Inspection Stickers Add Punch Dates

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

If you got a new inspection sticker this month from one of the Seminole County Motor Vehicle Inspection Stations you may have noticed something new.

Beginning Jan. 2, inspectors began punching a 1982 expiration date as well as the month, in accordance with a new state law. The stickers are punched either for the last day of a month (31st, 30th or 28th) or in the case of those coming in with delinquent stickers, the 15th, according to Bill Jimenez, inspector at the Sanford MVI Station.

Jimenez said those coming in for inspections are being given a slip of paper quoting the new law and are being told about the expiration dates. Some persons who have received January inspection stickers this week, however, reported they were neither told about the new regulation nor given a copy of the law. Jimenez said he believes the new law was passed in hopes of staggering the inspection load throughout the month. "Everybody wants to wait until the end of the month and that is the only time we have long lines at the inspection station. The best time to come is the middle two weeks."

Those coming in now after their inspection stickers have expired will not only have to pay the $1 delinquent fee, but next year will be required to bring their car in for inspection on or before the 15th of the month during which it expires.

Vehicle owners are not required to come in on the exact date punched on the sticker, but may bring their vehicle in for inspection any time prior to that date, Jimenez said. For instance, if your sticker expires in February, you could bring it in January if it is more convenient for you.

"Last year the stickers were new, but we didn't utilize them at the stations," Jimenez said.

Kirchhoff Plan Deemed Costly

By CHARITY CICARDO
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff's plan to redistribute the county school population would cost more than implementing plans made by school staff, school officials say.

According to a transportation cost study by school staff released Thursday, Kirchhoff's plan, dubbed Plan 6, would cost $74,880, while the other five plans range in cost from $38,160 to $47,520.

Superintendent Bob Hughes will make a recommendation to the board on a redistribution plan at a special school board meeting held specifically for this issue. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Seminole County School Board Room, 1211 Melroseville Ave., Sanford.

Kirchhoff's plan has received more support by parents throughout the county than any of the schools staff's plans.

Tuesday, about 65 Sanford residents met at the Sanford Chamber of Commerce and showed support of Kirchhoff's plan.

Kirchhoff's plan differs from the five other plans in that it draws an east-west boundary line, while the school administration's plans draw a north-south boundary line.

Kirchhoff's plan draws a boundary line along the Seaboard Coastline Railroad tracks through Sanford, paralleling Lake Mary Road as the tracks leave Sanford. The boundary then follows Lake Mary Road into Lake Mary, passes west of the lake and crosses the northern boundary of Longwood just west of the Sky Lark Subdivision. From there, the boundary continues south through Longwood and crosses State Highway 434 just east of Wilma Road.

The school administration's plans draw a north-south boundary that essentially follows Lake Mary Boulevard east to U.S. Highway 17-92, then drops south and east to the shore of Lake Jessup.

School administrators' plans include three plans for the north end and two plans for the south end.

Any of the north plans can be interchanged with the two south plans, said Dan Dagg, assistant superintendent for instruction.

Lake Mary High School will open this fall for ninth and 10th-grade students. It will incorporate grades 11 and 12 in 1982.

The least expensive plan of the school staff incorporates Plan 1 in the north end and Plan 1 in the south end for a transportation cost of $38,160.

The most expensive plan by the school staff incorporates Plan 2 in the north end and Plan 2 in the south end for a total cost of $47,520.

The school staff's plans shows a 40-student-per-year growth at Lake Brantley, Lake Howell and Lake Mary high schools. No growth is anticipated for Lyman or Seminole-Crooms high schools.

Dagg said he came to this conclusion because historically Lake Brantley and Lake Howell high schools are the schools that have grown.

Under Kirchhoff's plan, three high schools would be above the desired school capacity in fall 1981.

The desired capacity for the schools is shown in a 1979 survey of building capacities.

Happy Oldster Victim Of Human Savagery

By BRITT SMITH

It had been a warm sunny day despite the season. Christmas was less than three weeks away and it was 80 degrees outside. Henry Olley felt good. A little unexpected warmth does that for a man who has seen 85 winters.

The holidays were coming. That made him feel good too. But what made him feel the best, a Christmas present that couldn't be wrapped in pretty paper and placed under the tree, was that his son Stephen was coming for a visit.

They would talk about moving to New Mexico where Stephen had a small gold mining operation. Henry had already decided. He would sell his modest Sanford home, pack up his belongings and take Minnie out West where they could spend their final days with family. That's how he wanted it. Henry Olley was devoted to his family, especially to his wife, Minnie. She is semi-invalid and getting senile now at 90, but he loved her still.

These thoughts dancing about his head like leaves caught by a swirling wind made him giddy as a schoolboy. There was still life in his deep blue eyes despite the cataracts. If his aching arthritic knees would have let him, Henry might have skipped all the way to the TG&Y down the street to buy a new pair of socks and a can of shaving cream.

He must have seemed a comic figure straddling back from the store, a brown paper bag tucked under his arm. It took a while. He walked with a cane and a shuffle, stopped slightly with age. He was pale and skinny, bald as a melon with a tuft of white hair around the sides. Attired in his best Goodwill duds, he looked like a scarecrow that had been left out in the field too long.

Nobody knows exactly what happened next or why, but Henry Olley never got to wear his new socks. And he never got to go to New Mexico with his son. His stroll ended abruptly in an alley, just behind his house. Someone beat the stuffing out of the old scarecrow.

That was Monday, Dec. 8. Olley finally died a week ago today.

For 30 days, during which time did not exist for him, he hung on. Struggled as a man condemned to death struggles in the hands of the executioner, perhaps knowing that he could not save himself.

Yes, he probably knew. The savage blows from hands and feet driven by vicious minds are too much for an old man. Henry Olley presented an easy target and his murderers were accurate.

It was like they did a tap dance on his head.

When Olley was found by two passers-by several hours after the attack, his face was a bloody mess. His eyelids were puffballs of blue-black flesh. His lips were swollen things of lacerated skin. His dental plate had been smashed in two places and his neck was so swollen from the beating that he almost suffocated.

One arm and side were pocked with oblong bruises where the killers had relentlessly kicked him.

There were two attackers waiting in that alley for Victor Olley. He said so before he died. He managed only four words before death came. "No" he hadn't fallen down. "Yes" he had been beaten. And "Two persons" did it. His throat was cut open to allow him to breathe and he could talk no more.

A month later, Minnie still doesn't know. She thinks her husband died of pneumonia. She kept telling him he was going to come down with something if he didn't quit working outside so much. It was a noble lie. Stephen couldn't bring himself to tell her the truth. It might have killed her, that is assuming she would have understood it.

For a while, Stephen didn't think he would have to tell her. Henry seemed to be improving. He had gotten to the point where he could breathe on his own without the aid of a respirator. But apparently, Olley hadn't the strength to complete the race and Death crossed the finish line first.

Stephen isn't sure what he's going to do with Minnie now. His mind is still numbed by shock. He says he may sell the retirement home his parents lived in

Reagan Starts Slashing 'Inflationary Monster'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has drawn his pen and sword against what he calls the "inflationary monster," promising budget cuts that may be "bigger than anyone's ever attempted."

Reagan said Thursday these slashes may touch nearly everyone, but together they would help tame runaway spending and provide financial relief.

"The clear message I received in the election campaign is that we must gain control of the inflationary monster," Reagan said. "They (the budget cuts) probably are going to be bigger than anyone's ever attempted."

Reagan declined to release any specific of the budget cuts he plans to propose to Congress next month. But Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., who had a briefing with Reagan earlier in the day, called the proposals he saw "mind boggling."

'Slowdown Lies Ahead' Economic Index Drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government's index of leading economic indicators dropped 0.8 percent in December, the Commerce Department said today, providing further evidence a slowdown lies ahead.

The decline, putting the index at 136.6, followed six consecutive months of increases. At the same time, the government released a report showing a drop in American business productivity for the third year in a row.

Seven of the index's 10 indicators declined in December, 'Lagging' indicators showed 'danger signals' of an impending economic slowdown.

Including orders to factories for new goods, contracts for new plant and equipment and issuance of building permits, which represents future construction.

Factory layoffs held steady, as did the average work week of manufacturing workers — 40.2 hours.

Felix Tamm, the Commerce Department economist in charge of the index, said one month's change in the index does not make a trend. But Tamm said a related index of so-called "lagging" indicators, released at the same time, more clearly showed "danger signals" of an impending economic slowdown.

Ticker Tape Parade Starts

NEW YORK (UPI) — New Yorkers today accorded the freed American hostages the same honor given Charles Lindbergh, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Pope John Paul II — a ticker-tape parade beginning this morning through lower Manhattan, maybe the biggest ever-delicious downpouring of paper.

Mayor Edward Koch promised it would be the Big Apple's biggest celebration ever, with a crowd of "a couple of million" expected. The New York Times has called the Broadway spectacular "redundant."

Despite the newspaper's editorial admonition the time for parades has passed, at least 22 hostages and their families participated in a rousing Thursday night on the town — including dinner 107 floors up, a fireworks show near the Statue of Liberty, a standing ovation on Broadway by theatergoers and for some, a late night of disco dancing.

The former American hostages, riding up Broadway to City Hall in 19 limousines for today's parade, were certain to be showered with some 600 miles of yellow ticker tape, along with new-fangled computer forms, phone-book pages, toilet paper, and the general confetti that snowstorms the traditional New York outpouring of acclaim.

At least 2,750 police officers, included mounted police, were on duty to control the throngs along the parade route, which was festooned with yellow bows on light posts, trees, fire hydrants, and certainly people. Hawaiian schoolchildren weaved fresh-flower leis for the former hostages to be flown in specially for the occasion.

Jean MacArthur, 81-year-old widow of the late Gen. MacArthur, was among several thousand New Yorkers who greeted the flight at LaGuardia Airport Thursday.

"We want to tell them how much we love them," said Koch, who headed the welcoming ceremony.

The big moment for Kathryn Koob — one of the two women held hostage — was when their plane, "Homecoming 44," began its landing approach and the Statue of Liberty came into view.

"I cried when I saw it," she said.

Let's Not Act Hastily On Deal

There was an emotional rush of support, we suspect, when The Wall Street Journal published an editorial recently with the headline, "Renounce the Deal."

The text of the editorial did not support the unqualified imperative of the headline. In brief, it argued that we should not hesitate to renounce the hostage deal with Iran, but only in case, after careful examination, it appears to President Reagan that it would benefit American interests to renounce the agreement.

Such an examination should be made. The Reagan administration is well advised to study the terms of the complicated agreement at length and in detail. The practical implications should be thoroughly researched.

But a decision to renounce any part of the agreement cannot be made without taking into consideration the overall national interest in carrying out agreements legally made by this country's representatives. If America is going to assert on occasion that such agreements can be renounced, it is going to make it difficult for our negotiators in the future to reach binding agreements with the representatives of other nations. There will be some skepticism about the value of America's word.

As the most powerful nation on earth and as the leader of those nations upholding the principles of freedom, it is more important to this country than to any other that our word be considered our bond. A higher standard of civilized conduct must be imposed upon the powerful, for they set an example to the world.

Certainly, the reports of the abuse of the Americans held hostage by the revolutionary government of Iran have stirred anger among their fellow citizens. We would like to punish those responsible.

But renouncing the agreement would accomplish less than might be thought. Most of the Iranian assets have been placed in escrow, beyond our control. The renunciation of the agreement would have an undetermined effect upon the international commission which has been set up to control the escrow account and settle American claims. Our main financial interest now must be to see that the work of that commission proceeds promptly and in a reasonable and orderly manner to settle those claims.

And what of the other provisions of the government? We agreed not to interfere in Iran's affairs. Are we to renounce that provision and openly proclaim an intention to intervene? We agreed to drop sanctions against Iran, including a trade boycott. Are we to resume the boycott? That would hurt any American businessman seeking to sell goods to Iran or to buy Iranian oil, and, in the absence of boycott action by the other industrial nations, would simply turn the business and the oil over to Europeans and the Japanese.

The only major provision of the agreement which remains is the pledge to freeze the assets of the late shah and help locate them in the United States. Renouncing this provision would have little practical impact, because it is believed that few of the shah's assets remain, there seems to be no effective method of requiring them to be reported, and any freeze of such assets will probably be nullified by our courts in any case.

In sum, a comprehensive study should be made, but it will take time, and that forecloses the possibility of any early action.

A State Department spokesman said the Reagan administration fully intends to honor the agreement. That's good.

In the end, after passions cool, we will probably find that we are better off to stick to our word.

Longwood Mayor John Hepp proclaimed this week Freedom Week in the city in honor of the "heroic behavior of the former hostages and to celebrate their return." The city commission disagreed, however, on how and if the city should jump on the bandwagon to exist the Iranian students from the overcrowded University of Florida.

Commissioner J.R. Grant put it this way: "I don't think it's right for our tax dollars to be spent on Iranian students who support the Ayatollah Khomeini. I don't think it's right for them to take the place of local students trying to get in, it just isn't fair."

Grant proposed the city commissioners write a letter of resolution asking the Iranian students be kicked out of UCF by the governor, the board of education, and our senators and congressmen.

Mayor Hepp did not want to specify Iran in the proposed resolution. "We ought not confine it to one nation. Florida and U.S. residents should have first priority over any other nation," he said.

Commissioner June Lormann was hesitant to vote on the city in the volatile issue. "It ought to be done on an individual basis, I'm not sure what it has to do with the commission," she said.

It was decided the proposed resolution would have to be down in writing before the commissioners could decide whether or not to approve it.

Longwood City Administrator David Chacey says he plans to introduce a letter he has written at the Florida League of Cities luncheon Friday in Orlando, "about the county not sharing enough tax money with us and reinstating the state's involuntary annexation law." Also planning to attend the luncheon from Longwood are Mayor Hepp and Deputy Mayor Lormann.

The Longwood Commission has adopted a wait and see attitude regarding enforcing the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club's compliance with the payment of a $50 a day tax during its dog racing season established by the city in hopes the owner, Jerry Collins, will decide to pay.

Central Florida Blood Bank supplies blood to 23 hospitals in six Central Florida counties including Seminole. An average of 5,229 pints of blood a month are drawn from the blood bank, but with winter residents and visitors coming into the area, the amount needed has increased dramatically.

Blood donations will be accepted at branches located at Winter Park Memorial Hospital, Florida Hospital Altamonte, Seminole Memorial Hospital, Sanford, and Florida Hospital, Orlando.

ROBERT WALTERS

Just A Little Too Late

WASHINGTON — If all of Jimmy Carter's speeches during the past four years had been as inspired, eloquent and thoughtful as his farewell address, he might well be starting another term in the White House.

With less than six days remaining before he was forced to relinquish his office, Carter finally gave the nation what it had sought in vain throughout his tenure — a vision of what he most wanted to accomplish during his stewardship.

In what probably was the best speech of his presidency, both substantively and stylistically, Carter belatedly provided the bold yet clearly focused sense of mission that never before had been clearly articulated.

Oratory never has been a Carter forte, but his delivery of the farewell address was superb. The strained, tedious and sanctimonious style evidenced on earlier occasions was replaced by a subdued, reflective and sincere tenor that gave the speech the credibility it deserved.

More important was the content — a delineation of his agenda, his priorities, the broad themes he sought to pursue: control of nuclear weaponry, advancement of human rights and preservation of limited natural resources.

Especially compelling was Carter's rhetorical allusion to those issues as the modern equivalent of the paramount values embraced by those who founded the republic: life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Cynics will note that it is relatively easy to identify goals in a retrospective summary of accomplishments but quite another matter to formulate them at the beginning of a presidential term and successfully implement them before leaving office.

That's true, but Carter can indeed be proud of his record in each of three areas he cited. His presidency will be remembered for other successes as well.

The hallmarks of his term include restoration of the integrity of the governmental process, a compassion for the less-privileged members of society and a long list of distinguished appointments to government positions.

The farewell address also was notable for what it did not include. There was, for example, neither a self-serving "laundry list" of his real and imagined accomplishments nor a petty attempt to vindicate his troubled presidency.

Also missing was any reference to the country's economic woes. President Reagan's initial fumbling efforts to deal with those problems suggest that he too may wish to avoid the topic in his farewell address.

Carter spoke with grace about the man who vanquished him, but it's worth noting that he emphasized three particular subject areas in which Reagan and his aides have indicated they plan to pursue drastically different policies.

A national consensus that translates a president's vision into irrefutable policy is inspired by speeches like the one Carter offered in his final week in office — but he made too few of them earlier in his term.

Oh, To Talk To Reagan

By TIM BRYANT
SCOTT AIR FORCE BASE, Ill. (UPI) — Computer whiz Louis Elsen says he would give up all rights to his computer system, which already has saved the government a quarter of a billion dollars, for a chat with President Reagan.

"Yeah, I'd do it," Elsen says with a sheepish grin. "I'd probably throw away a million dollars."

Elsen developed the system in his spare time and estimates its worth at $1 million. The Air Force estimates the system has saved the government $238 million in just one year.

Elsen, a civilian working for the Air Force, says he would give up the chance to make money with his computer system for a two-hour closed-door talk with Reagan on the subjects of Elsen's choosing.

"I'd like to sit down and talk with Reagan," Elsen says.

Elsen's computer system is called LOUIS, which doesn't stand for Elsen's first name but for Logical User Inquiry System.

"It's a coincidence it came out that way, but I'm not denying I'm proud of it," Elsen says.

One of the reasons LOUIS is so valuable is that practically anyone can learn to use it in minutes. To perform a variety of complex computer functions, the user has only to type a series of commands in simple English.

If the user gives an incorrect command, LOUIS says so.

"LOUIS is a very fast and usable system," says Elsen, a computer trouble-shooter for the Air Force Communications Command based at Scott. "Just about anyone with reasonable intelligence should be able to use this system."

Elsen claims his brain-child is almost an artificial intelligence. "It mimics what you tell it."

Four years in development and testing, LOUIS is used throughout the Air Force and some federal agencies. Air Force officials say the system's value is its simplicity and the reduced use of computer time.

LOUIS is a tape program that can be placed into the memory of any Honeywell government computer. Once the tape is stored in the computer's memory, simple commands can be used to get information on personnel, budgets, finance, inventories, status of equipment, availability of communications circuits and whatever else government computers have stored away.

Elsen, 31, said his family background had much to do with LOUIS' development.

"When I was a kid, my dad was working at a plant and one day he pulled out a piece of welding rod," Elsen said.

"What are you going to do with it," Elsen asked.

"Anything I want," was the reply.

Elsen says keeping in mind that a single item can be used for many things is important.

"I'm a very basic individual," Elsen said. "The simple approach is usually the best approach."

Though he is known as something of a marvel in the Air Force, Elsen has no formal data processing training and developed LOUIS on his off hours. The inscription on a cartoon over his desk reads, "Louis Elsen, a legend in his spare time."

The Air Force currently has exclusive rights to LOUIS, but Elsen says private industry may be using the system within six months.

"I didn't realize the significance it (LOUIS) would have," Elsen says. "To me, it was just a toy."

Elsen has his own computer research company, Evolving Computer Concepts Inc., in suburban St. Louis, but says he currently has no plans to market LOUIS.

Air Force work is important, he says, adding, "I'm going to be extremely cost-effective for the next eight years."

DON GRAFF

Losers And... Losers

It's over. After 43 days of rage, charge and counter-charge, threat of conflict and a brush with the reality, frustration and agonizing uncertainty, the Tehran hostage crisis is over.

Over as a crisis, that is, but not really resolved as an international cause of concern. In that respect, the long captivity of the American Embassy personnel and its significance to what passes for order among nations will long be with us.

The release of the hostages is the culmination of the processes of diplomacy. The patient, involved processes of traditional bilateral diplomacy — or trilateral, taking into consideration the crucial intermediary role of the Algerians.

As such, the hostage crisis points up once again the failure of the peace-keeping and dispute-settling machinery set up following World War II and epitomized by the United Nations. Our collective effort to deal with this threat to world stability was notable by its near absence and total ineffectiveness.

Not that the collective approach as envisaged 35 years ago was expected to be able to handle all situations, particularly those involving the vital interests of a great power. And that certainly describes the hostage situation.

As the search for a settlement proceeded, however, it was not the interests of the United States that were the obstacle. It was the contradictory interests of the Iranians themselves.

Inured over decades to late-America orgies in local politics as usual throughout the world, Americans may at first have taken the embassy seizure as yet another, if especially outrageous, spasm of the same. But over the long months of will-testing, impasse and, finally, negotiation, it became apparent that the real origin of the crisis and the reasons for its prologation lay elsewhere.

They were not revolutionary Iran's inflamed hatred of the United States nor even its vendetta against the deposed shah and outrage at his admission to the United States for medical treatment. As demonstrated by the rapidity with which his significance as an issue passed with his passing.

Iranian revolutionary politics were what the seizure was all about. More than an international crisis, the taking of the embassy precipitated the fall of the first revolutionary post-revolutionary government that had been included to come to terms with the rest of the world. The American hostages subsequently became the pawns of the super-revolutionaries in their largely successful maneuvering to thwart efforts of President Abolhasan Bani-sadr and his allies to moderate the fanatical course of the revolution.

It was only as the political game with the hostages began to play out that prospects for a settlement became real — accelerated to a degree by political developments in the United States, namely the approaching change of administration.

The sorting out of winners and losers is going to take some time. The hard-line mullahs in Tehran have scored internal points over and over again against their pragmatic opposition. But in the end, even they have had to react to external pressures — a collapsing economy, the strain of the war with Iraq.

Chamber Of Commerce Kicks Off Membership Drive

The first meeting of the new year for the Longwood-Winter Springs Area Chamber of Commerce, conducted by president Armine Bravo, was held in the Quality Inn North Monday.

Robert Hughes, newly elected Superintendent of Schools for Seminole County, was the guest speaker. He told of the problems facing our school system and the goals that have been set up for the next few years.

Armando Amoruso, vice president and membership chairman, reported the "Kick-Off" for the 1981 membership drive would be held at a breakfast with team captains and members, at 8 a.m. today at the Quality Inn North.

The drive will continue during the month of February, but major thrust will be Feb. 2, 3 and 4. All members are asked to renew their membership during this time.

The chamber's Beautification Award for January was presented to Arthur M. Barr, of the Winter Springs Development Corporation at Tusculvum.

The monthly Business Person Award went to Herman Trauer, Winter Service Corporation, Longwood.

David Chacey informed the membership the chamber of commerce signs will soon be placed at all the main roads leading to the two cities.

Heading the Welcome to New Business Committee is Betty Faulk, who will contact new businesses as they open and inquire about their desire for a presentation by the chamber with a ribbon cutting ceremony.

The 50-50 Raffle will be a part of the regular meetings. Half the proceeds will go to the person with the winning ticket and the other half will be divided between the chamber Scholarship Fund and the Building Fund.

The Longwood Woman's Club will have a covered dish luncheon meeting at noon Tuesday, at the Civic League building. The guest speaker will be Ruth Hamilton, world traveler, who will show slides of Iceland.

According to Virginia Hall, Ruth is the best speaker in the area, and has an interesting program set up for the day.

This year will mark the 70th year for the Longwood Woman's Club and the members plan to continue contributing to the civic and cultural growth of Longwood as they have in the past.

The club is already busy with plans for the Fifth Annual "Old Times Reception" on April 5, and work has begun for an annual fashioned bazaar to be held in November.

There will be workshops held twice a month until time for the bazaar. All members are urged to attend. Teachers will be

Gardening

It's Time For Planning Spring Vegetable Garden

Well it's time to start planning the spring vegetable garden. Your first step will be to choose a good garden site, a 4-foot by 4-foot area that receives full sun all day long, or for as much of the day as possible.

Next, you'll need to decide which varieties of vegetables you want to plant. It will help you to see a catalog, scale diagram of the plan you intend to have, so you can get a little extra time now to your thoughts down on paper.

The garden plan should be the location of each crop, the amount of the crop to be planted and the planting date, the crops you'll plant in the ones that are best suited fairly early, and variety of each vegetable you intend to plant.

Try to plan your garden so that crops that are planted at about the same time and take the same amount of time to reach maturity are close together.

By setting up different groups or blocks within the garden, you'll be able to keep the whole garden in production as much as possible.

Within each of these blocks, arrange crops plant size. Put the low growing vegetables, things like radishes, turnips, mustard and lettuce along one side. Put the plants that reach medium height peppers, squash, bush beans and so on in the middle of the garden or block. And, put the tall growing vegetables such as sweet corn, pole beans and stake tomatoes along the other side.

By doing this you avoid having the low growing vegetables stuck in the shade of the taller vegetables. Run the rows north and south so that each row will have the same amount of sun.

Remember that you can plant row or more crops for a single row as long as all of them require about the same spacing. You can even mix crops in the same row. For example, you could interplant a fast growing crop like radishes with a slow growing crop. The radishes would be picked before the slow growing crop needed the space.

Don't plant too much of one crop at a time, especially those vegetables that must be eaten fresh and don't store well. To have fresh vegetables over a long period of time, plant smaller amounts of the same crop at 10 to 14 day intervals. This is a particularly good idea with crops that have a short period of peak quality — things like beans, sweet corn and peas.

You might also prolong the season for a crop by planting two or more varieties that have different maturity dates.

Remember to plant sweet corn in blocks rather than single rows. This will give better pollination and help you produce more corn.

It's a good idea to put crops like strawberries that span more than one growing season to one side of the garden. Otherwise, they might get in the way of seasonal cultivation of other crops. Be sure to leave plenty of room between rows so that you can work easily with whatever cultivating tools you plan to use.

Design your garden so you can rotate crops from year to year. If you avoid growing the same crop or type of crop in the same spot more than once every three years, you may reduce the build-up of soil borne plant diseases which can cut down yields.

If you have any additional questions on Home Vegetable Gardening, feel free to contact us at the Seminole County Agricultural Center.

With the material purchased, Kay Brown made a boy and a girl at play — the boy flying a kite made by Sara Meder — the girl catching balloons made from brightly painted styrofoam balls, cut in half to be used in the three-dimension wall mural.

Beverly Burns designed a beautiful rainbow, Margaret Inman made a fleecy cloud and very realistic daisies were constructed by Ruby Barnett to complete the mural.

The club purchased yellow, pink, blue and green gingham for bedspreads, and curtains in the girls dormitory. All the seamstress members will be busy finishing this project.

A check for $100 was turned over to the Spina Bidita Association in the name of Laurie Hargroves, and a large box of toys were delivered to Kradie Kare, another sponsorship of La Sertoma. A large food basket, including meats and special holiday treats, was turned over to the community for a needy family during the holidays.

Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 10139, Oviedo, furnished 16 members for security and crowd control at the Jan. 17 Cerebral Palsy Telethon at the Winter Park Mall.

This is one of the newly formed posts in our area, organized in 1980 with just 25 members. They have already grown to a membership of 68, with a goal of 100 members.

Information regarding eligibility, dues, benefits and responsibilities can be obtained from Robert M. Slaton, Post Commander (365-5337), Oviedo Saw and Mower, Don Shaffer, Post Quartermaster (365-6611), The Citizens Bank of Oviedo, or Bob Valone (365-5157, Bob Valone Motors).

Thanks to an old friend, Liz Mathieux, for this piece of news from Oviedo. Margaret and Donald Dunn have seen four or five deer on the lawn of their Lake Harney home — much to their delight and the joyful entertainment of their grandchildren.

Rev. Robert Burns and his wife, Beverly, Winter Springs, have also started their new year entertaining guests from out of town. Friends from Pennsylvania, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Grove and children, Tara and Cindy, spent two weeks with them before returning home. Immediately after their departure, four seminary students from Myerstown, Pa., arrived and spent eight days with the Burnses.

Beverly, like so many in this area, has also been entertaining a "flu bug." She says she is a lot better now, even though she doesn't have the time to be as sociable as she used to be, but she says she definitely feels better.

Mrs. Ralph (Marian) Schweickert of Lake Mary, was able to attend church last Sunday — the first time she has been out of the house since before Christmas. With the warmer, sunny day, she felt she would venture out since she is feeling much stronger. Another victim of the Flu!

Over in Longwood, Mel and Larry Burgess have had a "full-house" since the holidays. Larry's brother, Clayton, came to visit and liked it so much here, he has decided to move to Longwood. He is presently staying with Larry and Meta, helping Larry on his route.

Henry Burgess, a nephew of Larry's, just left to return home after spending several weeks with Larry and Meta.

Meta's brother-in-law, Grayden Enslin and his wife, Loretta, spent two weeks with them and have also just returned to Lake Ariel, Pa. You may remember that they were married last St. Patrick's day by Larry in the Burgess home in Longwood.

Mrs. Joseph A. (Dottie) Edwards has been confined to Seminole Memorial Hospital for about six weeks with a broken hip. She is doing much better now, according to her son, Carroll.

William and Adele Pirigyl of Winter Park will present a "Winter Festival of Music" Sunday, at 4 p.m. at the Westminster United Methodist Church, 2641 Red Bug Road, Casselberry.

The program will include music from "The Student Prince," "Madame Butterfly," "Showboat" and choral renditions of "It's a Grand Night for Singing" and "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing."

The public is invited. A free will offering will be received.

William and Adele Pirigyl will appear in a concert Sunday in Casselberry.

Energy Chief May Try To Fund Plant

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's new energy secretary, James Edwards, has made no secret of his enthusiasm for nuclear power. What's not so well known, though, is his enthusiasm for a bailout of a nuclear processing plant in his home state of South Carolina.

The lab to the taxpayers could amount to $2 billion. Knowledgeable insiders have described the operation in question as nothing less than a boondoggle. It is such a risky venture, in fact, that the nuclear power industry wanted nothing to do with it — unless Uncle Sam would put up the money.

The facility in question is the Barnwell Nuclear Fuel Plant in Barnwell, S.C. Its construction was halted — half-completed — in the mid-1970s, and the plant has existed in a sort of half-life of federal research and development grants ever since. Now, with Edwards in charge at the Department of Energy, the scientists at Barnwell are happily looking forward to a new lease on life. The Barnwell project began in the early 1970s as the brainchild of a consortium of companies known as Allied-General, which included Allied Chemical Corp. and General Atomic, a subsidiary of Quaker Oil. The idea sounded good: Barnwell would take fuel from nuclear power plants, and separate out plutonium and uranium for recycling.

It seemed like a great idea at the time: Nuclear wastes wouldn't have to be dumped; they could be put to use all over again.

But somewhere along the line, the hope of a peaceful solution to the nuclear waste problem evaporated. By 1978, Allied-General and the nuclear power general, realized that it wasn't going to work out commercially.

According to secret files of DOE's predecessor agency, the Energy Research and Development Administration, Barnwell was an obvious lemon. The only question was whether it should be allowed to die — or the government should bail it out. Executives of one energy corporation, Atlantic Richfield, described the plutonium-reprocessing project at Barnwell as "an impossible solution," and recommended that the government "should accept control and operate it as a demonstration facility until technology is proven."

Oddly enough, while the nuclear industry experts were trying to foist Barnwell off on Uncle Sam, they continued to tout the cost-effectiveness of the plant. It, Barnwell's reputation, were successful, they insisted, the resulting plant would provide a cheaper energy than that obtainable by all or any other fuel. But the industry magnates weren't willing to put their own money where their mouth was. Instead, they wanted the taxpayers to ante up the dough.

And the money involved in the production of Barnwell's "bargain" fuel could be prodigious. In a recent letter to Edwards, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., predicted that Barnwell "will cost the taxpayers $2 billion to complete... if it is taken over by the federal government."

Did Edwards "favor federal subsidies for this project?" Kennedy asked.

The new energy secretary's views were made pretty clear at his confirmation hearing. He would "favor reprocessing," he said, adding that the facility in his home state "offers an early opportunity to re-establish the U.S. program" for reprocessing. The decision on federal aid, he said, will "receive my attention early on."

Although a spokesman for Edwards told my associate Lucette Laguarda that the resuscitation of Barnwell was an "option" that had yet to be decided on one way or the other, another spokesman

Howell Win Ends 2-Year Famine Hawks Swat Hornets

By BENTON WOOD Herald Sports Writer
GOLDENROD — Two years was a long time for Greg Robinson and Lake Howell, who had lost four straight to Bishop Moore prior to Thursday's matchup. But the Silver Hawks ring leader had reason to celebrate as Howell used a second half surge to upend the Hornets 54-49. "We had some incentive tonight," Robinson said after avenging an eight-point loss to Bishop Moore under the Golden Dome earlier this season. "They beat us pretty bad at their place, but we beat them with our quickness tonight." Despite a slow first half dominated by stingy Silver Hawks and Hornet zone defenses, Robinson was determined to change the tempo in the second 16 minutes. "We came out at halftime with our main objective of scoring first," Robinson explained. "We felt if we could do that we could open it up a little bit." With the score deadlocked at 20-20 starting quarter number three, the minutes later after Chuck Scott, who was bothered by a sprained knee, drove in an eight-footer for the Hawks. The final two and one-half minutes was just a matter of how much Lake Howell would win by as they captured their first win over the Hornets since January of 1979. Bishop Moore trailed 51-39 two kept the Hornets close scoring 19 of his game-high 21 points in the second half. The Silver Hawks play their third game in four nights as they travel to DeLand against the Five Star Conference co-leaders tonight. "We'll celebrate tonight," Robinson said after the victory over Bishop Moore. "But we'll go back at it tomorrow. Tomorrow's a different day and it doesn't get any easier." Brightman headed Howell with 15 points four assists and five steals. O'Shaughnessy dropped in 13 and Layton totaled 12. The Hornets did go home with one winner however, as their junior varsity outdistanced Lake Howell 65-56. BISHOP MOORE (49): Muller 21 Saunders 2, Green 11, Diney 11, Conroy 4. Totals: 21-7-12-49. LAKE HOWELL (54): Layton 12, Scott 8, O'Shaughnessy 13, Brightman 15, Study 5, McKnight 3. Totals: 21-12-21-54. Halftime: Bishop Moore 20, Lake Howell 20. Chip 'Rolls' Mallin, But Flagler Out-Weights Mosley, Tribe 45-27

When they were good, they were very good. When they were bad, Palm Coast Flagler was a lot better. So was the saga of the Seminole wrestling team last night as Flagler roughed up the forces of Scott Sherman 45-27. "We've got some guys giving everything, but we've got about four guys not giving anything," said a disappointed Sherman Friday morning. Willie Jones (108), one of the "givers" flattened Zack Redding in just 50 seconds with a half Nelson to hand Seminole its first six points. Tony Williams (129) whipped Ed Johnson 14-4 for a major decision. Chip Roll, up a weight for the Tribe to 170, stuck Don Mallin with a headlock at 5:41. Paul Breig, also up in weight to 188, polished off Harold Hoague in a scant 37 seconds for the last

Seminole points. The tribe picked up a forfeit at 141. Scott Clark (115) and Spencer Baggett (135) both got pinned," said Sherman. "I don't know what the problem is. We didn't wrestle as well as we should have." One Fighting Seminole that bit off more than he could chew was the Tribe's massive Lee Mosley. "Lee had been begging us to wrestle heavy weight," said Sherman about his 223-pounder. So we finally gave him a chance. The only problem was the heavyweight was just that — heavy. About 385 pounds heavy. "Lee took him down in the first period for a two point lead, but the guy reversed him, then put his weight on him in the second period," said Sherman about Flagler's Ray Panas. "I don't think he wants to wrestle heavyweight any more."

The big man comes to town tonight. Daytona Seabreeze's 6'7" Rodney Williams, who some college coaches feel is the top prospect in the state, brings the Sandcrabs into Sanford for an 8 p.m. taproot. Seabreeze, who was a pre-season choice to win the Five Star, has been playing up to expectations lately. The Sandcrabs have improved to 6.5 in league play after a disastrous start. Bill Payne's Seminoles are leveled off at 11-11 for the year following a 40-3 setback to Boone Wednesday night. The Tribe is 6-4 in conference. Steve Grace, a 6'7" center and Lenny Suttou both missed the Boone setback. "Grace probably will and Suttou probably won't," Payne said about the pairs playing time tonight. Elsewhere in the Five Star, Lyman entertains Mainland. The Greyhounds are hitting on all tickets again after a mid-season slump. Tuesday, the 'Hounds blew away

The tribe is a game back in the Five Star chase after an upset 38-31 loss to Lake Brantley Monday. The rest of the county is on the road as Lake Brantley (5-13) travels to New Smyrna Beach, Lake Howell (9-10) takes on DeLand and Oviedo 12-5 ventures to Eustis.

See Your Doctor If Pressure Rises

DEAR DR. LAMB— Would you publish some information about high blood pressure such as the symptoms or diet or learning how to live with it? Office calls are so expensive for those of us on a limited income.

I'm a 67-year-old female and considerably overweight. Nurses check my blood pressure in the drug store and on my last reading it was up to 142 over 90 which they said was getting too high. Those of us who can't afford so many office calls would certainly appreciate some advice.

DEAR READER— Although there are differences of opinion even among doctors about the point, I'm glad that there are facilities in drug stores and other places for people like you to have their blood pressure checked. Now if you happen to get a high reading under such a situation, it doesn't necessarily mean you have a serious problem. It means that then you should go to see your doctor and have additional readings taken to see whether you have a persistently elevated pressure that's high enough to warrant treatment.

For a woman in your age group, 142 over 90 is still acceptable. We do know from more recent studies that minor elevations above this level, particularly in younger people, should be treated. Individuals with minor elevations of blood pressure who are treated are less likely to have strokes and heart attacks.

I think it's much better to improve a person's life style than it is to take medicines whenever that's possible. Now it's true that even with the best life style there are some people who will have persistently elevated blood pressure. Many of these people do require treatment but they'll require less medicine if they make the appropriate adjustments in terms of body weight and life style as well.

WIN AT BRIDGE

problem of bidding to the spade game. Then there is the problem of making it once you get there. Declarer can count on the aces and kings of hearts and clubs for four tricks and needs to get six trump tricks to come to 10.

We'll also tell you that an initial trump lead will beat him, provided the defense leads a second trump when it gets a chance to do so.

Now let's see how to handle a jack of clubs lead. He must win the trick and plan to get two ruffs in dummy to get to six trump tricks. So he cashes his other top club and ruffs a club low. Then he plays dummy's ace of hearts and a second heart to his king. Now he leads his last club. If he tries to ruff that he gets over ruffed so he checks dummy's last heart.

West's best play is a trump. South plays low from dummy wins in his hand, leads his ace of hearts and ruffs with dummy jack. Then he must lead a diamond. East wins and plays another heart. West overruffs South's six spot, but since the last two outstanding trump are one in each hand South makes the rest of the trick for a fairly lucky game.

Strike Up The Band!

At Seminole Community College, Anyone Can Play

By TOM NETSEL
 Herald Staff Writer

At Seminole Community College, to paraphrase a popular song lyric, the "halls" are alive with the sound of music.

The music is being made by housewives, teachers, students, engineers, professional musicians, and at least one retired fighter pilot. The youngest is 17 and the eldest is 82, but the thing they all have in common is the desire to make music as members of the Seminole Community Band.

In its ninth season, the 55 musicians who presently make up the band meet each Tuesday evening in the college band room under the direction of Dr. William Hinkle.

The band plays a wide range of tunes from Sousa marches to the theme from Star Wars, and is open to any musician, regardless of expertise. Present members come from Seminole, Orange, Volusia, Osceola and Lake Counties, Hinkle said.

"We just like to make music for our own enjoyment," said clarinetist Sharon Short.

Mrs. Short was a former middle school band director at the Tehran American School in Iran from 1977 through 1978. Her boss there was Dr. William Keogh, one of the recently freed American hostages.

Mrs. Short has played in community bands in several countries and finds it an enjoyable hobby even though she teaches music herself. She is looking forward to seeing additional growth of the band and hopes more people will take their instruments out of retirement and join the musicians.

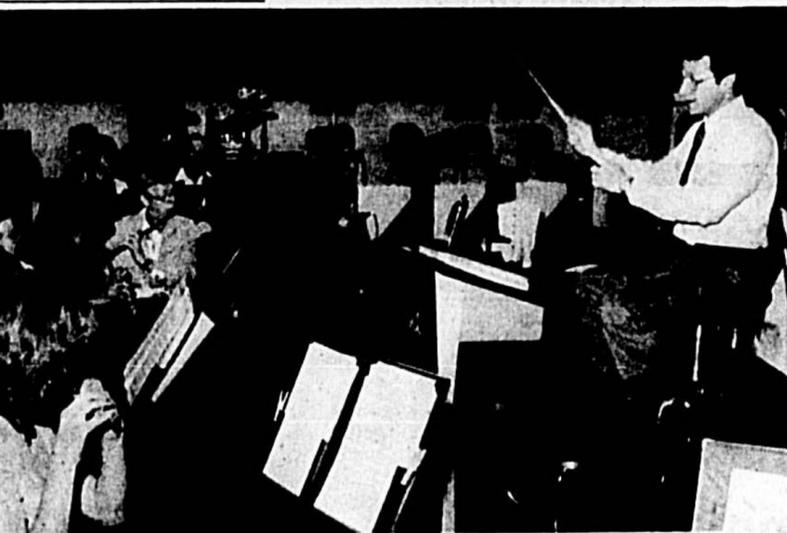

Hinkle said the band will soon be preparing for their Spring Concert which will be held April 5 at 3 p.m. in the Seminole Community College concert hall. It is free to the public.

For more information about the Seminole Community Band, contact Dr. Hinkle at 323-1450.

From Sousa marches to the theme from Star Wars, "We just like to make music for our own enjoyment."

People of all ages, diverse backgrounds and varying skill levels may participate in the Seminole Community Band.

Harlem Recalls In Words, Pictures

Harlem has been home for many since its beginning as a frontier village in the early 1600s. In its early days it was an American fishing village, a Dutch farming community and an English colony. It has nurtured not only New York's black community, but Dutch, Irish, Italian, Jewish, Spanish and Finnish residents as well.

"I Remember Harlem" is a series of four one-hour programs tracing Harlem's nearly 400-year history through live interviews, rare archival motion pictures, photographs, early prints and lithographs. "I Remember Harlem" will air nationally on public television for four consecutive nights (check local listings for air dates in your area), with each night focusing on a distinct period in Harlem's history.

We learn about Harlem's early days as an independent village through its development as an agricultural community, and then a fashionable suburb of New York City in the 1800s; the major influx of black population after World War I and the Depression years; the deterioration after World War II and the struggle toward freedom; and finally, the decline and resurgence that is bringing Harlem into the 1980s.

Harlem has cradled the famous and the infamous; Father Divine, Madame Walker, Langston Hughes, Duke Ellington, Billie Holiday, Joe Louis, Sugar Ray Robinson, Paul Robeson and many others.

The program invites us to share the memories of Harlem that live in the minds of present and former residents: A 96-year-old man remembers the blizzard of 1888; an ex-chorus girl recounts her days and nights at the Cotton Club; a Jewish businessman recalls the one black family on his block; a retired numbers runner confides the secrets of his business; and a black musician remembers performing in the heyday of Harlem's nightclub life.

Residents recount amateur night at the Apollo Theater, the night Joe Louis licked Max Schmeling, the visits of queens, Emperor Haile Selassie and the Pope. They recall the building and rebuilding, the streets, the sounds of blues, jazz, reggae, calypso, soul and salsa, of the crime, the gangs, the drugs. But at the same time, they also remember the feeling of coziness and safety that came from knowing the neighbors were looking out

Book Dedicated To Live-Ins

By CINDY ADAMS NEW YORK — L.A.'s celebrity lawyer Marvin Mitchellson dedicates his coming book, "Living Together," to: "The many wives and mistresses I have known — especially to 'Mitchelle Triola Marvin, the Joan of Arc of live-in women. Also to 'Lee Marvin who helped put a new word in the dictionary — 'palimony' ... Joanne Woodward: "Everybody figures Paul Newman and I have the perfect marriage. That's absurd. We're not the ideal couple. We fight and we're fairly dull — just like everybody else." ... Jimmy Stewart sighingly admits he's getting absent-minded. Blew his wedding anniversary. No gift, no nothin' ... Cher just bought herself and her new boyfriend mink-lined raincoats.

"Dallas" hotshot Larry Hagman is playing J.R. in real life. Chums say he's talking with a Southern accent, and healthy-as-a-horse Hagman is even walking with a cane.

I just got around to tossing out my holiday cards and I noticed Ernest Borgnine's

Wide World Of Sports Celebrates 20th Anniversary

"Today's exciting show launches ABC's 'Wide World of Sports,' a new and exciting global concept of sports. Each Saturday for the next 20 weeks, we'll be taking our cameras to the scene of the famous sports events all over the world." Standing in the rain and trying not to shiver, Jim McKay faced the camera set up on Philadelphia's Franklin Field and spoke those words, opening the first event of the first telecast of what has become the definitive sports anthology series on television.
