But football has been transformed into the giant that now dwarfs the school. Colleges are known by the football teams they turn out, not by the scholars they produce. Skilled players are often recruited by questionable means and high salaries are paid the professional coaches. Frequently exceeding those of the learned professors. The teams are hardly representative of the universities, for occasionally the best teams will come from the smaller and minor institutions.

"From the time schools open until winter the main attention of the scholastic world seems to be fixed upon football, the chances of winning the game. Victory in football is the motive. The school spirit is formed about the football team, as though that was the chief aim and purpose of universities, upon which millions of dollars have been and are being spent.

"The colleges and the press are to blame for this over-emphasis, in which the public eagerly joins. The professional coach is given more attention than the president of the college, as though the training of a few boys in the ability to kick and carry a ball was of larger importance than training them for a life of value.

"Efforts are now being made to put football in its proper place in relation to other activities, to reduce the number of games to one or two sectional clashes, to require that the coaches must sit in the stands and not be a part of the contest; that football shall belong to the students.

"America has become so sports conscious that it is unconscious of the greater and more permanent factors."

TELLING THE WORLD
By NEAL O'HARA

THE TEN BIG EVENTS
 Keat Cooper, the head man of the Associated Press, lists the ten greatest news events of the year. Mr. Cooper's selections are slightly off. They would hardly make the second string of our All-American team. If you want to know the ten greatest news events of the year, here they are:

The outstanding sensation of the year occurred at Boston Oct. 28, in the midst of a Democratic campaign speech, Al Smith forgot himself and neglected to call it "raddio." He came right out and pronounced it with a long "a." Panic ensued and pandemonium reigned supreme. The Republicans were caught flat-footed by this eleventh hour shift and Massachusetts went Democratic by 112,000 votes. Al went back to calling it "raddio" the following night, but a new epoch had already been made.

The second most important event of 1930 was the tree-sitting epidemic that hit the country. At the height of this scourge, 20,000,000 Americans were out on a limb. Real estate values collapsed as nearly half the population took up its residence in trees. It was not until the woodpeckers organized and started doing their stuff that citizens climbed down and normalcy was restored. The clock maker started to this event and went down with them for 17 1/2 points.

Truman McInnes supplied the year's third greatest event. Al's head-splitting move on Nov. 20, 1930.

Name announced to his constituents that Grump had scored a touchdown on a forward pass from McTavish. A subsequent checkup, after thirty seconds of suspense, proved that Grump HAD scored a touchdown on a forward pass from McTavish and it wasn't two other fellows or only a drop kick. Church bells were rung and factory whistles blown to celebrate this event.

Fourth in importance was the Congressman Dingle episode at Washington. On the afternoon of June 13, Congressman Dingle wrapped up his pajamas and socks to be laundered and instead of franking them home to East Twilling, Neb., postage free, he affixed an 8-cent stamp on the package. Three postal dropped dead and there were riots in the House of Representatives. But Congressman Dingle allowed the stamp to stay on, although he later confessed he would have tried to steam it off if he had more time to think.

The next greatest event was the discovery of the Maine Stein Song. Although its importance was not recognized at first, it swept the country more thoroughly than the Spanish influenza of 1918, and with a far more deadly effect. Party-convo other states threatened to secede from the Union unless Maine withdrew the Stein Song, but just about that time Rudy Valle had a touch of laryngitis and a civil war was averted.

Another event of outstanding importance occurred July 2, 1930.

WORLD'S WINDOW
By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Just at the moment when Herr Adolph Hitler's live organ, the Fascist Observer, announces that 100,000 new recruits are received each week into the ranks of the National-Socialists and therewith become entitled to wear the swastika emblem on their sleeves, a French professor comes out with a learned booklet on the meaning of the swastika or hooked cross (Hakenkreuz). It appears that the swastika sign originated in India. If the books of the cross were turned to the right, swastika was an emblem of the sun, the life-giver. When turned to the left, it had reference to the moon, the queen of shadows and the goddess of the underworld, where the departed spirits sojourned. With other peoples the right-turned swastika was the emblem of masculinity and when turned the other way of femininity. Statues of the Goddess Ashtar found in Syria had that lady marked with a Hakenkreuz on the abdomen. Its real and original significance, however, remains a matter of doubt, according to the savant who has made it the object of a long study. However far back we go into the religious history of India, we always find the swastika. The professor does not go into the reasons which made Hitler adopt this ancient token as an honored symbol among his Teutonic Fascists. But the reasons are not far to seek. The swastika, whatever it means, came from India. The same India is also the cradle of the Aryan race, or the Indo-European subdivision of the human race. The most outstanding and most virile representatives of this race are the blue-eyed, blond Nordics, whom Herr Hitler considers the salt of the earth and the cream of mankind. Let the weak kneed Latin march under the Gallican cross, the Slavs under a Byzantine cruciform, the Semites under the Star of David and the Crescent, the Teutons have their own mark. They don't need to borrow from other weaker brethren, or march under false colors, so to speak. They have their ancient Aryan swastika, the hooked cross das Hakenkreuz. It's worn on the left sleeve, so that everyone may know a real Teuton when he sees one, which would otherwise be a little difficult, what with all those pink-eyed Rhinelanders and the high-boned Slavic inhabitants of Prussia, which was once Borussia.

The police of Paris had been on the trail of a notorious Spanish bandit recently. At last the man was spotted one night in a Montmartre cabaret, where he was having a gay time. Before he could be arrested some one tipped him off that the cops were around looking for him. He managed to get away. But one plain clothes man tore after him in a taxi and after a wild chase through the street's succeeded in following the bandit to his hiding place, a smart enough apartment, by the way. Soon two officers were on the spot rapping at his door to arrest him. The man was wanted for murder in several Spanish cities, and a mandate for his expulsion had been signed. He had been expelled from France twice before. As the two policemen stood on the landing the bandit's head appeared through the transoms above the door. Then came the right hand. Two shots were fired and both policemen fell dead. Then two more shots were fired inside the room. Rather than surrender the man had first killed his sweetheart and then committed suicide. The chief of police came out the next day with a declaration that he was proceeding to an immediate cleanup of undesirable foreigners in the city. All the newspapers applauded the chief's program, of course, all of them, except one. This one said: "What's the use expelling them? They just take a minute or so to buy tobacco on the other side of the frontier and they're back among us. Cannot our police perfect see that these people love us, that they won't live anywhere else on earth but Paris? After every police raid in the populous quarters it said that of the hundred individuals caught in the dragnet, forty or fifty had been expelled from France or were under sentence of expulsion. Our social cleanups mean nothing. They are like brooms shifting the dust from one place to the next. The only way to distinguish these unwanted gentry is to have them stamped with a little indelible sign on the forehead. To many of them one tattoo-mark more or less won't matter. Only this practical and simple little remedy is not likely to be approved by our humanitarians nor by certain republicans who will see in it a disguised reminder of the infamous fleur de lys which Athos discovered one night in Bethune on the shoulder of my lady."

Old Fragments Of War Balloon Put In Museum

The war, incidentally, kept Lowe from attempting to fly across the Atlantic in a balloon.

Henry aided him in his plan to form a balloon corps after he returned to Washington.

Lowe went back to the white house and spent the night. The next morning—July 25, 1861—Lowe took a goose quill pen and wrote:

"This capture was the meanest trick of the war and one I have never forgiven."

Lowe got the remnants of the balloon. The original stripes and design still clear in the fabric, it rests in the Smithsonian, reminiscent of wide acres, pillared homes, the gleam of candle light on a stately ballroom and pretty women.

Everything in the collection has its memories. It is the first altimeter used to direct artillery fire and a set of binoculars with which he scanned the Confederate lines.

Lowe took sick just before Gettysburg. That ended his active services but his ballonists from their perch saw the disintegration of the Confederacy.

Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Campbell and three children, of Mason Ga., will arrive tonight to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Galloway at their home in Mayfair for several days.

Those present at the luncheon were: President Harry M. Papworth, secretary, Miss Mary Powell, P. W. Bender, Ed. Higgins, S. J. Nix, A. C. Fort, P. R. Wilson, B. C. Moore, J. L. Marentette, L. H. Connelly, W. M. Hynes, V.
