'Glad-ross' in the Soviet Union

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — "Less Mistle, More Pita" will be the theme of the first barbecue cookoff to be held in the Soviet Union next month sponsored by a Memphis barbecue connoisseur.

Silky Sullivan, a bar owner in Memphis, has traveled around the world conducting and judging barbecue contests. His best effort may be the contest to be held Sept. 7-8 in Tallin, Estonia, in the Soviet Union.

Twenty cooking teams from the Soviet Union and 90 from the United States will participate, Sullivan said.

"At least one large missile will be converted into a cooker to symbolize peace and encourage all nuclear powers to disarm their nuclear missiles and turn them into smokers," Sullivan said. "The spirit of 'glad-ross' will rule the festival."

Sullivan said that he hopes the U.S. teams cooking pork shoulders and ribs will spread Southern Hospitality in the Soviet Union.

UN predicts armed conflict if talk fails

By Tom Harvey
United Press International

BOGOTA, Colombia — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, saying Saturday's U.N. embargo vote against Iraq is "without precedent," launched a personal peace initiative in the Iraq-Kuwait crisis and warned that its failure could mean real "armed conflict."

Also Saturday, Iraq lashed out at its former ally the Soviet Union for supporting a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for stricter enforcement of economic sanctions against Baghdad, and stepped up its pressure on "pliant" embassies that have remained open in occupied Kuwait.

Austrian President Kurt Waldheim met with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein — the first Western leader to do so since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. See Page 2A

SANFORD — The call to active duty for military reserve and National Guard units by Pres-

Mud files in three-way race for county commission seat

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Republican primary campaign to end the 12-year reign of Seminole County District 3 commissioner Bob Sturm has become the muddiest race of the county's 1990 political year.

Sturm, 54, and his staff to take drug tests, says Sturm has illegal signs and has accepted improper campaign contributions. Sturm faces a Desmond complaint filed with the Seminole County State Attorney's Office over the hiring of a private investigator.

The third Republican primary candidate, former Lake Mary mayor Dick Foss, 45, also takes shots at Sturm, but levels a more issue-oriented barrage.

Elected by voters countywide, the district includes most of Lake Mary and Winter Springs and portions of Sanford, Longwood and Casselberry.

Sturm represents 12 years of poor decision-making by the commission which has led to poor roads and a proposed tax increase this year that is the largest hike of the last 10 years.

As there are no Democrats seeking the District 3 seat, the race will be decided by Republicans in either the Sept. 4 primary or the Oct. 2 runoff. County commissioners are elected for four-year terms. See Commission, Page 2A

Bob Desmond

I want to educate the public on the misuse of money the commission has been blatant about.

Candidate: Robert G. "Bob" Desmond Jr., 32, Sanford. Computer consultant.

Marital status: Married, one child, one stepchild.

Political history: Ran for Seminole County District 2 commissioner, 1986, losing to incumbent Bob Sturm. Ran for Florida House of Representatives District 35, 1988, losing to incumbent Art Grindle.

Dick Foss

I want to get the truth out about the issues by the direct approach, a grassroots effort.

Candidate: Richard A. "Dick" Foss, 45, Lake Mary. Real estate and insurance executive.

Marital status: Unmarried, two children by former marriage.

Political history: Lake Mary mayor, 1984 to 1988. Campaign structure: Manager, Ken Wright; treasurer, Marian Caraway. Strategy: Mailings, signs.

I want to do whatever I can to win the first primary...from a legal standpoint.

Candidate: Incumbent Robert J. "Bob" Sturm, 54, Lake Mary. Retired insurance executive.

Political history: Seminole County District 3 commissioner 1978 to present. Campaign structure: Manager, Harry Hagler; coordinator, Randy Morris.

'No complaints' as school begins

School in Seminole County got off to a smooth start last week.

"No complaints here," said Jerry Klein, the new director of transportation who arrived the middle of the summer and immediately began implementing improvement measures in his department.

"It's a little early to tell, though. Usually people give you a week to work out the bugs before they start complaining," he said. "But so far, everyone seems happy with the way things are going."

SANFORD — Yesterday, Seminole Community College classes met for the first time for the fall semester. But, as the result of an agreement between the college and the city of Lake Mary, some students may have driven as much as three miles out of their way to get to the SCC campus.

"A lot of students were going up Broadmoor (Drive in Lake Mary) to get into the campus from the back," said Dr. David Meador, a Lake Mary city commissioner who lives "nowhere near" the controversial short cut. "There are some nice houses back there and there are some children. Parents are concerned." See Broadmoor, page 2A

Caller drops a dime on Iggy kidnapping

OLDSMAR - The great iguana kidnapping ended happily, with Iggy the iguana being found safe following an anonymous caller.

A caller told sheriff's deputies on Thursday they could find the kidnapping victim in Oldsmar. They found Iggy in a blue pillow case wriggling down the sidewalk.

The 3-foot-long iguana was unhurt and apparently in good spirits.

He was nabbed from his home at Upper Tampa Bay Park sometime after the park closed Tuesday night.

Authorities said they did not know who took him or why, but park ranger Joe Humble speculated they probably planned to sell the 40-pound lizard, which are worth up to $200 on the black market.

Available jobs increase in Florida

TALLAHASSEE - The number of available jobs in Florida jumped nearly 37,000 last month, up 4.5 percent from July 1989, analysts said.

More than 5.5 million people were employed in Florida in July.

Despite problems in the construction and manufacturing sectors, officials say Florida's annual job growth has been at four percent or better during calendar 1990.

Florida man shot and killed in Queens

NEW YORK - A Miami man was shot and killed while driving along a Queens street, police said Saturday.

Joseph Horne, 22, of 186-10 N.W. 21st Ave., was hit in the head with a bullet fired through his rear window about 9 p.m. Friday, said a spokeswoman for police, Sgt. Mary Wrensen.

Wrensen said Horne, who was carrying a loaded 9mm weapon on him at the time of the shooting, was driving his car along New Haven Avenue in Far Rockaway when he was struck.

He died at 2:30 a.m. at Jamaica Hospital.

Detectives had no motive or suspects in the shooting.

Designer: Execution device won't work

SPRINGFIELD - The maker of the lethal injection machine that will be used for Illinois' first execution in 28 years says the device is faulty and might fail if used next month.

Fred Leuchter told the Springfield State Journal-Register in an article in Sunday's edition the lethal injection machine has a 70 percent chance of failure due to faulty switches and plugs.

"The problem is that the machine had been sitting in a damp area for 2 1/2 years and has corroded," Leuchter told the paper.

State Corrections Department officials denied the claim and said Leuchter was acting out of spite because the state canceled his $8,230 consulting contract last week.

Coast Guard plane crashes, kills four

MIAMI - A Coast Guard radar plane returning from a patrol for drug smugglers caught fire and crashed early Friday near a U.S. naval station in Puerto Rico, killing all four men aboard.

They were the first deaths for the Coast Guard since it began drug-smuggling interdiction work.

The E-2C Hawkeye, a twin-engine turboprop radar aircraft, crashed about 500 yards of the runway at Roosevelt Roads Naval Station at 12:21 a.m., said Lt. Cmdr. Jeff Karonis, a Coast Guard spokesman in Miami.

The naval station is in a remote area on the east coast of Puerto Rico.

The Coast Guard identified the victims as pilots Lt. Duane E. Stenbak, 37, of Billings, Mont., and Lt. Paul E. Perit, 49, of St. Paul, Minn.; combat information center officer Lt. Craig E. Lerner, 32, of Philadelphia, Penn., and aviation electronics technician Petty Officer Matthew H. Baker, 29, of Ray, Ariz., who was operating the radar. All the men were based in St. Augustine, Fla.

Blacks boycott schools

MONTICELLO - More than a thousand black students refused to attend Jefferson County's three public schools Friday, while school and NAACP officials tried to settle the dispute that led to the three-day boycott.

The boycott began Wednesday on the first day of classes when about 1,200 of the district's 2,150 students stayed home. About 1,000 of them were also absent Thursday.

The boycott was sparked by the hiring of a white teacher as a replacement for a black applicant who accepted a job elsewhere. About 70 percent of the school district's students are black, and black leaders want the percentage of teachers to more closely reflect that majority.

Only 36 percent of Jefferson County's teachers are black, but school officials say that is more the double the statewide average.

School Superintendent Bill MacRae, who took over in 1988, is the focus of much of the black community's animosity. At the time he became superintendent, 39 percent of the teachers in the district were black.

Police said the right pinkie finger belonged to Terri Paul, 18. They said Paul accidentally shot off his finger while smashing a sawed-off shotgun against the head of an elderly victim.

"It's pretty rare when we actually impounded a finger as evidence," said Metro-Dade Police detective Myriam Royle.

The robbery occurred early Thursday.

Manuel Napoles, 17, told police he and a friend had just returned home and were in the Napoles' driveway when a blue Chevrolet cruised past slowly.

A man wearing a mask ran up to the car, pointed a pistol at them and said, "Give me your money and wallets," a police report said.

Police hunt intoxicated drivers

Casselberry checkpoint halts traffic

From staff reports

CASSELBERRY - Casselberry Police Department stopped most northbound drivers on State Road 436 at Sauialto Blvd. between 17-92 and Winter Park North Friday night as officers searched for faulty automobile safety equipment and intoxicated drivers, according to the Casselberry Police Department.

The six-hour effort netted seven drivers whose blood alcohol level was above the legal limit. Assisting the Casselberry officers were the Florida Highway Patrol, Mothers Against Drunk Driving and Sanford Police Department, who operated the Baltimore, a rolling DUI (driving under the influence of alcohol) testing lab.

Among those arrested was Perry Keith Martin, 31, 233 Tangelo Ave., Fern Park. Arrest reports state when police attempted to stop Martin Friday night he drove over a curb and into a parking lot at a high rate of speed. After his car was stopped, he fled on foot until captured. Martin was charged with four outstanding warrants, including grand theft and probation violation for DUI and grand theft, fleeing and eluding police and disobeying a police officer. He was held without bond.

Also arrested for DUI were: Mary Cocoran, 33, 301 Teakwood, Altamonte Springs; Melvin Lee Hughes, 52, 1174 Pasodelman, Casselberry; Jennie L. Spesshardt, 27, 2808 Red Lion Square, Winter Park; Richard Wayne Fournier, 35, 7703 Cook Lane, Winter Park; Jose Luis Santos-Jasso, 30, 1124 Helen St., Casselberry.

Casselberry police set up a checkpoint Friday night in an effort to snag drunk drivers. Warnings were also issued to drivers for cars with faulty blinkers and headlights.

Sgt. Ben Carroll processes the paperwork on one suspect nabbed in the police check.

Casselberry Police Department requested the assistance of Mothers Against Drunk Driving in the check for drunk drivers Friday night. Janet Dunningan, from the Central Florida Chapter of MADD, assists the police.

Participating police departments, including Seminole County, Casselberry, Florida Highway Patrol and Sanford confiscated liquor from several vehicles. Here Walter Pooley of the Casselberry Police Department sorts beer cans.

Question of quality

Wisconsin legislator Polly Williams calls to mind the aphorism that a Conservative is a liberal who has been misled by reality. Williams, a liberal who twice headed Jesse Jackson's statewide presidential campaign, is leading the charge for parental choice in Milwaukee's public schools. If she succeeds in making the city's dreadful schools more accountable to their students, her efforts could shake the foundations of public education across the country.

As a single mother of four children raised on welfare, Williams is fed up with an education establishment that is long on excuses and short on results. Several years ago, she tried unsuccessfully to persuade the legislature to allow her Milwaukee district to secede from the city school system. Last March she proposed a pilot program to allow 1,000 low-income students, or 1 percent of the city's enrollment, to attend nonsectarian private schools at state expense. To most everyone's surprise, her bill was approved and signed into law by Gov. Tommy Thompson.

Wisconsin's public education establishment, like its counterparts throughout the country, views parental choice as a plague to be eradicated at all costs. Opponents of the choice plan promptly brought suit to have it invalidated. But a highly respected state judge declared the program constitutional and thus has cleared the way for its implementation when school starts in September.

The legal battle is far from finished, however. Wisconsin's teachers' unions and the state's school administration associations plan to appeal the judge's decision to the state supreme court. But the plaintiffs must demonstrate that providing a minimum number of parochial kids to attend the private schools of their choice will cause irreparable harm to Milwaukee's public schools. That is the reason choice holds such an appeal for so many minority parents who, understandably, want to give their kids the educational opportunity they never had.

Williams' choice plan is revolutionary because it is the first time a state will include the private school option. And that is what terrifies the educational establishment.

The opponents' chief argument is that private schools are not subject to the same high standards as the public schools. To begin with, private schools generally have similar rules regarding teacher qualifications, academic regimen and graduation requirements. Often, private school standards are more exacting, which is why parents choose to send their children there in the first place. And, in many cases, the results achieved by private schools are superior to those in public schools.

Parental choice is not a panacea. But it is one way to bring about the structural changes in a public education system that is shortchanging millions of children each year.

Kindergarten is journey's start

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem reads thusly: "Between the dark and the daylight, when the night is beginning to lower, comes a pause in the day's occupation that is known as the children's hour." Kindergarten is the children's initial hour that takes place at school shortly after dawn and well before dusk, when children are somewhere between pre-school and first grade. It functions to facilitate children's natural growth and social development.

Wednesday, Aug. 23, many Seminole kindergartners took their first step along their formal educational journey. This journey is programmed to last thirteen years. Kindergarten is one critical phase in the process, because children will be learning to relate to adults and peers who are not members of their immediate family circle. They will be moving from dependence upon others toward becoming more independent.

Education is a lifelong process. Often it is viewed as the total responsibility of our public school system. Psychologists have concluded, "with few exceptions, the setting into which a child is born has as great an influence upon development as do genetic and inherited factors."

Consequently, the education of children is the responsibility of all adults who are significant in a child's life. Parents, guardians and teachers are the facilitators of learning through the relationship established with the child. They are the role models whom the child will emulate. The contribution of the adult to a child receives during their interacting with adults becomes his assessment of himself. Therefore, an environment that stresses "unconditional positive regard for each child" should be provided. In this way, the personhood of the child is affirmed and his dignity is preserved. Concomitant with positive regard should be behavioral limits.

A system that discourages unacceptable behavior must be clearly delineated with specific rules and consequences. Consequences should be enforced with love, not anger. Prognosticators suggest that today's kindergartners will encounter future employment markets requiring a majority of trained workers in technical or service industries that they must possess flexibility and stamina to make multiple job changes during their lifetimes. Additionally, competition for jobs will no longer be limited to our next door neighbors, but our neighbors throughout the world!

This forecast of future employment opportunities in a work-oriented society may serve to create a pervasive anxiety among parents compelling them to become overly concerned about their child's achievements. Your child's lack of perfection in kindergarten should not be interpreted as academic failure. Children adhere to their own developmental time clock, and unless you or your physician have noted something grossly wrong with your child, relax and cultivate his personhood.

Learning is one of life's most exciting adventures. Adults can make it a time of great discovery or a cross to bear. If you cannot approach learning positively with your child and become emotionally charged because your child is not meeting your expectations, please cease and desist. Permit grandmother or someone who can read and converse pleasantly to take charge. Remember, kindergarten is not the inquisition. It is the door that leads to lifetime learning.

Heroes of sexist injustice

BOSTON — Each year at this time, in an effort to pay tribute to our historic foremothers, I celebrate Aug. 26, anniversary of the passage of women's suffrage, by publicly recognizing those who have done their utmost in the past 12 months to slow the progress of women. I bestow upon this select group the much coveted (and competed for) Equal Rites Awards.

This year, the 70th anniversary of suffrage, was marked with all sorts of mixed messages. The good news is that the '80s ended. The bad news is that the feminization of poverty did not. The good news is that there were more women's names in the headlines. The bad news is that those names were Leona, Ivana and Imelda. The good news is that the young women are looking to their own sex for aggressive independent role models. The bad news is that they've chosen Madonna.

But frankly, these awards were never meant as flags on the road to progress. They are reminders of how far there is to go. So without further ado, the envelopes please.

This being a political season, the Raging Harassment Injustice Prize, always a favorite among contestants, is going to Clayton Williams, the Republican good ol' boy candidate for Governor of Texas who cavalierly compared the weather to rape: "if it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it." We wish Williams a silver-plated gender gap and a spur to help gallop into the horizon.

The Double-Standard Bearer Prize goes this year to District Attorney Robert Eaton, who prosecuted Donna E. Carroll for adultery under an old Wisconsin law. Neither Donna's estranged husband — who admitted to out-of-state dalliances, and initiated the complaint — nor Donna's partner were similarly charged. We remind Eaton to lower that standard to half-mast.

In the same retro-spirit, the Pro-Feminist Fantasy Prize goes to the Miss America judges who allow butchery at the old meat market. It turns out that many contestants owe their beauty luster to their Maker than to their Maker, the plastic surgeon. To the pageant makers who allow this cutup of face and figure, we send a baby prize. Silicone of course.

The Stand By, Behind and Beneath Your Man Prize for furthering female masochism goes to Mayor Marion Barry. After putting his wife through a series of videotaped humiliations, he called Bill "the excellent example of the African-American woman." We were going to send Barry another rule model but, on second thought, he better keep away from models.

The Our Bodies, Ourselves Citation for the company that drives a "cultural" nail in the progress of women goes, need we say, to R.J.

Reynolds for their cigarette, "Dakota," directed at the North and pink-collar customer. To wit: "Caucasian Female, Age 18-30...No education beyond high school...Favorite TV Role: Stitches."

While we are on the subject of marketing, this year's Mc-Quidde Madison Avenue Award must go to the folks who devised the new Lysol ad. Featuring a manicured hand on the toilet bowl, the copy reads, "With Men or Boys at Home, Your Bathroom Needs Cleaning Every Day." An ad that manages to take a wipe at two sexes at once deserves what it gets: one solid flush.

Now a brief journey overseas to find the winner of the International Bitchish Award. This year it is being sent to Aberdeen, Scotland, to High Court Judge Lord Dunsparck. The judge released a man convicted of killing his sleeping wife and one-month-old son because, "You have punished yourself more than enough....The easier you try to forget the better....You have my deep sympathy." The bitchish is for use under the belt.

The Battle of the Sexes Award goes to those cadets at the Naval Academy who dragged classmate Owen Mark Dwyer from her room, handcuffed her to a urinal and took pictures. To these cadets, clearly lost of control, we send a chart to help them identify the real enemy.

Let us not, however, forget the Duhious Equality Award, which annually goes to those who labor the hardest for the most questionable gain. We were going to send it to New Shoo-tan, who ran for the Taiwan parliament on a tepid ticket, but she lost. Instead we sent it to the Wisconsin Personnel Co. whose response to the AIDS epidemic is not to promote male responsibility but to market a female condom. Their price is inflated to equal opportunity status.

The Sexism in Song award does not go (as expected) to 2 Live Crew. It was won by the less heralded group, Slaughter, for their hit album called "Back 2 Ya." The song glorifies a woman's role in the target audience by saying,

This year, the 70th anniversary of our franchise, was marked with all sorts of mixed messages.

Keep signs, roads safe

As the political season intensifies, we are seeking your cooperation and assistance in ensuring the safety of area motorists, and in permitting our maintenance personnel to perform required tasks unimpeded.

Improperly placed campaign signs can create a hazardous situation on our highways by obstructing a motorist's view of traffic on cross streets, and of regulatory and advisory signs. Additionally, mowing of state road right of way can be delayed by the necessity of sign removal.

We have neither the manpower nor the desire to dedicate a portion of our workforce to campaign sign removal. Such signs are a traditional means of establishing name recognition by would-be public officials. However, in accordance with provision of Florida's Outdoor Advertising Regulatory Law, we will remove such signs from the state right of way when they affect safety, criteria or maintenance functions. We will attempt to notify campaign headquarters of such removals in order that expensive signs can be recovered from our several Central Florida maintenance yards, but we cannot guarantee such notifications.

We will provide information on proper placement of campaign signs if candidates or their supporters will contact FDOT maintenance offices located throughout Central Florida.

Support the zoo

I reside in Volusia County, work in Seminole County and know and deal with many people from other Central Florida counties on a routine basis. There is a common thread of community pride throughout the Central Florida area. It is Sanford's Central Florida Zoo.

The enthusiasm of Zoo personnel is contagious. The many opportunities for involvement in supporting or being involved with the Zoo leaves little excuse not to be supportive and involved.

Sanford and the citizens of the Central Florida area should be proud of the Zoo and take the time to find out what they can do to make it an even better place for family fun, educational opportunities and just a real nice place to spend some time and meet some interesting animals — and people, too.

cerned for the safety of their children.

Though the college, which is a part of Sanford though it is completely surrounded by Lake Mary, was in place before many of the houses were built, Meador felt the college has a responsibility to create a safer atmosphere for the residents.

"It was frustrating to see all that traffic going down that road," Meador said. "The traffic was incredibly heavy for that street."

He could not provide traffic count figures for the road.

Meador said he and "some SCC officials" agreed that Broadmoor Drive was too heavily traveled by people going to SCC.

"We agreed that the neighborhood was getting too congested," said Dr. Keith Samuels, SCC vice president for instruction.

The city of Lake Mary printed maps, which show alternative routes into the school, which were placed in orientation kits, promotional brochures and registration material.

The maps suggest the best way to get to the Sanford campus is from U.S. Highway 17-92 via either Lake Mary Boulevard or County Road 427.

Street signs which, until last spring, directed SCC traffic to Broadmoor Drive from County Club Road have been moved to reflect the new directions.

"I think once people see the preferred routes on the maps and begin to travel them," Samuels said, "there'll be no problems making the transition."

Meador said he has not proposed any legal action to prevent non-residents from driving on Broadmoor Drive, but he felt continued use of the road by people going to SCC constituted a safety hazard.

Samuels said he could not tell if the changes in the placement of the signs and the inclusion of the maps in the college literature had made any impact on traffic patterns.

"School just started," he said. "It's too early to tell."

Commission

elects at-large. District 2 includes large portions of Lake Mary and Winter Springs and small portions of Longwood, Casselberry and Sanford.

The three hopefuls each come from a business background. Stum, a retiree, was an insurance executive. Desmond owns a computer programming business and is a partner in another similar business. Fess owns a real estate and insurance business. Stum and Fess live in Lake Mary. Desmond lives in Sanford.

Stum is the most successful fund-raiser of the three, taking in more than $60,000 by early August. Fess reports collecting about $17,000 during the same period and Desmond reports collecting about $8,300.

Fess displayed the greatest financial acumen for the campaign by taking out a $60,000 second mortgage on his Lake Mary home and putting $20,000 of it into his campaign account.

Although he reported an income last year of about $30,000, Fess says he was able to secure the loan because of pending business deals and real estate sales.

The three men differ widely on their views of how Seminole County government should be run.

Stum says the quality of life in Seminole County is better than either Central Florida counties and much better than it was in 1978 when he first took office.

He points to new libraries, parks and water and sewer service expansion as efforts he promoted or supported to better life here. He says growth in the county is controlled and will be under even more restrictive guidelines when "concurrency" regulations take effect in 1992.

"My 13 years of experience and continuity are very important especially at this time," Stum says.

Former Stum campaign worker Fess says the incumbent doesn't listen to the residents of Seminole County and only claims to be a forward thinker during election times.

"He's out of touch," Fess says. "He's not forward thinking. The only time he does anything is around election time."

Fess says Stum's voting record shows he has supported most of the development proposals coming before the commission during the last two years. Both Fess and Desmond say Stum's voting record is not surprising.

"Stum has taken over $60,000 from the development industry during his campaign," Desmond says. "How can he be unbiased in his decisions when they come before him?"

Desmond says county commissioners, led by Stum, have squandered nearly $60 million of taxpayer's dollars. Desmond includes the $7.5 million Yankee Lake purchase from Jeno Fashol in 1985 and subsequent construction of the $10 million Northwest Regional Wastewater Treatment Plant at the site that doesn't have the needed permit to dispose of treated sewage near the St. Johns River.

Stum lists the Yankee Lake purchase as one of the highlights of his commission tenure because of the potential for two school sites, parks and the zoo on the land.

Desmond also cites $60 million paid to landowners for the first half-mile of the Seminole

Taxes, budget

Desmond: Fiscal responsibility would reduce need for tax increases.

Fess: Trim waste, but raise taxes if needed to maintain services.

Stum: Cut services before raising taxes.

County stability

Desmond: Stum causing dissension by insulting women commissioners over former county manager Ken Hooper's resignation, delay in hiring new manager needed.

Fess: Hooper served at will of commission, so if unwanted, should leave. Will be a peacemaker among commissioners.

Stum: Hooper's departure unnecessary, new strong manager needed soon.

said she was surprised how quiet the telephone had been the first few days.

"No one called to complain," she said. "We had some routine questions, but that's about it. Normally the phones are ringing off the hook."

Dr. Hortense Evans, administrative assistant to Hughes said there have been "quite a few" requests for transfers from one school to another outside the attendance zones.

"I don't believe it is at all unusual, though," she said. "We always have a lot of those at the beginning of the year and then it sort of tapers off by October."

Evans said she thought the year had started off very well. "I guess we finally got it right," she joked.

Switchboard operators at the district office said the many phone calls that usually start of the year with questions about which bus routes students should take or which school attendance zone they are in did not come as heavily this year. They reported the calls had remained at a constant, manageable level.

Wayne Epps, principal at Seminole High School, 2701 Ridgewood Ave., Sanford, said the first few days of school were going "real well."

He said that with the completion of the $11 million construction project at Seminole High, the campus will be able to operate "more efficiently than it has in years."

At Lake Mary High School, 685 Longwood-Lake Mary Road, Lake Mary, principal Don Reynolds said there was nothing out of the ordinary to report from the first three days of class.

"It went great," he said. "No problems at all." Like the others, Reynolds confessed that he was "surprised" at how well the first few days had gone.

The district is suffering under the strain of rapid growth that they have neither the facilities nor the finances to support in the way the school board feels they should.

With 45,735 students arriving in class on Wednesday, the district grew by more than 1,500 pupils over the first day of school 1989-90.

This year's figures include 22,798 elementary school students, 10,205 middle schoolers and 12,549 at the high school level. An additional 211 youngsters are enrolled in exceptional education classes.

Last year, there were 21,619 elementary school students, 9,908 middle schoolers, 12,769 students in high school and 151 in the exceptional programs.

It had been projected that 40,895 students would enroll this year, a 5.03 percent increase over last year.

"It was pretty close," Walker said. "We'll be there in no time." School district officials are hoping the rest of the year goes as smoothly as the first few days. "If everything else goes like this," Epps said. "We're all set."

one in her backyard in almost perpetual use.

The residents also only "occasionally" use the range.

Lind and about 50 other homeowners living in Cardinal Oaks Cove recently signed a petition asking SCC to soundproof its shooting range, which is currently being used by students, Seminole County sheriff's deputies and almost every police department in the county.

It's a touchy subject, though, since the range has been there longer than the residents.

Joe Dwyer, a teacher of criminal justice at the college, estimates that the range is 15 to 17 years old.

"The area was not as developed then as it is now," said Suzanne Tesinsky, dean of SCC's vocational-technical education. "There were no homes back there when the range was built."

About 150 students enrolled in SCC's law enforcement training program use the range each year, and each trainee must put in 66 hours of shooting time.

"It's absolutely mandatory," said Dwyer. "You certainly wouldn't want a police officer without any training."

The homeowners don't have any problem with that, but they do object to the hours in which they practice. Training practice as early as 7:30 a.m. on weekends, and Lind says she hears shots as late as 10 p.m.

"I think most of us don't mind that it's there, but the noise has gotten intolerable," Lind said. "It's been a gradual increase over the last three years."

The Seminole County Sheriff's Department has been using the range this week for intensive training in new Stum semi-automatic sidearms. Training officer David Smith said the on-range shooting hours required are "constantly going up," which has contributed to the problem.

Lind was told that the newer firearms are louder, and many shooting ranges throughout the county have closed, leaving the

Pristine rain forest found during Bolivian expedition

WASHINGTON - A scientific expedition has discovered one of the most primitive and undisturbed rain forests in the world.

The expedition, the first in a series of innovative "rapid assessment" field studies by Conservation International, lasted for four weeks in the forest through a largely unexplored region along the Peru-Venezuela border where the forest is largely unexplored.

The team of wildlife experts found a remarkably undisturbed wilderness of river valleys, bamboo mountains, forest, bamboo, and various other species.

one year and two weeks before Pearl Harbor was attacked.

Over 200 Sanford men were called away from their families and their jobs. It was the day that three local National Guard units were "federalized."

The three units were Headquarters Detachment, First Battalion, 124th Infantry Regiment; Company "D" (a machine gun outfit); and the Medical Detachment of the 124th.

The 124th Infantry Regiment was one of two National Guard Regiments that comprised the 62nd Infantry Brigade and the 62nd was one of two brigades that comprised the well-known 31st (Double D) Dixie Division.

Company "D" was commanded by Captain Harold Waahburn but for only a short time. He was replaced by Captain William F. "Bill" Runge. The Medical Detachment was headed by Major Douglas G. Scott, the regimental surgeon and a Sanford physician. The First Battalion's Headquarters Detachment's commanding officer was First Lt. W.D. "Bill" Hoffman.

The regimental executive officer was Lt. Col. George A. DeCotites, a longtime Sanford lawyer and former state's attorney.

The 62nd Brigade was led by Sanford's own Brigadier General Joseph C. Hutchison who at that time was an executive with the American Fruit Growers operations in the city.

It was quite a scene at the Sanford Armory on East First Street that morning when the "civilian" soldiers reported for active duty. They remained in Sanford for about a week, making preparations for the movement to Camp Blanding, a new military post being built on thousands of acres the Army had purchased near Starke.

Then came the orders for the trip to Blanding. The guardsmen marched from the Armory through downtown Sanford to the Atlantic Coast Line railroad station at the end of West Ninth Street. The units boarded a troop train which was already carrying 124th Infantry personnel from units in other cities as far south as Fort Myers. The train had made stops in Sarasota, Bradenton, Tampa, Plant City, Lakeland, Orlando among others invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 - and left Baghdad accompanied by 98 Austrians who had been held in Iraq and Kuwait.

U.S. officials said the resolution would further legitimize the use of military force by American warships to intercept Iraqi shipping. But there was no immediate word on when or how the massive U.S. military deployment in the Persian Gulf would begin halting Iraqi ships.

Iraqi troops armed with machine guns and mortars, meanwhile, kept careful watch on foreign embassies in occupied Kuwait that defied an order by Iraq to close.

The U.N. leader said Saturday he has invited Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to "urgent" talks this week in either New York or Geneva to search for a peaceful solution to the conflict caused by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and continued occupation of Kuwait.

Perez de Cuellar said he was undertaking the peace effort as a follow-up to the U.N. Security Council resolution approved Saturday morning allowing limited use of force to ensure compliance with a U.N. economic embargo of Iraq.

"This is a moment without precedent in the 45 years of the organization, in which the 15 members of the Security Council have fully completed their obligations," he said. "Now it is my turn to initiate diplomatic negotiations to find a resolution to the crisis."

The failure of any such talks to begin could lead to the Security Council's use of its ultimate power, full military force under Article 42 of the U.N. Charter to enforce the economic sanctions, he said.

as it made its way to Blanding.

Shortly after arriving at the new Army facility, the 124th joined other infantry regiments from Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana - all part of the 21st Division - in training. Also shipped to Blanding was the 92nd (Duke) Infantry Division from the New England States.

Most Sanford old-timers will remember Captain Runge who led his unit for most of the war, and who later distinguished himself in Korea. As a senior advisor to South Korean forces he was awarded the ULCHI by the Korean government. The award was equivalent to the American Congressional Medal of Honor. Runge at the time was a Lt. Colonel and the only American officer during the Korean conflict to receive the honor.

Runge's son, now Dr. William H. Runge, a Sanford dentist, was only 14 years old at the time of the call up. He later went into the service and subsequently into the reserves. He reached the rank of colonel in the Army Reserve, the rank of colonel in the Air Force Reserve and the equivalent rank of captain in the Naval Reserve.

In those days, a U.S. infantry division was known as a "square" division - meaning its major components consisted of four infantry regiments. Later all Army divisions were "triangularized" - meaning that the number of infantry regiments were reduced to three - to speed up the movement of troops.

When that occurred, the 124th was removed from the 31st Division and it became the demonstration infantry regiment for the Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Ga. Later, the 124th went to the European Theatre of Operations for combat duty.

Since the 62nd Infantry Brigade no longer existed, General Hutchison was assigned to a command in the Pacific. It was in the Philippines that Lt. General Hutchison accepted the surrender of all Japanese forces in the islands. This paved the way for General Douglas MacArthur to make his heralded "I shall return" to the Philippines the historical event it was.

Though they were many, it would be impossible to mention even some of the enlisted personnel. But at the time of the call up Tommy Thompson was sergeant major of the First Battalion, T.V. Brown was Company "D" first sergeant, and Emil Kaiser was first sergeant of the Medical Detachment.

To say the least, the impact of the call up was felt throughout the community. And, it's fitting to mention that some did not return. They gave their lives for their country.

Julian Stenstrom, a native of Sanford, is former associate editor of the Sanford Herald.

Leading a double life

Superintendent transforms into umpire at night

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald sports writer

SANFORD — Rocky Ellingsworth leads a double life.

By day, the new Sanford Recreation Department Superintendent is a happy-go-lucky person, trying to help the young people of Sanford to become better athletes and individuals.

By night, he is one of the most hated people in central Florida, haunting local parks and fields as a softball umpire.

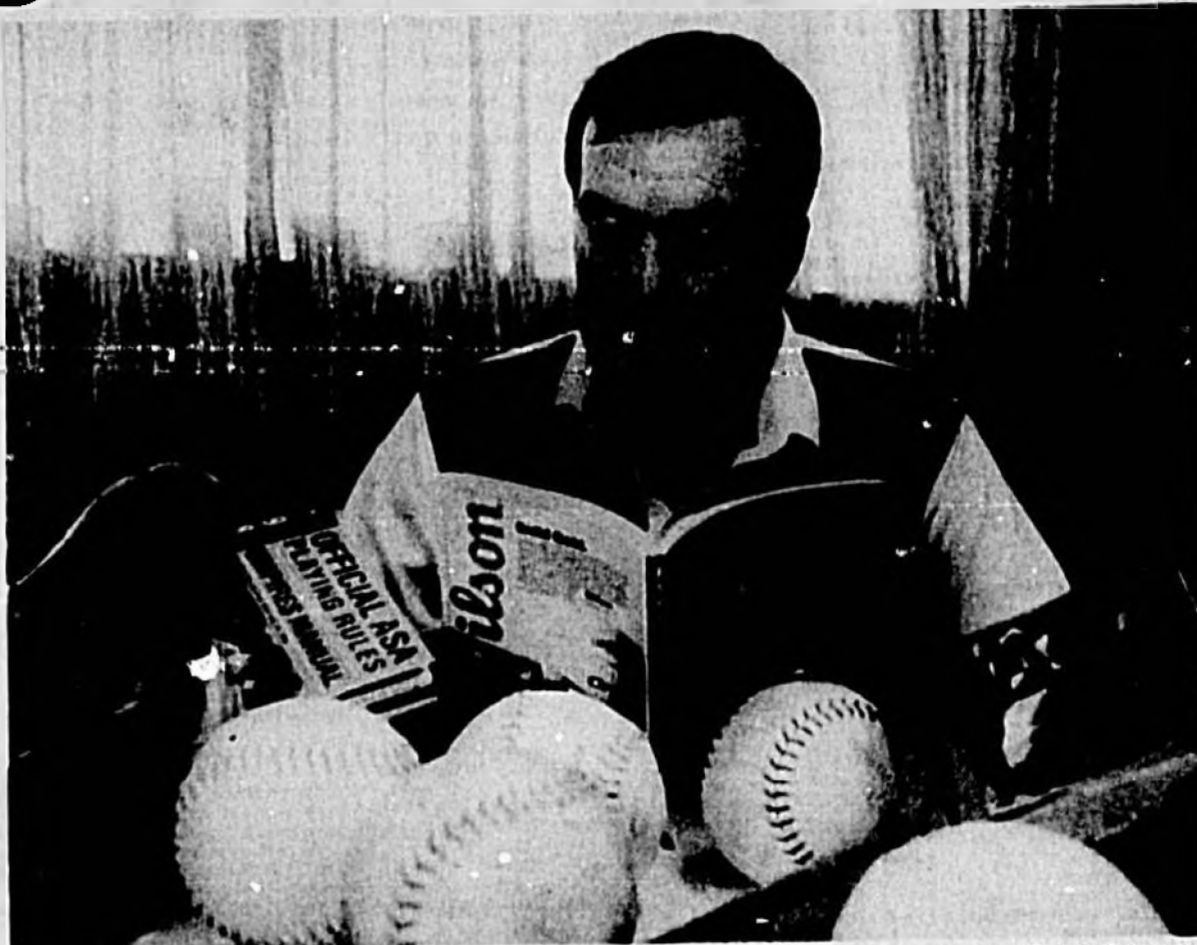

"You are only going to make 50 percent of the people happy 50 percent of the time," said Ellingsworth after working a game in the American Softball Association Class B Southern Regional Tournament at Merrill Park Friday night. "That means you are only right 25 percent of the time, so umpires are not very well-liked."

"But I do it for the fun. Where else can you get yelled at by a lot of people for 10 to 15 dollars a game?"

Over the Labor Day weekend, Ellingsworth gets the reward that an umpire receives for doing a good job — a chance to work in a national tournament. He'll be going to Decatur, Ala., to officiate the Men's Class A Church tournament.

It will not be a new experience for Ellingsworth. This will be the third straight year he has been invited to do a national tournament.

Newcomers are key to SCC's softball fortunes

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald sports writer

SANFORD — How good will the 1990 Seminole Community College softball team be?

It's hard to say, said SCC assistant Jim Robinson.

"I thought we were loaded last year," said Robinson. "Then we had defections, injuries and players who didn't measure up to expectations and we ended up with a losing season. This year, we look like we will have to work hard to score runs, but you never know."

Two years ago, the Raiders won 40 games and earned the right to go to their first state tournament. They did well in the tournament, placing fifth and had two players earn All-American honors.

With several players back from that team, things looked good for SCC going into the 1990 spring season. But only All-American Kim King came close to matching her freshman statistics.

Now with King graduated, a huge hole will have to be filled if the Raiders are to make a return trip to the state tournament.

"There really weren't that many people to choose from locally," said Robinson. "The area teams were loaded with underclassmen, so the next couple of years should be good to recruit. But we brought in six new players this year that should help."

Among the new players is Marie Peters from Lake Howell High School. She was a four-year starter for the Silver Hawks and has played on two national championship teams and one national runner-up. She also was named first team All-County and All-Seminole Athletic Conference last year.

Also new to the team will be a trio of Orlando-Evans High School products. Jennifer Colbert was named the Female Athlete of the Year at Evans the last three years and also was voted the Best All-Around Player for the Trojans her senior year.

Jenny Sims has played softball for 10 years and received the Coach's Achievement award last year. Tracy Evans is a 1987 graduate of Evans who has decided to come back to finish her college education.

The other two freshmen are Kelly Brazzel from West Palm Beach and Adrian Ennett from Chatsworth, Tenn. Brazzel attended Forest Hill High School where she made second team All-conference and was named her team's most improved player. Ennett was also named the most improved player and made All-Metro and All-Conference as a designated hitter.

Six players return from last year's squad and they will be heavily counted on this year. Among them are three Lake Howell grad's, a Sanford Seminole grad and an Apopka grad.

The former Silverhawks are second baseman Valerie Montco, catcher-first baseman Ginger York and outfielder Julie Barton. All three played a lot for SCC and Barton was one of the team's leaders in batting average and runs scored.

The former Fighting Seminole is Marquette Smith (No. 22), considered one of the top high school running backs in the country, gave his teammates a taste of what Lake Howell opponents have to deal with the last three years. In the Silver Hawks' Blue and Silver scrimmage Friday, Smith scored on runs of 30 and 55 yards as well as a 25-yard screen pass.

CASSELBERRY — Marquette Smith scored three touchdowns and Ryan Thomas, Pat Jorgensen and Jason Kovacs added one touchdown each as the offense defeated the defense 38-14 in the Silver and Blue intrasquad game at Lake Howell Friday night.

The game was a controlled scrimmage with the offense starting every series from the 40-yard line on its half of the field. The offense scored in the usual way — touchdown, extra point or field goal — while the defense received one point for stopping a series and two points for an interception or fumble recovery.

Smith, the Silverhawks' All-American running back, scored on runs of 30 and 55 yards and also scored on a 25-yard screen pass. On the 55-yard run, Smith showed the moves and speed which has several people calling him one of the best

Umpire

Two years ago, he did the Men's Major Church national tournament and umpired 12 or 13 games, including the finals of the losers' bracket.

Last year, he worked the Women's Major Industrial Tournament and did seven games before umpiring third base in the final game.

"It's a lot of fun doing national tournaments," said Ellingsworth. "The host city treats us very well and the games are fun to call. My goal this year is to work in the finals again, hopefully the plate."

What makes working in his third straight national tournament even more special for Ellingsworth is the fact that he will be eligible for the Indicator Fraternity, a very select group for ASA umpires.

"There are only about 10 umpires who are in the group and only about three or four will make it this year," said Ellingsworth. "It would be a great honor."

Ellingsworth's next goal is to gain admission to the International Softball Fraternity, which earns an umpire the right to travel all over the world to umpire softball tournaments.

"That's what I hope to get into," said Ellingsworth. "I love to travel and going around the world to do tournaments would be great."

Ellingsworth got into umpiring in 1961 after watching his father umpire for years.

"My dad did it (umpire) for close to 40 years," said Ellingsworth. "He was a great critic and mentor. He would tell me after every game what I did, right or wrong, and what I could do to get better."

"I feel like I got real good after working the Men's Class C regional in Miami in 1987. All of the head umpires down there were Cuban and they weren't afraid to tell you if you weren't good. It was a great experience."

In addition to his own umpiring, Ellingsworth has been working with the umpires of Sanford to help them improve.

"We hold clinics for new umpires as often as we can," said Ellingsworth. "We will help anyone who wants to learn to be an umpire."

"The umpiring in Sanford has improved 110 percent over the past year. And it's not just because of me. I have got them to take pride in the profession and to work hard at improving themselves."

"The only way to get to be a better umpire is to learn the rules, go to umpiring clinics and umpire games. Umpires like to help others to help other umpires because we feel if our partner gets better, our job will be easier."

Ellingsworth hopes that players realize that slowpitch softball is for recreation. It is not a professional sport.

"And we umpires are not professionals," he said. "Yeah, we get paid a little bit to do the games, but we all have other jobs. We don't umpire to make a living. We umpire because we have fun and enjoy what we are doing. If you don't love it you had better get out of it."

Ellingsworth also said that he hopes to conduct another ASA umpires' certification clinic before the end of November. Anyone interested in attending should call him at 330-5697 Monday through Friday during normal working hours.

Since joining the Sanford Recreation Department earlier this year, Rocky Ellingsworth has had to take care of some unusual tasks.

Tennessee, Colorado open college season

United Press-International

ANAHUIM, Calif. — Colorado Coach Bill McCartney thinks he has an extraordinary team because his junior quarterback is far from ordinary.

"Darian Hagan is one of those kinds that has magic," said McCartney, whose Buffaloes open the college football season today against Tennessee in the Pigskin Classic. "We knew he was talented, but he was untested last year at this time. Now he's one of a kind. He has an amazing sixth sense that other players don't have."

Hagan rushed for 1,004 yards and passed for 1,002 in leading Colorado to an 11-1 record. The Buffaloes, who lost to Notre Dame 31-8 in the Orange Bowl, are ranked No. 5 in the pre-season coaches' poll.

No. 9 Tennessee was also 11-1 last season.

"I feel strongly that we legitimately have a good team," said McCartney, who signed a 15-year contract in late July.

"However, we can ill afford to get some of these guys hurt because if we do, we'll drop off some."

"We're going to be ready to play and we've got to prepare them for playing against great players and to play all-out football. You don't luptoe into this kind of a schedule."

Colorado's September calendar includes home games against Stanford and Washington and away contests against Illinois and Texas.

"This team is going to fight, there's no question about that, as we have some flat-out competitors," McCartney said. "Now whether they get the focus and if they're team-oriented like a year ago, that chemistry has to unveil itself on game day."

"The Orange Bowl game taught us that Notre Dame was mentally tougher than us, and this year's team has to learn from that, draw on those intangibles and go back out and regain the momentum we had last year."

high school running back in the country.

"We're ready," said Smith after the game. "The offense worked well and the defense had some good hits. Touche (defensive end Thomas Dempa) and Frankie (defensive back Frank Sale) played well for the defense and it will get better when KT (linebacker Ken Times) gets back. I can't wait to play Lake Mary next Friday on the same field. I'm tired of getting hit by my own teammates."

Times, the Seminole County Defensive Player-of-the-Year last year, suffered a broken left foot in practice Tuesday and is expected to miss six games. The break is in the same place he broke his right foot last season. But while Smith was singing the praises of the team, his coaches, especially head coach Mike Biceglia, was less than impressed.

"We have a lot of work to do," said Biceglia. "We're about a week behind where I would like to be. We have had a hard time practicing this week because of the weather. It's been horrible. One day, we were forced off of the field by lightning. One bolt hit the building right next to the field."

While the offense did score some points, the defense was not without its good moments as they had two interceptions and two fumble recoveries. Also, Sales had a blocked extra point and several good hits and the defensive end combination of Dempa and 8-8, 215-pound sophomore Trevor Pryce came up with one blocked kick each. Dempa also forced a fumble.

"Pryce will start for us," said Biceglia. "He's going to be a good one. The kids are already calling our defensive ends the 'T and T' connection."

Also doing well for the defense were defensive backs Donnie Kling and Sheldon Walker. Kling had several strong hits and Walker came up with an interception.

On offense, Thomas, who shared the quarterbacking chores with the graduated Dan Verch last year, had a good evening, throwing two touchdown passes and rushing for one. His back-ups, Paul Davis and Paul Thompson, also played well. Davis throwing a nine-yard touchdown pass on the last play of the game.

While the Lake Howell offense won Friday's Silver and Blue scrimmage, the defense had its moments. One came when Frank Sales (No. 23) blocked Ted Lane's extra point attempt.

shortstop Bobbie Osborne. She was the most consistent infielder for the Raiders last year after earning All-Seminole Athletic Conference honors at SWS. She also had an excellent summer hitting the ball for the Ensey Inc. team that finished second in the Sanford summer league.

The last of the local returnees is outfielder Christy Blankenship. She is quick on defense and has a very strong throwing arm. She also did a very good job of hitting for the Raiders last season.

The other returnee is pitcher Denise Howell from West Palm Beach. She did an admirable job on the mound for SOC last year and is a capable hitter.

Robinson and Head Coach Ileana Gallagher also expect three or four of the SOC basketball team to play softball once the roundball season ends. Among the expected players out are All-Air Force outfielder Michelle Kumpf and former Orlando Lion Bridgette Jemerott.

Once again, the Mid-Florida Conference appears to be very strong. Lake City Community College won its sixth national championship this past year and most of Coach Joan Williams' team returns.

Santa Fe Community College of Gainesville, Sevens Beach Community College, Florida Community College of Jacksonville and Valencia Community College of Orlando are always strong.

Seminole High School graduate Bobbie Osborne is one six returnees from last year's Seminole Community College softball team.

Eastern targets business travel for promotion

MIAMI — Eastern Airlines has unveiled a novel frequent-flyer program aimed at attracting coveted business travelers back to the struggling carrier.

Eastern said the program, dubbed "Business Break," will offer free trips to Honolulu, Mexico and the Virgin Islands to customers who complete seven roundtrip flights on the airline between Sept. 2 and March 1.

The carrier said standard frequent-flyer programs require participants to fly between 25 and 40 roundtrips to earn the same bonus.

Although open to all, Eastern said it tailored the program to appeal to business travelers who have deserted the carrier during its recent round of financial and operating troubles.

"You don't have to have a tie on (to participate). However, you have to be flying on a non-excursionary fare," said Eastern spokeswoman Karen Corvank.

"The qualifying flights also must be taken between Sunday and Friday of the same week, which means for the most part business travelers," she said.

"We want to build allegiance with the business flier," she added.

Customers who qualify for the free trips can redeem those awards by boarding one of Eastern's special flights to Honolulu, Cancun, Mexico, St. Thomas or St. Croix.

Pizza Hut moves into Moscow

By JIMMIE WALLACE
UPI Business Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The dining out menu for Muscovites soon will broaden beyond borscht and Big Macs to include pizza.

Not any pizza, mind you, but a specialty developed for the local market by Pizza Hut.

In its first Soviet restaurants, scheduled to open this fall in Moscow, Pizza Hut will offer a sardine-tuna-and-onion topped pan pizza along with American favorites such as its mushroom-onion-and-pepper Supreme combination.

The first Pizza Hut, scheduled to open Sept. 12, will be on Dorkey Street, between Red Square and a McDonald's that opened in January with great fanfare. The second, in the suburb of Krylat, will open a week or two later.

"The most exciting part of this is we're building the family restaurant and dining experience," said Bill McCleave, vice president of marketing for PepsiCo Food Service International, which operates Pizza Huts outside the United States.

"This doesn't exist in the USSR right now. It's stuff we take for granted in America, because it's been around for awhile."

"This doesn't exist in the USSR right now. It's stuff we take for granted in America, because it's been around for awhile."

-Bill McCleave, marketer

McCleave said Pizza Hut would introduce a new concept about dining to Moscow residents.

"It's a casual restaurant," he said. "You don't have to get dressed up to go. There's the idea of having anything on the menu, prepared well, and brought to you fast."

McCleave said he expected the Moscow restaurants to be "awfully busy." The company anticipates turning over seats at the Pizza Huts once an hour, 12 hours a day.

The move into the Moscow market is a natural for Pizza Hut, a Wichita, Kan., division of PepsiCo Inc.

Pizza Hut opened its first restaurant outside the United States more than 20 years ago and expects to operate restaurants in 66 countries by the end of 1990.

And Pizza Hut's parent has a relationship with Soviet trade officials dating to the Khrushchev era, when a Pepsi exhibit was part of the American National Exhibition in Moscow in 1959.

Pepsi became the first foreign consumer product sold in the Soviet Union in 1972. PepsiCo that year garnered the exclusive right to import and distribute Stolichnaya vodka in the United States.

In April, PepsiCo signed a $3 billion-plus reciprocal trade agreement with the Soviets under the year 2000.

Under the agreement, PepsiCo will more than double the number of its Soviet bottling plants and will bring more Stolichnaya to the United States market.

The agreement also calls for the construction of at least 10 Soviet commercial shipping vessels.

Foreign exchange credits from the sales and leasing of the ships will be used partly for initial investments in the two Moscow Pizza Hut restaurants.

The city of Moscow is Pizza Hut's joint venture partner on the project, sharing equally the $7 million construction cost for the two restaurants. The project's total cost was not released.

Japan's stock market down, economy not out

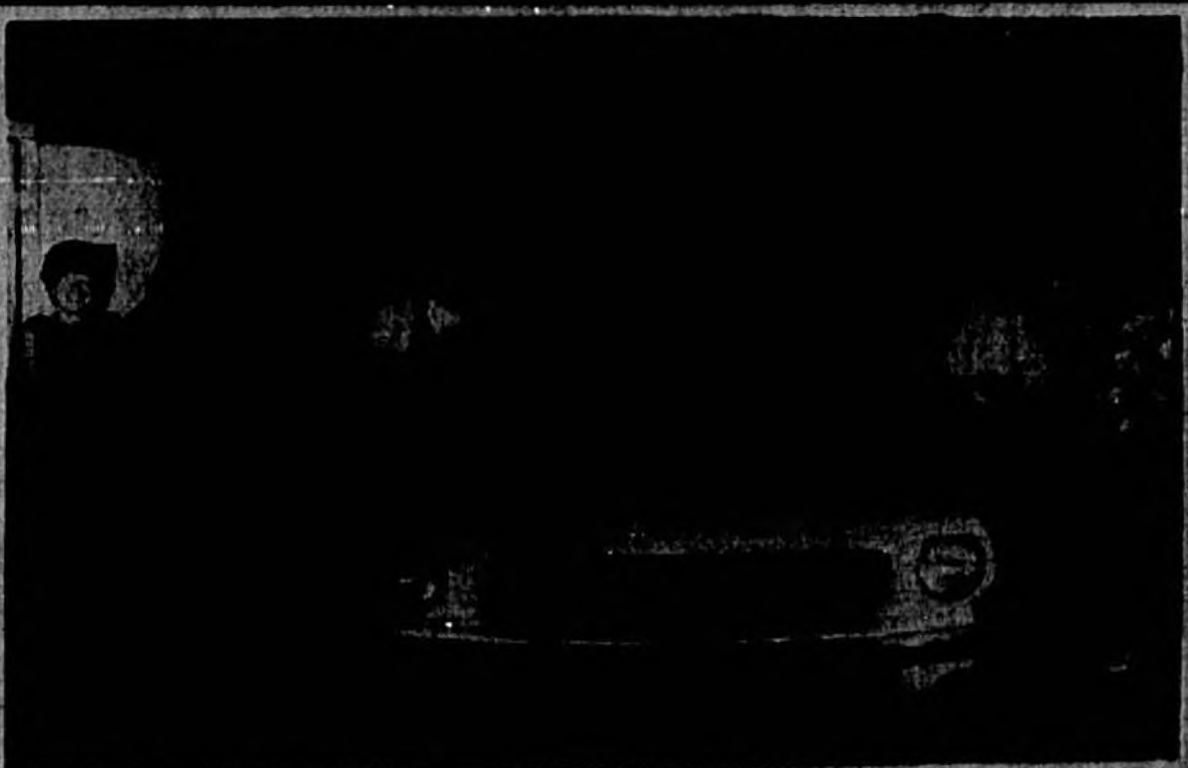

United Press International

TOKYO — If Japan's stock market were truly a weather vane for its economy, the nation would be in deep trouble now.

But while the Tokyo stock market has gone into a tailspin since the Persian Gulf crisis broke out, Japanese industry appears well prepared to ride out the storm even though the nation imports 90 percent of its oil needs. Analysts contend the divergence between Japan's economy and its stock market will continue to grow because of higher interest rates that will be required to keep inflation in check as oil prices rise.

Since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of fellow OPEC member Kuwait, the benchmark Nikkei average has dropped by about 20 percent. Although the market has bounced back a few times, no one is confident of a sustained rally.

Infection-causing bacteria resistant to antibiotics

United Press International

BOSTON — In a recent study, researchers in Seattle found antibiotics highly effective in preventing persistent urinary tract infections in all but two young women they studied.

Laboratory tests uncovered the apparent reason for the two exceptions. Both women harbored infection-causing bacteria in their systems that were resistant to antibiotics, making the drugs unable to kill the bacteria.

The incident was just one example of a problem scientists say is widespread in some parts of the world and could become a health care headache in the United States, the genetic evolution of bacteria that can resist the effects of antibiotics, a class of drugs that kill bacteria and slow their growth.

Researchers at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston who recently compared antibiotic resistance levels among children in the United States, Venezuela and China found reason both for hope and concern.

On the hopeful side, they found a relatively high proportion of children they tested in Boston did not have bacteria in their systems that were antibiotic-resistant. They said that was a good sign that the strict controls on antibiotic use that exist in the United States, combined with good hygiene, can reduce the problem.

But they found a very different situation among the children in Venezuela and China, where antibiotic use is largely unregulated. Only one of 41 children studied in Caracas, Venezuela, and two of 53 children in Quin Pu, China, near Shanghai, had no resistant bacteria in their feces.

The Venezuelan children ranged in age from five months to 5 years and the Chinese children from 6 months to 6 years. In contrast to them, 18 of the 56 Boston children tested — who were aged 3 and under — had no resistant bacteria.

New treatments evolve for ovarian cancer

From staff and wire reports

GAINESVILLE — Research shows that two new treatments offer hope for ovarian cancer patients, helping to increase survival rates by as much as 30 percent in some people, the University of Florida said Thursday.

Scientists at the UF Health Science Center studied about 70 patients over five years and concluded that the two new methods — radioactive injections and low-dose external radiation treatments — had the most success in women whose cancer was treated soon after diagnosis.

UF gynecological cancer specialists are among few in the nation who use radioactive phosphorus P-32 injections to help prevent the recurrence of ovarian cancer once the disease has shown signs of remission. The health science center also is the only facility in the country offering twice-a-day, low-dose abdominal radiation for treating the disease.

The therapies complement standard ovarian cancer treatment, said Dr. Weldon Chafe, a specialist in gynecological cancer with UF's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

"When a woman is diagnosed as having ovarian cancer, the current treatment in the United States is to surgically remove the tumor and use chemotherapy for up to 12 months," Chafe said.

"However, statistics indicate that about 30 percent will still have some cancer clinically apparent — despite the treatments — and will die within two years. While the other 70 percent will have no detectable disease, more than half of these patients will develop recurrent ovarian cancer within five years."

Chafe and UF gynecological oncologist Linda Morgan use traditional ovarian cancer therapy but add a surgical procedure, called a second-look laparotomy, after chemotherapy treatment. During the surgery, tissue samples are taken from the abdomen for biopsy so doctors can determine which of the two new therapies should be used.

If cancer is still present, patients have their entire abdomen treated with low doses of external radiation therapy twice a day in a procedure called hyperfractionation, Morgan said.

Following 30 patients for five years after treatment, Morgan has seen a survival rate of 30 percent. If left untreated, most of these high-risk patients would have lived for about 18 months, she said.

"The advantage of it over radiating the abdominal area with one high dose treatment, which is the current practice by many physicians, is that it is better tolerated with fewer adverse side effects," Morgan said.

Radioactive phosphorus injections are used if a patient appears cancer free during the second-look laparotomy, Chafe said. About 30 to 50 percent of these patients will have recurrent ovarian cancer unless additional therapy is used.

Two days after the exploratory surgery, the patient receives an abdominal injection of P-32, an isotope that does not penetrate deeply into tissue, resulting in minimal side effects.

Of the 30 patients age 18 to 74 who have participated in Chafe's P-32 study since 1984, 17 are still living — an 86 percent survival rate.

Help in Seminole County

The Volunteer Center of Seminole County is a clearinghouse for the recruitment and placement of volunteers to Seminole County Social Service Agencies. Call 321-3759 to volunteer your time.

West Lake Hospital needs someone to assist the receptionist in greeting visitors and clients and helping with the switchboard.

Assistant Springs Library needs someone to answer phones and to serve as a receptionist.

Hillhaven Health Care Center needs ceramic instructors, poetry group leaders and visitors to visit with patients.

The Federation of Senior Citizens needs people to stay with a homebound senior once a week for two to three hours to provide relief for the regular caregiver.

Students past 40 soar

By JOAN KANE
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — Re-entering school after a long absence can be frightening for an older student.

It's reminiscent of that first day of school as a child surrounded by total strangers.

Older students, too, are suddenly on their own to deal with the complexities of the new school experience: mystery, intrigue and doubt. The mystery for all students is one of not knowing how they will be received by fellow classmates. The possibility of actually earning a college degree is intriguing to older students but the doubt of being too old to learn is also there.

Some older students re-enter school after spending a lifetime raising families and performing the multitude of complex tasks associated with that job.

Why should attending college be such a challenge to those who have previously coped well with life's varied situations?

It is stated best by those who have feared and conquered college, such as Sanford resident Judith Corrales, who at 47 is earning her master's degree, and Longwood resident Pat Kapeak, who at age 40 was awarded a college scholarship.

Corrales graduated from Seminole High School in 1961.

"Learning was difficult for me," she says. "I struggled to get C's in high school, but in college, I'm a straight A student."

Corrales was a marine and married a marine. She was released from the service when she became pregnant, although she did serve long enough to earn some GI benefits. Before the benefits expired she entered an Arizona junior college under the medical program and became a medical assistant. While attending junior college she worked full time and earned a 4.0 average.

When Corrales' husband retired from the Marine Corps, he was out of work. She says her job as a medical assistant didn't pay very well so she sought employment working with the mentally handicapped.

In 1988, Corrales came home to Sanford to care for her grandmother, who suffered a broken back in a fall. While caring for her grandmother, her marriage ended in divorce. The elderly woman's back mended and she was later diagnosed as having Alzheimer's disease.

Corrales knew that she needed to start her life over and received much support from her daughter and mother.

"Divorce is so emotionally upsetting, I allowed myself time to grieve, time to recuperate. With strong family support and six-months time, I regained my self-esteem," she says.

She advises those in a similar situation to get support from family or support classes.

"Do anything to make yourself feel positive," Corrales says. "Support is very important in recovering. You're not the first and you won't be the last to go through an emotional upheaval."

As Corrales started her life over, she discovered that her educational credits with a 4.0 average couldn't be transferred to Florida. She had to start her education over. With the mixed emotions of fear and hope she sought help from school advisors and counselors for guidance, stability and financial aid. Presently, Corrales is working hard toward her masters degree at University of Central Florida on the Brevard campus in Cocoa. She applied for the position of graduate assistant in the special education department and is employed by the college part-time. She will assist Dr. Platt with research and will teach classes as a substitute and tutor students. In the spring she will supervise student teachers and will critique their work. She will be allowed to work 30 hours weekly and will get paid for her time.

Corrales will spend her time in Cocoa from Sunday to Thursday and will take one class in Orlando on Thursday nights. She will stay in Sanford with her family on weekends.

"With my medical background, I'm able to help my family with their medical problems when I'm here in Sanford. I can drive them wherever they need to go or run errands for them," she says.

"Being an older student is fun, now," says Pat Kapeak, who admits that not too long ago she wouldn't even drive on I-4.

Kapeak says that being fearful is a gradual thing that creeps up on a person over the years.

"I stayed home raising my daughter, Brenda, who is now 17 and my son, Michael, 12. I didn't have to go anywhere or go out to do anything. We went to church and places that were comfortable," Kapeak says.

Kapeak first thought of doing something different when her church placed a call for actors to participate in a play. She struggled with the notion of fulfilling her lifelong dream of acting. Brenda, who is currently working a professional career in acting, was her mentor in that first big step for Kapeak. After much deliberation and advice from Brenda, who told her to wake up her spirit and then do it, she did it.

She says, "I auditioned and got the part. I was so happy and relieved after it was all over. It wasn't a quick cure for fear but at

Wine merchant's palate is his secret to success

WINTER PARK — Randy Oates is a study in subtleties.

Dressed in casual safari shorts and a summer sports shirt, he sprouts like any good employee through the Winter Park establishment, Wine and Cheese Cellar, to assist a customer with her wine choice. Oates, the entrepreneur, owns the business, one of the few left on Park Avenue which is not affiliated with a national chain.

Dark and cool, and lined with a myriad of bottles filled with Bachel's master, Oates' shop evokes an image of a well-stocked cellar in a European castle, owned, certainly, by a connoisseur. Oates, in fact, does live in a renovated European-style villa with a walled courtyard, in Sanford. He and his wife, JoAnn, have invested over $100,000 for restoration work painstakingly done to preserve the integrity of the 1894 structure. They share their home with five dogs and 15 cats, who require four hours a day for care from their owners.

Although Oates can easily discern subtleties in the taste of different wines, he really doesn't call himself a connoisseur.

"I tend to be evasive about terms like connoisseur," he says as he busily grabs for the ringing phone. "When it comes to food and wine, I don't subscribe to the nature of elitism

Sanford's recreation superintendent will play on opposite end of globe

By BOB PIERPAMP
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Friday was not only Jeff Monson's ninth anniversary of his employment as recreation superintendent for the City of Sanford, it was also his last day in that position. Monson is off to fulfill an eight-month dream of travel and high adventures on the opposite side of the globe.

The 38-year-old Monson will leave Tuesday for Auckland, New Zealand, from where he will launch into six months of hiking, white water rapids riding, and mountain climbing.

"I have friends there, and in two other cities," he said. "so I'll be staying with them for a while, then head over to Australia for a short time. I also want to go to New Guinea for a short time, but mostly I'll be staying in New Zealand."

Monson said it all started when he was hooked for a two-week tour of New Zealand, scheduled to begin in October.

"They didn't have enough people to make the trip so it was cancelled," he said. "I tried to contact those who were signed up but the cost was prohibitive for a small group, so I'm going alone."

He said he has been studying travel brochures for the area and believes New Zealand will offer as much excitement and adventure as any other place he could find, and in a much smaller area.

"The whole country is the size of Colorado," he said, "and people speak English."

Monson is no stranger to the type of adventure he has planned. He has traveled extensively in Nepal, Peru, Mexico and several other countries.

Jeff Monson points to his destination. He leaves Tuesday for New Zealand, Australia and New Guinea. He will spend six months hiking, white water rapids riding and mountain climbing before returning to Central Florida.

In Peru, he led an expedition up the Inca Trail.

"When we finally got to the top, people were laughing and crying at the same time over the sheer excitement of it all," he said.

He has also climbed in the Himalayan mountain system of Asia.

A native of Maine, Monson graduated from the University of Maine with a degree in health, physical education and recreation. He tried classroom teaching for a while but preferred outdoor recreation. He moved to Orange County 14 years ago and was employed by that county as supervisor of a park, before becoming recreation superintendent for the City of Sanford in 1981.

As for his plans upon returning from the trip, he said, "I don't have any. I will definitely move back to Central Florida and I don't think I'll have any problem finding work, but right now, all I'm thinking about is this trip."

City Recreation Director Mike Kirby announced last week that Rocky Edgeworth, who has been heavily involved with the city's Little League baseball activities for the past year, will replace Monson as recreation superintendent effective Monday.

Last leg of vacation was exciting

The "Happy Birthday" song never got sung to my husband, Carl, on his birthday, July 30.

On that day, we were scheduled to attend the Paaston Play at Oberammergau, Germany. The extravaganza is performed every decade and lasts for about five and one-half hours. That night I had planned a surprise birthday party in his honor back at our hotel in Ischgl, Austria, a winter skiing resort.

Before we left for our dream Alpine Odyssey, Carl told our daughter, "I am going to take Mother 'pub-crawling' on my birthday and watch her do the polka." But "pub-crawling" was not on our itinerary.

"Wanta bet?" Mary challenged.

On Saturday night, July 28, after dinner at our hotel, we walked to the village in search of the Queen's Pub, a "must see" night spot featured on the map. But when we arrived, at about 8, the pub was not carrying with activity. In fact, it was closed. Several on our tour had joined us in the walk around the picturesque village and we finally settled for an ice cream parlor up a craggy slope. We walked over the top and spotted our hotel down in the valley. Some of us decided to take a short cut down the slope. Clutch! I lost my footing, and ended up in an ambulance enroute to a hospital about 40 miles away at Zams.

Forget the pain. I was terrified! At first, I was questioned by the handsome doctor in emergency, "British?" I shook my head back and forth and dared not say more. For all I knew, I was in the enemy camp where Americans are beheaded. Then he said, grinning while extending his hand, "Then you are American." All I can say is that from that point on, the red carpet was literally rolled out.

The doctor scheduled surgery the next morning for my broken right leg and Carl was permitted to stay in the room with me that night. Here we were, two Americans stranded a long, long way from home in an Austrian hospital with all our belongings back at the hotel. The next day, two women from our tour company picked us up and found Carl another hotel room within walking distance of the hospital.

This is how we spent the next 18 days of our vacation — me flat on my back and Carl playing the great protector to the 60-year-old husband of my 20-year-old daughter. My 10-year-old son, Lynn and David Douglas, are from Cardiff, Wales, and remain on of Jessica Tandy and her husband, except Lynn is not as old as Jessica. The two brothers stayed in the same hotel and we developed quite a bonding relationship and are already planning a trip to London next year.

I cannot say enough kind words about the immaculate hospital, friend and sponsor by Roman Catholic nuns. I never saw so much white starched linen since I left Alabama 40 years ago. Even the towels and napkins were starched and with a belt added to the waistline, the starched hospital gowns could be worn on the street. The food and service were excellent with white wine served at dinner for those who so desired. But don't ask for water or ice.

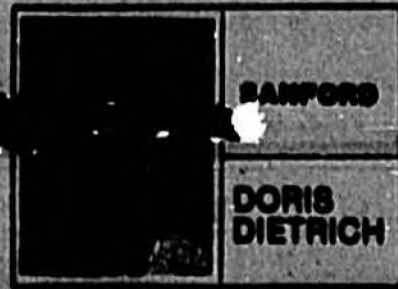

A team of doctors made their rounds twice a day dressed in professional white mid-calf coats, looking like something out of a Hollywood movie set. Beautiful! They joked a lot and at 10:00 P.M., the 500-bed, well-equipped hospital handles about 8,000 accident cases annually, including skiers, mountain climbers, cyclists etc. So I was in the best of hands.

The nurses, many of them students at the hospital nursing school, were out of this world — so bubbly, vivacious and efficient. They flitted around with the grace of ballerinas in their short uniforms covered with white pinafore aprons. Thomas Pitti, a 30-year-old medical student, is working as nursing assistant at the hospital this summer. Tom speaks perfect English and acted as interpreter among his jack-of-all trades duties. We predict Tom will be a very fine doctor.

We struck up a friendship with a darling Austrian girl, Yvonne, 13, who was in the hospital for a tonsillectomy. Yvonne speaks perfect Harvard English and told us English is mandatory in Austrian schools. Someday, hopefully, she will come to America to visit us.

I shall never forget this experience and these wonderful people. On the day before I left, I went under general anesthesia for more surgery including removing the cast for another one. Ouch! I told the doctor my bones belonged to him today, but "tomorrow I leave for home if I have to ride your bones piggy-back across those Alps."

The next morning, we did leave for Zurich, Switzerland and I was so weak, I could hardly move, on top of trying to hobble on those miserable crutches. My husband climbed in the front seat with the van driver while I sprawled out on the seat behind. I dabbed at the huge drops of perspiration on my brow that felt like rivulets streaming down my face. Perilous nausea gnawed at the lining of my empty stomach and my heart raced wildly. I thought I was going to die, but at least, my body was on the way home. It was not until we arrived at the lovely hotel in Zurich that I levked off and the fellows never knew of my dilemma.

We left Zurich the next day at 1 p.m. under the watchful eye of military personnel. Now, these were not toy soldiers, nor was this a movie set. These big boys were packing tommy guns just waiting for someone to make the wrong move. Eerie! We had first class accommodations across the Atlantic where all we did for nearly eight hours was eat, drink and be merry.

Carl and I became separated in New York while clearing customs but got back together five minutes after the plane was scheduled to depart for Orlando. The minute I put my casted toe aboard, the big bird started moving.

A turbulent storm lashed at the Orlando airport with such fury that the airport was closed at our arrival time. After circling for about two hours, our fuel was running low, so the plane landed in Miami. Here we discovered the plane was defective and we had to change planes again.

My family was frantic and when we finally landed, my daughter boarded the plane, clung onto me for dear life and announced, "Mother, you are grounded. You are never going to leave the Sanford City limits again."

Needless to say, I have taken a terrific razzing since returning. With apologies to Rudyard Kipling, two "ifs" have been of repeated by friends: "If the pub had been open, it never would have happened," and "If you had had on your usual high heels, it never would have happened."

The good news is that we had a marvelous time. We fell in love with the Austrians, Germans and the Swiss who are such gentle, peace-loving folks. Some of the customs are different, but there is not that much culture shock. As I wrote in several, the Old World ambience was right up my alley. Switzerland was a little rich for our blood — Coca Colas were $4 per glass (and no ice) and hamburgers were $14.50 each. Everybody drove a Mercedes including the cab drivers. Also, our touring coach before the accident was a Mercedes.

Frieda Tyre and Mabel Chapman joined us in Ischgl. We all thought we were leaving Orlando together, but they were scheduled to fly a charter flight which was detained in Orlando overnight. We nearly panicked when they didn't show at the airport, and they did likewise when we didn't show. But we learned of their problems before they arrived in Austria and were so glad to see them.

They got to see the Paaston Play and Frieda said, "It was beautiful." We covered many miles and saw numerous historical landmarks, including Innsbruck, site of the Winter Olympics several years ago. It was here that Frieda climbed to the top of the famous ski lift and will probably show you some pictures she took from the lofty height. "I never climbed so many steps and hills in all my life," Frieda said about the trip.

Arriving about a week earlier than us to see the Paaston Play were the Rev. Jean Querry, Pastor of the First United Methodist Church, and his wife Pat. I understand others from Sanford have visited Europe this summer which I will tell you about later.

Dear gentle readers, it's good to be home. My latest attire is a heavy, heavy cast covering my entire right leg which doesn't leave me much mobility, but, at least, I'm hobbling around home, sweet, home.

And I'll be as good as new in a few weeks.

Johnsons celebrate 50 years together

Special to the Herald

SANFORD - On January 26, 1940, a beautiful Sunday afternoon, Cliff Johnson saw a girl standing on a dock in front of the Methodist Children's Home in Enterprise. He said that the first time he saw her over 50 years ago, he knew that she was the perfect girl for him. Her smile and sweetness captured his heart, he admitted. He can still describe the dress she was wearing in detail.

The girl, Hazel Hiers, was a senior at Seminole High School. After her graduation in June, she and Cliff were married on August 11, 1940 by the late Rev. J. W. Austin in Orlando.

They are the proud parents of three children: a son, Bill Johnson, husband of Loretta, Tinton Falls, New Jersey; two daughters, Janet Johnson Kargan, wife of Michael, also Cheryl Johnson Hughes, wife of Ed, Sanford. They have nine grandchildren who affectionately call them Nana and Pa.

Hazel kept children in her home for 26 years. Many of these children, now married and in college, still call the Johnsons Nana and Pa and still visit them.

Cliff retired from Peninsular Life Insurance Company after 28 years after being diagnosed with kidney disease. He has been on dialysis for nearly nine years. These years haven't always been the best, but side by side, they have found disappointment and joy. Together they have taken what life handed them and together they turned it into gold.

Sharing life together and sharing their faith in God above has brought about these beautiful 50 years of love. God has been their friend and guiding light and He has kept them in His love and care everyday. With Christ in their lives they have been able to accept their difficulties in life and go on. Their love has always been more precious than silver and more lovely than gold.

Hazel and Cliff have been active members of Christ United Methodist Church in Sanford for most of their 50 years together. They have taught Sunday School and held different offices in the church. Their church is their second home.

A dinner cruise on the Grand Romance was hosted by the Johnson's children to celebrate their parents' 50th anniversary. It was a beautiful affair. A picture-perfect setting, the evening sun was setting as the Romance headed up the river. The atmosphere was terrific! The wedding cake was decorated in white and gold and held an open ceramic Bible with the inscription, "Fifty years together, in a lifetime few can share and a marriage like yours is one beyond compare."

The band played music from the '40s and Hazel, who recalled that she was surprised when the spotlight found them, danced the anniversary waltz with Cliff. It was the highlight of the evening.

Cliff and Hazel Johnson, aboard the RiverShip Romance, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary recently.

Hazel wore a beautiful two-piece dress of champagne silk, trimmed with lace and with a fitted skirt. Her earrings consisted of three yellow rosebuds. Cliff wore a beige business suit with a yellow rose-bud in his lapel.

Helping the Johnsons celebrate the big occasion were: Hazel's brother and wife, W.L. and Stella Hiers of Corvallis, Or.; sister and brother-in-law, Louise and Bob Brown of Del-Bary; sister, Mildred Peters of Sanford. Also, grandson Michael Kargan and his fiancée, Audrey Goman of Sanford. A lot of fun was had by all.

Balloons, romance herald 102 years

Longwood Health Care Center resident Alice Shuster turned 102 recently in a festive party atmosphere dotted with red balloons and attended by family members, staff, residents and friends at the center.

Activities Coordinator Trish Edgeworth planned the afternoon bash with Alice's daughters, Grace Guthrie, from Lake Mary, and Edith Liebert, from Kissimmee.

"They provided the cake and we decorated. We really appreciate her daughters. They helped make the party a success," Trish said.

Trish said excitement was in the air all morning. Alice wore a big smile all day and never hesitated to tell everyone it was her birthday. In keeping with the sprightly lady she is, she never even lied about her age.

"She stopped everyone to say 'today is my birthday and I'm 102,'" Trish said.

About 45 people shared the celebration, including Alice's great-grandson Chris, 2. It was noted that the pair are exactly 100 years apart. Chris was also excited about the party and helped his great-grandma blow out the candles on her cake. Which goes to show you that birthdays are fun no matter how old you are.

Alice, an avid reader, received several romance novels, which are her favorite. She also received clothing.

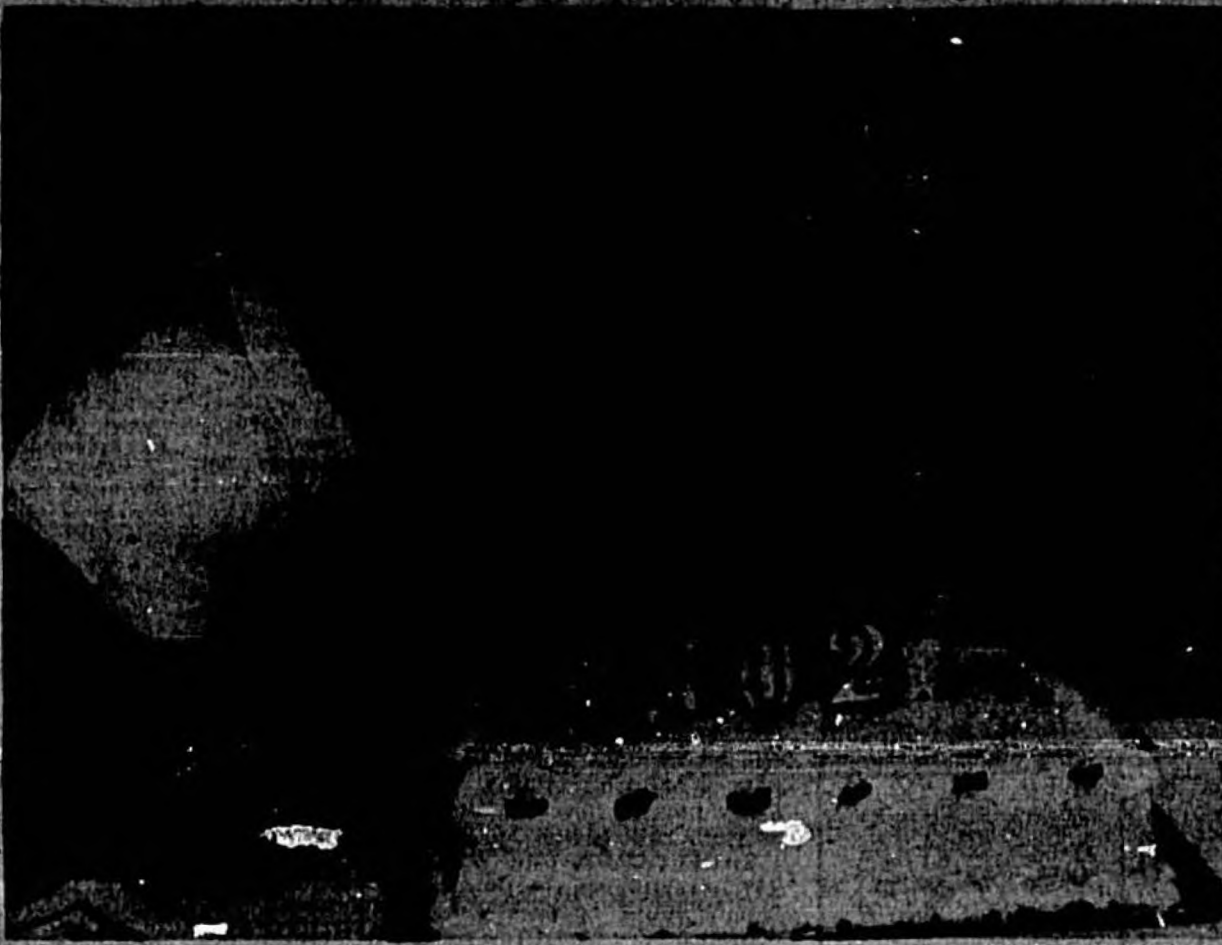

After an exhausting afternoon of party-going, you might think Alice retired to her room for a nap.

"No, she stayed out and visited with other residents for awhile and then went to her room, but not for a nap," Trish said.

She cracked open one of her new romance novels and began reading. She also moved all the red balloons to her room.

Trish said Alice is already looking forward to next year's party.

ARIGAIL VAN BUREN

Ace may be a joker to lonely lady

DEAR ARIGAIL: I am a widow in my late 50s who has been keeping company with a bachelor my age for three years. My problem is I still haven't met any of his family members.

He lives on a farm with his mother and two sisters. I've never been to his house because his mother is senile and both his sisters are crazy.

He doesn't work and says he has no income, but he owns a little property and drives a nice car.

He's asked me not to phone him because he has a party line, which he says everybody listens in on, and he doesn't want people knowing his business.

Last year his brother died, but he didn't tell me until after they buried him because he said it was a private funeral and his brother was crazy. I'm beginning to think insanity runs in his family.

If I weren't so darned lonesome, I'd forget him, but he does play a nice game of gin rummy. How do you and your experts figure him?

LETTERS BY W.V.A.

DEAR MIMI: My experts suspect that your gentleman friend is either married, crazy or both. And my advice is to determine his marital status. Find another gin rummy partner or take up calisthenics.

DEAR ARIGAIL: Our widowed daughter, approaching 50, recently remarried and moved halfway across the country. When we visited her recently, I noticed only two pairs of pajamas in the laundry and none in their drawers.

Doesn't it strike you as odd, if not improper, for middle-aged people to wear night clothes only when they have guests?

DEAR MIMI: What people wear (or don't wear) to bed is between them. The only improper thing I see here is your concern about something that shouldn't concern you.

No simple answers to question about alcohol

DEAR MARY: How can you tell the difference between social drinking and the early stages of an alcohol problem? Both my husband and I come from families where alcohol has been a problem, but we both enjoy an occasional drink and I don't want to get paranoid about it because of our family backgrounds.

CAUTIONS BEHIND

DEAR CAUTIONS: There is no simple and direct answer to this question and no laboratory test that will provide definitive results in the early stages. Alcoholism is a disease that involves body, mind, and spirit and the onset is insidious. With your family backgrounds of alcoholism, you are certainly wise to remain cautious and alert to possible signs and signals of the beginning stages of the disease.

Here are some questions to ask yourself periodically to help determine if you may be moving from social drinking toward alcohol dependency.

DEAR CAUTIONS
MARY BALK

- Do you:
 -occasionally lose time from work due to use of alcohol?
 -use alcohol to feel more self-confident?
 -need to increase the frequency or amount to obtain the desired feeling?
 -use alcohol to stop thinking about things that disturb you?
 -avoid social activities where no alcohol is available?

If you find that the answer to several of these questions is "yes," you may be in need of further assessment.

'Ernest' about the environment

By VICKI BOBROWSKA
Herald staff writer

WINTER PARK — Ernie Hatton said he has always been interested in environmental issues, but he thinks young people need a little encouragement in finding out what they can do to save the world's resources.

Hatton and his partner Syndi Seppaner, an artist originally from California, are trying to introduce environmentally aware Ernest and his friends to elementary students in Seminole County.

Ernest is a cartoon character conceived by Hatton and brought to life by Seppaner.

"He's a hard working, earthy sort of guy," Seppaner said. "The kids love him."

Hatton said Ernest is geared toward youngsters in Kindergarten through fourth grade.

"We've got big pictures for the littlest ones and then some simple sentences with some important facts for the older kids," he said.

In addition to a 60-page book in which Ernest tells the youngsters about issues such as the importance of trees, the advantages of recycling and the conservation of water, Hatton and Seppaner have made a prototype of an Ernest doll, which will be manufactured, beginning later this year, at a factory in Ocoola County.

Hatton said the cartoons "make a strong, visual statement," adding that the words merely supplement the statements made by the pictures.

"Sometimes a kid will remember something that has been presented visually more than he will remember the words," Hatton explained.

On one page of the book one of Ernest's friends, Water Watch Frog, dressed as the Statue of Liberty, is shown standing on a recycled aluminum can pedestal, holding a recycled newspaper. In the background is New York City. "Americans recycled over 42.5 billion cans in 1986. Those 42.5 billion cans saved enough electricity to power the residential needs of New York City for six months," reads the caption.

"Now, you see," Hatton said. "A kid will remember that image more than he would if he'd just been given the figures."

Syndi Seppaner and Ernie Hatton created Ernest, in the middle, to help teach youngsters about serious environmental issues. Now they're trying to get him into the schools.

This school year, visitors to the school district's Environmental Studies Center, 2985 Osprey Trail in Longwood, will be introduced to Ernest by Jackie Champion-Pearson, a teacher.

"I'm always looking for a gimmick to get the attention of the kids," Champion-Pearson said. "And Ernest is cute."

The concept of the characters started in 1983 when Hatton began lobbying for passage of what was to become the Arbor Month bill which passed in 1986. He said he was looking for a way to teach young people about the importance of preserving the environment.

According to Hatton, Lynda Fox, a fourth grade teacher at Stenstrom Elementary School, 1800 Alafaya Woods Blvd. in Oviedo, has decorated her whole room with Ernest and his friends.

"She plans to put a lot of emphasis on environmental issues this year and she thinks this is the best way to introduce the students to those concerns," Hatton said.

Hatton and Seppaner have licensed the characters in an effort to bring down the cost of the books and related items for the teachers and the schools.

"We're able to sell them the book for $10 apiece and give them permission to make as many copies as they need for their classroom," Hatton said.

He added that many teachers purchase curriculum aids for their classrooms with their own money and he felt that he should make his items as inexpensive as possible.

"It'll be a long, long time before we make any money on this," he said, "but it is important that the kids learn about the environment."

Seppaner, who said she "used to be a hippy," said she and Hatton did not recently jump on the environmental bandwagon to make money.

Keeping kids busy with the Y

(We're here to keep the kids entertained and out of trouble.)

entertained and out of trouble," Hysell said. The purpose of the program, she said, is to provide quality child care in a "safe and creative" environment where a child's "physical, social and emotional growth are stimulated."

The afternoon program sets aside time for the youngsters to work on their homework in addition to the other activities.

"We plan out each day very carefully," Hysell said. "Each program is tailored to the needs of the participants. None of them are exactly the same, though they do contain a lot of the same elements."

Hysell said the enrollment in most of the programs is "pretty high," but there are still spaces available in all the programs.

"We have about 30 to 35 people in most of our programs," said Hysell. "though there are close to 50 in the programs in the Oviedo and Altamonte Springs areas."

An additional program is available at the Seminole County branch of the YMCA, during teacher work days and school holidays.

The cost of the before school program is $16 per week for members of the YMCA, $21 per week for non-members, for the after school program, which includes a snack, the cost is $22 per week for members and $27 per week for non-members. For both programs the cost is $31 for members and $36 for non-members.

To register for a program, parents can go either to the school site where their child would attend and register during the program or they can register at the Seminole branch of the YMCA.

Morning and afternoon programs are available at the following schools:

• Altamonte Elementary School, 300 Pipeview St. in Altamonte Springs (program starts at 7 a.m.)

• Forest City Elementary School, 1010 Sand Lake Rd. in Altamonte Springs (program starts at 7 a.m.)
