TAX RECEIPTS BEHIND THOSE OF LAST YEAR

Slight Five Million Dollar Difference Taken As No Indication Of Final Result

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—(AP)—The treasury statement issued today as of Mar. 15 showed that income tax collections were running a scant $5,000,000 behind the total so that day a year ago. This, however, could be taken only as an indicator, and a none too accurate one at that, for the bulk of the payments of the Saturday have yet to be reported.

Treasury officials show that millions of dollars were taken in various offices throughout the country. Those as yet not reported officially recorded here and not received by the treasury department show only a small fraction of the money actually in hand.

The statement for Mar. 15, issued this morning, showed the total collections in the treasury of that date amounted to $872,207,362 against more than $825,000,000 a year ago. Treasury officials, however, already have before them a much larger total obtained by the telephone poll. This, they have declined to make public at least Secretary Mellon has said it was lower than last year's but not substantially so.

This larger total cannot show in the treasury balance. For several days officials refused today to venture any estimate of the overall total.

Figures for this year so far to date are held by treasury officials to be not comparable with the daily reflections of last year because of Sunday intervening this year directly after the end of the year.

They explained, would affect the speed with which collections are shown in the treasury balance. The total added to the treasury balance on Mar. 15, of this year was more than $15,000,000 while last year it was only $15,000,000.

The two islands of New Zealand were linked up by cables to Cook Strait and the address, made in the town hall before 7,000 children of Dunedin, was sent to hundreds of other schools. Byrd's voice was heard equally well in all of them.

Charges Are Lodged Against Assessor

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Mar. 18.—(AP)—A charge that Mayor H. Nolan, Duval county tax assessor, owes the county more than $75,000 was made today by John E. Mahoney, county attorney. McNair, tax collector, appeared before the board and said the tax assessor would make payment in full of any amount he may owe the county. Auditor Hood told Nolan was at work on the tax assessor's returns today, and expected to finish by the middle of tomorrow or Wednesday. Mahoney charged that the assessor had made no return of a certain amount which Nolan charged with having received and failed to report. The amount is $75,000, he said. The tax assessor is expected to appear before the board today.

2 TRAINMEN DIE IN ENGINE BLAST WRECKING TRAIN

SPRINGFIELD, Tenn., Mar. 18.—(AP)—Two men were killed and another injured seriously today in the wreck near here of a through freight train of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, bound from Nashville to Evansville, Ind.

The train, which was carrying a load of coal, was wrecked at the intersection of the Nashville and Springfield, and the engine exploded and the train was blown apart in the air. Eighteen cars were derailed.

The wreck occurred on the main line of the Louisville division, but it was expected that a passenger train would be cleared within a few hours so that there would be no interruption of the service of that line.

It was said by the Nashville news that the train was taken off by a "very serious" accident and it is likely that the train was derailed by a "very serious" accident.

DOHENY WEEPS AS HE RECITES TALE OF LEASE

States Naval Officer Appealed To Him To Bid On Oil Contract Through Patriotism

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—(AP)—Edward L. Doheny, while on the stand today defending himself against charges of bribery broke down and wept in testifying how naval officers appealed to his patriotism to get him to bid on an oil storage contract and he was temporarily exempted from the stand.

The 53-year-old defendant broke down as he reached the point in his testimony which concerned his son, Edward L. Doheny, Jr., who was killed by his secretary about a year ago.

Doheny said that he had been appealed to by the navy to bid on an oil storage contract because of the knowledge that a certain power might be to the United States in the Pacific.

Doheny added that Robison's graphic picture of what might happen as the result of an attack by the power referred to "heavily" made him weep.

"Did Robison use the name of your son in his argument?" asked Doheny.

"Yes," replied Doheny in a choked voice.

Asked to tell what was said, the man began to sob. He left the stand for a few minutes but returned his testimony in a firm voice when he returned.

Inmate Of Insane Asylum Proves To Be Not So "Cuckoo"

CHICAGO, Mar. 18.—(AP)—The first thing Frank McKinley did when he entered the state hospital for the insane in Kankakee, Ill., Nov. 1, 1928 was ask for stationery, a pen and a bottle of ink.

The keepers refused to find that their new inmate was not violent, kindly furnished what he asked and kept on furnishing it almost every day.

McKinley became perhaps the most prolific letter writer ever known in the Kankakee institution. Day after day he would post letters to his sisters, the police, the mayor, the governor, and many other officials.

The subject of the letter was all ways the same: would the party written to please help McKinley get back the $1,000 he had in an old trunk?

The letters, written on stationery which bore the name of the institution, were usually thrown away before they were read. At least no replies ever came.

Three weeks ago Miss Mary McKinley, his sister, heard by chance of the trouble, went to the law office of Howard H. Wickoff. Although she had never played any part in the matter, she asked the attorney to investigate.

In the Chicago storage house owned by McKinley and in the trunk he described, Wickoff found exactly $1,000 in small bills. The attorney announced a day he would file a petition seeking McKinley's release.

Registering Alarm.

There is hope of unlifting the "speakers". Producers foresee a new day when the heart throbbing stuff and the bluster and bluff of the villain will vanish away.

And speech more precise and refined. In the future they feel that the screen will appeal to the cultured and erudite mind.

Alack for the day when this happens. When they blot out the filth of the past. When the hero shall strive to seem really alive.

And the villain seem mild in the past. When no more we shall witness such thrillers. As "Mabel, the Muzler's Wife."

And the "speakers" easy to reflect day by day. Only scenes drawn from actual life.

I like them red-blooded and stirring. With a highly impossible plot that will men who can fight for the wrong of the right.

While tensions are heated red hot. I like them with hatred and fury. Exquisite with revenge and with spite.

And that is the reason for many a season. Have gone to them night after night. But when they depict human action.

As at present the stage seeks to do. When they seek for success by copying to stress. The things that to life are quite true.

I am filled with a brave apprehension. And my heart is dejected and sad. For although I am keen for the cinema screen.

It only is good when it's bad. By James J. Montague. Tension plays are being used by producers in an attempt to draw the camera of the strange party is appearing in various parts of the South. What they need is a good time detector.

Chairman Wickersham says the new law is being enforced better than any other law. Most of us will have to consider such a statement as more of a claim at the other laws of the land than as a proof for prohibition.

American had better stick to American games. Sydney Franklin wanted to be a football star, but is now a very weak man in the hospital. He was some what broken up when the opposition tried to horn in on him, but that is, and is not, a full story.

Admiral Byrd upon arriving in New Zealand gave up all his plans for discovering the way to get to the British claims and the United States government objects and declares that a large part of Antarctica belongs to it. Now none of the heads of the United States have ever been to the South Pole. Admiral Byrd has, and he doesn't want it.

There were 300 homicides in Cook County (Chicago) Illinois. In 1927, and during the same period of time only 187 in the whole British Empire. That's the difference between law enforcement and a lack of it. Judge Shepard, speaking in Tampa recently said, "One reason the people of England are protected from criminals is that Great Britain enforces the law. When the criminal is arraigned there, there is no such shuffling back and forth as there is here." We don't know just what the judge means by "shuffling" but we would like to see of it, and a little more of law and order.

A Lost Art

In this age of radiograms, telegrams, and telephones, it is only natural that letter writing should suffer an almost complete eclipse. It is an art too leisurely and unhurried in its tempo to flower in an atmosphere of speed and short cuts, and a really charming letter is becoming almost as rare as a "one horse shay". It seems to us that, although the twentieth century gratefully employs the efficient and time-saving modern inventions, it should make an effort to keep the art of letter writing alive for the sake of its graciousness and urbanity if for no other reason.

There is something about a letter that is very revealing of the qualities of its author. A conversation is a duel, and the responsibility of making it a good one is jointly shared, but a letter is a solo and the writer, unless he happens to be the sort of person who copies his letters from Beatrice Fairfax forms, stands or falls on his own merit. Even the subject matter must originate with him and not be delicately introduced by a subtle companion. Often, a man thinks what a good talk he had with Jones, how easily the conversation flowed, and what an abundance of topics they found to discuss, when all the time it was Jones who skillfully chose the topics and piloted the conversational bark. When this man sits down to write a letter with no clever Jones to fish for the ideas, he finds that there is "simply nothing to write about".

We once heard a man, who confessed that his strongest weakness was feminine beauty, say that he never felt that he really knew a woman until he had exchanged several letters with her. He said that in conversation he so often mistook the sparkle of a pair of pretty eyes for wit, the sweep of a lovely brow for a fine intelligence and a beautiful character, and the dullest commonplaces, uttered by an alluring mouth and accompanied by a charming smile, as the most brilliant and original ideas. In cold, impersonal black and white, robbed of form and color, mind meets mind and finds, or does not find, the particular treasure for which it is seeking.

The objection might be raised that letter writing is an art that belongs exclusively to the so-called educated class. This is decidedly untrue. We have read letters from an old family servant, which, although they contained numerous quaintly spelled words and some amazing grammatical straggles, had the flavor, the sparkle, and the wit of the old days. Although every man cannot be a Robert Louis Stevenson and write such letters as he wrote from Valima to Calvin, and every woman is not endowed with the native ability of "Madame", the sister-in-law of Louis the Fourteenth, or Lady Mary Wortley Montague, it seems to us that any man who has the time should try, not just to fill up the expected number of folders, but to give to a letter some bit of vitality that will make it live in the mind of the person who reads it.

The Tariff

The tariff question continues to drag along through weary debates in Congress while the paying public wonders what it is all about and if it can ever hope for any reasonable settlement. Recent developments are appropriately described in Time, as follows:

"Under the Senate's parliamentary practice, tariff amendments by the Finance Committee have priority over all others. Time after time during the past six months, the Condition voted down the Committee's provisions, substituting amendments of their own with lower rates.

"But then, when the Committee's proposals had all been dealt with, individual Senators were free to start the voting all over again by proposing amendments on their own.

"In January the Senate voted 48 to 38 not to raise the duty on sugar as proposed by the Finance Committee. Last week when Senator Smoot offered an individual amendment to increase the world sugar rate from 2.20c per lb. to 2.50c (Cuban: 1.75c to 2c), the Senate reversed its position and adopted 47 to 39 the Smoot Amendment. Reason: legislative trading. Washington's Senators Jones and Dill, for instance, reversed themselves to get a lumber duty. Oklahoma's Senators Pine and Thomas did likewise to get an oil duty. Arizona's Ashurst and Hayden switched for a long staple cotton duty.

"In January the condition-controlled Senate voted 40 to 35 to put cement on the free list. Last week it flopped around and adopted 45 to 37 an amendment by New Jersey's Senator Keam to levy a 6c per lb. cement duty. Reason: more under-cover trades.

"To accomplish this spectacular result of getting nowhere, the public has been forced to pay startling sums. No particular figures have been compiled showing net losses to the taxpayers, but Time makes the following statement regarding the cost of tariff debates:

"In six months of debate on the tariff, Senators spoke 4,219,000 words, which cost $131,900 to print in the Congressional Record. Democrats spoke for 221 hours, Republicans 158 hours, Insurgents 148 hours. Such were the statistics given the Senate last week by the master statistician, Chairman Reed Smoot of the Finance Committee, nominal pilot of the tariff bill.

"All these words, all these hours, all this money spent on the tariff appeared last week likely to become so much waste. The coalition of Democrats and insurgent Republicans which had been ploddingly revising the regular Republican bill, suddenly disintegrated under a series of logrolling trades among the Regulars."

TELLING THE WORLD BY NEIL GHARA

Seemingly latest leap forward in our album? "I love to My, my, what? That's a correct view of the Rocky Mountains?" "No, those are the views in my stomach. Did you ever see such a splendid view?" "I could say not. Why I thought that I'd never on the left was Pike's Peak. And is that the Colorado River in the foreground?" "No, indeed, that's my gastrics swirling around. No wonder I had such indigestion."

"It's marvelous! I never saw such scenery before. And don't tell me that isn't a picture of the Grand Canal in Venice?" "Believe it or not, that's a portion of my upper intestine. The focus was just right and it came out clear."

And, believe it or not, that's what you're going to look at in your family photograph album from now on. The abdominal camera has come to stay. Give 'em time and the Eastman Kodak Company will get out Browning stomach cameras no harder to swallow than a cussing pill. Kodak as you got picture ahead! Take six views of your stomach before meals!

It's the latest thing in surgical photography. Swallow a miniature reflex and get a dab snapshot of your stomach. It's a complete service station.

The World's Window

By Pierre Van Paasdon

The French Minister of War recently announced in Parliament that the northern frontier of France is to be defended by a system of wholesale inundation in case of war. Gen. Weygand, it seems, has discovered that in the north in French Flanders, facilities are encountered for inundation which are not found elsewhere in France. The new chief of the General Staff, who is a Belgian by birth, has made an extensive study of the way in which King Albert's army stopped the invading Germans in 1914 and 1915 in the region of the Yser River. And no doubt he included in his study Holland's defense system, which is entirely based upon inundation. And the Germans attacked Holland for reasons of military necessity, they could have defeated the country's army as easily as they did the Roumanian forces of the Belgian Army before the latter body took refuge behind the flood of meadows of Flanders. But the would have been stopped by the famous "water line" Louis XIV. once he had flooded Holland. In his day the water defense system was by no means perfect as it is today. As the enemy approached, the Dutch went to church to pray for deliverance, but first opened the sluices gates and broke the dykes. Land army was halted. But then it began to freeze. And in a few days the ice was strong enough to support cavalry and even the heavy French artillery. Holland seemed to do but the while facing fearful odds. But first the Dutch went to church again to pray for deliverance. It began to thaw before the services were over. Holland was saved. The great Turenne, Marshal of France, was trapped. He gave way. He had a hundred men in the water. The Dutch hadn't fired a shot. "It's God's breath that dispersed the enemy," they said. "He hath delivered us from the fowler's snare." So they went to church again. But this time to render thanks as the bedraggled armies of Louis marched homeward to Paris.

Just when the world was peering on tenterhooks to see Paul Bernhardt on his rocket trip to the moon, which he announced, he abandoned the journey. For the moment he is an interesting himself in terms of shooting a postal package from Roumania to America. He says he believes that if a rocket weighing 120 pounds were to be shot from Serevay in Transylvania it would land on American soil within half an hour. Now this would be all very well for the professor and the people of Serevay, who, will, no doubt, turn out in their thousands to see the rocket fired. But even if all goes well, the professor cannot guarantee within a mile or two where the 120-pound parcel is going to land. Supposing, says the London Referee, maliciously, suppose the packet hit some innocent Wall Street broker standing in the back of the neck just as he is laughing back from lunch. Or, supposing, which is worse, that it comes hurtling through the sky just at the moment when New York's Mayor is addressing some delegation on the steps of the City Hall. The packet might, conceivably, knock the speaker out of Jimmy's trousers in one crack. The professor is should be added, would call that experiment of his a "good will message to the American people."

It's a hundred years ago, this month that "Hercule" of Victor Hugo was first played and abandoned, not to be played again. For the French, how their dislike of the theatre by which Hugo was a young man in 1830 and the night of the premiere he walked nervously up and down before the scenes. He was the more agitated, since he had observed an enemy of his in the front row. This man was a Colonel in the army, who for some reason or other had it in for famous poet. Hugo communicated his anxiety to his friends. They reasoned with him; the Colonel would be asked if he had anything to say. When the curtain went down a first thrill of your dyspepsia. Or, if you are a sword swallower you can swallow a tripod with your camera and get some nice time exposure views. Ain't science wonderful!

These stomach cameras, a half inch long and a quarter inch across are no worse to swallow than the Scotch you've been drinking for years. The experiment at the Academy of Medicine was a complete success.

A photograph of a well regulated stomach, with no indigestion, could be titled "All Quiet on the Western Front." And a picture of a stomach after a diet of four or five would look like a devastated center of the Argentine.

And it's only a ten from still picture to motion. The time will come when you can see seven reels of Lou Chaney's stomach rattling with ptomaine poisoning at your favorite movie theatre. With biscuits of soda rushing to the rescue like the United States marines and virtue triumphant in the end.

King Vidor Uses Own Story In "Hallelujah" Film Of Dixie Negro

Vivid drama, haunting music, and the quaint old traditions of the South all blend into what is probably the most daring and interesting venture in motion picture history—King Vidor's "Hallelujah," first all-Negro film drama in history, which comes Wednesday to the Milane Theatre.

"Hallelujah" is to the film what "Porgy" and such plays were to the speaking stage. Filmed in original locales, in the cotton fields of the Mississippi near Memphis, Tenn., and with the spirituals and haunting Negro "blues" chants heard along the levees and old folk song, all genuineness of the race, embellishing the sweeping sequences, the new picture is an intimate study of the people, told from being a gripping human interest play.
The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production is the result of a three years' effort on the part of the famous director of "The Big Parade." It is based on his own story, "Zeka," a young Southern Negro, and his family, Zeka falling with a charmer in a New Orleans gambling house, falls in love, then the intense religion of the people raises him from his state of despair. He becomes a preacher.
The great baptism scene, with thousands of white robed Negroes being immersed in the Mississippi amid the religious chants of the people, the vivid cotton plantation scenes, and other elaborate detail marks the new play.
Daniel Haynes, famous bass of the New York production of "Show Boat," plays Zeka, while Chick, the girl who wrecks his life, then later finds reformation in his faith, is played by Nina Mae McKinney, of the New York "Blackbirds" show. Fannie Belle de Knight, late of the "Lulu Belle" stage production in New York, Victoria Spivey, famous phonograph singer, Harry Gray, Everett McGarrity, Bill Fontaine and other stage professionals appear in principal roles. The extras were recruited from among the actual cotton workers and Negroes at Memphis. The famous Dixie Jubilee Chorus, under the direction of Eva Jessy, appears in the garb of extras throughout the scenes, and sings the musical numbers of the lavish new production.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

"Substance" was the subject of the Lesson Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Sunday, on Sunday, Mar. 16.
The lesson text was from Philippians 4:19, "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson Sermon was the following from the Bible: "My fruit is better than gold, yes, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver. I lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment: That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures." (Prov. 8:19-21).
The Lesson Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God. These are His attributes, the eternal manifestations of the infinite divine Principle, Love. No wisdom is true, but His wisdom; no truth is true, but His truth; no life is life, but His life; no good is good, but the good God bestows." (p. 275).

My nerves were upset, and sound sleep was out of the question. Sargon restored my appetite and ended every trace of indigestion. My nerves are strengthened, I sleep peacefully, and have just won my new strength. I go about my household duties now with new energy and enthusiasm. Sargon Pills put my liver in a fine condition and entirely overcame my chronic constipation."

GOOD RESULTS FROM CARDUI

Arkansas Lady Tells How This Medicine Helped Her on Several Occasions.
Humboldt, Ark.—"When I was fifteen years old, I suffered from backache and headache, and most of the time I was in bed," writes Mrs. R. D. Astell, of this place. Mrs. Astell says she was advised to take Cardui. "My mother had used it many times, and it helped me. I never was bothered any more with aches and pains. I am now forty-five years old, and am the mother of eight children. I have used Cardui since I was married, and have gotten good results from it. About two years ago, I felt run-down and weak. My health was not what it should have been, so I took three bottles of Cardui, and it helped me a lot. I was able to do all my work and raise a garden."
If you are run-down, nervous, or suffer every month, take Cardui, a purely vegetable, reconstructive medicine, used by women for over fifty years.
Thousands of women praise Cardui for the benefits they have felt after taking it.

Theodore's Black-Drug should also be used in connection with Cardui, as a laxative, 25c.
