Of Cuba-Russia Zaire Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Key members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee have been provided with a closed briefing on evidence backing administration charges that Cuba and the Soviet Union supported the Katangese invasion of Zaire, by Central Intelligence Agency Director Stansfield Turner, but not all of them were convinced the evidence was conclusive.

V DONNA ESTES

Herald Staft Writer A former Winter Springs city employee Charles Mort, announced this week that he is chairing a committee seeking the ouster of Councilmen John Daniels and Laurent Pellerin from office by recall.

Neither the elections office division of Florida Secretary of State Bruce Smather's office in Tallahassee nor the Florida League of Cities has statistics showing how many recall efforts of elected municipal officials have been successful.

But spokesmen in the two offices ventured guesses that there haven't been very many since the legislation providing a uniform method of recall was originally adopted in 1975. The law was amended in the 1977 session of the Legislature and the amendment became law on Jan. 1, 1978.

A major change in the law permits recall of a municipal official who has served only one-quarter of his term. The law as originally written required one half of the term to have expired before recall

"It is the intent of the legislature that the recall procedures provided in this act shall be uniform statewide. Therefore, all nunicipal charters and special law provisions which are contrary to the provisions of this act are hereby repealed to the extent of the conflict," the law says.

People of the city of Longwood adopted by initiative a charter amendment providing recall the day before the new state law on recall became effective. The city attorney at that time, Joe Davis, said the state law nullified the Longwood charter amendment. The law, Chapter 100.361 also says: "The provisions of this act shall apply to cities and charter counties which have adopted recall provisions."

The question of whether the law can be used by municipalities that have not adapted recall provisions has not been answered. The Winter Springs city charter, identical to the charter in Lake Mary, does not have a recall provision.

The grounds for a recall, according to the law, are: malfeasance, misfeasance, neglect of duty, drunkenness, in-competence, permanent inability to perform official duties and conviction of a felony involving moral terpitude.

Malfeasance is defined in Black's Law Dictionary as: the commission of some act which is positively unlawful; the doing of an act which is wholly wrongful and unlawful while misfeasance is the improper perior do. Incompetence is defined as the lack of ability, legal qualification or fitness to discharge the required duty. Mort is charging Daniels with misfeasance, malfeasance and neglect of duty. He is charging Pellerin with misfeasance, malfeasance, neglect of duty and incompetence. The requirements of the law for a successful recall are complex, time-comsuming and detailed -- and not as easy as the Mort petition claims. The final paragraph in each of Mort's petitions for the recall of Daniels and Pellerin states: "We urge you to sign this recall petition removing Pellerin (and Daniels) from office."

Circulating and gaining signatures on the first petition is only the beginning. A successful recall takes months and not only one petition, but two and an election are necessary.

The requirements of a law are:

-In a city of 2,000 or more but fewer than 5,000 registered electors the petition must be signed by at least 250 electors or by 10 percent of the total number of registered voters as of the preceding municipal election, whichever is greater. According to Seminole Supervisor of Elections Camilla Bruce, Winter Springs had 2,006 registered voters at the time of its upervisor then determines within a period of 30 days whether the petition contains the required valid signatures. The committee must pay a fee of 10 cents per signature for that service. If the petition doesn't contain the required signatures, as determined by the supervisor, it is dead and filed.

If it does contain the required number, the city clerk must serve upon the person sought to be recalled a certified copy of the petition. -Within five days after service the person sought to be recalled may file with the city clerk a defensive statement of not more than 200 words. Within five more days, the clerk must prepare new petitions ntaining the grounds for recall and the defensive statement. -Upon receipt of the new petition, the committee must obtain the new signatures of 15 percent of the registered voters. At this time anyone can demand that his name be removed from the petition.

-Within 60 days after delivery of the new petition to the committee by the city clerk, the committee chairman must file the completed petition with the city clerk. The clerk then must check the petitions to determine that the appropriate affidavits have also been filed.

-The new petitions are submitted to the elections supervisor who determines whether the required signatures are contained 304 in Winter Spring's case. Another 10 cent fee per name must e paid and the supervisor has 30 days to make the determination

A Change In Approach

The disillusionment, timidity and isolationism that have all but paralyzed U.S. foreign policy in the bitter aftermath of the war in Vietnam seem to be coming to an end.

The Carter administration, aroused from its somnolence by Soviet-Cuban aggression in Africa, ANGLE-WALTERS is demonstrating an unexpected toughness. The chief spokesman for Washington's new elan in foreign affairs, it is interesting to note, is National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brezezinski not Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Mr. Brzezinski has denounced the Soviet Union in specific terms for: penetrating and encircling the Middle East, advancing in Africa, threatening Western Europe and China with a massive concentration of military might, penetrating the Indian Ocean and waging a vitriolic worldwide campaign against the United States.

Much more impressive to the Soviets than his harsh words was Mr. Brzezinski's deed last month in cementing closer ties to mainland China during a visit to Peking. Even the suggestion of a Sino-American alliance chills Moscow to the bone.

Secretary Vance recently announced plans for this country to join with European allies in talks about coordinating a Western response to future threats to African stability.

In a pointed warning to the Soviet Union, President Carter assured the NATO summit conference in Washington on May 31 that the United States would go to war with "all the forces necessary" to defend Europe, just as though America itself had come under attack.

He followed that with his Annapolis speech this week challenging the Soviets to a choice: cooperation or confrontation, emphasizing that we are ready for either.

All of this orchestration is a real shift in Carter administration attitudes.

During his first 15 months as President, Mr. Carter dismissed any "inordinate fear of com-munism" and he sought by soft words to enlarge detente with the Russians. U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, who is now in eclipse, hailed Cuban troops in Angola as a stabilizing influence. But, while the president and his men were avoiding confrontations, the Cubans were doubling their forces in Africa. Administration jawboning has been powerless against Soviet-Cuban deeds. The Russians obviously don't believe they will have to pay much of a price for their gains.

Mr. Carter's problem now, which he seems to be addressing, is how to convince the world that he is able and willing to exact punishment for aggression - for violating U.S. interests.

Fortunately, there is much the president can do to give substance to his new stance that will be short of military intervention. He can give the goahead for developing the neutron weapon. He can, as Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd suggested recently, recall the U.S. envoy to Havana. He can choke off U.S. exports of electronic and machine goods to the Soviet Union.

He can tighten the pipelines supplying wheat and other foodstuffs. He can block scientific exchanges between this country and the Soviet Union. He can give more open support to Soviet dissidents.

And, finally, he can actively seek repeal of congressional restraints on foreign policy. All this he can do to good effect, if he chooses.

President Carter's display of spine does not usher in a new Cold War as has been suggested.

The basic conflict has been there all along because of the unchanging appetite of the Soviet Union for expanded world power. The President has altered nothing. What he may do is to quarantine aggression before it spreads too far to be confined.

The interview with Ibtisam Kanawati and the document she presented on the movement she heads would make any reasonable person believe there is at least a kernel of truth in what many believe to be the ravings of rightist radicals. While she is only one person out of a whole nation of people, she was chosen by her government to come to the United States and was also chosen by her government to lead this women's group. So, her views must have some validity.

Miss Kanawati was not at all reluctant to state her views, which she also purported to be the view of Arabs in general. Her views of the Israeli-Arab problem were shocking-i.e. "There will be no peace in the Middle East until all Arab lands are returned" - and she explained that Arab lands include Israel Itali.

The recent press and television coverage of the Egyptian and Israeli talks left the impression that the Egyptians were being very reasonable in their peace efforts and the Israeli response was unreasonable. The Israeli leaders sounded paranoid in their fears that the Arabs would be satisfied only when Israel is completely destroyed and the Jews sent hunting again for a homeland.

Listening to Miss Kanawati, however, the Israeli fears appeared justified and our insistence on treating the Arabs and Jews alike, selling the Arabs and Israelis equal numbers of planes and arms seemed totally unreasonable.

Several questions kept coming to mind. Does our government not know the views of many Arabs as expressed by Miss Kanawati? Why would our government help the Arabs with arms at the expense of the Jews? Surely, it cannot be to keep the

Some other questions that came to mind were: Why has our press, our television, not seen and reported to us the hatred the Arabs have for the And last, but not least, why in the world is our country helping a movement such as the one of which this woman is a member? The document from Miss Kanawati's Federation of Women states under "external relations"

"The federation is considerably concerned with ensuring the training of the largest possible number of women on first aid, civil defense and use of arms; and holding courses for volunteers in commando tactics, and with preparation of guidance publications and continuous visits to soldiers on the fire lines. Larry Holmes Claims 'One Of Two Champions' Titles

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) Larry Holmes has every right to be proud today, but he is still only one of two world heavyweight champions. In the flush of a classic victory over Ken Norton Friday sight in the World Boxing

Council's version of the heavyweight championship, Holmer

talked about his accomplish-

"I'm the heavyweight champion of the world," he kept saying over and over again. When asked about Leon Spinks, the man who beat fuhammed Ali to win the title last February, Holmes, his manager, Richie Giachetti, and promoter Don King did everything but ask "Leon who." Regardless, until Holmes fights Spinks or Ali, who are scheduled to meet in the World Boxing Association's version of the title on Sept. 15, he'll only be one of two champions. Norton lost his first defense of his title by the narrowest of margins. Judges Harold Buck and Joe Swessel scored it 143-142 for Holmes while Lou Tabat, the third judge, had it for Norton, also 143-142. Back and Swessel gave Holmes the final round, and that's what put him over the

Sig Jakucki Alive And Well

Editor's Note: Milton Richman, once a minor league infielder in the old St. Louis Browns farm system, renews acquaintance today with Sig Jakuchi, who pitched the Browns to their only ennant in 1944

GALVESTON, Texas (UPI) - Sig Jakucki can't figure out why people have so much trouble finding him.

He's been in the same place now for more than 30 years, he says. Sitting right there in his "office" - on a park bench. That's where you can generally catch him day or night, sitting on that bench, and if he isn't there, he might be fishing or across the street in the Peacock Cafe, which is only a few blocks from the

"I go in there and drink all day long," Jakucki says. "Only coffec, though. I don't go for beer anymore. Haven't had a drink in 17 years. Why? Cirrhosis of the liver. Is that a good enough Jakucki makes that statement in pretty much the same matter of-fact way he answered dozens of questions hurled at him by a flock of reporters 34 years ago. That was right after he made baseball history by beating the New York Yankees in the last game of the 1944 season to pitch the St. Louis Browns to the only ant they ever won. "When we won the pennant we had all kinds of champagne and whiskey in the clubhouse," Jakucki recalls. "I told them bring me some beer. I didn't say how many, though." That was the high point of his three seasons in major league baseball. In the World Series, Jakucki lost once and the St. Louis Cardinals eventually won the Series, four games to two. Sig Jakucki is 68 now and knows better than anyone else that his ent in the sun is far behind him. That doesn't bother him at receives no pension from baseball. Nor is he getting tournament Friday. any Social Security for some reason he's at a loss to explain. He 'makes do" with money from odd jobs, including chauffeuring.

"I have nothing to show for it except a ring we got for winning the pennant," he says.

Jakucki, a native of Camden, N.J., once spent seven years in the Army where some now-forgotten second lieutenant converted him from a shortstop to a pitcher. Later, while he was with Galveston, scout Bobby Goff recommended him to the Browns. Jakucki came up with them in 1936. After being sent back to the minors the following season he went on the voluntarily retired list in 1939 and stayed on it through 1943.

"I just quit, that's all," he says. "No particular reason." He returned to the Browns in 1944 at 34 and had a 13-9 record that pennant season. After the following year, he drifted out of baseball and has spent most of his years in this city since. While he was pitching here he grew to like Galveston because of its subtropical weather.

With the Browns, he threw hard and drank hard. But, for all the drinking he did, Jakucki says it rarely bothered him. 'Only once that I can remember," he says. "I got sick in Boston. I threw up right there on the mound. Maybe it was some seafood I ate. I went in and got a glass of water in the clubhouse and came back out and finished the game. We won it." Jakuchi always had a low boiling point and it got him into a lot of fights. One time, he cleared out the entire White Sox bench all by himself and another time, after pitching in a semipro tournament in Wichita, Kan., he chased an umpire across a bridge and dangled him over it for five minutes because he was upset with one of his decisions.

Having not heard from him in so long, or anything about him, some baseball people simply assume he isn't living anymore. "You see I am," he laughs.

"I'm going to live to be 194. I've even cut down on my cigarettes. I used to smoke three packs a day and now I'm down to only two. I smoke a cigar in between."

"Please tell the guys hello for me," he says, lighting another igarette in his "office." "Tell 'em all hello. That way, they'll know of Sig hasn't forgotten 'em.'

He is expected to share the No. 4 starting pitcher assignment with Wayne Twitchell in the Expos rotation. Earlier Montreal General Manager Charlie Fox announced the Expos had picked up catcher Ed Hermann on waivers from the Houston Astros, for an undisclosed amount of cash.

What Makes Pete Rose So Special? In Charlie Chaplin's earliest stage appearance, his first couple of jokes moved the audience to fling orange peels at him, stomp their feet, and boo to hasten his retreat from the stage. Chaplin simply tightened the belt on his baggy trousers, and waddled on. The smallest details, down to his uniform dress, concern Rose. He knots the lace over the long longue of his cleat, for example, to avoid any unnecessary distraction.

Albert Einstein considered the sartorical in pursuit of his science and generally wore sweaters, unpressed slacks and loafers. "Suits, shirts, ties and shoes with laces take too much time. . . (I try) to eliminate ironing, clotheshanging, tailors and dry cleaners," said the professor.

A most distinguishing characteristic of Rose the ballplayer is his enthusiasim. He runs to first base after a walk; he slides head-first; he plays with a desire and intensity - at age 37 - that even baseball players remark on. Whitey Ford nicknamed him "Charlie Hustle."

"I am seeking, I am striving, I am in it with all my heart," said Vincent Van Gogh. Rose is kidded by teammates for his encyclopedic knowledge of his baseball statistics. "I like to know where the next, 462 a third. "So as not to kid myself," he said. Uncannily, Rose can recall the pitcher, the pitch and the circumstances for many, if not most, of his 3,000 hits - his concentration and drive to excel is that profound.

Maestro Artur Rubenstein said, "I get up in the morning, and I start to play a symphony of Brahma in my head better than than any orchestra. The phone rings and I am interrupted, and when I go back, I am somehow in the third movement. Incredible." Mr. Rose, say hello to your peers in excellence.

That was the name of the game when 15 archers attended a gar hunt with bows and arrows sponsored by Seminole Sporting Goods, Land and Water Sports Center, Meadors Marine and the greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce last veekend

The event started at 6:30 a.m. with weigh-in at noon. Most archers were registered and on the water at the appointed time as it is very important that the water surface be relatively calm to spot the fish as they roll and feed.

Ricky Wynn of Apopla was overall winner in largest gar and total poundage. Rick's big fish, which measured 4-feet and 10-inches, almost won the battle. 1.5 Million Fords Recalled To 'End Concern' On Blasts

DETROIT (UPI) - Ferd Motor Co., in a move intended to "end public concern" over the danger of exploding gas tanks, has agreed to call back 1.5 million Pinto and Bobcat subcompacts to modify possibly explosive fuel systems.

The recall, announced Friday, includes all 1971-1976 Pinto and 1975-1976 Bobcat sedans and three-door runabouts. Station wagons and newer models are not involved, the company said.

A Ford spokesman said the modifications are designed to strengthen the tanks and filler pipes against the danger of rupturing and exploding in a rear-end crash.

Reports of hundreds of such explosions and fires prompted the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to investigate the Pinto gas tank design. Ford also has been hit with dozens of lawsuits stemming from Pinto accidents.

Ford Vice President Herbert sch said the recall is not an admission by Ford that the tanks pose a significant safety hazard, as was charged by the NHTSA in a preliminary report in May. "Nonetheless ... we recognize that the agency had identified areas in which the risk of fuel leakage could be reduced significantly on a practicable basis," Misch said.

"Accordingly, Ford decided to end public concern that has resulted from criticism of the fuel systems in these vehicles." fuel tank should be replaced crash that killed the driver.

They 'Gave Up' Their Children... For Weekend

OURSELVES

Sunday, June 11, 1978-10

Evening herald, Sanford, FL

By JOAN MADISON Herald Correspondent

An offer to care for your children for the weekend. What your friends are suggesting has got to be good! So thought Mary Jo and Mike Nocero six years ago. back in New York, when friends returned from a Marriage Encounter (ME) weekend "filled with joy." They insisted they care for the three young Noceros so Mary Jo and Mike could spend a ME weekend together away from the distractions and tensions of every day life - to concentrate on restoring or reawakening their love and communication.

Off went the Noceros, and their lives have never been the same. "I'm a practicing cardiologist with a very good group, in a very good hospital and I'm doing a very good job. Now, as far as the intellectual approach to life, this is fine

"But the sole business of feeling feelings and how they come to play - well, that came as a bolt out of the blue. I thought I knew what a feeling was. I thought I could share feelings, but I was sharing judgments, not feelings," says the doctor who with his wife now reaches out to help others through the Marriage Encounter experience.

They are also the former executive couple for the Orlando Marriage Encounter. They organized and followed-up all Marriage Encounters for the Orlando Diocese which covers from Daytona Beach to Lakeland to Fort Pierce. Mary Jo describes the ME as a "crash course in communication. It's a weekend in which couples learn how to communicate and share their love again with each other. They experience a technique of communication which they take home with them after the weekend." As a team couple, the Noceros "share principles - how they apply to our life. You take the principles and apply them to yours. You sit down and reflect on the principles and then share with your spouse the feelings you have. You learn how to apply and share your thoughts through expressing your feelings."

"One of the things we try to do daily is to write love letters to each other expressing our feelings. After a time of reflection, we share what each has written, taking the strongest feeling in the letters. You try to walk in the spouses shoes - to take on the feeling of the other," says Mary Jo.

"Once you've established this kind of relationship you can really understand from the heart what the other is can really going through, and it's much easier to accept." Both agree that if simple feelings are shared daily, when the more difficult ones come along-the negative feelings - you've already established the relationship, so

"Mike and I are very reactionary people, very sensitive people," begins Mary Jo as she compares post ME with earlier days when they might have used the roadblocks to communication-"the dirty dozen," ordering or commanding; "you must," warning or threatening; "if you don't, then," Moralizing or preaching; "you should," and See COUNSELING, Page 2C

A Sad, Sad Story; But Some Do Help

By ELDA NICHOLS Herald Correspondent

"It seemed no one cared. I had no one in the world to turn to. You see, I was abandoned just before my puppies were born. My days and nights were spent trantically rooting through garbage trying to find enough nourishment and an occasional puddle of water to sustain my thin, parasite infested body. I had hidden my two newborn puppies under an old, empty house. I would hurry back to bathe and nurse them often, have a short rest, and then be off to hunt again in hopes of finding anything edible.

"In addition to my never ending hunger, thirst and weariness, was lonesome for a kind word or hand and often frightened. although my protective instinct for my young grew stronger.

"I was startled one day on my usual search for food, when a car stopped and people called to me. In fear and confusion, I ran from them, but they followed, speaking kindly and offering food! Although I was reluctant at first, I went with them and soon found myself in a clean stall with all the food and water I wanted right in front of me! No need to search! I was exhausted, had a full tummy and slept. But soon I awoke and became restless as I thought about my puppies. How could I let these good people know my need

My suffering was over, but my babies! They would die without me. The people noticed my anxiety, and in carefully checking me over, they suspected a litter somewhere. They quickly drove me back to where they had found me. They placed a collar and a long line on me, and I led them to my pups. They were crying and ready for their long-awaited meal. In relief, I lay down to nurse them. Soon, the three of us were moved to a place where we have constant care, shelter, food, water, veterinary care and medication.

"I pray someone will give my puppies a good home! One is a female and one a male, part shepherd and part Doberman. Surely there must be someone out there who will want my beautiful puppies and who will spare them the suffering I've been through. Maybe someone will see that I. too, have much love and companionship to share with someone who will be kind to me. Our lives depend on you!"
